The Colonel isn't too happy with his chicken these days, reports Joseph Nocera from the Pampa News' Washington Bureau.

"The gravy is horrible," Harland Sanders told Nocera about the people who are making his Kentucky Fried Chicken. "They buy tap water for 15 to 20 cents a thousand gallons and then they mix it with flour and starch and end up with pure wallpaper paste. And I know wallpaper paste, by God, because I've seen my mother make it."

"They add some sludge to the wallpaper paste and sell it for 3 or 75 cents a pint. There's no nutrition in it and they ought not to be allowed to sell it."

Though the company won't respond publicly to these comments, a spokesman did note that "the Colonel is a perfectionist living in an imperfect world. Most people don't like gravy as spicy as he does."

If you think you've had a bad day, just compare it to the day Nose Perez in Goshen, N.Y., had recently. He was wounded in the head when he swatted a bee with his hat and a 22 magnum cartridge in the hat's lining discharged.

The bullet, left over from a hunting trip, apparently worked its way into the lining from a pocket in the sloppy hat.

Next to Uncle Sam, Ma Bell is probably the most picked on relative around.

"The phone company must be in cahoots with the government," was overheard in a conversation the other day when the subject turned to telephone service in Pampa and ever-increasing rates.

Some are working hard to alleviate the predicament one person faced when he had to wait three weeks after moving to Pampa to receive a phone.

One of the problems, according to phone manager Gary Stevens, is the lack of trained workers. "You don't train an installer overnight," he said.

Are the numbers of qualified workers diminishing? If so, where are they going? Are fewer people willing to work and learn? Or are requirements to become qualified becoming steeper? Are people becoming pampered?

A drilling production man in Amarillo told me he couldn't get production men — graduate engineers in petroleum — to work for him.

The men are there, he said, but they don't want to sit on oil or gas wells with unpredictable hours, even at high wages.

"We can't hire them for any amount," he said. "They want to work eight hours a day five days a week." But most petroleum engineering jobs just don't fit that description.

That's like saying that all toothaches, fires, big newspaper stories and plumbing problems should occur between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Another Panhandle engineer told me that he knew of several area companies that hired illegal aliens to dig ditches.

"They can't find young men here who will do it," he said.

How far America has strayed from the work ethic on which its heritage was established.

One can't dispute the fact that people should be paid fairly for their work or that everyone can't be an oral surgeon. But $5 an hour for checking groceries? $15,000 for a teacher who is assured of a job even if his or her performance on the 186 school days each year is uninspiring and uncreative and therefore useless? $10 to write out one prescription? $10 an hour to push a federal pencil?

It could happen. If all jobs were the same and all pay was the same, would Americans gradually slide into a mold and all be the same, too?

The thought for the day. English author John Ruskin said, "Life with industry is guilt; industry without art is brutality."

Ford Links Tax, Spending Cuts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford's proposal to link a $28 billion tax cut with comparable cuts in spending have come under sharp criticism in Congress, where there are suspicions he is playing politics.

When Budget Director James Lynn went to Capitol Hill

Tuesday to plead for congressional cooperation in carving fat out of the budget, he encountered opposition from skeptical senators.

Responsible budget-making goes beyond picking numbers out of the air, Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, told Lynn at a hearing before the new Senate Budget Committee that Muskie chairs.

"It's hogwash, pure and simply a lot of hogwash,"

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield also raked Ford's proposal — particularly his refusal to indicate where he would like to slice $28 billion from the fiscal 1977 federal budget.

But Mansfield, in a Senate speech, said "suggestions that the administration come forward and point out the fat and waste in its own budget have been greeted by deep and stony silence."

Ford is asking Congress to agree to a $395 billion lid on spending in fiscal 1977 — $28 billion less than it would otherwise be, the same amount as he would like to cut taxes.

Lynn insisted there were no firm proposals where to cut, but suggested food stamp, Medicare, Medicaid and Social Security programs as prospects. The important thing, he said, was to set a ceiling now so there can be a tax cut.

"The President's proposal has been long on rhetoric, but short on facts," Muskie said. "Long on headlines, but short on substance, and I fear, long on politics, but short on economics."

Even Republican committee members were critical. Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., suggested there might be a "political purpose" in Ford's tying a tax cut to a spending ceiling. Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., suggested Congress was being asked "to buy a pig in a poke."

Otherwise, it could mean more than a half-million more people out of work," he said, referring to unemployment that could result if industries dependent on natural gas had to cut back production or even shut down in the winter.

Several amendments remained for votes, however, including two particularly sensitive to the industry.

Sen. Philip Hart, D-Mich., has proposed an amendment to keep large oil companies from having substantial interests in more than one phase of the business. Another amendment, by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., would keep a large firm from having interests in more than one energy resource.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said today leading senators agreed to speed up work on the bill so Congress can "at least do something for the people in the greatest need of natural gas this winter."

control every phase, from the oil well to the gas pump." True competition for new energy sources at lower prices will not occur unless divestiture is forced on the biggest companies, he said.

Frank Ikard, president of the American Petroleum Institute, said divestiture would lower the efficiency that comes with large firms and would be "the quickest and surest way to gasoline that would cost consumers $1 a gallon."

Kennedy said he first became alarmed about the size of energy firms when major oil and gas companies "expanded rapidly into the reserves and production of alternative energy sources."

He said the oil industry has more than one-fourth of the coal production, one-third of coal reserves, half the uranium reserves and "virtually all federal oil shale leases."

But Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., said large oil companies

A Pane-Ful Operation

Every day there is less and less of Old Pampa Junior High School left to reminisce with. The old structure will soon be gone and the property cleared and ready for a new application. The current owner, the First National Bank, says that a new drive in facility may be located on part of the lot, but plans have not been firmed.

Costs Up .5 Per Cent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The cost of living rose a moderate 0.5 per cent in September, more than twice the pace set in August but nowhere near the high levels reached earlier this year, the Labor Department said today.

The consumer price rise in September compared to a slight jump of 0.2 per cent in August — the smallest advance in three years.

But the September increase, which works out to a 6 per cent annual rate, was more consistent with what economists believe is the current long-term trend of inflation. It was considerably lower than the 1.2 per cent jump — 1.4 per cent annually — in July.

Transit fare hikes — particularly in New York City — combined with increases in college tuition, physicians' fees, gas, electricity, clothing and pork to drive consumer prices up last month.

Those increases were partially offset by declines in the prices of fresh fruits, vegetables and beef.

The Consumer Price Index stood at 163.6 in September, 7.8 per cent higher than a year ago. That means the same goods and services that cost $100 in 1967, now cost $163.60.

The cost of services jumped a substantial 1 per cent in September, Labor said, primarily as a result of an increase in New York City transit fares from 35 cents to 50 cents. Food prices rose a slight 0.1 per cent and the costs of other goods were up 0.3 per cent, all seasonally adjusted.

These increases, combined with a decline in the hours an average worker spent on his job, produced an 0.6 per cent decline in real spendable income, Labor said. Over the year, however, real spendable earnings were up as the result of income tax cuts last May.

Martindale said it was the prime purpose of the applicant to open a business where a man and wife could go to enjoy themselves.

He added that it was Underwood's plan to open a first class night club.

It would not be a honky-tonk type business, Martindale said, but a place conducted on a high plane.

County Atty. Warner stated it would be up to the county judge to grant or deny the permit.

Should it be denied, the applicant would have the right to appeal to the Alcoholic Beverage Commission in Austin.

Mrs. Gary Mills, 2107 N. Faulkner, one of the leaders in the opposition to locating the night club at the Perryton Pkwy. address, said today that some 60 petitions were in circulation.

"We are getting a tremendous response to our appeal to have the permit denied," Mrs. Mills said. "In fact, I have heard of only two refusals to sign a petition."

The county attorney said there are 16 different grounds on which a beer and wine permit can be turned down.

"In this particular case," he said, "we feel that the general welfare of the area is the principle concern."

County Attorney Will Oppose Club Permit

By TEX DEWEESE
Pampa News Staff

County Attorney John Warner said today he will appear Monday at the 10 a.m. hearing before County Judge Don Cain to oppose granting of a beer and wine permit for a night club that plans to open at 2201 Perryton Parkway.

Warner's action was planned following protests of a day residents to location of the night club in a neighborhood of schools, churches and nearby homes.

The county attorney said he will ask that the permit be denied on the grounds that the place or manner in which the applicant may conduct such business is of such nature which, based on the general welfare, health, peace, morals and safety of people and on the public sense of decency, warrants a refusal of the permit.

Applicant for the permit to operate the club in the building formerly occupied by the Farmers Market is Roy Underwood, employed by the city as building inspector.

Underwood's application for the permit from the Texas Liquor Control Board states that the name of the night spot will be the "Ace of Clubs."

Gene Martindale, representing Underwood, contacted The News this morning after attempts to reach Underwood for a statement had failed.

Gasoline Tax Deduction Safe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The federal income tax deduction for state and local gasoline taxes, claimed by more than 18 million motorists, is safe.

The House Ways and Means Committee, which is softening several of the tentative decisions in its major tax revision bill, Tuesday reversed its earlier vote to repeal the $60 million per year tax break.

The tax-writing committee is reviewing all its earlier decisions before tackling the sensitive question of individual tax reductions, probably on Thursday.

Under current law, anyone who itemizes deductions may claim a deduction for gasoline taxes paid to a city or state.

Under liberal pressure to remove federal incentives for consumption of scarce gasoline, the committee earlier voted to repeal the deduction.

However, as the committee reviewed its earlier decisions Tuesday, it reversed that vote.

The decision erased a large portion of the $2.7 billion raised in earlier committee decisions. An additional $300 million to $400 million also was erased Monday when the committee decided to soften its earlier votes to curb tax shelters in the real estate and farm industries.

The committee voted Tuesday to allow wages paid for child care to relatives who do not live in the home of the taxpayer and who are not dependents to be deducted if the care was necessary to allow both parents to work.

Under present law, this deduction is not available for child care wages paid to any relative.

Library Receives Art

A painting by Kenneth Wyatt, re-creating a scene of Texas Panhandle history, was donated Tuesday to Lovett Memorial Library by Panhandle Insurance Agency.

The painting, entitled "Crossin' the Sweetwater," is part of the Panhandle Centennial Collection, which PIA commissioned to commemorate the company's 50th anniversary.

Mayor R.D. "Jimmy" Wilkerson accepted the painting from S. Wayne O'Keefe, chief executive officer of PIA, during an afternoon ceremony at the library.

Wyatt's painting depicts a troop of cavalry from Fort Elliott on patrol in the eastern Panhandle, keeping the peace during settlement of the region a century ago. Wyatt, who lives at Tulsa, is nationally known for his Western art.

The Panhandle Centennial Collection includes three paintings, each representing an important site in Panhandle history in addition to Fort Elliott, the paintings also include portrayals of Adobe Walls and Tascosa.

During the presentation ceremony, O'Keefe said his company commissioned the paintings as a tribute to the pioneers who began settling the Panhandle a century ago. Because PIA is observing its golden anniversary in the region's centennial year, the company thought the collection would be an appropriate way to acknowledge the modern Panhandle's debt to the past, he said.

"As we contemplated the paintings Mr. Wyatt created, it was obvious that they should belong, not just to our company, but to the people of the Panhandle," O'Keefe said. For that reason, PIA is donating one of the paintings to the public library in each city where the company has an office, he said.

In addition to today's presentation to Pampa,

Amarillo has been given the painting of Tascosa and Borger will receive the work which portrays Adobe Walls, O'Keefe said.

The collection was exhibited in all three cities at the beginning of this month, and color prints of the paintings are now being offered, free of charge, to the public at PIA offices.

Panhandle Insurance Agency was founded in 1925, in the town of Panhandle. The firm, which has headquarters at 1201 West 8th and branches in Borger and Pampa, has grown into one of the largest insurance agencies in the state.

New York: Whose crisis?

Like Arthur Burns, President Ford and Treasury Secretary William Simon, we are philosophically opposed to federal assistance to New York City in its looming financial crisis.

Burns, however, as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, is in a position to evaluate the impact on the national economy should New York default on its obligations. He paints a grim picture of repercussions nationwide.

Banks holding municipal securities would face disaster, he said, unless a system of Federal Reserve loans came to their rescue. Other communities, even those "soundly run and credit worthy" would find credit scarce and costly, he added.

And Wisconsin Rep. Henry Reuss, chairman of the House Banking Committee, has reported concern among world leaders that the woes of New York City may lead to a global financial crisis.

Reuss has proposed a $7 billion federal loan or guarantee to head off what he calls "an international catastrophe."

Despite his acknowledgment of the dire consequences of a city default by Dec. 1 or sooner, Burns has reiterated his opposition to federal intervention.

He has not, unfortunately, suggested any alternatives.

So it is increasingly likely that Congress will proceed to fashion some sort of aid program for the struggling city and that Mr. Ford will accept it.

The result will be more borrowing by the federal government, further reducing the supply of available capital to private corporations. An unwanted precedent will be set to encourage other cities to approach Washington seeking salvation from their own follies.

But the outlook must be weighed against the effect New York's financial collapse would have on a national economy staggering on the road to recovery.

The federal government's helping hand would be a breach of the traditional and constitutional separation of powers. A federal handout must in this instance be contingent upon strict federal restrictions on New York City's spending and budget practices.

A crisis on the verge of exploding across state lines and international boundaries has no happy solutions.

End of 'equal time'

The Federal Communications Commission has put a good end to a bad rule — the long-standing "equal time" regulation.

The rule required broadcasters to give equal time for responses from all legally qualified candidates whenever they covered radio and television news conferences and debates of any political candidates.

The rule was bad for politics because it attracted minor candidates to make races they had no hope of winning. It attracted losers who sought only the attention paid to them by the media.

Now that the rule has been repealed, broadcasters can demonstrate that it was a bad one by increasing their coverage of news events involving candidates for public office and by giving fair — not necessarily equal — coverage to all candidates.

The rule was bad for the general listening and viewing public. It often meant an electronic news blackout on significant events involving major candidates because covering them would have required giving equal time for all candidates, no matter how marginal.

"Step, right up! Step right up!"

CONSERVATIVE ADVOCATE

Author Reviews His Critics

BY WILLIAM RUSHER

Have you ever written a book and then waited for the reviews? I went through that agonizing experience recently (for the third time), with results so diverse, but with so amusing, that I thought I'd share them with you.

My book was "The Making of the New Majority Party" (Sheed and Ward, $6.95), a call for a brand-new party to replace the Republican party and represent, more effectively than the GOP has demonstrated it can, that 59 percent of Americans, who, according to the pollsters, regard themselves as broadly "conservative."

The first gauntlet my book had to run was the Kirkus Service, a leftist outfit that briefly reviews just about every new book before it is published, and hence is relied on heavily by book stores to help them determine which books to order.

The Kirkus Service is notorious for giving bad reviews to all, repeat all, books of a conservative cast (Bill Buckley recently reported that it had just given its fourteenth unfavorable review to my book, and sure enough it did: Rusher, Kirkus reported, "seems scarcely to believe the book himself...")

Other reviewers described it as "well-reasoned," "a masterful analysis," "cogent," "cogent and interesting," "clear-eyed," and "carefully-reasoned."

What, then, are we to think of Ed Crane, national chairman of the all but invisible Libertarian party? He told readers (is any) of the "Libertarian Party News" that the book was "written in an unstructured, sloppy, stream-of-consciousness style." Do you suppose somebody slipped him "Finnegan's Wake" in one of my book's jackets?

My favorite critic, though, is Arthur H. Pastore, Jr., identified to readers of the Rochester "Democrat and Chronicle" as "a former professor of journalism at Morrisville" (Morrisville what?), who "is presently doing free-lance writing." Pastore galumphed around, denouncing the book as "frankly biased," "prejudiced," and "suspiciously ultra-conservative," then moved in for what he clearly believed was the kill.

"In tracing the rise of Nixon to power, Rusher fails to point out that the assassin's bullet that cut down Sen. Robert Kennedy on the eve of his California Primary win vitally assured Nixon the 1968 election. He contends, rather, that it was knocking George Wallace out of that race that did it. I can't agree with such political theorizing, although a lot of Wallace supporters did vote Republican and helped Nixon's victory."

Poor Pastore! No wonder he is free-lancing these days. He can't tell the difference between the 1968 campaign, during which Robert Kennedy was assassinated, from that of 1972, in which Wallace was shot and most of his votes went to Nixon. Of such gimlet-eyed stuff are (some) reviewers made.

Potomac Fever

By JACK POSNER

The economic slump is affecting big businesses. A number of them had to lay off their congressmen.

The Senate voted against a curb in its slush funds, which means the public continues to get a snow job.

If New York doesn't soon get financial aid, it may turn Rockefeller Center into grain elevators for the Russians.

Ford's son Jack said he smokes marijuana — which proves not only the older generation has gone to pot.

If you contribute to the Democrats, they'll send you an autographed photo of all sixteen candidates.

To give you an idea how bad the mails are, General Lee's application for amnesty arrived recently.

Ford favors busing — busing Reagan supporters across Washington and into the Potomac.

The Pentagon used the Candid Camera idea for its drug experiment: "Smile — you're on LSD."

Senator Bentsen can only spend $640,000 on his presidential campaign. That barely covers his personal photo bills.

provides no sense of being able to produce a functioning political machine, much less a national rebirth.

After Kirkus, though, things improved considerably. "Publishers Weekly," a competitor of the Kirkus bunch without so many liberal axes to grind, spoke of the book as a "well-organized prospectus," and added that Rusher's evidence was "marshalled in well-ordered detail."

That emphasis on the book's logical order and argumentation turned out to be a standard theme, even among that majority of reviewers who concluded that my idea was (to say the least) ahead of its time.

Robert Novak, for example, called it "a cogent and persuasive argument"; Clare Boothe Luce thought it "trenchant"; John Chamberlain said it was "a clear and logical book"; Adam Meyerson told readers of the "Wall Street Journal" that it was "well-written and thoughtful"; Bill Banowsky praised it as "a powerful case"; the "Library Journal" called it "a clearly-written and penetrating analysis"; "The Booklist" preferred "clearly enunciated."

Other reviewers described it as "well-reasoned," "a masterful analysis," "cogent," "cogent and interesting," "clear-eyed," and "carefully-reasoned."

Taxpayers Foot the Bill For Federal Corruption

By CLARK MOLLENHOFF
WASHINGTON, D.C. — There is no excuse for delay in auditing defense contractor costs to determine how much taxpayer money is going to bribe and entertain military officials and congressional personnel.

Many firms used bribery to sell arms in the Middle East and elsewhere. This information is supplemented by revelations that Northrop Corporation misused overhead fund costs to bury expensive and questionable lobbying practices.

A. Ernest Fitzgerald, the Air Force cost expert fired in 1969 after testifying on cost overruns, warned in his book "High Priests of Waste" of the hazards of a system that permitted defense contractors to audit their own business overhead accounts with virtually no chance of an independent audit. There was no follow-through from the Pentagon or Congress, and it was not until the recent revelations from Defense Contract Audit Agency (DCAA) sources that it has been possible to understand why there was no follow-through on Fitzgerald's complaints.

Recent stories by Peter Gruenstein of Capitol Hill News Service, printed in the Washington Star, have revealed details of the DCAA report on Northrop entertaining and, to some degree, compromising, Pentagon brass and congressional personnel and staff.

The Department of Defense reimbursed Northrop as much as $8,336 for Washington Redskins football tickets over a two-year period. There was also a goose hunting lodge near Easton, Md. where entertaining was done. In all, the DCAA report says the government was billed between $740,000 and $900,000 in "non-allowable" expenses.

"It is a system that forces the taxpayers to foot the bill for corruption of the defense procurement system," explained Fitzgerald. "It was inevitable that this was going to happen with one or more of the big defense contractors if they were permitted to be their own policemen in these matters."

The "big issue" as Fitzgerald sees it is the scheme called CWAS, an acronym for contractors weighted average share in cost risk.

"Stripped to essential, the basic idea behind CWAS was that a contractor whose total of commercial business and fixed price contracts equaled as much as half of all his business would be so driven by profit considerations that it would be unnecessary to challenge his overhead costs in contract negotiations," Fitzgerald wrote in "High Priests of Waste."

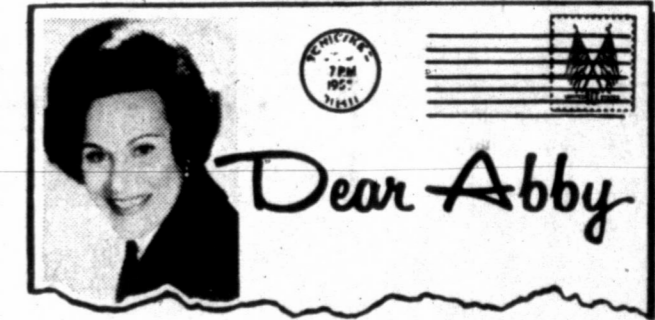

Fitzgerald was fired in 1969 after congressional testimony on cost overruns. He battled the Air Force for reinstatement to his job, and the Civil Service Commission, in December, 1973, reinstated him, but denied his request for assignment to the same work he had been doing on Air Force procurement contracts. Fitzgerald has been given busy work since then while the much-criticized CWAS system continued.

The Watergate investigations indicated illegal political contributions and pay-offs to and through "sales agents" in foreign countries. After the Securities Exchange Commission (SEC) got into the act as a result of stockholder suits against officers, audits of companies were made public at the SEC record room.

A middle level military officer then demanded that the DCAA find the full extent of Northrop's billing of the Defense Department.

That report would have been buried if its contents had not been "leaked" to Gruenstein for stories in the Washington Star. "I'm sure they've got a big Pentagon investigation going," Fitzgerald said. "But it is trying to pin down the source of the 'leaks' to Peter Gruenstein, and perhaps to take a superficial look at the big contractors just to make sure there isn't anything that is too obvious that is showing."

Significantly, there is no great stir in the Senate or House Armed Services Committees to try to reveal the names of senators, congressmen and staffers entertained by defense contractors and paid by the taxpayers.

'Gays' Unhappy About Gay Lib

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My family name is "Gay." My ancestors have been traced back to France in the early 1600s. I am writing this in hopes that the Gay Liberation Society will see it and realize how unfair they are being in using our name for their organization.

The gay liberation group holds that they have a right to live and let live—a philosophy with which I am in complete agreement. But in so doing, they have infringed upon the rights of others.

Since the homosexuals have organized and officially adopted our name for their group, we have been harassed with crank telephone calls at all hours, and subjected to insults and ridicule.

Our name was "Gay" long before they took that name, so I think in all fairness to us Gays, they should change the name of their society to one more befitting to their crusade.

The last straw came when my father called me long distance after he saw a TV series on homosexuality, and he seriously suggested that WE change OUR name!

A PROUD GAY

DEAR PROUD: I understand your plight and am most sympathetic, but I doubt if the Gay Liberation Society will consider changing its name. Although you were Gay first, I believe there are more of THEM than there are of YOU.

DEAR ABBY: I was recently married. The wedding was beautiful and quite costly. My parents paid for everything. They hired the finest photographer in town, who took nearly 100 pictures in color. He took about 25 group pictures in which the mother of the groom appeared.

Later, we learned that she went to the photographer's studio and asked to see the pictures of the wedding. Then she BOUGHT the negatives of all the pictures in which she thought she looked "terrible," and she destroyed them!

Those pictures can never be replaced, Abby. What do you think of such a vain woman? And what can be done about it?

HURT BRIDE

DEAR HURT: If your parents hired the photographer, he had no business selling the negatives to anyone. The groom's mother was clearly out of line.

There is nothing you can do about it now. (P.S. One word of advice, dear. Don't taunt your husband about this. He's not responsible for his mother's deeds.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were married for 30 years and raised a fine family. He was a wonderful man, and I loved him very much. After he had been gone for 10 years, I married another man.

This marriage was not a beautiful love affair, as was my first. It was a convenience for both of us. My second husband also had been married previously. I want to be buried in my family plot when my time comes, and my present husband wants to be buried beside HIS first wife. We are agreed on that, but here's the problem: How can I be buried beside my husband with my present husband's last name—which I legally bear?

That would be dreadful. Could I have my marker read: "Elizabeth, child of God, 1915"? Or would that be in poor taste?

PLANNING AHEAD IN CANADA

DEAR PLANNING: I think you've hit on the perfect solution.

Constitution Used as 'Righteous Cloak'

By United Press International Supporters of the proposed Texas constitution are unreasonable in defending the charter and wrong to attack Gov. Dolph Briscoe for his opposition to the revision, the director of a campaign to defeat the revision says.

"I resent deeply not only the unwarranted personal attacks upon Gov. Briscoe but the fact that some of the leading proponents of the new constitution have throughout this campaign tried to wrap the document around them like a cloak of righteousness and declare that everyone who disagrees with them must have some selfish, ulterior motive," said Sen. Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler.

Voters consider the document to replace the state's 99-year-old constitution in a special Nov. 4 election. Supporters of the constitution and its opponents stepped up their campaigns Tuesday, with Briscoe speaking in public the first time against the document. And Houston attorney Leon Jaworski called for an end to partisan debate.

"It's very difficult to rationalize this as a contest between the liberal or the conservative persuasion," Jaworski said. "It's divisive. It solves nothing."

Jaworski, the former Water-gate special prosecutor, helped draft portions of the document which passed the legislature this year. He said it was fashioned in a democratic manner, and "it ought to be accepted in this fashion."

In Houston Jaworski appeared with Lt. Gov. William P. Hobby, House Speaker Bill Clayton, Attorney General John Hill, and former constitutional convention president Price Daniel Jr.

In Fort Worth, Rep. Ray Hutchison, R-Dallas, said the judiciary article offers a solution to the increasing crime rate.
"The politicians are always saying they are going to do something about the war on crime," Hutchison said.

'Prejudice, Passion Rule Congress'

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — Congressional recklessness in energy legislation is doing more damage to the nation than the energy crisis itself, the president of the Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association said Tuesday.

"This congressional tendency to erratic, unpredictable and irrelevant action is what makes this period so dangerous to the industry and the nation," Wayne Gibbens told the Kansas - Oklahoma division of the independent producer's group. "If prejudice and passion are allowed to rule, our own Congress may create an energy crisis greater than the crisis it is supposed to be trying to cure." Gibbens said voters understand the energy crisis better than congressmen.

"There is strong evidence that the public is ahead of the Congress on energy issues," he said. "The public is properly disturbed that two years after the Middle East embargo the politicians are still playing political football with our energy security."

Later, Gibbens told a news conference he did not believe the lawmakers were always fully aware of the implications of their own resolutions.
He criticized a proposal by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., which Gibbens said would tear the industry apart.

"The Kennedy bill would destroy the efficiency of the oil companies. One sure result would be higher prices to the American consumer. I'm certain he is not aware of what the bill would really do," Gibbens said.
"At a time when we should be doing all we can to develop oil and natural gas, it is the height of irony to try to dismantle the American oil industry."

"The critical imperatives of our national situation cannot be satisfied by political vindictiveness toward the private petroleum industry," he said. "No interest, no group, no region, no party stands to gain from recklessness in dealing with our most serious national problem — energy."

CALDWELL'S

Father Sues Mental Hospital

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — The father of a 3-year-old boy, slain by a mental patient on home leave, has filed a $3.5 million lawsuit against Central State Hospital, state employees and the family of the convicted killer.

The suit by Ronnie Neal, whose son, Craig, was killed June 3, 1974, by a mental patient on home leave, was the first to use a new state law providing damages to the parents of a minor child and is believed to be one of the first to hold a state agency responsible for the criminal acts of an individual.

The suit alleged gross negligence on the part of Central State Griffin Memorial Hospital, state Mental Health Director Dr. Hayden Donahue, Central State psychiatrist Dr. Harold Sullivan, the state Mental Health Board and the mother and grandmother of Wayne Henry Garrison were responsible for the slaying. Garrison, 16, pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of involuntary manslaughter in September and was sentenced to a maximum of four years in prison.

The Neal boy's body was discovered stuffed under a house. He had been strangled and mutilated.
Garrison had been released for a home leave from the hospital on May 31, 1974. He had been ordered committed to Central State on Dec. 22, 1972, as a child in need of supervision after the murder of his cousin, Dana Dyan Dean, 4. She also had been strangled and her body placed under a house.

Neal's lawsuit alleged the hospital was "in complete disregard for and in gross neglect of duty" in releasing Garrison to an "unreasonable, continuing, unsupervised and uncontrolled environment." Donahue, the suit charged, "grossly neglected his duty" in that he established no policies or procedures to prevent Garrison from leaving the hospital prior to the time (he was) sure that Garrison had fully recovered from his propensity to murder and mutilate small children."

The suit further charges the mother, Julie Lowe, and grandmother, Minnie Sperry, were aware of the youth's potential for violence when they removed him from the hospital.

"Unless we insist that our political leaders proceed seriously, judiciously and fairly, we may find ourselves observing the bicentennial in 1976 by turning away from the private economic system which has served this nation so well for so long."

CBS To Air Julie's Opinion

By JEANNE GRIMES
Pampa News Staff

Julie Collier, 12, of 820 N. Gray was watching CBS' Saturday morning programming last week when a segment of "In the News" caught her attention.

The newscaster on the special news program for young people asked viewers to write their opinions of whether President Ford should continue his public appearances with the threatening possibility of assassination attempts. Or, as an alternative, should the President rely on television as his contact with the American people?

Julie considered the options, sat down and wrote a letter to CBS News.

And this week, CBS called her from New York to say her letter would be read on network television at 9:37 a. m. EDT Nov. 1.

The seventh grade student at Sam Houston Middle School sent her only copy of the letter to CBS, but she reported the essence of its content.

"I wrote that I was 12 - years - old and it was time I started making decisions on my own. We shouldn't let the President be assassinated because he's too good to be assassinated."

"President Ford should make more television appearances instead of running the risk of being shot in public appearances," she added.

Julie said she didn't tell anyone she had written the letter until she mailed it. She was alone at home when she received the call from CBS telling her the letter would be used.

"I was so excited and nervous I could hardly talk."

Franco Won't Retire

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Generalissimo Francisco Franco, the last of Europe's fighting strongmen, refused to surrender his absolute rule despite a severe heart attack, authoritative sources reported.

A government communique said Tuesday Franco is recovering from an "acute coronary deficiency" and capable of holding meetings. But the government called off his audiences for today.

Government sources said the attack was severe but the 82-year-old leader of the rightist forces in the 1936-39 Spanish civil war showed remarkable toughness and fought off death.

"Franco's doctors expect him to recover," a government official said. "They are not worried, but they are keeping him under close surveillance."

A government spokesman said a team of four medical specialists kept Franco under close observation today at his El Pardo Palace residence.

Some politicians predicted Franco would transfer power — at least temporarily — to 37-year-old Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon, the grandson of Spain's last monarch, King Alfonso XIII.

Prime Minister Carlos Arias Navarro visited Franco's suburban El Pardo Palace Tuesday and then met with the prince.

Arias returned for a 45-minute talk with Franco.

Sources close to the prince said Arias sounded out Franco on delegating powers to the Juan Carlos, but the generalissimo rejected all such suggestions.

Franco handed over power to the prince July 19, 1974, after a near fatal attack of phlebitis — blood clots. But on recovering six weeks later, he took back control of the country he has ruled with an iron fist for 36 years.

Ford's Cold Improves

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford's sinus cold condition is "very much improved" and his temperature back to normal but he will continue limiting his activities to the White House family quarters, a spokesman said today.

Deputy White House Press Secretary William Greener said White House physician Dr. William Lukash examined Ford this morning and reported the President "has been without fever for the past 24 hours."

Greener said Ford "will expand his activities today" but is continuing to take antibiotics and decongestants for the cold and sinus condition which has nagged him since last week. The President dressed for a series of meetings in his study, he said.

Lukash ordered the 62-year-old chief executive to take a couple of rest periods today and has restricted Ford's activities this week. Trips to Florida and South Carolina later in the week have been canceled.

"His condition is very much improved," Greener said, quoting Lukash.

The President "will expand his activities today" and Thursday as his health improves, Greener added.

Ford has been suffering from the sinus congestion since Sunday evening with a fever that has hovered slightly above 100 degrees. This was his first illness that has confined him since he assumed the presidency over 14 months ago.

Ford arranged to meet just before noon with his economic advisers and at noon, he was holding his "regular meeting" with Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller.

Ford, on Lukash's advance, will be taking it easy for the rest of the week. Because flying may aggravate his sinus condition, Ford canceled plans to travel to Columbia, S.C. and Gainesville, Fla. for appearances on Friday.

The precautions suggested Ford and his doctor were taking no unnecessary chances so the President could be at full strength for a hectic pace next week.

If all goes as scheduled, Ford will meet here with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat on Monday and Tuesday, then attend Republican fundraising events Wednesday and Thursday in Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Aides said he also might stop for an appearance in Albuquerque, N.M., and go to Florida to see Sadat, once more. Ford spent most of the last two days resting in his pajamas. Nessen said the President told him he felt "much better" Tuesday morning after about 10 hours of sleep — twice what he normally gets.

Court Tightens Rules On Farm Exemptions

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Farmers and ranchers are not eligible to claim agricultural tax exemptions on their land if they get more than 51 per cent of their total income from non-agricultural sources, the Texas Supreme Court ruled today.

Without written opinion, the court upheld the decision of a Civil Appeals Court requiring rancher and oilman O.L. Gragg to pay $30,686 in delinquent taxes and penalties to the Cayuga Independent School District in East Texas.

The Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers Association and the 15,000-member Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers

Association had filed friend of the court briefs in the case asking the supreme court to overturn the lower court ruling.

Gragg and the livestock associations contended farmers and ranchers who make a bona fide effort to earn a living from agriculture and who spend most of their time ranching should be allowed to claim the agricultural tax exemption even though more than half of their total income is from other sources.

The civil appeals court applied a strict income balancing interpretation to the amendment, and held persons who derive more than half their income from non-agricultural sources do not qualify for the agricultural land tax exemption.

The Cayuga Independent School District filed suit against Gragg for delinquent taxes for the years 1971, 1972 and 1973. Records in the case show he earned $299,205 in gross agricultural income in 1971, and $400,670 gross income from other sources. In 1972, Gragg earned $301,616 in gross agricultural income and $74,659 from other sources.

"The court of civil appeals opinion, if permitted to stand as a precedent, will authorize the denial of the agricultural use designation in all cases where total non-agricultural income exceeds total agricultural income," the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association said in its brief.

"Even though an individual makes a bona fide agricultural use of the land in question, spends the great bulk of his time in this occupational pursuit, and receives more income from this agricultural occupation than any single source or group of related sources of non-agricultural income, the agricultural use designation will be denied unless the total agricultural income is 51 per cent or more of the landowner's total income."

Destroyed Oswald Note

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An internal FBI investigation has determined a note from Lee Harvey Oswald, President Ken-edy's alleged assassin, to the agency's Dallas office was destroyed two hours after Oswald's own assassination on

Nov. 24, 1963 — but the FBI doesn't know why. Although the note had no apparent relation to the Kenedy assassination, an FBI official told Congress Tuesday, its destruction was wrong and the bureau is considering disciplinary action against those involved, despite the lapse of 12 years.

Farm Bureau Chief Disappointed in Deal

By THOM MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff

Texas Farm Bureau President Carroll Chaloupka, in a telephone interview with The News today, expressed disappointment in the U.S. - Russian grain deal announced Monday.

"We're disappointed in what the government's done," the Dalhart beef and grain farmer said. "The worse things is that we're taking the export business out of the hands of private concerns and letting the government have it."

The state leader echoed the sentiments of William Kuhfuss, American Farm Bureau president who said Tuesday that "The State Department has used farmers as political pawns in its diplomatic game through its manipulation of the marketing of agricultural commodities."

Chaloupka also expressed bitterness over government actions "after they asked us to plant fence to fence."

"The action of the government taking total control over exports is going to have a real effect on grain markets," he said.

The current wheat crops "not looking good for wheat pasture," Chaloupka said, "but our wheat's up and I don't think we're in any serious condition yet. We're always either too dry or too wet in this country."

Speaking again of the market, the state Farm Bureau president said "We need $4 wheat or a little over $4 wheat. I don't think $5 wheat is absolutely necessary."

But he emphasized that the price of wheat has little effect on the price of bread.

"If the wheat was given away, a loaf of bread would still cost 49 cents," he said.

"Like everyone else, the farmer has to make a profit," Chaloupka said. "Much of the economy of America depends on the farmer being able to make a profit."

Injury Suit Filed in Court

An $11,062 personal injury suit has been filed in the 31st District Court here as a result of an automobile collision several months ago.

Ruth Maples Stephens, a Gray County resident, named H.C. Richardson of Hutchinson County as plaintiff.

Husband, Father Was Constable

Family Gathers After 50 Years

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

Lonely hours have a way of passing and the memories of childhood linger on...even the old red chicken house on a farm near Pampa.

An 80-year-old mother and her five children gathered Sunday in Pampa for the first time in 50 years.

Now of Tulsa, Florence Lewis Hendrix was ill when her husband, Otis Hendrix, Gray County constable, was killed at the Old Southern Club on Jan. 30, 1929.

Four of the five Hendrix children returned last weekend to say "Happy Birthday" to a brother Frison, 60, of 1115 S. Christy and for the first time in half a century to gather around their mother.

Accompanied by her husband, Mrs. Clinton Horton of Medford, Oregon, the former Allene Hendrix, said the reunion was one of the happiest "moments of my life."

She was 16 when her father was killed. "We dropped in last weekend one by one and my brother didn't even get suspicious," she said.

The other brothers are Howard of Buelton, Calif., and Robert of Long Beach, Calif. Mrs. Medford's sister, Irene Brophy, is from Redwood City, Calif.

"It was our first gathering in Pampa since Dad was killed," Mrs. Horton continues. Her mother was away from home in the hospital at the time. Mrs. Hendrix now lives with a sister in Tulsa.

An estimated 100 persons registered for the event. Speaking of Pampa today, she said the brothers and sisters could hardly believe "they are tearing down our school."

The mother and five children toured the old homeplace, nine miles south of Pampa.

"When we went into the house, we couldn't believe we once slept there. The bedrooms look so small."

With tears rolling down her cheeks, she said: "Oh, those lonely hours while mother was ill...the old red chicken house still stands."

Irene and I grew up in foster homes...the Charlie Hodges home in White Deer for five years and the Marvin Williams home in Pampa...and then those last five years with dad," Mrs. Horton related.

"Those were happy years," she continued. The Hortons have five daughters, now grown.

"Oh, I ask the Lord many times to let me rear my children. I wanted my children to appreciate the memories of Thanksgiving and Christmas," she added.

Among those who attended the reunion was Mrs. Grace Morris who used to send the Hendrix children treats for special occasions.

"She will never now what that meant to us," Mrs. Horton said.

The Hendrix children all attended Pampa schools and the two girls went into the nursing field. Howard worked as a heavy equipment operator and Robert is with Catalina Air Lines in Long Beach. Frison is with Skelly Oil.

Guests were given souvenirs of pine seeds from Pine Ponderosa, a leading tree in Oregon. She said each guest could remove the wrapper and place the seed in dirt and hopefully one day there will be "an Oregon forest in Pampa."

Assisting with the houseparty were Marilyn Russell, Robbie Stone, Pat Hendrix, Bonita Brown and Katherine Hale with Frison's granddaughters, Michelle and Ashlee Russell, at the guest book.

Family Reunites

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise:

My hint is for the working gal, as we can use all the help we can get.

When you buy potatoes, boil them with the jackets on, retain vitamins), then peel and cut them up in bite-sized pieces, and refrigerate.

Now, when you come home from work, you have five ways to fix them.

1. Just fry them, as many as you need.

2. Or fix potato salad. The potatoes are ready, just add vegetables, etc.

3. Company coming? Make a quick cheese sauce, adding a sliced onion, and pop in the oven while you prepare the meat and salad. Presto! Au Gratin potatoes.

4. You can also boil a few of these potatoes about 10 minutes with an onion added, then mash them down a bit, add milk and butter, and season to taste for potato soup.

5. Creamed potatoes can be made by making a white sauce, add a little butter, season to taste and heat.

Great! Your ideas sound yummy — real time-savers and palate pleasin', besides.

You can sneak back into our column anytime. Do write again.

Heloise

Dear Heloise:

I use a lot of household items that have sprayer tops. Just recently, the solution was used down below the reach of the sprayer tube.

I inserted a plastic drinking straw over the tube that was in the bottle — cut off a portion of the straw so it would fit in the bottle. All the solution could be used up.

Works beautifully.

Dear Heloise:

My favorite economy, (which is at the same time an eye-appealing and cheerful kitchen accessory), is my prettiest bowl of blended scrap bathroom soaps, and some water colored lightly with vegetable coloring to match the delicate shade of the inside of the bowl.

The family dips hands in before quick wash-ups at the kitchen sink. I dip sponge or nylon scrubber in for quick sink scrub-ups. Frequent fill-up with HOT water keeps the soap soft.

Betty Lee

P.S. Beware the next guy who takes it to the garage to check tire leaks!

Keep a jar under the sink, handy for such purposes so you don't have to start using your second prettiest bowl as I did!

TWIGGY TO MARRY

LONDON (UPI) — Twiggy, the wide-eyed, cockney girl with the sylph-like figure who became one of the most successful models of the Swinging 60s, has marriage plans.

She announced at a party to launch her autobiography she plans to wed 45-year-old actor Michael Whitney "later this year."

The romance began in the United States where the two co-starred in a movie in 1973. It ended her relationship with Justin de Villeneuve, her manager, mentor and boyfriend for eight years.

BURTONS LIVE INTENT

KASANE, Botswana (UPI) — Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton are spending their second honeymoon living in a tent in the African bush, their secretary said Monday.

The couple remarried Oct. 10 at Kasane, a mud-hut border town in remote northern Botswana.

Gavin De Becker, the couple's secretary, said Miss Taylor was keeping "a private and personal journal of the last 12 days. It is of her impressions and emotions during this important time in her life."

He said it covered the wedding "and may at some time be made available for publication along with the wedding pictures."

De Becker said the couple, reconciled in August after their divorce 16 months ago, were photographing game and living "in a luxury tent."

BERRIGAN CLAIMS CHURCH

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Philip Berrigan, his hands jammed in a prison jacket, stood in the drizzle outside the Cathedral of St. Joseph and said he was grateful to the church for teaching him how to think.

Berrigan declined to appear in court Monday on charges he and 21 others defaced military aircraft displayed at an Oct. 4 air show sponsored by Pratt & Whitney Aircraft.

"I still claim Roman Catholicism. The Church has done far more for me than I've done for it. It's taught me how to think," Berrigan, 52, said at a news conference.

Defense Cuts Might 'Imperile' Nation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary James Schlesinger says the nation's security has been imperiled by "deep, savage and arbitrary" cuts in the $11.9 billion defense budget approved by the House.

But Rep. George H. Mahon, D-Tex., chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, contends the cuts were "anything but arbitrary."

Sen. John McClellan, D-Ark., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee which is now working up to Senate's version of the bill, told UPI he is concerned the cuts could reduce the United States to "a second-rate world power."

At a Pentagon news conference, apparently timed to coincide with Senate deliberations, Schlesinger charged Monday:

"The House Appropriations Committee made deep, savage and arbitrary cuts in the President's request for appropriations this year that will, if they are continued through the entire course of legislation, have harmful effects on the defense posture of the United States."

Replied Mahon: "The cuts were carefully made without impairing essential defense programs. In the committee's judgment the cuts will have no significantly harmful effect on the nation's security."

Schlesinger had asked for $121 billion for the 15 months ending Sept. 30, 1976. The House gave him $111.9 billion.

Schlesinger has asked that $3.3 billion of the cuts be restored. But others want more cuts. The Congressional Budget Office says the House figure is nearly $1 billion more than the guideline Congress had set for the defense budget.

McClellan said in an interview he was concerned that Congress, during the last three years, had concentrated most of its budget reductions in defense rather than in social or other programs.

"Over the last three years we have made total cuts in the military budget of $13 billion, and total cuts in the federal budget of only $15 billion," he said.

Houston (UPI) — Amid the drone of cocktail conversation and the clinking of ice in the bejeweled lady in evening dress stood at the brown-felt table, blew on two ivory cubes and with a seasoned flourish, bounced the dice off the end rail.

"Oh, goodie, you owe me a thousand dollars," she said to the oil mogul standing next to her.

"Okay, lady, roll 'em again. We don't have much time," said the cigar-puffing man in control.

"The one who wins the game is the one with the most cash."

Making money in the oil game is a way of life for the people in this crowd. This time, they were playing it just for fun. An especially invited guest list at a department store party, reading like a "Who's Who" of Houston, included a former ambassador, a bank president and a number of rich Texas oil men.

Making a game of the oil business is the chic gift idea of Baron Arnaud de Rosnay, 29, a photo-journalist and French surfboard champion. The game he was promoting is called "petropolis," an uptown version of Monopoly where players deal in oil cartels rather than real estate.

The baron's personal game set — complete with sterling silver oil derricks and solid gold playing pieces carried in a hippopotamus skin case — costs $20,000. Economy versions range from $795 down to $195, which puts it out of the Monopoly class for sure.

The baron conceived the idea of the game on a trip to oil-rich Abu Dhabi, and has made gifts of the game to oil sheikhs, heads of state and show business personalities.

Each player begins with $2 million petrodollars to develop oil leases. The game's challenge is to buy up the most oil leases and make the most money within the time limit of one hour.

"It explains the world of petroleum from the drilling stages to the cracking and production of industrial, pharmaceutical and medical products," the baron said.

The baron said the game also provides a high-rent form of escape.

"In each depression there is a need for games," he said. "There is a need to entertain yourself and your friends at home."

"Petropolis" is like a little community with a leader and groups of people. It is necessary to act counter to established habits," he said.

"In the game you make the best deal you can — you screw all the people. That's the name of the game."

Enrico Caruso, the world's greatest tenor, was able to sing baritone arias.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The chance of a severe nuclear power plant accident killing 1,000 persons is about as slim as a meteor striking the earth and doing the same amount of damage, an atomic scientist said today.

E. Linn Draper Jr., director of the Nuclear Reactor Laboratory at the University of Texas, said an accident claiming 1,000 lives could be expected only once in a million years.

Less serious accidents, which could cause one death, one injury and $100,000 damage outside of the power plant, could be expected once in 170 years, he said in testimony prepared for fact-finding hearings of the Assembly Resource, Land Use and Energy Committee.

Representing the Atomic Industrial Forum, a nuclear power trade association, Draper based his accident predictions on a hypothetical society with 100 nuclear reactors in operation.

This is about twice as many as now are functioning in the United States and about one tenth of what is planned by the end of the century.

The committee hearing was the third of 15 scheduled to provide a forum for discussion about the nuclear power plants ballot initiative which faces California voters in June.

We Hold These Truths... A Chronicle of America

October, 1775:

While on an inspection tour of Continental troops in Cambridge at mid-month, Benjamin Franklin writes to his son, Richard Bache, in Philadelphia: "I am not terrified by the expense of this war. . . . Suppose it £100,000 a month or £1,200,000 a year: If 500,000 families will each spend a shilling a week less, or earn a shilling a week more; or if they will spend sixpence a week less and earn sixpence a week more, they may pay the whole sum without otherwise feeling it. Forbearing to drink tea saves three-fourths of the money; and 500,000 women doing each threepence worth of spinning or knitting in a week will pay the rest. I wish nevertheless most earnestly for peace, this war being a truly unnatural and mischievous one: but we have nothing to expect from submission but slavery, and contempt."

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 23
Your birthday today: Today the Sun enters Scorpio at 9:07 p.m. EDT. Those born earlier are Librans. All of today's natives will overcome many of their personal limitations this year by defining themselves and their environment. Once that goal is reached, they embark on new enterprises. Both Librans and Scorpions have a passion for "the genuine article" and original thinking.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Potentially great enterprises begin through small, local innovations. The reasoning of allies determines the course of your co-operation. Listen carefully; make notes.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Family and friends are dreaming of prosperous tomorrows. Don't act and spend as if they were already here. Steady effort is still the most likely way to get there; don't take shortcuts.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Remove yourself from the competition. Select work you can do without supervision. If you must work with others, realize everyone around you is overly sensitive.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Don't try to put together secret agreements or talk about plans until you're further along. Avoid confusion by doing your work in the proper sequence.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Financial concerns are one matter; friends and their ideas are something else. Do your own thinking and budgeting. Social progress stalls; use your spare time to get the situation straight.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Don't permit some passing doubt to distract you into letting a golden opportunity go by. Once you recognize it for what it is, you're on the road to achievement.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Professional advice helps you clarify career problems. Only patience gets you comfortably through loved ones' peevish moods. Give others time to sort themselves out.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Today's task primarily involves research. Go back into the past, review deals you made then and figure out how to apply knowledge you acquired.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Anyone who is closely attached to you emotionally is quick-tempered and preoccupied with matters you can't see very clearly. Stick to your routine work, correct recent errors.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Others are a little touchy today and have much on their minds. Teamwork is important, but you have to let people be themselves. Schedule conferences or new business late in the day.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Your impatience and intolerance causes you to fall over your own feet. Seek better perspective among idealistic friends. News from distant places is good but incomplete.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: There's quite a bit you can do to improve your personal life, even though it may be at the expense of your career. Romance is at a stalemate, but there'll be another opportunities.

Minnesotans Stop Smoking...for a Day

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Fussing and fidgeting, licking lollipops and chewing gum and fingernails, more than 30,000 Minnesotans took the pledge to stop smoking — for 24 hours.

It was Tuesday, the second annual statewide D-Day — "Don't Smoke Day" — in Minnesota.

They gave up the habit for the day, or tried to, just to see if they could do it.

Promoters said 160 centuries could be added to the lives of Minnesota's 850,000 smokers if the campaign were successful. They hoped 10 percent of the puffers would give up the weed for a day and that many would swear off smoking for good.

Sponsors said it was too early to tell how many smokers actually kicked the habit for 24 hours, but indicated many had persevered. They hope that there would be a number of permanent "cures" was embodied in the slogan for the event: "Take a day off from smoking. Maybe you'll even like it."

The attempts of many smokers, however, were exemplified by Barbara Huber, 31, a suburban Minneapolis housewife.

"I should really quit but I didn't," she said. "I thought seriously about stopping, but don't you suppose I've had about five cigarettes. That's much less than I normally smoke though."

"I really would like to quit," echoed David Kirscht, 36, Minneapolis, who smokes a pack a day and forgot about the antismoking day until he had six cigarettes. "It's surprisingly easy to quit."

"The trouble is, I like to smoke."

Sponsors of D-Day included the Minnesota Division of the American Cancer Society, the Minnesota Lung Association and the Minnesota Heart Association. Smokers and former smokers who wanted to check their breathing capability and blood pressure were given free lung and heart tests.

"All heavy smokers will show signs of breathing difficulty at some time in their lives," said Ruth Hunker, 37, a former smoker and a volunteer from the University of Minnesota School of Respiratory Therapy. "If you quit three days you'll get a surge of energy or nerves."

More than 30,000 persons, 10,000 more than last year, signed pledge cards to desist on D-Day. A survey taken six months after the 1974 observance showed 1,400 persons had given up smoking for good.

D-Day started in the small Minnesota town of Monticello. It was the brainchild of Monticello Times publisher Lynn Smith, who quit smoking after 18 years at the age of 34.

Smith said statistics show every cigarette takes 14.4 minutes off one's life and nonsmokers age 25 will live eight years longer than smokers on the average.

If 2,000 would permanently abstain this year, he said, it would add 16,000 years — 160 centuries — to life in Minnesota.

Kidnapers Refuse To Bargain

MONASTEREVIN, Ireland, (UPI) — Kidnapers holding Dutch businessman Tiede Herrema at gunpoint in an upstairs bedroom of a two-story house refused today to bargain with police and challenged them to "come and get us."

"They have made no 'new demands,'" a policeman said. "They simply refuse to hand over their hostage."

A government spokesman said an offer of food was made to the kidnapers but was promptly rejected.

Throughout a wet and windy night in this small market town south of Dublin, police made regular appeals through loudspeakers for the kidnapers to surrender.

Only once did the kidnapers respond.

"Come and get us," they shouted.

The Irish Republican Army renegades responded to earlier demands to surrender with a hail of bullets, a string of curses and a threat to kill their captive if police moved any closer.

Through a listening device, police heard his captors taunting Herrema, too, even though the hostage was believed tied up and lying in a corner of the room.

"Make a run for it," one said to the Dutchman. "If they come to get you, I'll blow your bloody brains out."

To the policemen downstairs, he yelled "Do you hear that? I blow him to pieces if you make a move."

A force of 300 policemen and troops ringed the estate of 90 council houses, where detectives Tuesday tracked down the gang that seized Herrema Oct. 3 near his Limerick home. Army sharpshooters crouched behind cars, trees and other cover.

There were indications police were settling in for a long vigil.

"The kidnapers are ready for a fight," one senior police officer said. "Tomorrow, who knows? They may feel different."

Police positively identified one of the kidnapers as Eddie Gallagher, 27, a bearded former member of the IRA who is listed by the security forces as one of the most dangerous men in the Irish Republic.

Officials believed his associate, 19-year-old Marian Coyle, was with him, but so far she has not appeared at the bedroom window or spoken to police occupying the downstairs portion of the house.

Herrema's physician, Dr.

Stephen Flynn of Limerick, spent the night in an ambulance near the house.

"It is only a precautionary measure in case I am needed," he said.

Senior police officers emphasized there was "no question" of negotiating with Herrema's abductors.

"We are asking them to surrender," one said.

The wife of the 52-year-old Herrema, chief executive of the Dutch-owned Ferenka company, flew in by private jet from Holland but waited at the Dutch Embassy in Dublin for news.

Union leader Philip Flynn, picked by the kidnap gang as go-between, predicted Herrema would come out of his ordeal alive.

"I think eventually he will be released unharmed," Flynn said. "But Gallagher will not give himself up. He will shoot it out rather than surrender."

Police moved in a mobile lighting unit and trained powerful beams on the house throughout the night.

Detectives tracked the kidnapers to Monasterevin, 40 miles from Dublin, Tuesday and under cover police slipped into the small, market village at dawn.

Police surrounded the corner building and then rushed in through the front door. The officers backed off when the kidnapers opened fire.

Truckloads of troops from the nearby Curragh barracks then raced to the village, deploying two armored cars, machine guns and marksmen around the building.

Police identified the kidnapers of Herrema, manager of a Dutch-owned factory in Ireland, as two renegade members of the IRA — Eddie Gallagher and Marion Coyle.

Detectives said Gallagher was the kidnaper who shouted at police. They said he defiantly tossed a handful of chess pieces down the stairs of the building as police approached.

"Gallagher is a ruthless man," one detective said. "We believe this is his way of saying the next move is up to us."

The kidnapers seized the 52-year-old businessman Oct. 3 in the city of Limerick, 60 miles away, touching off one of the most intensive manhunts in Irish history.

The abductors threatened to "execute" Herrema unless Ireland freed three IRA prisoners. The government called the demands blackmail and turned them down.

IRA sources said Gallagher would "stop at nothing" to gain the release of one of the prisoners — English heiress Bridget Rose Dugdale — reputed to be his wife.

Herrema, in one of his taped messages, warned "there will be a fight" if the police corner Gallagher. "They say they will not give the Irish government the satisfaction of getting me back alive," he said.

Fugitive Widow Spotted

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — Police informants say they spotted the fugitive widow of narcotics gangster Fred Gomez Carrasco, killed in an abortive breakout at the state prison, in South Texas.

Police Inspector Jack Hutton said Tuesday two informants say they saw Rosa Carrasco three weeks ago at Macdonia in South Texas.

"They claim they know her and they saw her, but as far as being able to verify or substantiate it, we haven't been able to," Hutton said.

"They spot her about every 30 minutes," he said of numerous reported sightings of Carrasco's widow. "We check them all out. This may be the right dope."

"It's a popular fantasy," Hutton said. "But of course, you've got to check out everything. You never know when it's going to be the right thing."

Carrasco, a kingpin narcotics dealer in South Texas, was wounded and captured at a San Antonio motel shootout with Hutton and other officers in July, 1973. He pleaded guilty to assault charges with the state agreeing to drop related charges against his wife. He was sentenced to life in prison.

Carrasco and another inmate at the Texas prison unit at Huntsville and two of their hostages were killed in a July, 1974 shootout with law officers blocking their escape route.

Mrs. Carrasco was accused in a fugitive warrant of helping supply the guns and ammunition used by her husband and the inmates.

Mrs. Carrasco and her three young children dropped out of sight the day Carrasco and two other inmates seized their hostages and held off authorities 11 days at Huntsville.

Last March Mrs. Carrasco was reported killed or captured at a roadblock near Guadalupe, Mexico. Mexican authorities did not confirm the report.

Last June, Texas Rangers found Mrs. Carrasco's automobile in the pasture of a Duval County ranch owned by ousted County Judge Archer Parr, now serving a 10-year prison term for perjury. Parr said the car was left by Robert Forsche, a private investigator who worked for San Antonio attorney James Gillespie.

Gillespie defended Carrasco against an assault to murder charge and also represented Parr. Gillespie has said he believes Rosa Carrasco was tortured to death in prison at Guadalupe.

Pythias Men Plan Stag Chili Supper

Members of Pampa Lodge No. 480 Knights of Pythias met recently at the Pythian Hall to discuss plans for the "stag" chili supper to be at 7:45 p.m. Tuesday.

All knights and their guests are invited to the supper.

Three applications for membership by initiation were accepted. They are: William Barton, 1161 N. Starkweather; Robert E. Tyre, 631 N. Faulkner; and Glen G. Giblin, 100 N. Faulkner.

A letter from Miles G. Boucher, chaplain of the Texas Pythian Children Home, Weatherford, advised the members that November 8 for the Pampa Lodge and Temple annual "roll call" was acceptable and that 25 children from the home would be present for the program that night. Roy E. Avery, administrator of the Pythian Home, will be the guest speaker.

Christmas Seals Out

Miss Vermell Meador, R.N. of Pampa Lung Association announced the opening of the 1975 Christmas Seal Campaign, with mailing of seals this month throughout the Panhandle area.

She said the campaign, which supports health programs in prevention and control of asthma, emphysema, TB, and other lung diseases, is badly needed.

"Emphysema is the fastest rising cause of death in the United States today," she said, "and our work to achieve better treatment, medication, surgical technique and prevention for the control of these diseases has a bearing on the lung patient in all communities everywhere."

Miss Meador said last week's area symposium for parents of asthmatic children and health professionals engaged in the care of lung patients of this area is an example of Christmas Seal work and its bearing upon the patient. She urged county residents to answer their Christmas Seal appeal as generously as possible.

Mrs. W.D. Utzman of Lefors serves with Miss Meador on the lung association board.

Ford May Be Asked For Testimony in Trial

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — A federal judge has ordered President Ford, described by the defense as "maybe our most important witness," to give videotaped testimony on what he saw when Lynette Fromme aimed a loaded pistol at him.

Tuesday, U.S. District Judge Thomas MacBride directed that Ford be questioned by both prosecution and defense attorneys within the next 10 days, possibly when he visits California Oct. 29-30, or at the White House.

The videotaped deposition containing Ford's sworn statements then could be shown at the Nov. 4 trial of Miss Fromme, 26, the red-haired Charles Manson cultist who became the first person accused under a new federal law of attempting to assassinate a President.

John Virga, co-counsel with Miss Fromme, called Ford "maybe our most important witness."

contemplated such a situation when it passed a 1965 law making it a crime to attempt to assassinate the President.

Arguing against the request for Ford's appearance, U.S. Attorney Dwayne Keyes read into the record a previously unreleased statement made by Ford to the FBI on what he saw during his walk Sept. 5 through the state Capitol park.

Ford said that as he strolled past a crowd of well-wishers and shook hands on his way to a meeting with California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., he saw a "woman in an unusual red or orange dress" with "gray-brown hair and weathered complexion."

"As this woman moved her right hand forward toward me through the crowd at about waist level, I saw that she was holding a handgun. At this point she was about two feet away from me," he said.

"I have no recollection of hearing the woman say anything or of hearing the handgun click," the President said.

Fisk Homer Forces Series Showdown

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor
BOSTON (UPI) — Maybe you remember how Roy Campanella always said you had to have some little boy in you to play professional baseball and nobody goes along with him more on that than another big kid by the name of Carlton Fisk.

"He did what every single one of us wanted to do," said the Cincinnati catcher. "He hit the home run that won the ball game. If you were a ballplayer and ever wanted to pick the perfect spot, you couldn't ask for a better one unless maybe it would be in the seventh game."

6 storybook victory and squared the World Series at three games apiece.

Fisk had a hunch he was going to hit safely. Before leaving the Red Sox dugout, he said to Freddie Lynn, the next batter, "when I hit one off the wall, I want you to drive me in."

Fisk started down the first base line, sideways, so he could still keep an eye on the ball, and after taking a couple of hippety-hops, he saw the ball had stayed fair whereupon he threw both hands in the air in a gesture of unrestrained joy.

"When you're a kid, you never expect it to happen. When you think about what happened out there tonight, it's like something out of a story book. The pressure... playing against the best club in the National League 12 innings... I mean, it's almost too good to be true."

Groom District Adds 6 Teams

By PAUL SIMS
Sports Editor

For most of the last six years Groom has been the kingpin in District 1-B.

Groom has a good shot at winning 1-B's championship again this season. And, for a while it looked as if Groom had enough young talent in its freshman and junior high ranks to win a title at least the next two seasons.

Monday, six teams were added to District 1-B, as part of the University Interscholastic League's realignment of several of the state's districts. So, instead of just Lefors, Texline and Booker, the Groom Tigers must contend with Wheeler and McLean (from District 2-A) and Darrouzett, Follett, Miami and Higgins (from eight-man).

Groom coach Don Sesson favors the realignment, even though it likely will be doubly difficult for his Tigers to win the 1-B championship.

"We've got 10 teams in our district now. I like that, and the reason I do is that it gives us nine games with people our own class, our own size," Sesson said.

"I didn't really like the small district because we had to play people like Vega, Claude and Boys Ranch. And, by golly, that's a hard schedule for us to play. They don't count on your district record by they count when they break our kids up and hurt them and they can't play by the time they get to district."

Presently, Groom halfbacks Phillip Britten and Thomas Reed are sidelined with injuries sustained against Boys Ranch and probably will miss another three weeks.

"I'm not saying that's not gonna happen anytime," Sesson said, "but it's more apt to happen when you play these with 25 or 30 players and you've got only 12 or 13 to play all the time."

Sesson expects District 1-B competition will be intense, much more intense, next season.

"Wheeler is gonna be gigantic in Class B. Then, you've got teams like McLean who will be hard to beat in Class B. They've got to play each other too. Then, Groom's got to play both of them."

"Follett was the state champ in eight-man and Booker's gonna be a perennial power for awhile. You can't take anything away from Miami. All the people in these particular districts play good football."

"The only disadvantage I can see is if we get people hurt during those nine district ball games. That could hurt all of us."

"I think it's gonna help the program overall."

Texline coach Herb Hager and Wheeler coach Jim Robinson voted Monday in a district meeting at Berger to divide the large district into two zones. The vote was split (5-5) and did not pass.

Texline, located in the northwest corner of the Panhandle, will have to travel over 2,000 miles next season, as the closest district game (not at home) will be against Groom, 163 miles away.

"We wanted zoning. We wanted the ones close to us in one zone. We're not looking forward to the travel," Hager said, "but we are looking forward to the district. It'll be a good district. I think we'll move up — we've got a lot of our folks back next year."

Robinson's team will also travel more than it has in past seasons. However, the Wheeler coach can see nothing wrong with the realignment.

"I think it'll help Wheeler out. I think it'll give us a chance to compete on the district level."

Johnny Bench, over in the losing clubhouse, had put it best about Carlton Fisk.

Club Okays Wrestling For Pampa Youngsters

By PAUL SIMS
Sports Editor

Amateur wrestling has arrived in Pampa. Although Manny Holden is relieved, he knows that things are not altogether rosy.

The Pampa Optimist Club voted Monday to finance a wrestling program for high school and junior high youngsters. The club's high school team will participate in the same conference with the four Amarillo high schools and Boys Ranch.

Holden expects the Optimist teams to be competitive.

"The team we have this year is gonna be new and inexperienced. We plan on getting competitive," he said. "It takes probably three years to build a strong program."

"The secret to building a good, strong high school team is a feeder program. That's where we feel the junior high school and grade school program is gonna be beneficial."

Although the club's main interest now is with high school and junior high age wrestlers, Holden hopes those younger will also attend workouts, which start today at 4 p.m. in the club building.

"If we get enough participation, we might have a grade-school team," Holden said. The high school season will start Nov. 15. The conference meet will be held in January; the state meet in the middle of February.

"Pampa will add Plainview and drop Canyon on next season's football schedule. The tentative schedule is (in order of games to be played) Hereford there, Dumas here, Perryton there, Berger here, Lubbock Monterey there, Caprock here, Tascosa there, Plainview here, Palo Duro there and Amarillo High here."

Landry Miffed at Dallas Loss

DALLAS (UPI) — Dallas Cowboy coach Tom Landry doesn't enjoy talking about the Green Bay Packers. The subject conjures up more losses than he'd like to remember.

In his 15 years as Cowboys head coach, Landry has defeated the Packers only once. That was a 16-3 decision in Dallas five years ago.

Meanwhile, Green Bay has won eight times, including two that knocked the Cowboys out of the NFL championships.

So Landry should have been anything but surprised when the Packers, winless in their first four starts this year, upset the unbeaten Cowboys 19-17 in Texas Stadium last weekend.

And at his weekly news conference Tuesday the Cowboys coach preferred to stick to his own team.

"We just weren't up to our top performance, and they had an excellent game plan," he said. "What can I say? We haven't played well the past couple of weeks, but we played super to get where we are. We've got to get back to the winning ways."

The Cowboys got off to a surprisingly strong start, scoring 91 points in their first three games and defeating Los Angeles, St. Louis and Detroit. Then the offense fell apart.

score until the third quarter of the Green Bay game.

"Mainly we don't have a cohesive group," said Landry. "Offense takes 11 men working together and we just haven't had it."

"The thing we've been falling off on, is our passing game. We've run the ball well, but we haven't been getting the unity we need."

Landry refused to put the blame on any particular players.

"It's receivers, it's Roger (Staubach), it's the line and the defense has something to do with it."

things and learning. They don't need a lot of correcting. Sometimes you learn the hard way."

Dallas travels to Philadelphia this weekend to meet the Eagles before next week's showdown with the Washington Redskins. The Eagles are 1-4, while Washington is 3-2 and just one game behind the Cowboys in the NFC East.

Landry was asked if he would be happy to split the next two games, in light of his sagging offense.

"That's not how I would define happiness. We certainly won't be satisfied with a split. We're going up there to win."

Good Ol' Days Gone

By PETER GRUENSTEIN
News Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Watching the World Series games at Boston's Fenway Park, with its 35,000-seat intimacy, its Green Monster left field wall, its hidden doorways and its strange bumps and twists, reminded me of what plastic "progress" has done to the National Pastime over the years.

While I don't normally think of myself as a political pundit, when it comes to baseball I stand foursquare in favor of the status quo. Worse than that, I am a true reactionary, wishing ardently to bring back the good old days.

The last change in baseball tradition of which I approve — and then only with reservations — was in May, 1935 when they played the first night game in Cincinnati.

If I had my way, the Dodgers would be returned to Brooklyn where Ebbetts Field would be rebuilt block by block, the Giants would come home to the Polo Grounds and the Senators to Washington. Charles O. Finley and his ridiculous uniforms would be permanently exiled from these United States. Astorff would be outlawed by an act of Congress, bubble gum cards would look exactly the way they did three decades ago, no Saturday night games would be played and Walter O'Malley — the man who ruined my childhood by moving the Dodgers to Los Angeles — would be forced to become a hot dog hawker outside Wrigley Field and, like the man without a country, be barred forever from seeing the Dodgers play again.

But, alas, baseball has been taken over by the businessmen like O'Malley, the lawyers, like Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, and the hucksters, like Charlie Finley.

Only barely visible through the mists of yesteryear are the real baseball men like Phil Wrigley, who has steadfastly refused for the last 40 years to install lights in his blessed Wrigley field where the Cubs have so marvelously agonized Chigoans practically since the beginning of time, and Tom Yawkey, who has managed to build one of the best teams in baseball in Boston without going broke and without tearing up the sod in Fenway where Ted Williams' feet once tread.

But the little-minded people — those whose most visionary thoughts have dollar signs before them — have taken over. And, in the process, they have forgotten what made baseball the great National Pastime Tradition.

Dazzled by the growth and popularity of other sports such as football and basketball, they have tried to keep pace by going modern. But baseball cannot compare with the brutal tension of football for the awesome speed of professional basketball. Baseball is a gentle, slow-moving sport, rooted in this country's history, nourished by its folklore, and enriched by a wealth of esoteric statistics and other meaningless minutia.

You can move the kickoff tee from the 40 to 35 yard line, but you just don't fool around with the distance between bases.

In a society where everything is constantly changing, at least one national institution should remain absolutely changeless, of for no other reason than to provide a stable reference point. And what better institution than baseball.

So I say to you Bowie Kuhns and Walter O'Malleys, beware. Don't tamper with the American soul.

If the Shoe Fits
By Gary Gattis

Where do feet expand?
Two pairs of feet can measure the same at rest, but be distinctly different in size when supporting the body.

When bearing weight, the foot expands in all directions, the toes stretch forward and fan out a bit, the heel extends backward, and the ball of the foot widens. More of the foot in every part comes in contact with the ground — at the heel, ball, toes, arch, outer border.

All this is important in proper shoe fitting. Some feet will expand and stretch more than others due to foot weakness, or a hereditary condition or, perhaps due to body weight or physical type of foot.

This makes shoe fitting a highly individual matter, even between the left and right foot of the same person. Both shoes should always be fitted and walked on before purchase.

Campaign '76: Veteran Senators Quit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The last roll call has started for four veteran senators who will not seek re-election.

Sen. John O. Pastore of Rhode Island, 77 years; Sen. Stuart Symington of Missouri, 74 years; Sen. Roman Hruska of Nebraska, 73 years; Sen. Philip A. Hart of Michigan, 78 years.

There may be more as the time nears when incumbents must decide to go for another six-year term or voluntarily end their political careers.

And in no case is the speculation more rife than in the future plans of Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield and Republican Senate Leader Hugh Scott.

The retirement of either Mansfield or Scott would lead to a bruising political battle in the Senate — its intensity doubled should both decide to call it quits.

The two leadership positions — with their power, prestige, and pay — present a goal which more than a few in the Senate secretly and not so secretly covet.

Both Mansfield and Scott have said they will run again but neither has convinced speculators the decision is final.

Some feel an announcement of retirement by either leader would undermine his position for the rest of the 94th Congress and trigger a battle for succession.

Scott, nearly 75, and Mansfield, 72, appear in excellent physical condition. Being in the eighth decade of life never has been a bar to seeking yet another Senate term.

Scott shows no signs of wear. Mansfield, however, sometimes appears more and more frustrated and irritated by the Senate.

Mansfield — should he so choose — has another term for the asking and would be unanimously re-elected leader a position he has held longer than any other man.

Scott has a more difficult road. He faces a primary fight and a general election battle, and if he survives both he might be challenged as the GOP leader in the Senate.

What if they retired? Assistant Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd is the acknowledged heir-apparent to Mansfield but the crown is not his for the asking.

Byrd is considered a highly skilled technocrat who has taken from Mansfield the burden of the Senate's daily operations.

Even Senate liberals, who consider him too conservative, give him high marks for his job as whip.

Liberal Democrats who like Byrd as whip but do not want him as the party's major Senate spokesman will have to settle on one challenger. Even unity — a rare phenomenon among liberals — may not be enough.

Those most frequently mentioned as possibly having enough backing to block Byrd are Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, Edmund S. Muskie of Maine and Alan Cranston of California.

But Mansfield said this week it is his "present intention" to seek another term.

Talking to reporter's Monday, Scott indicated he might announce a decision in a mid-December speech in Pittsburgh.

Speculation about Scott's plans heightened when a Philadelphia radio station said it had learned he would quit to become U.S. ambassador to China.

There are a number of Republicans who would love his leadership job.

At the head of the list — by tradition, if nothing else — is the GOP whip, Robert P. Griffin of Michigan, a conservative-moderate who is close to President Ford. Scott was whip when Senate GOP leader Everett M. Dirksen died.

Corley Wants New Trial

WACO, Tex. (UPI) — Edward Eldon Corley's rights were violated because he had not been provided an attorney at the time he signed a statement in the murder of a church organist, defense attorneys argued Monday.

Final arguments are scheduled today on the defense efforts to set aside Corley's confession.

Corley, 30, is accused of the kidnaping, rape and murder of Vicki Lynn Morris of Chapel Hill. The state is seeking the death penalty in the case.

Defense attorneys argued Monday during the first day of pretrial hearings that Corley was denied his constitutional rights to counsel when he signed a statement after his arrest in September 1974.

Testimony by Smith County District Attorney Curtis Owen, chief prosecutor in the case, showed Corley was not appointed a lawyer until nearly two months after his arrest, Sept. 17, 1974.

Testimony showed Corley made four statements relating to the Morris murder and other crimes, but signed only two of the statements.

District Judge Carl C. Anderson ordered Smith County District Attorney Curtis Owen to release the two signed confessions and any other evidence the state planned to introduce in the trial.

Corley, who also has been charged with the deaths of two other, women, was judged mentally competent to stand trial earlier this year. The trial was moved from Tyler to Waco on a change of venue. Mrs. Morris was abducted from a Chapel Hill Baptist church where she was practicing the organ. She was found shot to death with a shotgun four miles from church.

Anderson said jury selection for the trial would begin Wednesday but that testimony would not begin until Nov. 3, after Baylor University's homecoming football game.

The judge said the jury would be sequestered during the trial and that accommodations at local hotels during that week-end would be extremely difficult.

State May Get Millions

By BILL CHOYKE Pampa News' Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Military bases in Texas may receive more than $185 million for new construction projects under a Department of Defense authorization bill recently approved by Congress.

Funds for the project, part of a $3.6 billion military construction package for fiscal year 1976, will be for construction on 11 Air Force bases, three Army bases and a Naval Air Station in Texas.

The San Antonio area will reap the greatest benefits in the new authorizations. The largest single grant, $104,596,000 for new projects, will go to Lackland Air Force Base to be used primarily at Wilford Hall, a hospital there. While Congress passed the authorization bill, it still must approve an appropriations package, which could contain less money.

Other installations in the San Antonio area authorized to receive Air Force funds for new construction are Brooks Air Force Base ($693,000), Kelly Air Force Base ($4,336,000), Randolph Air Force Base ($5,128,000) and Fort Sam Houston ($870,000).

Bergstrom Air Force Base in Austin will receive $427,000 for an energy conservation-related project. The authorizations for 12 Texas military bases under this program are part of a six-year, $1.3 billion plan to reduce energy consumption by modifying existing power facilities at military installations.

According to information released by Sen. John Tower, R-Wichita Falls, the authorization approved by Congress was $9.4 million less than the $194,389,000 that President Ford had requested for military construction in Texas.

Tower's office said Texas Air Force bases would receive $134 million; Army bases, $48 million; and the Naval Air Station at Corpus Christi, $3.6 million. Other Air Force bases receiving new funds for construction or energy conservation projects are

Fire Danger Reported High At Meredith

Frequent high winds and dry vegetation combine to make the land areas around Lake Meredith a very high potential for grass fires.

"Visitors to Lake Meredith should be especially careful with fire during this dry season," Chief Ranger Larry Nielson said. "A tossed cigarette, and unattended fire, or even a spark from a vehicle could ignite the dry grass."

Lake Meredith has had three fires during this calendar year. All of these were man-caused and occurred in the early part of the year before the summer rains came. Approximately five acres of grassland were destroyed at an actual cost to the government of $214.54. Value of personal property lost in one of the fires was estimated at around $2,000.

Teens Die in Apparent Murder Suicide Shooting

CANON CITY, Colo. (UPI) — A 17-year-old girl was kidnapped by her ex-boyfriend as she waited for a school bus and shot to death in what authorities said was an apparent murder-suicide.

Fremont County Sheriff John Vernetti said Kathy Santistevan, a student at Benet Hill Academy, a private Catholic school, was shot Monday apparently by Thomas A. Kyer, 22, who then killed himself. The bodies were found on a bed in the basement of a Canon City home.

Verneti said the girl was forced into a station wagon early Monday as she waited for the bus with her younger sister about a block from her home in Widefield, a Colorado Springs suburb. Later in the day near Security, about 10 miles south of Colorado Springs, Kyer forced his way into the car of Jerry D. Saunders and forced the man at gunpoint to drive him and the girl 50 miles to Canon City.

Saunders dropped the two at the one-story home in the Lincoln Park area and then drove to the sheriff's office to report the incident. He was placed in protective custody.

"He (Saunders) told us the girl said she was afraid for her life as he was driving them to Canon City," a sheriff's spokesman said. "We understand the girl had been having problems with Kyer, but right now we just don't know what brought it on."

Officers from the sheriff's and police departments, the Colorado State Patrol and State Penitentiary guards converged on the area and surrounded the home. Residents in neighboring homes were evacuated to prevent possible injury.

Several attempts were made during the afternoon to communicate with those inside the home, both by bullhorn and telephone, but Vernetti said there was no response. At one point during the siege, neighbors reported hearing what sounded like muffled shots. But Vernetti said there were no other signs of life in the house.

Three officers entered the home and placed a tear gas cannister at the door to the basement where Kyer and the girl were hidden. When the gas was cleared an hour later, officers wearing gas masks entered the basement and found the bodies.

"They're both dead," Under-sheriff Dan Cooke said as he left the home moments later.

"It appears to be a murder-suicide, but our investigation is continuing," Vernetti said.

The sheriff said it was not clear who owned the home where the slayings occurred or if there was any connection between the owner and Kyer.

Auxiliary Gives $22500

The Highland General Hospital auxiliary has contributed more than $22,500 to the hospital since its organization in 1964, according to the announcement made during a recent meeting.

The session was in the home of Mrs. E.M. Dunigan, president.

Robert Monogue, hospital administrator, thanked the group for its recent gift of $4,000 used toward the purchase of the Ohio Critical Care Ventilator.

Electrically powered, this machine will be used in the emergency room or intensive care unit to support life in patients whose breathing has been interrupted by accidents, cardiac arrest or other causes.

A demonstration of cardiopulmonary resuscitation was given by Bill Owen and Midge Calloway, using the dummy, "Resusci-Ann."

Owen, head of the respiratory therapy at Highland General Hospital, stated that this department now staffed by four trained persons compares favorably with any in this area.

Announcement was made that additional pictures, on a loan basis, are needed at this time. The announcement was made by Suzie Wilkinson, chairman of art.
