US Evacuates Beirut Embassy

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — The U.S. embassy led the exodus of foreigners out of embattled Beirut today where fierce street fighting continued to spread.

Moslem militiamen firing rockets, mortars and machineguns attacked Christian positions around Beirut's major hotels.

Casualties mounted to more than 850 dead and 2,100 wounded as Christian rightists and Moslem leftists ignored a ceasefire and carried their citywide street war into its seventh week.

Most foreign embassies have decided to evacuate nonessential staffers and dependents and have advised others of their nationalities to make plans to leave.

The U.S. embassy, under sniper fire and in a state of semi-seige, led the evacuation, sending a group of about 50 embassy staffers and dependents out today.

Another, probably much larger, group will be leaving Wednesday, an embassy spokesman said.

A United Nations spokesman announced that the 550 dependents of U.N. personnel here had also been advised to go.

Beirut Airport was crowded with foreigners trying to get out. Before Beirut's civil strife erupted in April there were about 7,000 Americans and 7,000 Britons here. About 2,000 from each community have already left.

Panic-stricken guests, most of them foreigners, huddled in the basements of the big seaside hotels as Moslem militiamen pressed in on two sides against Christian Phalangists in the fourth day of heavy fighting in residential downtown Beirut.

The Holiday Inn, where about 200 persons were trapped, including Americans, British, Canadians, Italians and Swiss, was hit by rockets that tore a gaping hole through its upper four floors. Nearly all the windows in the 24-story green and white building were shattered by thousands of rounds of bullets.

Terror-stricken guests were trapped in the basement of the Phoenicia Hotel, where employees and guests put out a fire when street fighting prevented firemen from reaching them.

About 17 guests were in the St. Georges Hotel, also seized by the Christian militiamen, but the desk clerk said "all seemed to have got out this morning."

Rockets and mortars ripped into the upper half of Hamra Street, the main downtown commercial center, as Moslem militiamen advanced to within one block of the Christian-held area. Five rockets within five minutes landed within a few hundred yards of the UPI offices on Hamra and staffers had to run a gauntlet of sniper fire to get to work.

A U.S. spokesman said the embassy was "continuing its essential functions but discouraging nonessential traffic away from the front door."

U.S. Marines in combat fatigues guarded the lobby.

Heavy fighting also raged through downtown Beirut where parliament tried unsuccessfully for the third time in four days to meet in emergency session.

Witnesses said deputies huddled to the floor as machine gun fire fanned the building.

The bodyguard of Pierre Gemayel, leader of the predominantly Christian Phalangist party, was killed.

Hospitals all over town reported they were full and could not accept more patients.

At Gaza hospital in the Palestinian area of Sabra, three cars drew up with horns blaring and screaming parents carried out five or six children with mangled legs, apparently as a result of a mortar blast.

Karantina hospital near Beirut port reported it canceled surgery because its operating room was hit by a shell and badly damaged.

Inmates Release Hostage

GRANITE, Okla. (UPI) — Nine inmates who seized three hostages and barricaded themselves in the Oklahoma State Reformatory kitchen today released one of their captives because he was reported suffering from a heart ailment.

A spokesman said the hostage, Leonard S. Summers, was taken to the prison infirmary for observation. The 53-year-old guard had complained of chest discomfort shortly before his release.

The inmates, complaining about the loss of Christmas package privileges in the prison, occupied the kitchen late Monday, presumably armed with knives from the butcher shop, and seized three supervisors.

Rep. David Riggs, D-Tulsa, chairman of the House Public Safety and Penal Affairs Committee and author of numerous penal reform bills, talked by telephone with one of the nine inmates before dawn and said he was optimistic the confrontation would be settled peacefully.

Riggs said prison officials now were awaiting a response from the prisoners.

Shortly after the takeover, state Corrections Director Dr. Ned Benton had said there would be no amnesty for the rebellious convicts and warned that force would be used if necessary to free the captives.

A spokesman for Gov. David Boren, however, said prison officials were awaiting the inmate's response to Riggs' conversation before deciding on a course of action.

"It has sort of settled into a waiting game. That's what we're doing now — we're waiting for a response,"

Warden Jerry Sunderland granted the inmates demand for a televised interview to complain about the ban on Christmas packages. They originally demanded release of four prisoners from solitary confinement, but that request was rejected.

KOCO news director Foster Morgan and chief photographer Bill Collard, along with John Grider, deputy director of the state corrections department, went into the kitchen area to talk with the inmates.

"The prisoners said the main complaint, virtually the only complaint, was in connection with the loss of package privileges," Morgan said during the broadcast.

"They said the prison authorities had cut out Christmas packages which in the past contained cigarettes, toothpaste and other gifts and now the only thing they would get for Christmas would be a couple of small packages from the Red Cross."

Sunderland said the decision to ban packages from family members because of contraband, particularly drugs, entering the institution.

He said area church groups were planning to prepare Christmas packages to be sent to the inmates.

Ford Pledges Aid For Egyptian Economy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Egypt's President Anwar Sadat talked with Defense Secretary James Schlesinger today about possible U.S. military aid to Cairo before meeting again with President Ford, who already has pledged major economic aid to Egypt.

Ford and Sadat, both dressed in dark blue suits and looking relaxed, conferred together in the Oval Office. During a brief photography session before the meeting began, Sadat appeared to be doing most of the talking as Ford listened.

The meeting with Schlesinger was regarded largely as a protocol visit, since Egypt's military needs have been spelled out during Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's frequent trips to the Middle East.

Administration sources said the key element in the question of U.S. arms aid is when, not whether, aid will be given.

Spokesmen for both sides said Ford told Sadat Monday that he plans to ask Congress for major economic aid to Egypt for his year.

Sadat arrived in Washington Monday for an unprecedented state visit.

On the diplomatic front, Sadat urged efforts toward an Israeli-Syrian disengagement accord and a settlement on the future of Palestinians. On the military side, Sadat is looking to the United States for aid.

While Sadat's hardware shopping list includes F16 fighter jets, tanks, Hawk missiles and sophisticated electronic equipment, U.S. officials expect significant military aid to Egypt is unlikely until after the 1976 presidential election.

During toast remarks at a White House banquet honoring President and Mrs. Sadat, both presidents declared their intent to maintain the momentum for peace in the Middle East.

Ford said "there can be no peace until the legitimate interests of all the peoples of the Middle East are taken fairly into account in a final peace settlement."

Sadat said in his response "we feel that the momentum for peace should not be squandered under any circumstances."

Washington (UPI) — The middleman's share of the consumer's dollar for a market basket of food decreased 3.2 cents in August to the lowest level for the year, the Agriculture Department says.

The farm-retail spread, which covers the costs for assembling, processing, transporting and

School Board Delays Decision On Re-evaluation Consultant

By THOM MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff

About 40 citizens attended the meeting of the Pampa Independent School District Board of Trustees meeting Monday, most of them area farmers and ranchers urging that the board "withhold any decision to re-appraise farm and ranch land until it has been determined by the voters, the courts, and the legislature how you should approach the matter."

Foster Whaley, Gray County agricultural extension agent, presented a two- and a-half page statement to the board "on behalf of and at the request of area farmers and ranchers."

In the statement, Whaley said "should Proposition No. 5, Article VIII of the proposed constitution pass in the November 4 election, all of any re-evaluation work and the thousands of dollars spent for such work could be a total waste of School District Funds."

The spokesman also said that State Representative Phil Cates had told him that "a few years back an amendment to the Constitution was approved that stated farm and ranch land must be appraised on its land use value. Phil believes enabling legislation to fully implement this little-used amendment is a distinct possibility in the next legislature if the newly-proposed Finance Section of the new Constitution fails."

When the meeting, which lasted about three hours, began at 7:30 p.m., additional seating was brought in to accommodate the visitors.

A motion was made and seconded to limit discussion to five minutes per person, but the motion was withdrawn after Whaley said that his prepared statement would speak for many present at the meeting and he did not believe a time limit would be necessary.

Dr. Dan Long, superintendent of schools, said that there was a need to establish equity in taxation in Pampa and he mentioned possible taxation on automobiles, mobile homes and personal property in addition to the re-evaluation of rural real estate in order to achieve the equity.

L. L. Jacobs and Associates, a company which makes property evaluations, presented a proposal to the board and audience, but his presentation was prefaced with the statement that he did not intend to enter into an agreement with the school board until the outcome of the proposed constitution election is known.

At one point in the meeting it was brought out that re-evaluation of all areas of the school district's taxation had been budgeted at $5,000 for additional salaries, $15,000 for a re-evaluation consultant, and $1,000 for necessary materials.

John Spearman, an area agri-businessman and former school board president (1969-70), said "I would oppose any additional tax or any additional evaluation until we take in all taxable property in the school district."

He specifically mentioned taxing automobiles and said "We need to spread the tax load."

Andy Smith, another agri-businessman in the audience, asked, "This money that's needed, what's it going to be used for?"

Long explained that because of House Bill 1126 school funding has been changed and that Pampa school district is required to send $400,000 more than before to the state.

He called the money need, "mandatory requirements for expenditure."

Harold Comer, a board member, put it in simpler terms when he said money is required "mainly for a teacher pay

Ford To Restate NYC Position

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford will deliver "an important speech" on New York City's financial plight Wednesday, it was announced today. White House aides indicated Ford would restate his position against federal assistance to the city.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen flatly refused to say whether Ford had changed his opposition to federal assistance for New York.

"I suggest you listen to the speech," he told reporters after calling them together to announce that the speech would be delivered at noon in the National Press Club. Nessen said it would be "on New York City" — "an important speech on an important subject."

White House aides, shortly before Nessen's announcement, said Ford wanted to restate his position on New York City and they seriously doubted he had softened toward giving any federal guarantees to back up the city's municipal bonds.

Although Ford has stood against any aid, some presidential aides have said there is within the administration a "furious debate" on whether some measures should be taken to prop up the nation's largest city.

Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson, D-Ill., today asked Congress to approve a plan requiring New York City's banks and union members to make some sacrifices in return for federal help to avert default.

Stevenson proposed the plan to the Senate Banking Committee as an alternative to a plan advanced by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., the panel chairman. Proxmire's bill called for making $6 billion in federally guaranteed loans

Derelict Places Value On Independent Life

"He travels on, a solitary man; His age has no companion." — Wordsworth

By E.T. McCLANAHAN
DALLAS (UPI) — For seven years Dick Chambers has lived under the northbound lane of the R.L. Thornton freeway near the city's main sewage plant.

The bridge abutments and surrounding underbrush help keep out the wind. He has a place fixed up for cooking. "Yeah, it gets cold sometimes on winter nights," he says, "but we don't get no rain under here."

He sleeps off his drunks on a choice of two foam rubber pads or an old metal bed frame with an tattered, dirty mattress plopped amid a sea of wine bottles. Over it all hovers the smell of sewage effluent and rotting vegetation.

Like a prisoner of war, he blurs out his old army serial number, 38426532, along with his name when called on to identify himself.

But despite the squalor, the cold and the ventilated shoes, Chambers places a certain value on the independent life of the derelict.

Given a choice, Chambers — and most the men in his camp — say they have no desire, say, to enter nursing homes.

Whether Chambers and his comrades in rags across the nation can go on living as they have, however, is in doubt. Studies show urban renewal is showing their haunts aside and already their numbers are declining.

Los Angeles officials are considering demolishing the city's run down Fifth Street area to provide more parking space for banking and shopping. New construction is creeping southward into New York's Bowery district.

In St. Louis, portions of skid row were wiped out by the Great Arch project. In Denver, a string of cheap bars and flop houses gave way to Larimer Square, now a tourist district with a gaslight motif. Chicago's skid row area is diminishing.

Minneapolis' skid row was eliminated by the "Gateway Project," now mainly parking lots. In Kansas City, the once-infamous River Quay is being redeveloped into chic nightclubs, boutiques and organic food stores.

It is not only the Chambers' of the world who are resentful. "In my view, they're trying to take away an individual's right to decide what to do," said Charlie Walsh, 55, former rail rider and merchant seaman who works at the snack bar at the Dallas Alcoholic Center. "But I don't know. I guess they got to give these social workers something to do."

Kenneth Conaway, 36, the manager of the alcoholic center, who paid his dues on several of the nation's skid rows when he was drinking, also notices a falling off.

"The day of the bum, the wino, is slowly diminishing," he said. "They're being slowly moved out of the cheap hotels, the abandoned cars and railroad yards. Urban renewal is putting places like this out of business."

Faced with demolition of skid row areas, the men move to the fringes and crowd the remaining hotels, making them even more unsafe or unsanitary, or they ride a boxcar to a town where they hear other men are going.

"The skid row individual cannot be relocated by governmental action," Conaway said. "My feeling is that a majority of them will someday become institutionalized. Many of the older ones will become feeble and become absorbed into nursing homes or similar facilities."

In the main room of the center, about a half dozen solemn, clean-dressed men sat around, staring at the walls, drinking coffee, chatting in low voices. The walls were covered with signs encouraging temperance and self-discipline: "First things first," "Easy does it," "Live and let live."

"Only had a dozen for lunch," said one of the elderly men to a friend. "I wonder where everybody's at."

But for the men on the street food is often less important than the source of the next bottle of wine or liquor, which is shared with friends.

Many of the men in Dallas have spent nights with Chambers under the freeway bridge, where they trade stories about their past years on the road. There's Chuck Simpson, 41, Jim Cocherham, 66, and his younger brother Johnny — a Korean War veteran still full of stories about the "Frozen Chosen."

One evening Simpson and the Cocherham brothers passed around a bottle and sang a few songs. Simpson was lanky, easy-going, and had about a week's beard on his face. In his Mississippi drawl, he tried to convince Johnny Cocherham to rent a cheap apartment with him so they could get food stamps.

"We'll just go on down there in Oak Cliff and get us an apartment and you know we'd be able to qualify for them food stamps," he said.

But Cocherham didn't seem to hear.

"It's my fault I'm lying here on the street, I know that," he said in his low and raspy drill sergeant's voice. "I got three checks comin', they come every month. Six, seven hundred bucks and I lay on the street."

"I've played and I've made a lotta money, but I get on a damn drunk and I hit bottom again. You know what I mean? It's a cycle. You know what a cycle is? It's a damned circle, man. I'll tell it like it is: a wine bottle got us all."

Jim Cocherham, "The Hammercocker," sat off by himself staring into space. There were patches of grim on his leathery face and the area around his bloodshot eyes appeared to be rubbed raw.

He recited the last verse of a poem he learned long ago, back in Arizona when they called him "Texas Red."

"When I die Go dig my grave. Bury me down in the cold, cold clay. Don't set up a jomb. Just draw a line For a long freight train And a jug of wine."

The first recorded contact between the Choctaw Indian tribe and the white man was in October, 1540. Indian warriors under the leadership of Tuskulasa fought a nine-hour battle near the present site of Mobile, Ala., against a Spanish expeditionary force led by Hernando De Soto. According to tribal legend, the Indians were defeated and the survivors hanged themselves rather than surrender.

RR Commissioner Won't Rerun

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Ben Ramsey, 71, announced Monday he will not seek re-election to the regulatory Texas Railroad Commission but he plans to deny Gov. Dolph Briscoe a chance to name his successor.

Ramsey said he would serve out the remaining 14 months of his six-year term. Ramsey's announcement means for the first time in more than two decades voters will elect a member of the commission who was not previously appointed to the regulatory body. Only a few of the 26 commissioners in the agency's 84 year history won their jobs initially in an election.

Ramsey's decision to serve out his term until Jan. 1, 1977 ended speculation he would resign and allow Briscoe to appoint a new commissioner. "I will not be a candidate for re-election as a member of the Railroad Commission of Texas," Ramsey said.

Two candidates have previously announced for the $43,200 a year job on the commission which regulates oil and gas, trucking and bus operations in Texas, and more are expected to enter the field.

A Houston attorney, Terrance O'Rourke, and a legislator, Rep. David Finney, D-Fort Worth, previously announced they would challenge Ramsey if he ran for a new six year term on the three-man panel.

Rep. Lane Denton, D-Waco, and the director of the Texas Legislative Council, Bob Johnson, have indicated they are considering the race. And Walter Wendlandt, former director of the commission's transportation division, announced this month he would seek the job if Ramsey stepped out.

Ramsey served 11 years as lieutenant governor — the longest consecutive tenure in the state's No. 2 position — before Gov. Price Daniel appointed him to the three-man railroad commission in 1961.

He served as a state senator for 10 years and as a state representative for four years. O'Rourke said he was pleased Ramsey intends to serve out his term.

"This action by Commissioner Ramsey breaks a trend of what I call the appointment system in the railroad commission — a trend of hand-picked special interest 'incumbents,'" O'Rourke said.

"For the first time in over three decades, the people of Texas have the chance to actually elect a commissioner to this powerful agency rather than merely confirm a choice made for them by others."

RAPID GROWTH
JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The central Missouri Lake of the Ozarks region has grown rapidly.

In 1953 five banks in the area had assets of $12.5 million. In 1975 eight banks contain deposits of more than $85 million.

Larva Predicts Cold

STILLWATER, Okla. (UPI) — A small, hairy creature may be trying to tell us something about the coming winter.

A brown-striped fur-covered moth larva known as the woolly bear has been seen scurrying around in some parts of the state. If folklore is to be believed, this means Oklahoma is in for a hard winter.

The caterpillars are supposed to flee from bad weather. Also, the brown stripe down the center of the back is supposed to be wider and the caterpillar's fuzz is supposed to be thicker if a cold winter is coming.

This year, some watchers have reported seeing woolly bears form circles like wagon trains warding off attacks.

"There's no motive to their madness," Oklahoma State University entomologist Ken Pinkston.

He said no scientific evidence has been turned up to support any of the old theories.

"There may be some significance to folktales about body color and length of hair predicting the winter's weather but to my knowledge no research has been done," he said.

Bike-a-thon Raises Money for Cancer

A total of $224.90 has been collected in the 1975 Cancer Bike - A - Thon, according to the announcement made this morning by John Triplehorn, chairman.

He said 54 residents and students participated in the 30-mile ride.

Triplehorn asked those who have turned in their money to do so as soon as possible at the Gray County Sheriff's Office.

Participants included Brad Beyer, Bob Brandt, Rex Caldwell, Dawn Carter, Karla Cooper, Tena Cothan, Ken Crossman, Pete Evans, Charmy Feller, Valisa Feller, Jeff Russell, Lisa Grider, Edward Guerra, Rebekkah Guenther, Mike Hickman, Matt Hinton, Ross Hinton, William Holman, Jay Brian Holt.

Dr. Barry Rumack says the last several Halloweens were marred by a half dozen calls to the center about children suffering from nausea, vomiting and diarrhea.

He said the center also receives 20-30 inquiries each year from parents asking about candy coated pellets shaped like a well known candy but marked with numbers and other letters.

UPI Auto Writer
DETROIT (UPI) — The successful launch of the 1976-model year came too late to affect the auto industry's third quarter earnings but Wall Street analysts say U.S. automakers still were able to triple their depressed year-ago performance.

Suggests Block Party

DENVER (UPI) — The executive director of the Rocky Mountain Poison Center says the Halloween tradition of "trick or treating" should be eliminated and replaced with block parties with costumes and games.

"Most often, it has turned out that the markings are those of pharmaceutical firms, and the pellets are indeed somebody's medicine," Rumack said.

Rumack said if children must go trick-or-treating, parents should take the precautions of having an adult accompany them, make sure all treats are checked before they are eaten, and let the children eat only candies in their original wrappers.

financial reports from the three auto companies this week will show a combined profit of about $168 million compared with $55 million a year ago — the lowest for a non-strike year since 1958.

Whether the three reach a projected $70 million profit in the fourth quarter, compared with $456.5 million a year ago, will depend largely on consumer confidence, analysts said.

"Given the fragile state of consumer confidence, the slightest bad news could burst the bubble of the past month," said David Eisenberg, research vice president of the Wall Street firm of Sanford Bernstein & Co.

"Sales of 1976 models have gotten off to an encouraging start, but we'll have to wait at least a month longer to see if it can sustain itself."

Chrysler Corp. and General Motors will report their July-September results Tuesday. Ford Motor Co. makes its report Thursday. Only Chrysler, hardest hit by the two-year sales slump, showed a loss in the third quarter, analysts said.

Chrysler's loss, the fifth straight quarterly deficit, was estimated at about $72 million, compared with an $8 million deficit a year ago. In the past five quarters, Chrysler has lost about $300 million.

GM profits should rise to about $200 million for the quarter, compared with $16 million last year with Ford reporting a $40 million performance, down slightly from $47 million last year.

In the final three months, GM should report a $460 million profit, a 9 per cent drop from last year. Ford will report a 300 per cent improvement with a $90 million profit. Chrysler will end five straight consecutive losses with a modest $21 million in earnings.

Analysts said the strong sales in the first 20 days of October — up 24 per cent from depressed year-ago levels — indicate sales for the year may reach seven million cars — down about 6 per cent from 1974 but an improvement over earlier predictions of a 6.7 million car year.

EARLY HILTON
CISCO, Tex. (UPI) — A small town east of Abilene, Tex., Cisco was a site of one of the earliest Hilton Hotels.

Pampans Stump TV Panel

By Pampa News Staff
A Pampa couple, Mr. and Mrs. W.A. Carter of 213 N. Sumner, returned last week from New York City where both were imposters on Gary Moore's "To Tell the Truth."

She won the National Cow Calling contest at Miami in June with plans to appear on the nationally televised show in Miami.

Her husband told Mrs. Carter she would never make it. "You can't holler loud enough," he challenged. His wife, Janice Bond Carter, 55, the grandmother of three, walked away from Miami with top honors.

Three days later, she called New York and asked about appearing on the show as a central character.

The chances for that were dim, she was told. However, officials said Mrs. Carter could be an imposter.

"I held out for central character," she said. However as the weeks passed, calls from New York became more frequent — but never once did the caller agree that Mrs. Carter could be the central character.

Finally, a week ago they ask her if her husband could appear on the show, would she consent to be an imposter.

"I would have bet everything I possessed that he wouldn't do it," said Janice. But they found him home alone and he agreed to fly to New York and pose as Jim Cannon, superintendent of the Arkansas State Park where the famous diamond mine is located.

Carter immediately turned to an encyclopedia and did him Arkansas homework.

Janice was an imposter for Lena Lavender, who has won more than $100,000 in gifts this year. Both the Carters stumped the panel and won $166 each in addition to other prizes.

As imposter, Mrs. Carter said they were not required to tell the truth — only the central character must tell all.

"I got so many voted they convinced me I'm the real Jim Cannon," Carter said.

The Carters said the appearance for the taped show as one of the most interesting of their lives.

"You get to know all those people and they are as common as you," said Mrs. Carter.

Her sister, Mrs. C.H. Godfrey of College Station, met the Carters in Dallas and accompanied them to New York where she was among the audience when the show was taped.

The Carters will appear on Program 2481. The time has not yet been announced.

"I'm anxious for Pampa to see it," she said. They own and operate Carter Sand and Gravel here.

Didn't Tell the Truth
Mr. and Mrs. W.A. Carter of Pampa will appear soon on the national television show, "To Tell the Truth." Both were imposters and both stumped the panel in a taped show done last week in New York. (Pampa News photo by Michal Thompson)

Perceptor Chapter Write to Hightower

The Beta Sigma Phi Perceptor Chi Chapter voted recently to request Congressman Jack Hightower to support a bill designating the week of April 30 each year as "National Beta Sigma Phi week."

Each of the members signed a letter requesting the designation.

The meeting was held in the home of Dona Cornutt.

Senator Robert Dole and Rep. Larry Winn of Kansas has introduced legislation to designate a special week.

Gary Sanders and Karl Collier, Pampa High School students, presented a cultural program.

Ricky Rice and John Hollar worked with the boys in preparing and researching information for the program.

In accordance with the 200th birthday of the nation, the Pampa Chapter of DECA is presenting a visual slide production which tells the history of Pampa and Gray County.

During the business session plans were made to elect a Valentine Queen.

Members present included Mesdames Baton, Dona Cornutt, Ralph Esson, Joe Fisher, Gerry Grayson, Henry Gruben, Ray Jordan, Cletus Mitchell, John Plaster, Traylor Price, James Trusty and Jack Vaughn.

President is Faye Price.

Grace Slick's Back—'I'm Always Watching'

NEW YORK (UPI) — "You have to keep your eyes and ears open in this world," said Grace Slick, "or they'll just kill you."

She sprawled out on the hotel couch and said, "I'm always watching."

Vigilance appears to have paid off for Ms. Slick, 35, lead singer of the Jefferson Starship rock 'n' roll group and heroine of the youth drug-counterulture of the 1960s.

Ten years after she first sang with the original band, until 1970 known as Jefferson Airplane, the group is successful and looking for a new direction — something it feels it shares with the rest of the country.

"Back in the 60s we were just saying 'Let's go out and raise hell' and we didn't really care about much," said Paul Kantner, 34, the group's rhythm guitarist and father of Ms. Slick's 4½-year-old daughter, China.

"In a way we're mellow now, we're more into writing love songs — the world needs love songs."

Kantner said the group "mirrors the world as it exists and changes from day to day."

"Yeah," cut in Grace, "and the mirror is full of cracks and chips."

"People are still trying to change things," Kantner continued. "They're just going about it in a different way. They're waking up and saying some things have to be done but they don't know what."

"So for now, we're writing music about alternative futures."

The airplane's biggest hit, "White Rabbit" in 1967, foresaw a revolving circle of drug use and hallucination to deal with life: "One pill makes you smaller and one pill makes you tall; go ask Alice when she's 10 feet tall."

"Now," said Grace, "I'd rather go out to a bar and throw things around."

"We were innocent when we wrote all those early drug songs, just like the country was innocent," Kantner said. "The kids who tried drugs were looking for a way to see truth and goodness."

"Ain't no such thing," Grace whispered.

"We're different that way," her lover conceded.

They agreed, however, China, whom they named god (no capital g) when she was born, could handle the world in which she is growing up.

"She's got a strong personality, which is helpful when she has to live this kind of life. We take her with us everywhere where she can learn something," Grace said. "I want her to know about keeping her eyes open and understanding reality."

What will China do when the Starship is on stage in New York this weekend?

"We got her a ticket to see 'The Magic Show' on Broadway," Grace said. "It's really far out."

Interlock Knits Require Sewing Precautions

COLLEGE STATION — Interlock knits — one of today's newest fabrics — help create the popular soft, feminine lightweight fashions, but they require several precautions for success in sewing, Beverly Rhoades, a clothing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"To identify an interlock knit, look at the cut edge along the width of the fabric. An interlock knit looks the same on both sides, with a back loop opposite each front loop, producing parallel vertical rows of loops," she explained.

"Most pattern styles suitable for soft, lightweight fabrics are appropriate for interlock knits, too. But avoid styles with many small pattern pieces such as yokes or insets," she cautioned.

To sew on interlocks, the specialist recommends using the same general techniques that apply to lightweight double knits — with a few additional safeguards.

"These are necessary because interlocks will run (like nylon hosiery) along the vertical loops in one direction only.

"To identify the direction of the run, gently spread the vertical loops apart at each end, and the problem end will show."

To prevent or check against runs, cut garment pieces — when possible — so that hem edge is cut along the edge that runs. This way, if a small run starts in the hem allowance, it can be sealed easily with fabric glue or other products designed to prevent fraying.

"When handling the fabric after cutting, do not stretch the fabric along the cut edge that runs. Stay stitch or zig zag to stabilize this cut edge."

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise:
When our daughter first announced her pregnancy, I started immediately buying just two jars of baby food each time I bought groceries for my own family. (Of course, I stored them in a cool place.) Toward the end, I added cereal and cookies.

As you can imagine, when the baby arrived I was able to fill her shelves with a good variety of foods and didn't miss the money at all.

After the arrival of the baby, I then started to buy two jars of junior foods, and, by the time the baby was old enough, her pantry was again filled.

I wish I had thought of that three grandchildren ago. New babies are rather expensive, and though it didn't affect my budget at all, it made a great savings for the new parents. It also made the grandparents feel a certain pride to be able to help so much for so little.

Grandmother
Aren't you a luv! What a lucky baby to have such a thoughtful grandmother! Give that sweet one a big kiss for me, too.

love,
Heloise

UNWRITTEN LAW
Everytime the windows fog up in the house or car, one must not pass up the opportunity to autograph them...

Jane

Dear Heloise:
I use several instant powdered products such as coffee, tea, breakfast fruit drinks, etc.

The economy-sized jars are too tall to go on the shelves by my sink, so I use the small-sized jar and refill it from the large jar.

Instead of using a funnel to pour the powder into the small jar, I cut out a small hole in the paper seal that is on the large jar.

It pours a small stream into the small jar perfectly.

Rayetta Beard

SAKES ALIVE, you've come up with a goodie. Beats me how anything so simple could escape me all these years. The label says "Tear here" so I guess I thought I had to follow directions.

Don't we all get in a rut sometimes?

Heloise

Dear Heloise:
A friend of mine suggested I write and tell you how I keep my young daughter out of the drawers and cupboards under my sink.

All I did was slide sturdy yardsticks through the openings of the handles.

This way, she can't get in, and I just slide them out when necessary. Safe and inexpensive.

Mrs. R. W. Kern

Worthwhile Club Meets
Plans for a "Show and Tell" day Monday were formulated at the Oct. 17 meeting of the Worthwhile Home Demonstration Club, according to Gladys Stone, president.

The Oct. 27 meeting will include a covered dish luncheon. The Southwestern Public Service Company, scheduled for Nov. 7 and will include a needlework and gifts demonstration by Elaine Houston and Marilyn Shirley.

Drawing for the quilt made by club members was held with Homer McNeil the winner.

French explorers and traders settled the Mississippi valley.

Dear Heloise:
To bread dough, I add one-fourth teaspoon of ground ginger to the dry ingredients early in the mixing. (This is for a two-loaf recipe.)

It adds no taste but improves the rising ability of the yeast.

On damp, cold days, it makes all the difference in the world in my bread.

N. Cowan

If you don't believe she's right, gals, just try it. I did, and had the lightest loaves of luscious bread, ever.

I'm no scientist and don't know the why's, but it worked! Give it a whirl the next time you bake bread. You'll be amazed!

Heloise

Council Grumbles at Police

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — City council members are grumbling about the contract proposal offered police to end a three-day walkout and at least one councilman says there are legal questions to be answered before the contract can be accepted.

The contract proposal was offered by City Manager Howard McMahan and accepted by police Sunday night.

Police operations returned to normal Monday, but council members must consider the contract today.

"I am glad the police are back on the job, but their attitude leaves a bitter pill in my mouth," said councilman Goree James. He said he was "not going to forget how the officers displayed a total disrespect for law and order in Oklahoma City."

James said he was certain other council members felt the same way he did.

There were indications council members felt obligated to approve the contract compromise reached by McMahan and the Fraternal Order of Police during the weekend walkout, but were unhappy with being pressured into that position.

POP President Jim Parson said police had no hard feelings toward McMahan, whose resignation Parsons sought last week. There were reports, however, council members were unhappy with the city manager and may take action against him.

Councilman Merle McCollum questioned the legality of making the officers involved in the walkout work two days without pay as a penalty for their action.

At least one council member said he would refuse to vote on the contract until a written opinion could be obtained from the city attorney on the legal issues involved.

'Assassins into Cover Girls'

HOUSTON (UPI) — During his many years in public life John Connally has been on both sides of the microphone, first as a spinner of country and western records and later as a Texas governor, treasury secretary, political campaigner and roving ambassador preaching the sermons of self-sacrifice and American individualism.

So it was no stranger who spoke to the Texas Association of Broadcasters convention Monday and jabbed at the strengths and weaknesses of what he said was one of the strongest industries in the country.

Connally, a one-time radio announcer, warned the broadcasters against abusing a power he said was second only to that of the office of the presidency.

"There is raw power in broadcasting and we might as well face that fact and examine it objectively. It is a power that has brought much good — and a power susceptible to much abuse," he said, citing the influence of television commentators on the major networks.

"Any one of them has more influence on the American people than the speaker of the House, the majority leaders in both houses of Congress. I except only the President from that list of government leaders, because the power of the presidency to influence public opinion is still greater than any other."

But Connally reminded the group of the dangers of promoting and sensationalizing the darker aspects of a society with an appetite for vicarious thrills.

"When I watched the news broadcasts on the recent assassination attempts on President Ford, it came to me that all of the madness was not in those two acts of violence alone," Connally said.

"There is some madness in the media as well — and some madness in a society which seems more and more to get its kicks from violence and tragedy."

"Those were major news events, of course, but I question whether it is responsible journalism to make cover girls out of assassins," he said. "And to me it is absolute irresponsibility to report breathlessly on bullet proof vests allegedly worn by the President."

Connally said the industry should take steps to examine its own concept of power — while keeping in mind the importance of protecting individual freedom and individual action. The theme was a familiar one. In a series of public appearances across the country, Connally has consistently hammered on the importance of the individual.

This time he singled out a sprawling government bureaucracy spending millions in investigation and regulation and attempting to perpetuate itself.

If a man-made satellite orbited the earth once every 90 minutes, it would take eight months for it to reach the sun at that speed, about 25 years to reach Pluto, the outermost planet in the sun's orbit.

Primary Election Best—Bentsen

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen, whom the polls indicate could beat President Ford in Texas, says a primary and not back room politics is the best way to select the nation's chief executive.

Bentsen said Monday some of his critics think otherwise.

"Fortunately, it's not going to be a bunch of political manipulators who are going to determine this thing," Bentsen said.

"I've always done well when my fate was in the hands of the people of Texas. That's one of the reasons I supported the presidential primary, because I didn't want to see this decided in some smoke-filled room and I know how upset some of these political manipulators are because that's how they'd like to do it."

"But we're going to have this vote right out there in the open so the people of Texas can speak their minds as to who they think should be representing them."

Bentsen said he would run in the Texas primary and eight or 10 others but he was unsure which ones.

A Belden poll showed only Bentsen and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., would carry Texas in a hypothetical race against Ford. The poll projected Bentsen the winner by 46 percentage points to 38 for the President. Kennedy was favored by 49 per cent to 39 per cent for Ford.

Bentsen also said it was proper for him to run for President and re-election.

"I have the responsibility to the people of Texas in the U.S. Senate and I'm going to fulfill that," he said. "I've kept a high (85 per cent) attendance record in the Senate, where some of these fellows (other candidates) have just walked away from their jobs, spending their full time campaigning."

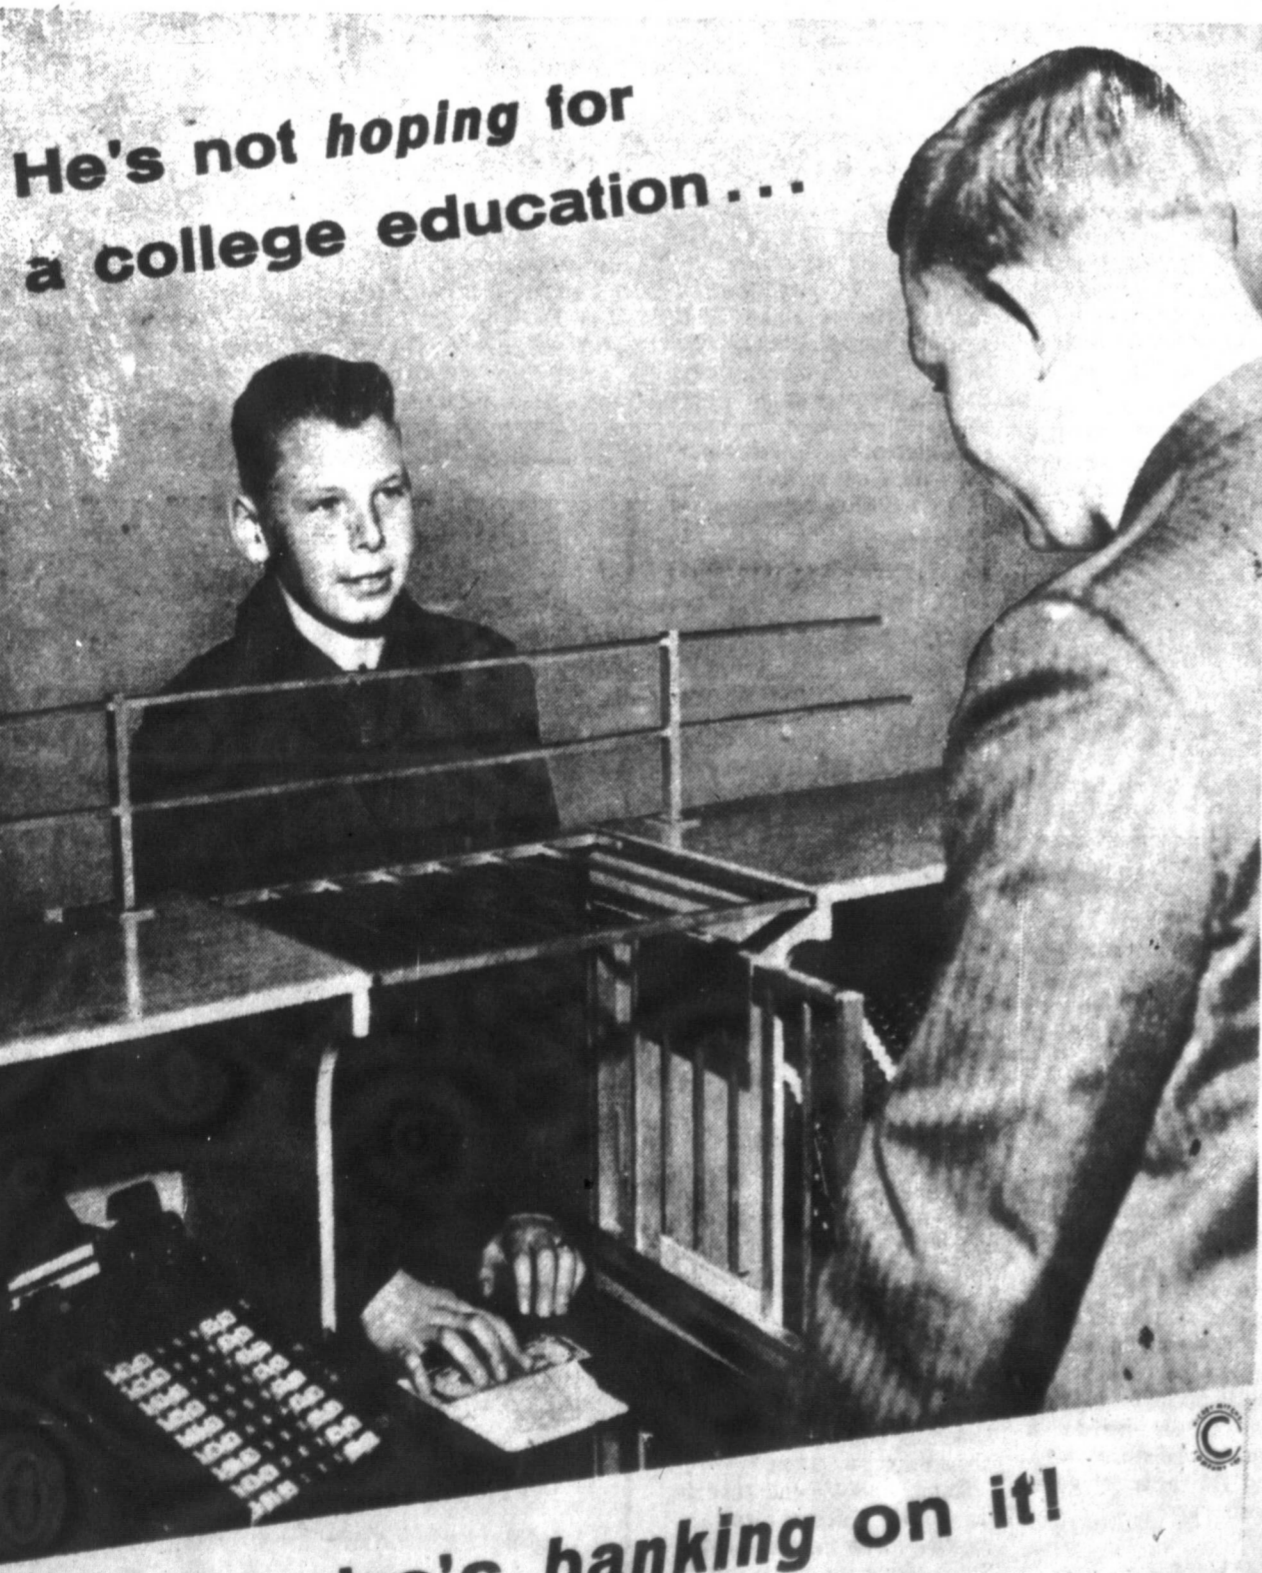

"Or if I was out of a job like some of these fellows are, I could spend my full time campaigning."

Bentsen missed a Senate vote opposing court-ordered busing to achieve integration in the schools but said some critics in Dallas were wrong to criticize his absence.

"I'm opposed to compulsory busing of school children. I think it's bankrupt policy. I don't think it works," he said. "I've voted in the Senate at least 40 times against compulsory busing. I happened to miss one vote, as did Sen. (John) Tower. There was a ridiculous uproar over the missing of one vote that didn't even affect the Dallas area."

McGovern Takes Blame for '72 Defeat

By IRA R. ALLEN
United Press International
George McGovern says his own mistakes led to his campaign debacle of 1972. The audience to whom he made his mea culpa Saturday night in Ames, Iowa, included seven of the nine announced Democratic candidates for president next year. He warned them his mistakes of 1972 should not be "an excuse for empty politics of nonissues in 1976." The candidates, minus Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas and

Gov. Milton Shapp of Pennsylvania, were at a Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinner and did their best to take on the main issue as they see it — President Ford. A 10th potential Democratic contender, Alabama Gov. George Wallace, returned from a trip to Europe this weekend, a journey he made principally to show he is healthy enough and wise enough in the ways of foreign leaders to be president. "Europeans know where Alabama is," Wallace told supporters. "I've enjoyed the trip. I had the pleasure of seeing a great number of people in Europe." Ford, whose attention will be on Middle East diplomacy today and Tuesday, resumes campaigning on behalf of the GOP Wednesday by returning to California, where persons tried to assassinate him last month. He appears at a fund-raiser in Los Angeles Wednesday night and then goes to San Francisco for a Thursday luncheon at the St. Francis Hotel, the hotel he was leaving when a woman fired a shot at him Sept. 22. Exit Ronald Reagan, listed as a cosponsor of the two California events, but a likely challenger to Ford's claim on next year's GOP nomination. The former California governor sent word to organizers of the party events he has previous engagements and cannot appear with the President. But a public relations woman for former Lt. Gov. Robert Finch's senatorial campaign and one of the organizers for the Los Angeles dinner, says Reagan's absence "could be considered a snub." Zan Thomson said Reagan would be in Palm Springs, 100 miles away, on Wednesday and that she doubted his commitment there was so important he could not have changed it to appear on the platform with Ford in Los Angeles. The big event of the weekend was the Iowa congregation of Democrats. At similar meetings of presidential aspirants, the biggest crowd-pleasers have been the outspoken liberals, Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona, Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana and former Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma. But Saturday the greatest applause went to former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, a peanut farmer, who said administration farm policy is one of "corporate domination of American agriculture, destruction of the family farm and exorbitant prices to the American consumer." It was McGovern, however, and not any of the contenders who had sharp words for other Democrats. He said his 1972 loss was the result of his $1,000-a-person proposal, his nomination acceptance coming at 3 a.m. and the selection and then rejection of Thomas Eagleton as his running mate. "I say these things, not because they are easy for me, but because they are essential for us. Otherwise the defeat of 1972 may become an excuse for an empty politics of nonissues in 1976." McGovern also said he does not expect Hubert Humphrey, whom he defeated for the 1972 nomination, to be nominated next year without having run in primaries. The South Dakotan reiterated he would not run again, although he did not rule it out completely. Purchase of the Louisiana Territory more than doubled the size of the United States in 1803.
