MIND AJAR
 By JANE P. MARSHALL

It has been suggested that I write Mind Ajar under initials J.P.

Why? Because, my caller said, perhaps more men would read the column if they didn't know a woman was writing it.

I find it hard to believe that there are that many narrow men in Pampa.

If there are, it's about time they realize that women can write and think and be heard, too.

Recently the Austin Chapter of the National Organization for Women awarded University of Texas football coach Darrell Royal and the Austin Jaycees the "Barefoot and Pregnant" award. Both were cited for hindering women's struggle for equal rights.

Locally, women are not admitted — or never have been at least — to such civic organizations as Jaycees, Lions or Kiwanis, although they do let women serve in auxiliary groups such as Jaycee-ette and Opti-Mrs.

And I'd bet that they do a great deal of the work for the men's organizations.

If women were allowed to become Jaycees, local president Richard Morris predicted that the group would fold. Lawsuits are pending against segregationist policies of Jaycees (NOW called them antiquated policies of not admitting women members) and Morris said that organizations which have been forced to allow women haven't survived.

"Wives wouldn't let their husbands join if we had women in the club," Morris said.

Narrowmindedness can work both ways it is sad to say.

Pampa should offer women who choose to live and work in the city the same opportunities as the men have.

But the antiquated membership policies do not diminish the importance of the work done by service groups whether they are solely for men or solely for women.

Frances "Sissy" Farenthold, former Texas legislator and twice unsuccessful candidate for the Texas Democratic nomination for governor, predicts that women's groups will play a significant role in the 1976 elections.

Mrs. Farenthold said that not enough skilled and qualified people — including women — are involved in governmental decision-making jobs.

The powers should be more widely distributed, she argues.

Traditional female jobs like teachers, secretaries, nurses and librarians are becoming crowded, she said, and the "reservoir of talent and experience" of women should be put to use in jobs previously held only by men.

No women have served on the school board as far as anyone here could remember. No women have served on the Chamber of Commerce here as far as the chamber could remember.

On the side of equality, the school board members in a San Antonio district made dress code rules equal for boys and girls.

The revisions now prevent boys as well as girls from wearing see-through shirts, boys and girls both can wear shoes without socks, and for the first time girls are required to wear their hair neat and well-groomed, as boys have for years.

The News really appreciates letters from readers. And we would like to publish them.

But we often can't. The paper's policy is never publish unsigned letters. This, obviously, could too often lead to trouble.

But we will withhold the name in print if the author requests it.

So keep the letters coming, no matter what your view. But let us know how we can call you back to make sure you wrote it. We don't want your neighbor writing a letter and sending it in under your signature.

Sinai Pact Divides Congressmen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress appears sharply divided over whether American technicians should be sent into the Sinai Desert to monitor the new Israeli-Egyptian peace agreement.

Returning to work after a month-long vacation, Congress must decide whether to approve a request by President Ford to allow the use of about 150 U.S. civilian technicians to guarantee that no violations occur under the interim peace pact.

Presidential press secretary Ron Nessen said Tuesday that based on a White House check with more than 30 congressional leaders in both parties, Ford believes Congress will approve sending the technicians.

The President was meeting with Republican congressional leaders this morning on strategy for seeking that approval. This evening he goes to the airport to welcome Secretary of State Henry Kissinger back from his Middle East shuttle diplomacy.

On Thursday Ford and Kissinger will brief congressional leaders on the agreement and other issues.

Ford hopes Congress will give its approval within two weeks. Congress also returned to the continuing controversy over oil prices. Congressional sources said a major effort will be made next week to override President Ford's veto of a six-month extension of price controls.

Congressional reaction Tuesday to Ford's Middle East request came down hard on both sides of the issue.

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield said it would "set a bad precedent," and Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., said he had "serious reservations" about sending Americans into the Sinai.

Both Jackson and Mansfield said they feared an American presence would bring Soviet observers to the Golan Heights region near Syria and lead to a "face-to-face" confrontation between the two superpowers.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, a ranking member of the foreign relations committee, said use of American technicians in the Middle East should be made "subject to the express condition that the Americans will be withdrawn at once in the event of new hostilities."

However, both Sens. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., and Alan Cranston, D-Calif., argued there were "risks" in sending Americans into the war-torn region but that they were worth taking to insure a Middle East peace.

Javits said "the alternative (to sending in Americans) is totally unacceptable."

The benefits in this case outweigh the minimal risks," Cranston said. "I think we should eagerly grasp this opportunity...."

The fact remains in September as it was in July: there is no major energy legislation ready that both Congress and President Ford like.

The House had as pending business the comprehensive energy bill that would authorize gasoline rationing, roll back the prices under strict controls and allocate fuels. The price rollback, if it stays in the bill, would make it a likely veto candidate.

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said he thinks Ford is receptive to compromise, but he would not mention details and instead will discuss several alternatives with the Senate Democratic Caucus Thursday, he said. The proposals will deal with how to handle prices of oil, from which controls lapsed Aug. 31.

President Ford has said he will veto the six-month extension of controls that Congress passed before it recessed for August. There is a possibility he would accept a briefer extension so Congress can work out a pricing plan acceptable to him.

In any event, Mansfield said Tuesday, he will schedule a veto override vote for Sept. 10. That way, if a compromise fails to surface Congress can work its will on the extension question.

Democrats on both sides of the Capitol met Tuesday to discuss the energy possibilities. A source said prevailing sentiment was to try to override Ford's veto.

The idea would be to use the time during extension of controls to work on pricing and other major energy matters, to try to clear a considerable list of energy legislation before next spring.

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., was drumming up sentiment for overriding the veto. Jackson said he still opposes Ford's phased lifting of oil prices and that "the administration is still where they were in July."

"They are offering again what Congress rejected a few weeks ago."

Representatives of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare will be in Pampa Monday to visit Baker and Lamar Elementary Schools to determine if there is proper ethnic balance in the two schools.

Dr. Dan Long, school superintendent, said today that the investigation stems from an order in March in which a federal judge cited the Pampa school district for possible violations of the federal civil rights law.

If the schools are found to be more than 20 per cent disproportionate in their racial make up, as many as 100 students of the 4,500 in the school district could be bused to other schools, Long said.

"We have no idea what the representatives' reaction will be; they have given us no indication," he said.

In March, US District Court Judge John H. Pratt placed a seven-month limit on efforts to achieve desegregation by voluntary negotiations.

Lawyers for the NAACP Legal Defense Fund which brought the suit say the ruling will force HEW to cut off federal funds for those districts if they do not employ with desegregation standards.

Pratt cited a 20 per cent disproportion in racial make up as acceptable.

Other schools included in the March order were Amarillo, Dumas, Hereford and Plainview.

Two Pampa youths were hospitalized Tuesday afternoon as a result of a one-car accident 40 miles north of Pampa when the car in which they were riding overturned on a Roberts County dirt road.

Betty Epperson, 16, of 1900 N. Nelson was in satisfactory condition this morning at Highland General Hospital.

William Robinson, 20, of 856 Locust was released after staying overnight in the hospital.

Two passengers in the car, Charles Chapman, 23, and Kenneth Moler, 19, escaped injury.

Burl Pipes of the Texas Highway Patrol said Metropolitan Ambulance Service was called to the scene, but had a flat 30 miles out of Pampa. The tire was changed and the ambulance brought the injured to the hospital.

Longshoremen at Houston refused to load two ships two weeks ago, but a federal judge ordered them back to work.

Meany's blast appeared aimed at Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., who Monday attacked Meany for abusing his power by undercutting farm markets and U.S. balance of payments.

In his letter, Meany said there had "some attempts" to portray the boycott as "antifarmer."

"Nothing could be farther from the truth," he said. "Those making these false charges are trying to drive a wedge between the labor movement and its traditional allies, America's family farmers."

He said the AFL-CIO also supports creation of a national food policy and a government agency to deal "with Communist and other dictator countries."

West Virginia coal miners ignored a general back-to-work movement and a $100,000-a-day fine today to continue their wildcat strike and Chicago teachers hit the picket lines, closing classrooms to some 530,000 students.

National Airlines flight attendants and Berkeley, Calif., teachers and firemen also were on picket lines today, and a strike was threatened in the rail industry.

President Ford Tuesday appointed an emergency review panel in efforts to avert a strike by 85,000 railroad shop craft employees. The board was given 30 days to report its findings. The major issue reportedly was work and safety rules.

Dissident coal miners went back to work in half a dozen states but some 30,000 miners remained out in West Virginia despite a $500,000 contempt fine against the union that mounted to the tune of $100,000 a day. The fine took effect Tuesday.

The wildcat strike had idled 60,000 miners. But United Mine Workers members returned to work in Pennsylvania, Illinois, Kentucky, Indiana, Alabama, Virginia and parts of West Virginia.

Most holdouts were in southern West Virginia, where the strike started Aug. 11 and mushroomed into a nationwide crusade to add a "right-to-strike" clause to the UMW contract.

The 26,744-member Chicago Teachers Union went on strike against city schools today, closing classrooms to some 530,000 students in the nation's second largest city. Police were ordered to classrooms to protect staff members and nonstriking teachers ordered to report for work even though students were told to stay home today — the first scheduled day of classes.

Teachers in five Michigan school districts — four in the Detroit metropolitan area — walked out Tuesday in action that affected nearly 80,000 students and 3,200 teachers.

The 4,000-member Boston Teachers Union voted overwhelmingly Tuesday to strike Sept. 22 if no contract settlement is reached. Officials of New York and Los Angeles teachers unions also said there could be strikes in those cities later this month.

Stewardesses walked picket lines to keep National Airlines grounded for the third successive day in a dispute over an expired work contract. Contract negotiations were to resume today.

The strike-riddled Berkeley fire department was down to two trucks and nine men Tuesday.

Almost a foot of rain from Hurricane Caroline has rolled off the hilly cotton fields and into Raymondville during the past three days and inundated 80 per cent of the city.

There's a lot of houses north of town that still have water in them. We still have about 50 families in the Red Cross center.

Authorities roped off the central part of town to keep pedestrians out and store owners were busy cleaning their buildings.

"It started raining Sunday at about noon and that's when the flood started," said patrolman Lupe Salinas. "It came down about five hours. We had some breaks in it. It rained some yesterday and it's starting to rain real hard out there now."

Mayor Ralph Cisneros said 11 inches had fallen, not counting water from the new showers late Tuesday. There were no injuries reported, but the water has not drained away from the flat Rio Grande Valley city. Cisneros declared a state of emergency.

He said about 5,100 families had been displaced by water ranging from one to four feet deep, primarily on the city's northwest side. They were being housed and fed in the old National Guard Armory and the Red Cross Center.

"The water is down about two inches from last night," the mayor said. "I would calculate about 80 per cent of the city is flooded."

Homes are still under water. We had to evacuate lots of people to higher ground. We've provided shelter for them; many are still there. Our drinking water is excellent, there's no danger there. We have some bad spots as far as the sewers but the pumps are working fine and they are taking care of the sewage."

Officer Salinas said the city of 7,000-8,000 persons is situated at the base of a long hill with cotton fields sloping up to the west. "Those fields start draining and it just flows into the city," he said. "Drainage ditches started overflowing. There just isn't anywhere for the water to go. It will probably take two or three days for us to dry out completely."

The Willacy County sheriff's office used trucks to rescue many families.

Caroline crashed ashore in northern Mexico during the weekend and spun northward, dumping heavy rain on the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

The NWS said the heaviest official rainfall during the weekend was recorded at Port Isabel which received 11.97 inches.

The forecast calls for mild temperatures with high in the upper 80s today dropping to the 60s tonight. There is a 20 per cent chance for rain.

Hurricane Dumps Rain On South Texas Towns

RAYMONDVILLE, Tex. (UPI) — School children splashed and frolicked in the pools of flood water. A motorboat putt-putted down Main Street.

"It looks like Venice. I swear," police dispatcher Mary Wilde said Tuesday. "We have a little less water — maybe an inch or two." Mrs. Wilde said. "We don't have any school. The kids are out in the street playing and we had a report of a motorboat going down Main Street.

A Watchful Newspaper

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Our Capsule Policy

The Pampa News is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing.

The News believes each and every person would get more satisfaction in the long run if he were permitted to spend what he earns on a volunteer basis rather than having part of it distributed involuntarily.

On defense spending

We live in a world of lowered expectations. That applies to all of us, particularly to those expecting to benefit from expenditures of tax money by the federal government.

No program or function of the government can declare itself exempt from the general belt-tightening. That applies with equal force to all segments of the federal budget, including the hefty percentage that goes to the Pentagon.

A recent 48-42 vote in the U.S. Senate to refuse to approve a weapons spending authorization measure was significant as a measure of the national mood.

As the bill came back from a lengthy House-Senate conference committee, it violated the budget guidelines adopted by the Congress for the first time this year. In a word, it was a budget-buster. And so it was rejected.

A number of conservatives serving on the newly formed Senate Budget Committee voted to uphold the guidelines and defeat the bill. Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, budget committee chairman, declared it was a test of the new congressional budget controls. And even Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, admitted after the defeat that there might be some good in it.

Obviously budget control is meaningless unless it is applied across the board, pet items notwithstanding, whether spending for domestic programs or defense is involved.

The challenge to the defense establishment is to do a better job without increasing costs. It can be done by dedication, by achieving greater efficiency, by practicing economy and streamlining procedures to eliminate waste and duplication.

Purchasing separate and distinct items of material for each service is an extravagance we can no longer afford when each service puts the materiel to the same use. Standardization may offend the parochial instincts of supply officers and purchasing agents. But it can save millions that can be better spent to increase military readiness.

Only the self-imposed discipline of fiscal restraint will keep the nation's armed forces in top fighting shape in a period of national retrenchment.

Gaps in the secrecy wall

Aghast at reports of wholesale federal snooping through Internal Revenue Service records during the ill-fated Nixon administration, Congress passed the Privacy Act of 1974 to strengthen the confidentiality of income tax returns.

The law provides that no federal agency "shall disclose any record... except pursuant to a written request... or with the prior written consent of the individual to whom the record pertains."

But the exceptions have resulted in what the author of a critical study, cited in U.S. News & World Report, calls "free-wheeling disclosure of tax returns."

University of California Prof. Meade Emory has testified before a House committee of the blanket authority of some agencies to peer into IRS files for information on federal job-seekers, welfare applicants, suspected subversives as well as tax cheaters.

The data revealed on tax return pages uncovers not only the individual's income, but his family relationships, his medical condition, his union membership and his creditors among other highly personal details.

Legislation is being written by the House Ways and Means Committee to require more documented justification for inspection of tax returns.

The measure should be expedited when Congress returns from its recess to bolster the confidence of the American taxpayer in the confidential treatment of the information he is compelled by law to disclose.

Smog Goes Country

The message that rings loud and clear in the Environmental Protection Agency's report that smog is increasing in rural areas is plain. Despite the fortune and effort poured into the battle to reduce smog over the last decade we just aren't doing well enough.

There is no solace for anyone in the report. Rural regions, which have been exempt from federal regulations intended to limit the output of air pollutants, now may find themselves under federal laws. The EPA found that cars were major pollutants in farm areas. By the same token, the 27 urban areas in the United States which are under federal regulations have to do more, much more. And most of the regions already are complaining that anti-air pollution efforts are too stringent.

Finally, it is very clear that the automobile manufacturers are going to have to intensify their efforts to make engines better—and sooner.

The suggestion is strong in the EPA report that the standards for emissions from auto exhausts are central to the whole matter, and that they cannot be delayed for five years as the administration proposed recently.

Sentiments are for the most part traditional; we feel them because they were felt by those who preceded us.

WATCH ON WASHINGTON Case of Political Rhetoric

By CLARK MOLLENHOFF WASHINGTON, D.C. — It is unfortunate that Senator Edward M. Kennedy's lack of follow-through on an investigation of the firing of two Indian Health Service nurses have been so ineffective that the two nurses now question their own judgment in agreeing to testify before his Senate judiciary subcommittee.

The nurses — Valerie Koster of Davenport, Ia., and Sandra Kramer of Annapolis, Md. — agreed in May to testify before Senator Kennedy's Subcommittee on Administrative Practices on how they were fired after complaining to Congress about substandard health services that Navajo Indians were receiving at the Indian Health Service hospital at Shiprock, N. Mex.

They were told that Senator Kennedy wished to investigate and expose the problems that honest government employees face in bringing wrongdoing to light when it reflects unfavorably upon their superiors.

Nurses Koster and Kramer heard Senator Kennedy declare that new laws must be passed to provide new and needed protection for federal employees who provide lawfully disclosable information to the Congress, the press, or the public.

"Each week the press carries new evidence and charges concerning the failure of government officials and agencies to obey the law," Senator Kennedy said.

The Massachusetts Democrat declared that the activities at the CIA labeled as "plainly unlawful" by the Rockefeller Commission could not have taken place if there had been proper legislative oversight, with testimony from truthful federal employees.

"It was only in the hearings of the Senate Watergate Committee and the House Judiciary Committee that numerous other abuses came to light: illegal intelligence-gathering and wiretapping, break-ins, politically motivated decisions on milk price supports and antitrust cases, and political hiring program which circumvented the civil service laws," Senator Kennedy said.

And Kennedy added, "We should ask ourselves why none of the thousands of honest, loyal, and sensitive federal employees who knew or suspected misconduct did not stand up and say, 'Stop! This is wrong.' And why none of them at the time were willing to tell Congress and the American people what was happening."

Nurses Koster and Kramer were eager to testify on the details of the lack of due process in firing them, the refusal to give them the bill of particulars on the charges against them after they had tried to get the hospital director, Dr. Lu Vern Husen, and the area director,

Dr. Marlene Haffner, to take some action to improve conditions.

They expected that they would be protected if they were accurate and well documented in their testimony on conditions in the hospital, and on the illegal manner in which their case had been handled by the Indian Health Service.

The least they expected was that the committee would call some individuals from the Public Health Service to get an explanation of the circumstances in which honest employees could be demoted and fired for stating the facts that displeased their superiors.

The nurses were even hopeful then that the interest of Kennedy's committee might result in the Indian Health Service acknowledging publicly that they had been right, admitting that Dr. Haffner and Dr. Husen were wrong, and restoring them to duty at Shiprock. Also, they had hoped that the focus of attention would have forced the Indian Health Service to give them at least a part of the pay for the time they had been off the payroll to fight the wrongful discharge.

The Indian Service director, Dr. Emory Johnson, told this reporter and the staff of the Kennedy committee that the Indian Health Service had been wrong in the manner in which it handled the complaints of the nurses. He also said the Dr. Haffner had been "the victim of bad advice" in refusing to reveal to the nurses the charges against them and in indicating that public criticism of superiors was grounds for firing or other disciplinary action.

Although Dr. Johnson and his deputy director, H.V. Chadwick, said they would put those views in a letter to the Kennedy committee and to Representative Edward Mezvinsky (Dem., Ia.), who had been critical of the handling of the case, they then engaged in typical bureaucratic stalling.

Despite the fact that Dr. Husen and Dr. Haffner had been "wrong" in their actions, they were not to be subjected to any criticism or disciplinary action, but were to be permitted to correct the case.

Dr. Haffner's correction was a reluctant rehiring of the nurses, but with transfer from the Shiprock facility because of the problems the case had caused. Dr. Haffner would admit no wrong on her part, and clearly considered herself victorious over Nurses Kramer and Koster.

The Kennedy subcommittee, after a few feeble protests that transfer of the women would be an adversary action, acquiesced to the firing of the nurses because they were protesting the transfer and did not report to their new duty stations by Aug. 8.

Senator Kennedy and his staff rejected the nurses suggestion to call Dr. Johnson, Dr. Haffner or Dr. Husen and have them justify this final firing of the nurses.

Abandoning hope of Senator Kennedy's committee doing more than political rhetoric about their plight, Nurses Kramer and Koster are back in the quagmire of regular civil service procedures with an appeal of their discharge.

About MACO Here's 'Must Reading' Report for Educators

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN The involvement of the federal government in curriculum development for public school is causing increasing concern.

A specific current concern has to do with "Man: A Course of Study" (MACOS), which ostensibly teaches fifth grade teachers about salmon, herring, gulls, baboons and the Netsilik Eskimos. The National Science Foundation has spent $6.5 million on this program. But the program has received justifiable criticism in and out of Congress.

U.S. Rep. John B. Conlan (R-Ariz.) recently charged that adultery, brutality and the invasion of privacy are condoned or advocated in MACOS.

The most comprehensive analysis of the content and underlying educational philosophy of MACOS is reported by Susan Marshner published by the Heritage Foundation (513 C. St., NE, Washington, D.C.).

Miss Marshner's report, entitled "Man: A Course of Study — Prototype For Federalized Textbooks?" notes that the 60 lessons of MACOS spread themselves over one school year. She adds that the course has the goal of teaching "the universal bond between all men." In the process, she says, "it beats a track through clearly undesirable and objectional territory, sustained in that activity by substantial federal funding."

The MACOS program involves what is known as discovery education. That is, children are encouraged to discover ideas for themselves rather than accept moral values from their teachers. Indeed the teacher is not supposed to interpose his values in the classroom.

What this means in practice is that a teacher, for example, may not speak out against cheating if cheating is taking place as a result of an individual "discovery" process. However, the program involves a built-in conflict, for it suggests that teachers engineer discovery.

Miss Marshner points out that children in the MACOS program are led to believe that values are arrived at simply on the basis of cultural and environmental factors.

Miss Marshner writes: "The writers of MACOS are telling teachers and students alike that an open-ended discussion, one which does not teach values one way or the other, consists of making children realize that there are no moral absolutes." In other words, MACOS assumes the truth of situation ethics and relativism.

In Miss Marshner's judgement, the view of culture enunciated in "Man A Course of Study" is fundamentally deterministic, behavioristic and relativistic. Thus MACOS is outside the moral mainstream of the Judeo-Christian heritage.

Miss Marshner asserts that the goal of the principle author of the MACOS program "is to have children step outside of their own cultures to question values they may have already learned."

Certainly, the majority of parents do not want the schools to neutralize the influence of the home and of family and church values. The vast majority of Americans believe in moral absolutes, such as honesty, loyalty and individual responsibility. They do not want their children to be taught that all cultures are created equal. Some cultures are sick and evil, such as those of Nazi Germany or Soviet Russia.

Children should be reared with an awareness of moral truth and of the ultimate source of truth. Children need to be led, as the Bible teaches, in the paths of righteousness, not persuaded that every value is subject to criticism. And schools should not utilize a curriculum which leads to an invasion of the privacy of children and their parents.

Miss Marshner concludes: "The best that could be said for the open-ended discussions" in MACOS "is that they lead to value obfuscation. The worst is that they push children toward very particular and divergent political, moral and philosophical ideas which have been subtly imbedded in the course."

This superb Heritage Foundation study by Miss Marshner should be "must" reading for school boards, principals, teachers, PTA officials, and all who are concerned with the future of American education.

Dear Abby Old-Timer Wants To Go Dancing Without Wife

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am 62 and the wife is 59. I like old-time dancing, polkas, schottisches and square dancing. My wife never did care much for dancing so she quit going with me about 15 years ago. She is not handicapped in any way and could dance if she wanted to.

My problem: I would like to go stag to a public dance once a week. It's great fun and good exercise. My wife is very much opposed to my going to a dance without her—yet she refuses to go. Is that fair?

To me, going to a dance once a week is no more wrong than playing poker or bowling. Old-time dancing is not the romantic kind where partners hang on each other in close embrace. I maintain that it's healthier to dance than sit around playing cards.

I do not intend to get involved with other women. Am I being unreasonable?

C. IN MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR C.: No! I'm convinced. Now all you have to do is convince your wife.

DEAR ABBY: I agree—one is as old as he feels. But at 69, not many people are feeling me lately. What an age in life to be called a "sexagenarian"!!!

DON IN PASADENA

DEAR ABBY: I'm another college graduate who would feel like an idiot asking this question of anyone else, so I'm asking you.

When a person has his eyes examined and is told that he has 20/20 vision, what do the numbers signify?

ANOTHER DUMMY

DEAR ANOTHER: You're no dummy. Very few people who are not in the profession of prescribing eye glasses know the answer. (I didn't, so I asked.)

20/20 vision means that what you see at a distance of 20 feet, a person with normal vision sees at 20 feet.

20/40 vision means that what you can see at 20 feet, a person with normal vision sees at 40 feet.

This method of expressing visual perception does not relate to the eye's need for eyeglasses. The degree of sharpness WITHOUT eyeglasses describes the ability of the unaided eye; while the degree WITH CORRECTION (wearing glasses) states the best vision obtainable.

An eye without corrective glasses could be 20/100, but with glasses, 20/20. However, even with the best corrective glasses another eye may be capable of seeing only 20/60. Is that clear?

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (20c) envelope.

Dallas Man Challenges Constitution in Court

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff
A speeding ticket issued four miles south of Pampa has prompted a Dallas man to challenge the constitutionality of the Gray County courts in accepting "anything but gold and silver coin as tender in payment of debts."

H.C. Willis, 45, was granted a jury trial Tuesday in county court, but Judge Don Cain overruled his motion for a non attorney counsel. The trial is set for the week of Nov. 10. "Basically, I think Mr. Willis is saying that no officer or police can make an arrest because he is paid in paper money," said John W. Warner, county attorney.

A Texas Highway Patrolman issued the ticket Feb. 27 stating that Willis was driving 72 miles per hour. Willis pleaded innocent and Justice of Peace E.L. Anderson assessed a $22.50 fine. Willis called for a jury trial in Justice Court and the jury assessed a $50 fine. Willis posted a $100 surety bond and appealed to county court.

He plans to go higher if he doesn't win Nov. 10. Warner said Willis was late posting his bond and asked for his appeal motion to be dismissed. However, Willis told Pampa News that he immediately began an appeal procedure after the justice of peace court jury assessment and "no one in the county courthouse knew the procedure."

He added that he obtained permission and put up a $100 surety bond. He claims the 55 mile per hour speed limit is unconstitutional because it is forced upon the states by the federal government. "The reason is a hoax — an energy crisis — which doesn't exist," he alleges.

"We are in a dilemma. We have to continue allowing the government to violate the law or get into court and force compliance," he said, vowing to appeal every speeding ticket he should ever be cited for. "But I don't intend to go out and try to get any (tickets)," he said. Willis cited Rhodes v. Bronson in which the Supreme Court defined "lawful money" of the United States as: "Only gold and silver coin or that which by law is made equivalent, so as to be exchangeable therefore at par and on demand, and does not include a currency note which, though exchangeable for coin is not redeemable on demand."

"Texas is a free and independent state, subject only to the Constitution of the United States." Article 43.02 of the Texas Code of Criminal Procedure the crux of Willis' motion says: "All recognizances, bail bonds and undertakings of any kind whereby a party becomes bound to pay money to the State, and all fines and forfeitures of pecuniary character, shall be collected in the lawful money of the United States only."

Willis cited Rhodes v. Bronson in which the Supreme Court defined "lawful money" of the United States as: "Only gold and silver coin or that which by law is made equivalent, so as to be exchangeable therefore at par and on demand, and does not include a currency note which, though exchangeable for coin is not redeemable on demand."

In event the case was not dismissed Tuesday, Willis asked the county court for a jury and a council of choice — not an attorney. "It would be a denial of due process to force the defendant to speak through one not of his own choosing, especially if that spokesman was a disciplined agent of his adversary as are licensed attorneys... agents of the state."

"As such they would not be able to exercise the proper interest in defendants cause nor be qualified to speak on his behalf."

Judge Don Cain granted a trial by jury, but denied the request for a non attorney counsel. However, Willis plans to seek permission of having counsel of his own choosing through the federal courts. Warner said that if Willis should be convicted "we will, of course, accept it (the fine) in silver dollars. That will be fine."

"...somewhere along the line a man has to take a stand for what he knows is right." H.C. Willis, chairman of Citizens for Constitutional Compliance in Dallas.

Judge Cain said the motion for council of choice is overruled. "But you may represent yourself," the judge added. Willis plans to go into the federal courts with his request for a council of choice. Asked if he were asking for government aid in fighting the case, Willis said: "I wouldn't accept it. I could have paid the $22.50 fine and it would have been all over, but somewhere along the line a man has to take a stand for what he knows is right."

He added that he recognizes a need for a certain amount of government — "but no need for most of which we have today."

One Hostage Killed In Rift at Poker Game

SOUTH LAKE TAHOE, Calif. (UPI) — Two brothers became enraged during a poker game and took three persons hostage, barricading themselves in an apartment and setting off a siege in which one hostage was killed and a police officer was wounded. Wayne Locklear surrendered early today and was released with the final two hostages by his brother James who stayed in the apartment in this resort community. Police said he had three pistols. "Quit stalling," one of the hostages yelled from a window at the small army of police who waited outside during the long siege that started Tuesday afternoon.

"Give them what they want," he pleaded. "How many people do you want dead?" The hostages and Wayne Locklear, about 20, of South Lake Tahoe, crawled out a window of the second floor apartment onto a balcony after their release. They went into the apartment next door and where whisked away by police car. The hostages, apparently unharmed, were tentatively identified as Albie Crane and Craig Smith. Killed in the exchange of gunfire as he tried to get out of the apartment was George Steadler, of Hayward, Calif. Police officer Paul Habelt, 31, was shot four times when he went to the apartment to answer a call that a kidnaping was in progress. He was listed in stable condition. Police Chief John Crow said James Locklear, about 24, had asked officers "to give him until dawn to think." He said he would honor the request. "He's been snorting coke (cocaine) most of the day, we think," one officer said of James, who was believed armed with two .45-caliber pistols and one .38. "He's writing his will up there."

The younger Locklear was willing to give himself up earlier, police said, but his brother held out for a deal in which Wayne would not be prosecuted because he had little to do with the incident, one deputy said. MADRID, Spain (UPI) — The sentencing of two Basque separatists to death has focused worldwide attention on the drive for the independence of the Spanish region. Antonio Garmendia, a 23-year-old student, and Angel Otaegui, a 33-year-old mechanic, were sentenced to death by garrote — a medieval strangling device — at a court martial Friday. The military tribunal convicted Garmendia and Otaegui of shooting a police officer to death 16 months ago in the Basque village of Azpetia. The two condemned men have appealed the sentence to the Supreme Council of Military Justice, the Spanish army's highest judicial body. The sentence has sparked strikes and street demonstrations in the Basque region in northern Spain along the Atlantic coast and the Pyrenees mountains. The governments of Italy, Holland, Sweden and Portugal appealed to Spanish authorities to spare the lives of the two separatists for humanitarian reasons. Leftists protested in European capitals. The Basque region, where more than 20 persons died in political violence this year, is the center of anti-government and secessionist activity. The Basques charge their language and traditions have been suppressed, along with their right to self-administration.

Army Leader Defies Portuguese President

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — The head of Portugal's army has defied President Francisco de Costa Gomes and called for the ouster of Communist-backed Gen. Vasco Goncalves as armed forces commander. Gen. Carlos Fabiao, a leading moderate in the armed forces, said the appointment of Goncalves as Portugal's top military commander was a threat to army unity. "I speak in the name of the army," Fabiao said Tuesday. "The army has no doubts that the figure of Gen. Vasco Goncalves will contribute nothing to the unity of the army, but rather the contrary." Fabiao's call came a day after

Gen. Jose Morais da Silva, the air force commander, said the controversial general "should not have been named armed forces chief of staff." President Francisco de Costa Gomes criticized Morais da Silva Tuesday for creating "difficulties" but the reprimand appeared to have little impact in halting the growing military opposition to Goncalves. Fabiao joined a group of leading moderate and radical officers Tuesday at Tancos army base, 85 miles north of Lisbon, for talks on the fate of Goncalves. Military sources said officers at the talks, including Gen. Otelo Saraiva de Carvalho, the radical military security chief, were nearly unanimous in their opposition to Goncalves. Other officers attending were Brig. Pizarat Correia, the moderate southern commander; Brig. Franco Charais, the moderate central commander, and Brig. Eurico Corvacho, the radical northern commander. Political informants said the critical moment in the dispute over Goncalves would likely come after a meeting Friday of the 240-man assembly of the ruling Armed Forces Movement.

Death Sentences Focus on Spain

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — The sentencing of two Basque separatists to death has focused worldwide attention on the drive for the independence of the Spanish region. Antonio Garmendia, a 23-year-old student, and Angel Otaegui, a 33-year-old mechanic, were sentenced to death by garrote — a medieval strangling device — at a court martial Friday. The military tribunal convicted Garmendia and Otaegui of shooting a police officer to death 16 months ago in the Basque village of Azpetia. The two condemned men have appealed the sentence to the Supreme Council of Military Justice, the Spanish army's highest judicial body. The sentence has sparked strikes and street demonstrations in the Basque region in northern Spain along the Atlantic coast and the Pyrenees mountains. The governments of Italy, Holland, Sweden and Portugal appealed to Spanish authorities to spare the lives of the two separatists for humanitarian reasons. Leftists protested in European capitals. The Basque region, where more than 20 persons died in political violence this year, is the center of anti-government and secessionist activity. The Basques charge their language and traditions have been suppressed, along with their right to self-administration.

Otaegui is a confessed member of the outlawed separatist organization "Basque Homeland and Liberty," a militant guerrilla group that has waged a systematic bomb and bullet campaign for economic independence from Madrid. Its victims include Premier Luis Carrero Blanco, who was killed 18 months ago when a bomb set by Basque commandos exploded as his limousine passed along a Madrid street. The car was blown over a five-story building. Basque violence has figured in the government's new, controversial anti-terrorism law, which gives police and the courts additional powers to fight political groups that advocate or employ violence. It also limits civil rights and tightens curbs on the press and lawyers who defend antigovernment militants.

Pythians Meet, Install W.S. Howell

Pampa Lodge No. 480 Knights of Pythias met Tuesday evening with Don Thompson, chancellor commander, presiding. Wilson S. Howell, 1512 Coffee, was installed as prelate of the Lodge. Gary Clark, P.D.D.G.C., was installing officer, assisted by W.B. Neel and Ray Barnard. Several members of Pampa Lodge will visit Amarillo Lodge No. 479 Thursday evening to assist in conferring the rank of Knight on a new member for Amarillo Lodge. Members are requested to meet at the Lodge hall at 6:45 p.m. Thursday to go to Amarillo. In other activities, the 39th annual Knights of Pythias homecoming was held at the Pythian Children Home in Weatherford last Sunday with some 450 Knights, Pythian Sisters, ex-students, their families and friends present for the all day affair. Registration opened at 9 a.m. The program began at 10 a.m. by Mary Frances Talley, of Lilly Temple No. 3, Denison. A catered dinner was served to all present, with meetings, visitations, and tours of the home closing out the day. Attending from Pampa were Mrs. Bernice F. Keen, P.G.C. and Mr. and Mrs. B.B. Altman Jr.

Cock Kidnaped

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — Kidnapers seized a champion fighting cock Tuesday and demanded a ransom of about $1,200. Aristides dos Santos Ferreira, owner of the bird known as Steel Chest, said the cock was worth more than $3,500. The bird is champion of greater Rio. The kidnaping recalled the 1962 assassination of a champion fighting cock known as "Fidel Castro." The murderer was never caught.

Kissinger Seeks Syrian Okay

Time Out

It appears that this horse has just about had it, at least for the day. He is resting during a lunch break of two riding clubs in Aurora, Ill., that took about part in a Riding for Research program. They were raising funds for Morris Animal Foundation in Denver where research is done on the health of horses.

DAMASCUS, Syria (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger briefed skeptical Syrian leaders today on the details of the new Egyptian-Israeli peace pact and then flew home to Washington to report to President Ford, ending 15 hectic but successful days of shuttle diplomacy in the Middle East.

Kissinger's blue and white Air Force jet left Damascus at 4:30 p.m. for a refueling stop in London en route to Washington, later than he had planned.

In a brief departure statement Kissinger said that he reviewed with President Hafez Assad "developments in the Middle East as I understand them and did so in a very frank and cordial manner."

Kissinger spent three hours and 10 minutes in the Syrian capital after his arrival from Jordan. He met Assad at the presidential palace for 75 minutes.

A U.S. official in Damascus said Kissinger apparently failed to win Assad's unconditional approval of the Egyptian-Israeli accord.

The official said "the atmosphere during the talks was restrained."

During the Damascus stopver, Kissinger's wife Nancy remained at the airport chatting to reporters accompanying the secretary on his travels who also did not drive into the capital.

Telephones from the airport area to the city were also cut.

Earlier, the secretary held talks with Jordan's King Hussein in Amman after he received an enthusiastic reception in Saudi Arabia.

A U.S. spokesman said Hussein told Kissinger he was "pleased" with the interim agreement — an endorsement that publicly, at least, fell short of the enthusiastic welcome given it by Saudi Arabia Tuesday.

The spokesman said Hussein also "expressed his concern" over U.S. congressional opposition to the pending sale of Hawk missiles to Jordan.

Kissinger replied by telling Hussein that he was hopeful opposition to the deal could be overcome when Congress returns.

Kissinger was spending about three hours with Assad and top Syrian officials at the Presidential Palace to seek final assurances that Syria would support the agreement — or at least not do anything to try to wreck it.

He then will wrap-up his 15 days of hectic diplomacy in the Middle East before returning to Washington to report to President Ford.

The U.S. spokesman said the possibility of an Israeli-Syrian agreement was mentioned "only in passing" in Kissinger's talks with Hussein.

Another senior official aboard Kissinger's aircraft told reporters that every Middle Eastern leader he had met asked about the Hawks and indicated their concern that congressional opposition to the deal coming on top of the U.S. arms cut-off to Turkey was undermining America's reputation as a reliable ally.

Before leaving Amman, Kissinger admitted to reporters that "a few problems" existed between America and Jordan.

"I explained the significance of the recently concluded agreement which is a further progress towards peace in the Middle East and the U.S. views on the matter," Kissinger said.

Rifal, addressing reporters briefly, said the discussions covered "outstanding issues between our two countries."

"We will be able to overcome our difficulties," he said.

Kissinger said that he was "hopeful" that Congress would give a favorable decision on the Hawk missile issue.

Diplomats said the secretary of state wants to set the stage in Damascus for an Israeli-Syrian peace agreement to follow up the Egyptian-Israeli accord.

Israel and Syria have already given Kissinger permission to sound each other out about the possibility of starting talks toward an interim peace settlement.

Diplomats said Kissinger would also try to talk Syria out of trying to wreck the Israeli-Egyptian agreement, condemned by militants as "a breach of Arab unity."

Saudi Arabia, America's major Arab oil supplier, endorsed the new peace agreement Tuesday during talks between Kissinger and King Khalid at the mountain resort of Taif.

Under the pact, Israel agreed to give up the Abu Rudeis oil fields as well as the Gidi and Mitla mountain passes in the Sinai Desert.

Egypt agreed to let Israeli cargo through the Suez Canal and ease other economic sanctions against the Jewish state.

The key provision of the accord called for sending up to 200 American volunteers to the Sinai Desert to operate electronic surveillance stations between the opposing armies.

Florida Gets First Black Court Justice

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Joseph Hatchett is the South's first black state supreme court justice since Reconstruction.

But Gov. Reubin Askew, who appointed him, predicted Hatchett could handle any pressures caused by his color.

Askew joined 300 spectators Tuesday to watch Hatchett, the son of a fruit picker, take the oath of office as a Florida supreme court judge.

The governor said Hatchett "could face a challenge in a statewide election, a lot of that depends on how he handles himself between now and the next election."

Other blacks appointed to court positions in Florida "have had little difficulty winning elections," said Askew.

Hatchett could face a chal-

Florida Gets First Black Court Justice

enge when he runs for statewide election next fall.

"I'd say he's already handled the pressures of being a black legal official pretty well," Askew said. "It was no easy task for him to be a black federal prosecutor and he's already adapted to those pressures."

Hatchett will run for a six-year term next fall. He brushed off questions about his campaign and said his immediate tasks are reviewing cases before the high court and moving his family from Jacksonville to Tallahassee. Hatchett's wife is a Jacksonville school teacher.

Hatchett, 42, refused to label his legal views. He said describing himself as "liberal, conservative or strict constructionist" would be unfair. He said he will try to closely follow the letter of the law.

Hatchett was a U.S. magistrate in Jacksonville before his appointment to the high court by Askew. Hatchett, born in Clearwater, graduated from Florida A&M and Howard University law school in Washington, D.C.

He served as a private attorney in Daytona Beach, Fla., before becoming an assistant U.S. attorney in Jacksonville.

Hatchett foresaw no problems on the high court because of his race. He said he had received hundreds of congratulatory letters since Askew appointed him to the court in July.

"I received only one bad letter, from a person up in Wisconsin or someplace like that," said Hatchett. "But that was sick, not a hate letter."

US Intertwined in Economy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the 18 months since the surge in oil prices and the start of recession, there has been growing sentiment among some Americans to withdraw from the world until economic stability returns.

But the United States is now more intertwined with other nations than at any time in its history. That became clear this week at the 30th annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund, the financial and trade organization of 127 non-Communist nations.

President Ford told the visiting finance ministers that the only foreign aid from the United States would be a moderation of inflation and more jobs for Americans.

"A strong economy is the best contribution this nation can make to another nation," Ford said in a seven-minute speech Tuesday.

Ford said a stronger economy in America will create consumer demand that will spread to other nations and help solve their production and unemployment problems.

But the President said other countries also must do what they can to help themselves. "Economic independence is imperative," Ford said. "No country can expect the actions of others to solve its economic problems. We must consult together. We must pull together."

In a landslide of speeches before and after Ford, a spectrum of finance ministers said the economic power of the United States had permeated every corner of the globe. The ministers said more U.S. consumer stimulus was needed to assure that prosperity would spread beyond American borders.

The health of other nations depends on the United States' returning to its position of exporting capital and importing goods, the ministers said.

This was U.S. policy from the end of World War II when most other nations were in economic deprivation, until 1971 when the policy of negative payments balances brought the first of two dollar devaluations and rampant inflation.

In the world of the 1970s, the United States cannot isolate itself in hopes of preserving a high standard of living, the IMF delegates said time and again. Other countries also have tasted prosperity, and their representatives say they want more of it.

Travis Rowland Now Probation Officer Here

Travis Rowland of Athens assumed duties this week as Gray County probation officer with offices on the third floor of the Gray County Courthouse.

Rowland, his wife, Judy, and son, Bradley, moved to Pampa recently.

He had worked 14 months in probation work in Henderson County where he served as a police officer and a deputy sheriff.

He attended Paris Junior College and was graduated from East Texas State University in Commerce. He has five years teaching experience.

The Gray County Sheriff's Office has been handling probation work until Rowland was appointed to the position.

Foster Son Called Key to Mystery

DETROIT (UPI) — Charles "Chuckie" O'Brien, self-described foster son of former Teamsters boss James R. Hoffa, appeared today before a federal grand jury trying to determine how and why Hoffa disappeared.

Federal investigators say O'Brien, who has twice undergone questioning by FBI agents since Hoffa's disappearance July 30, is a key figure in the mystery.

O'Brien, 41, and his attorney James Burdick refused comment to a crowd of newsmen waiting outside the downtown federal building.

Robert Ozer, head of the federal Organized Crime Strike Force, arrived 15 minutes before O'Brien.

He refused comment on the proceedings of the grand jury, which began its hearings Tuesday and heard the testimony of the brother and the son of reputed Mafia enforcer Anthony "Tony Jack" Giacalone. Federal officials say 70 witnesses are scheduled to appear.

"Grand juries do not solve murders or kidnappings," he said. "They get the evidence."

O'Brien, a Teamsters union organizer, has admitted he was driving a car borrowed from the son of a reputed Mafia chieftain in the same area on the same day when Hoffa vanished. O'Brien called his presence a coincidence.

The grand jury, which federal officials say is seeking information instead of indictments, began its hearings Tuesday and heard the testimony of the brother and the son of reputed Mafia enforcer Anthony "Tony Jack" Giacalone.

The two were the first of 70 witnesses scheduled to appear before the grand jury.

Some federal authorities call the grand jury a final attempt to unravel the disappearance of Hoffa.

The leadoff witness was Joseph Giacalone, 22, son of Anthony Giacalone. It was his car that O'Brien said he was driving the day Hoffa disappeared.

Hoffa vanished without a trace from a suburban Detroit restaurant parking lot after telling his family he was meeting Anthony Giacalone for lunch. Giacalone has denied he planned to meet Hoffa that day.

The younger Giacalone spent about 33 minutes in the grand jury room and emerged 21 times to confer with his lawyer.

He was followed by Vito Giacalone, a brother of Anthony and also described as a Mafia figure. He spent eight minutes in the grand jury room and also refused comment.

Joseph Giacalone figured in another development in the case Tuesday.

Police Report Arrests

Pampa Police Chief Richard Mills today issued a report on August activity for the police department which included 1,222 calls.

Police issues 412 traffic tickets, 67 warning tickets and made 155 jail arrests.

Eighty-seven accidents were investigated.

The officers drove 21,261 miles in radio patrol.

Chief Mills said the work in August was done with 3 1/4 men short due to vacations, holidays and sick leave.

The department received a replacement car for the one damaged a few days ago in an accident within the city.

Fanne Foxe Claims Abortion

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fanne Foxe, the Tidal Basin Bombshell, said in her autobiography released today that she became pregnant by Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., but had an abortion.

In her book "Fanne Foxe," co-authored with Yvonne Dunleavy who also helped write "The Happy Hooker," the ex-tripper reports that her relationship with Mills, former head of the House Ways and Means Committee, was far from platonic.

Calls Texas Laughing Stock

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Leon Jaworski, former Watergate special prosecutor, today said Texas is a laughing stock because of some provisions of its 100-year-old state constitution and urged voters to approve a new charter Nov. 4.

"We will make a terrible mistake if we pass up this opportunity of adopting a more modern constitution than the one under which we are presently operating," Jaworski told a Capitol news conference.

The Houston attorney said although he helped draft some provisions of the new charter it is not exactly what he would like, but is better than the present constitution.

"In a sense we should be ashamed of having so archaic an instrument," he said. "Some of its provisions are just nonsense."

"In some respects we are making ourselves a laughing stock in the rest of our country by not having a more modern instrument."

Jaworski said he does not understand the opposition of some business groups to the proposed new charter, but urged voters not to be guided by special interests.

"I think some fear the idea of annual sessions on the basis that the fewer sessions you have the fewer laws you're going to have. I think we ought to try it."

Jaworski said he thinks voters should be interested in approving progressive changes in operations of the three branches of state government.

One benefit, he said, would be quicker handling of criminal cases under the proposed new judicial system.

"Despite the fact the judicial article is not what I wanted I believe that criminal cases will move faster through our courts if this is adopted."

Jaworski met with reporters before the Senate opened its impeachment trial of South Texas District Judge O.P. Carrillo.

The former Watergate prosecutor is serving without pay as legal counsel to senators for the proceedings.

Jaworski endorsed the decision of the Senate Administration Committee Tuesday to require Carrillo be found guilty beyond a reasonable doubt to be convicted.

"I think it would be a mistake to use what might be considered a lesser burden should an appeal ensue," Jaworski said.

Passenger Shot, Dies Aboard Soviet Airliner

LONDON (UPI) — One of 103 passengers aboard a Soviet Aeroflot airliner en route from New York to Moscow was mysteriously shot to death today, touching off a diplomatic controversy over which country had jurisdiction in the case.

The dead man was tentatively identified by police as an off-duty Aeroflot crewman. The Soviet Embassy in London described his death as an accident and refused to let the body be removed from the Ilyushin 62 aircraft.

British Foreign Office officials met with representatives of the Soviet Embassy to determine who has jurisdiction in the case. The Soviets claimed they did since the incident occurred in international airspace.

The captain of flight SU312 radioed a half hour before the scheduled London stopover to report the shooting, raising the possibility it might have occurred in British airspace.

"A decision has to be reached as to whose responsibility the problem is," a police spokesman at Heathrow airport said. "Passengers and crew will be held until a decision is made."

The other passengers were herded off the aircraft and questioned by police in a lounge inaccessible to reporters. Some

Washington Watch USDA, EPA Dispute Over Pesticides

Pampa News' Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — For the past 39 years, Rep. W.R. Poage of Waco has represented a classic Texas agricultural constituency from the heart of Texas.

So it is not unusual that Poage, a leading member of the House Agricultural Committee has frequently gone to bat for the farmers on Texas and other states over the protests of environmentalists.

This time, the Waco Democrat is leading a move to give the Secretary of Agriculture veto power over decisions made by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) in areas of pesticide control — a source of heated controversy between farming interests and conservationists over the years.

The Poage proposal has already triggered strong opposing views from the heads of the two departments. Not surprisingly, Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz likes the idea while EPA Administrator Russell Train doesn't.

Train and other environmentalists feel that including the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) in the regular process is unwarranted and places USDA in a position approaching conflict of interest.

Poage's position is that the interests of the farmer have been neglected in past EPA rulings that have banned the well-known pesticide DDT and others.

"The Department of Agriculture should be consulted," Poage said. "The reviews on pesticide should be carried out in cooperation with the Secretary of Agriculture."

Poage, vice chairman of the Agriculture Committee, has introduced an amendment to a bill authorizing funding for the EPA. The committee is scheduled to resume hearings on the proposed legislation in early September after the current congressional recess.

Two prior rulings on pesticides triggered Poage's Man Threatens Death Leap

NEW YORK (UPI) — Shortly before 4:30 p.m. Monday, James Speller, 33, brushed aside a guard at the World Trade Center and made a dash to the roof. He threatened to jump a quarter mile to his death.

Speller's two brothers, Al and Thomas; his sister, Frances Speller, and sister-in-law, Catherine Speller, joined police on the roof to talk him out of the 1,350-foot plunge. He wouldn't budge.

Emergency units waited 110 floors below.

Then police spotted a star of David on a chain hanging from Speller's neck, and asked Rabbi Israel Gombo for help.

"The Rabbi explained to him that it's not right for him to take his own life," police said.

Speller finally agreed and surrendered, three hours later. Officers grabbed him as he came away from the edge "to make sure he didn't change his mind."

Ford's Theatre, the building where President Abraham Lincoln was shot, has staged 43 productions since reopening in 1938 after extensive restoration.

Bus Gets Heldup Stagecoach-Style

DETROIT (UPI) — One man handed over $1,500 in cash and an $8,000 coin collection, and a Chicago woman surrendered $80 and a watch she wore around her neck on a tiny chain.

The two — and 36 other passengers — were robbed by two bandits in a 1975 version of a stagecoach holdup.

Only this was on a Greyhound bus traveling from Chicago to Toronto Sunday night.

"Sure, I was scared," Mrs. Willie Burke of Chicago said. "I even yanked the watch off my neck myself because I couldn't undo the clasp."

Donald Paul, 27, of Detroit lost the $1,500 and the coin collection.

An off-duty Detroit policeman on the bus was robbed of $600 in cash, his badge and his service revolver. Police said he did not challenge the bandits because of the risk to other passengers.

Altogether, police said, the holdup netted the bandits possibly $20,000 in cash and $15,000 in rings, watches and other valuables.

A Greyhound spokesman said it was only the "third or fourth" robbery of a bus in recent company history. He said he also believed it netted bandits proposal. One was the EPA regulation on mirex, used to combat fire ants. The other involved the partial ban on poison sodium cyanide, principally utilized to control coyotes and other predators of sheep.

In both cases, the prevailing views within EPA and agriculture circles differed sharply.

Farmers maintain that current EPA regulations prohibit the use of effective dosages of mirex on the fire ant, which has spread throughout East Texas and now into areas of West Texas.

The ant, of South America origin, is known to build dirt mounds of four feet high creating havoc in the environment. In moving about 20 miles per year, it has uprooted farmers' fields.

"I am not an entomologist and frankly, the fire ants haven't yet reached my community," Poage said in a letter to the EPA. "But I have had enough experience with ordinary red ants to know that I can kill every ant in the bed at a given date. However, if I am not allowed to follow up within a matter of a few weeks the eggs in the bed will have hatched and I will have another swarm of ants."

Although Butz and the USDA have not yet formally endorsed Poage's proposal per se, USDA spokesmen strongly approve of more inter-agency cooperation.

"We would certainly welcome that," said Jerry Climer, a USDA official. "Our desire would be to work very closely with them."

However, environmentalists are skeptical. Before the EPA was authorized to regulate pesticides in 1970, the USDA, which then shouldered the responsibility, did not issue any pesticide prohibitions. Since then, the EPA has banned three pesticides and are scrutinizing several others.

Further, the EPA has registered "more than 10,000" different pesticides for use, an EPA spokesman said.

"We are very much opposed to Poage's plan," said one spokesman. "In a nutshell because Agriculture has one of its principle missions to promote agriculture and to increase agricultural production and make available to farmers products that will increase agricultural production. It is just basically a conflict of interest, then, to give agricultural production and expect it to be a watchdog."

One other area of major difference is sheep protection. The farmers would like to use poison sodium cyanide to kill coyotes, reportedly the number one predator of sheep.

The EPA has allowed only limited use of what is known as M-44 devices — sodium cyanide traps. Additionally, President Ford in mid-July issued an administrative order allowing use of sodium cyanide pellets on sheep collars, which discharge the poison upon attack.

The Presidential offer also drew protests from environmentalists who fear the poison may harm innocent animals and other elements of the environment.

"Some environmentalists feel," said John Fogarty of the Council on Environmental Quality, "that the problem facing the sheep herders today is not from coyotes, but from synthetic fabrics."

Their richest haul in a bus robbery.

The two men, described as "business types" wearing flowered shirts, boarded the bus in Chicago.

Driver William Gorshe, 61, said one man put a gun to his head just after the bus made a rest stop at Ypsilanti, about 25 miles southwest of Detroit, and ordered him to drive on. At the same time, Gorshe said, he ordered passengers to close their eyes and put their hands on top of their heads.

"Two or three" passengers were struck on the head when they failed to deliver their goods quickly enough, Gorshe said.

When they finished the robbery, the men ordered Gorshe to stop at a Detroit freeway exit. Police said they believed an accomplice with a car met them.

Despite efforts by federal, state and local police, no trace of the men had turned up Monday.

The robbery sent police back to files they were keeping from one week earlier, when two bandits again posing as passengers commandeered a Greyhound interstate express in the Detroit area and systematically robbed its passengers of $831.

'Warren Commission Failed to Check'

HOUSTON (UPI) — A former Dallas assistant district attorney who investigated the assassination of President Kennedy has told the Houston Chronicle in a copyrighted story the Warren Commission failed to check-reported connections between alleged assassin Lee Harvey Oswald and the FBI and CIA.

Bill Alexander, now an attorney, said he still believed the Kennedy shooting on Nov. 22, 1963, was a conspiracy.

"I've taken nothing but abuse since," Alexander said. He described a Warren Commission meeting in Washington Jan. 24, 1964, which was intended to explore rumors Oswald was connected with either the CIA or FBI. Present were the top Warren Commission officers, then Texas Attorney General Waggoner Carr, Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade and Alexander.

"Waggoner Carr and I are in Washington and I'm telling the commission to check out this address I found in Oswald's notebook, in his apartment, the day of the killing," Alexander said. "None of those Yankee hot dogs are paying any attention to me."

"So I say Waggoner, 'C'mon, let's get a cab.' We jump in and tell the driver to take us to this address. We get there and what do you think it is? The goddam Russian Embassy. Now, what does that tell you?"

Alexander added: "You want to know something else? To this day, I don't think anybody from that commission followed that up."

Carr, who headed a three-member Texas court of enquiry into the assassination, was quoted in the Chronicle as saying he asked the Warren Commission to interview all persons connected with the FBI and CIA in Dallas shortly before the assassination.

"All the records were in the hands of the two agencies and, if they so desired, any information or files could have been destroyed or laundered prior to the time the commission could get them. We knew that then, which is why we recommended what we did."

Most of the severely abused children are less than three years old, according to Ilene Miller, family life education specialist at Texas A&M University.

The Missouri Conservation Commission says 99.5 per cent of the state's historic 15 million acres of native tallgrass prairie have been plowed under in western Missouri.

You'll be paying the bill, so let Congress know your choice!

Congress is about to make an important decision that could affect the cost and gas mileage of your car for years to come.

Since you will be paying the bill, we thought you should be aware of two major alternatives being considered by Congress right now. They concern the control of emissions from cars. Should the standards governing automotive emissions be made even stricter than they are today? Or are they strict enough now? Take your choice.

Choice 1

The President and his Administration have evaluated the pros and cons of current law governing emissions and recommend that the standards for today's cars be extended for five years.

Results

- There will be continued improvement of air quality as new cars replace old cars. (Compared to pre-controlled cars, today's standards result in reductions of over 80% for hydrocarbons and for carbon monoxide and about 40% for oxides of nitrogen according to industry data.)
- Working with current standards, automakers can meet their individual commitments to the President and improve industry-wide gas mileage between 1974 and 1980 by an average of at least 40%.

Choice 2

Present Federal Law calls for even stricter emissions standards for 1977-1978 model cars than those required today. Some members of Congress favor these stricter standards.

Results

- Stricter standards would add only marginal improvement to air quality. (California is an exception. It has a special air quality problem and has its own special standards.)
- To our knowledge no auto manufacturer yet knows how to meet the 1978 standards on a mass production basis. Current "best effort" experimental systems however indicate the following fuel economy and cost penalties:
  - your gas mileage could be reduced by 5% to as much as 30% according to publicly stated company estimates
  - the cost of your car could increase by an estimated $150 to $400 according to company estimates in statements to Congress.

Where do you stand?

These are the choices. We thought you ought to know what they are, and what they will mean to you as a customer. Your United States Senators and Representative should know what you think. Write to them.

Let your U.S. Senators and Representative know your choice.

So You Want to Be a Model

DURING the filming of a TV commercial, the cameraman gives some instructions to Viju Krem, a model who has written a book about her work, "How to Become a Successful Model."

New Book Provides an Inside Look at Glamorous Career

BY JOAN O'SULLIVAN
PRETTY girls, hundreds of them, head for New York City, modeling capital of the U.S.A., every year. Each, convinced that her face can be her fortune, hopes to find the kind of fame that has made celebrities of Cybill Shepherd, Lois Chiles, Lauren Hutton and other top models.

because bathing-suit photos will show off your shoulders, upper arms, waist, hips, thighs and overall figure. If the agency feels you have what it takes, they'll arrange to have professional pictures taken.

Now that she's well-established as a model, Viju views her career as fascinating but not quite as glamorous as people believe. "They think a model has a fabulous social life," she said, "but when you're working you can't go out on the town because the camera is fast to spot circles and lines. I go out only on weekends or

But a pretty face isn't the only asset a would-be model needs. She also must have stamina, self-confidence and money to support herself while waiting for the big break, says Viju Krem, author of "How to Become a Successful Model" (Arco), and a model, herself.

Expenses Figure
"Before coming to New York, a young woman should do a lot of financial figuring," says Viju Krem, author of "How to Become a Successful Model" (Arco), and a model, herself.

The best housing bet, she says, is a women's residence, preferably one with laundry facilities and kitchen privileges because "eating out, even at snack bars, adds up."

First Break
Viju broke into modeling when an admiring photographer got her a job posing for a chemical company's brochure.

Instead, she taped the brochure to her bathroom mirror and learned from it how not to apply makeup. Her first year of modeling brought a few jobs and a great deal of leg work.

She sums it up in one word: exhausting. But it helped her learn the ropes. Every assignment, no matter how small or how dull, taught a lesson.

Parents soon have a fairly good idea of their children's limits in getting along together.

Prepare Child For Baby

COLLEGE STATION — In anticipating the arrival of a second child, it's important to prepare the first child long beforehand, Robert Dix, a family life education specialist, says.

"Parents will want to take care that the older child's life is not changed in any manner which will associate directly with either his mother's pregnancy or the birth of the baby. It's vital that the first born feel he still receives lots of attention and affection," she pointed out.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise:
With inflation, it didn't seem to make much sense to keep track of cents in our check book.

I write in the correct amount of each check, but carry over to the balance column only the whole dollar amount, entering 50 cents and more to the next dollar amount and less than 50 cents forward as is.

Certainly it looks like less, but the payoff is in the fewer mistakes I make. When that great time of reconciliation comes, the bank statement, I fear no evil.

I round off the statement and never argue over pennies. No doubt this letter won't make much "cents" to the penny pincher.

The Penny Dropper

Makes "cents" to me. I have started doing this and was pleasantly surprised when I balanced my checking account to find I had a couple extra dollars in my account.

No doubt every bookkeeper and bank clerk in the country will start pulling their hair when they read this hint!

I put adhesive-backed paper, to match their bedrooms, on the inside and outside of the boxes. I get a sheet of white foam, cut to fit the inside of the box, take a nail file and cut holes for the rings.

For the teenagers, I glue velvet and satin material on the inside and outside of the box. Decorate with old broken jewelry or small sea shells. They are very simple to make and much cheaper than the jewelry boxes you buy.

And By The Way... 'Mini Baby Boom'

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — Demographers are people who study population trends, and two of them say they expect a "mini baby boom" in the near future.

Many women who entered reproductive age in the 1960s tended to postpone marriage and childbearing, but not permanently, according to a University of California research team.

Now there is evidence these women are starting to make up for lost time, the researchers report.

Researchers June Sklar, a demographer with UC's International Population and Urban Research, and Beth Berkov, an analyst for the California Department of Health, said that despite rather adverse economic conditions in California, the birth rate in the state rose 2.3 per cent in 1974 for women between the ages of 15 and 44.

The previous year, fertility hit a record low — 64.8 births per 1,000 women in the 15-44 age bracket in California and 69.2 births per 1,000 in the United States.

The researchers said they believe the birth rise is not just a temporary reversal, and cited three reasons:

— The increase occurred in the face of high rates of legal abortion.
— It occurred even though the economic outlook was poor.

— The rise came without an increase in the marriage rate.

Recent surveys, the researchers said, show an aversion of most Americans to childlessness or even the one-child family.

In 1974's Current Population Survey, more than three-fourths of married women under 30 who were childless expected eventually to have two or more children.

"If these young women are to realize their desires and expectations with respect to family size, they cannot postpone childbearing much longer," the researchers said.

Even an unfavorable economic outlook will not deter most of them from starting their families, their report said.

Statistically, the American wife in 1967 between ages 18 and 39 expected an average of 3.1 children, the study said. This dropped to 2.6 children in 1973.

"But the low birth expectation may not persist," the researchers said.

"Attitudes that are in fashion at a particular time tend to change with the times. The negative attitudes toward marriage and reproduction that characterized the late 1920s and 1930s were replaced by more favorable attitudes in the period following World War II and then turned more negative again in the 1960s.

"A swing back could occur again in the near future."

Political Wife Has Career

DENVER (UPI) — The wife of Colorado's first black lieutenant governor has mixed emotions about politics.

"I view politics as an integral part of my family's life-style and as a means of bringing about positive change, especially for blacks and other minorities," says Rosemary Brown, wife of Lt. Gov. George Brown.

"However, at the same time, I feel that I have to remain as much an individual and total person as possible."

Mrs. Brown, 33, works full-time at the University of Colorado Medical Center, where she heads the facility's multi-phasic health screening unit. She said in an interview that her job, which includes health research and compiling of patient case histories, gives her an outlet for self-expression and fulfillment.

"I'm not advocating a career for all women," she said, "but I feel that a woman should have alternatives on what she wants to get out of life."

"Personally, I intend to always follow my career. I don't want to get completely caught up in George's career."

For the couple's three teen-aged daughters, Cindy, Kim, and Nicole, Mrs. Brown envisions them as becoming women who will choose professional careers in areas formerly dominated by men.

"They are really aggressive girls, and I guess that can be attributed to their growing up in a politically oriented family," she said. "Right now each of them could run a political campaign with ease."

Mrs. Brown has seen her husband ascend to positions rarely attained by a black

CC Vocational Nurses To Graduate

The second graduation for vocational nurses in the history of Clarendon College will be held at the college Saturday, Sept. 6.

Completing the second year of the new program, Clarendon College will graduate 13 students.

Each student in the Vocational Nursing School will have completed the 12 month school, spending the last eight and half months in clinical training at one of the area hospitals or clinics in Childress, Groom, or Memphis.

Graduating exercises will be held at the Harned Sisters Fine Arts Center on the Clarendon Campus at 7:30 p.m.

Students graduating are: Beth Brannon of Hedley; Beth Carter, Clarendon; Karen Dabbs, Pampa; Sandra Hoover, Childress; Jan Hickman, Childress; Pattie Landrum, Hedley; Tink Mahon, Childress; Sharon Morrow, Clarendon; Mary John Jones, Lockney; Barbara Siegler of Vernon; Mary Thomas, Wellington; Betty Tyler, Clarendon; and Judy Haire, also of Clarendon.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

The failure to pay proper attention to the opponents' bidding — and, hence, the failure to draw the correct inferences from it — was responsible for the defeat of South's game contract in today's deal. The hand came up in a duplicate game.

East - West vulnerable. West deals.

♣ K 8

The bidding:
West North East South
1♥ Pass Pass 2NT
Pass 3NT Pass Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♠.

After South had won the opening heart lead with his king, he entered dummy via the diamond jack. He then led the jack of spades and finessed against East's hoped-for king. Upon winning this trick with the king, West cashed the heart ace, and followed up by leading another heart to the board's queen. His two remaining hearts were now established as winners.

At this point declarer had just eight sure winners — and that's all he made. For to create an additional trick he had to lead either a heart or a club. When he led a club, West took his ace, and cashed his two high hearts. Thus West made three hearts, a spade, and the club ace.

Had South listened to the bidding, he would not have taken the spade finesse as he did. Surely West, who had opened the bidding, rated to have the king of spades and both of the missing aces. What South should have done was to play the hand in the appreciation that the spade finesse just had to lose.

After winning the opening heart lead with his king, declarer should have led the deuce of spades towards dummy's jack. If West took this trick with his king, declarer would now have three spade winners; and he couldn't be prevented from making his ninth trick in either hearts or clubs.

And if West declined to take his spade king, dummy's jack would win the trick. Declarer would now discontinue playing spades, and would lead a club to his king, which West would capture with the ace. Declarer would now have eight certain winners: two spades, one heart, four diamonds, and one club. In time, the board's queen of hearts would become declarer's game — going trick.

But declarer, unfortunately, made the mistaken assumption that the location of the spade king was a 50-50 proposition.

New Christmas Stamps Don't State Denomination

Two Christmas stamps to be issued during the 1975 holiday season will be the first in history without a denomination.

When released, the stamps will be valid for the first class postage in effect at the time of issue.

They will be based on an early Christmas card and a 15th century madonna and child painting.

J.D. Williams, Pampa postmaster, said today that his office usually receives an initial allocation of 100,000 Christmas stamps.

"And we generally have to reorder," he said.

Williams doesn't know how much the stamp will cost.

"All I know is what I read," he said.

However, officials anticipate the price to be 13 cents — or maybe 15 cents.

The issue date will be announced later.

Designer Stevan Dohanos adapted one stamp from a Christmas card by Louis Prang which appeared in 1878. It is among the early Christmas cards in the collection of the Museum of the City of New York.

Authorities do not agree on the date when the first Christmas card was printed in this country, but they do agree that Louis Prang was among the first producers 100 years ago.

The wording on the original card — "Ring the joybells — 'ring! Christ is born — our King" — was modified to read "Merry Christmas" because of the reduction to stamp size.

The second 1975 Christmas stamp is based upon a madonna and child printed by Domenico Ghirlandaio, a 15th century Italian artist of the Florentine school. The painting hangs in the National Gallery of Art in Washington.

Ghirlandaio was a prolific painter and mosaic creator, frequently of religious subjects. Only one other madonna has been attributed to Ghirlandaio, art. Beige, yellow, red, green, brown, black tone and black line will print the Prang Christmas card.

The vertical commemorative size stamps will be printed on the Andreetii gravure press in six colors. Yellow, red, blue, brown, black tone and black line will reproduce the Ghirlandaio art. Beige, yellow, red, green, brown, black tone and black line will print the Prang Christmas card.

Jaworski To Delve Impeachment

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Leon Jaworski helped untangle the complicated political crimes of the Watergate scandal. Now he's going to help the Texas Senate delve into the bizarre power politics of Duval County.

Jaworski, former Watergate special prosecutor, will be special legal counsel to the Texas Senate in the state's third impeachment trial of the century.

The Senate convenes Wednesday to consider the case against District Judge O.P. Carrillo, one of three Mexican-American brothers who were once allies of the late George B. Parr, the "Duke of Duval."

Under Parr's rule Duval County dominated South Texas politics for 40 years. It was a disputed election return from Box 13 in Jim Wells County — one of the counties solidly under control of "The Duke" which first sent Lyndon B. Johnson to the U.S. Senate.

But the Duke is dead and even before his death the Carrillo family broke with the Parrs.

During the resulting power struggle state and federal investigators have moved into Duval County.

Some legislators contend Duval County is the last vestige of the Old West in Texas, and its problems of political intrigue shouldn't be brought to the Capitol.

But like it or not, the 31 Senate members will have to decide whether Carrillo is guilty or innocent of the 10 articles of impeachment approved by the Texas House last month.

Jaworski, who is serving at no charge to the state as special legal counsel to the Senate, is one of several of the state's biggest legal names who will be involved in the impeachment trial.

Arthur Mitchell of Austin and Richard "Racehorse" Haynes of Houston are defending Carrillo.

Carrillo, who is little known outside South Texas, is accused of using taxpayers' money to buy his groceries, operate his ranch and send monthly paychecks to his friends.

Before the month is out, Carrillo also faces a federal trial on tax charges, and is under investigation by the Texas

Judicial Qualifications Commission, which has power to remove him from office. He is also under state theft indictment for having repair work on his personal car charged to Duval County.

Only one Texas officeholder has been impeached and removed from office since the present Texas Constitution was adopted in 1876.

Gov. James "Pa" Ferguson was removed from office in 1917 and barred from ever seeking elective office again. His wife was twice elected governor after his impeachment.

The most recent impeachment session was in 1931 when District Judge J.B. Price was acquitted on all six articles voted against him by the House.

Carrillo, 50, has been reluctant to discuss the charges against him. But his brother Oscar, a former legislator, says the impeachment allegations are all part of a political feud.

The Carrillos split with the Parrs in 1974, and openly challenged George Parr for control of Duval and surrounding counties.

"George had for many years kept his word, but he lied to us,"

Oscar said. "A man doesn't lie to us twice. He lies to us once and that's it. That's all I'm going to say about it."

George Parr, convicted on federal tax charges, committed suicide early this year.

His nephew, Archer Parr, was serving as Duval County judge and attempted briefly to grab the political reins. He was removed from office by O.P. Carrillo because of a conviction of lying to a federal grand jury and is now in federal prison.

After Carrillo's removal of Archer Parr an investigation by the attorney general's office led to indictment of another Carrillo brother, County Commissioner Ramiro Carrillo, for theft of state funds. Another commissioner and the school superintendent also have been indicted since the political feud began between the Parrs and Carrillos.

The senators are expected to formally adopt rules for the trial and then adjourn until Sept. 22 to give prosecutors and defense attorneys time to prepare their cases. It will take a two-thirds vote on one or more of the articles of impeachment to remove Carrillo from office.

'Citizen's Posse' Rules Over Tomatoes

STOCKTON, Calif. (UPI) — The heavily armed members of the "citizen's posse" lined at the entrance to a field and declared themselves the law over 200 acres of tomatoes.

Four members of the group, which called itself "Posse Comitatus," later were arrested by a force of 15 to 20 sheriff's deputies Tuesday — but not before a sheriff's inspector was injured by a shotgun blast and the posse allegedly raised weapons at the deputies.

The "Posse Comitatus" said it had decided to make a stand for property rights by denying United Farm Workers Union organizers access to the property owned by Western Tomato Growers.

Leaders of the group said "Posse Comitatus" was the title of the historic bands of citizens gathered by a county sheriff in the frontier days to hunt down outlaws. They said they intervened in law enforcement activities only when asked.

They said they came at the request of the company, which was protesting a state agricultural labor relations board regulation allowing union organizers limited access to private fields.

Deputies arrived to arrest Francis Gillings of Tracy, Calif., a gas station operator and one of the posse organizers, for a traffic violation. A scuffle ensued and Gillings' shotgun fired, injuring the inspector, officials said.

Three other men, including a 14-year-old boy believed to be Gillings' son, allegedly pointed weapons at deputies and were arrested on charges of assault on a police officer.

In a telegram to state Attorney General Evelle Younger, the California Labor Federation, AFL-CIO, urged immediate action to assist officials in San Joaquin County "to disarm vigilantes and prevent them from violating the lawful organizing rights of representatives of the United Farm Workers Union."

The "posse" included the manager of the ranch, at least one teen-ager and several pistol-packing women in beehive hairdos. Most posse members held shotguns, heavy bore rifles or handguns.

Many wore shiny numbered "Posse Comitatus" badges. One man's leather gun belt was cinched up with a buckle bearing the inscription "Field Boss."

"We're law-abiding citizens," said a posse member who asked to remain anonymous. "We're just here to protect the property rights of this farmer."

Water Board Will Sponsor Workshop

The Texas Water Quality Board will sponsor a five-day laboratory training workshop in Pampa, Monday through Friday, Sept. 12, for municipal wastewater plant operators and technicians in the Panhandle.

The course, presented at no charge to participants, is designed for the wastewater treatment plant operator of technician who has minimal experience in wastewater analysis and flow measurements, but is required to monitor effluent discharges under a National Pollutant Discharge Elimination Permit.

Upon completion of the five-day workshop, Mack Wofford, city manager, stated, 30 hours of certification credit will be awarded by the Texas Department of Health Resources.

Participants, according to prerequisites, should have ability to perform basic mathematical calculations using both whole number fractions and decimals.

Instruction at the Pampa workshop will be provided by members of the Environmental Education and Training Section of the Texas Water Quality Board and the Texas A&M University Engineering Extension Service.

Pre-registration is required, according to Wofford, and classes will be limited to 15 participants. Only one applicant from each city or town will be accepted unless the class has not been filled.

Wofford said the workshop is expected to be conducted at the city's wastewater treatment plant 2½ miles east of the city of Loop 171.

Directors Of Local SWCD Attend Meet

Gray County Soil and Water Conservation District directors Curtis Schaffer, Milton Carpenter and Ralph McLaughlin attended the Panhandle Association of SWCD's semi-annual meeting recently at Canadian.

Perry Gruhlkey, district conservationist, also attended.

About 100 directors from over the Panhandle attended the meeting.

State Senator Max Sherman discussed the Texas Constitution which will come up for a public vote in November.

Sherman explained that one aspect of the constitution provides that land will be taxed according to its productive value.

Dee Brune, president of the state association of SWCD's, discussed land use planning legislation and Harvey Davis, executive secretary of the state board of conservation districts, discussed current programs. Bob Close, state representative, commented on land use regulations.

Following a general business session, Pampa was selected as the site for August 1976 meeting.

It Sims To Me...

By PAUL SIMS
Sports Editor

You would have expected Junior Salinas of Borger to do everything but cry and say everything but profanities after he blew a big lead and settled for third place in the 38th annual Top O' Texas Invitational Golf Tournament.

Naturally, he said a few discouraging words and at times had to force a smile but even Salinas thoroughly enjoyed the competition of one of the finest Top O' Texas tournaments in the history of the Pampa County Club.

Salinas called Monday's final round "one of the best matches I've ever seen — neck and neck all the way." Winner Britt Harrison, a freshman at Oklahoma State; Salinas, a West Texas State golfer, and runner-up Allen Carmichael of Texas Tech made it one of the best matches the gallery of around 300 had even seen, also.

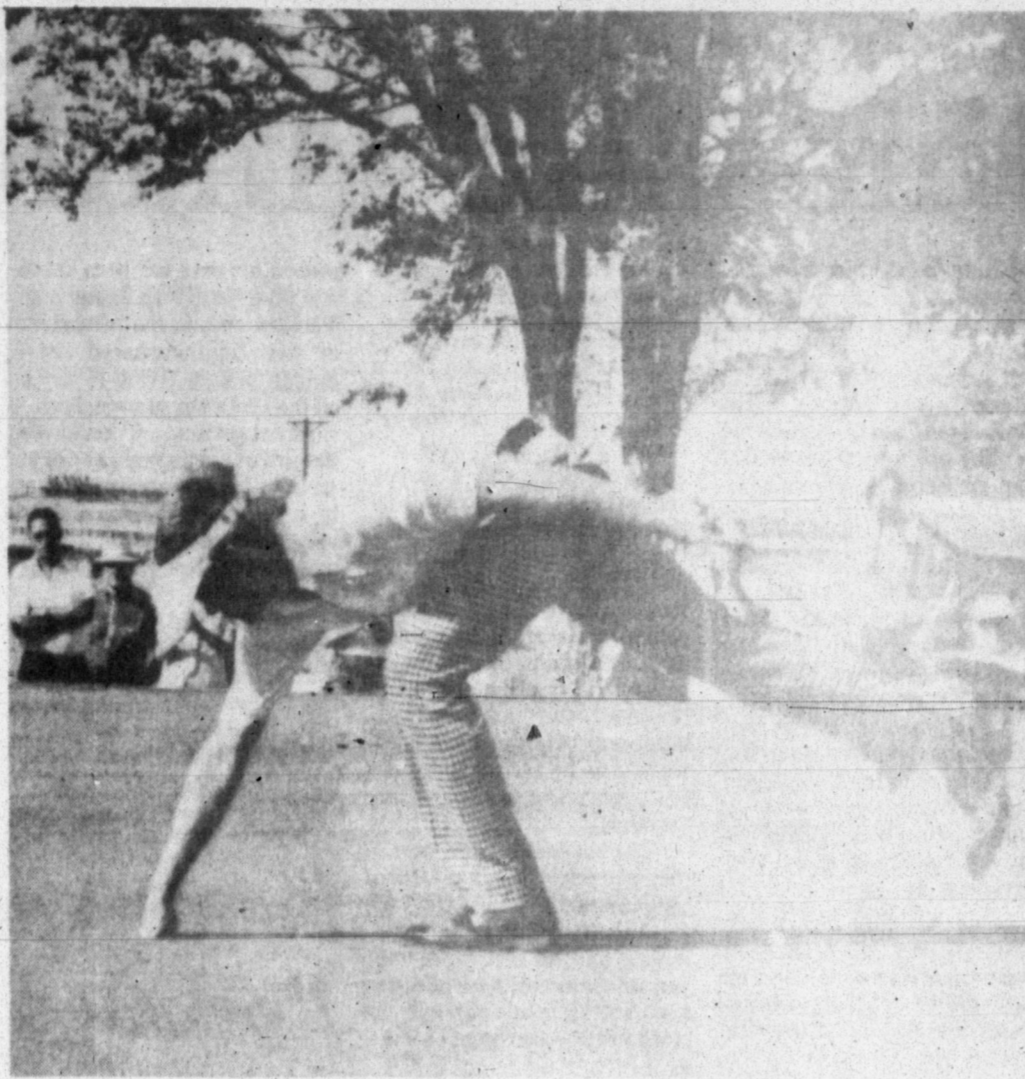

That's a credit to David Fatheree, tournament director, who probably did more traveling and made more telephone calls than a University of Oklahoma football recruiter, playing up the tourney and inviting some of the top amateur talent in the Southwest.

Sure, Tom Jones of Oklahoma State, one of the country's finest amateur players, couldn't attend the Top O' Texas. So, Fatheree did the next best thing — invite Tom's little brother, Eddie, who plays at Odessa Junior College.

Players from the University of Oklahoma, Oklahoma State and Texas Tech gave the tourney one of the top collegiate fields ever. Add defending champion Dick Weston, who is one of the top players in West Texas, John Farquhar of Lubbock, John Zett and Ken Bailey of Amarillo and Eddie Duenkel, David Parker and Max Hickey of Pampa and you've got a solid tourney.

Weston was impressed. "It's gotten to the point where this tournament and the Men's West Texas are the best tournaments in this part of the country. And this tournament is getting better than the Men's West Texas."

Harrison, Carmichael and Salinas all admitted they were already looking ahead to next year's Top O' Texas.

Finishes 2nd

Allen Carmichael of Texas Tech finished two strokes behind winner Britt Harrison of Oklahoma State Monday in the final round of the Top O' Texas Invitational Golf Tournament. Both players indicated they will play next year in the Pampa tourney.

Bucs Tip Mets

United Press International
Willie Stargell has one word to describe why he believes the Pittsburgh Pirates will win the National League East pennant this year—PRIDE.

The Pirates, humiliated by Tom Seaver Monday, refused to quit and punished Jerry Koosman Tuesday night to defeat New York 8-4.

The triumph gave the Pirates a four-game lead over St. Louis and a five-game bulge over both Philadelphia and New York. The Cardinals were beaten by Chicago 5-3 while the Phillies lost to Montreal 4-3.

"It was a big win because we gained on everyone," said Stargell, the Pirates' team leader. "Last night was a tough loss but you can't die with it. You've got to come back out the next day. We have pride and we play with pride. We didn't come into New York saying we had to win one, two or three, and when we leave here we'll still have to bust our butt to win wherever we go from here."

The Pirates had only four hits off Seaver but 12 against Koosman and three relievers, with Rennie Stennett contributing the big blow, a three-run homer in the third inning that capped a four-run rally. Manny Sanguillen and Bill Robinson also homered for the Pirates while light-hitting Frank Taveras chipped in with a triple and two singles.

The Mets got home runs from Joe Torre and Dave Kingman but were held hitless by reliever Dave Giusti over the last three innings.

In other NL games, Cincinnati walloped San Diego 10-4. San Francisco defeated Los Angeles 7-3 and Atlanta topped Houston 4-1.

Boston defeated New York 7-4. Baltimore nipped Cleveland 3-2 in 10 innings then lost 2-1. Minnesota topped Texas 5-3. Milwaukee beat Detroit 6-5. Kansas City downed Chicago 4-1 in 12 innings and California trimmed Oakland 4-1 in American League action.

Cubs 5, Cardinals 3
Two errors by second baseman Larry Lintz and an error and a balk by St. Louis pitcher Lynn McGlathen let Chicago score twice in the seventh inning and snap a 1-1 tie. Manny Trillo singled home two more in the eighth for insurance. Andy Thornton chipped in with his third homer in two games for the Cubs.

Expos 4, Phillies 3
Jim Dwyer's two-run double in the fourth inning and a run-scoring double by Barry Foote in the ninth enabled Montreal to hand Philadelphia its fourth straight loss. The loss was the Phils' ninth in their last 12 games and dropped them five games off the pace in the NL East.

Reds 10, Padres 4
Tony Perez became Cincinnati's all-time runs batted in leader when he singled home Cesar Geronimo during a seven-run fifth inning that carried the Reds over San Diego. Perez, who has driven in 95 runs this season, has 1,010 for his 11-year career, which betters the previous mark of 1,009 set by Frank Robinson.

Giants 7, Dodgers 3
Von Joshua, Willie Montanez and rookie Johnajje Lemaster homered for Ed Halicki to lead San Francisco over Los Angeles. Lemaster's homer was an inside-the-park shot and came in his first big league at bat. Halicki allowed eight hits and struck out 12 in raising his record to 9-11. Don Sutton, who pitched only five innings, was tagged with his 12th loss in 28 decisions.

5th Time Charm For Miss Evert?

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (UPI)—Today is the day, for the fifth straight year, that Chris Evert is programmed to reach the semifinals of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

She has failed there four consecutive times, but this year, with the switch from grass to clay, the officials have all but engraved her name on the trophy, confident that Chris will add Forest Hills to her list of laurels.

Margaret Court plays tonight against a new teen-age wonder, Martina Navratilova, while in day matches, Evonne Goolagong-Cawley opposes Kazuko Sawamatsu of Japan.

Among the young women, there is almost resignation concerning their chance of stopping Miss Evert, either in the quarters today, or in the semis, or in the final.

Chris is riding the crest of 81 straight victories on clay courts, her last loss on a surface similar to the one used here coming in Cincinnati, 6-2, 7-5 to Mrs. Goolagong-Cawley.

The eighth day of the $300,000 tournament is given entirely to the girls for singles action.

The men completed their advance to the quarterfinals Tuesday, with Romania's Ilie Nastase winning a five-setter from Mexico's Raul Ramirez, Chile's Jaime Fillol trouncing Germany's Karl Meiler, Spain's Manuel Orantes topping Francois Jauffert of France, and Guillermo Vilas toying with two-time runnerup Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia in a quick 90-minute, three-setter at night.

Kodes won a mere 45 points in his 6-2, 6-0, 6-0 loss.

The largest octopus of record measured 28 feet from arm tip to arm tip.

Fisk Swings Sox Past Yanks

United Press International
Carlton Fisk might yet become the first player in baseball history to win a most valuable player award and a purple heart in the same season.

Fisk, whose string of injuries have caused him to miss nearly an entire season of games over the past two years, was back in the Red Sox' lineup Tuesday night after a nine-game absence due to a split finger.

The result: 2-for-4 and three RBIs in a 7-4 victory for the Red Sox over the New York Yankees.

"Fisk is the 'glue-man,'" Oakland A's slugger Reggie Jackson said only last weekend while the slugging Boston catcher was still on the sidelines. "He's the guy who keeps the Red Sox together."

The facts tend to back up Jackson. In his 57 games this year, Fisk has driven in 37 runs, scored 28 and is batting .313 with seven homers.

"My hand felt good last Wednesday and I was hoping to get back into the lineup, but then I pulled some tendons in my fingers after picking weeds in my garden," said Fisk, who drove home two runs with a bases-loaded single in the fourth and singled home another in the fifth.

"I couldn't get a good grip on the bat tonight but come to think of it, I might keep this grip awhile."

The victory, which went to Reggie Cleveland (10-9), increased the Red Sox' lead to six games over Baltimore in the AL East.

Elsewhere in the American League, Cleveland edged Baltimore 2-1 after dropping the opener of their doubleheader 3-2. Kansas City topped Chicago 4-1. Minnesota put away Texas 5-3 and Milwaukee trimmed Detroit 6-5.

In National League action, it was Pittsburgh over New York 8-4. Montreal atop Philadelphia 4-3. Chicago besting St. Louis 5-3. Cincinnati drubbing San Diego 10-4. Atlanta over Houston 4-1 and San Francisco on top of Los Angeles 7-3.

Orioles 1-3, Indians 2-2
Designated hitter Rico Carty's eighth inning homer in the nightcap, his 16th, got Cleveland a split after Bobby Grich won the opener for Baltimore with a 10th inning bases-loaded single.

Carty's homer, which snapped a 1-1 tie and gave Jim Bibby only his fifth win in 19 decisions, stalled the Orioles' hopes of overtaking Boston. Mike Cuellar (14-10) scattered 11 hits but went the route to win the first game.

Angels 4, A's 1

Frank Tanana (14-6) struck out 14 Oakland batters to run his league-leading season's total to 220 in California's win over the A's. Tanana scattered five hits and was the beneficiary of four runs in the eighth inning. Mickey Rivers doubling home two of them. The Angels stole two more bases to become the first team since the 1918 Pittsburgh Pirates with 200 thefts in a season.

White Sox 4, Royals 1
George Brett's two-out run scoring single—his fourth hit—started a three run 12th inning rally for Kansas City-keeping Jim Kaat from his 20th victory.

Kaat (19-10) went all the way for Chicago but ran into trouble in the 12th when Amos Otis doubled. Brett singled, John Mayberry walked. Harmon Killebrew reach on an error and Al Cowens singled home two mor runs.

Twins 5, Rangers 3
Minnesota rookie Jim Hughes

spaced home runs over 8 2/3 innings to win his 13th game and was backed by homers from Don Ford, Hal Carey and John Briggs. Carey's and Briggs' back to back homers, which followed a double by Jerry Terrell, wiped out a 3-1 Texas lead in the fourth.

Brewers 3, Pirates 5
George Scott plated five runs, including a pair of doubles, and captured twice as Milwaukee's slugger. Hank Aaron's sacrifice fly capped a three-run Brewer rally in the fifth while Scott doubled home one run and scored another during a two-run fourth.

Winds Blown Away

NEW YORK (UPI)—Moving boldly with a strong hand—but one predicated on fear—the World Football League continues to seek credibility as a thriving major league although divorcing itself from two of the country's largest markets.

Pampans Get Top Places In Boat Race
LAKE MEREDITH—Dr. Bob Loerwald and Kay Fancher, both of Pampa, won first and second place Monday in the annual Labor Day Regatta, sponsored here by the Amarillo Yacht Club.

Lovell Pillow placed third in the regatta, which attracted 17 boats in the Mixed Keelboat race.

Flag League To Organize
The Pampa Men's Flag Football League will hold an organizational meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the television room of the Pampa Youth Center.

Interested teams must have at least one representative at the meeting.

With the sharp and decisive blow of an executioner, the WFL Tuesday announced the immediate extinction of the Chicago Winds and the dispersal of the players to the 10 other league members.

Following the debacle of 1974 when the "old" WFL ran up debts estimated as high as $20 million and lost the key New York franchise, league President Chris Hemmeter nevertheless pointed to the swift action of the Board of Governors as a positive move that strengthened the structure of the entire circuit.

"Basically, the league requires that all teams be in precise accordance in all aspects of the Hemmeter Plan." While admitting the memory of last year might have prompted the death blow, Hemmeter stressed that the other 10 members were healthy under stringent fiscal safeguards which provide that exact monies be proportioned for various areas of a club's operation.

The Board of Governors voted 10-1 to expel the Winds Monday night, with the only dissenting vote being cast by Kenneth Zak, the Winds' governor. The action was provoked when two investors in the team withdrew the $175,000 they had on deposit with the league's legal counsel.

It Sims To Me...

By PAUL SIMS
Sports Editor

You would have expected Junior Salinas of Borger to do everything but cry and say everything but profanities after he blew a big lead and settled for third place in the 38th annual Top O' Texas Invitational Golf Tournament.

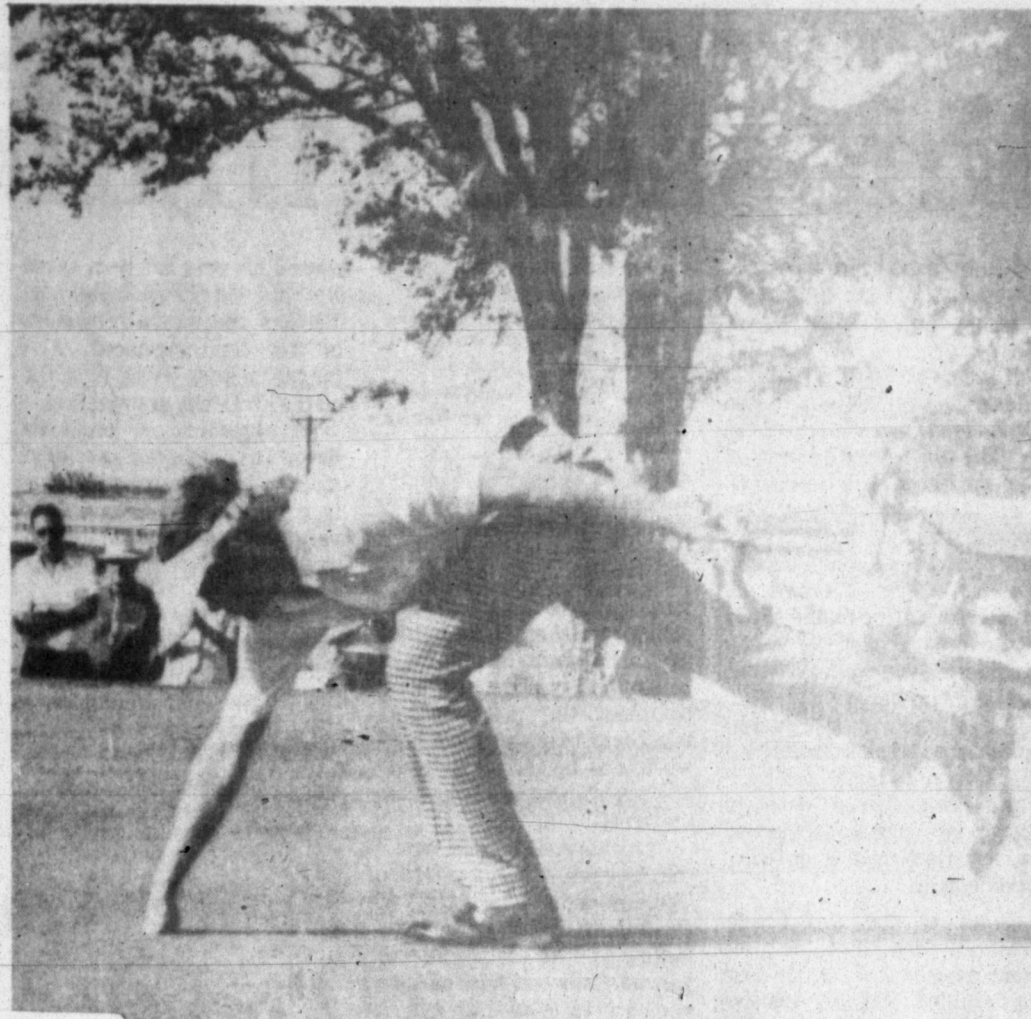

Naturally, he said a few discouraging words and at times had to force a smile but even Salinas thoroughly enjoyed the competition of one of the finest Top O' Texas tournaments in the history of the Pampa County Club.

Salinas called Monday's final round "one of the best matches I've ever seen — neck and neck all the way." Winner Britt Harrison, a freshman at Oklahoma State; Salinas, a West Texas State golfer, and runner-up Allen Carmichael of Texas Tech made it one of the best matches the gallery of around 300 had even seen, also.

That's a credit to David Fatheree, tournament director, who probably did more traveling and made more telephone calls than a University of Oklahoma football recruiter, playing up the tourney and inviting some of the top amateur talent in the Southwest.

Sure, Tom Jones of Oklahoma State, one of the country's finest amateur players, couldn't attend the Top O' Texas. So, Fatheree did the next best thing — invite Tom's little brother, Eddie, who plays at Odessa Junior College.

Players from the University of Oklahoma, Oklahoma State and Texas Tech gave the tourney one of the top collegiate fields ever. Add defending champion Dick Weston, who is one of the top players in West Texas, John Farquhar of Lubbock, John Zett and Ken ...

Bucs Tip Mets

United Press International
Willie Stargell has one word to describe why he believes the Pittsburgh Pirates will win the National League East pennant this year—PRIDE.

The Pirates, humiliated by Tom Seaver Monday, refused to quit and punished Jerry Koosman Tuesday night to defeat New York 8-4.

The triumph gave the Pirates a four-game lead over St. Louis and a five-game bulge over both Philadelphia and New York. The Cardinals were beaten by Chicago 5-3 while the Phillies lost to Montreal 4-3.

"It was a big win because we gained on everyone," said Stargell, the Pirates' team leader. "Last night was a tough loss but you can't die with it. You've got to come back on the next day. We have pride and we play with pride. We didn't come into New York saying we had to win one, two or three, and when we leave here we'll still have to bust our butt to win wherever we go from here."

The Pirates had only four hits off Seaver but 12 against Koosman and three relievers, with Rennie Stennett contributing the big blow, a three-run homer in the third inning that capped a four-run rally. Manny Sanguillen and Bill Robinson also homered for the Pirates while light-hitting Frank Tavaras chipped in with a triple and two singles.

The Mets got home runs from Joe Torre and Dave Kingman but were held hitless by reliever Dave Giusti over the last three innings.

In other NL games, Cincinnati walloped San Diego 10-4. San Francisco defeated Los Angeles 7-3 and Atlanta topped Houston 4-1.

Boston defeated New York 7-4. Baltimore nipped Cleveland 3-2 in 10 innings then lost 2-1. Minnesota topped Texas 5-3. Milwaukee beat Detroit 6-5. Kansas City downed Chicago 4-1 in 12 innings and California trimmed Oakland 4-1 in American League action.

Cubs 5, Cardinals 3
Two errors by second baseman Larry Lintz and an error by pitcher Steve Carlton kept the Cubs from scoring more runs.

and a balk by St. Louis pitcher Lynn McGlothen let Chicago score twice in the seventh inning and snap a 1-1 tie. Manny Trillo singled home two more in the eighth for insurance. Andy Thornton chipped in with his third homer in two games for the Cubs.

Expos 4, Phillies 3
Jim Dwyer's two-run double in the fourth inning and a run-scoring double by Barry Foote in the ninth enabled Montreal to hand Philadelphia its fourth straight loss. The loss was the Phils' ninth in their last 12 games and dropped them five games off the pace in the NL East.

Reds 10, Padres 4
Tony Perez became Cincinnati's all-time runs batted in leader when he singled home Cesar Geronimo during a seven-run fifth inning that carried the Reds over San Diego. Perez, who has driven in 95 runs this season, has 1,010 for his 11-year career which betters the previous mark of 1,009 set by Frank Robinson.

Giants 7, Dodgers 3
Von Joshua, Willie Montanez and rookie Johnnie Lemaster homered for Ed Halicki to lead San Francisco over Los Angeles. Lemaster's homer was an inside-the-park shot and came in his first big league at bat. Halicki allowed eight hits and struck out 12 in raising his record to 9-11. It Sims To Me...

By PAUL SIMS
Sports Editor

You would have expected Junior Salinas of Borger to do everything but cry and say everything but profanities after he blew a big lead and settled for third place in the 38th annual Top O' Texas Invitational Golf Tournament.

Naturally, he said a few discouraging words and at times had to force a smile but even Salinas thoroughly enjoyed the competition of one of the finest Top O' Texas tourneys in the history of the Pampa County Club.

Salinas called Monday's final round "one of the best matches I've ever seen — neck and neck all the way." Winner Britt Harrison, a freshman at Oklahoma State; Salinas, a West Texas State golfer, and runner-up Allen Carmichael of Texas Tech made it one of the best matches the gallery of around 300 had even seen, also.

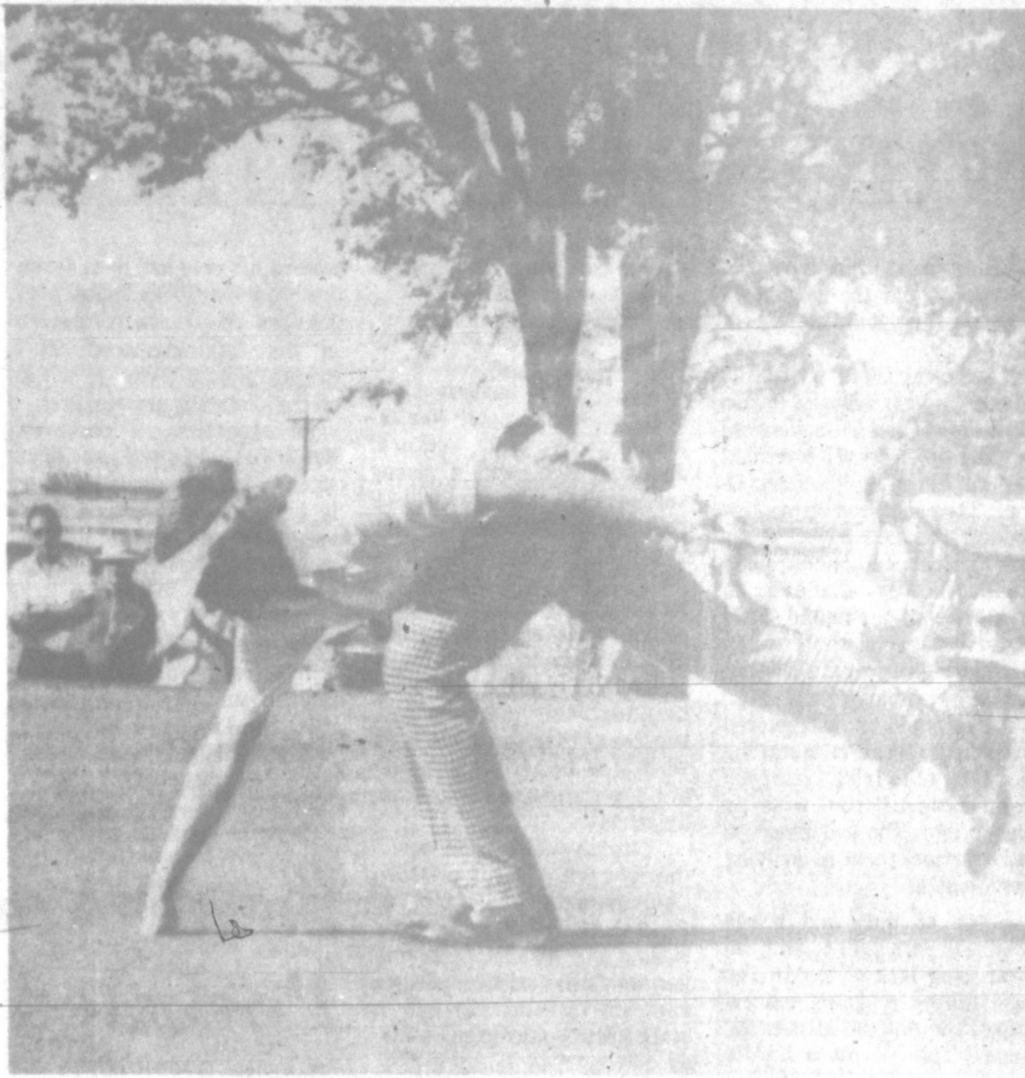

That's a credit to David Fatheree, tournament director, who probably did more traveling and made more telephone calls than a University of Oklahoma football recruiter, playing up the tourney and inviting some of the top amateur talent in the Southwest.

Sure, Tom Jones of Oklahoma State, one of the country's finest amateur players, couldn't attend the Top O' Texas. So, Fatheree did the next best thing — invite Tom's little brother, Eddie, who plays at Odessa Junior College.

Players from the University of Oklahoma, Oklahoma State and Texas Tech gave the tourney one of the top collegiate fields ever. Add defending champion Dick Weston, who is one of the top players in West Texas. John Farquhar of Lubbock, John Zett and Ken Bailey of Amarillo and Eddie Duenkel, David Parker and Max Hickey of Pampa and you've got a solid tourney.

Weston was impressed. "It's gotten to the point where this tournament and the Men's West Texas are the best tournaments in this part of the country. And this tournament is getting better than the Men's West Texas."

Harrison, Carmichael and Salinas all admitted they were already looking ahead to next year's Top O' Texas.

Finishes 2nd

Allen Carmichael of Texas Tech finished two strokes behind winner Britt Harrison of Oklahoma State Monday in the final round of the Top O' Texas Invitational Golf Tournament. Both players noted they will play next year in the Pampa tourney.

Fisk Swings Sox Past Yanks

United Press International
Catcher Fisk might yet become the first player in baseball history to win a most valuable player award and a purple heart in the same season.

Fisk, whose string of injuries have caused him to miss nearly an entire season of games over the past two years, was back in the Red Sox lineup Tuesday night after a nine-game absence due to a split finger. The result: 2-for-4 and three RBIs in a 7-4 victory for the Red Sox over the New York Yankees.

"Fisk is the glue-man," Oakland A's slugger Reggie Jackson said only last weekend while the slugging Boston catcher was still on the sidelines. "He's the guy who keeps the Red Sox together."

The facts tend to back up Jackson. In his 57 games this year, Fisk has driven in 37 runs, scored 28 and is hitting .313 with seven homers.

"My hand felt good last Wednesday and I was hoping to get back into the lineup, but then I pulled some tendons in my fingers after picking weeds in my garden," said Fisk, who drove home two runs with a bases-loaded single in the fourth and singled home another in the fifth.

"I couldn't get a good grip on the bat tonight but come to think of it, I might keep this grip awhile."

The victory, which went to Reggie Cleveland (10-9), increased the Red Sox' lead to six games over Baltimore in the AL East.

Elsewhere in the American League, Cleveland edged Baltimore 2-1 after dropping the opener of their doubleheader 3-2. Kansas City topped Chicago 4-1. Minnesota put away Texas 5-3 and Milwaukee trimmed Detroit 6-5.

In National League action, it was Pittsburgh over Philadelphia 4-3. Chicago besting St. Louis 5-3. Cincinnati drubbing San Diego 10-4. Atlanta over Houston 4-1 and San Francisco on top of Los Angeles 7-3.

Orioles 1-3, Indians 2-2
Designated hitter Rico Carty's eighth inning homer in the nightcap, his 16th, got Cleveland a split after Bobby Grich won the opener for Baltimore with a 10th inning bases-loaded single. Carty's homer, which snapped a 1-1 tie and gave Jim Bibby only his fifth win in 19 decisions, stalled the Orioles' hopes of overtaking Boston. Mike Cuellar (14-10) scattered 11 hits but went the route to win the first game.

Angels 4, A's 1

Frank Tanana (14-6) struck out 14 Oakland batters to run his league-leading season's total to 220 in California's win over the A's. Tanana scattered five hits and was the beneficiary of four runs in the eighth inning, Mickey Rivers doubling home two of them. The Angels stole two more bases to become the first team since the 1918 Pittsburgh Pirates with 200 thefts in a season.

White Sox 4, Royals 1
George Brett's two-out run scoring single—his fourth hit—started a three run 12th inning rally for Kansas City keeping Jim Kaat from his 20th victory. Kaat (19-11) went all the way for Chicago but ran into trouble in the 12th when Amos Otis doubled. Brett, singled, John Mayberry walked, Harmon Killebrew reached on an error and Al Cowens singled home two more runs.

Twins 5, Rangers 3
Minnesota rookie Jim Hughes

spaced three hits over 8 2/3 innings to win his 13th game and was backed by homers from Dan Ford, Rod Carew and John Briggs. Carew's and Briggs' back-to-back homers, which followed a leadoff walk to Jerry Terrell, wiped out a 3-1 Tech lead in the fourth.

Brewers 6, Tigers 5
George Scott slammed five hits—including a pair of doubles—and scored twice as Milwaukee beat Detroit. Hank Aaron's sacrifice fly capped a three-run Brewer rally in the fifth while Scott doubled home one run and scored another during a two-run fourth.

Bucs Tip Mets

United Press International
Willie Stargell has one word to describe why he believes the Pittsburgh Pirates will win the National League East pennant this year—PRIDE.

The Pirates, humiliated by Tom Seaver, refused to quit and punished Jerry Kosman Tuesday night to defeat New York 8-4.

The triumph gave the Pirates a four-game lead over St. Louis and a five-game bulge over both Philadelphia and New York. The Cardinals were beaten by Chicago 5-3 while the Phillies lost to Montreal 4-3.

"It was a big win because we gained on everyone," said Stargell, the Pirates' team leader. "Last night was a tough loss but you can't die with it. You've got to come back out the next day. We have pride and we play with pride. We didn't come into New York saying we had to win one, two or three, and when we leave here we'll still have to bust our butt to win wherever we go from here."

The Pirates had only four hits off Seaver but 12 against Kosman and three relievers, with Rennie Spenlett contributing the big blow, a three-run homer in the third inning that capped a four-run rally. Manny Sanguillen and Bill Robinson also homered for the Pirates while light-hitting Frank Taveras chipped in with a triple and two singles.

The Mets got home runs from Joe Torre and Dave Kingman but were held hitless by reliever Dave Giusti over the last three innings.

In other NL games, Cincinnati walloped San Diego 10-4. San Francisco defeated Los Angeles 7-3 and Atlanta topped Houston 4-1.

Baltimore nipped Cleveland 3-2 in 10 innings then lost 2-1. Minnesota topped Texas 5-3. Milwaukee beat Detroit 6-5. Kansas City dethroned Chicago 4-1 in 12 innings and California trimmed Oakland 4-1 in American League action.

Cubs 3, Cardinals 3
Two errors by second baseman Larry Lintz and an error and a balk by St. Louis pitcher Lynn McClothen let Chicago score twice in the seventh inning and snap a 1-1 tie. Manny Trillo singled home two more in the eighth for insurance. Andy Thornton chipped in with his third homer in two games for the Cubs.

Expos 4, Phillies 3

Jim Dwyer's two-run double in the fourth inning and a run-scoring double by Barry Foote in the ninth enabled Montreal to hand Philadelphia its fourth straight loss. The loss was the Phils' ninth in their last 12 games and dropped them five games off the pace in the NL East.

Reds 10, Padres 4

Tony Perez became Cincinnati's all-time runs batted in leader when he singled home Cesar Geronimo during a seven-run fifth inning that carried the Reds over San Diego. Perez, who has driven in 95 runs this season, has 1,010 for his 11-year career which better the previous mark of 1,009 set by Frank Robinson.

Giants 7, Dodgers 3

Von Joshua, Willie Montanez and rookie Johnnie Lemaster homered for Ed Halicki to lead San Francisco over Los Angeles. Lemaster's homer was an inside-the-park shot and came in his first big league at bat. Halicki allowed eight hits and struck out 12 in raising his record to 9-11. Don Sutton, who pitched only five innings, was tagged with his 12th loss in 28 decisions.

5th Time Charm For Miss Evert?

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (UPI) — Today is the day, for the fifth straight year, that Chris Evert is programmed to reach the semifinals of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

She has failed there four consecutive times, but this year, with the switch from grass to clay, the officials have all but engraved her name on the trophy, confident that Chris will add Forest Hills to her list of laurels.

Margaret Court plays tonight against a new teen-age wonder, Martina Navratilova, while in day matches, Evonne Goolagong Cawley opposes Kazuko Sawamatsu of Japan.

Among the young women there is almost resignation concerning their chance of stopping Miss Evert, or in the quarters today, or in the semis, or in the final.

Chris is riding the crest of 81 straight victories on clay courts, her last loss on a surface similar to the one used here coming in Cincinnati, 6-2, 7-5 to Mrs. Goolagong-Cawley.

The eighth day of the $300,000 tournament is given entirely to the girls for singles action.

The men completed their advance to the quarterfinals Tuesday, with Romania's Ilie Nastase winning a five-setter from Mexico's Raul Ramirez, Chile's Jaime Fillol trouncing Germany's Karl Meier, Spain's Manuel Orantes topping Franco Juffert of France, and Guillermo Vilas toying with two-time runner-up Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia in a quick 90-minute, three-setter at night. Kodes won a mere 45 points in his 6-2, 6-0, 6-0 loss.

The largest octopus of record measured 28 feet from arm tip to arm tip.

Film World in Review

Burroughs' Dinosaur Thriller Naive

NEW YORK (UPI) — Edgar Rice Burroughs' science fiction adventure "The Land That Time Forgot" has been turned into an often creaky movie of the sort that might have been made 30 years ago. But that's not all bad. There are funny moments as well as exciting ones in this London-made picture starring

TV's ex-Virginian Doug McClure. "I do not expect anyone to believe the story I'm about to relate," says a message from McClure found inside a container bobbing on the sea in the opening scene. It is dated June 3, 1916.

It seems McClure, a beautiful blonde English biologist (Susan Penhaligon) and five sailors are the only survivors of a merchant ship torpedoed by a German U-boat. They soon find themselves aboard the submarine. Days later, lost in uncharted waters, they discover a mysterious, ice-bound land whose lush green interior hosts a bewildering variety of dinosaurs and fierce primitive men.

They dine on slaughtered brontosaurus, prepared according to "an old Irish recipe," wondering if red wine is appropriate. The bad-tempered natives attack them, as do flying pterodactyls.

A lot of men and beasts eventually are killed (with an astonishing lack of blood). For the finale, a giant volcano erupts, spewing fire all over the place. The Germans try to escape through the boiling waters but their U-boat blows up, leaving McClure and Miss Penhaligon gallantly facing the future alone.

Both perform in good Saturday matinee style, suited to this intentionally naive endeavor, as do John McEneaney as the U-boat captain and Bobby Farr as one of the natives who is whisked away in the jaws of a pterodactyl.

"The Land That Time Forgot" is from American International and is rated PG.

A French import cooly titled here "A Pain in the A—" could be the year's funniest black comedy, with superb performances by Lino Ventura, Jacques Brel and a strong supporting cast directed by Edouard Molinaro.

An impeccably tailored hit man (Ventura) arrives in the southern French city of Montpellier grimly set on assassinating the key witness in a major government scandal. He plans to shoot the fellow with a telescopic rifle from his hotel window as he arrives to testify at a government building across the street.

"You have a ringside view," the cheerful bellhop (Nino Castelnuovo) points out. At about that point the movie stops looking like yet another gloomy yarn of Gallic political intrigue and starts evolving into a brilliantly constructed comedy.

Ventura's nemesis is the man in the next room (Brel), a manic-depressive shirt salesman driven to suicide by his failure to win back his ex-wife (Caroline Cellier). He tries to hang himself from his bathroom plumbing. The pipe breaks, flooding Ventura's adjacent room.

Ventura still has time to execute his murderous assignment, if only Brel would leave him alone. Brel won't, convinced his wife has been saved by his taciturn neighbor. Ventura spends the remainder of his lightning-paced, 90-minute picture trying to shake off the idiotically grateful Brel.

As slapstick, it could be dreadful. Played as dry, straight-faced drama with nearly believable characters, it is very likely the funniest French movie since Monsieur Hulot took a holiday.

"A Pain in the A—" (the title, dashes and all, comes from distributor Corwin-Mahler) has English subtitles and is rated PG. In France it is called "L'Emmerdeur," which means much the same thing.

There is a lot of wonderful

Saudi Arabian Says He Pocketed Northrop Bribe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Saudi Arabian entrepreneur Adnan Khashoggi says he pocketed a quarter-million dollar bribe which Northrop Corp. wanted to give the commanding general of the Saudi Arabian air force.

In an interview in Beirut published in today's Washington Post, Khashoggi said it was Northrop, not he, who "cooked up" the idea of paying $250,000 to Gen. Hashim M. Hashim in a 1971 attempt to buy cooperation in approving arms contracts for the corporation.

"I stopped a bribe," the Post quoted Khashoggi. "I put it in my pocket."

Khashoggi said he acted to keep Northrop from "putting themselves in a bad position" by doing something "stupid."

"I didn't think the general had earned it," he said of the money. "I worked harder than he did on this."

Northrop released documents in June accusing Khashoggi of demanding a $250,000 bribe for the general, who since has retired.

The company has told a Senate subcommittee it later paid $200,000 more to Khashoggi.

There are bits of 25 songs by such legends as Rudy Vallee, Bing Crosby, Eddie Cantor, Ruth Etting, the Andrews Sisters and Billie Holiday. It's almost like a 100-minute TV add for an album of golden oldies.

The last few minutes take in succeeding decades as Pearl Harbor film cuts directly to a mushroom cloud, followed by a glance at Richard Nixon and then President Ford's inauguration as Al Jolson reissues the title song.

There is no narration although Philippe Mora is credited as writer and director.

"Brother, Can You Spare a Dime?" is a Dimension Pictures release rated PG.

Ice Bottle Ships

SEATTLE (UPI) — Ice packs and freezing weather have bottled up a flotilla of ships carrying $500 million worth of cargo for Alaska's Prudhoe Bay oil fields.

A seafit of 23 tugs and 47 barges has been trying for five weeks to get through an ice pack near Wainwright, some 260 miles southwest of the oil fields. Weather worsened Monday with a drop in temperature at Point Barrow to 26 degrees and a shift in the wind that began blowing the ice pack back toward shore, said CA Watkins, vice president of Crowley Maritime.

The flotilla has two or three more weeks "at the very best" to get to Prudhoe Bay with its 160,000 tons of cargo, said

Watkins. Winter weather will set in after that and ice and fog will worsen.

Cargo includes everything from nuts and bolts to a prefabricated river bridge, as well as trucks, bulldozers, cranes, arctic-qualified ambulances and giant modular units nearly 10 stories high.

The giant modules are needed to complete flow stations for separating crude oil from natural gas. Without them, completion and use of the trans-Alaska pipeline to Valdez could be delayed for several months.

Watkins said the big issue now was not only getting through but getting back out. Some barges will have to be left at Prudhoe Bay if they make it through at all.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT DIAL 669-2525

HAIR RAISING SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Malpractice suits are not only a problem for physicians. Now they threaten to get into the hair of barbers and beauticians.

So, a major insurance company here is offering a special policy covering almost all hair styling services. The new policy protects barbers and beauticians from malpractice claims arising from hair styling, shampooing, cutting and trimming, hair removal, tinting, coloring and bleaching, manicures and pedicures.

The Fireman's Fund American Insurance Company policy also covers work done during hair stylists' house calls, wigs that are damaged while in the insured's custody and liability protection against customers' slips and falls.

COSTLY CLASSES LIMA (UPI) — Peruvian students who go abroad for college educations and graduate studies may pay double for their education unless they agree to return to their country.

Recent regulations require a student and his parents to swear that he will return to Peru. The promise must be given before the government will approve a student's purchase of foreign currency for study abroad. Failure to keep the promise is subject to a fine equal to the amount of foreign currency bought.

Communicating With Half The Brain

By JAMES J. DOYLE
PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — The speechless half of the brain — normally the right half — may have more language ability than previously supposed, according to scientists working with a new optical system.

The "Z-lens" makes it possible for the first time to communicate with one half of the brain at a time for extended periods. It was developed by Dr. Eran Zaidel, 31, professor of psychology at California Institute of Technology.

He said the right hemisphere of the brain, previously thought capable of intuitive talents, spatial relationships, music and form — but not language — also apparently can control the vocabulary of a 14-year-old and the syntax ability of a 5-year-old.

Almost all language and speech centers of the brain are in the left hemisphere.

Zaidel's optical system permits extensive communication with either half of the brain. It has important medical application for persons who through accident or disease, such as stroke, have had the nerve trunk between the two halves severed, or suffered damage to the left side of the brain.

Zaidel's lens system permits pictures of printed words to be admitted only to one half of the brain through an individually fitted contact lens which moves with the eye. The eye looks through a focal tube and lens that is attached. A small half patch is fitted into the tube which blocks out the part of the eye's retina that feeds information into the other hemisphere.

Zaidel said he spent a year and a half working on his optical system based on earlier research in visual perception.

"It's kind of a stabilizer lens that blocks retinal images, the image the person is looking at," he said.

"We know now that the right hemisphere can support a lot of language, but it has to be trained in special ways. The Z-lens also can simulate any visual field defect. We can study what it means to see with only selected regions of the retina."

Because the right hemisphere cannot speak it was tested with words and pictures. A word was spoken out loud by an examiner, the word "horse," for instance.

Then the person's right hemisphere was shown pictures of four animals, one of them a horse. Both halves of the brain heard the word, but only the right one saw the picture.

The person readily pointed with his left hand to the horse. The left side is largely controlled by the right half of the brain.

Zaidel also found that different persons of vastly different intelligence and education levels scored about the same in right hemisphere language ability, and that fact alone opens up new ideas about intelligence, he said.

He said there is a prevalent theory that both sides of the brain develop with the same potential to about the age of five. At that time, language specializes to the left, and other functions to the right.

The new technique makes it possible for the first time to determine in detail, with visual tests, the abilities of the usually mute right half of the brain.

In 1946 J. Paul Getty, Tulsa oil billionaire and president of the Spartan Aircraft Co., announced the establishment of a trailer-home manufacturing plant. The company quickly became the largest trailer-home manufacturer in the world, turning out 20 homes per day for customers around the globe. The most famous was a custom-made house trailer with an elevated royal throne for the king of Saudi Arabia.

Fed May Rap Wallace For Profiting

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Under the Campaign Reform Act, George Wallace can earn a tidy sum that the old Corrupt Practices Act would have prohibited. Washington may send him a message.

The Alabama Governor is expected to hear from the Federal Elections Commission that the arrangement he has worked out with the Wallace campaign organization is not illegal—but also not very nice.

Wallace's own campaign organization asked for the advisory opinion and sent along a copy of the contract under which Wallace agrees to furnish his photograph, signature and minted likeness for use in books, watches or medallions. In return for exclusive rights to these, Wallace can collect up to $15,000 a year in royalties for 10 years.

There once was a ban on deals in which a candidate can benefit financially from his own campaign organization. But the provision from the old Corrupt Practices Act did not make it into the reform bill, although the Senate included it.

During a commission discussion of the Wallace campaign request for an advisory decision, commission vice chairman Neil Staebler warned that the group ought to at least say something about the scheme.

Attorney Okays Transfer For Welfare

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Attorney General John L. Hill Tuesday said welfare officials can transfer funds from other programs to avoid cutbacks in medical assistance to the needy.

Officials of the State Department of Public Welfare last week said spending on medical assistance would have to be cut $20 to $40 million to remain with the budget allocated by the 1975 Legislature.

Administrators asked Hill if lawmakers omission of a budget provision authorizing funds transfers between programs prohibited the agency from spending money allocated for other programs for medical assistance.

Hill said even though legislators eliminated earlier provisions in the state appropriations bill authorizing such transfers, the welfare board has that right under earlier statutes.

"We do not believe that the 1975 Appropriations Bill has the effect of altering the authority given the department to transfer funds by the statutes set out above since it is well settled that a general appropriations act cannot amend general law," Hill said.

Welfare authorities last week discussed reducing the number of days of hospitalization covered by Medicaid and canceling less crucial programs and spending that money on medical assistance.

Programs officials said they are considering abolishing include eyeglass, hearing aid and denture purchases for the poor and a medical screening program for welfare children.
