Board Okays Wage Hike

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

The Highland General Hospital Board of Managers Monday night unanimously approved an average 12 per cent wage hike for employees, effective Dec. 26.

When the proposal was presented to the board, Fred Neslage, board chairman, said, "I think we need to discuss that a little bit."

Robert Monogue, administrator, said the minimum wage requirements make up a considerable amount of the increase which totals $207,380 annually.

He said department head salaries were reviewed annually. Salaries at the hospital range from $1,990 per month for the administrator to the present minimum of $2.10 per hour. The minimum will be increased to $2.30 per hour on Jan. 1.

Neslage said the increases are based on a competitive job market. The minimum wage will account for $55,000 or about 25 per cent of the increase. Monogue said:

"We can't increase the minimum wage employees without raising their supervisors," Neslage said.

Monogue said $20,296 of the increase is for Social Security and retirement benefits.

"We have absolutely no control over that," Neslage said. Dr. R.M. Bellamy, board member, said he had studied the increases and had received some repercussions "from our employees."

"They all wanted a 12 per cent raise. We had a meeting and didn't give it to them. Couldn't afford to," Dr. Bellamy said.

"How does our pay schedule compare with Northwest Texas Hospital (in Amarillo)?" Dr. Bellamy inquired.

Monogue said they would probably compare more favorably with Borger — a nearby town with a hospital of comparable size.

that we provide service that is competent."

Officials said the hospital has 281 employees and payroll accounts for 60 per of the operating revenue.

"Hopefully, if all goes right, we will be operating in the black," Monogue said.

Neslage quickly took a pencil, computed some figures and announced that the present salary basis is $5,660 annually per employee, or about $470 monthly.

While figures show that Highland General is operating in the black and offsetting a deficit at the McLean facility, county taxpayers are paying off an $850,000 bond approved by voters in 1968 for the most recent addition to the hospital. Principal and interest totaled $96,900 in 1975 — paid from the hospital's interest and sinking fund (from county taxes).

The bonds and interest are scheduled to be paid in full by August 1978.

In a prepared statement to the board, Monogue said revenue and expenses depend entirely upon the number of patient days.

"We contemplate that we will provide 34,000 days of patient care in 1976 for Highland General Hospital, and 2,000 days of patient care in 1976 for McLean General Hospital."

"Using this as a base, we estimate that our net revenue will be $3,621,177.46 for Highland General and $203,714.95 for McLean General Hospital. The total expenses to be $3,466,640.27 for Highland General Hospital and $271,418.70 for McLean General Hospital," Monogue said.

He assured the board that the administration will make every effort to maintain our expenses in proportion to the charges, and at the same time provide the type of patient care expected of an accredited hospital.

Monogue announced that he will submit the budget to the commissioners court for approval.

The budget also contains projected capital expenses for 1976, 1977 and 1978 totaling $149,253.45.

Massive Spending No Solution

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe says massive government spending, far from bringing solutions to society's major problems, actually creates more dilemmas than it solves.

"I believe it is an indisputable fact that government at the local, state and federal levels cannot continue to grow at the rate it has in recent years," he said Monday. "According to the Bureau of Statistics one out of every six Americans is a government employee. The bureau has projected that one out of four new jobs during the next decade will be government jobs."

In a speech to the 10th Conference on Intergovernmental Relations and Regional Planning, the governor called for more efficient utilization of tax dollars and a plan to increase state employee productivity while decreasing their numbers.

Briscoe criticized government programs that create more bureaucrats but seem to remain ineffective no matter how much money they receive.

"We have been living in an era when the predominant thinking in government has been that any problem could be solved just by spending more money," he told the 1,000 assembled elected officials. "New York City is on the brink of financial disaster because it followed this theory, and the federal government in Washington is obviously headed down that same precarious path."

Briscoe said the federal government took 185 years to reach a $100 billion budget — reached in 1962 — but then promptly doubled the total by 1971, tripled it by 1975, and now it appears it will take only two years for the federal budget to hit $400 billion.

Meanwhile, he said, the Texas budget increased 250 per cent in the past 10 years and while the spending for education has increased five times since the 1966-67 biennium.

"I think it is obvious to us all that if this trend continues, financing our institutions of higher learning is going to break our state," he said. "As a matter of fact, half of the entire revenue of the state of Texas is allocated to education — to elementary, secondary and higher educational programs."

"We continue to invest more and more when most of the indicators appear to reflect in many instances we are getting less and less."

He cited a recent University of Texas study showing, despite the increasing amount of money spent on education, more than 21 per cent of the state's residents over age 18 experience difficulty copying with the simple literacy requirements of everyday life.

"Pouring additional money into our Texas educational systems without direction or accountability is not the answer," he said.

Summit Secrets Disclosed Soon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Details of a secret agreement of the United States and France signed at the end of the Rambouillet economic summit will be made public next week, administration officials say.

They disclosed the existence of the agreement on stabilizing currency exchange rates during Ford's flight back from France to Washington Monday.

But they said the United States did not back off its insistence on maintaining a "floating" exchange rate for the dollar, although France wanted a return to a fixed rate.

Ford made no statement to the group of government officials gathered to greet him on his return.

The President was to meet today with energy chief Frank Zarb to decide whether to sign the compromise energy bill worked out by House Senate conferences last week. Treasury Secretary William Simon said the decision is "a close call."

Ford planned to stay in Washington until Nov. 29 when he leaves for four days in China, during which, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said, he will meet with Mao Tse-tung.

In a short-sleeve news conference aboard Air Force One, Kissinger and Simon told reporters that "perhaps the most significant highlight" of the economic summit was the decision to establish a "mechanism" for daily consultation between the two nations on currency rates.

The agreement was mentioned only in broad terms in the joint declaration by the leaders of the six major industrial nations who met for three days in the 14th Century Rambouillet castle 30 miles outside of Paris.

Kissinger said Ford's meetings with leaders of France, Great Britain, West Germany, Italy and Japan took place "in a really unusually harmonious spirit."

Simon said the accord he signed Monday with French Finance Minister Jean Pierre Foucard would return exchange rates to a "more orderly and stable" monetary system by reducing erratic price movements and stimulating economies.

Under the new agreement, Simon said, the United States will continue to float the dollar and "there will be no parties — no agreements on bands of fluctuations for the dollar against any other currency."

City Officials Study Traffic Sign Feasibility

City officials are studying the feasibility of a proposed plan for replacement of stop and yield traffic signs at Pampa street intersections.

City Manager Mack Wofford said today he had received word from Allen J. Monroe, traffic safety coordinator at Amarillo College, that the college has established a new service program which is available to cities in the 26 county Texas Panhandle area through the Governor's Office of Traffic Safety.

Wofford explained the program is directed at reducing traffic accidents through participation by any political subdivision, public and private organizations in traffic planning and programming.

Pampa, the city manager said, has approximately 700 stop and yield signs at city street intersections.

He stated the program would furnish signs free through a state grant.

The city manager stated, however, that his office, the department of public works and city engineering office currently is conducting a survey and taking an inventory to determine the number of poles the city would have to purchase on which to mount the signs.

Under regulations set up by the Federal Highway Administration the new signs would have to be placed at least seven feet high on the poles.

"That would require a pole at least ten feet long," Wofford said. "This could run into an expenditure of around $8,500 just for new poles."

Wofford stated no decision had been reached regarding Pampa's participation in the program.

"We have to give it some more study," he said.

Impeachment Postponed

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The Texas Senate voted 16-10 today to postpone until Jan. 5 the impeachment trial of Duval County District Judge O.P. Carrillo on allegations he abuses his power and used county welfare funds to buy his family's groceries.

The delay is the third Senators have voted in the trial since the House on Aug. 4 approved 10 articles of impeachment against the South Texas judge, who is also awaiting sentencing on a federal tax conviction and under investigation by the Judicial Qualifications Commission.

Special prosecutor Terry Doyle and defense attorney Arthur Mitchell both said they were ready to proceed with Carrillo's trial today, but Sen. Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler, said it would be improper for the Senate to try Carrillo at the same time the Judicial Qualifications Commission is hearing testimony on an attempt to remove the judge from office.

Sen. Tom Creighton, D-Mineral Wells, opposed McKnight's motion to postpone the trial.

"Everybody here knows the issues, and both sides have announced they're ready to go to trial," Creighton said. "It's squarely on the Senate this issue is not going to go away, and I think it's our constitutional duty to give this man a speedy trial. Let's start the trial and finish it."

Senators are reluctant to take the case, however, and twice voted before today to put off hearing evidence. The Senate convened Sept. 3 and promptly postponed the trial until federal prosecutors tried Carrillo on the income tax charges.

Special State Prosecutor Terry Doyle presented six witnesses in two days of testimony Oct. 6-7 before senators voted 16-13 to delay the case again until Nov. 18.

Proponents of the postponement said Carrillo's attorneys needed time to prepare an appeal before formal sentencing on his federal income tax conviction and said the delay would give the State Judicial Qualifications Commission time to hold private hearings on Carrillo's fitness as a judge.

The judicial commission, which had been meeting in Corpus Christi, recessed last Thursday and apparently will remain recessed pending the will of the Senate.

A hearing on a motion for a new trial in the income tax fraud case of Carrillo and his brother, Ramiro, was delayed one week Monday in Corpus Christi.

An unfavorable decision by the district judge presiding at the private JQC hearings and by the state Supreme Court could remove Carrillo from his $33,400-a-year job as a district judge in Duval, Jim Hogg and Starr counties.

Carrillo has been suspended from actually presiding over court cases since the House vote Aug. 4 but has continued to draw his pay.

A final conviction in the federal case could lead to his disbarment and thus make him ineligible to serve as a judge as long as he lacked lawyer status.

Only a conviction by the Senate on the impeachment charges, however, could permanently bar Carrillo from later being re-elected as district judge.

The impeachment articles allege Carrillo used county welfare funds to buy groceries for his family, used county employees, equipment and material on his ranch, set up a sham store to purchase merchandise for the county from his family store and sent county checks to friends not employed by Duval county.

Special Prosecutor Terry Doyle of Port Arthur says he will need another two weeks to present the rest of the case against Carrillo.

Weather

The forecast calls for clear to partly cloudy skies today with a chance for showers later today. Colder temperatures are predicted for Wednesday with highs in the 40s accompanied by showers.

FBI Under Senate Fire

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The FBI, which has prided itself on a half of vigilance, today was under investigation by two congressional committees looking into the bureau's intelligence activities.

The activities under study included alleged "massive surveillance of law-abiding citizens."

The Senate Intelligence Committee was holding two days of public hearings and releasing some 50 documents on FBI activities.

A House committee called eight witnesses in a companion investigation of the agency.

Both committees, which had concentrated on the CIA, have been moving into intelligence activities of other agencies.

Spokesmen for the Senate committee said Monday its hearings would embrace 50 years of FBI surveillance methods and techniques, with emphasis on the last 20 years.

"There was massive surveillance of law-abiding American citizens," a spokesman said. He added that some practices have continued despite an official termination in 1971 of COINTEL — an FBI counterintelligence program which thrived during the Johnson and Nixon administrations.

It involved wiretaps, bugging, mail openings, burglaries and breaks in connection with dissidents, rioters, peace groups, certain political and racial organizations and other "targets," and monitoring of the communications of reporters and government officials.

The spokesmen said 20,000 documents were studied by Senate investigators on the COINTEL project alone.

A selection of 50 documents from this and other FBI activities will be made public.

But an unknown quantity of documentation on FBI burglaries, break-ins and other activities were until a few years ago kept in a secret dossier and destroyed at the end of every year, committee sources said.

It will be up to the committee of six Democrats and five Republicans to decide what recommendations to make for possible action by the Justice Department.

Inflation Worries

NEW YORK (UPI) — The American public is deeply worried about a high rate of inflation, but consumers' willingness to make major new purchases has increased dramatically in the past two months, the Harris Survey reported today.

"As a result, the Christmas shopping season promises to be a successful one," Louis Harris said.

From interviews with "a cross section of 1,519 households," the Harris Survey reported the number of people who said they might buy a new car during the next six months has risen to 20 per cent, up from 12 per cent a year ago.

A similar pattern was reported for intended purchases of color television sets, new homes and furniture. Sales in all these categories have been slumping over the past year.

The Harris Survey reported on consumers' buying plans in October, 1974, September and October of this year.

"One of the reasons for the current upsurge of consumer demand is that most people feel that the time to buy is now rather than later when prices will be higher," Harris said.

Writing Skills Decline In American Teenagers

DENVER (UPI) — Teenagers' writing skills have declined during the past five years, but younger students have shown slight improvement in their ability to express themselves, according to the National Assessment of Educational Progress.

In a report released Monday, the NAEP said teen-agers today have poorer writing skills than their counterparts in 1970, although they possess the same knowledge of the basics of writing: punctuation, capitalization, word usage and capitalization.

"What worries me and what ought to worry us all, what is really basic, is the strong evidence that coherence may be disappearing, that there is a decline in the ability to develop ideas," said W. Ross Winterowd, an English instructor at the University of Southern California.

Winterowd said the report revealed today's 13- and 17-year-olds use simpler words, write in a primer-like style and lack the ability to express their ideas concisely in writing.

The report, based on an evaluation of how 80,000 students answered three essay-type questions said 9-year-olds had improved their ability to put their ideas on paper when compared to 9-year-olds of 1970.

Elizabeth Cowan, director of English programs for the Modern Language Association, said the report showed the necessity of re-examining the importance of "writing rules."

"There is much writing which is respected and valued by our society which doesn't conform to the rules in the textbooks," she said. Roy H. Forbes, NAEP director, said the slight improvement among 9-year-olds was "encouraging" and indicated many younger pupils were moving toward a more sophisticated style of written expression.

And, in 1975 as in 1970, the report showed girls in all three age groups still write better essays than boys.

Death Homicide

MINEOLA, N.Y. (UPI) — A medical examiner has ruled 16-year-old Maryjane Dahl was a homicide victim. She died, he said, because someone deliberately disconnected a machine that was keeping her alive.

Maryjane died Nov. 2 at Nassau Hospital. She had been undergoing treatment for meningitis, complicated by Hodgkins disease and acute kidney failure.

Dr. Leslie Lukash, Nassau County medical examiner, said Maryjane probably would have died soon anyway. But in his report to the county district attorney's office, he said the immediate cause of death was "respiratory failure and cardiac arrest resulting from the disconnection of the respirator."

He called her death "homicidal" in the report.

The girl's mother, Mrs. Janet Sarvent of Upper Nyack, N.Y., and her aunt, Mrs. Jane Sheehan of Seiden, N.Y., visited the girl's private hospital room on the night she died. Both have been questioned in the matter.

Lawyer Sidney Siben, representing Maryjane's mother and aunt, repeated his claim that his clients are innocent in Maryjane's death. He suggested "carelessness and negligence" on the part of hospital personnel were responsible for her death.

County District Attorney Denis Dillon's office left open the possibility a grand jury would be empaneled to hear evidence in the case.

Lukash said the teen-ager was responding favorably to treatment for both the meningitis and Hodgkins disease. But he said he considered the girl to be in a terminal state because of "contributory conditions," including kidney failure, a heart infection and several small brain hemorrhages.

RUSSIA, CHINA ASSESS CHANGE

Detente test imminent

When President Ford announced the departure of three key administration executives in the so-called "Sunday morning massacre," the first shoe fell in the United States of America. Americans will be analyzing what happened and why for many weeks.

The second shoe fell abroad. From Peking to Paris and from Moscow to Manila, allies and enemies are sifting through nuances to determine whether there is a new U.S. policy toward detente and, if so, how it affects them.

The concern centers around the dismissal of Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger and the selection of Donald Rumsfeld to succeed him.

Mr. Schlesinger is a known quality, brilliant, forceful and a person with profound convictions about the need for a superior defense establishment. Cautious about detente, Mr. Schlesinger deals in specifics — numbers of weapons and their destructive power.

Mr. Rumsfeld also is brilliant and forceful, but in spite of his long tenure as a public servant nobody is certain exactly where he stands on detente. A conviction is growing that he may not be able to provide the necessary counterforce to Secretary of State Henry Kissinger who is the architect of the grand design and the spearpoint of accommodation with the Communists.

Members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization have expressed regret at the imminent departure of Mr. Schlesinger, whom they consider a known quality and staunch friend, as did South Korea and Israel. For the most part our allies are willing to accept President Ford's word that he believes in a strong defense and to follow the lead of the U.S.

Their long-range assessments will be guided by the short-range behavior of the Soviet Union and Communist China.

If the Soviet Union is tempted to test the will of the United States during the transitional period in the U.S. Department of Defense, Europeans as well as Americans will have new evidence of Soviet tactics. If the Soviet Union mistakes the changing of the Defense Department guard as a softer U.S. attitude toward detente and seeks to rush through a treaty advantageous to Moscow, that, too, will tell us something.

China also will be watching the unfolding drama in the United States with microscopic interest. If Peking sees a softening U.S. attitude toward detente, President Ford will encounter a cool diplomatic climate in Peking after Thanksgiving. China would like to see the United States return to the depths of the cold war with Russia and undoubtedly is nervous about the possibility of a softer U.S. attitude toward Russia, or smaller U.S. defense budgets.

Against this backdrop, it is plain that President Ford has to make it abundantly clear in the immediate weeks ahead that the U.S. concept of detente is unchanged — that a strong defense is an essential element in our peaceful intentions.

Running true to form

They laughed in Washington when Sen. William Proxmire asked for a copy of every form used by all government agencies.

If the Wisconsin Democrat had received the response he invited, he would have been flooded with more than one million forms devised by some 3,500 separate federal bureaucracies. According to a National Archives study, the paperwork they generate costs the economy an estimated $40 million a year to process.

Proxmire's concern for citizens smothered by the blanket of government paper is not unique in the capital. A Federal Reports Act adopted 30 years ago requires reduction in the amount and duplication of paperwork. Officials concede that it hasn't worked.

Now a Federal Paperwork Commission, a 14-member panel created by Congress, is preparing to study the paper problem and make recommendations on bringing it under control.

The project will get under way, presumably, as soon as the staff designs the necessary forms to record data turned up in the survey.

UNEXPECTED RETURN

CONSERVATIVE ADVOCATE

Bankruptcy Of Liberalism

By WILLIAM RUSHER

As a lifelong conservative, I might perhaps be expected to find the present acute disarray of American liberalism encouraging, even amusing. I wish I could, but I don't. Instead I find it rather sad, and fraught with danger.

These old adversaries of mine are in retreat, even collapse, on just about every front there is, and there is little reason to expect an upturn in their fortunes that will somehow revalidate their exploded premises and reconstitute them in their long leadership of the American society. As Meg Greenfield, a Washington "Post" editor and certainly no right-winger, remarked recently in a column in "Newsweek," the only real issue is what and who will come after them. "If you believe, as I do," she wrote, "that the string has pretty much run out on forty years of liberal government and theory, then it matters very much what is going to replace it."

Almost wherever you look, the fundamental assumptions of American liberal thought and the policies grounded on them are in ruins. No one can say the policies haven't been tried; they have been tried ad nauseum, and they have simply failed. Perhaps the most important and pernicious liberal assumption of all, in domestic terms, was the assumption that social improvements could best be brought about by expanding the power of government and imposing it on virtually every aspect of our national life. From the first administration of Franklin Roosevelt forward, liberals augmented the power of the federal government, and especially at the executive branch, without the slightest regard to conservative warnings that, like Frankenstein, they were creating a monster that would endanger us all. They would undoubtedly be doing it still, but for the fact that the presidency passed, in the fullness of time, into non-liberal hands, and liberals suddenly began to feel against their own necks the cold steel they had so blithely fashioned for others. In the past five or ten years, therefore, they have become outspoken foes of the Imperial Presidency, but the truth is they created it, and they know it.

Their second major assumption in the domestic sphere may yet prove even deadlier than the first. That was the assumption that, in economic matters, there would be no tomorrow; that two and two could be made to equal twenty-two forever. Liberals delighted in quoting Keynes' flippant response to Churchill's warning against the long-run dangers of leftist economics: "Mr. Churchill forgets that in the long run we shall all be dead." Well, Keynes and Churchill are indeed dead, but that "long run" Churchill was talking about has finally arrived, and we survivors are going to have to live with the ugly consequences of Lord Keynes.

New York City is bankrupt, with New York State and the equally liberal Commonwealth of Massachusetts not far behind. Keynes' own socialist Britain is on the ropes, with only the power to print money remaining to distinguish Harold Wilson's plight from Abe Beame's.

In foreign affairs since the end of World War II, the foundations and highest hopes of liberal policy have rested squarely on the United Nations. In vain did conservatives warn that this institution was from the start, in most respects, at best an exercise in self-deception: that the world's affairs ought not to be, and in fact could not be, conducted by an organization so sketchily related to the realities of power. Under liberal leadership, this country nevertheless went blithely on, putting more and more chips on that ludicrous gamble. Then came the influx of ex-colonial Third World nations, and their de facto alliance with the Communist bloc, so that today the UN is little more than an anti-

American and (still more explicitly) anti-Semitic propaganda machine. In the field of defense the story is the same: it was liberal policies that diminished this country's relative military might to a point where it can't today dependably defend its interests, at least short of World War III, anywhere between Beirut and Bangkok.

But conservatism's victory, achieved by default through the bankruptcy of liberalism, may be a cruelly Pyrrhic one of it now proves too late to save America. Luckily, that remains to be seen. (Copyright 1975)

Battin' Around

Exploration of Ideas

By C.R. BATTEN

The celebration of the 200th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence presents a wonderful opportunity to explore the ideas that led to the signing of that historic document more than 199 years ago.

But it is unfortunate that most of the publicity coming out of the bicentennial celebration is a glorification of war rather than the exploration of ideas. And most of the advertising we have seen is intended to sell miniature statuary commemorating some historic battle, silver ingots engraved with memorials to war, or collections of colorful stamps engraved with battle scenes. Such commercialism and idolatry of war heroes has already become rather tiresome.

"What do we mean by the revolution?" wrote John Adams in 1815. "The war with Britain? That was no part of the revolution; it was only the consequence of it. The revolution was in the minds and hearts of the people, and this effected from 1760 to 1775, before a drop of blood was shed at Lexington."

So it is gratifying that some corporations are taking advantage of this opportunity and are beginning to use the bicentennial theme in their corporate advertising. Continental Oil Co. reminds us that the colonists sought individual liberty, and explains that "freedom of enterprise has been tightly interwoven with our other basic freedoms." A Mobil ad says that "A free market... is still the best device for bringing about greater energy self-sufficiency."

It is natural that the oil industry should take the leadership in exploring the ideas of freedom, because the oil industry is the butt of so many regulations — quotas, price controls, allocations, and proposals for more of the same.

The central debate today is much the same as it was 200 years ago: What kind of social-economic governmental system will we have? Our forefathers envisioned a limited government with the maximum amount of individual freedom for all, and it seemed for a while that their dreams may be coming true.

They turned away from the feudalistic land system of England to a system of freeholdings. They turned away from the centrally-controlled mercantilism to the free market system first expounded by Adam Smith, but reconized in principle by many colonists long before publication of Smith's work in 1776.

In recent years, the revolution begun in the colonies has been in retreat, forced backward by the reactionaries who are returning us toward a mercantilistic controlled economy and toward feudalism.

For example, it is said that land and natural resources belong to all society (the King), not to individuals or to individuals banded together in the form of corporations. But property is the very foundation for all of our other freedoms. If the potter cannot own the clay from which he makes a pot, then he cannot own the pot; he cannot sell it or trade the produce of his own labor for food.

If the manufacturer cannot own the trees from which he makes pencils, then he cannot rightfully own the pencils. I could not have purchased the pencil used to write down some of these ideas, and I have lost my right of free speech. If a miner cannot own the ore he digs from the ground, then he cannot rightfully refine it and sell it to the manufacturer who makes printing presses; the newspaperman cannot rightfully own those presses; and the people have lost their right to a free press.

Corporations that convert basic natural resources to consumer and capital goods are therefore in the front lines of the attack against property, and in the war of ideas in man's eternal struggle between liberty and power.

The resource using corporations are in business to serve the consumer by providing him with goods at the lowest possible cost. If they are to meet that goal, they must be able to operate freely in a market system unencumbered by outside interventions.

First Wife's Photo Chills Second Wife's Passion

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am 39 and Len is 42. We've been married less than a year. My first husband died, and so did Len's first wife.

The problem: Len put two pictures in a large double frame—one of me and one of his first wife. He put these pictures in our bedroom on the dresser facing our bed, and he keeps looking at these pictures when we're in bed. (He's slightly cross-eyed so I can't tell whether he's looking at the picture of me or the one of his first wife.)

I feel very self-conscious with his first wife staring at me from the dresser, but I don't know how to tell him. I wouldn't mind so much if Len kept that picture in another room. Am I making myself clear?

How do I handle this?

INHIBITED IN INDIANA

DEAR INHIBITED: Level with Len. Tell him it's difficult to entertain romantic notions with that picture on the dresser. Len will have to make a choice between a dead wife on the dresser and a live one in bed.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a divorced woman, 23-years-old, with two small children. I met a 44-year-old man. He's a widower with a 15-year-old daughter living at home. He wants to marry me and take care of me and my children.

He has offered me a lovely home, a new car and lots of new clothes. He says he loves me. I told him I wasn't sure I loved him because he's my father's age, but he told me that I would learn to love him.

Abby, can a person "learn" to love somebody? It is hard to pass up everything he's offering me, but I'm afraid my mom and dad won't think he's right for me because he's kind of bald, wears glasses and is not much to look at.

Also, I'm afraid everyone will notice the difference in our ages, and they'll think I married him for his money.

Another thing: His daughter acts kind of cool to me. I'm afraid she might think I am taking her father away from her but I swear I'm not.

I had such a bad marriage that this offer is tempting. What should I do?

TEMPTED

DEAR TEMPTED: When in doubt, do nothing. You have too many fears and doubts about this man to marry him. Go slowly, dear.

And in answer to your question: No, I don't think a person can "learn" to love somebody. Perhaps in time, you could learn to appreciate his generosity, but that's not love.

Humphrey Says Farmers Suffer Like New York

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., says American farmers have suffered financial setbacks which compare with the fiscal problems of New York City but which have not received the same widespread publicity.

"Everyone is well aware of the financial crisis of our cities," Humphrey said in an address to the National Milk Producers Federation. "But how many people are aware of the loss Minnesota dairy farmers suffered just on the value of their herds?"

Humphrey said an August, 1973, survey of dairy cattle in his home state estimated their average value was $590, but in two years the value declined to $355.

"With a drop in asset value like that, the bankers are about as likely to extend credit as they are to buy New York City bonds," he said.

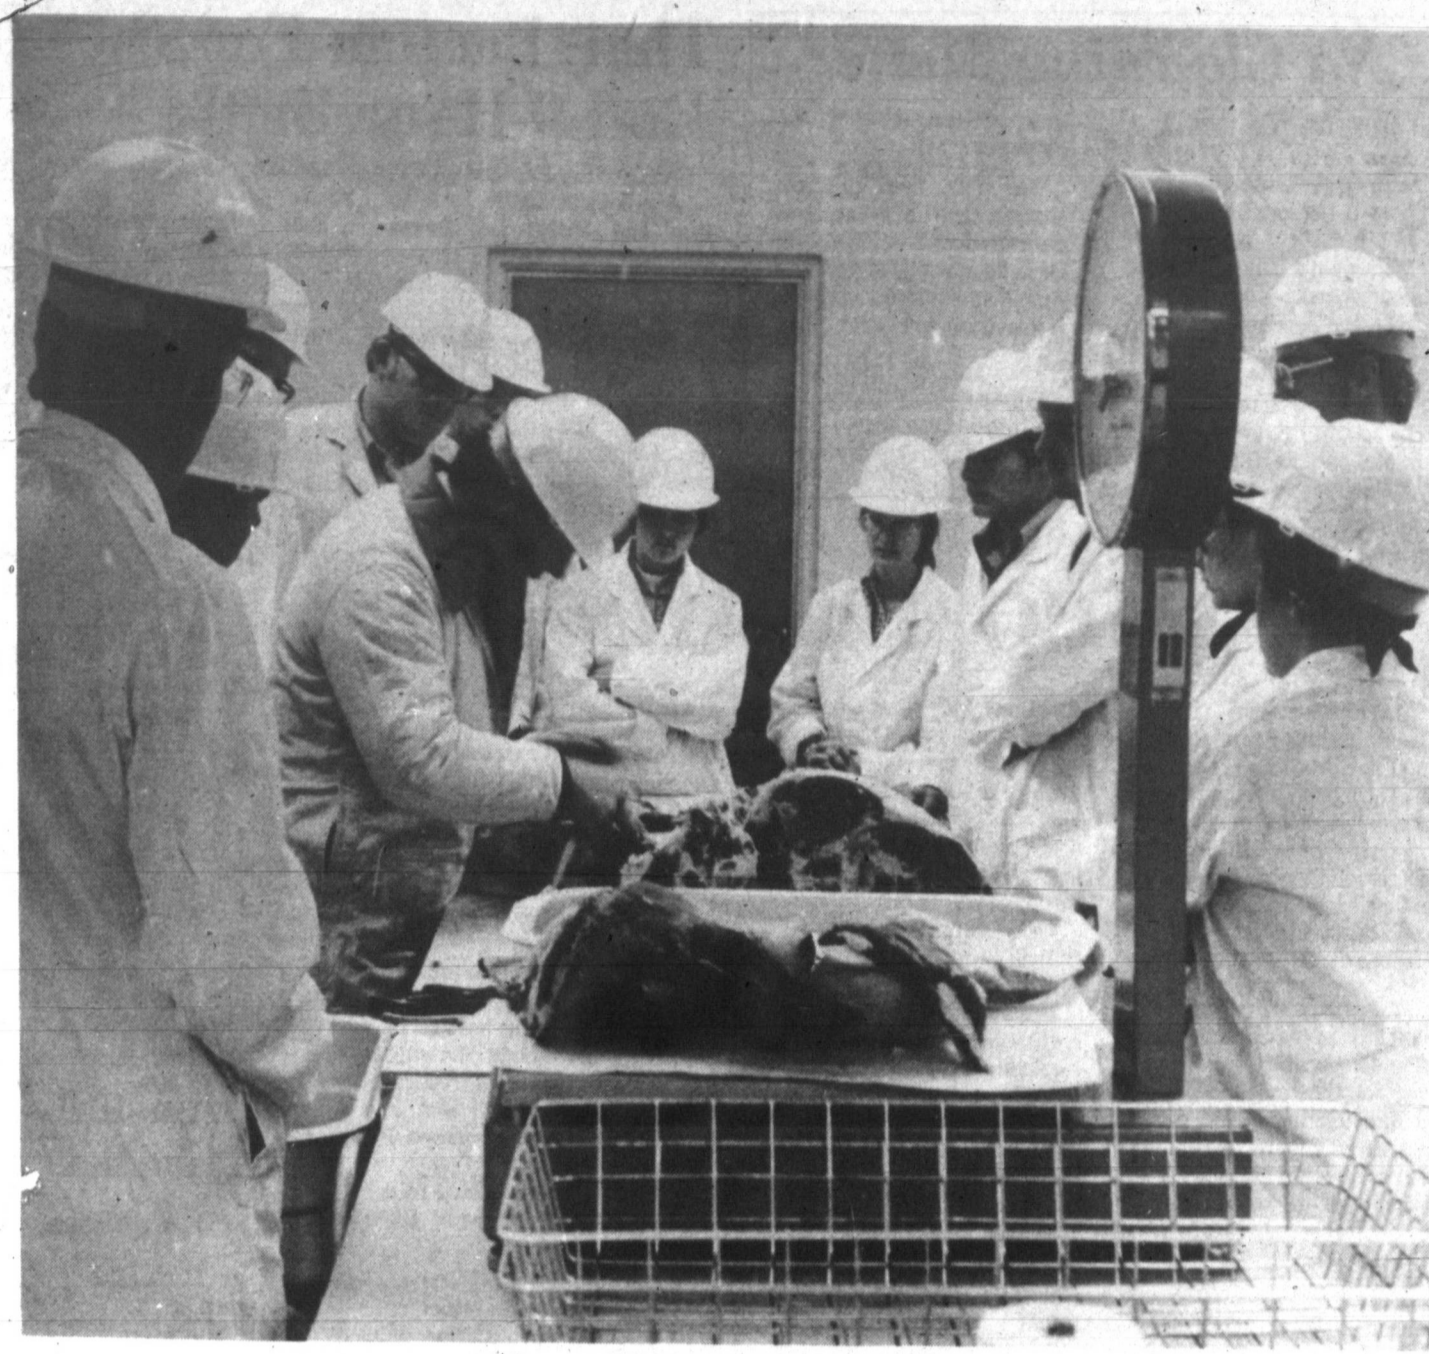

Humphrey said a number of factors have troubled farmers in recent years, including attempts to restrict their marketing cooperatives.

"The list includes soaring production costs, expanded imports and depressed prices. And government policies have ignored the realities of the industry while attacks were launched on the basic institutions you have built to market your product."

"The agriculture marketing cooperative of today has given the farmer the ability to compete in the marketplace," Humphrey said. "In a sense, the cooperative has given the farmer a more complete operation, from his production on the farm to the marketing that is done by his cooperative."

Humphrey said the government should establish a balanced farm policy offering income protection for farmers and assurances of reasonable prices and adequate supplies for consumers.

In a news conference before his speech, Humphrey said he will stay out of the Democratic presidential sweepstakes but would be open to a draft at the national convention. He also said Alabama Gov. George Wallace will have substantial support at the convention but will not be on the national ticket.

New Meat Lab at WT

West Texas State University will open its new meat lab Friday. The lab will process 7,000 to 8,000 pounds of meat yearly. The meat which comes from the $221,000 addition to the campus is offered for sale to WT faculty and staff. The lab will be used primarily for undergraduate and graduate instruction in meat science. Students work on beef, pork and lamb carcasses in the four classes offered.

PUC Rejects Proposal To List Rate Increases

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The Texas Public Utilities Commission, meeting for the first time with power company spokesmen, rejected a proposal requiring the firms to send rate increase schedules to consumers.

The action came Monday in a PUC public hearing to approve rules of procedure for the state agency created by the 1975 legislature.

"There are very few companies I know of that don't send you recipes, exhortations on free enterprise and all sorts of things," said Jack Hopper of Austin, a private utility rate consultant. "I don't see why they couldn't send you a rate schedule."

Dallas attorney Jon Dee Lawrence, representing Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., said requiring utility companies to send the rate schedules would interfere with their billing cycles if they are required to notify consumers 35 days prior to the effective date of the rate change. He said most customers would not understand the notices anyway because the rate increases would not be uniform.

"Normally, other states have that information available in business offices," he said.

Commissioner George Cowden called the proposed requirement "burdensome."

"Why is it burdensome to inform them of rate increases?" asked Commissioner Alan Erwin.

Abilene attorney Bob Dickinson, representing West Texas Utility Co., said his firm sends its monthly bills to customers on postcards with no envelopes to insert rate increase data.

Irving City Attorney Don Rorschach said power companies should be required to let consumers know about rate increases, but said customers should have to obtain detailed information on increases themselves.

"I'm still concerned that the customer is not going to be notified that there is going to be a utility rate increase," Rorschach said. "If he is really interested, he's going to take the time to get that information, otherwise he's had his chance."

Hearst Attorneys Win Delay

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Patricia Hearst's attorneys, winning a six-week delay in her bank robbery trial, are confident her mental condition will have improved enough during the extra time that they can properly prepare her defense.

"We won," defense attorney Albert Johnson said Monday after U.S. District Judge Oliver Carter agreed during a closed-door meeting to postpone the trial from Dec. 15 to Jan. 26.

"It's the case of the century," another defense lawyer, John Kleines, told newsmen. "All kinds of new laws are going to come out of this. The courts are going to have to face up to the legal aspects of duress."

Johnson said after the one-hour 20-minute meeting with Carter: "Her condition has improved and we will be able to provide an adequate defense on that date." His client did not attend the conference.

The defense legal team had said Miss Hearst was on the edge of a nervous breakdown as a result of her 19 months with the Symbionese Liberation Army which abducted her Feb. 4, 1974.

The newspaper heiress' lawyers said they needed more time to prepare her defense than was permitted under the new federal speedy trial act which required a defendant to be put on trial within 90 days of arrest.

Miss Hearst, 21, daughter of San Francisco Examiner president Randolph Hearst, underwent two months of psychiatric evaluation in San Mateo County Jail in nearby Redwood City before Carter ruled she was mentally competent to stand trial.

U.S. Attorney James Browning Jr. did not oppose the trial delay because of a decision by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last week in the case of Sara Jane Moore, 45, accused of trying to kill President Ford.

The appellate court said the 90-day federal trial requirement should not include time spent during a psychiatric evaluation.

Man Convicted of Rape

By ANNA BURCHELL, Pampa News Staff

The state will seek a 20-year penitentiary sentence and a $10,000 fine today in a child rape case in which a 20-year-old man is charged with raping his 2 1/2-year-old step daughter.

Larry Smith, 20, was convicted Monday of the charge after he pleaded guilty.

He told the 31st District Court jury that he had no idea why he did it.

"I wish I did," Smith told his court-appointed attorney, Robert D. McPherson of Pampa. McPherson is seeking probation for his client.

The alleged incident occurred Aug. 12, 1975 in Wheeler County and was moved to Gray County on a change of venue.

Bond for Smith was set at $25,000, and he has been in jail in Wheeler since Aug. 13.

Smith signed a statement admitting the offense at the time it was investigated on Aug. 13. The statement was submitted as evidence.

He and his wife, Peggy, were married July 19, and they lived together until Aug. 13. She said her divorce from Smith was granted a week ago.

In relating the events, the mother, now Peggy Miller since her name was restored, said she went to work that day and left her husband with the child.

When she came home she testified that Smith said the daughter fell of the steps.

The child, according to testimony, told the mother, grandfather and the police chief what had happened.

Under cross examination, Ms. Miller said she considered Smith a good father until this happened. She testified that she now "hates" him.

In testifying in his own defense, Smith said: "The whole business made me sick and ashamed of myself."

Guy Hardin, district attorney, asked Smith why he did not go to work that day. He replied that he was tired because he had driven home from Mineral Wells the night before.

"She (the wife) went to work. Why didn't you?" Hardin inquired.

"I was tired," Smith replied. "Not too tired to rape a two-year-old kid," Hardin responded.

In response to the defendant's request for probation, Hardin said: "How do we know this wouldn't happen again?"

"Because I've given you my word... I was not out of my head..." Smith said.

Smith's father, Larry Smith of Mineral Wells, said his son's mother had a stroke when he was 13 months old.

"Do you have any inkling as to why this happened?" McPherson asked.

"No," the father responded. "Only I don't feel that he had the right supervision. We couldn't hire anyone."

The father, Smith's older brother and sister told the court that they believed Smith could live up to the terms of probation.

The father said his son, his wife and the child were in Mineral Wells the day before the incident occurred.

"They seemed to be a happily married family," he said. Under examination, he said he was shocked when he heard it.

The brother said he would give Smith a job "tomorrow" if he receives probation.

He said he attended the wedding reception in July and was not aware of any problems in the marriage.

In earlier testimony, Dr. Larry Barber of Wheeler said he examined the child after the incident and found penetration was attempted.

Wheeler Police Chief Keith Miller testified in regard to the investigation.

Smith said he moved to Wheeler in January, and met his former wife while she was working in a local restaurant.

Final arguments in the case are scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m. today when the jury reconvenes. Smith, according to testimony, has no prior convictions.

Moore Trial Set for Dec.

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Sara Jane Moore, a psychiatrist said, was "keenly aware of what it is all about." A federal judge agreed and set Dec. 15 for the start of her trial on a charge of trying to kill President Ford.

U.S. District Judge Samuel Conti ruled Monday Miss Moore, 45, a former FBI informer, was mentally competent to stand trial. He agreed with four psychiatrists and two psychologists that her mind is not so disordered as to hinder her defense.

However, Conti called a hearing for this afternoon to allow her attorneys to plead for a delay. Pretrial motions will be argued Nov. 26.

Dr. William Menninger, one of the psychiatrists, said Miss Moore had been hospitalized seven times for mental treatment in the past 25 years and in 1954 she was labeled "psychotic" at Bellevue Hospital in New York City.

But, he said, Miss Moore was "keenly aware of what it is all about — she does recognize the seriousness of the charges against her."

The mother of a 9-year-old son was accused of firing a pistol at Ford Sept. 22 as he emerged from a downtown San Francisco hotel. The bullet missed the President.

Miss Moore underwent two months of psychiatric evaluation at the federal correctional facility in San Diego.

Her attorneys successfully argued before the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that the new federal speedy trial act — requiring trial within 90 days of arrest — should not include time spent during a psychiatric evaluation.

When he announced his ruling, she smiled broadly.

4-H Club Plans Party

Three new officers were elected at the Nov. 10 meeting of the Grandview and Hopkins 4-H Club.

New vice president is Marshall Hopkins, Monte Hopkins and Dane Eakins were elected secretary and council delegate respectively. No change was made in the president and reporter slots.

The club plans a Christmas party in December.

Highway Patrol Welcomes Probe

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — The director of the Texas Department of Public Safety, informed of reports of a federal investigation of his department, says occasional allegations of officer misconduct can be expected in an agency making up to a million arrests a year.

Col. Wilson Speir said Monday he welcomed the investigation by federal officials into allegations of beatings, armed threats and violations of civil rights by North Texas narcotics agents.

"It's very possible they could find something that didn't come to our attention because maybe someone would talk to a federal officer who would not talk to my investigators," Speir said, responding to Dallas Times Herald reports of a federal investigation underway.

"In the Department of Public Safety, we have something like a million arrests annually and from time to time we do have allegations of misconduct and impropriety. We have 2,400 commissioned officers and I think I'd be less than honest with you if I said we were all perfect — because we're not."

"But we welcome the federal people to take a look at allegations of misconduct. This (federal investigation) isn't unusual in our department at all and it is also my understanding in these allegations they're talking about things that happened two or three years ago."

Speir said he had not read the Times-Herald story. "Sometimes our people are wrong, but we certainly don't condone it," he said. "Often the person who makes the allegation is looking for a defense, but sometimes that is not the case."

Only Ford Can Save NY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Even supporters acknowledge that probably only President Ford can save the bill to save New York City from bankruptcy — the bill he has vowed to veto.

The measure was to come before the House today, but its Democratic sponsors, even though they have cut it down to Republican specifications, said they needed some Republican votes to pass it.

New York Gov. Hugh Carey, a former Brooklyn congressman, was coming to lobby among his old colleagues.

Awaiting a signal from Ford, the New York state legislature appeared stalled on passing the heavy new taxes Carey has called for to help the city and the state meet their financial crises.

House debate on the federal loan guarantee was abruptly postponed Monday in hopes that Ford upon his return from the European economic conference would say what sort of a bill he could support.

There was no public statement from Ford on his return Monday evening, but there were reports an announcement was being readied for today.

Carey, in laying out his rescue plan for higher taxes — a state employe wage freeze and a moratorium and stretchout of debt repayment — last week said he had encouragement from Washington.

The bill would provide $3 billion in federally guaranteed loans to help New York City avoid defaulting early in December on its debts.

Even if it passes the House, the bill must overcome a potential filibuster in the Senate before Congress adjourns this week for Thanksgiving.

Facing those obstacles, only "a sign from the President" can save the bill, said a spokesman for House Republican leader John Rhodes of Arizona. Rhodes is one of the few Republicans among the 145 in the House who publicly backs the bill in view of Ford's threatened veto. Ford prefers an "orderly" bankruptcy.

Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., chairman of the House Banking Committee, said the bill "is capable of rising again from the dead." He estimated there were 170 votes for it among the 289 in the House.

With normal absenteeism, it takes 210 votes to pass a bill "and 170 ain't 210," Reuss said.

Cleaver Returns to US

PARIS (UPI) — One-time Black Panther leader Eldridge Cleaver says his changed perspective on America prompted his decision to return to the United States and face a possible prison sentence.

The 40-year-old Cleaver, who fled the United States seven years ago, said he and his wife Kathleen would fly today to New York, where he will surrender to U.S. authorities.

'Plenty Worried' Judge Stalls Fromme Trial

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — The trial of Lynette Fromme on a charge of attempting to assassinate President Ford stalled today as a "plenty worried" judge reviewed a defense motion for dismissal or a mistrial.

If U.S. District Judge Thomas MacBride dismissed the case, the 27-year-old apostle of convicted mass murderer Charles Manson would go free. If he declared a mistrial, the case would be retried.

Defense attorney John Virga accused the prosecution Monday of "willfully and intentionally suppressing evidence" which he said could exonerate Miss Fromme. He moved for dismissal or mistrial.

"I'm plenty worried," MacBride said. "I'm quite concerned."

MacBride ordered a recess until Wednesday when he will rule on Virga's motion.

Virga charged that assistant U.S. Attorney Donald Heller suppressed a statement made by James Damir to police in which he quoted Miss Fromme as saying immediately after she thrust a .45-caliber automatic at Ford, "It's not loaded anyway, it's not loaded anyway."

Heller said that since making the statement Damir had changed his mind in talking to FBI agents and now quoted Miss Fromme as saying, "It didn't go off anyway, what are you worrying about?"

Because of this switch, Heller said, he had not thought the original statement of great value. Damir told the court he now was confused over exactly what she said.

Virga said that, had he known about Damir's first statement, he could have cross-examined prosecution witnesses as to whether they heard such a remark.

MacBride had ordered prosecutors at the outset to turn over to Virga all "exculpatory evidence" that would tend to clear Miss Fromme. Virga said he did not get Damir's statement until after the prosecution rested its case Friday.

"I certainly would look on that (Damir's statement) as exculpatory evidence," MacBride said.

The gun carried by Miss Fromme had four bullets in the ammunition clip but none in the firing chamber. MacBride said "one of the main issues" was whether she knew the chamber was empty or intended it to contain a bullet.

"That's what the case is all about," MacBride told Heller in a disgruntled tone.

VIASA, Venezuela's international airline, carried 64,000 passengers in August, a new record for the carrier.

sources indicated the committee chairman, Warren Christopher, talked with Levi Monday to fill him in on the committee's preliminary discussions.

However, neither ABA nor Justice Department spokesmen would confirm this.

The remaining eight justices paid formal tribute to their 77-year-old colleague Monday while Douglas lay on a hospital bed in Portland, Ore., preparing to resume a program of physical rehabilitation.

Stanton O. Berg, member of a panel of seven independent experts who re-fired Sirhan's gun and examined bullet fragments taken from Kennedy's body, said in Superior Court Monday the odds were "up around 99 per cent" that the fatal bullet came from Sirhan's gun.

However, attorney Vincent Bugliosi said the question about the second-gun assassination theory was "still open" after Berg conceded there was a "very slim possibility" a second gun was used.

Bugliosi, the former deputy district attorney who prosecuted Charles Manson in the Sharon Tate murders and is now in private practice, was representing Paul Schrade.

Schrade, a former union official, was one of those wounded in the gunfire surrounding the assassination at the Ambassador Hotel in 1968.

In its unanimous joint report last month, the panel reached two principal findings: — There was no substantive evidence to support the theory that a "second gun" was fired.

— At the same time, there was not sufficient evidence to say positively the bullets taken from Kennedy's body and wounded bystanders came from Sirhan's gun.

Because of the questions raised by the second conclusion, County Judge Robert Wenke asked the seven experts to return to explain their findings.

Anonymous Man Fails To Prevent Publishing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An anonymous plaintiff attempted to prevent the Senate Intelligence Committee from publishing its report on CIA assassination plots but was rebuffed by a U.S. district judge.

The decision was appealed.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals agreed to hold a hearing today on the decision by Judge Gerhard Gessel.

The request for a temporary restraining order was submitted by a plaintiff who said his life would be endangered by unnamed persons seeking revenge. The Washington Post said the plaintiff was Dr. Sidney Gottlieb, retired chief of the CIA's technical services division and at one time in charge of stocks of toxins and poisons available for assassinations.

Gessel said, "The court has no power of any kind to edit or censor Congressional reports."

"The public interest greatly outweighs any private interest of the individual," the judge said.

He said there was "a real possibility of physical harm to the plaintiff if his name is reported — physical violence against himself, or physical retribution against his family."

Gessel described the plaintiff as a "former officer of the CIA ... a retired GSIA ... a man of limited policy or executive function ... and a central figure in the report."

No Clowning Matter

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — A man who bit into a hamburger and broke a tooth filed a personal injury suit Monday against McDonald's Inc. in state district court.

Lester A. Fowler claimed he broke his tooth "thereby incurring severe pain" while eating a "Quarter Pounder" he bought last January from a McDonald's restaurant.

Fowler is seeking an unspecified award for damages.

The suit filed in 200th District Court also names as defendants Wilson & Co., of Oklahoma City, and its Austin agent, Anderson Meat & Provision, Inc.

The suit contends the "Quarter Pounder" contained a "defect that rendered it unreasonably dangerous."

condition with four machines supporting him. Franco, 82, suffered the latest in an avalanche of complications at 1:30 a.m. A medical bulletin 12 hours later said the hemorrhaging "has been submitted to medical treatment."

"His condition returns to critical," the medical bulletin said.

The setback, marking the eighth crisis in his 32-day survival battle, appeared with bleeding through the mouth. It was symptomatic of another rupture of the stitches holding together the remnant of his stomach.

Franco's surgeons resorted quickly to emergency surgery last Friday to patch up the first rupture. It was the Franco's third life-saving operation and pushed him to the brink of death.

A spokesman at La Paz hospital said Franco's low blood pressure and temperature precluded immediate surgery this time. His stomach wall was said to be almost too flimsy to be resewn again.

The 1:30 p.m. (7:30 a.m. EST) medical bulletin, the 54th of Franco's ordeal, said: "During the early morning, the post-operative course of his excellency has been interrupted by a new and serious intermittent digestive hemorrhage which has been submitted to medical treatment."

"His condition returns to critical,"

Members of Franco's family, top aides and most of his 32 doctors rushed to the hospital in the middle of the night. His wife, Carmen, remained at the El Pardo palace, praying.

"Much grief, much sorrow—I cannot say more," Franco's younger sister Pilar told reporters in the lobby of the hospital.

Meanwhile, Franco's chosen successor and acting chief of state, Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon, faced the problem of checking political conflict in Spain after Franco's death.

Jose Antonio Giron, a powerful former cabinet minister and one of Franco's staunchest backers, Monday came out against any significant changes in the post-Franco period.

Giron's remarks amounted to a warning to the prince against yielding to demands from leftists and centrists for democratic reforms. Juan Carlos is known to be willing to preside over orderly change through constitutional reform.

How he balances reforms against the resistance of pro-Franco conservatives like Giron will determine not only his success as a leader but also whether Spain's political divisions become violent.

Hypertension Film, Checks At Two Firms

"What Goes Up," a film on hypertension (high blood pressure), was shown to workers at Texaco, Inc., and Transwestern Pipeline Co. recently.

Jean Johnson, R.N. and chairperson of the Gray County Heart Division public education committee, presented the programs and, assisted by four volunteer nurses, checked the blood pressures of 100 employees of the two firms.

Hypertension, unchecked, can lead to heart attack, stroke or kidney failure. Blacks are particularly susceptible to high blood pressure, with twice the degree of incidence as whites.

The film and testing were sponsored by the Texas Affiliate, Inc., of the American Heart Association.

Pressure Builds For Woman Court Nominee

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There is continuing pressure for President Ford to nominate a woman to the Supreme Court.

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield said Monday, "The appointment of a qualified woman is long, long overdue."

The latest vacancy on the Supreme Court was created when Justice William Douglas retired because of declining health.

The National Women's Political Caucus submitted 16 names of women — most of them Democrats — for Ford's consideration. A subgroup, the caucus' Republican task force, submitted four names, including that of Housing Secretary Carla Hills.

But a list of possible nominees which Attorney General Edward Levi gave to a committee of the American Bar Association for a report on their professional qualifications contains only men.

The ABA committee met during the weekend, and an ABA spokesman said it would continue researching the candidates over the next several days.

Sources indicated the committee chairman, Warren Christopher, talked with Levi Monday to fill him in on the committee's preliminary discussions.

However, neither ABA nor Justice Department spokesmen would confirm this.

The remaining eight justices paid formal tribute to their 77-year-old colleague Monday while Douglas lay on a hospital bed in Portland, Ore., preparing to resume a program of physical rehabilitation.

Stanton O. Berg, member of a panel of seven independent experts who re-fired Sirhan's gun and examined bullet fragments taken from Kennedy's body, said in Superior Court Monday the odds were "up around 99 per cent" that the fatal bullet came from Sirhan's gun.

However, attorney Vincent Bugliosi said the question about the second-gun assassination theory was "still open" after Berg conceded there was a "very slim possibility" a second gun was used.

Bugliosi, the former deputy district attorney who prosecuted Charles Manson in the Sharon Tate murders and is now in private practice, was representing Paul Schrade.

Schrade, a former union official, was one of those wounded in the gunfire surrounding the assassination at the Ambassador Hotel in 1968.

In its unanimous joint report last month, the panel reached two principal findings: — There was no substantive evidence to support the theory that a "second gun" was fired.

— At the same time, there was not sufficient evidence to say positively the bullets taken from Kennedy's body and wounded bystanders came from Sirhan's gun.

Because of the questions raised by the second conclusion, County Judge Robert Wenke asked the seven experts to return to explain their findings.

Anonymous Man Fails To Prevent Publishing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An anonymous plaintiff attempted to prevent the Senate Intelligence Committee from publishing its report on CIA assassination plots but was rebuffed by a U.S. district judge.

The decision was appealed.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals agreed to hold a hearing today on the decision by Judge Gerhard Gessel.

The request for a temporary restraining order was submitted by a plaintiff who said his life would be endangered by unnamed persons seeking revenge. The Washington Post said the plaintiff was Dr. Sidney Gottlieb, retired chief of the CIA's technical services division and at one time in charge of stocks of toxins and poisons available for assassinations.

Gessel said, "The court has no power of any kind to edit or censor Congressional reports."

"The public interest greatly outweighs any private interest of the individual," the judge said.

He said there was "a real possibility of physical harm to the plaintiff if his name is reported — physical violence against himself, or physical retribution against his family."

Gessel described the plaintiff as a "former officer of the CIA ... a retired GSIA ... a man of limited policy or executive function ... and a central figure in the report."

Burglaries On Blotter At Pampa PD

A burglary and an attempted burglary were reported Monday to the Pampa Police Department.

The Carver Community Center, 408 Crawford, was entered through a broken window and half a box of candy bars was missing.

An attempted burglary at Ideal No. 2 was reported. Someone reportedly tried to gain entry through an exhaust vent on the eastside of the roof.

In other police news, Patrolman Norman Rushing served as a judge for Boy Scouts in a recent first aid contest at the National Guard Armory.

Two-Gun Theory Open

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The bullet that killed Robert Kennedy most likely came from Sirhan Sirhan's gun and further ballistics tests would not help resolve the so-called "second gun" debate, a forensic expert says.

Stanton O. Berg, member of a panel of seven independent experts who re-fired Sirhan's gun and examined bullet fragments taken from Kennedy's body, said in Superior Court Monday the odds were "up around 99 per cent" that the fatal bullet came from Sirhan's gun.

Aoudad Sheep Hide in Historical Canyon

Successful Hunter

Byron Kibby of Pampa bagged a sizeable aoudad sheep on opening day (Saturday). The creature was estimated at 250 pounds by a rancher neighboring the land on which Kibby killed his quarry. The horn length was measured by Kibby at 30 inches, circumference at the base was 12 inches. The ram was estimated to be about four years old.

Byron Kibby spent Saturday night counting sheep but it didn't help him get rested. He couldn't get past one—the big aoudad ram he shot at 8:30 a.m. Saturday less than a mile from camp and spent until 4 p.m. wrestling up and down walls, over rocks and through tall, tough, grabbing grass.

"It was tough going," Kibby admitted. "I don't remember ever being so tired. We cut him in two but the loads still were so heavy that sometimes we could only make it 10 or 12 feet before stopping to rest. You don't want to drag the hair off him if you're going to make a trophy out of him."

And Kibby bagged a trophy specimen. A rancher neighboring the spread where Kibby got his sheep estimated the animal's dressed weight at 250 pounds. Kibby measured the length of the horns at 30 inches. Measurements on 50 of the 72 sheep bagged in 1974 averaged 22.7 inches for rams horn length and 16.2 inches for ewes.

The world record horn measurement is 36 5/8 inches taken in 1973 from Palo Duro Canyon.

Aoudads were introduced in the Texas canyon in 1957. They are native to North Africa.

From the original 44 released in Palo Duro in December 1957 and February 1958, aoudad numbers have grown to between 1,200 and 1,300, according to David Dvorak of Canyon, project biologist with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Dvorak said that the actual count this year was 647, but "of course, that isn't all of them. There could be between 1,200 and 1,300, figuring that we counted half of them."

He said the number could be even higher since the sheep blend so well with the country and there are so many protected areas for hiding in the large canyon.

Aoudad hunting season opened Saturday and will close Friday. This year there were 244 permits issued to ranchers who own the land in the hunting areas.

"They can do with them whatever they wish," Dvorak said of the ranchers who get the permits.

Most of them sell the permits to hunters for whatever the market will bear.

There were 203 permits issued for the 1974 season, but only 72 sheep were bagged.

Dvorak had no estimate on the number killed Saturday and Sunday, when he spoke to The News on Monday.

Parks and Wildlife Department officials weighed 39 rams and 11 ewes in 1974. Rams averaged 140.5 pounds and ewes weighed 81.9 pounds. The largest horn measured for that season was 32.5 inches from a ram taken in Randall County.

All of Palo Duro Canyon is picturesque and it was a favorite spot for buffalo herds and the Indians that depended upon them. But the portion of the canyon where Kibby has hunted the sheep each of the past three years is especially rich in history.

Outside Silverton, not far from Quitaque, on land now owned by Snooks Baird, there is a spring fed creek which can be followed up the canyon to a little falls and a deep pool in the rock.

"When I was a kid," Baird told Kibby, "there were two things that I wanted—a horse and a swimming pool."

He has several horses now. He needs them to get into the canyon areas of his ranch that can't be gotten to in vehicles. And it's the only way, other than walking, to get to his "swimming pool" under the little falls.

The area of the canyon where Kibby shot his ram is known as the Valley of Tears. It is where Comanche Indians would take their captives and trade them, often separating mothers and children.

The area also was used by Comanches. They met and traded with Indians there. There was plenty of good fresh water, grass for grazing, and plenty of hiding places for those who had reason to hide.

From the camp on the canyon's rim, Kibby had hiked down, across the canyon floor and part way up the opposite canyon wall when he spotted a small herd of aoudads—they usually associate in small family groups consisting of an adult male and female and their offspring of various ages.

Kibby selected his quarry and fired. Too fast. He missed. More careful aim. Another shot. A clean hit. The 30.06 slug entered the left shoulder and dropped the ram. Kibby estimated the distance at about 100 yards.

In 1974 he hunted with no success. In 1973 he got one, but it was small.

Hunting with Kibby this year are his father-in-law, Louis Wright, and Louis Hausman, both from Bastrop. The party purchased three permits. As the week-long season wears on, it will not become any easier to find the aoudads. The tawny brown creatures blend in with countryside and if danger threatens, they remain motionless rather than running.

Palo Duro Protection

The lush valley floor once was a favorite grazing spot for buffalo herds. Indians and Comanches used this part of the canyon often because of the supply of fresh water. Now aoudad sheep find the canyon ideal to their way of life. This section is part of what was known as the Valley of Tears. It is located near Silverton and Quitaque. (Pampa News photo)

Hunting Can Be Hazard to Health

They're here — those crisp, cool days which mean only one thing to some one million people in Texas: it's hunting season.

Dove season brings a gleam to the eyes of hunters, but it is them November which put that extra bounce in their steps, sends them into the hills, and valleys and into marshes and timbered country for deer, javelina, duck, geese, quail and turkey.

The Texas Department of Health Resources wants to make each outdoorsman aware of the fact that hunting can be hazardous to your health.

Hopefully, all men and women are in good physical shape who go through the exhausting process of a camp cleanup and management, the long hours and the strenuous exercise of hunting. Unfortunately, this is not the case. Many executives leave their padded swivel chairs and surge off into the hills like a professional fullback. They're the ones who are out of shape, out of practice in handling their rifles and shotguns, and out of touch with good safety habits. While most hunters look on themselves as Daniel Boones, far too many should never leave their television sets and comfortable arm chairs.

Once they leave their year-long environment, there are many dangers to be averted. A hunter may come up against insects, snakes, poisonous plants, carelessness in gun handling, the dangers of food poisoning, and asphyxiation from camp stoves.

Many stinging insects move into closed-up cabins, and they make their presence known when hunters return to camp. So enter your cabins cautiously, being alert for insects as well as snakes seeking a dry, warm place to bed down. Insect stings, reminds the Department of Health Resources, cause more fatalities than rattlesnake bites.

On the subject of food poisoning, the Department has this advice: keep all foods hot or very cold. Foods left at room temperature allow bacteria in them to grow, and a person can get very sick from eating this food. If you're unsure of your water, a sample should be sent to a Department of Health Resources laboratory.

Each year during cold weather many people are killed by carbon monoxide poisoning. All stoves should be checked for venting. Every smokestack and chimney should be clear of obstructions, such as birds nests. You can't see or smell carbon monoxide, so the best bet is to make certain all fires are vented to the outside and that fresh air enters your cabin. Hunters who sleep in small campers should never leave a fire burning at night.

Safety in the field is a vital part of any hunting trip, and it takes some thought and planning to make sure that your trip doesn't end in tragedy. How many people do you know who carry loaded guns in their cars...climb over fences or into deer stands or duck blinds with loaded guns in their hands...walk around with the safety of their rifles or shotguns off, and a shell in the chamber...point their weapons at others...or bring loaded guns into the camphouse.

Caution is something which all persons should exercise throughout every day of the year, but extra precautions against injury — and perhaps death — should be taken when you're outside of your natural element.

If you hunt ducks from a boat, or use a boat to reach your blind, always wear a life preserver. It is mighty hard to swim in heavy, bulky clothing. Cold water can sap your strength in minutes.

It may be too late to start an exercise program to get in shape for the strenuous hunting activities, but brisk, regular walks will help tone up some of your muscles. If you're in the middle and later stages of life, take it easy and don't overdo it. Too much, too fast could bring on a heart attack. No rigid athletic conditioning program should be undertaken without consulting your physician.

Aside from practicing good gun handling techniques in the field — or to and from your hunting lease — there's another safety precaution which you can take. Safety authorities strongly recommend the use of blaze orange clothing as a safeguard against becoming a statistic. Too many hunters are mistaken for game by over-anxious, careless hunters.

And, to help prevent eye injuries, make certain you are wearing glasses with plastic or hardened lenses — lenses which are much more difficult to break.

Fall is a wonderful time of the year in Texas, says the Texas Department of Health Resources. And you can make it a productive one by thinking safety — first, last and always.

Deer, Turkey Seasons Open

LUBBOCK — Dry weather is predicted to be the only factor that might slow down the November deer and turkey opening in the Panhandle and on the South Plains of Texas.

An excellent crop of young deer and turkey along with ample food and cover should furnish Texas hunters with ample opportunity as the season opens Monday and continues through Dec. 7 in the Panhandle regulatory district and Nov. 15 through Jan. 4, 1976 in the South Plains district.

"We recorded the best deer harvest on record in 1974," said Weldon Fromm, Amarillo district supervisor, "but 1975 looks better with excellent deer antler growth and an abundance of wild turkey."

Fromm stated that the bag limit of one mule deer buck and one white-tailed deer buck and one wild gobbler or bearded hen is possible this fall in the Panhandle.

Rains coming at the right time on the South Plains of Texas have brightened the hunting picture for deer and turkey hunters according to Bill Pratt, Lubbock district supervisor.

"The mule deer in the caprock country of the Lubbock district are in excellent shape and all areas recording turkey in past years seem to be holding good flocks now," Pratt said.

A limit of two bucks and one turkey of either sex has been set for the Permian basin - South Plains district Pratt commented.

Both district supervisors are suggesting that hunters use caution this fall while hunting due to the very dry conditions on most of the ranches. Several prairie fires have already been reported and the use of vehicles in the field could be dangerous due to hot tailpipes, mufflers or even the careless use of cigarettes or matches.

Deer hunters in the field for the first time are reminded that legal firearms for deer include all calibers of rifles except a .22 caliber jet gun or rocket or any firearms using rimfire ammunition.

Legal shooting hours for deer and turkey are one-half hour before sunrise to one-half hour after sunset daily with roosting areas for wild turkey protected by law.

There are certain restricted areas closed to hunting such as state parks, any public road or road right-of-way or on any lands of the lower Colorado river authority.

Most hunters have already acquired the necessary permission from the landowner to hunt this fall. Many communities and landowners are posting a list of available hunting leases either by day, week or season. Sportsmen can contact local game wardens, county extension agents or the local chamber of commerce in those counties having this service.

More information about local regulations is included in the new 1975 Texas hunting guide available at license vendors or the P&WD offices in Amarillo, Lubbock or Abilene.

Many Quail Expected

LUBBOCK — A good quail crop with plenty of cover and food sums up the reports from field personnel of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department as the annual quail seasons nears in northwest Texas.

Quail season in regulatory counties of the Panhandle and South Plains opened Saturday and continues through Feb. 15, 1976, with a daily bag limit of 12 birds and a possession limit of 36 birds after the third day. The daily bag limit will consist of bobwhite or scaled quail or a combination of both species.

Sportsmen are reminded that nonregulatory counties might have different opening dates and bag limits making it the responsibility of the hunter to know which county he is hunting.

The wardens in the Panhandle and on the South Plains are reporting a good crop of young birds and plenty of cover," said Ted Wheelis, Lubbock regional law enforcement supervisor.

The use of bird dogs will enhance the chances of a full game bag as hunters attempt to find the hidden coveys or downed game birds said Wheelis.

District chiefs Weldon Fromm, Amarillo, David Palmer, Abilene, and Bill Pratt, Lubbock, report a 100 per cent increase in the quail population over last years near disaster which was due to a dry spring and a bad hatch.

Hunters should check for Texas hunting license requirements when hunting out of their county of residence if they are between the ages of 17 and 65 or are a non resident.

Legal shooting hours for all game animals and game birds except the migratory game birds, are one-half hour before sunrise to one-half hour after sunset daily.

Sportsmen will have to make a reasonable effort to retrieve all wounded animals and game birds and these species will become a part of the legal bag limit. All animals and birds taken into possession must be kept in an edible condition.

Firearms legal for taking quail in regulatory counties is limited to rifles, shotguns and other legal firearms and longbows and arrows. Shotguns need not be plugged to a three shell capacity when hunting quail in a regulatory county.

Hunters will be allowed to hunt from vehicles while the vehicle is on private property but the sportsmen is reminded that it is one of the most dangerous situations in the field.

More information can be obtained by reading the new 1975 Texas hunting guide available from license vendors, P&WD offices, wardens, or call (806) 744-6583 in Lubbock.

Hunting Case Sets Precedent

A precedent setting decision on waterfowl hunting was handed down on Oct. 21 when Judge John Lewis Smith of the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia denied a preliminary injunction that would have stopped the hunting of certain waterfowl across the nation.

The injunction was sought by seven animal protectionist groups to stop the hunting of the greater snow goose, Atlantic brant, merganser and goldeneye duck. The groups charged that the Interior Department did not comply with its responsibilities under two federal laws, and that it violated migratory bird treaties with Great Britain and Japan.

The decision reaffirms and supports the manner in which the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service sets the annual waterfowl hunting regulations. The court found that the Service satisfied the public participation requirements of the Administrative Procedures Act during this rulemaking process. The process was changed last year so that the public could have greater opportunity to participate.

The groups also had claimed that the Service did not adequately fulfill its responsibilities under the National Environmental Policy Act. They claimed separate environmental impact statements on the resumption of hunting for the snow goose and the Atlantic brant should have been prepared. They contended that since the snow goose had not been hunted since 1931 and the Atlantic brant since 1972, the Act required issuance of impact

Pampa's Economy Prospers

Harvesters Take On Abilene Today

By PAUL SIMS Sports Editor

Pampa goes after win No. 2, while Abilene will try to take up where it left off last season by opening its season on a winning note, as those high school basketball teams meet at 7:45 p.m. today in Harvester Fieldhouse.

A crowd of around 1,500 is expected for the game, which will match Pampa, last year's District 3 - AAAA champion, against the runner-up in District 5 - AAAA. Over 1,800 fans were in Harvester Fieldhouse Saturday for Pampa's season opener against Odessa Ector.

Pampa came from behind to edge the Eagles 54 - 52. In that game, Donnie Hughes led the Harvesters with 21 points. Jewell Landers and Rayford Young each added 10, as the Harvesters overcame a seven-point deficit in the fourth period. Abilene coach James Boynton expects Pampa to be close to the caliber of last year's team, which went 25 - 5 for the season and won the Key City tournament title at Abilene in the pre-season.

"We're dreading the trip — it'll be a very tiring trip because we'll play and come back at night — but we'll enjoy playing," said Boynton, last year's 5 - AAAA coach of the year. "We knew Pampa could really give us a gauge on our ball team. We want to gauge ourselves."

"Pampa, they're always tough. Especially at home. Pampa's just a real good basketball school."

"We think we'll have a pretty good ball team later in the season. We won't be real strong early because we have some guys that have been playing football."

Abilene, last season, won the first - half title in district play. Midland High and Lee tied in the second half, necessitating a playoff between the two. Lee won, setting up a district - title game between the Rebels and Abilene.

Lee won that game in overtime 42 - 39 and eventually went to the state tournament. Abilene ended its season with a 28 - 8 record.

Four starters return off that team. Leading the way is 6 - 8 1/2 Darrell Baxter, the team's leading rebounder last season and owner of a 12 - point average. The big senior post will be flanked by 6 - 5 1/2 Andre Hickman and 6 - 0 Steve Thomas, the only starter not returning off last year's squad.

Guards will be 6 - 2 1/2 Mike Little and 5 - 8 James Barefoot. Hickman and Little averaged 10 and eight points per game, respectively, last season.

Others who might see action tonight include 6 - 4 Mark Merrell, 6 - 1 Willie Stephens, 6 - 0 Joe Jones and 6 - 0 Eddie Forkerway. All are coming off Abilene's football team. Forkerway should start later in the season.

Pampa starters should be Winslow Ellis, a 6 - 6 junior; Hughes, a 6 - 4 junior returning letterman; Brian Bailey, a 6 - 2 junior returning letterman; Forrest Taylor, a 5 - 9 senior; and Rayford Young, a 5 - 11 junior.

Six - one senior Richard Lane, the only returning starter off last year's team, is listed as questionable for the contest due to a sprained ankle suffered early last week in practice. Lane was unable to play against Ector.

In a junior varsity game, Pampa will meet Abilene at 6 p.m. today in Harvester Fieldhouse.

The Pampa Shockers are 1 - 0 after a 72 - 52 win over Ector's junior varsity Saturday. Rusty Ward led the way for Pampa with 15 points, while Rickey Buntun added 14.

In Action Tonight

Jewell Landers, left, scored 10 points in Pampa's opening win over Odessa Ector Saturday and is expected to see playing time today as the Harvesters host Abilene at 7:45 p.m. Pampa's junior varsity will play Abilene's JV at 6 p.m. Members of the Shocker team are seated, from left) manager Rocky Bynum, Tim Reddell, Kevin

Bryant Tells Critics 'That's Tough'

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Bear Bryant has a few words for those who are peeved at the match-up that will be on display New Year's Eve night in the Sugar Bowl:

"That's tough." The Sugar Bowl Monday passed up the Big Eight Conference runner-up to choose Penn State as an opponent for Alabama in the first postseason extravaganza ever held in the monstrous Louisiana Superdome.

Bryant, accused privately by bowl officials for years of dictating his whereabouts during the bowl season and of selecting the opposition for his Alabama Crimson Tide as well, promptly admitted he had recommended Penn State's selection to the Sugar Bowl.

And he said he didn't care what the Big Eight officials in general or Nebraska coach Tom Osborne in particular thought of it.

"I make no apologies to anyone," said Bryant. "I recommended them (Penn State) and I want those young coaches out there to know I recommended them. I made some big pop offs when I was young, too, but now I just hope we have good luck against Auburn and Penn State and to hell with them (Big Eight). Let them go where they want to."

"The Big Eight is tied up with the Orange Bowl and if they wanted to play us why didn't they indicate it? I have a lot of respect for Osborne and I'm flattered he thinks I influenced the selection."

Osborne branded the Sugar Bowl selection as a sellout to the wishes of Bryant, whose teams have lost their last six bowl games. The Nebraska coach indicated Bryant was trying to avoid playing teams from the Big Eight.

"It's time this thing (Bryant's influence of the bowl picture) was brought out in the open," Osborne said. "I just don't see how the Sugar Bowl could allow him to do this. That's their responsibility."

"But I don't hold anything against Bear. He's doing what he thinks he must do to hold his position — whatever that is."

The winner of this Saturday's Nebraska-Oklahoma game will go to the Orange Bowl and before the loser would be invited to the Sugar Bowl. Officials of the Cotton Bowl seemed so sure the Big Eight runner-up would come to New Orleans they went ahead and selected Georgia to play the Southwest Conference champion in Dallas Jan. 1.

The Oklahoma-Nebraska loser, therefore, was left with an invitation to the Fiesta Bowl in Tempe, Ariz., Dec. 26. But the Nebraska players rejected that offer and said they would stay home if they did not beat Oklahoma.

"I guess I'm new enough and naive enough to think a coach just can't have that kind of influence," said Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer. "It's hard to believe that coach Bryant would not want to play the best team available."

Another Big Eight coach, Kansas State's Ellis Rainsberger, also took a dig at Bryant.

"I think it's unfair that someone dictates who they play," he said. "But after the way Missouri, which is the fourth or fifth best team in our league, handled Alabama, I don't blame him."

Sugar Bowl officials, before

Bryant's admission that he had a hand in the selection of Penn State, denied any influence from the Alabama coach.

"Bear Bryant played no part whatsoever in choosing his opponent in the Sugar bowl," said spokesman Jerry Romig.

"We felt better for the Sugar Bowl and this community to bring in a top independent team like Penn State rather than the runner-up of the Big Eight.

Oklahoma and Nebraska are known among bowl organizers as teams which bring perhaps more people to bowl games than any other in the country. And Penn State is more than 1,000 miles from New Orleans.

Penn State coach Joe Paterno did his best to stay out of the controversy.

Bengals Whip Buffalo 33-24

CINCINNATI (UPI) — "Have you ever," Cincinnati Bengals center Bob Johnson wanted to know, "Have you ever seen perfection like Kenny's?"

Kenny Anderson, the Bengals' quarterback, passed for a team record 447 yards, hitting 30 of 46 passes with no interceptions, in Cincinnati's 33-24 victory over the Buffalo Bills in a free-wheeling nationally-televated game.

It was Cincy's eighth win in nine games and kept the Bengals tied with Pittsburgh for the AFC Central Division lead.

Although O.J. Simpson rushed for 197 yards, 154 coming in the first half, it wasn't enough to keep the Bills from slipping to 5-4, the fourth loss in their last five games.

Besides surpassing his old club passing yardage mark of 352 yards, Anderson also set a club total individual offensive record with 455 yards. Team records of 547 total yards and 34 first downs also were set.

"I'd have to say it was my best performance," said Anderson, a fifth year pro out of tiny Augustana (Ill.) College. "Teams have been throwing the ball on Buffalo this year and that was obviously our game plan."

Anderson, who threw two TD passes, shared a game ball award with receiver Chip Myers, who caught seven passes for 108 yards.

No Fiesta for Undefeated Nebraska

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — It will be all or nothing Saturday for Nebraska.

The 10-0 Cornhuskers voted Monday not to accept a bid to the Fiesta Bowl if they lose Saturday to Oklahoma in Norman, Oklahoma, if it loses, will accept the Fiesta Bowl berth. The winner automatically will go to the Orange Bowl as Big Eight Conference champion, although an Oklahoma win would give the Sooners only a share of the title.

The Nebraska vote was a surprise because earlier Monday it was an accepted fact that whichever team lost would go to the Fiesta Bowl.

Conference coaches expressed indignation Monday via telephone at the Big Eight briefings that the Sugar Bowl bypassed the Nebraska-Oklahoma loser as an opponent for Alabama, choosing Penn State instead.

Most important, at least as far as the coaches are concerned, is the loss of the chance to deal Alabama and coach Bear Bryant their seventh consecutive bowl loss.

But, from the standpoint of having a good time at a post-season game, Oklahoma's Barry Switzer was not disappointed with the possibility of playing in the Fiesta Bowl.

"From everyone I've talked to, the Fiesta Bowl may be better than all of 'em," he said in reference to the Tempe, Ariz., classic. "From all I've heard, it's a first-class bowl in every way. So, if we lose Saturday, we may have the best deal of all."

It was evident that conference coaches and officials were angry with the Sugar Bowl's decision.

Most blamed Bryant with picking the team he wanted to play, although Kansas coach Bud Moore dissented from that view. Moore is a former assistant at Alabama and admitted he is prejudiced because of his previous alliance with Bryant.

Missouri's Al Onofrio was the most vocal, calling the bypassing of the Big Eight runner-up "a real crime."

Both Nebraska and Oklahoma flipped Missouri in Columbia, the Cornhuskers notching a 30-7 victory and the Sooners a 28-27 squeaker.

"I think both Nebraska and Oklahoma can beat Alabama," Onofrio said. "But the point of the whole thing is that the bowl should try to get the most competitive team it can, not one that Alabama thinks it can beat. I think both Oklahoma and Nebraska are stronger than Alabama."

Staubach Still Hurting

DALLAS (UPI) — Dallas Cowboy quarterback Roger Staubach says he shouldn't have tangled with that huge defensive lineman. But it seemed like a good idea at the time.

Staubach was suffering a very sore shoulder Monday thanks to a tumble he took early in the fourth quarter of the Cowboys' 34-31 win over New England Sunday.

The injury, which could prove bothersome for the rest of the season, came as a result of a tangle with a large defensive lineman.

"My shoulder is jammed to be a problem because I got it," said Staubach. "I already had a strained muscle there. What happened was a guy came inside on me and I tried to straight-arm him — which is a great thing to do against a 260-pound guy."

"I fumbled the ball and it bounced right back up and I almost got it but then I was pushed down right on my elbow and I jammed my shoulder on the impact."

"It wasn't really a polished game," said Staubach. "But it was a big win, one we really needed. We're still in our race (tied with Washington a game back of division leading St. Louis). And we're as good as any team in our division."

PHS Among Teams In District CC Meet

AMARILLO — Pampa, Borger and the four Amarillo schools will compete for individual and team championships in both boys' and girls' divisions of the District 3 - AAAA Cross Country Meet today at Thompson Park there.

The girls will start at 3 p.m., running a mile, while the boys are scheduled to begin at 3:30 p.m. on a two - mile course.

Amarillo High is the favorite in both divisions. Two weeks ago in the Amarillo Invitational Cross Country Meet, Clinton Henry of Pampa earned 44th place in the varsity division with an 11:23 clocking. Henry will lead Pampa's somewhat inexperienced team today in the district meet.

Pete Myers of Pampa was 10th in the junior varsity division with 11:39. Other Pampa times in the JV division were Robert Thaxton, 19th with 12:00, and Taron Moore, 34th with 12:27.

Your Horoscope

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 19

Your birthday today: In this many-sided, multiple-choice year, you'll see more of a carefree lifestyle for your age group. Unexpected changes are natural; a large percentage of them are favorable but some are temporarily confusing. Relationships range from good fun to rather serious in many brief episodes. Today's natives are persistent, well-intentioned and respected for adding fresh impetus to any work they take on.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Competition and sales resistance inspire you to do more and better work. Intellectual pursuits are favored but take you away from profitable activity. Romance is exciting but subject to turbulence.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Conservative approaches to financial questions work best, including haggling over terms. At least you know what you're getting. You are overloaded but productive at work.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: To arbitrate successfully, hear all sides fully. Hold your temper and give people a chance to reply or change course. Personal plans fare well if you don't overdo it.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Work quietly and unobtrusively. Realize what is expected of you and keep a record, since confusion is widespread. Your imagination outruns your practicality but produces ideas that are useful later.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Friends are wildly erratic; don't go along with their financial experiments or fad purchasing. A rush of odd incidents forces you out of your regular habits. Take notes you can refer to later.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Further responsibility comes your way. Meet it head on once you've agreed on what your duties are and where your share ends. Distant news is quite encouraging.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Keep your story simple and tell it to those who count. Be too busy to listen to gossip. The truth comes out by and by, and is easier to accept if you don't swallow some fantasy.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: The intensity of your emotions leads to overstatements. Push in your routines rather than speculate on uncertain deals. Romantic impulses aren't favored.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Impatience is common on all sides. If you have everything going for you, there's real danger that you'll be careless and spoil it all. New contacts spring surprises.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: You can't remain in any one spot in today's mixed conditions. Switch chores to find out how the other person manages. A short-term connection promises lasting rewards.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Your confidence rises, and you're much freer to act. Find out what is wanted before you speak on behalf of another or begin to put unsolicited assistance into practice.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Decide on your main objective. Cut and trim all you can to fit that goal. Your home life works against your career; be candid in dealing with those involved, including youngsters.

AWOL Soldier Worries About Cribs

HONOLULU (UPI) — AWOL soldier Veto Baker, 27, the last American to leave South Vietnam, is home. And he worries about baby cribs.

Baker, who went absent without official leave to stay with his family, arrived during the weekend with his common-law and pregnant wife, Mai, and their three children.

"He said the children always slept on the floor back in Vietnam," his aunt, Libby Mendonca, said Sunday.

"He was afraid the children would think the cribs were cages," Baker, his wife and children are confined in the same room

Mechanical Heart Starts Debate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government is ready to start using a mechanical heart pump on some hopelessly ill heart patients but a dissenting government scientist says it is premature and could be fatal.

The mechanical pump, which has been tested in animals, would be implanted while the patient's heart attempts to restore its natural pumping power. As the patient's heart goes back to work, the mechanical pumping would diminish and then the device removed.

Dr. Peter Frommer, associate director for cardiology at the Heart and Lung Institute of the National Institute of Health, said the pumps may be used on a small number of persons who are already on heart-lung machines.

But Dr. Stephen Bruck, a program director for biomaterials at the institute, said the device is unfit for human use and may kill some patients.

"It's very likely a substantial fraction of these patients will die, but it's very likely all of them would die without the device," Frommer said Sunday.

But he added, "We have every reason to believe no patient will die because of the device, and we hope and anticipate that some will live because of the device."

Bruck, who said his dissent may cost him his job, said the experimental use has been cleared for the Texas Heart Institute in Houston and Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston.

"Doing so would surely result in premature death for some unfortunate individuals who are selected for these experiments," Bruck said.

"The blood pump is made from commercial materials of unknown composition that are not compatible with human blood," he said.

Bruck said experiments with some animals were inconclusive, none had been conducted on humans, and "this device should not be tested in humans at this time."

Bruck warned there was a possibility small plastic fibers might come loose from the pump, enter the bloodstream and lodge in the brain or kidney, perhaps fatally, as has occurred in animal experiments.

But Frommer said the type of pump approved for experimental use has not had this kind of incident in animals.

Bruck said the institute is bent on constructing an artificial heart instead of developing heart valves and other practical lifesaving implant devices.

He said that because he took his dissent to newsmen he expects to be disciplined and possibly fired.

Inflation Doesn't Go To Pot

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI) — Inflation may be adding huge increases to the cost of living, but there's one item selling in Little Rock today at the same price it sold for six years ago: marijuana.

Federal drug agents say the average retail cost of an ounce of marijuana has remained the same for the past six years — $15.

The reason for the stable price is a glutted market, says Jim Bush, the Federal Drug Enforcement agent in charge at Little Rock. "Marijuana is plentiful," Bush said.

Sgt. James Vandiver with the city Police Department's narcotics unit agreed: "There is a steady availability. People buy it from their friends in small amounts or grow their own. Many of our arrests lately have been people who are growing it. It is easy to grow."

Marijuana is second only to alcohol as the biggest drug problem in the city, Vandiver said.

"Since it has become more socially accepted more and more people use it. It is verging on the realm of being socially acceptable," he said.

However, use and possession of marijuana is illegal in Arkansas and "we are going to enforce the law just as vigorously," Vandiver added.

Police seizures of marijuana haven't dented the supply, Bush and Vandiver said.

"We'd like to stop the supply, but without foreign countries (where much of the marijuana is grown) doing anything to the crop," Bush said, "it will be a problem that will always be there."

"There hasn't been any tapering off," Bush added. "It was called a fad two or three years ago, but it doesn't seem to be a fad."

Bush and Vandiver both think the courts are too lenient in enforcing marijuana laws.

"Instead of a deterrent, it is almost a motivating factor," Bush said. "People come to trial and maybe the head honcho gets two or three years."

Calls for Amnesty

LONDON (UPI) — The Soviet Union has imprisoned "at least 10,000 political and religious prisoners" and all are maltreated, Amnesty International said today.

"There are at least 10,000 political and religious prisoners in the USSR today under conditions which 'violate international standards for the treatment of prisoners,'" the nongovernment group concerned with prisoners' rights said in an exhaustive report.

Its 154-page study, published simultaneously in five languages, said Soviet authorities publish no prison statistics and deny the existence of political prisoners.

"They are certain to say that our estimate is too high," an Amnesty spokesman said. "But if they are correct they should break with tradition and publish the true figures themselves."

AWOL Soldier Worries About Cribs

HONOLULU (UPI) — AWOL soldier Veto Baker, 27, the last American to leave South Vietnam, is home. And he worries about baby cribs.

Baker, who went absent without official leave to stay with his family, arrived during the weekend with his common-law and pregnant wife, Mai, and their three children.

"He said the children always slept on the floor back in Vietnam," his aunt, Libby Mendonca, said Sunday.

"He was afraid the children would think the cribs were cages," Baker, his wife and children are confined in the same room equipped with two beds and three cribs at Tripler Army Medical Center.

Sunday, his first full day on American soil and in his home state, was spent undergoing medical tests. One of his children has a minor skin infection.

Baker went AWOL in 1972

when his superiors refused him permission to marry Mai and take her to America.

An Army spokesman said Baker, with 15 months left on his Army enlistment, would be allowed to remain in Hawaii — contrary to earlier reports he would be transported to the mainland.

Dr. Pepper
Bottling Company

The Pampa Dr. Pepper Bottling Co. Inc. will celebrate its 50th anniversary in 1976.

"We've been here since 1926," Chester Huff said. "At that time they were delivering Dr. Pepper iced down in wooden barrels loaded on Model T and Model A trucks."

Huff's father, Lefty Huff, started the business. He died in 1964 and Chester Huff took over management of the family operation. He was qualified for the position, having spent several years helping his father.

According to Huff, the Pampa Dr. Pepper Bottling Co. delivers refreshment over a five-county area, to stores, vending machines, cafes, and other outlets. The firm has four full-time route trucks on the road to service the many vendors.

Recently, Huff said, all new bottling equipment was installed.

"It runs twice as fast as the old equipment did," he said.

The firm employs a dozen regulars "and it can go to 15 in the summer," the owner said.

The summer season sees a bit more consumption of soft drinks, Huff said, "but there is less change in winter and summer than there used to be. And the per capita consumption is higher the year around."

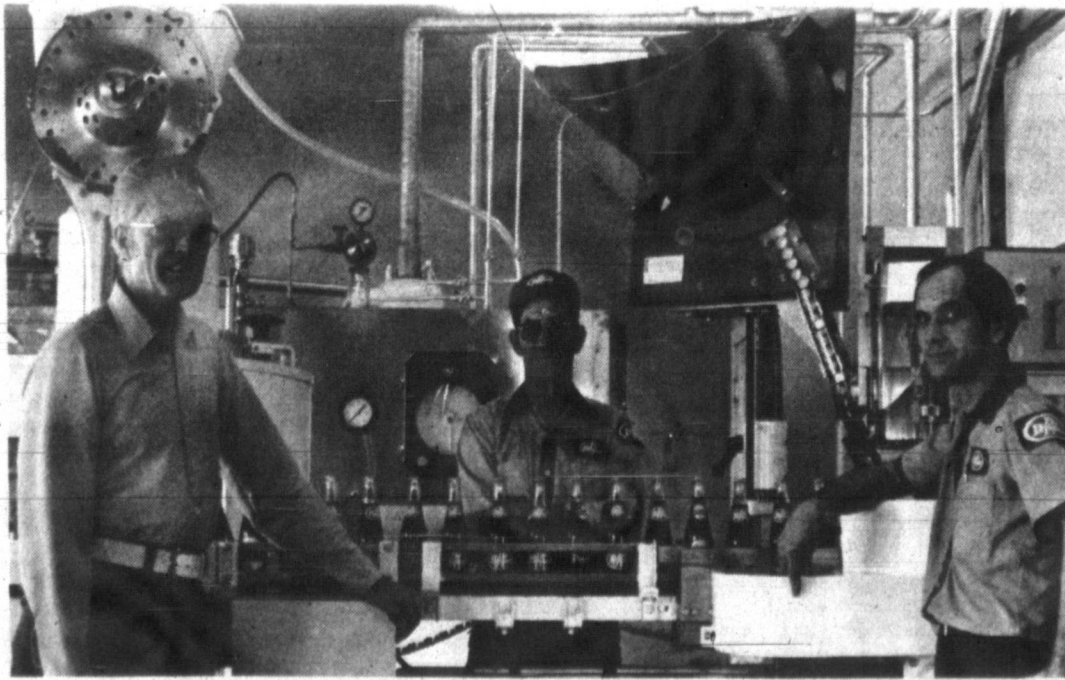

In addition to Dr. Pepper, the company has R.C. Cola products, including Nehi orange, Delaware Punch and the Sugar-Free Dr. Pepper. Carbonic gas the various syrups used by soft drink fountains also may be obtained from the firm.

The Pampa Dr. Pepper Bottling Co. has not changed locations — 834 S. Hobart — since the founding. But among things that have changed is the packing of the product.

"It's more or less the same recipe it's always been," Huff said, "but it's been through many different packages — different bottle styles and sizes, carton design. It has changed more in the last five years than it did in the first 45 years."

Huff said that this year "has been the biggest year in our history." And he looks for continued growth.

Bill Bratcher is sales manager for the company.

NATURAL AREAS

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The Missouri Conservation Commission says four tallgrass prairie areas have been acquired by the state.

Natural areas are ecological systems, often so rare and fragile that very much disturbance would ruin them. The four newcomers bring the total natural area system to 42, with a total of 5,038 acres.

HOT FLOW

Neuquen Province is the site of the Copahué hot springs fed by waters from the Copahué volcano at 6,000 feet altitude.

The U.S. Military Academy opened at West Point, N.Y., on July 4, 1802.

Lady In A Cage?

The large, curved, grid-like structure actually is a three-dimensional model of the recommended arm reach for performing certain industrial tasks while a worker is seated. Doing the measuring is Dr. Suzanne Rodgers, a full-time physiologist for Eastman Kodak Company. Information on job demands and human capabilities enables Dr. Rodgers to design work stations for manufacturing areas so that a production employee can perform more efficiently and comfortably.

She Chose Science Over Music

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — When she was 4 years old, Suzanne H. Rodgers recalls, she wanted to be a "mad scientist." That was after she had torn apart an old clock.

When she was 10, she wanted to be a radio sound effects expert — after she had torn apart a radio, taken off its antenna and tried to solder it on again. "It still works, even today, but with static," she says.

When she entered Vassar College, she considered becoming a musician, with the flute her specialty. About a year later Sue knew she had to make a decision: science or music. "I opted for science because I didn't have enough talent in music," she admits.

Now, her career determined, Dr. Sue Rodgers, to her knowledge, is one of only two physiologists working full-time in-house in American industry. As a member of the human factors section of the health and safety laboratory at Eastman Kodak Company here, Sue is among a skilled group of professionals responsible for matching job requirements with human capabilities in manufacturing areas throughout the company.

What is a human factors problem? Dr. Rodgers suggests a couple of examples. Why can a person lift 75-pound silver bars at waist level while not being able to handle much lighter objects in an over-the-head position? Why can production people in chemical plants easily handle objects usually thought too heavy to move without difficulty or even injury?

Sue knows. She's spent most of her adult life studying the effects of stress on the human body, first at Vassar where an introductory physiology course got her hooked on the subject; then at the University of Rochester Medical School in London, where she taught and did research for two years under a public health fellowship; and finally at Kodak, which she joined in 1968.

A major purpose of the human factors section, formed in 1960 and made up of a team of engineers and scientists, is to make certain that job functions performed in Kodak's multiple manufacturing operations match the human characteristics of the people who perform them. In this way people perform more efficiently and with a minimum of adverse stress.

"My work as a physiologist," Dr. Rodgers explains, "is to try to help determine job demands — the physical demands of a job on a person — and to evaluate a person's capabilities so that we don't over- or understress them."

"We do this through using physiological measurements such as a worker's pulse rate, oxygen use, muscle strength in a certain body position, the visual conditions and temperatures — things that influence a person in the job."

Another, highly important concern of the human factors section at Kodak is directly related to the consumer — the design of commercial products from human performance, safety and reliability standards.

To Dr. Rodgers, human factors research is "still a pioneering field" because many industries in the past have been more concerned with engineering than with human capabilities.

Human factors research often involves studying a volunteer an entire day both in the lab and on the job. The person is asked to keep a diary of activities. The diary is analyzed to match its information with data provided by various physiological function-recording devices.

Though deciding against a career in music, she has sustained active interest in it. Starting as chairman of the Rochester Philharmonic's Under-30 Committee, she worked to stimulate musical interest among young adults. She takes flute lessons and is strongly involved with the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra, Inc., which operates the city's famed Philharmonic; she has been a board member and vice-president.

At the University of Rochester Medical School, she is an associate in the physiology department; there, she can add to today's classroom the unique flavor of her industrial experience. At the same time she gains new academic input that may help her in industry.

"There's a lot a physiologist can do in industry in relating job functions to human characteristics and to improve the utilization of people's skills and capabilities," she notes.

"That word 'utilization' isn't necessarily bad," explains Davis. "Think of it first in terms of avoiding mis-utilization."

"More over, we strive to be able to design jobs so that we can utilize the attributes of the people more effectively and in ways that avoid undue stress being placed on them — and in ways that are comfortable and satisfying to them."

Man Gives Turkeys For Holiday

LYNDHURST, Ohio (UPI) — Denver C. Barry says he's handing out free Thanksgiving turkeys because it makes him feel good.

"I wanted to do something for the holidays," said the 20-year-old Lyndhurst man. "I'm not very good at volunteer work, so I decided to give away turkeys. It makes me feel good."

His technique is to knock on a door, tell whoever answers he would be very pleased if they accept a 10-pound turkey and then hand over a bird.

'Build Bigger Jails Or..'

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — Texas' top prison official has called for a "wartime level commitment" to halt rising crime rates and put an end to legal, social and political obstacles hampering crime fighting efforts.

"Until we make a wartime level commitment throughout the whole criminal justice system, we're going to continue to be in a losing fight," W. J.

Estelle told a seminar for local government officials Monday. "We've handcuffed ourselves. We've handcuffed the very representatives who constitute authority that is supposed to protect our citizens."

He called for an end to what he termed legal, social and political "games" taking place while crime rates soar.

Estelle said the number of prisoners in the Texas Department of Corrections has increased by 43 per cent in the last five years — from 12,000 to 18,576.

He called for programs to work with children, under six years old and identify potential problems leading to criminal behavior.

"First give our law enforcement agencies and our prosecuting attorneys every tool they need to deal with the immediate problem," he said. "I don't care if it means building more prisons."

"The second mission we have is to start dealing with the problem at its source and that's the problem of our youth."

If the commitment is not made, Estelle said the state will be hiring more and more policemen and building bigger and better jails while violence on the streets continues.

Trailer May Be Brando's

TAOS, N.M. (UPI) — A real estate dealer says a mobile home used by two men involved in a shootout with Oregon police was apparently the same vehicle she sold to actor Marlon Brando last summer.

Frances M. Martin said Monday the FBI had contacted her about the mobile home, which was stopped by Oregon state police Friday night in their search for fugitive American Indian Movement leader Dennis Banks.

Brando is a friend of Banks and supporter of Indian causes. Officers in Oregon said they assumed Banks was one of two men who jumped from the motor home and escaped during the shootout. The second man was believed to be Leonard Peltier, 31, wanted for unlawful flight to avoid prosecution for attempted murder of police officer in Milwaukee, Wis., in 1974.

Banks' common-law wife, Darlene Pearl Nichols, 20, Pine Ridge, S.D., was one of three persons in the mobile home who were arrested.

Ms. Martin, who is in the real estate business, said she sold the mobile home to Brando when he was in the Taos area looking at land last May. The Taos woman said she never met Banks.

"On May 26, he left here with the motor home... I got a check back on July 23 and I sent him a title at the time," the woman said.

"Apparently the registration slip still shows my name," Ms. Martin said.

The FBI said the search for Banks and Peltier was concentrated in an area south of Ontario, Ore., where a pickup truck and weapons were stolen from an unoccupied ranch house after the shootout. FBI agents said a fingerprint of Peltier was found in the ranch house, which is located about five miles from the shootout scene.

Banks was wanted for failing to appear for sentencing Aug. 5 at Custer, S.D., on charges of rioting while armed and assault with a deadly weapon involving a 1973 demonstration at the Custer County Courthouse.

Arrested along with Banks' wife Friday night were Annie Mae Aquash, Russell J. Redner, 28, Eureka, Calif., and Kenneth Loudhawk, 21, Pine Ridge, S.D. Ms. Aquash was wanted on a fugitive warrant issued Nov. 10 at Pierre for alleged violation of the National Firearms Act in a Sept. 5 incident.

AUTO ACCIDENT
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Mayor Tom Bradley, slightly injured in a car accident this weekend, was advised by his doctor to wear a neck brace to relieve soreness resulting from incident.

However, a spokesman for the mayor said Bradley felt well enough to go without the brace at a reception Sunday. The physician also prescribed a muscle relaxant.

The mayor's car, driven by his chauffeur, was struck in the rear Saturday by a car driven by Raymond Robinson Jr., 25. Robinson said his small foreign car had been hit by another vehicle driven by Mattie Hansell, 53.

Bradley complained to police of a pain at the base of his skull but told officers he would seek private medical attention. He was not hospitalized.

The mayor stayed at the accident site for 40 minutes, then continued to Los Angeles International Airport where he welcomed the Chinese women's basketball team.

CALLEY BACKS WALLACE
TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (UPI) — Former Army Lt. William Calley has offered to speak in support of Gov. George Wallace's campaign for president, but Wallace aides say no decision has been made on acceptance of the offer.

"He volunteered to speak for the governor," Wallace press secretary Billy Joe Camp said. "He was thanked for volunteering his services like everyone else."

Calley was convicted by military court martial in 1971 of murdering "at least 22 Vietnamese civilians" during a "search and destroy" mission at the hamlet of My Lai in 1968. At the time of the conviction Wallace said he considered Calley a "scapegoat."

A life sentence for Calley was reduced to 10 years through military appeals procedures. A federal district judge overturned the murder conviction, but the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reinstated the verdict. Defense lawyers are planning an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

MEANY: 'A LOT OF WIND'
WASHINGTON (UPI) — AFL-CIO President George Meany says Ford administration predictions of economic recovery are "just a lot of wind."

Appearing on ABC's "Issues and Answers" Sunday, Meany was asked about reports the economy is recovering. "This is just a lot of wind," he said. "I can only measure the end of the recession when people go back to work."

The union leader said he would like to see in 1976 "a candidate we could endorse and support. In 1972 we did not have such a candidate."

He also said he opposes George Wallace's presidential bid and that James Schlesinger's dismissal as defense secretary "was a propaganda victory for the Soviet Union."

A KKK CANDIDATE
WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (UPI) — The leader of a splinter Ku Klux Klan group has told supporters he will run for president in 1976 but warned there may not be any elections.

"I'm afraid that the President will declare martial law in 1976 because of all the riots that are going to occur," said Dale Reusch, imperial wizard of the Invisible Empire of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. "Then we wouldn't have an election."

Reusch, an auto engine tester for Ford Motor Co. in Ohio and a member of the United Auto Workers, met with members of his group Saturday. His organization separated recently from the National Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, led by James Venable of Georgia.

Culture Club Studies Elderly

The impact of crash and fad diets on physical and mental well being of the elderly were major points of a program, "The Second Fifty Years," presented to a recent meeting of the Civic Culture Club by Mrs. C.V. Forsman.

Doctors have attributed cases of mental disturbance and senility to elderly patients to malnutrition, according to Mrs. Forsman.

Proper diet, a direct link to good health, is difficult for many elderly couples who must live on a fixed income in an inflationary economy.

The club met in the W.R. Harding home with 15 members attending.
