Pampa Man Aboard Carrier in Collision

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff
A 22-year-old Pampa man was aboard the USS John F. Kennedy when it collided with the U.S. guided missile cruiser Belknap late Saturday in the Ionian Sea.
He is Stephen Montgomery "Monty" Joiner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Joiner of 1228 S. Dwight in Pampa.
"We haven't heard a word," Mrs. Joiner said this morning. "But as each moment passes we feel better." The Kennedy is a 4700-man ship.
Young Joiner, who has been in the Navy for 3½ years, was recently promoted to aviation electrician's mate second class.
"We have been glued to every newscast — radio and television — and read every account of the collision we could find since the news broke," Mrs. Joiner said this morning. Her son is scheduled to be discharged in July. He had no plans to be home for Christmas.

Mr. and Mrs. Joiner received a letter from their son two weeks ago. He included pictures in the letter, portraying the men cleaning deck and other activities. In one picture they were waving "goodbye" to Miss America.
"By now we feel sure he is all right. I wish they would release the names," Mrs. Joiner said explaining that there is no way they can be sure until they hear.
In a letter to his family, received here on Nov. 2, Joiner said the Kennedy had arrived in Naples — again.
"Boy, I'm getting tired of Naples and all of Italy," he said.
"And I'm sending some pictures of one of our pleasant airplane washing parties.
"There are also some pictures of the other airplanes we have on the ship," he wrote.

He added that he and others in the crew had been issued long johns and heavy jackets. It has been getting pretty chilly lately and it'll probably get worse," he said.
He enclosed his certificate of appointment to second class dated Oct. 16.
"Mom," he said, "I'm going to order your china the 15th of this month. That way it will be there by Christmas. Another reason I have waited so long is to keep from paying customs. The custom rate on China is about 21 per cent.
"That's outrageous. I was informed that if I waited until I have been here 120 days, I wouldn't have to pay any customs," he said.
He said the customs would be around $100. Mrs. Joiner said she immediately wrote and told him to forget the china.
Joiner also enclosed a USSS

Kennedy Family Gram dated Aug. 24, 1975.
The letter was written from Mediterranean amid the 4700-man cruiser.
"We spent the last few days in July and the first several of August at anchor in Augusta Bay, Sicily. While in Augusta Bay we had no liberty but some crew members took the opportunity to participate in several organized tours of the local area. Kennedy men took advantage of the occasion to visit Mount Etna — one of the largest active volcanoes in the world and the largest in Europe," the writer said.
"Others visited Siracusa and saw the archaeological remains of one of the most wealthy cities in early Mediterranean history. We also had the opportunity to visit the winter resort city of Taormina, which provides a splendid view of Mount Etna and Augusta Bay."

Cruiser Steering Failure Causes Ocean Collision

PRILO, Sicily (UPI) — The U.S. guided missile cruiser Belknap, its superstructure sheared off like a tin can in a mid-sea collision with an American aircraft carrier, lumbered into port under tow today.
Four men, three from the Belknap and one from the carrier John F. Kennedy, were killed and 45 others injured in the fiery crash late Saturday in the Ionian Sea. Four Belknap crewmen were missing.

A quartet of private tugs towed the 8,000-ton vessel into this deep water port on Sicily's southeast coast. The Kennedy remained in the collision area, about 80 miles to the west, to lead search efforts.

What little remained of the Belknap's superstructure was blackened and its steel looked like crumpled paper.
But crewmembers raised the U.S. flag over their ship at 8 a.m. — right on traditional Navy schedule.
Members of the first shore party to board the cruiser said the crew told them one man had been crushed by equipment. Two more missing crewmembers were believed to have been buried in the superstructure's collapse, they said.
Engineers making damage estimates said it appeared there was an engine room explosion. Two engine room crewmen were seriously hurt and one suffered minor injuries.

The engineers quoted a chief petty officer as saying, "I was below deck when the accident happened. The area filled with smoke. I had never seen anything like it. On deck, it was just a ball of fire."
Less than 100 of the Belknap's 350-man crew remained on board. Many had transferred to other ships in the crash area before the cruiser reached port.
Lt. Cdr. J. Nuzum of Vermont, W. Va., port liaison officer from the U.S. Navy Supply Depot at nearby Sigonella, said, "The superstructure is gone for all practical purposes. The crew is great. Beautiful. They really fought for their ship. They want to stay aboard and clean her up. The things they want most

Santa Parade Tuesday

Santa Claus is coming to town for the annual Santa Day parade which will move from Craven and S. Cuyler Sts. at 3 p.m. Tuesday.
Old Saint Nick will ride atop a city fire truck in the Christmas pageant which will proceed north on Cuyler to Francis, west on Francis to Ward, north on Ward to Hobart and north on Hobart to Coronado Center where it will disband.
Parade officials urged all entries to be on hand early and ready for formation at S. Cuyler and Craven by 2:30 p.m.
The parade lineup will include police patrol cars, Pampa High School band, various organization entries, Junior High band, commercial entries, family and individual entries, bicycles and motor bikes, Pampa Middle School band riding club entries, with Santa Claus as the parade's final attraction.
Cash prizes ranging from $100 in cash as tops for the non-commercial division, plaques for the winning commercial entries, $50 cash for individual or family entries, and $15, $10 and $5 cash prizes for the bicycles and motor bikes division winners.

Judges will pick the winners during the parade and prizes will be awarded at 4 p.m. Wednesday at the Chamber of Commerce office.
A special invitation has been issued to Pampa school children to attend the parade. Santa Claus will distribute candy to the children downtown before the parade and at Coronado Center after the parade.
Chamber officials announced that a special pet contest for children has been set for 2:30 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 6, at the intersection of Cuyler and Francis Sts.
Prizes for pet contest winners, $15, $10 and $5 cash, will be awarded at 4 p.m. Monday, Dec. 8, at the Chamber of Commerce.

The things they want most are laundry and a place to take a shower," he said. "They've rigged up electricity but they have no heat. But it's not cold inside."
A U.S. Navy source said the accident may have been caused by failure of the Belknap's hydraulic steering system.
The Kennedy's angled flight deck sheared off the Belknap's superstructure, including towers on which the vessel's radar and other electronic equipment had been mounted. Only the pilot house was left intact.
The Kennedy, which has a crew of 4,500, was still fully operational, although aerial photos showed its underside was badly damaged.
It stopped first outside the port entrance, where it was taken in tow. Navy sources said it apparently used the stop to unload its missiles onto the U.S. ammunition ship Mt. Baker.
The accident occurred while the Kennedy, which carries fighters and interceptor planes, was maneuvering into the wind to allow some of its craft to land.
The Belknap was on stand-by rescue duty in case any of the planes missed the deck and hit the water, U.S. Navy sources said.
The Belknap was positioned to the front and right of the Kennedy, but suddenly began steering erratically, possibly because of a failure in the hydraulic system, the sources said.

He Runs Tight Insurance Ship

By THOM MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff
If Texans want lower auto insurance rates, they will need to have fewer accidents, according to the chairman of the State Insurance Board who is in Pampa today to speak at the November membership meeting of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce at noon in the Starlight Room of the Coronado Inn.
"The truth is," Joe Christie said, "Texans have been having more accidents this year and the cost of replacement parts has gone up 40 per cent in the last 90 days."

In order to set fair rates — and Texas is the only state that sets insurance rates — "We look at the number of wrecks, the claims paid, the premiums paid, and we base rates on that," Christie said.
Also considered in setting rates are such things as the part of the state where the insured lives and his age and marital status.
"We've got the most sophisticated rating procedure in the nation," Christie said. "Each driver pays a rate based on the kind of risk he is."
Christie was appointed two and a half years ago to fill seat that had been vacant for about four years because former Governor Preston Smith's appointees to the post were not confirmed by the Senate.
After he completed the final two years of the six-year term he was appointed to fill Governor Dolph Briscoe reappointed him and he currently is in his first year of another six.
Christie doesn't know if he will serve the entire term because he believes the changes and improvements he is working to implement will be accomplished sooner than that.
Two of the things Christie is attempting to accomplish are simplifying policies so that the holders of them can understand them and requiring minimum standards of all policies sold in Texas.

"In other words, there must be a reasonable ratio between what is paid for a policy and the benefits," he said.
Christie is a former state senator and is a partner in an El Paso law firm. He currently is living in Austin.
Christie not only preaches sound business principles to insurance companies, demanding that the people he represents get their money's worth, he practices them as well. The State Insurance Board spent well under the amount budgeted for it last year and improved its service while saving the money.
"As far as I know," Christie said, "we are the only agency to set up a little internal efficiency group, just as industry would do, to make sure that everyone is doing his job."
He said that the annual attrition rate for state employees is 24 per cent. He was therefore able to accomplish necessary trimming by letting attrition work for him — as unneeded personnel quit, they simply were not replaced.
Christie feels that the trimming and saving going on in the insurance board could be going on in other state agencies.
"First, we have to get agency heads to stop bragging about the size of their operations and budgets and get them interested in operating as efficiently as possible," he said.

He said that attaining the level of efficiency now enjoyed by the state agency he heads, "required constant daily pressure from the man at the top."
By weeding out the unnecessary employees, Christie said the board accomplished a "smoother work flow" and there are "no bottlenecks" as there once were.
He emphasized that all he got rid of was "waste."
"The State Board of Insurance doesn't economize by turning its head and letting renegade salesmen operate," he said.
And in order to keep "renegade salesmen" from operating in Texas, Christie created a task force in July 1974.
"We heard of outlaw salesmen working in De Witt County," he said. The sheriff had no investigative staff.
So Christie put together his task force and sent them into De Witt County where they obtained 14 indictments and 9 convictions. He said the insurance outlaws were "taking some widows' life savings. We found out they had lists of really soft touches," he said.
Christie said that all district attorneys in Texas have been notified of the task force's existence and availability.

Inmates Seize Blocks, Demand Prison Reform

NEW YORK (UPI) — Inmates at the Rikers Island Men's House of Detention today released two of five hostages seized to back demands for prison reform.
Hundreds of inmates armed with metal spears, mop handles and brooms overpowered their guards and seized five of the facility's seven cell blocks Sunday night.
The only injury was to Warden Louis Greco when a tear gas shell exploded in his hand. The inmates made no threats against the hostages.
The inmates still held three other correction officers in two separate cell blocks under their control.

One of the released correction officers, Richard Sealey, describing his capture by inmates, said, "They put a blanket over my head — took me up to the cell and locked me in."
One of the demands of the prisoners was to meet with Bronx District Attorney Mario Merola. He arrived at the facility at 7:30 a.m. and immediately began informal talks with the inmates who are demanding amnesty, an end to overcrowding, better food, elimination of mice and roaches, better medical attention and other changes.

There were conflicting reports on the number of inmates actually taking part in the seizure. The estimates ranged from 600 to 1,600. The 42-year-old facility located in the East River between Laguardia Airport to the south and Bronx County to the north currently houses about 1,900 inmates.
The house of detention is used to hold prisoners awaiting trial and others already convicted and awaiting transfer to state prisons.

Extreme precautions were taken to prevent a breakout. Helicopters circled overhead while police boats patrolled the waters around the island. The only bridge leading to the island was sealed off.
The Correction Department massed hundreds of police and correction officers near the prison with shotguns, bullet-proof vests, gas masks, helmets and nightsticks, prepared to storm the facility if necessary.

UN Promises Not To Pressure Israel

By United Press International
The United States has secretly pledged not to pressure Israel for any more than cosmetic concessions in possible talks with Syria on a Golan Heights accord, high level Israeli government sources said today.
Meanwhile, U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim, encouraged by "very helpful" talks in Damascus, flew to Tel Aviv with Syria's ideas on future Middle East peace talks.
The Israeli sources said the U.S. commitment was in writing — apparently in a letter from President Ford to Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.
Under the commitment, the sources said, Washington pledged not to make another reassessment of U.S. Middle East policy or allow delays in arms deliveries to Israel should talks between Israel and Syria on a new Golan accord become deadlocked.
There was no immediate response from the State Department in Washington.
The Israeli sources said the U.S. commitment not to pressure Israel came during negotiations on the latest Israeli-Egyptian interim accord in the Sinai Desert.
According to the sources, the latest U.S. commitment was not among the documents or memoranda of understanding made public in Washington following the Israeli-Egyptian negotiations.
"This is not a legal commitment. It is a political commitment," one source said.

Israeli leaders have said that even if negotiations began with Syria, Jerusalem could offer only cosmetic changes in its present ceasefire lines — changes of perhaps several hundred yards at best.
In a departure statement, Waldheim said he would return to Damascus Wednesday following talks in Israel and other Middle East nations.
The secretary general met with Syrian President Hafez Assad Sunday and said he found him responsive to peace efforts despite Syria's bitter denunciation of last month's Sinai accord between Egypt and Israel.
"We discussed the Middle East problem in all its aspects and the conversation was very helpful," Waldheim said after four hours of talks.
"In the light of this, I shall now try to be helpful in making progress towards a global resolution of the Middle East problem," he said. "Of course I shall be taking the Syrian ideas to the Israelis."

Waldheim refused to say if Assad had given him any specific Syrian proposals for the Israelis.
He also refused to say if Syria had agreed to extend the mandate stationing 1,200 U.N. peace-keeping troops on the Golan Heights along the Syrian-Israeli border.
"This matter of course was discussed but the conversation being confidential, I cannot give any answer to this yet," Waldheim said.
Reports circulating in diplomatic circles, however, said the mandate would be renewed when it expires Nov. 30.
Waldheim, who arrived in Damascus Saturday, also met with Palestinian guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat.
"We reviewed the Middle East situation, especially Lebanon where Arafat stressed the Palestinians' respect for the country's safety, integrity and independence," Waldheim said.
In Tel Aviv, meanwhile, the national radio indicated that four new Jewish settlements would be established on the Golan Heights, captured from Syria during the 1967 Middle East war.
The radio said the government's decision to set up the additional settlements was made following an Arab guerrilla attack Thursday on the southern Golan settlement of Ramat Magshrum.

Two Burglaries Reported Here

Two house burglaries were reported today to the Pampa Police Department — both on Roberta Street.
A burglary at 604 North Roberta was discovered by a neighbor while the family was on vacation.
Entry was gained through a kitchen window, and the suspects left through the door. No determination has been made of what was taken.
Another burglary was reported at 620 Roberta — a vacant furnished house. No missing items were reported.

Answer to Life Question?

Judge Robert Muir Jr. has placed overriding importance on the sanctity of human life in his decision denying a request by the parents of Karen Ann Quinlan to disconnect the respirator that is keeping her alive. By no means, however, can we assume that the last word has been spoken on the agonizing issues raised in this case.

Whether the Quinlans appeal the verdict or not, there is a good chance that courts will be wrestling with the same questions for years to come. The development of life-sustaining apparatus has opened the way for countless Karen Ann Quinlans to hover between life and death for indefinite periods. Those on the sidelines will be caught up in the same legal, moral and religious uncertainties that led the Quinlans to take their case to court.

Judge Muir concludes that the law cannot condone a deliberate act to terminate a comatose patient's life, and if the means are at hand to sustain life, they must be used. Debate will continue, we are sure, on whether the medically hopeless state of Miss Quinlan should be defined as "life" within the meaning of the law.

In abortion cases court rulings have failed to give a satisfactory answer to the profound question of when "life" begins and when an unborn child receives the law's protection of its right to survive. Judge Muir's judicial conscience has spoken on a similar question at the opposite end of life's spectrum, but with the same sense of a futile probing at the limits of man's understanding of the mystery of life.

"Qualifications be hanged, man! He'd be out of your hair!"

American Way Advocate

William S. Mitchell, president of the giant Safeway Stores Inc., is a man who knows a good thing when he sees it — free enterprise, for instance — and would like to strike back at its detractors with the truth about the value and virtue of private business.

"It's time to speak up for free enterprise," Mitchell told a recent meeting of stockholders in Baltimore. "Let's speak up to friends, associates, anybody who will listen about the American way of doing business. It has been a good and constructive force in this country for 200 years."

Mitchell said the business community has been too uncommunicative, too docile and too defensive for too long and suggested that an activist group oriented toward free enterprise get busy and turn things around.

Where do we begin? Mitchell asked. "There is nothing I would like more than for Safeway's more than 60,000 shareholders to be the nucleus for such a movement," he said. "We can start by speaking up wherever we are."

"Private enterprise has its faults and we must correct them, but it is the only known system under which our personal freedom can exist."

Mitchell told his audience that he was confident of the company's future in its relations with customers, employees and the physical plant. "The critical problem is not in operating our business," he said. "It is in the current attacks on the food industry by an array of activists, regulatory agencies, bureaus and some politicians."

"I am deeply concerned about the distorted allegations being made by some of these politicians and government agencies who seem to be trying to turn our customers against us. They seem to want us to end up as either a highly regulated industry or be broken up, or both. We cannot afford to ignore or underestimate these forces; they are very adroit and articulate in appealing for an easy solution to every problem by change — solely for the sake of change. The remedies may not fit the 'ill' and the 'cure' may be more costly and debilitating than the presumed disease."

Mitchell quoted David Packard, a businessman who had first hand exposure as deputy secretary of defense as saying, "The nation's current economic problems are being compounded by the unsound and inconsistent regulations placed on business and industry by the federal government."

Industry representations to government have had relatively little effect because they have tended to be summarily dismissed as the "biased corporate view." Letters from a few business firms won't carry much weight, but 31 million communications from 31 million stockholders would cause a ground swell that could not be ignored.

"Let's be positive and support good bills and oppose bad ones. Stockholders are directly affected by the many regulations that increase the cost of doing business (or prevent savings) in the firms they own, or that obstruct possible improvements in business methods. Take a look at this example."

"Someone has said that corporations don't pay taxes; they collect them." These taxes have to be passed along to you the customer in the price of goods you buy. On top of this, do you think it's right that your dividends are taxed twice — once as corporate income tax and again as income to you?

"If the 31 million stockholders of American companies all decided at the same time to complain about this to their representatives in congress, they would be heard, and something would be done about this long-standing inequity."

"I am suggesting that every stockholder look critically at all governmental actions or proposals which might adversely affect his or her rights as a stockholder, as a citizen and as a customer. We need to be sure that these rights and interests do not get submerged in the morass of ever-increasing governmental meddling. We must guard against 'overprotectionism' from whatever source. The time has come when we should give some attention to 'protecting' ourselves from self-appointed or overly zealous protectors."

Nice going Mr. Mitchell. You covered all the bases.

European View

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN
PARIS, FRANCE — America's problems sometimes can be best understood from abroad. Certainly, it is instructive to discover what Europeans read about the U.S. domestic scene.

The New York City financial crisis is a case in point. If one reads international editions of Newsweek and the Herald Tribune, which are jointly owned by The New York Times and the Washington Post, one finds nothing save pro-bailout stories, editorials and opinion columns. The reluctance of the majority of Americans to give vast financial aid to profligate New York City is presented as provincialism and a lack of enlightenment.

What one obtains from a majority of English-language journals in Europe is a view of America peculiar to the liberal bailiwicks of New York and Washington. The flood of pro-bailout writing testifies to the influence and arrogance of the media giants of the Northeast Corridor.

New York City isn't broadly representative of America, however. Therefore, Europeans who get the New York City view of U.S. problems simply aren't getting an accurate picture of the American Republic in all its diversity.

Europeans need to know more about the OTHER America — the America west and south of the Hudson River and north of the metropolis. For all the concentration of money power and media power in New York City, it no longer completely dominates the nation.

The television networks still manage the news and attempt to structure events in their presentation of them. Today, however, the national television audience is wiser and more aware of the networks' efforts at manipulation of opinion.

The major New York banks are very eager for the President and the Congress to pull their chestnuts — the tax-free New York City bonds — out of the fire, but bankers elsewhere in the nation urge a more prudent course of action.

There is a certain moral justice in the New York City situation. For years, the metropolis has sought to shape the nation in a variety of ways, ranging from financial matters to public opinion.

School systems in distant regions have had to put up with books which they believed were politically distorted by New York-based publishers. Many communities have suffered at the hands of arrogant media types — Time magazine, for example. The labor barons of New York City have held a virtual veto power in political affairs.

In the world of ideas, New York City has carried out a far from subtle censorship, boosting writers who follow fashionable ideas and ignoring authors who declined to subscribe to the liberal orthodoxy. New York City, for example, is a stronghold of left-oriented theorists who urge vastly expanded public spending.

Now, at last, New York City is very sick. It is sick because it has indulged in all the hurtful practices that it has urged on the nation as a whole.

New York City is bankrupt not only in a fiscal sense but in an intellectual and moral sense as well. Americans and Europeans need to understand this.

The cure for New York City is not a transfusion of federal dollars. The cure doesn't involve budgetary gimmicks.

It is grossly misleading to present a federal loan guarantee as an attempt to "save the city." As National Review has noted, such guarantees represent an attempt "to save a select group of investors from the consequences of making bad investments. Those stuck with the bonds of W.T. Grant do not get the same consideration."

A federal bailout would not produce the necessary reforms in New York City, including abolition of rent control, institution of tuition at the city university — and at the same level as paid by students attending state universities, and renegotiation of outrageous pension plans and unjustified wage scales for public employees. In short, New York City must adopt a wholly new regimen and outlook.

Beyond that, New York City must shed itself of its arrogance. It must look to the OTHER America — to the West, Middle West and South — and to responsible communities elsewhere in the Northeast — for a clearer understanding of good public order.

New York City, of course, may never be the same again after the current crisis. Indeed it should not remain in the same relation to the rest of the country. By its profligate ways, New York City has forfeited the position of leadership in the country which it has enjoyed for so long.

DEAR ABBY: This problem is making me physically ill. We live in the suburbs, and my husband works in the city. A bar-type restaurant recently opened near Vic's office that features a "go-go lunch" — complete with nude girls who dance and wait on tables. Vic and several men in his department lunch there daily now.

I am very much upset over this, and Vic knows it, but he makes light of it. He's a hot-blooded Latin, and just the thought of his being aroused by naked girls every day is more than I can bear.

How should I handle this? I've considered meeting him in town for lunches, but the trains don't run at the proper times. Also, I am tied down with small children.

PHILADELPHIA WIFE

DEAR PHILLY: What are your alternatives? Ordering your husband to quit going there for lunch? Sorry, but he's a big boy, and you aren't his mother.

I seriously doubt that the girls are nude. (Topless, maybe, but hardly naked at lunchtime.) After the novelty wears off — and it will — all that nudity will become about as exciting as looking at a lot of dressed turkeys hanging in a butcher-shop window!

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my nose! I hate it. I am 18 and have a fairly good personality and lots of friends especially at church. But everybody seems to notice my nose, and I think it's high time I did something about it.

What really hurts, Abby, is that there's this guy who goes to my church. I like him a lot, but because of my nose he calls me "747."

If you could see my nose, you'd know what I mean. Where can I find a plastic surgeon who wouldn't charge me a fortune? Even the pastor, in a very nice way, told me I had a nose problem. Help!

DEAR "747": If you are convinced that you'll never land a guy with that 747, ask your family doctor if he knows a plastic surgeon who would operate now, and let you make monthly payments.

DEAR ABBY: Please don't throw this in the wastebasket. I must have an answer.

Whenever my husband and I are invited out for dinner, it seems to be the rule that everyone should sit by someone else's spouse. If I ask to sit beside mine, I'm accused of being jealous or possessive.

Abby, I don't go out to dinner very often, so it's a special occasion to me, and I like to have my man near me. Sitting next to a stranger at dinner doesn't make me feel very romantic after I get home.

What is your opinion? These people are mostly my husband's business associates.

LONESOME

DEAR LONESOME: Most married people enjoy dinner conversation with someone other than their own spouses. That's the object of socializing. Perhaps you are slightly jealous, possessive or insecure. If so, admit it, and try to overcome it.

How does your husband feel about sitting next to a stranger at dinner? If he enjoys it, I suggest that you learn to enjoy it, too.

'Buycentennial' Is Okay

Cynics, disillusioned by the flood of merchandise commemorating the 200th anniversary of American independence designed to lure consumer dollars, have labeled the celebration the "Buycentennial."

T-shirts, belt buckles, ice buckets, tricorn hats and alarm clocks are among the items given Bicentennial ties in the competition to profit from patriotism.

But souvenirs and gimmicks were common a century ago, too, when the nation observed its 100th birthday with an exposition at Philadelphia.

And those who object to the commercialism in Bicentennial preparations fail to recognize that the trading instinct is an American tradition.

An English writer, Frances Trollope, noted as early as 1832 "Nothing can exceed their (Americans') activity and perseverance in all kinds of speculation, handicraft and enterprise, which promises a profitable pecuniary result. . . . It's the American way.

Alaskan Oil Comes High

The nation's immediate hope for eased energy pressures has for the last few years centered on the untapped oil fields on Alaska's North Slope.

And now, according to an article in U.S. News & World Report, new rich strikes indicate potential production of double the proved reserves of 10 billion barrels of North Slope oil. In addition, there are staggering amounts of natural gas.

But the flow of oil to begin in mid-1977 and increase to two million barrels a day within a decade will carry a price tag in the same range as that of the Arab oil on which we currently are dependent.

Alaska's vast energy resources will go far toward freeing America from the clutches of oil-rich nations abroad — but not all the way. And there is little indication of relief from the pain of spiraling energy costs.

The benefits of Alaskan oil should exceed even the bright promise of the North Slope fields and the pipeline project, but the search for other sources and energy alternatives cannot be abandoned.

Choose snacks with an eye on their food values (protein, vitamins and minerals), not just for calories.

GOP, Demos Discuss Politics

United Press International
A dozen Republican governors were in Wichita, Kan., during the weekend discussing what they saw as the issues upon which the 1976 may turn. Seven Democratic presidential candidates were in Louisville, Ky., doing the same thing.

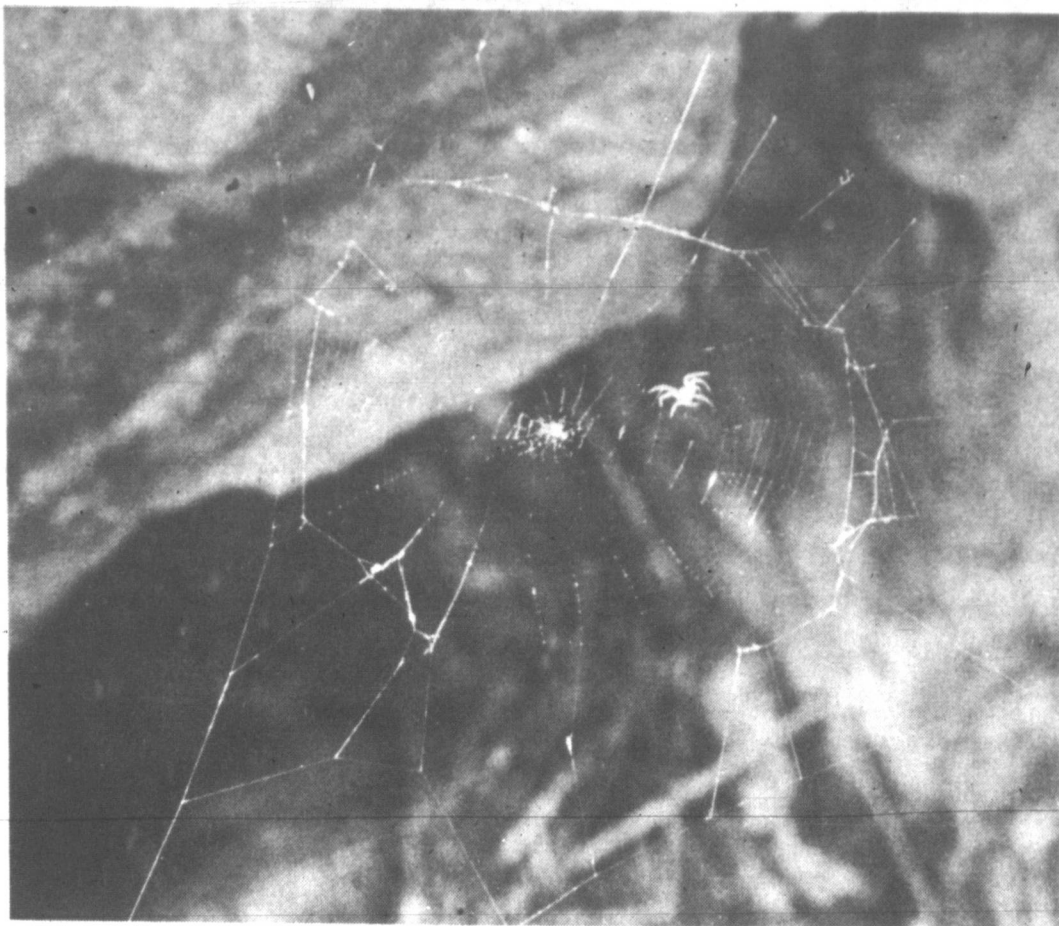

not originally on the conference agenda. An antibusing leader was allowed to address the forum Sunday but got a cool reception. Sen. George McGovern, the party's 1972 presidential candidate, told the delegates that busing — more particularly the issue of integration — is a voter concern most of the Democratic contenders are ignoring.

McGovern, who said he would like to be nominated again if next year's convention is deadlocked, said "all of us should warn any candidate who turns to the tactic of racial division and fear that in conscience we should not support him even if he is the nominee."

Among the candidates present, Sens. Henry Jackson and Lloyd Bentsen said they oppose busing. The issue worrying the Republican governors was the economy. Five of them appeared Sunday on ABC's Issues and Answers and speculated that inflation, high taxes, unemployment and government's inability to deliver quality services could hurt President Ford's chances next year more than any opponent.

Polster Louis Harris told the governors Saturday the public has grown farther apart from its political leaders in recent years. "The gulf between the public and its leadership has rarely been so wide or deep," he said, pointing to polls showing a sharp drop in Americans' confidence in big business and the presidency.

He also said most voters believe the Republicans are dominated by big business and that its influence on national policy must end.

Military Advertises Slogans on Race Cars

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Army and the Marine Corps figure young, mechanically inclined people would make good recruits and that the place to find them is at professional car racing tracks.

The two services said Saturday they have spent about $100,000 this year to get recruiting slogans painted on race cars.

The Navy also uses race car recruiting signs, but only when drivers volunteer space on their cars at no cost to the taxpayer.

The practice of paying drivers to put recruiting slogans on their cars has drawn criticism from the International Hot Rod Association. It says drivers such as Don Prudhomme, for the Army, and Mickey Thompson, for the Marines, use the money to become more competitive.

"We feel that if the armed services want to go racing they should take the money and distribute it like the other manufacturer and accessory companies... (so) all racers could wear the armed services decals and have a chance at part of the money," said Larry Carrier, president of the association.

All three services using race car advertising refuse to endorse drivers or their machines. Army and Marine contracts call for racers to do more than just paint signs on their cars.

The Marines gave UPI a copy of their contract with Thompson, worth $53,199 for 1975. Most of the money was for carrying the sign, but Thompson also had to provide five passes for each race, display his car in occasional auto shows and give the Marines 10,000 color photos.

An Army spokesman said Prudhomme, named "Drag Racing's Man of the Year" in 1974 and "Funny Car Driver of the Year" in 1975, got $40,000 in 1974 and $50,000 this year.

The Army put its message on Prudhomme's car and also on plastic models of the car sold in toy and hobby stores. The Army also has bought space on Buddy Baker's stock car and Richard Nahan's drag racer.

Navy officials said their program began a few years ago when George Hurst, a Philadelphia racing parts manufacturer and former 3rd class petty officer, "said he wanted to repay the Navy for what it had taught him."

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — The new king of Spain looked down for a moment at the grave of Generalissimo Francisco Franco, the man who gave him the crown, then squared his shoulders and turned to face the world and his problems alone.

Juan Carlos, in his first full day as ruler, led hundreds of thousands of Spaniards in saying farewell Sunday to the man who chose him as his successor but refused to share his one-man rule until his death.

Now, at last, with the 82-year-old Franco in his tomb, the regime of King Juan Carlos I of the Bourbon Dynasty could begin in earnest.

A few hours later, the king conferred with Jose Antonio Giron, leader of the right-wing Falange movement that provided the ideological spearhead for Franco's forces in the Spanish Civil War.

Over 100,000 Falangists gathered in disciplined ranks at the Valley of the Fallen, 36 miles north of Madrid, to stage a dramatic, emotional farewell as their idol was buried.

Wearing their traditional blue shirts, the Falangists shouted,

"march with determination forward on the road already marked out, perfecting and completing the work that Franco accomplished."

Spain buried its leader of 36 years with great outpourings of people.

Officials said some 300,000 persons — many weeping, some fainting — passed before Franco's coffin during 47 hours of lying in state at the Royal Palace.

A crowd estimated at 200,000 gathered Sunday morning in the palace square for an open air mass.

Then, as Spaniards waved white handkerchiefs in farewell, the shiny mahogany coffin topped with the general's baton was taken in a flatbed truck to the Valley of the Fallen.

There was a brief Catholic burial service in a church; cut into the granite mountain, which Franco had selected both as a memorial to the civil war dead and as his last resting place.

Mrs. Franco and her daughter, the Marquesa de Villaverde, did not attend although they were at the Madrid ceremony. Franco's granddaughter, Carmencita, wept as did most other Franco family members.

Turkey Costs More This Year

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Like everything else, turkeys are costing more this year, but they are a still a good buy this month compared to other meats, the Agriculture Department says.

A USDA poultry expert said Sunday farmers are sending more turkeys to market this fall than a year ago, but overall supplies are still down and the bird costs about 15 per cent more than last year.

The poultry economist, William E. Cathcart, said farmers who held production down during most of the year now are expanding. They will send about 6 per cent more turkeys to market from October through December than they did a year earlier, he estimated.

But the toll of a cutback earlier this year is still being felt. Cathcart said that even with the current upswing, total supplies available to consumers this Thanksgiving are below a year ago because cold storage stocks are down sharply.

For consumers, economist Gerald Rector said that while prices vary from city to city, retail costs for Thanksgiving appear to be about 15 per cent above a year ago. Washington area chains, he said, have advertised turkey for about 10 cents a pound more than last year.

But in many areas turkey is cheaper than the national average because stores lower the cost of the turkey to get customers into the store to buy high-profit trimmings.

Air Force officials alone refuse to follow suit, discouraging even the use of donated space, because the risks of looking bad after a wreck or a lost race are too great.

"What would happen if the Air Force car, say, came in second to a Navy car?" a spokesman asked. "Does that mean the Navy's better?"

Remove awnings from the sunny side of your home, and store them indoors. This will allow more sun — and natural heat — to come in the windows, and increase the life of the awnings as well.

Energy Prices Will Reignite Recession

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Higher energy prices will reignite the recession unless the federal government expands the money supply or reduces taxes, according to a Brookings Institution paper.

George Perry, and economist, said in the paper published Sunday by the nonprofit research organization that newly increased oil prices could spark inflation throughout the economy.

If the government responds with anti-inflation policies — limiting the money supply and avoiding tax reduction — production and employment will suffer, Perry said.

But if the government responds with tax cuts or the Federal Reserve Board adopts easier monetary policies, the problem of energy-stimulated inflation can be overcome more rapidly, the Brookings fellow wrote.

Perry said primarily there is a "need to offset the depressing effect of higher energy prices on the economy."

He said "higher energy prices aggravate inflation both through their direct, one-time effect on the average price level and indirectly to the extent that this direct effect sets off faster wage increases."

Perry said the last recession was spurred by sudden oil price increases, fear of an energy shortage and subsequent, although smaller, increases for coal and natural gas.

The prices came out of consumer pockets and went into the coffers of domestic and foreign oil companies which did not spend the extra dollars as fast as consumers would have. The result was a fading consumer demand for cars, homes, clothes and other goods — and the worst recession in 40 years.

Perry said oil prices will continue to rise for years although if there is a renewal of recession it will last for a shorter period, provided there is a conservation and development program for energy resources.

Perry predicted that as the nation adjusts to higher prices over the next decade or two the increase in jobs and production will be slower than in recent history.

Castro 'Sad' About CIA Plot

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Cuban Premier Fidel Castro was deeply saddened when he learned of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy because the two leaders had just reached an "understanding" about renewing diplomatic relations, according to a report today in the Providence Journal-Bulletin.

Convicted Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt told the newspaper that he interviewed a woman in Miami who said she was in the Castro household the day the president was shot 12 years ago.

Hunt told the newspaper that he was working for the Nixon administration when he interviewed the woman and that he gave his report to the Central Intelligence Agency.

"(The) reaction was one of moroseness because he (President Kennedy) was dead. Because Castro had counted upon John Kennedy to reestablish diplomatic relations, and that there had been some sort of understanding," Hunt said.

A report released last week by the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence disclosed that President Kennedy had sent an "emissary" to Castro the day he was killed.

Richard L. Goodwin, a former Kennedy aide, confirmed

Sunday that negotiations between Kennedy and Castro were taking place at the United Nations level.

There has been speculation that the Kennedy assassination was in retaliation for CIA plots against the Cuban Premier.

Hunt said that if the woman is telling the truth it "doesn't seem to me that Castro was in the mood for vengeance at the time."

Hunt said he rated the woman's story as "probably true."

Goodwin told the newspaper that negotiations between Kennedy and Castro were taking place between William Atwood, a former ambassador and now publisher of Newsday, a Long Island, N.Y. newspaper, and Cuban officials.

"Kennedy was making an effort. How close Atwood was to success I don't know, but this is clearly what Kennedy had in mind," Goodwin said.

NY City on Collision Course

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — State legislative leaders today still were trying to get President Ford to change his mind and back federal aid for New York City. Their chosen path — $205 million in increased city taxes.

It was not proving an easy road. The leaders spent the weekend dealing with an impasse they hoped to resolve when the legislature resumed at noon today.

To complicate things, New York City banks, holding $500 million in short-term city debt, were reported pressing for increased state taxes as well.

The banks, were said to feel that their agreement not to press for immediate payment of the notes had been voided by Gov. Hugh Carey's decision to separate proposals for state and city tax hikes. But a Carey spokesman said Sunday night however he was unaware of any specific ultimatum.

The city tax package is intended to demonstrate to Ford that New York is doing its best to solve its fiscal problems. But it ran aground in the legislature Saturday when Republicans, liberal Democrats and black and Hispanic lawmakers jumped ship.

There were few visible signs that Carey or assembly speaker Stanley Steingut, both Democrats, had made much progress in clearing the roadblocks.

Major elements of the tax package are a 25 per cent hike in city income taxes, a 50 per cent surcharge on state estate taxes paid by city residents, $30 - $40 million in business levies and a handful of "nuisance taxes."

Carrillo Returns to Court

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (UPI) — South Texas District Judge O.P. Carrillo has battled to keep his job in the face of impeachment proceedings in the Texas Senate, possible removal from office by a state commission and a conviction for federal income tax violations.

Carrillo returns to court today to learn whether he has been successful in a bid for a new trial on the income tax charges.

Carrillo and his brother

Ramiro Carrillo have filed a 54-point motion for a new trial. District Judge Owen Cox recessed a hearing on the request a week ago.

Cox said if he denies the motion for a new trial, he will sentence the Carrillos.

The Texas Senate voted for a third delay last week in hearing the presentation of evidence against Carrillo.

Senate proponents of the delay said Carrillo's attorneys needed time to prepare an appeal before formal sentencing on the income tax conviction and said the delay would allow the state Judicial Qualifications Commission to make its decision on Carrillo's fitness as a judge.

Woman Wins, Blows up Bridge

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (UPI) — Progress and a housewife with 55 pounds of dynamite sent the old and rusting Kanawha Bridge to a watery grave.

For Mrs. Barbara Oros, pushing the button that triggered the explosives Sunday was about the biggest thing that's happened in Charleston since she moved here six months ago.

Mrs. Oros' name was drawn at random in The Charleston Daily Mail's "Blow Up the Bridge" contest.

As the bridge crashed in one thunderous blast before an audience of 10,000, Mrs. Oros said, "This is really a great sight. It's really fantastic."

Progress — with Mrs. Oros' ultimate help — brought an end to the span. After 60 years of linking this capital city with the coalfields of southwestern West Virginia, it has been replaced by a new interstate highway bridge downstream.

Mrs. Oros said she wanted to blow up the bridge because the demolition was on her husband Mike's birthday. The couple and their three children were on hand for the blast.

"I'll bet this is the best present he ever gets," she said.

She did have some unsettling moments. She said the large turnout and a one-hour delay caused by morning fog made her uneasy.

Then someone on a stern-wheeler upriver fired a cannon three times minutes before the bridge explosion was scheduled. Each time the cannon went off, explosive company owner Dave Martin and others flinched.

While the crowd waited, a high school band played taps and "Auld Lang Syne."

Police sealed off a 1,000-foot area along Kanawha Boulevard made sure onlookers kept a safe distance. The U.S. Coast Guard ordered all boats out of the immediate area and a fire truck and several ambulances stood by.

Warren Anderson has said his house is prepared to approve the taxes, but he has insisted the Democratic-run assembly make the first move.

Ford said he would decide on the loan guarantees this week, before he leaves for China.

The old span crumbled without a hitch.

With the crowd cheering, the bridge splashed down in chunks of about 10 tons each. Martin's cranes were poised in the water, ready to confront a 48-hour deadline for clearing the debris so heavy river traffic could resume.

"Everything went fine," Martin beamed.

Police Subdue Bandit After Lubbock Chase

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI) — A bandit robbed a restaurant, kidnaped an employee and held off police for five hours by threatening to kill the hostage. Police used teargas to subdue the bandit and freed the hostage unharmed today.

The suspect, whose name was not released, was taken to nearby Tahoka, Tex. for arraignment.

After the robbery the bandit fled in the hostage's car at speeds of up to 115 miles per hour. Police ended the chase by shooting the car's tires, but the bandit threatened to kill the hostage unless he was given another car and a police officer as a hostage.

Lubbock police Lt. David White negotiated with the bandit as he sat in the disabled car holding a gun on the hostage, who was not identified.

"He (the suspect) was in the vehicle with a gun on the hostage when he was gassed," said police spokesman Ronny Sowell.

"He would only negotiate with Lt. White and White was in the car when the tear gas was injected into the vehicle. White and the hostage both got a real good dose of the tear gas and were taken to the hospital."

Police managed to stop the bandit's car about 20 miles south of Lubbock on U.S. 87. Authorities diverted traffic from the area while they negotiated with the bandit.

"He's wanting a car and a police officer for a hostage," police spokesman James Kimber reported shortly after the incident began. "We haven't agreed to anything yet."

Kimber said the bandit robbed the restaurant of an undetermined amount of money shortly after closing time.

Woman Journalist Visits China

Homes Equipped with Loudspeakers

(Editor's Note: UPI's Gay Pauley has just completed a three-week, five-city visit to the People's Republic of China as part of The Delegation for Friendship among Women. She was the only news correspondent in a group of 16 professional women. She reports her impressions, with emphasis on women, family life and education, in a five-part series.)

By GAY PAULEY
PEKING (UPI) — You don't capture the mood of the New China in a three-week visit. You go as a visitor absorbing as much of it as you can in that time.

The first thing to greet you when you embark at the Peking airport and walk the long tarmac to the terminal is the giant outdoor portrait of Chairman Mao Tse-tung set on a red background. You learn later that red, the symbol of the Chinese Liberation, will be on display wherever you go.

The terminal itself looks almost as large as New York's Grand Central — without people. On our brief refueling stop before continuing on to Shanghai, officially the first city on our five-city itinerary, we were the only passengers to reboard.

Three weeks later, departing from Peking for the United States, we found a few more travelers, but nothing like the masses encountered in a busy Western airport.

Our meeting with Chairman Mao was only in pictures, statues and quotations — an association that continued through our 6,000-mile journey on the four other cities we visited — Shanghai, Soochow, Nanking and Sian. We requested personal visits but we never received a response.

Every way you turn in the new China, there is a reminder of the leader of the estimated 800 million people who populate this vast area. Some veteran Western observers of the Asian scene guess the total may be closer to one billion.

But in every city, every square, there are the portraits and the exhortations, always with the symbolic red background. Often the red star also is part of the scene.

Mao exhorts workers in fields and factories. On a visit to a small factory in Shanghai, where workers — mostly women — were hand-producing flashlight bulbs for export, we asked our senior guide, Liu Yu Chen, for translation of some of the signboards and banners.

"United to Strive for a Great Victory," one said. Another read, "Study Seriously and Have a Good Grasp of Marxism and Lenin." A red banner at a commune entrance south of Shanghai reminded, "Proletariat of the World, Unite."

Mao definitely is the No. 1 man with the people, although some Western observers remind that the chairman is getting along in years — he's 81. Premier Chou En-lai, 77, is ill. And they say the man really running the central government is Deputy Premier Teng Hsiang-ping.

Our group met in each of the five cities with representatives of the Chinese Women's Federation, a political arm of the Communist party. The idea was a give and take, but they gave and we took. Rarely did they ask questions about the Western woman's lifestyle.

Everywhere the party line went on, with quotations at the opening of the briefing sessions referring to Mao. Once I asked one of the federation groups bluntly, "When Chairman Mao dies, what then?"

There was a bit of sputtering between the women and the interpreter, and then the answer came back that many supporters of the Mao principle would carry on.

The Chinese are the ultimate of thoughtfulness for their guests. And always they are on time. If our bus pulled up to a hospital for a scheduled there would be some of the doctors outside to greet us. And they were there to wave us goodbye when our visit ended.

Workers are exhorted not only by the Mao banners to produce more and do their duty for the masses, but also there is the loudspeaker, which blare from poles at communes and factories.

China is not a quiet place, even in the countryside.

During meal breaks at factory or farm, Radio Peking broadcasts are carried via loudspeakers — our guide told us sometimes news, sometimes patriotic music, sometimes music to exercise by.

We learned that most families also have a loudspeaker at home. The first radio I found was in our hotel room in Peking where we spent our final few days in the People's Republic. But I saw none in schools or at children's hospitals.

I asked the head of a resettled family near Shanghai about television. Yes, he said, there were some neighbors who owned sets. He did not but planned to build his own, with a neighbor's help. He didn't say from what.

We were not prepared for the intense curiosity about "the big-nosed people — Westerners."

Then we realized many of the Chinese never had seen a Western face. The doors to the Western world were slammed shut when the People's Republic came to power in 1949. It only began to reopen to the United States with former President Nixon's visit in the spring of 1972.

Everywhere we went we were mobbed, literally. There must be a super-grapevine system of verbal reporting. When we were scheduled to depart a hotel, no matter what the hour, a sea of Chinese of all ages surrounded us.

Not keeping a distance, mind you, but moving in for a closeup, openly staring. But polite, always.

Many times a father or mother would hold a toddler high so the little ones could get a look too. School children would angle for higher spots to get a better view.

There never were any pushing, any shoving. And never anything but that friendly curiosity. No hostility.

In a country where the government is the one-party system, we were asked frequently to explain the U.S. two-party (or more) method.

"What party do you belong to," one of our junior guides asked. When I told her that as a voter in New York I could register Independent, she was lost. You had to be either a Republican or Democrat. I never got across the message that you do not have to belong to one or the other to vote in a general election.

Maybe President Ford can help out here. Incidentally, not once were we asked about our president.

The People's Republic is a land of contrasts in thousands of ways. It is a nation which obviously has eliminated a lot of the ills Before Liberation, still is finding its way After Liberation.

We heard constantly, "We have made progress. We still have much to do. Much yet to accomplish."

But we heard also constantly that The People's Republic has no inflation — prices are unchanged. And there is no unemployment.

Indeed we saw no idle hands. But when we asked from whence came the crowds at a midafternoon movie or greeting us at our hotel, the answer was that the PRC operates on a rotating 24-hour day — a worker would be off his eight-hour shift.

China's big push is to be self-sufficient. Everywhere, we heard that it now is, including in oil with new field discoveries. Mao exhorts the self-sufficiency constantly.

We asked, for instance, for translation of his quotations at the famed Nanking Bridge which crosses the Yangtze, China's largest river, once crossed only by ferry.

The self-dependence is spelled out in a superstructure at the end of the bridge, which handles both vehicular and rail traffic. Mao's principle: "Rely on our own independence, take initiative in both hands, rely on our own efforts."

Always the women with whom we met proclaimed friendship with "your people." At every session with women's federation groups, as we bade farewell, we would hear, "Take our friendship to your people."

When our group of 16 women stopped overnight in Geneva before heading on to New York and points West and South, we garnered enough strength for a final meeting and a try at a quick summary of impressions.

It was too soon for such assessment.

The only consensus was that our trip had been an indescribable experience and we would go back — as soon as our hosts invited us.

TOURISM COURSE

MONTEGO BAY, Jamaica (UPI) — A course on tourism will be taught in Jamaican schools beginning next year in an effort to improve attitudes toward the island's key industry, which has suffered a sharp drop. Tourism Minister P.J. Patterson announced.

Patterson said his office also planned to inaugurate immediately an education program on tourism for industry workers from management level on down.

The minister's announcement coincided with a report by Tourism Director Adrian Robinson that tourism dropped by about 8.4 per cent during the first seven months of 1975.

Splash of Paisley

A vivid splash of paisley in this wrap up is making fashion news from now straight through spring and summer. They come in squares, triangles and long serapes. They accentuate ensembles with draping, tying or muffling into any chic position. Seven-foot long slinks appear in stripes and solids and designed to be wrapped anywhere from the head to hip with fashion stops on the way at the neck or waistline.

Fashion consultants suggest a bias fold to turn into a triangle for the newest look in scarf coverage. Other plusses include the potential of wrapping around the hips, fanny-wraper fashion or doing the sarong bit over a bikini.

Christmas Need Not Be Budget Buster for '75

By FRANK MACOMBER
Copley News Service

If you have more Christmas spirit than money, the name of the Yuletide game is "shop around." This Dec. 25 could be a budget-buster for a lot of American families, but it doesn't necessarily have to be for the wise shopper.

Cast around and you'll likely find a whole passel of attractive gifts at prices even you can afford. You don't have to break the bank to make a few folks merry at Christmas time. Here, for example, is a smattering of gift ideas well within the pocketbook power of most people:

Today most of us have more leisure and less money to spend on recreation. So a lot of folks are pursuing new hobbies, games and crafts, rediscovering how much fun an evening at home with the family really can be.

New from Whitman's Game Testing Laboratory, for instance, is Hock Shop. It sells for about $5 and is designed for from two to four players — adults and children beyond the age of 10.

Players compete for a ring, fur coat, violin, candlesticks, a watch and a camera. Just as there is at the corner hock shop in the real world, there's risk involved. Players must watch out for stolen property, gamble on being able to pay the pawnbroker and know what to buy and hock — and when.

If your friends or relatives can't make it to Las Vegas, Casino Vegas can bring them some of the excitement and fast action of the gaming tables. Casino Vegas sells for about $5 and is based on luck and chance, yet experience can help the player to match wits with the laws of probability.

There's blackjack, poker, dice shooting, roulette, even slot machines. The object of Casino Vegas is to win the most money during an agreed time limit or dollar goal. Usually it's one hour or $50,000, whichever comes first.

For the younger set, Skil-Craft's Ceramic Collectibles has expanded to Paintables as well this year. These are pre-cast bisque figurines fashioned after costly collectors' porcelains and replicas of Mickey Mouse and his pal, Donald Duck. Mouseketeers of an earlier generation and today's crop might find the Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck Paintable Kit a lot of fun at less than $6.

The creativity for Moppetsville comes in painting the figures. It's simple enough for young children yet can hold the interest of adults and teenagers who want to capture the look of costly collectors' porcelains.

This Christmas is certain to focus on our American forefathers as the nation begins to celebrate its Centennial only a week later. So gifts relating to early colonial times will be appropriate.

One of these is the Colonial

Collector's Series, reproductions of early American tankards and plates from Skil-Craft. The four sets (under $11 each) feature handcast metal alloy replicas of tankards or plates like the pewter ware formed by village artists in early America.

These rough pieces must be sanded, polished and antiqued to give them the satin luster of pewter. It's a task for ages 12 and older. The series includes: 1776 Drummer Boy engraved plate; two Clipper ships plates; two tankards embossed with The Great Seal of the United States of America; and two Picture Plates featuring full-color reproductions of scenes representing the Spirit of '76 and Betsy Ross.

TUESDAY, NOV. 25

Your birthday today: This year and next find you training on the job. You are most successful in politics, writing or office jobs.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: You are not making progress, even though you think you are. This winds up a cycle and leaves you no direction to go but upward. Resolve to make a new start early tomorrow.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Long explanations are misunderstood. Keep matters simple and try to cooperate with associates. Purchasing for future use isn't favored. What you buy is different from what you'll need.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Critical comment comes from all concerned with anything you do. Influential people are busy elsewhere and get annoyed by your questions. Compare notes tonight to solve a mystery.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Whatever is poorly put together falls apart. You overstate your case; stop the sales pitch and get your chores done. You receive news and are in better spirits this evening.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Do one thing at a time. Be ready to improvise when local incidents upset schedules. Decisions are based on incomplete information and wishful thinking.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Build stronger ties with people of similar interests. Avoid new business deals. Travel a bit and listen to estimates and new ideas. Be home early to deal with extraordinary events.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Let competitors try to outdo each other. Events boomerang for all who push too hard. Stick to routines and sidestep additional responsibility.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Respond promptly to intuition — luck gets you past the danger spot just before the trouble develops. Do your regular job without complaint. Good news brightens the home scene.

Shrink Art Topic for Club

A demonstration on shrink art was the program for members of Goodwill Home Demonstration Club which met Nov. 18 in the home of Mrs. Boyd Maul.

Mrs. Cecil Burnett gave the program and included suggestions for Christmas gifts.

President Mrs. A.P. Coombes asked members to take part in the Christmas party Dec. 8 at the Courthouse Annex.

I've heard of bake-offs, sew-offs, eat-offs and cook-offs, but the North American Bait Farms, Inc., of Ontario, Calif., is conducting a contest to find the best recipe using earthworms.

You heard right. That's earth as in ground and worms as in Yucca!

Ronald Gaddie, president of the company, asks that before you make a decision, consider the pros and cons.

PRO: These little creatures can turn waste into fertilizer for plants, they can feed fish and other animals, and when properly prepared make excellent eating for people.

CON: They can also turn your stomach. PRO: They are low in calories.

CON: Then how come a carp has no waistline? PRO: They can be baked in cookies, added to casseroles, or sprinkled on salads.

CON: So can coconut and it doesn't wriggle while you are baking, adding, and sprinkling. PRO: There is a prize of $500 for the best recipe.

CON: Money can't buy new friends. PRO: Call them "Ver de terre" and they become a gourmet dish.

CON: Get a smart-aleck translator and we're back to "bait" again.

PRO: They are an acquired taste.

CON: So is hemlock.

PRO: It would be handy to have gourmet food right in your own back yard.

CON: That's what Euell Gibbons said when he nearly choked to death on a hickory nut.

PRO: Cooking with earthworms leaves the taste to your imagination.

CON: My imagination would do better if the earthworm had two thighs, two wings and white meat.

Speaking as a truly biased bigot who has definite prejudices against the eating of earthworms, I'd like to enter my recipe early.

BAIT KABOBS

Take one Dixie cup of earthworms, coat with rich soil and pack in a coffee can (not too firmly).

Take individually and thread on a hooked skewer. Marinate in fresh water for as long as it takes. Feeds a family of four curious fish.

Bicentennial Quiz

Remember Declaratory Act?

How's your American history? Here's a test to put you in tune with the Bicentennial. The questions have to do with circumstances and events attending the nation's founding 200 years ago.

- Copley News Service
- (A) Where was the first American flag raised?
 (B) Which British statesman said: "I rejoice that America has resisted?"
 (C) What was the Declaratory Act?
 (D) Which is the oldest park in the United States?
 (E) Only 12 of the Original

13 Colonies were represented at the First Continental Congress. Which was the missing one?

(A) At Cambridge, Mass., by George Washington on Jan. 2, 1776. Called the Grand Union flag, it had 13 alternate red and white stripes, with a blue canton bearing the crosses of St. Andrew and St. George in the corner. It was never officially adopted by Congress.

(B) William Pitt, during the Parliamentary debate which led to repeal of the Stamp Act early in 1766.

(C) An act passed by Parliament in March, 1776, at the same time as it repealed the Stamp Act. The new act declared that the British government had full authority to pass laws for America "in all circumstances whatsoever."

(D) Boston Common. Set aside in 1634 for common use as a "cow pasture and training field," it became a camping ground for British soldiers during Boston riots.

(E) Georgia. Although it sent no delegates, it agreed to support any plans made at the meeting.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In an effort to counter the doctor drain from rural America, a private health care foundation plans to set up 25 modern small town medical practices designed to attract bright young physicians to similar communities.

The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation of Princeton, N.J., is committing $10 million to the innovative project.

"The program represents a search for new approaches to the problem of health care access in rural America," said Dr. David Rogers, president of the foundation.

The number of doctors

Health Care for Rural practicing in rural areas of the United States has dropped at a rate far greater than the decline in the overall rural population. As a result, the ratio of physicians to people in rural counties is less than half what it is in metropolitan counties.

In parts of the South, the situation is even more severe. In parts of Georgia, South Carolina, Alabama and Mississippi, there are an average of only 28 doctors for every 100,000 people. The national average is 156 per 100,000.

More than one of four Americans lives in rural communities and the foundation said they have traditionally been served by a lone, dedicated but overworked practitioner who lacks professional stimulation. This style of isolated professional life holds far less attraction for today's physicians.

"As a result, the pronounced loss of physicians from rural areas in recent years is matched by a reluctance among younger physicians to take over small town practices as they become vacant," the foundation said. It said its program is based on the premise that doctors who want to practice in rural communities are not extinct.

The plan, being administered by the University of North Carolina School of Medicine, will finance the establishment of a team of two or three physicians, an administrator and doctor's assistants and nurses in 25 selected communities of between 6,000 and 20,000 population that have a severe doctor shortage.

Foundation grants will cover start-up costs and salaries until the practices become self supporting, expected to occur in three or four years.

The idea is not just to recruit physicians for rural areas, but to show that modern, well-staffed and equipped practices can work in small communities. "We believe increasing numbers of young professionals would be attracted by the quality of life rural America offers if only they could see more examples of how modern practices, responsive to community needs, can be organized and successfully adapted to the environment," said Dr. Donald L. Madison, associate professor of family medicine at the university.

'Blast Their Counsels':

Abigail Adams, wife of John Adams of Massachusetts: "Let us separate; [the British authorities] are unworthy to be our brethren. Let us renounce them; and, instead of applications, ... let us beseech the Almighty to blast their counsels, and bring to naught all their devices."

Philologist Explores Stars, History

The Stars and Human History George Michanowsky is an explorer, philologist and director of aerial reconnaissance programs for archeological, environmental and related purposes. He is a Fellow of the Explorers Club, a member of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics, and a contributor to various encyclopedias. By GEORGE MICHANOWSKY presented the issue too narrowly. The attack was published in the latest issue of The Humanist magazine and received wide publicity which left the general impression that the stars have no influence on human affairs. Their assault, predictably caused, some controversy and the St. Louis Globe-Democrat editorially chided the scientists for taking themselves too seriously. Let me state, at the outset, that I am not active in astrology. On the other hand, I have conducted considerable research on the prehistoric origins of astronomy. I must emphatically point out that stars do indeed influence man's fate when, for instance, they explode as supernovae at a relatively short distance from our solar system. The amount of cosmic gamma and X-ray radiation sent out by such a catastrophic event can considerably affect the earth's climate and may have a strong psychological and, possibly, genetic impact on humans. Such a relatively "nearby" supernova is now known by astrophysicists to have exploded in the far-southern constellation Vela, about 10,000 years ago

(8000 BC). A margin for error on either side of this date must be allowed for, at the time of this writing, because of "glitches" in the pulse slowdown rate of the superdense collapsed remnant of this violent starburst. The event is generally referred to as Vela X and was the nearest such stellar explosion of which science has any knowledge. My investigations reveal that astronomical references in the first form of writing, the cuneiform script of the ancient Sumerians of Mesopotamia, contain indications of man's observation of this awesome spectacle, just above the watery horizon of what today is called the Persian Gulf. While any possible genetic influence of the gamma radiation that is certain to have broken through the shield of the earth's atmosphere is still a subject to be investigated further by scholars, there is a broad consensus that the psychological impact of this gigantic flareup in the sky must have had a significant organizing effect on cultural evolution. My research reveals that Sumerian myths, including traditions about the source of arts and letters and the beginnings of astronomy, are tightly interwoven with an apparent memory of this cataclysm in the southern sky. It may be of significance to some people that only now, at the beginning of the so-called Age of Aquarius, radio astronomy and advanced computer techniques have helped discover that at the dawn of human history, the true forerunner of the Aquarian concept briefly appeared to man and may indeed have affected the course of events for ages to come. Dallas Whips Philly

IRVING, Tex. (UPI) — It was Bob Lilly Day in Texas Stadium Sunday and it turned out to be the Dallas Cowboys' day, too.

It was Dallas' day since every poor thing the Cowboys did turned out right and because they finally built a lead they did not give away — although they tried.

The 27-17 Dallas decision over Philadelphia, inartistic though it was, kept the Cowboys tucked one game behind St. Louis in the NFC East with four games to play. The Eagles dropped to 2-8.

"Our job now is to beat the teams below us," said Dallas coach Tom Landry. "We have to win games like this one but we don't get any momentum from it. You only get momentum when you beat the challengers."

Dallas survived a lackluster first half with a 17-3 lead, thanks mostly to two screen passes from Roger Staubach to Preston Pearson for 49 and 33 yards.

And during the intermission, the Cowboys honored Lilly, Dallas' former all-pro defensive tackle, by retiring his number, the first player to receive that distinction since Dallas began playing football 16 years ago.

After that, Dallas twice built a 17-point lead only to see Philadelphia come back under the guidance of backup quarterback Vince Boryla. "We played well in the first half and had it under control," said Landry. "But when Roman Gabriel went out we seemed to relax and we let Boryla hit some big passes. It seems we don't go out and put it away when we need to."

With the game tied at 3-3, Pearson, a Pittsburgh castoff picked up by the Cowboys at the start of the season, scored on a five-yard run to complete a drive kept alive by an interference call against the Eagles' John Outlaw. The Philadelphia defensive back had intercepted on the play and the Eagle bench protested furiously over the close call.

A few minutes later Pearson ran a screen pass 49 yards to the Eagle 2 to set up a one-yard touchdown plunge by Staubach, who almost fumbled away the snap on the play.

A Tony Fritsch field goal, his second of the day, gave Dallas a 20-3 lead and it was then coach Mike McCormack pulled Gabriel from the game and put in Boryla to run the sputtering Eagles' attack which had been bothered by several broken plays.

"We weren't getting much done with Gabriel in there," said McCormack, "but it wasn't all his fault. I have confidence in Boryla and he's learning all the time. I told him I'd play him more and maybe give him a start in our remaining games."

Boryla led Philadelphia on two last-quarter touchdown drives, resulting in scoring runs of 13-yards by James McAlister and one yard by Ron James.

But in between those two scores, Dallas controlled the ball for seven minutes and a five-yard touchdown run by Doug Dennison made the deficit too large for the Eagles to make up.

Dallas chose to go with the ground game and screen passes to Pearson scored on the long passes that Staubach has been successful with this year.

Staubach suffered a shoulder injury last week against New England and that, in part, dictated Sunday's strategy against the Eagles.

"Roger had not worked out all week and was not sharp so we stayed on the ground and hoped it would last," said Landry. "The screen passes we ran today were the kind we used to run a lot with Calvin Hill."

"Preston is an excellent runner in the open field. He is a fine all around player."

Pearson gained 100 yards on four receptions while Staubach completed 11 of 15 passes for 155 yards and the Cowboys ground out 205 yards rushing.

Gabriel completed only half off his 26 passes and was intercepted twice before Boryla entered the game.

Vikings Still Unbeaten

By FRED DOWN
UPI Sports Writer

Fran Tarkenton, the scrambler, is No. 1 and Johnny Unitas, the classic quarterback, is No. 2.

The much-discussed and often-criticized Tarkenton surpassed Unitas and became the National Football League's all-time pass completion leader Sunday when he led the Minnesota Vikings to a 28-13 victory over the San Diego Chargers. It was the 10th straight victory for the unbeaten Vikings and assured them of at least a tie for the NFL's Central Division title.

Tarkenton completed 24 of 32 passes for 201 yards raising his 15-year completion total to 2,841, 10 more than the previous record held by Unitas. Tarkenton threw a 16-yard touchdown pass to Ed Marinaro and set up two of Chuck Foreman's three touchdown runs with passes.

With 285 touchdown passes, the 34-year old former Georgia star is now only five shy of another all-time NFL mark — 290 career touchdown passes.

"It's a great compliment to me and to my team for my breaking Unitas' completions record," said Tarkenton. "But I'll let everybody else do the counting and talking about the records. I've got one and the rest will come in time."

"All I can say is congratulations," commented Minnesota coach Bud Grant. "Fran is the greatest quarterback there is."

The Baltimore Colts upset the Miami Dolphins 33-17, the Oakland Raiders defeated the Washington Redskins 26-23, the Cleveland Browns surprised the Cincinnati Bengals 35-23, the Kansas City Chiefs shaded the Detroit Lions 24-21, the Los Angeles Rams routed the Chicago Bears 38-10, the Green Bay Packers drubbed the New York Giants 40-14, the Dallas Cowboys topped the Philadelphia Eagles 27-17, the St. Louis Cardinals ripped the New York Jets 37-6, the Buffalo Bills outscored the New England Patriots 45-31, the Miami Falcons downed the Denver Broncos 35-21 and the San Francisco 49ers scored a 16-6 triumph over the New Orleans Saints in Sunday's other games.

The Pittsburgh Steelers play the Houston Oilers in the Monday night TV game.

Vikings 28 Chargers 13
Tarkenton's milestone passing overshadowed a brilliant performance by Foreman, who carried the ball 33 times for 127 yards. It was the fifth straight 100-yard game for Foreman. It was the 10th consecutive loss for the winless Chargers.

Colts 33 Dolphins 17
Don McCauley scored on three one-yard plunges and Lydell Mitchell ran 32 yards for another TD as the Colts scored their fifth straight win. It was the third loss in 10 games for the Dolphins who may also have lost the services of star quarterback Bob Griese. Griese tore a tendon in his right big toe in the second period and may undergo surgery which would sideline him for the season.

Raiders 26 Redskins 23
George Blanda, who missed a 33-yard field goal attempt with five seconds left in regulation time, won the game with a 27-yarder at 7:13 of sudden death overtime to give the Raiders their win. The game-winning field goal came after Ken Stabler moved the Raiders into scoring position with a 26-yard pass to Fred Biletnikoff and an 18-yarder to Cliff Branch. The Raiders lead Kansas City by three games in the West Division.

Browns 35 Bengals 23
Mike Phipps completed 23 of 36 passes for 298 yards and two touchdowns and Greg Pruitt gained 120 yards rushing and scored two touchdowns enabling the Browns to score their first victory of the season. Ken Anderson of the Bengals passed for two touchdowns before leaving the game with a bruised chest in the third period with his team leading 23-15. The Steelers can take a one-game lead over the Bengals in the AFC's Central Division by beating the Oilers Monday night.

Chiefs 24 Lions 21
Jan Stenerud's 26-yard field goal at 6:44 of the overtime period gave the Chiefs a victory which ended the Lions' three-game winning streak. Erroll Mann of the Lions had kicked a 44-yard field goal with no time left on the clock to tie the score and send the game into overtime.

Rams 38 Bears 10
Larry McCutcheon sparked the Rams' romp over the Bears with a 43-yard touchdown run with only 6:14 gone in the first period. The Rams led 14-3 at the end of the first period, 21-3 at the half and 31-3 after three periods.

Packers 40 Giants 14
The Packers breezed to a 24-0 halftime lead in winning their second game and handing the Giants their seventh defeat of the season. John Hadl passed for 275 yards and two touchdowns as the Packers scored their most points in a game since 1971. The Giants closed to within 24-14 in the third period and then fell apart.

Cowboys 27 Eagles 17
Preston Pearson ran for one touchdown and set up two more scores with screen-pass receptions as the Cowboys remained a game behind the Cardinals in the NFC East. It was the Eagles' eighth loss against two victories.

Cardinals 37 Jets 6
Terry Metcalf scored on runs of 52 and one yard and Jim Hart passed for two touchdowns in the Cardinals' rout of the Jets, which spilled interim coach Ken Shipp's debut. The Cardinals jumped off to a 20-3 first-period lead and had a 30-6 halftime margin. Hart was 11 for 242 yards while Joe Namath was only eight for 21 for 117 yards. The seventh straight loss set a club record for the Jets.

Bills 45 Patriots 31
O. J. Simpson set four times from within the yard line, twice on runs and twice on passes in the Bills' free-scoring triumph over the Patriots. Simpson scored the decisive touchdown at 10:51 of the fourth period on a one-yard plunge after Joe Ferguson passed 44 yards to J. D. Hill to give the Bills a first down on the New England one-yard line.

Falcons 35 Broncos 21
Steve Bartkowski recovered from a poor start to throw two touchdown passes and lead the Falcons to their upset win over the Broncos.

49ers 16 Saints 6
Steve Spurrier threw a 26-yard touchdown pass to Gene Washington and Larry Schreiber scored on a three-yard run for the 49ers who squared their record at 5-5 while handing the Saints their eighth loss in 10 games. Rich Szaro kicked field goals of 26 and 50 yards for the Saints.

OU, Buckeyes Net Big Wins

By FRED McMANE
UPI Sports Writer

Ohio State and Oklahoma proved that experience is worth a million dollars. The top-ranked Buckeyes (11-0) and the sixth-ranked Sooners (10-1), each capitalizing on their opponents' second-half mistakes, scored impressive victories over their chief conference rivals Saturday and locked up berths in the Rose and Orange Bowls, respectively.

Those victories figure to earn each school in the neighborhood

Donnie Hughes shoots a layup over a Midland High defender in Pampa's 67-84 rout over Midland Friday in Harvester Fieldhouse. Hughes, a 6-4 junior, led Pampa in scoring with 25 points and in rebounding with 10. The Harvesters are now 3-0 for the season and host Perryton at 7:45 p.m. Tuesday. The Pampa Shockers, 3-0 after a 78-33 win over Amarillo River Road, meet Perryton's junior varsity at 6 p.m. Tuesday in Harvester Fieldhouse.

Tetter - Trucker

The heavy load proved to be a bit too much for the White House Lumber Co. truck Friday afternoon and the driver found himself taking off shortly after he left the Santa Fe Depot. After the load was eased the truck cab settled back to earth without visible damage or further incident.

Nazis Held Fuel Secret

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — A Texas A&M professor says old Nazi documents could help turn billions of tons of lignite, a mineral plentiful in Texas, into synthetic oil and gas.

Dr. Arnold Krammer, working with a grant from Texas A&M's Center for Energy and Mineral Resources, said Friday he had uncovered many potentially valuable documents open for examination in the National Archives and other government depositories.

The history professor said the Nazis produced increasing quantities of synthetic fuels and petrochemicals as the allies choked off German commerce.

Month by month, synthetic fuel production increased, enabling the Nazis to continue their war effort despite allied bombings and blockades.

This indicates that German scientists and industrialists were very proficient at making synthetic fuels and petrochemicals, Krammer said. "And apparently these synthetic fuels were made mostly from lignite, a soft, brown coal abundant in Germany."

Lignite reserves have been estimated at about 110 billion tons in Texas and Krammer said the implications of his study could have great importance for the state.

If the mineral could be converted to synthetic fuel, it would be the energy equivalent of the Middle East oil reserves, he said.

"If we can find efficient ways to turn the billions of tons of Texas lignite into synthetic oil and gas, it will be a very significant contribution," he said.

Krammer said there had been little prior interest in the Nazi documents because the nation did not need synthetic fuels. Gasoline was cheap enough and plentiful and serious fuel shortages were not anticipated.

But now the world is rapidly consuming its oil reserves, he said. Projected rates of consumption show the world's oil supplies being essentially depleted before the middle of the next century. As supplies become short prices will continue their rise, he said.

"This shows the importance of developing synthetic fuel," Krammer said. "Even before gasoline made from natural crude oil is depleted, it will become too expensive for most vehicle owners. This is when synthetic fuels will come into their own."

Campaign '76

Reagan Won't Compromise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In Ronald Reagan, the conservative wing of the Republican party has what it wants—a charismatic campaigner running for the GOP presidential nomination who rejects any compromise with his beliefs.

"Let's for once raise a banner," Reagan told Republicans, "and put on that banner what we believe and that we're not going to compromise it."

With that message, the 64-year old former two-term governor of California and one time Hollywood star, launched his campaign to win the nomination with an unique, smoothly-organized, two-day, five-state announcement of his candidacy.

To achieve his goal, Reagan must depose Gerald Ford, a sitting although not elected President, and then defeat the Democrats who undoubtedly would welcome a candidate perceived to be tightly tied to the party's extreme right wing.

Reagan rejects the label. He said "I have never really believed in the left-right distinction."

"I have a record," Reagan reminds questioners, noting his eight years running the nation's most populous state. "It will indicate pretty much that I am in the mainstream of the thinking of the people."

Similarly, Reagan rejects suggestions that his candidacy will rip apart the Republican party, leaving easy pickings for the Democrats next November as Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., has suggested.

"I'll make only one promise," Reagan said at every stop. "I'll campaign on what I believe and I will do nothing to divide or weaken us for the crusade next November."

At the same time, Reagan made it clear that he will not bend his views to woo the party's moderates and liberals nor will he accept—if nominated—anyone as his running-mate who does not share the same conservative views.

In effect, Reagan is banking that enough Republicans share his views to give him the nomination and that enough of what he calls the 40 per cent of the electorate "disenchanted and disillusioned" with both parties will help elect him.

In making his announcement, Reagan said he reached the decision "only extremely recently" and assured reporters that "I haven't been playing any games."

A tossed-off remark aboard his chartered campaign plane supports that answer.

Asked what kind of a campaign he planned to wage in New Hampshire's first-in-the-nation primary, Reagan candidly admitted "I haven't been involved in any strategy discussions."

But that has not prevented his campaign organization—headed by John Sears—to carefully lay out a strategy designed to nominate Reagan. And the Reagan operation is smooth and professional.

Sears said Reagan will begin campaigning heavily in January. He will spend between 10 and 15 days in New Hampshire and 15 to 20 days in Florida. There also will be forays into North Carolina—where Reagan has been endorsed by Sen. Jesse Helms—and into Illinois which also holds an early primary.

Anti-Child Abuse System Advised

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The doctor who coined the term "battered child syndrome" is recommending that all families be seen in the home by a trained health visitor soon after the birth of each baby.

This "comprehensive and universal system" of home health visits could help assure that children are protected from harm and that families have adequate links to community health and social services, said Dr. C. Henry Kempe of Denver, Colo.

"For those who would argue that this plan interferes with the rights of parents, it should be remembered that similar arguments were used against universal education when this was being considered in the 19th century," Dr. Kempe wrote in the November issue of Pediatrics, a journal published by the American Academy of Pediatrics.

"Just as we have accepted the basic concept of free universal education, so we should accept the concept that society has a right to guarantee the total health of the child," he wrote.

"In a free country, a man's home is his castle, but it may also be a child's prison."

Kempe, an expert on child abuse, said health visitors are used in such countries as Scotland, Norway, Denmark and Holland.

He is a professor of pediatrics and microbiology at the University of Colorado Medical Center in Denver and director of the university's National Center for the Prevention of Child Abuse and Neglect.

Bishop Backs Abortions

MONROE, La. (UPI) — The new bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Louisiana likes the idea of women as priests, and says abortion cases should be decided by groups within the community.

"Under the call of God, there is no distinction as to gender," the Rev. Martin R. Tilson said after his election Friday. "I can personally support priesthood for women, but I don't think the church is ready."

"It's an issue that has not been fully discussed by the church at large. The church has not had enough time to study it."

Tilson's said he studied the issued because he felt a responsibility to do so, but his predecessor, the Rev. Iveson Noland, was a vehement opponent of women priest. Noland was killed in a New York City plane crash June 24.

Tilson, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Birmingham, Ala., for the past nine years, was elected on the 20th ballot by a convention of laymen and clergymen from the diocese. The organization deadlocked at a New Orleans convention last month after 12 ballots, and resumed deliberation Friday at the Monroe Civic Center.

Tilson's appointment still must be approved by the full council of bishops in the United States.

A father of four, Tilson got his degree in mechanical engineering at Clemson University. While a senior there, he decided on the ministry, and went on to study at the University of the South and Salisbury Theological College in London.

Tilson, who was ordained in 1949, says abortion should be studied further.

"I think there must be consideration on the possibility of abortion," he said. "I think it has to be under consideration of a community committee with strong medical advice."

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — Although last week's proposed truck strike against the lucrative Rio Grande Valley fruit and vegetable crop fizzled for the most part, it showed the strikers, non-strikers, brokers and shippers all agreed Congress needs to do something about thousands of trucks running around the country empty.

The strike — which never amounted to much more than heated rhetoric about possible violence and the burning of one empty truck — followed by one week introduction into Congress by the Ford Administration of a proposed Motor Carriers Bill which is designed to do just that.

The administration bill is intended to alter Interstate Commerce Commission rules allowing independents more latitude in the commodities they can carry on backhauls, eliminating "deadheading" of trucks for thousands of miles empty while burning precious fuel. The practice also means independents must try to get enough money for a one-way haul to pay round-trip expenses and the extra cost is passed on to consumers, trucking leaders said.

The only alternative to deadheading empty, several industry spokesmen said, is for truckers to sub-contract to the big firms, licensed by the ICC, and haul regulated commodities at nominal fees. Present rules allow them to carry nothing but produce on the backhauls and there is no produce in the big cities where they deliver fruit and vegetables.

David Coers, president of the striking Produce Haulers of Texas, said approval of such legislation would have averted the Valley attempt to get higher rates altogether.

"Without a doubt," Coers said, "there's no question at all about it helping. But it may be next year or the year after next or five years from now before it's passed. But the American Truckers Association, supported by the big truck lines and Teamsters Union, say this legislation will be passed over their dead and mutilated bodies."

Millard Holden, a trucker and broker who heads the Independent Produce Haulers of America which opposed any Valley strike, met with John Snow, assistant transportation secretary, during discussions on the proposed legislation and he agreed the change is needed to keep independent produce haulers in business.

Willis Deines, executive director of the Texas Citrus and Vegetable Shippers and Growers Association, also supports the legislation.

"Their problems are on the other end of the line," Deines said, "where they're forced to pick up loads on trip lease basis and they don't get a fair share of the revenue on the hauling of these non-exempt commodities. Congress has under consideration now legislation to try to deregulate to some extent these produce haulers and give them a better break on hauling other commodities."

"The highest rates paid out of the United States are paid out of here," said Othal Brand, one of the Valley's biggest shippers of citrus and vegetables. "These independent truckers have got to work. I was in the trucking business myself for many years and there's no way you can park trucks (in a strike.)"

"We're paying such rates now we're not competitive in a few places with California and Florida," Brand said. "And there's no way the rate should be raised here. They do have a legitimate squawk that presently they're trying to get some of these ICC regulations relaxed so that instead of having to give the franchised carriers 50 per cent of the revenue just to get the load, that they'd be able to get a little more on their loads back.

"Their problem is not produce, their problem is the other loads that they haul."

Larry Jackson, an owner-operator from Waxahachie, Tex., said he was against completely deregulating the industry as far as safety requirements for trucks, but that he favored legislation by Rep. Peter Domenici, R-N.M., similar to the administration proposal. It would allow independents to carry more commodities on backhauls at the same rate the big carriers get.

At the same time, Jackson charged the ICC-regulated carriers "were delivering their commodities to the Valley and then undercutting produce haulers' rates on the backhauls."

"We're just all losing our britches," he said. "We don't have a rate problem. We have a common carrier problem. The common carriers are hauling their general freight down here and they're cutting our rate on the backhauls."

TOURIST PERMIT BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — U.S. citizens can visit Argentina for up to three months on a tourist permit issued on arrival in this country. The permit can be extended for an additional three months by application to the immigration office.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

Q 1 — Both sides vulnerable. Sitting South, you hold:

1. ♠KQ93 ♥84 ♦AJ7 ♣J963
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
2 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid?
A. Two notrump, the perfect bid showing 10-11 points and protection in each of the unbid suits. By making this bid, you will be informing partner, in negative fashion, that you have only four spades, since if you had five of them, you would have bid three spades instead.

Q 2 — Neither side vulnerable. As South, you hold:

2. ♠K97 ♥AJ8 ♦Q94 ♣AK62
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid?
A. Three notrump, the book bid showing a hand with which, had you been the first to speak, you would have opened with one notrump: 165-18 high-card points, a balanced hand, and the requisite protection each suit.

Q 3 — Both sides vulnerable. Sitting South, you hold:

3. ♠AK93 ♥J75 ♦862 ♣AQ4
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
2 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid?
A. Four hearts. Had opener possessed four hearts and four clubs (non-adjacent suits), he would have bid clubs first. Therefore his bidding indicates that he has a five-card heart suit. From your position, you know that the points for a game are there, as is the trump suit of eight or more cards.

Q 4 — Neither side vulnerable. As South, you hold:

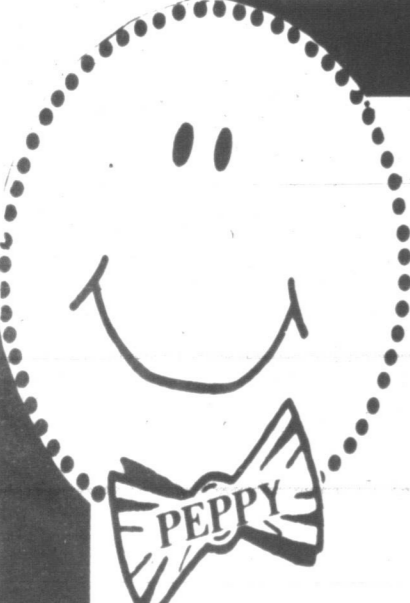

4. ♠♥AKQJ106 ♦AKQJ ♣972
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
2 ♥ 3 ♦ 4 ♥ 4 ♣

What do you bid?
A. Six hearts. Partner was under no obligation to bid over West's pre-emptive jump overall of three spades. Hence his free bid denotes positive values. Since the opponents have high-card strength in spades, your partner's values have to be in clubs.

Q 5 — Both sides vulnerable. Sitting South, you hold:

5. ♠AQ74 ♥832 ♦Q95 ♣764
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♣ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
3 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid?
A. Four spades. Partner's "pleading" bid of three spades guarantees four spades and 17-18 points; and it is a command to you to bid a game if you possess more than your stated minimum of 6-7 points.

KKK Calls Whites Opressed Majority

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — About 300 Ku Klux Klan members, forced into the cold by a Department of Health, Education and Welfare threat, gathered around a pickup truck in 35-degree weather to hear their leader denounce the federal agency.

"Why are we standing in the cold? Because that's where all white people are standing."

Klan director David Duke told the group Saturday night. Duke said whites were an "oppressed majority." He said white school children were being made to feel ashamed because they are white.

Some members wore white robes and hoods. Others wore "White Power" t-shirts, wrapped blankets around themselves.

HEW threatened to cut off $8.5 million in aid to the school board after it approved a permit for a Klan meeting at the Belaire high school gymnasium. The board promptly rescinded the permit.

Duke appealed to state and federal courts to force the board to honor its permit but failed. So he moved the meeting to the lot of a KKK bookstore.

"This is a most dangerous precedent," Duke told the group.

He said it was the first time the federal government threatened to cut funds to a school system that allowed the Klan to rent one of its buildings. Duke said HEW had violated free speech and free assembly rights by its action.

"We're not against anybody—blacks or Jews," Duke said. "We are for the white race. Blacks should have the right to work for their rights. We should have the same right."

Shouts of "white power" frequently came from the crowd.

Snow Too Wet

By United Press International
Not even the skiers were happy with the snow that hit North Carolina Sunday.

Up to six inches of snow stacked up in the mountains and up to three inches blanketed other portions of the state. The problem, said ski resort operators, is that the snow was too wet to skion.

Motorists had another problem — THE SLUSHY SNOW MADE ROADS TOO SLICK TO DRIVE. Poor driving conditions were blamed for at least one traffic death in North Carolina and police reported a flurry of minor traffic mishaps.

The ski resort owners had no plans to open their runs early. Sunday's snow, they said, was too wet for skiing and conditions were not right for making artificial snow. Most said they planned to open around mid-December.

The snow, mixed with sleet and rain in some areas and whipped by high winds, began falling in the western portion of North Carolina early Sunday and caught weather forecasters by surprise. Heavy rains, driven by 40 mile-per-hour winds, lashed the Carolina coast.

Hendersonville, N.C., reported six inches of snow and Asheville, N.C. had five inches. The Raleigh-Durham, N.C. airport got 2.3 inches of snow — the largest November snowfall in the area since 1938, when 2.5 inches fell during the month. With a bit more snow this month, the total might exceed records kept in the area since 1892.

Light snow dusted the Dakotas and Nebraska, stretching over the upper Mississippi Valley into northern Michigan, and scattered rain dampened the northern Pacific Coast.

Early morning temperatures today ranged from 4 below zero at Alamosa, Colo., to 74 at El Toro, Calif.

Winners Told In Volleyball

Volleyball Leagues Final: The 1975 fall volleyball leagues drew to a close Monday night with champions being crowned in the women, men and mixed divisions. In the women's league Shoanail Supply took 1st with a perfect 11-0 record while runner-up Pampa Glass and Paint was 10-1. In the men's division 1st Bapt. church and Farm Bureau tied for 1st with 8-2 records and in a play-off 1st Bapt. took the honors. In the mixed league Carlson - Craddock took back the honors from Charles's Furn. this year after being upset last season. Carlson - Craddock also had a perfect 10-0 record while Charlie's Furniture stood at 8-2. The next volleyball season will start the latter part of March, 1976.

Grandview, Hopkins Board Sets Meeting

CIA Springs Leaks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The CIA has complained to Congress its very foundations are cracking and its secret office complex in Langley, Va., is shot through with leaks.

Literally. There are cracks in the building foundations and pipes and chimneys are leaking water and pollution.

In an application for building repairs filed with the House Public Works Committee Nov. 3, a day after its director was fired, the CIA asked Congress for a five-year, $6.3 million appropriation to repair "building leaks," patch foundation cracks, fix steam heat lines, reduce chimneystack pollution, meet fire safety standards and generally spruce up the seven-story headquarters building in Langley.

"This facility has been in use continuously 24 hours a day, 365 days a year for more than a decade," the application says. "The continuous movement of persons and vehicles over the past 10 years has taken its toll on the parking lot and interior

DALLAS (UPI) — Developers hope $2 million worth of futuristic decor complete with "silver people" and a few old movies can turn a white elephant into a regional entertainment center.

Their concept is called Love, a 2 1/4 acre complex housed in the main terminal of what used to be the city's main airport.

The strange spelling is an effort to draw on the public's familiarity with the old airport, Love Field. The remodeling job is also a solution of the city's problem of maintaining an old air terminal.

Love Field went into decline with the construction of the gigantic, Dallas-Fort Worth Regional airport, leaving only one commuter line serving the north Dallas facility.

Love's admission price of $2.95 grants access to three movie theaters, the roller skating and ice skating rinks, the game room and the Rainbow Room nightclub. Drinks and food are not included.

On opening night last week, an emcee wearing a pink bandleader's hat with a skinny brown feather sticking out like an antenna sat in a booth high above the ground floor.

Bluejeaned adolescents were gliding, sliding and sometimes falling and shrieking across the huge ice rink below.

"We're here to help you have fun," the speaker said — his voice booming through the loudspeakers like a youthful Boris Karloff. "If you have any questions, just ask. There are silver people all over."

The silver people are attendants. The women wear black tights with a silver pullover garment and silver turban-like hats.

The men wear the same kind of pullover, but they don't wear turbans, or any kind of headgear. They have a multicolored garland with streamers tied around the left bicep.

There were a few opening night jitters. The projectors in two of the three theaters chewed up "Public Enemy No. 1" and "Top Hat," angering some customers who had come primarily to see the classic old films.

Some of the silver people had trouble with the new equipment, like the complex computerized cash registers that click and grind for 30 seconds before flashing a 26-cent bill.

"Uh, I already rang up one hot drink," said a silver person to his colleague. "What do I do about the Coke?"

"Hmm, okay," said the other. "Oh, here it is. Cold drink. It should say 53 cents."

Clickity-click, rumble-rumble. Boing.

"Right."

Pierce Allman, spokesman for Love developer Wes Goyer, said the opening night crowd was "average," or about what could be expected for a new endeavor and for a Monday night.

He said Goyer, one of the originators of Six Flags Over Texas, got the idea for a single-price admission recreation facility years ago, and then seized on the empty terminal as a way to put it through. It took more than a year of negotiations with the city to work out the details of the lease agreement.

"We've got the only place where a party can literally fly right up to the front door," Allman said.

Llove—a $2 Million Touch

Summary of Weekend News

By United Press International
POST OFFICE WOES
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Postmaster General Benjamin

Bailar is considering dropping Saturday mail deliveries and special delivery along with cutting back on employe overtime and closing some small, unprofitable post offices.

Bailar said those moves are possible "because our financial situation is so grave and partially because it's the responsible thing to do."

In an interview with UPI, Bailar said, "We have not made any decisions" on the proposed cutbacks.

The Postal Service, which is supposed to become self-supporting, ran up a $1.5 billion debt as of July 1 and is losing about $200 million a month, Bailar said. Rate increases starting Dec. 28 will wipe out the operating deficit, he said, but will not help with the accumulated debt.

And the linoleum on the cafeteria floor looks a bit shabby, too, the repair request says. It ought to be replaced "for safety and esthetic reasons."

The building was put up in 1964 on an isolated 201-acre wooded site. According to the application, operation, maintenance and upkeep costs "of this building run $3,808,875 a year. A new building "would cost $73,714,000 ... if construction were started in fiscal year 1975."

The application does keep one CIA secret, possibly one of the few left.

It refuses to state how many people work there.

Abzug, who heads the House government information and individual rights subcommittee, said she sent a letter to special prosecutor Charles Ruff asking all records be published "to the extent consistent with the guidelines" provided by law.

"The people need the facts," she said Saturday night.

She said a report issued by the special prosecutor's office recently "fails to disclose any additional information about unfinished matters such as the Rebozo investigation, the ITT matter, the 18-1/2 minute tape gap, discrepancies in the transcripts of White House tapes and the abuses of the IRS."

BETTY HAVING FUN
NEW YORK (UPI) — Betty Ford says she is having fun as First Lady and intends to be active in next year's election campaign.

In an interview in the current issue of Time magazine, Mrs. Ford says her life "could be considered a goldfish bowl or a gilded cage, but I made up my mind that I wouldn't let it be that way."

"I would go ahead and live my life the way I normally would. I've done it. I'm having fun."

Mrs. Ford says that while she will travel with the President in the campaign and stand in for him when he cannot make an engagement she has no plans to talk on issues.

"I can only say what I think and sometimes my ideas may be at variance with his," she says.

MIA MEETING

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. and Vietnamese officials have agreed to postpone until next month a meeting originally scheduled for today in Paris to discuss the fate of hundreds of American servicemen still missing in Southeast Asia.

The meeting between officials of North and South Vietnam and a group of eight congressmen was postponed at the request of the Vietnamese.

Rep. G.V. Montgomery, D-Miss., chairman of the House Select Committee on Missing Persons, said Saturday the North Vietnamese asked for the delay so that their ambassador to France, Vo Van Sung, could meet with the American lawmakers. A new date was not set.

RHODESIA TALKS

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Prime Minister Ian Smith will meet black nationalist leader Joshua Nkomo this week in a new attempt to untangle Rhodesia's 10-year constitutional impasse between the ruling white minority and the African majority.

Administration sources said Sunday Smith and Nkomo already have met three times in the past month to determine procedural and protocol ground rules for a conference to work out a new form of government for the breakaway British colony.

The white settlers set up their own government in defiance of London in 1965 and have ruled 5.9 million blacks since.

For three years a black guerrilla independence war has been waged by dissidents who first fled the country, then infiltrated from Zambia.

"I'd rather explain higher gas bills than why you don't have gas."

Your natural gas bill is higher. And, you have every right to know why.

One reason is lower temperatures brought on by winter.

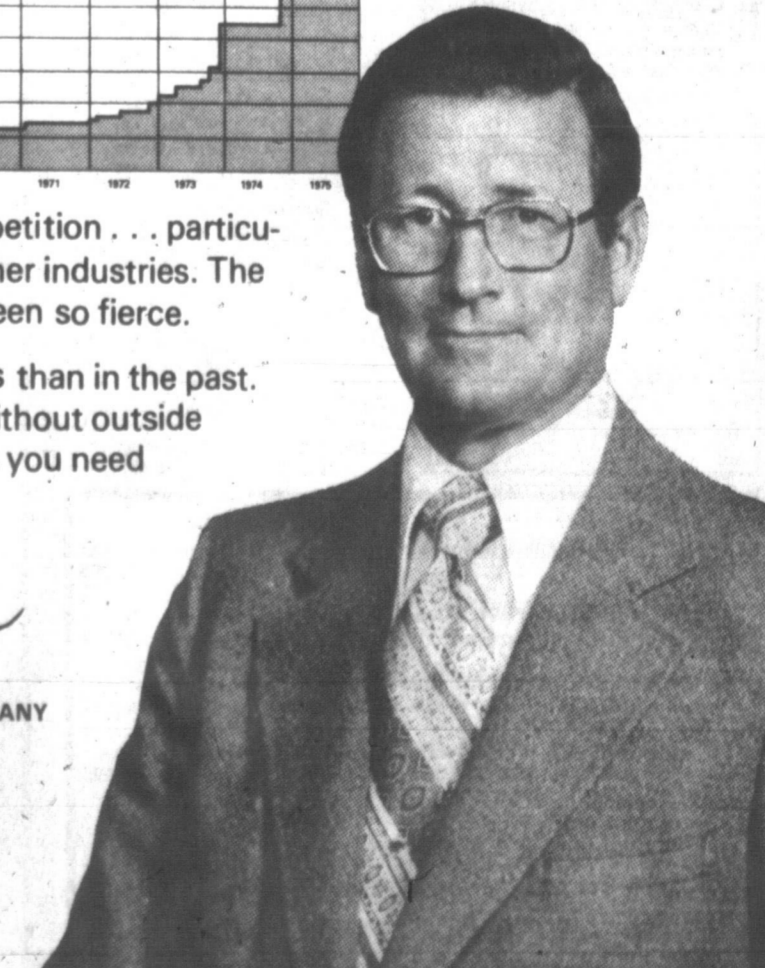

The main reason, however, is simply that you are paying more for natural gas. Because we are paying more. This chart shows how much:

This increase hurts both you and Pioneer. It adds to your bill and to our cost... a cost for which Pioneer is not entirely compensated. It is passed through without mark-up or additional charges.

Why does gas cost more? Competition... particularly from petrochemical and other industries. The competition for gas has never been so fierce.

We will have to pay more for gas than in the past. But by working together, and without outside interference, you'll have the gas you need today and in the future.
