Portuguese Troops Put on War Alert

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — President Francisco de Costa Gomes declared a state of emergency in Portugal and placed all troops on a war alert today to combat a spreading rebellion launched by leftist paratroops.

The rebels invaded and grabbed control of four major air bases and took several senior officers prisoners without bloodshed to demand the creation of a far left government. Other troops joined them and occupied television and radio stations and outlets of the mass media.

The president called the rebellion "an attempted coup d'etat" and vowed to smash it.

The capital's Communist-controlled unions called an immediate general strike and urged their militants to gain control of all public works, such as water and electricity plants, and all mass media outlets.

Reports circulated that a leftist light artillery regiment on the edge of the capital was handing out guns to civilian radicals.

The far left newspaper Republica quoted sources as saying the rebels were being supported by military security chief Gen. Oteio Saraiva de Carvalho.

Leftist troops under his command occupied the national television station and allowed the paratroops to broadcast a statement to the nation during the afternoon. Afterward the television began playing martial music.

Other radical troops occupied radio stations and set up an armed guard in the national news agency ANOP.

The president said the state of emergency would be restricted to the Lisbon region where he banned all public gatherings and demonstrations and imposed censorship on the mass media. It called the rebels action "an attempted coup d'etat" and vowed the government's determination to repress it.

An earlier presidential statement called the rebels "insane" and warned them to abandon their action before the military had to move against them with armed force.

In Oporto, northern military region commander Brig. Antonio Pires Veloso came out in favor of the government. He ordered warplanes into the air over the region to assure the population that the air force was still operational.

The central region also lined up behind the government while conflicting reports reached Lisbon from the south.

But the government's command over 12 units in the capital district appeared less certain. It was in Lisbon that the paratroops first launched their operation by taking over the central headquarters of the air force in suburban Monsanto and a main base across the Tagus River.

Reports circulated that other units were on the march both for and against the government, but this could not be confirmed. The far left issued calls for a general strike, but they had little immediate impact in Lisbon.

President Francisco de Costa Gomes warned the rebels either to withdraw from the bases or face the threat of an armed attack against them.

To avoid a grave situation, orders have not yet been issued for intervention by force, which can be imposed if this irresponsible adventure is maintained," the president said.

"We hope the rebels will show sense to avoid a deterioration of their criminal action."

The rebels replied to the president's communique with a statement calling for the purge of the air force high command and the replacement of the striking sixth government with one of the far left.

In addition to the base takeovers, left-wing troops occupied the national television station in Lisbon and leftist civilians surrounded the capital's main arsenal in quick retaliation by Portugal's left for the firing earlier today of a leftist general as military chief of the Lisbon district.

Far leftist forces also called for an immediate general strike to back up the rebellion.

The commander of the northern military region, Brig. Antonio Pires Veloso, announced that air force units in general were loyal to their commanders and were still capable of taking action on the side of the government.

"We warn the population and military units that the flights over the country will be a proof of that," his statement said.

The government placed the progovernment commando regiment based in Lisbon on red alert, but delayed giving orders for action against the rebels. Other troops throughout the country were held on standby.

President Francisco de Costa Gomes issued a statement as armed forces commander-in-chief officially accusing the paratroops of "rebellion." He said the insurgents were "victims of criminal manipulation."

"To avoid a grave situation orders have not yet been issued for intervention by force, which can be imposed if the irresponsible adventure is maintained," he said. "We hope the rebels will show sense to avoid a deterioration of their criminal attitude."

The president's statement confirmed the rebels had control of the air bases at Tancos and Monte-Real in addition to the two in the Lisbon area—the air force's central operations headquarters in suburban Monsanto and the big operational base of Montijo across the Tagus river from Lisbon.

The rebels said they launched their action to demand a purge of the air force high command and the replacement of the striking provisional government with one of the far left.

The City of Pampa today joined the Texas Section of the American Association of Small Cities, the national organization formed "to see if Congress will pay some attention to the problems of the 70 million Americans who live in cities under 50,000 population instead of just concentrating on 400 U.S. cities over that size."

City Manager Mack Wofford said it will cost Pampa annual dues of $325 to belong to the association.

City commissioners, after considerable discussion of the proposal, voted unanimously at their regular meeting this morning to become affiliated with the AASC which states its thrust will be national and not state.

In a letter asking Pampa city officials to join the association,

Mayor Alfred Koebig of Sequim wrote:

"Our aims are simple — federal programs aimed at small cities without the mountains of red tape. We simply do not have the staff to compete with the larger cities."

"If the federal government is truly interested in improving the quality of life, it will gear up programs directed toward where life is best — in the smaller cities. The needs of people and the problems of cities are the same regardless of size."

Koebig told the Pampa commissioners in the letter that AASC is convinced a national program of representation is needed to protect small city interests.

The association came into being shortly after the move was launched in Congress to cut revenue sharing funds from small cities and channel them into the large cities where it was claimed "the need is greater."

City Commissioner Joe Curtis said he thought the city should take the small stand on revenue sharing as was taken by Gray County commissioners — if the program is renewed by Congress it should be distributed the same as in the past.

"We hope that the AASC would not become an organization that we would run to Washington with every local problem that comes up," Curtis said. "We should try to solve our own problems first."

The Sequim mayor said it is the hope of the AASC to enlist the support of all 950 Texas cities under 50,000 population, and then branch out to include all the 20,000 smaller cities across the nation.

In other business today city commissioners

Awarded bids for purchase of sanitation equipment from Pak Mor Mfg Co of San Antonio and a truck chassis from Harold Barrett Ford in the total amount of $30,700.

Continued until the Dec. 9 meeting the public hearing on removal of abandoned property at 530-536 N. Warren.

Adopted on second and final reading an ordinance changing zoning on N. Hobart between Cook and Francis from retail to commercial.

Approved on first reading an ordinance changing zoning on a parcel of land on N. Sumner between Somerville and Coronado Dr from Agricultural to multi-family.

Approved on first reading legislation changing zoning on a portion of the North Crest Addition from agricultural to single family-2.

After lengthy discussion, a decision was reached to pursue further study on a proposal to re-define city ordinances to protect commercial infringement of defined residential zoned areas.

City Manager Mack Wofford announced that the annual Christmas employes banquet has been set for 7 p.m. Dec. 18 in the M. K. Brown Heritage Room. A highlight of the affair will be the presentation of service awards.

Inmates Relinquish Jail

NEW YORK (UPI) — Rebelious inmates at the men's prison on Rikers Island, promised amnesty and better living conditions, finally relinquished control of the jail they held for 17 hours.

But the end of the inmate revolt and the release of five guards taken hostage was not the end of the prison's troubles Monday.

Some 300 correction officers, angered by the promise of amnesty for the prisoners, walked off their jobs for an hour and a half, returning only after Mayor Abraham Beame agreed to meet with leaders of their union today to discuss grievances.

Benjamin H. Malcolm, the city's commissioner of correction, told Beame Monday night that "all was quiet" at the island facility, with all inmates back in their cells and correction officers at their posts.

The prisoner rebellion began 9:30 p.m. Sunday when some 1,200 inmates, upset over crowded conditions, inadequate medical treatment and other grievances, seized five of the jail's seven cellblocks and took five correction guards hostage.

Arming themselves with makeshift metal spears, broom and mop handles, the prisoners held virtual control of the facility through the morning while some 450 corrections officers plus additional police units stood nervously by.

The inmates sought and were granted a chance to discuss their demands with correction officials, newsmen, a federal judge and the Bronx district attorney.

By 8:30 a.m. Monday, two of the hostage guards were released. Negotiations continued with the inmates demanding amnesty as a condition for the freedom of their remaining captives.

Six hours later, after officials promised they would not seek reprisals the other three guards were released.

All of the hostages were "in good shape," officials said, but the men were taken to a clinic for a checkup.

No precise estimate of damage to the facility was immediately available but it was thought to be extensive.

'I Love a Parade'

Children at St. Vincent's Catholic School, 2300 N. Hobart, put the finishing touches on their nativity scene float which will be one of the attractions in the Santa Day parade today. The parade with Santa riding on a city fire truck will move from Craven and South Cuyler streets at 3 p.m. Lineup will include the school

Maryland Gov Indicted

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Gov. Marvin Mandel, indicted Monday on federal charges of exchanging favoritism for secret financial interest in two business ventures, says he is innocent and will not resign.

The charges, handed down by a grand jury continuing the same investigation that led to the resignation of former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, accuse the 55-year-old governor of 20 counts of mail fraud and two charges of "prohibited activity" in connection with the financial interest he allegedly held in real estate ventures.

Each count of mail fraud carries a maximum five-year prison sentence and each prohibited activity charge carries a maximum sentence 10 years.

Following release of the indictment, Mandel appeared outside his office in Annapolis and said: "I now have the opportunity to prove my innocence in a court of law, which I intend to pursue with every resource I have and to the fullest extent allowed.

"Let me assure those who elected me that I shall continue to serve them to the best of my ability and always in their best interests, just as I have for the past 24 years."

Mandel can remain in office. Lt. Gov. Blair Lee would become acting governor in the event of a conviction, and Mandel would then be suspended without pay pending the outcome of any appeals.

The 24-count indictment charges Mandel entered into a "corrupt relationship" with five others, including W. Dale Hess, 45, a former Democratic leader of the Maryland House of Delegates, and Irvin Kovens, 57, a man who raised campaign funds for both Mandel, a Democrat, and Agnew, a Republican.

Also indicted were Harry W. Rodgers, 48, his brother William A., 49, business associates of Hess, and Ernest Cory Jr., 61, a Laurel, Md. attorney.

U.S. Attorney Jervis S. Finney said the central charge involved a scheme "to defraud the executive agencies, legislators and citizens of Maryland through Mandel's efforts on behalf of legislation and other governmental actions favorable to the secret ownership interests held by the other defendants in a Maryland race track."

In return, the governor received "valuable secret financial interests" in two enterprises.

Tense and nervous as he assumed the throne and all the troubles the nation may face, the king looked to his wife at his inauguration — and the look that plainly showed her pride in him came right back.

She was part of his strength that day, smiling, head erect, a queen to the manner born, as might have expected from the daughter of King Paul and Queen Frederika of Greece.

Marriages are made in heaven but Frederika always liked to help along the celestial process. In 1961 she heard that Don Juan Carlos, son of the Count of Barcelona, pretender to the Spanish throne, was showing interest in Princess

Firefighters Attack Blaze

GLENDALE, Calif. (UPI) — Firefighters mounted a massive aerial assault today against the worst California brush fire in five years. Thousands fled the flames raging across 100 square miles and eating through suburban homes.

A gigantic smoke cloud billowed 100 miles into the Pacific Ocean, casting an twilight pall over the Los Angeles area. Motorists 30 miles away had to use headlights in the darkness at noon amid a rain of ashes "like snowflakes." The sun shrank to a small red disk in an eerie murk of pink and gray.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. declared the first state of emergency of his term. Sen. John Tunney, D-Calif., appealed to President Ford for federal aid against "the terrible fire now raging in the Los Angeles area."

With nearly 2,000 federal, state and local firefighters falling back before the flames, whipped by hot winds from the Mojave desert gusting up to 60 miles per hour, home owners mounted individual defenses.

Standing with garden hoses atop homes surrounded by flames, they alternately doused themselves and flaming roofs. Some won. Some lost.

The worst fire, the Tujunga Canyon blaze, had burned 43,000 acres by Monday night, burning 43 structures and sending 3,000 persons fleeing. Nineteen houses valued at up to $50,000 or more were destroyed Monday as the fire roared down the mountains out of the Angeles National Forest and into the outskirts of Glendale and the suburbs of the eastern San Fernando Valley.

"It looks like an amoeba spreading out in all directions," said U.S. Forest Service spokesman Jim Unterwiesner. The blaze leaped from ridge to ridge on an irregular front about 15 miles long and 5 miles deep. The Red Cross set up four refugee centers in schools.

The U.S. Forest Service prepared a fleet of 26 aerial tankers, "flying water barrels," to be used today.

Strong winds kept most of the planes grounded Monday. The hell of it is you've got to get down to about 100 feet to do any good," said one firebombing pilot. "And in that kind of (mountainous) country, with the wind up to 50 knots and variable, you'd lose every plane and chopper you got."

A second major blaze in the Angeles National Forest, about 30 miles to the east, raced through 10,000 acres in the Mt. Baldy area on the Los Angeles-San Bernardino county line.

Group Says Industries Interested in Pampa

Good, level land and plenty of water, gas, electricity, combined with an appealing community and desirable climate recently have interested several sizeable manufacturing concerns in the Pampa area.

The Pampa Industrial Foundation board of directors met this morning in the Chamber of Commerce to discuss industrial prospects which currently are considering developing in or near Pampa.

The full foundation membership will meet at 10 a.m. Tuesday in the Starlight Room at the Coronado Inn.

Major items on the agenda for that meeting will be approval of a slate of 10 nominees, from which the membership will elect five to serve three-year terms on the board, and the PIF's annual report.

Princess Becomes Queen

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — They will miss her in the shops of Serrano Street, the pretty lady with the tiny tip-tilted nose and ready smile who always paid for everything in cash.

She won't be shopping on her own much any more now that she's Queen Sophia of Spain.

The wife of the new King Juan Carlos I made a memorable impression on the millions who watched her husband inaugurated as Spain's first king in 44 years Saturday.

She impulsively kissed and comforted the grieving widow of Generalissimo Francisco Franco at his funeral mass Sunday.

Frederika always liked to help along the celestial process. In 1961 she heard that Don Juan Carlos, son of the Count of Barcelona, pretender to the Spanish throne, was showing interest in Princess Frederika, who recently studied transcendental meditation with a guru in India, invited Juan Carlos to join a cruise for young eligibles of royal blood.

As Sophia recalls it, she and Juan Carlos were later at the Switzerland home of her grandmother, ex-Queen Victoria Eugenie of Spain, when he grasped her hand by the wrist with the grip of a man who can shatter three planks with a karate chop and said:

"We will get married, eh?"

They were married soon thereafter in 1962.

Weather

Cloudy and cold with a possibility of snow today, tonight and Wednesday is the forecast for the next 24 hours. The highs will be in the 30s with the lows in the 40s.

Spare Rod, Spoil Spuds

Citizens of Maine are up in arms over a federal law that prohibits their children from picking up potatoes each fall, just as citizens in Washington are angry because the same law bars children from harvesting strawberries.

The intent of the law, enacted in 1974, is to prevent exploitation of children in agriculture, just as a 1938 law prevented industries from abusing children.

Instead the statute shows the folly of establishing rigid national regulations for complex local economies. The children in Maine and Washington were not exploited.

Indeed, potato picking time was an annual fall festival — a vacation from school during which the kids had fun, earned some money and learned to cooperate with other children from all walks of life.

It is exactly this kind of official myopia that helps to increase citizen disenchantment with government at all levels.

How, for example, would a public servant answer a Maine mother who asks why kids can smoke on campus, get away scot free with possession of drugs and have easier access to pornography — but cannot work?

If it's any consolation, the Supreme Court at least has ruled that school officials can spank incorrigible children. We expect that if they plan to spank, school officials had better have ten Philadelphia lawyers in the wings to be sure that all of the proper constitutional processes are followed.

CAB Causes High Fares

When the President announces a plan to reduce the burden of government regulation on a major industry, we would expect to hear the loudest cheers from the industry affected. Just the opposite has happened since Mr. Ford asked Congress to begin dismantling the regulatory structure which keeps the nation's airlines under the thumb of the Civil Aeronautics Board.

It is the airlines that are complaining. This emphasizes the point Mr. Ford has been making as he unveils his policy for deregulation of our transportation industries. Regulatory agencies which are supposed to be serving the public interest are too often only serving the interests of companies within an industry, protecting them from competition at the public's expense.

The CAB powers over the airline industry date back to 1938 when airlines were struggling to get established in burgeoning new markets for passenger and freight service. The airline business has since grown up. There is no longer a justification for a regulatory system which Mr. Ford aptly describes as "promotional and protectionist."

The President is proposing that airlines be free to raise and lower fares on a competitive basis and to fly competitive routes without the protection of CAB route assignments. Unprofitable routes could eventually be abandoned and service provided on new routes with much less government red tape. The Department of Transportation estimates that fares could be reduced by 15 to 20 per cent if the Ford plan goes through.

Historically, intrastate airlines which are not subject to CAB regulation have charged lower fares than those charged for comparable service by the interstate carriers. Some economists have estimated that the interstate airlines incur $500 million a year in unnecessary costs because of CAB regulations — costs reflected in their fares.

CAB regulation has become a way of life for the major airlines, and it is not surprising that they want to defend it. It has insulated them against the pressures of rate competition, and has allowed them to stake out a claim to many routes on an exclusive basis. For many businesses this kind of regulation can be more of a comfort than a burden.

The real burden is being borne by the public, and the administration is determined to begin phasing out the regulatory structure that covers the railroad and trucking industries as well. The time is past when industries which have their developmental years behind them can claim protection from the competitive forces of the marketplace, which are the source of economies and efficiencies that make the public the beneficiary of our private enterprise system.

Capitalism Alive, Well

For the past year or so, at least during the course of the recession, Marxism had gained some respectability. The reason is that the old liberal, interventionist nostrums had failed, so some sort of theory was needed to fill the void. Several academics and policy-makers fell back to purer free-marketism. Others, who couldn't quite abide that, went in for the socialist ideas of Karl Marx.

Soviet and European Communist parties were delighted by increased membership rolls. To serve the success' even further, they had pushed the propaganda line that Western capitalism was experiencing its death throes. Capitalism, trumpeted the party press, would "collapse" owing to its "internal contradictions." Well, the Kremlin has had to revise things. Not that the Russian party is unaccustomed to that: revising things, especially historical data, is a celebrated custom in Moscow. History has tricked them anew. The "collapse of capitalism" mythology, according to the American Economic Foundation, has been forced to undergo a downgrading.

Moreover, the Soviet Union has had to adopt a few more of those capitalistic incentives in order to get its own economy moving ahead. According to Barron's, Woschod Handelsbank, a Swiss branch of Moscow's Soviet Foreign Trade Bank, has cropped up as an adulterated version of a Western retail bank. It is offering customers free - insured delivery of diamonds and gold bought through their bank. So desperate are the Soviet planners for hard currency that they have had to resort to the long-scorned banking device.

The Kremlin is rather unhappily trudging on with this new realism. The embarrassing factor is that the United States, relatively the most capitalistic of all economies, has led the way out of the recession, the other Western nations following behind.

There are times when even longer propagandists can no longer ignore objective data, especially something so monumental as global economic recovery. Pity the theoreticians now.

Eco-Planning Futile

One of the great paradoxes of the age, surely one of the most vexing, is that as more and more people convince themselves of the need for economic planning, more and more evidence demonstrates the futility of it. By economic planning we do not mean the marketing decisions business people make for their own ventures, but the attempts by politicians and bureaucrats to make those decisions for business.

A reading of Alvin Toffler's "Eco - Spasm" ought to be enough to frighten any presumptuous planner. What they are planning, in the end, is chaos: millions tossed out of jobs in the stroke of a bureaucratic misallocation;

$200 Hershey bars; superwar; and so on. Those Europeans who remember carting wheelbarrels full of paper currency to purchase a loaf of bread will recognize that Toffler is not being altogether improbable.

All that because the planners substituted the political mechanism for the pricing mechanism in determining the direction of the economy. It should be obvious that the pricing mechanism is more harmonious than the political. Yet it is not, to too many advocates of planning. The paradox is difficult to explain except in terms of a pervasive habit of mind that ought to be overturned.

Way To Run A Railroad

There are two large railroad enterprises in Canada.

The first makes large yearly tax payments to the Canadian government and consistently shows a profit at the end of the year.

The second pays no taxes, receives large tax - payer - provided subsidies from the government, and consistently winds up in the red.

The first railroad is privately owned and operated.

The second railroad is owned and operated by the Canadian government.

This seeming paradox has proved puzzling to many people down through the years. But, really, it is no paradox at all.

In the first case, the directors of the company know that the stockholder owners are ruthless when it comes to a question of profit or loss. Either company will show a profit, or else the stockholders will let them go. This knowledge makes for efficient operation. No profit, no job. No job, no pay. It is as simple as that.

In the second case, the directors know that they will be paid regardless of whether the road shows a profit or loss. The knowledge that losses will be made up from taxes makes for careless, sloppy operation.

The financial reports at each year's end leave no doubt as to which system is superior, which inferior. The fact that incentive to succeed is present in the first case and lacking in the second tells us why.

Wolfgang von Goethe, the German poet, is well known for his poetic genius. Less well known, he was also an astute observer of the economic scene. Goethe put it like this:

"Nothing is more dangerous to the well - being of a theatre than when the director is so placed that a greater or less receipt at the treasury does not affect him personally, and he can live on in careless security, knowing that, however the receipts at the treasury may fail in the course of the year, at the end of that time he will be able to indemnify himself from another source. It is a property of human nature soon to relax when not impelled by personal advantage or disadvantage."

The politicians and bureaucrats in Washington, D.C. who are bent on nationalizing the nation's railroads, after having crippled them with paralyzing restriction, could learn from reading the great poet if they will not learn from the object lesson staring them in the face from across the Canadian border.

Substitute For Guns

Much is being made, for obvious reasons, of Great Britain's low crime rate and near zero incidence of political assassinations. Britons, we are told repeatedly, are greatly restricted from owning guns, such ownership constituting not a "right" but a privilege accorded members of the hunting clubs.

Indeed it is still possible to stroll across London at night without fear of being mugged by a gunman; individual violent crime there is so low as to be one of the great pluses in a country otherwise besieged with more than its share of problems.

The Kremlin is rather unhappily trudging on with this new realism. The embarrassing factor is that the United States, relatively the most capitalistic of all economies, has led the way out of the recession, the other Western nations following behind.

There are times when even longer propagandists can no longer ignore objective data, especially something so monumental as global economic recovery. Pity the theoreticians now.

What is not noted by those wanting to adopt England's gun statutes is that, while muggers, murderers and political assassins are few, there is a high voltage current of revolutionary bombings running through London and its suburbs. Explosions in pubs or hotel lobbies, etc., have become an everyday — that's right, everyday — occurrence.

So, as trepidation spreads to the reaches of the English countryside, is it really any consolation that terrorists who might use guns, can and do use bombs, instead?

In the 11th century, one man was supposed to be so subject to floating in the air that he was asked not to attend church with everyone else, lest he distract them.

Take Guard Against Butt-in In-law

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Can you stand one more mother-in-law letter? I hope so, because that's my problem. My mother-in-law lives quite close to me and is always popping in, which I don't mind because she never stays long. But when she gets home, she phones me, and here is a partial list of her comments and questions:

"Are you sure Albert (he's my husband) is feeling all right? He looks constipated to me."

"I think you are keeping your house too warm. The kids get overheated and might catch cold when they go outside."

"I noticed that your plants are dry. Aren't you watering them regularly?"

"I saw nationally advertised brand canned goods in your cupboard. Why don't you buy the off-brand products? They are just as good and much cheaper."

"Don't you think you should tell Johnny (my son) to turn down his stereo? I read that today's teenagers will be wearing hearing aids by the time they are 40 because they play their records so loud they're going deaf."

"Why do you let June (my 17-year-old daughter) wear so much makeup? She looks like a cheapie."

I've asked my husband to please tell his mother to quit trying to live my life. He says he's tried, but it's hopeless. Have YOU any suggestions? She has already given me ulcers.

ULCERS IN ST. LOUIS

DEAR ULCERS: Learn to tune her out when she's reciting her list of comments, complaints and questions. Throw in an occasional "Yes, Mother," and when she's finished, say, "Thank you. Now I've got to run." Then forget it. And remember, it's not what you eat that gives you ulcers—it's what's eating YOU.

DEAR ABBY: I am a lonely, retired widow, and I am dating a man of the same status.

On several occasions he has lost control of his temper and has broken a few things. Also, when he drinks too much, he becomes very loud and insulting. Then, too, he has purposely tried to make me jealous by being overly attentive to other women.

I love this man, but would I be taking a chance on marrying him?

NEEDS COMPANIONSHIP

DEAR NEEDS: Yes. A big chance. Only you can decide whether his "companionship" would compensate for his faults. Me? I'd rather be sans-companion.

DEAR ABBY: Because I am a faithful reader of your column, three members of my family have become card-carrying kidney donors.

We would now like to know to whom we should write for information about how to donate our eyes after death.

COLUMBUS, OHIO

DEAR COLUMBUS: Your local Lions Club can help you. So can any eye doctor. And three cheers for all three of you!

Chamber Speaker Says Lost Faith in Government

By TEX DEWESE
Pampa News Staff
Confidence in government has fallen to a new low in 200 years of American history, State Insurance Commissioner Joe Christie of Austin told a Chamber of Commerce luncheon audience here Monday.

The reason for the all-time decline, Christie stated, is found in what he called "the fact that people have lost their faith and trust in government to spend wisely and effectively."

The head of the state insurance board went on to say: "Nothing is easier than spending public money because it doesn't seem to belong to anyone."

Christie then traced results of "taxation without representation" from the original Stamp Act of 1765, the Boston Tea Party down through the Declaration of Independence when the colonies rose up in arms against oppressive taxation by King George III.

"The American Revolution was a revolt against excessive taxation and public spending," Christie said.

He pointed out that Americans only have confidence in their government to tax where taxation is necessary for the good of the general public.

"We have always shown confidence in government when our public officials spend wisely and effectively," he said.

The speaker declared the way to stop unwise and ineffective spending is to "start on ourselves."

Stating individuals "must tighten their belts," Christie pointed to the savings in money and the number of employees in the state insurance department.

The commissioner said his department eliminated the need for construction of a $20-million office building and reduced the number of department employees from 624 to 573 and brought about a savings of more than $1-million in one year.

He cited board plans to bring about simpler, more readable and more understandable insurance policies and a concerted drive to weed out what he called "unscrupulous insurance salesmen" who take advantage of policy-buyers.

Christie moved over into politics a bit when he made a reference to former California Gov. Ronald Reagan by stating current California Governor Brown had eliminated frills of the former state administration and was operating certain departments at half the rate employed by Reagan.

"Saving money is what restores the confidence of people in government," he said.

Christie was introduced by Warren Fatheree, Pampa insurance broker.

Another highlight of Monday's chamber membership meeting was the recognition given to Coach John Welborn, his associate coaches, and the Pampa High School football 3-AAAA District co-champions.

Members of the squad, guests at the luncheon, were introduced individually by Coach Welborn.

who accepted for them a congratulatory plaque presented by chamber president Boyd Taylor on behalf of the chamber membership.

Boyd announced the next membership luncheon has been set for Jan. 26 when United Fund workers will be honored for their successful over-subscribed 1975 campaign.

Navy Engineers Repair Cruiser

PRIOLO, Sicily (UPI) — U.S. Navy engineers made emergency repairs to the collision-damaged guided missile cruiser Belknap today in an effort to make the vessel seaworthy for a trip to Naples for a full overhaul.

The death toll in Saturday night's collision between the Belknap and the aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy rose to five, a Sixth Fleet spokesman said.

Two men remained missing and were presumed dead in the Belknap's crumpled superstructure.

The original casualty figures put the dead and missing at four each. One missing man was later found alive, another dead. The Navy withheld further details pending notification of next of kin.

The spokesman said 21 of 47 men injured were hospitalized—11 at the U.S. Navy hospital in Naples and 10 at the U.S. Air Force hospital in Landstuhl, West Germany, which specializes in burns treatment.

The other 26 men returned to duty after receiving medical attention.

U.S. Rear Adm. Don Engen flew to the Kennedy to lead the investigation into the collision, which Navy sources said could have been triggered by failure of the Belknap's hydraulic steering system.

The ships crashed during night exercises in the Ionian Sea 70 miles off Sicily's east coast. The angled flight deck of the 77,000-ton Kennedy, America's largest conventional aircraft carrier, sheared off the bridge of the 8,000-ton Belknap, touching off fires.

Football Death Probed

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Jake Whetstone Jr., 16, was injured and paralyzed making a tackle in a high school football game. Doctors said the youth had to be transferred to a special research institution to save his life.

The transfer was not made and Jake died 11 days later. Two legislators Monday urged an investigation to determine if racial discrimination was involved in the youth's death.

Whetstone, a halfback on the Linden-Kildare high school football team, was injured making a tackle during a Nov. 14 game against DeKalb. He was taken to Linden Memorial Hospital where officials contacted the Texas Institute of Research and Rehabilitation Center in Houston.

Whetstone's parents, aided by physicians, legislators and local authorities tried to have Jake admitted into the research center, but a neurosurgeon suggested the move would kill the boy.

He died Sunday — 11 days after he was injured.

Reps. Mickey Leland, D-Houston, and Buck Florence, D-Hughes Spring, said there were indications that the boy might have been discriminated against because he was black.

"We were seeking to get him into one of the best institutions in the South but all we got was a cold shoulder," said Florence.

"Still, we had a situation where the little boy was black,"

Florence said. "I think it's an irate situation and I think its needs to be looked into."

However, Florence said racism did not play a part in the boy's stay in Linden and he hoped it didn't in Houston.

"It's my personal opinion that you had such a very acutely ill little boy and the prognosis was not good and that they simply didn't want somebody who was that sick," Florence said.

Leland said the research center already had decided when the boy should die and refused to admit him to its facilities.

"They let the kid die rather than be a burden on the hospital," Leland said. "Society doesn't think that paraplegics are real human beings.

"I feel the racial issue might have entered the picture. I can't imagine the hospital would do the same thing to a 16-year-old white kid."

Attending physicians in Linden indicated the boy would die if he was not moved to a facility equipped to work with paraplegics.

If you don't have storm windows and doors, think about investing in them now, before the very cold weather hits. They help reduce fuel bills by up to 15 percent — enough to cover the cost in only a few years.

Sniper Kills Clerk

DETROIT (UPI) — A sniper firing from a top-floor hotel room killed a grocery clerk who was pulling two women out of the line of fire and wounded two policemen late Monday. Then he apparently committed suicide, during a fire ignited by police bullets and tear gas.

"The place was an inferno," a policeman at the scene said. "There was no way for the guy to get out."

Police identified the sniper as Paul Dawson, 28, a Vietnam veteran who lived alone at the hotel. They said Dawson apparently shot himself as fire swept the hotel.

Police said Dawson apparently died in the room that served as a vantage point for the shootings. His body and an army carbine were found in a third-floor room after firemen extinguished the blaze.

Police said Gerald "Cowboy" North, who also lived in the hotel and worked parttime as a store clerk and porter, was killed by the sniper's bullets as he dashed into the street under fire to pull two women to safety.

Witnesses said North was shot in the chest just after he pulled the two women out of the line of fire.

Patrolmen Al Krasich, 30, and Arne Joux, 28, were wounded as they stepped from a squad car to answer an emergency call from the grocery store where North was killed.

They were listed in "temporary serious" condition with bullet wounds in the legs.

"All I can say is that I've never been so scared," said Geoffrey Brown, who ducked away from the line of fire and took refuge in a neighborhood grocery. "Everybody just fell to the ground and crawled away."

A half dozen other residents of the hotel, the Lincoln Motel, were taken out as about 100 police began shooting into the upper floor to flush the sniper.

Armed forces are still looking for the sniper.

'Let Medicaid Contract Expire'

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — An official of Blue Cross says the state has no right to audit his firm's administrative spending under the terms of a Texas Medicaid contract scheduled to expire Sunday.

"Certainly we don't have anything to hide, but in the final analysis how ever that money was spent is a Blue Cross consideration," Eugene Aune of Dallas, Blue Cross executive vice president, said Monday.

Aune told the three-man Public Welfare Board his company is willing to submit to a state audit of bookkeeping methods, but will not provide actual figures on how administrative money is spent.

Officials are negotiating the terms under which Texas will provide continued insurance coverage for welfare recipients — coverage now purchased from Blue Cross.

The board greeted Aune's blunt statement as a "change in attitude" and ordered state attorneys to draw up a new contract with audit provisions mutually agreeable to the state and Blue Cross.

"I'm appalled that you resent audit and investigation as much as you do," board member Hilmar Moore of Richmond told Aune. "As long as I'm on this board I'm going to insist on an audit. If you're saying you don't want an audit, I think the quicker we terminate our relationship the better."

Aune said that in the face of continued demands for such an audit and criticism of his firm's administration and investment policies Blue Cross sees no benefit to continuing the present contract after Sunday.

He suggested that if the state wants full audit rights, it should switch to a fiscal agent contract with the state actually purchasing medical services for welfare recipients and paying Blue Cross to administer the program. Welfare Commissioner Raymond Vowell said the fiscal agent arrangement would cut federal matching money $3 million at a time when the state is facing a $50 million to $70 million deficit on Medicaid.

During the meeting Board Chairman George A. Butler threatened to eject a woman who interrupted the discussion to protest allowing Blue Cross to continue using Medicaid reserve funds for investment.

Jackie Cox said she wanted to tell the board that Gov. Dolph Briscoe's campaign manager, Jess Hay of Dallas, received $121 million worth of investment money from the Blue Cross arrangement in 1973-74.

"I'm running this meeting and you sit down or I'll have you ejected," Butler said. "You come here every time and disturb this meeting. We don't intend for you to take over this meeting."

Butler recessed the gathering briefly when Ms. Cox insisted on talking and presenting her data.

"We don't intend for you to lay out a damn thing," he said. "Can it!" shouted Moore as he stomped out of the meeting, only to return a few minutes later.

Requests Ban on Chemicals Tolerated in Fresh Fish

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two environmental groups have asked the Food and Drug Administration to reduce the amount of a widely used industrial chemical allowed in fresh water fish and, eventually, to ban its presence in all foods.

The Environmental Defense Fund and the Natural Resources Defense Council said Monday

current rules governing PCB in fish.

Since 1970 the FDA has allowed fresh water fish to be sold in interstate commerce if they have no more than five parts per million of PCB. Last week Canada said it was going to a stiffer tolerance level of two parts per million.

The move will affect mostly fish from the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence River because PCB contamination is not a problem with salt water fish.

Recent disclosures that fish from the Hudson River and the Lake Michigan are highly contaminated by polychlorinated biphenyls make prompt action necessary.

The FDA said it is studying "all available information" on the question, including the economic impact on the fishing industry, and will decide whether it needs to change its current rules governing PCB in fish.

Respirator To Be Stopped

HILO, Hawaii (UPI) — A judge has ordered turned off a respirator attached to a woman who has been in a coma for nearly two weeks from a suspected overdose of drugs.

Judge Shunichi Kimura took the action Monday in the case of Alice Cameron, 27, after five of seven doctors declared her officially dead.

Police said the woman had a Portland, Ore., arrest record for drug-related offenses. She was found in a deep coma at her Hilo home Nov. 12 and officers said she was suspected of having swallowed cocaine.

Lawyers involved said the Cameron case should not be compared with the New Jersey litigation involving Karen Ann Quinlan. They pointed out that both sides in the Quinlan case agreed the victim was not dead. The question here was what constituted death.

Legal complications began when Kimura last Thursday named a lawyer to act as Miss Cameron's guardian. The attorney, Ron Gaddis, asked for a temporary order restraining her physician from removing her eyes for transplants. During the weekend, Gaddis and Ms.

Cameron's doctor's lawyer argued the question of whether the woman was legally dead.

Of the seven doctors who testified before Judge Kimura, five said their examinations showed she was dead. One said he "just didn't know" whether she was dead or still in a coma.

One of the seven said he did not believe the woman dead. Several of the five said they had taken brain wave tests which showed no life and said Miss Cameron was dead and the respirator which had been attached to her body since she arrived at the hospital should be turned off.

Employees Have Short Week

Pampa city employees Monday began one of their shortest work weeks of the year.

City Hall offices will be closed Thursday and Friday in observance of the Thanksgiving holiday weekend. City Manager Mack Wofford said.

Only city police and fire departments will be operating on regular work schedules during the holiday period.

Students Honor Joplin

TEXARKANA, Tex. (UPI) — The late composer Scott Joplin made ragtime music popular with his lively piano pieces in the early part of the 20th century. But Joplin and his music had been all but forgotten until two years ago.

Several of his songs were used in the soundtrack of the 1973 hit movie, "The Sting" and revived interest in the compositions by the man known as the father of ragtime music.

Three busloads of students, two high school bands and 15 of Joplin's relatives gathered Monday to celebrate the 107th anniversary of his birth.

The ceremonies were part of Texarkana's bicentennial celebration.

"We are here today to honor a native son who has, through his music, reached not only the hearts of people in the United States, but also the world," said Nick Demopoulos, coordinating director of the Texarkana Joint Bicentennial Commission.

Joplin was born in this community along the Texas-Arkansas state line Nov. 24, 1868 and lived here until he was 16. He later moved to St. Louis and Sedalia, Mo. He died in 1917 and was buried in New York.

A crowd of 300 moved across a concrete parkway and into a one-way street as the combined bands of Texas High School and Arkansas High played selections of Joplin's music to celebrate the anniversary.

A group of Joplin's relatives, including a niece and two great nieces, sat along a row of benches near a bust of the late composer which will be included in the Texarkana Historical Museum.

Joplin's music first became popular during the early part of the century.

One of Joplin's biggest hits was "The Maple Leaf Rag," which was written in 1899 and sold more than one million copies in sheet music.

The final song played at Monday's celebration was a selection from "Tree Monisha," an opera Joplin had trouble getting produced before his death. The opera, which is the story of a black couple living along the Red River in Arkansas, made its debut in Atlanta in 1972 and is currently playing on Broadway.

Costly Accident

A one-car accident a mile east of Pampa on U.S. 60 Monday night resulted in an estimated $10,000 in damages to a 1976 Cadillac driven by Wallace G. Ehmman of 1602 Charles. Texas Highway Patrolman Dawson Stubbs said the cause of the accident was axle problems due to an apparent defeat of a right wheel. Stubbs said the driver escaped injury and the accident was not his fault. The vehicle was a total loss, according to Stubbs. (Pampa News photo by Robert Echols)

Spanish Cabinet Meets

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Prime Minister Carlos Arias Navarro called his cabinet into session today to begin airing the problems confronting post-Franco Spain, including what to do with an estimated 2,000 political prisoners. The session was called as a prelude to a meeting Friday with Spain's new king, Juan Carlos I. A government official said a wide range of topics would be discussed and no decisions were expected, especially concerning the dissidents who have been jailed in the past few years under Generalissimo Francisco Franco. Outlawed opposition groups have been demanding their release as one of the first reforms expected under Juan Carlos. In his inaugural speech Saturday, spoke of equal justice for all Spaniards. But Franco law still provides for arrest without charge and detention without trial. "Obviously, with a change of systems, there are thousands of problems to be dealt with," the official said. Among the problems facing Juan Carlos are violence in the Basque region and the demands for political reform. The killing of a town mayor Monday marked the first violent incident in the four Basque provinces since three policemen were murdered a week before the late Generalissimo Francisco Franco fell ill Oct. 17. It was unclear whether the incident was politically motivated. Meanwhile, Juan Carlos' father, Don Juan de Borbon, banished under Franco for his liberal political views, issued a statement Monday urging "absolute priority" to establishment of a "pluralist democracy" in authoritarian Spain. He called for the elimination of corruption and for the entry by Spain into the European Common market. The statement was seen as a repetition of Don Juan's well-known views, but its timing was interpreted as an attempt to influence his son early in his reign. Juan Carlos Saturday said in his inaugural speech he would consider regional changes in the country and what he called "far-reaching improvements." He mentioned political freedom and freedom of expression. The killing Monday of Mayor Antonio Echevarria of Oyarzun was certain to prompt demands for heavy security precautions during Thursday's visit of foreign chiefs of state, including the presidents of France and West Germany, to pay their respects to Europe's newest monarch. A gunman shot Echevarria in his apartment Monday and escaped with an accomplice. The motive for the shooting, near the French border, was not known. The victim had fired two councilmen for taking part in a strike in support of five executed Basque separatists. But his family said the killing might have stemmed from Echevarria's real estate dealings. The American Brahman Breeders Association was established Feb. 28, 1924 by 17 cattlemen meeting in Houston, Tex.

Police Capture Bandit

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI) — The situation called for a volunteer so police Lt. David White stepped forward. White spent the next five hours negotiating "eyeball-to-eyeball" with an armed robbery suspect threatening to kill his hostage unless he was given a getaway car. The suspect was cornered in a disabled car at a highway roadblock, but he was holding a gun on the hostage while White tried to convince him to surrender. He at first seemed to think he was going to get by with everything," White said. "But during our last two sessions he seemed rather jittery. He was lying in the floorboard of the front seat with a gun on his hostage, sometimes he would lay the gun down near him in the seat. Finally a Texas Ranger slipped beside the car and hurled a teargas bomb inside to end the standoff Monday. White said he and other officers pulled the hostage Mike Langston out of the car to safety where the suspect rolled out the door on the other side and gave up without incident. The suspect, who refused to identify himself to police but finally told a court-appointed lawyer he was Eugene Lawson, 49, was held in lieu of $120,000 bond in Lubbock County Jail.

The suspect's home address was unknown. Before dawn Monday, police chased the suspect from a southside restaurant as he fled with the assistant manager Langston as a hostage. After speeds of up to 120 miles per hour, police shot out both rear tires and stopped the car about 20 miles south of Lubbock. White, 47, was one of the first officers to reach the roadblock where the car was halted. "Nobody else wanted to walk up there with him holding a gun, but someone had to go," White said. "I yelled to him I would come up with my hands in sight if he would keep his hands where I could see them. He agreed. 'I like to get close to talk — eyeball to eyeball. I don't go for all this yelling back and forth when no one is sure what is being said. At one point Lawson realized he was getting nothing he wanted and told White to tell the other officers to rush the car. 'I'll get four of five of them before they finally get me,' he told White. After the negotiations began, Lawson refused to talk with anyone but White. "The young guys get you hurt," Lawson told White. "They don't take time to think it all out." The answer filed by PRPC

Carrillo Will Appeal

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (UPI) — Attorneys for District Judge O. P. Carrillo say they will appeal Carrillo's federal tax fraud conviction and sentence of five years in jail and a $22,000 fine. Defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes Monday compared the case to the Watergate affair, and argued conviction alone was adequate punishment. His appeal for leniency for the South Texas judge went unheeded by U.S. District Judge Owen Cox. "Leniency in cases like this would be an open invitation to others," Cox said. He gave Carrillo the maximum sentence on a conviction of conspiracy in tax fraud — five years and $10,000. Carrillo, who faces an impeachment trial in the Texas Senate and a challenge to his tenure before the Texas Judicial Qualifications Commission, also received a three year concurrent jail sentence on three counts of filing false income tax returns. Each of the three counts meant a $4,000 fine, bringing the total to $22,000. Also sentenced Monday was Carrillo's brother Ramiro, who received a four year jail term and total of $20,000 in fines. He received four years and $5,000 on the conspiracy conviction.

and a three year concurrent sentence and $15,000 total in fines on five counts of filing fraudulent returns. Haynes urged the court to consider the character testimony given during the trial in handing down the sentence. He pointed to Ramiro's heart problems and diabetes, his six children — three still at home — and his wife, who also has severe health problems. He said that although O.P. Carrillo is unmarried, he aids his elderly mother and father. The Senate has delayed its trial three times because of the federal proceeding in Corpus Christi.

Mousetrap Marks Birthday

LONDON (UPI) — It's time for yet another "happy birthday" to the most tireless play of all time. Agatha Christie's "The Mousetrap" is 23 years old today. Neither war nor peace nor dark of inflationary night seems to stay this eight-character mystery from its appointed run. Today's birthday performance will be its 9,556th. No other play in the history of the theater comes even close to that consecutive record. When it opened Winston Churchill was Britain's prime minister — he guessed the killer by intermission time, legend has it — Harry Truman was president and an obscure Nikita Khrushchev was keeping any dreams of toppling Josef Stalin a close secret. By now "The Mousetrap" is a London landmark, like the changing of the guard or the Tower of London. The show's current publicity refers to it as "one of our best loved institutions." Its cast changes periodically. Its costumes change when constant use wears them out. One line was changed to eliminate a reference to food rationing. Nineteen months ago the play changed theaters. Otherwise all is as it was Nov. 25, 1952, opening night. The curtain still rises on a country house gathering of a gruff lady in tweeds, a former army major, several young ladies in apparent distress and assorted young men. Lightning and thunder stage effects. The lights go out. A scream. The lights come on. The stage is empty, save for a corpse. A policeman shows up later. The Christie play — as everyone must know by now — began life as a radio play called "Three Blind Mice," broadcast as a special birthday request by the late Queen Mary. Miss Christie, who celebrated her 85th birthday earlier this fall, expanded it for the stage and gave all the royalties to her grandson. There's a little memorial now in a special niche at The Ambassadors, the theater the play left in 1974 for the St. Martin's next door. The memorial was given by Agatha Christie to mark her play's 22 years in the first theater. It's an elaborate wooden mousetrap, out of which crawls what looks like a solid gold mouse.

Fromme Jury Deliberates

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Both prosecuting and defense attorneys agree Lynette Fromme was guilty of a crime when she thrust a loaded .45-caliber automatic pistol point-blank at President Ford. What the jury deliberated today is whether it was attempted assassination or assault. If convicted of attempted murder, she will face life imprisonment. If found guilty of assault, she will face a maximum term of 10 years behind bars. U.S. District Court Judge Thomas J. MacBride told the jury, "We would hope you would have a verdict by Thanksgiving." Defense attorney John Virga closed his case Monday by arguing the 27-year-old worshiper of mass murderer Charles Manson did not intend to shoot Ford Sept. 5, but wanted to publicize her fanatic environmentalist, anti-industrial views. Miss Fromme rejected Virga's advice and refused to take the stand in her own behalf. She has boycotted the trial since Nov. 7, when she was ejected in an outburst over the court's refusal to subpoena Manson to testify. In an unusual appeal to the eight-woman, four-man jury, Virga said: "I'm telling you now that you should find her guilty of assault of a President because that is what she did. She did not act with intent to kill the President." But U.S. Attorney Dwayne Keyes called for a verdict of guilty of attempting to assassinate Ford, who was greeting a crowd in state Capitol park. Miss Fromme's .45-caliber gun had no bullet in the firing chamber but had four in the clip. "Reason and logic will tell you one of those four bullets was meant for the President of the United States," Keyes argued. "If you think she went to the park with a loaded .45 just to point it at the President, you have to ignore all the evidence about what went on before." Virga insisted the spindly, freckle-faced defendant knew better than to shoot Ford because "she learned from the Manson family that when you kill no one would listen." On the other hand, he said if she went into the park with no bullets in the clip, "then her only form would have been psychiatrists."

Waldheim Flies to Cairo

By United Press International
U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim flew to Cairo, today to explain to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat the outcome of talks with Syrian and Israeli leaders on renewing the U.N.

peacekeeping mandate in the Golan Heights. Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy and Lt. Gen. Ensis Siilasvuo, the chief coordinator of the U.N. peacekeeping missions in the Middle East greeted Waldheim at Cairo airport. In a televised interview, Waldheim said he would convey to Sadat Syrian and Israeli views on extending the mandate permitting 1,250 U.N. soldiers to police the frontier between the two countries. He left immediately for talks with Sadat. He left Tel Aviv this morning saying he was hopeful the two sides would reach agreement before the mandate expires Sunday.

Foreign Minister Yigal Allon, Waldheim told reporters at Tel Aviv's Lod Airport. Waldheim said he would fly to Damascus Wednesday to relay Jerusalem's position to Syrian leaders. "The Syrians want an overall settlement including all aspects of the Middle East question," he said today and that Syria was "not satisfied," with maintaining the UN force without any "progress in the negotiating field." "They wish to make progress in solving substantial questions, including the Palestinian question, in order to justify the continued presence of the peace-keeping force," Waldheim said. Asked today about chances for renewing the Golan mandate, Waldheim said, "As Secretary General of the United Nations I have to be optimistic, but it is very difficult and I cannot tell what the outcome will be." Waldheim arrived in Jerusalem Monday after a week-long stop in Damascus, bringing what he called "concrete suggestions" from Syria regarding renewal of the mandate, scheduled to expire Sunday.

PRPC Answers Suit To Halt Supo Support

The class action suit to halt financial support of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission was answered in 47th District Court at Amarillo Monday by the PRPC, six counties and eight cities including Gray County and the City of Pampa. Allegations in the suit filed Oct. 17 by Dr. Donald Todd, West Texas State University professor, on behalf of "all residents, taxpayers and citizens of the state of Texas," were denied in the defendants' answer. Dr. Todd asked in the original suit that the state enabling legislation which made formation of regional planning commissions such as the PRPC possible be declared unconstitutional. It also asked the court to end "unauthorized and illegal" use of funds generated by state tax laws.

requested that the lawsuit be thrown out of court if both the Governor of Texas and the State of Texas are not added to the list of defendants and if the attorney general of Texas is not supplied with a copy of the court proceedings. Defendants in the suit filed by Dr. Todd are the cities of Amarillo, Pampa, Borger, Canyon, Farwell, Shamrock, Spearman and Perryton and the counties of Potter, Gray, Randall, Parmer, Wheeler and Deaf Smith. City Manager Mack Wofford said today Pampa and the other combined defendants are being represented in the case by the Amarillo law firm of Garland D. Sells and Associates, employed by the PRPC.

Mao Decrees Women's Lib Oriental Style

Second in a Series on China's Family Life

By GAY PAULEY
PEKING (UPI) — Womanpower is China's greatest manpower. It's liberation oriental-style. And that's the way Chairman Mao Tse-tung has decreed it.

I never saw an idle woman, even among the elderly, during a three-week five-city visit to the People's Republic with 15 other professional women from the United States.

Women hoe the fields alongside the men, they reap the harvests with the men, they pull the two-wheeled drays loaded with goods, they carry the double basket loads, each basket attached to a pole which is slung over the shoulder.

In one factory worker's family we visited in Shanghai, the grandmother was cook, shopper, housekeeper and child minder. And there was, for one instance, the busy, quite elderly woman in Sian embroidering a red comforter.

Her workbench was the sidewalk on a broad avenue, with the comforter spread out as if the sidewalk were her sole property while she handstitched away. We were in Sian four days and she was still stitching the last time we saw her.

As tourists, we slept many a night under similarly elaborate, padded soft blankets, and I appreciated them more than ever after seeing the days of handiwork that go into the making.

But we saw men using leisure hours in restaurants to talk. Once, in the Peking Hotel, I located the only television set I saw in all cities visited. It was in a public room and one evening I invited myself in for a glance at the screen. The set was on, but ignored. Instead, I became involved in a game of what turned out to be weiqi.

This is not the game of Chinese checkers as we know it in the United States. It's a game of mental skill, sort of a combination of checkers and chess, and dates back at least 2,000 years.

I was the only woman present among about 10 men. The men explained in sign language the way the game was played. I lost, of course, to the delight of my polite hosts. But they invited me to continue to sit in as they resumed the play.

Audiences at events we attended mostly were men—at the movies, the acrobatic shows, the puppet show. They also draw a heavy contingent of the young, mostly men.

Yet, everywhere we went, talking with women leaders, we heard of the equality of the sexes. It is a Mao doctrine. The women in turn had heard of the U.S. liberation movement, but showed remarkably little interest.

Equality was fait accompli in their society. Why worry about it in ours?

Seeing women greeting and briefing us at factories, schools, communes, everywhere seeing them manning the production lines whether on the farm or at a petrochemical plant, I could not resist asking bluntly one day, "has China become a matriarchy?"

Women seemed to be running the major party of the show, from the peasant in the field to the women in the key posts in central government.

The occasion for the question was a meeting with the Shanghai branch of the Women's Federation of China. The federation is a strong political arm of government, preaching the Mao principle all the way, and formed as one explained "to raise the political status of women."

In no way does it compare with our numbers of women's club groups in the United States, and I don't think we ever were able to get across one point to our Chinese hosts—that our clubs and organizations are formed for diverse reasons, sometimes for politics, sometimes health and welfare, sometimes child care sometimes religious groups, volunteer groups, and professional groups.

We kept explaining that no, the U.S. government had not financed our trip.

But to the question whether China has become a matriarchy, there was much laughter from the Chinese women. Again came the answer, men are just as interested in women having equal rights as women are.

Yet, China still in many ways is a man's world—as note that gathering of men in the Peking Hotel, although there is the saying now that "women hold up half the sky."

The fact came through loud and clear, if measured in U.S. terms. Most clearly it came through to us on the 21-hour train ride through the countryside to Sian from Nanking when at dawn I saw six women, with ropes around their shoulders, pulling a crude wooden plow. The "driver" was a man.

Meeting with federation women in Peking, we tried to break the formality and language barrier by asking each Chinese about her daily life—and there were municipal officers, a judge, one who runs the neighborhood health programs, and a party leader who also is a teacher and school supervisor in middle school (comparable to U.S. junior high).

It was the young, attractive teacher who gave us the best lesson.

Her typical day, she said, started at six every morning when she arose to do formal exercises or play badminton with her two children, a boy in the fifth grade of middle school and soon to "go to the countryside" and a girl in second.

If her day is normal, she is home by seven in the evening; if it is prolonged (because she oversees other classes), she will have dinner at school.

Running the home for four (her husband is an engineer) takes some organizing, she conceded. But the children split up the meal preparation six days—The boy cooks Monday, Wednesday and Friday, the girl Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

And on Sunday, everyone's day free, she and her husband cook together. "And," she added, "I do believe the meals are better then."

Whether you agree with the socialist system matter not. But it is working for the Chinese—so far.

We never saw a beggar, we never saw anyone who looked hungry, and although the clothing is the uniform gray and blue of Mao jacket and trousers, none is ragged.

The men retire at 60, the women at 50, unless they are of office-worker status, when the age is 55. Retirement is at 70 per cent of earnings, and paid by the state.

We asked what the elderly do, for we already had seen grandmothers by the dozens shopping and caring for the children. We heard nothing of homes for the retired; they simply live with their families, and as one party member told us, "Continue their good works by teaching others about Marxism and Mao."

Your Horoscope By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 26

Your birthday today: This is the year of the unexpected. Whatever your direction is, some change is due. You must learn another skill at work if you are to advance. Relationships are tentative and require consistent care. Today's natives are nearly always involved in vocations where sight is important. They are strongly motivated in their careers, at the expense of their family and social lives.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: You now enter a high phase in your annual cycle and can expect to encounter competition next week. In the meantime, get your facts and figures in order, repay obligations and collect scattered resources.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Stabilize your position. Long-standing conditions affecting your daily life are subject to favorable change. Take great care not to mislead anybody.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Use brains rather than brawn wherever possible. Plan your long holiday weekend while clearing out old clutter. You have huge responsibilities because many people follow your example.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: You receive unusual cooperation from ambitious associates at work. Turn it into an opportunity to get details established on various projects.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Correspondence and routine obligations require attention. Get out of your comfortable cubbyhole to see what's happening elsewhere. Youngsters need encouragement.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: It's a fairly good day for you now to enter into terms with reality. Although your programs may not be perfect, they don't have to be abandoned. Look after your health; start a diet and exercise program.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Let this be as uneventful a day as you can get by with, and don't make major decisions or changes in your career. Travel yields valuable information and starts you on some brand-new ventures.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Settle active working agreements. Deal with the difficulties of older people. There are some unfamiliar faces to study in the process. Don't share your problems with those you love.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Long-awaited progress begins, step by step. Distant situations can be turned to good advantage; keep communications open. You gain insight into legal matters by asking questions.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: End the workweek with a bang, but don't be careless. You have special benefits coming, and it's not time to conduct a questionable experiment.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: You have it made if you can pursue your original plans. Speculation is out for the moment. Pay serious attention to home and what's going on there.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Collect your notes and recent data. Figure out how to improve your situation and that of others. Stay on your toes; time runs out swiftly today.

Afghanistan covers 650,000 square miles.

At Wit's End

By ERMA BOMBECK

By ERMA BOMBECK

The English language has fallen victim to a series of questions that has become so commonplace that people don't even bother to listen to the answers anymore.

It first came to my attention while viewing Mary Coyle Chase's great Broadway play, "Harvey." People were forever saying to the hero, Elwood P. Dowd, "Gee, we've got to get together sometime for dinner," and as they walked away he would say brightly, "When?"

They would stop dead in their tracks, fumble for a date and finally get pinned down. I should like to take up the banner of Elwood P. Dowd and help stamp out "filler" talk. Phrases like:

"How was your flight?" Just to prove that no one really cares about my flight, I have replied, "Over Chicago in a blizzard the pregnant hostess slapped Helen Hayes across the mouth, a loony shot a hole in the cabin for insurance money, and Dean Martin had to bring us in with no landing gear." only to have my host smile and say, "Wonderful. You have luggage?"

"How are you?" is probably the most inane, often-used bit of fluff in the English language. No one really wants to know. I could carry extra sets of X-rays in my handbag and still not get any attention. I once got on the elevator with a boss of mine who never really got around to remembering the names of people who worked for him. He said, "Well, Miss Early Bird... how are you?"

I looked at him solemnly, said, "I have a 50-50 chance," and got off the elevator leaving him in shock.

Another of my favorites is when people call you on the phone and ask, "Are you busy?" "Compared to what?" brings a silence as they try to remember what they asked.

Some people just don't know how to reply, so they resort to standardized reactions. In telling a group of women about the death of a prominent citizen, I got three standard replies, "Are you sure?" (Reasonably. He stopped breathing.) "You're kidding!" (These are the jokes?) And "I don't believe it!" (What would it take to convince you?)

The granddaddy of all routine questions has to be the one my husband poses every night — "What kind of a day did you have?" — and then leaves the room.

One of these days, I'm going to follow him and tell him. It would serve him right.

Foot Rubber Has His Day in Court

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio (UPI) — It rubbed Elza Abraham the wrong way when he went on trial in his hometown.

Elza, 78, and one of the community's best known citizens, is a foot rubber. That is, he rubs other people's feet.

Although Elza boasts that rubbing his friends' feet has helped cure their ills, he insists that he does it as a hobby, not medicine.

But the state medical board got wind of Elza's doings, sent an investigator down for a rub and then charged Abraham with practicing medicine without a license.

The case came up this week before Middletown Municipal Court Judge J.T. Lamb.

Elza came out of the courtroom smiling and announced: "The judge threw it out. My lawyer made a monkey out of the stool pigeons who came down here."

"The judge said to them, 'Are you all through? Well then, case dismissed.' The judge said in no way was I practicing medicine."

"The courtroom was packed with my friends," noted Elza, who's been a mailman for 40 years and a Boy Scout leader half a century. "I'm pretty well known in this town and it was comical."

"My star witness, in fact, was a doctor friend of mine. He testified I wasn't practicing medicine — I was just giving common massage."

"It's an old-time remedy," Elza says of his foot rubbing. "I can feel your feet and tell what's the matter with you. I rub a certain spot on your foot and rub out a sore spot on another part of your body. Heart ailment, gall bladder, sinus, you name it. Knocked out bursitis in one treatment."

Elza says he has a lot of requests for foot rubs and gives four or five 45-minute treatments every day at his home in this southwestern Ohio community.

How did Elza get started rubbing feet?

"Eighteen years ago I went to see ol' Charlie Moser down in Bethany, Ohio. He rubbed feet and he fixed me up. So I started studying something called 'reflexology.' Now I got charts and books all over the place."

"Foot rubbing relaxes tension and opens circulation. The body has reflexes in the bottom of the foot. I find 'em, rub 'em, and rub out the sore spot. Been a lot of miracles through foot rubbing."

But unknowingly rubbing a state inspector's feet—which led to this week's trial—has taught Elza a lesson.

Choir Sings For Retired Teachers

The Freshman Mixed Choir from Pampa Junior High School entertained 52 members of the Pampa Retired Teachers Association recently. The vocalists were attired in patriotic costumes for the bicentennial program under the direction of Elena Donald.

Selections included "Lord, We Praise You for Rhythm" by Welter, "Earth to Ashes" by Cesseler, "Sing Out, Sweet Land" by Morris Fried, "Americana" by Ganinelli, and "Movin' On" by Hannisian. The membership voted to pay a fee to use the Senior Citizens Building for future meetings. Two defensive driving courses were announced — one during the week of Nov. 24 and one in January.

The next meeting will be 2 p.m. Dec. 14 in the Flame Room of the Pioneer Natural Gas Company.

Pregnant Women Drinkers Run Risk

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pregnant women who are heavy drinkers risk bearing children who are smaller than normal and who suffer defects characterized by peculiar facial features, small heads and brains, doctors said Wednesday.

These defects, known as Fetal Alcohol Syndrome, are caused either because of heavy social drinking or various illnesses suffered by women who drink during pregnancy.

The syndrome was discussed at a symposium on alcohol and drug abuse during pregnancy at New York University Medical Center where doctors said research has not determined specifically what causes the syndrome.

Dr. Eileen Ouellette, an associate professor of pediatrics and neurology at the Boston University School of Medicine, said the syndrome was first discovered by doctors Ken Jones and David Smith of Seattle in 1973.

"The babies are small at the time of birth," she said, "and they have small heads and presumably small brains." Other effects of the syndrome include small eyes, chins and peculiar facial features, she said.

But, she said, "There may be additive factors and not the alcohol itself" that cause these deformities, including such factors as malnutrition, bleeding and diseases of the liver. In addition, she said, heavy smoking, use of sedatives and other mild drugs may also contribute to the syndrome.

A major difficulty in treating mothers who drink heavily is detecting the fact that she has a drinking problem, the doctors agreed.

Perceptor Chi Receives 3-Star Rate

Perceptor Chi Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi has received a three-star rating for 1974-75 from the International Beta Sigma Phi offices.

The group met Nov. 17 in the John Plaster home, 1010 Charles, to hear a program "A Woman Chooses" by Mary Baton.

The members will begin their cookbook sale in the future.

HOW'S The Electric Company DOING? 27 acres of this Wyoming land can almost feed 1 steer for 1 year...

OR
this same land will supply enough coal to generate the electric living needs of our residential customers for over 3 years.

America has an abundance of coal... more, in fact, than the Arabs have oil... enough coal, say some, to supply our needs for 600 years. The use of this resource will help us move toward energy self-sufficiency.

In parts of northeastern Wyoming, low-sulphur coal lies just below the surface in seams up to 80 feet thick. It's so rich that only 27 acres can give us enough coal to supply the electric living needs of our 204,506 residential customers and their families for over 3 years.

With natural gas in short supply and becoming more expensive, it makes good sense to use coal to generate electricity — and that's just what we'll be doing in our new Harrington Station when the first unit is completed next June.

Who's Cashing in on Bicentennial?

By ROBERT BETTS
Copley News Service

Some Americans are calling it the "Buy-centennial." They deplore attempts to cash in on the nation's 200th anniversary with the sale of china plates and mugs, tri-cornered ashtrays, plastic Liberty Bells, Stars and Stripes T-shirts, fake swords, pistols and other gimcracks. The Bicentennial is being exploited, they complain. Others see nothing wrong in making a profit from a portrait of Washington on a plate. Free enterprise is a big part of the American story, they point out. Even if some of the stuff is junk, nobody is being forced to buy it. "I see no harm in these Bicentennial products," said Robert Williams, executive secretary of the New York chapter of the Sons of the Revolution. "There's nothing wrong with making a buck." George Ebner, executive director of the Pennsylvania Bicentennial Commission, said, "If you really believe in the American free enterprise system, then this is the chance of a lifetime." Official commissions benefit from the marketing of many Bicentennial items. They supplement their meager budgets with fees for licenses issued to businessmen for the use of the official star-shaped logotype of the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration. For this privilege merchants pay 4 or 5 per cent of sales. The government can prohibit application of the official seal to anything it has not endorsed. "The American public expects to be able to buy products commemorating the Bicentennial," says ARBA director John Warner. Jeremy Rifkin, leader of the People's Bicentennial Commission, a private activist group, denounces what he calls a partnership between the ARBA and big business to commercialize the Bicentennial. He says such usage is "making meaningless the country's sacred roots." Many corporations are contributing financially to the Bicentennial celebration with no return in mind beyond good will. A well-known example is "Bicentennial Minutes," a series of 732 one-minute vignettes from American history shown on CBS-TV, which Shell Oil has underwritten at a cost of $9.3 million. Other Bicentennial TV specials are being sponsored by Gulf Oil, Xerox, 3M and the American Bankers Association. Gulf Oil also has contributed $1 million to the funding of the Wagon Train project, in which a train of covered wagons, one for each state, will cross the nation along old trails, visiting various communities en route.

The American Freedom Train — 25 exhibition cars now being drawn across the country by a restored steam locomotive — has been funded in part by PepsiCo Inc., Kraftco, General Motors and the Prudential Insurance Co. of America, each of which has contributed $1 million. The Statue of Liberty has been reglazed and refurbished through funds given by the American Express Co., which also provided funds for a film of the project. Several of New York's pre-1800 structures received more than 250 gallons of paint donated by the SCM Corp. to spruce up the houses for the city's Bicentennial celebration. The J. C. Penney Co. is providing sheet music echoing 200 years of American experience for choral groups, bands, and high school orchestras. It is being distributed to about 30,000 high schools at an estimated cost of $1.5 million. An Exxon grant of $200,000 will support a series of concerts held at the Kennedy Center for Performing Arts in Washington, D.C. Outstanding musical groups and soloists from across the nation will be featured. The National Association of Home Builders has offered to assist the ARBA's Heritage '76 Meeting House program, involving the restoration of authentically historic structures which would become public property. Radio stations around the country are doing their share of boosting the Bicentennial spirit in their communities, launching special programs and vignettes in close cooperation with their local Bicentennial committees. Such goodwill contributions are seen by Rifkin as attempts "to use the Bicentennial as a propaganda forum."

Shunned Bear Growls

CARLISLE, Pa. (UPI) — Robert Bear has shown he is more than just a simple potato farmer whose wife and six children deserted him because he challenged his church. During four hours of testimony Monday, Bear emerged as a victim of his own complex and sometimes violent emotions — a man torn between love for his family and the desire to destroy the Reformed Mennonite Church. The trial has been recessed until Wednesday. Bear has asked Cumberland County Judge Clinton to ban "shunning" — the 400-year-old practice of ostracism the Mennonite church uses to punish members who have been excommunicated. Bear contends his wife, Gale, denied him social and sexual contact to try to force him to repent. He said when he refused, she turned their six children against him. Bear faced an audience packed with both supporters and church members, who were distinguished by their black hats, bow ties and "plain suits" or drab floor length dresses and gray bonnets. During his testimony Bear was both defiant and compassionate: angry and on the verge of tears. He said Gale punished him by refusing to cosign loans needed to run their 400-acre potato farm, causing their gross income to fall from about $100,000 in 1972 to about $20,000 in 1973. "I was well prepared for her not to unite with me as a wife, but I was not prepared for her not to unite with me in business so I could provide for my children," Bear said, choking back a sob. But he admitted Gale took the children and deserted him in December, 1974, because he acted in angry frustration and cut off their support. He also admitted writing a fiery letter in which he compared Gale to a French prostitute because she attempted to use sex to bring him back into the church.

Key Club Gives History Of County

The history of Gray County, through pictures and narration, was presented Saturday to Key Club members at the First United Methodist Church. Frank Stowers, Key Club president, said the program utilized pictures on file at the White Deer Land Museum. Early photos showed herds of buffalo grazing in Gray County and traced and development to the railroads which brought settlers into Gray County.

Also included were photos of the people who developed this area of the panhandle including George Lyng, Cornelius Cuyler, Frederick Foster, M.K. Brown, and C. Buckler. The program was presented as a model program in observance of Key Club Week, Stowers said.

Reduces Bleeding

DENVER (UPI) — University of Colorado Medical Center officials say a surgical technique which lowers a patient's body temperature is more successful with children than adults. The technique, called hypothermia and used in conjunction with normal anesthesia, involves the controlled lowering of a person's body temperature to reduce bleeding. According to Dr. Bruce Paton, a surgeon at the medical center, the temperature is lowered by submerging the patient's body in a bathtub filled with ice water. Following the operation, a child's body is wrapped in a blanket containing circulating hot water and returns to its normal temperature within half an hour. But Paton said an adult's body might take an hour and a half to return to normal. "Adults generally are less tolerant of having their circulation stopped," he said. "Hypothermia makes surgery in adults more complicated." Paton said about 170 children underwent heart surgery last year at the center, which performs surgery on nearly two-thirds of all operable heart defects in Colorado. He said the technique has been used at the center for more than 20 years, often in conjunction with a heart-lung machine which monitors and stabilizes the functions of those vital organs. ## Iowa Beef VP Resigns

DAKOTA CITY, Neb. (UPI) — Iowa Beef Processors, Inc., has requested and received the resignation of Walter Bodenstein as group vice president of processing, the company announced today. The announcement followed a four-day meeting of IBP's board of directors. The hiring of Bodenstein, son-in-law of New York racketeer Moe Steinman, had touched off heated reaction and resulted in a halt in trading of the company's stock on the New York Stock Exchange. In announcing Bodenstein's resignation, IBP board chairman Currier J. Holman criticized the news media for allegations made about Bodenstein. Holman said reports that Bodenstein is connected with the underworld were "blatantly false and utterly without foundation."

Holman also said the company welcomes an investigation of its affairs and finances by members of Congress. Rep. Charles Thone, R-Neb., called for an investigation following Bodenstein's appointment. Steinman, Holman and IBP were indicted in a bribery case in New York last year. IBP was fined $7,000 and Holman escaped punishment. Steinman is serving a one-year prison term after pleading guilty to one count of income tax evasion. The appointment of Bodenstein came on the heels of the resignation of Leroy S. Zider, executive vice president and chief operating officer for IBP. Sources have said the prime factor in Zider's resignation was the hiring of Bodenstein and Zider's potential fear that similar personnel changes would be made. However, Holman said in the statement released today Bodenstein was not chosen to replace Zider and was "not a candidate for any other corporate office." Holman also announced that the board of directors has approved the purchase of up to 250,000 shares of IBP stock at $24 a share. The lengthy statement announcing Bodenstein's resignation and refuting claims that he has underworld connections said, in part: "The company's board of directors following meetings held over the last four days and after carefully considering the concern expressed by our shareholders, the financial community and the public generally, has requested and been given the resignation of Mr. Walter Bodenstein as group vice president of the processing division. "The appointment of Mr. Bodenstein by the board's executive committee was made with operating considerations uppermost in mind. However, the reaction of the financial community and others — outside the company's management — to the appointment was improperly assessed. Holman said in his statement that during Zider's tenure, the company became concerned with the "continued loss of experienced key personnel." He said Bodenstein was hired for the "specific purpose of correcting those operating difficulties."

The IBP board chairman said he has sent a telegram to some members of the Iowa and Nebraska congressional delegation informing them of the company's willingness to submit to an investigation. The telegram said, "we enthusiastically welcome your investigation" and said IBP would open all corporate activities "to your complete and thorough inspection." The telegram was sent to Sen. Richard Clark, D-Iowa; Rep. Berkeley Bedell, D-Iowa; Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., and Thone. Thone said earlier the hiring of Bodenstein deserved some "scrutiny to say the least." He said he received bipartisan support from several members of the House Agriculture Committee for an investigation. Iowa Beef Processors has slaughter plants at Denison, Fort Dodge and Mason City, Iowa; West Point, Neb., and Luverne, Minn.; and slaughter and beef processing facilities here and in Emporia, Kan., and Amarillo, Tex. The company reported sales of $1.5 billion and net earnings of $16.5 million in 1974. The sloop Providence, earlier named the Katy, was the first Continental Navy command of John Paul Jones.

What do you bid?
A. Two spades, a jump shift rebid showing 20 or more points, and forcing to game. If, instead, you jump to three notrump, you will preclude forever the possibility of your getting together in spades. If partner doesn't like spades, you will always be able to get to notrump.

3NT Pass ?
What do you bid?
A. Five notrump. You don't have much of a hand, but partner's opening bid has announced 25-27 high-card points. Your five notrump response commands him to bid a slam if he has anything above his announced minimum. Specifically, your bid is a command to him to bid the slam if he has 26 or 27 points.

The bidding has proceeded:

1♦ Pass 2♥ Pass ?
What do you bid?
A. Two spades, not two notrump. You have strictly a minimum opening bid, and a rebid of two notrump would be viewed as showing a very positive desire to get to game. You should not have this desire (technically speaking, not emotionally). If partner can't bid over two spades, your side does not belong in a game.

Q 5 - Both sides vulnerable. As South, you hold:

1♦ Pass 1♥ 1♦
1NT Pass ?
What do you bid?
A. Three notrump. Had West not bid, you would have raised opener's rebid of one notrump to two notrump, thereby showing about 11 points. But with opener's free rebid of one notrump over West's one spade overall, he rates to have about 15 points (with, of course, protection in spades). Your side belongs in a notrump game. ## Defense Cut Would Drop Servicemen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Defense Secretary James Schlesinger says that during discussions on the Pentagon budget that led to his firing one proposal brought up would have cut 200,000 servicemen from active duty. That particularly worries Schlesinger because, as he said Sunday in a broadcast interview (NBC's "Meet the Press"), the Soviet Union has "very powerful ground and attack forces" in Europe and elsewhere along Russia's borders. Schlesinger, fired by President Ford earlier this month, criticized national defense policy, saying: "We as a nation are indulging in an ostrich syndrome, burying our heads in the sand and not observing what is going on," he said. "The Soviets have increased their military establishment to over four million men. Today they have twice as many men under arms as we have." The fiscal 1977 defense budget Schlesinger and Ford apparently parted company over is being prepared now. Ford held an unusual Sunday meeting with budget director James Lynn and national security adviser Brent Scowcroft. There were indications more cuts are being considered. Sources said that at an earlier meeting, late in October, Schlesinger objected to White House-proposed budget cuts that would leave the Pentagon somewhere in the neighborhood of $97 billion instead of an expected $115 billion. Because personnel costs are already about 60 per cent of the defense budget, a manpower reduction of at least 200,000 would be necessary, he said. "I trust that the administration will not make such a decision ultimately. . . . We are not going to be in a position to cut manpower procurement year after year and hope that through a miraculous rise in productivity we can maintain a defense establishment equivalent to that of the Soviet Union . . ."

Houston, Others Begin SWC Cage Race

By MIKE RABUN
UPI Sports Writer

The Southwest Conference embarks on one of its most important basketball seasons in history next Saturday with added prestige finally produced from the official entry of the Houston Cougars into the race.

Four teams will open their season next weekend with the rest of the conference clubs starting their campaigns during the next week.

In the opening round of encounters Texas Tech will host Kansas State, TCU will entertain the potent Pan American Broncos, Rice will travel to Southern Mississippi and SMU will visit St. Louis.

This is the season many conference basketball fans have been waiting for since the entry of the University of Houston, often a national power, should boost the league's reputation about the country.

SWC basketball, often the stepchild among the nation's major conferences, gained a bit of notoriety last year with the addition of Arkansas coach Eddie Sutton and his often controversial statements.

This year, along with Houston and its veteran coach Guy Lewis, SMU has reached into the ranks of prestigious basketball coaches to lure Sonny Allen into its head coaching job.

Allen, gained the reputation around the nation as the top fast-break coach in the country while at Old Dominion.

And Allen thinks the Southwest Conference is moving in the right direction in an attempt to shake its image.

"We have new people coming into the conference," Allen said. "With Eddie Sutton last year, myself this year along with Houston, I think we can help to give the conference a different outlook.

"And I think the tournament at the end of the season is the right step as well." For the first time the SWC will choose its NCAA representative through a post-season tournament. The regular season champion in the nine-team league will draw a bye while the other eight teams fight for the right to meet that club in the title match.

Allen also said he did not think Houston was a cinch to win the conference crown.

"I think we can be competitive in this conference," he said. "This league is going to be well balanced and that is good for interest. I think the winner could lose four or five games.

"They tell me that no one wins in Houston, no one wins at Texas A&M, and no one wins at Arkansas and no one wins at Texas Tech and that is four losses right there. And there are going to be a lot of people lose at our place.

"I think there are five or six teams that could win it and everybody seems to have tough December schedule so a lot is going to depend on which teams might lose their confidence during December."

Steelers Crush Oilers

HOUSTON (UPI) — Lynn Swann, it seemed, did not want to let the Houston Oilers off the hook with just a 32-9 whipping.

Speaking in a tone so as not to add insult to injury, the Pittsburgh Steelers' talented wide receiver had a post-game word of wisdom.

"When the Houston Oilers said they were going to slam the door on somebody, they better make sure next time it isn't a revolving door," he said.

Deep inside the Astrodome, Swann's teammates celebrated the light-headedness of their near season long climb back to the top of their National Football League Division.

Considering how well Houston has played this season in wins over Washington and Miami, the rest of the NFL had to consider Pittsburgh still the champ with the manner in which they tore into the Oilers.

"I wouldn't say we were out to prove anything," said fullback Franco Harris, "but we were ready to tear into them."

"Guess this means we're on top," said the Steelers' calm Terry Bradshaw, a vastly improved quarterback who directed the rout before a hostile capacity crowd.

"And now that we are here, we don't intend to let up."

Since losing their second game, the Steelers have roared back to win eight in a row and look — finally — like a Super Bowl defender.

"This team is better than last year's team," said Bradshaw who, in his list of improvements, could have started with himself. He mixed his pinpoint passes (13 of 16) and the running of Franco Harris (149 yards) to dent the Curly Culp-led defense worse than it has ever been dented.

"The offensive line," he said, echoing the analysis of his coach Chuck Noll, "has made the biggest improvement. Tonight they whipped a good defense. They gave Franco plenty of running room. And they gave me plenty of time to throw."

Bradshaw was sacked only twice.

"You can't win a bigger game in tougher circumstances than we did tonight," said Noll, who became the winningest Steelers coach with his 52nd victory coming in his seventh season.

Defense dominated the early going as the score (3-2 Oilers) indicated with 5:07 remaining in the second quarter.

But moving from their own 34-yard line, the Steelers struck for the go-ahead touchdown on six plays. Harris ran over for his first of two touchdowns from four yards out.

"We were trapping more in that drive," said Harris of the offensive line play, "but I just more than anything, got the feel of the game, got warmed up."

One play later, the Steelers had the ball back on J.T. Thomas' interception. And four plays later, Bradshaw threw 18 yards to Swann for a second score and a 15-3 halftime lead.

The third quarter, more than any, showed Houston's frustration. The Steelers controlled the ball more than 11 of the 15 minutes, adding a field goal and limiting the Oilers to no first downs.

Tries Jumper

Rayford Young, Pampa junior guard, attempts a jump shot in his team's 67-48 win over Midland High Friday night in Harvester Fieldhouse. Young scored nine points in the win, Pampa's third of the season. The

Aggies No. 2 in Poll

NEW YORK (UPI) — Texas A&M and Oklahoma have moved in as the most serious challengers to Ohio State for the United Press International Board of Coaches major college football championship.

Rose Bowl-bound Ohio State, which completed a perfect 11-0 regular season campaign with a 21-14 victory over Michigan last Saturday, was a near unanimous choice Monday for the No.

1 spot in the weekly ratings, but Texas A&M and Oklahoma each made major advances among the top 10.

Texas A&M (9-0), although idle last weekend, moved into the No. 2 spot as Nebraska, which held the second spot a week ago, was defeated by Oklahoma, 35-10. The Sooners (10-1), meanwhile, used their victory over the Cornhuskers to climb three spots in the ratings to No. 3.

Ohio State, however, continues to hold a commanding lead in the rankings and can now rest until its Rose Bowl matchup with the Pacific Eight Conference champion — either California or UCLA. The Buckeyes received 39 first place votes and 399 points from the 40 coaches who participated in this week's ratings to take a 67-point lead over Texas A&M.

Texas A&M received the other first place vote and 332 points while Oklahoma got 307 points. No other teams received as many as 300 points.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The United Press International Board of Coaches top 20 college football teams with won-loss records and first place votes in parentheses.

(Eleventh Week):

| Team                      | Points |

Harvester Cagers Take on Perryton

Russ Reagan, a senior guard who averaged 14 points per game last season, and center Roger Reimer, a 6-3 leaper, will lead Perryton's hopes for an upset against Pampa in a non-conference basketball contest at 7:45 p.m. today in Harvester Fieldhouse.

The teams' junior varsities will meet at 6 p.m. in Harvester Fieldhouse. The Pampa Shockers will carry a 3-0 record into that contest.

Pampa's Harvesters are also 3-0, having disposed of Odessa Ector, Abilene and Midland, all in Harvester Fieldhouse.

Perryton's top players include Reagan, the Football team's touted quarterback and considered one of the top AAA basketball guards in the state, Reimer and Gayland Irwin, a 6-2 forward.

Other starters should be 6-3 Rick Merkey and 6-0 David Pletcher who were injured last season.

Shofner's 1st Win Earns Honor

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI) — Doubts had begun to gnaw at Jim Shofner. And they were nibbling away pretty good.

But doubts have a way of disappearing from a football team after a victory — particularly when victory is a rare commodity.

"I became so excited after our win," Shofner said Monday, "that it amazed me to realize how emotionally drained I had become."

The 28-21 victory by Shofner's Texas Christian University Horned Frogs last Saturday over Rice ended a 20-game losing streak, the longest active one in the country. It was only the second triumph for TCU since Shofner came back to his alma mater from an assistant's post with the San Francisco Forty Niners.

That triumph won him UPI's National Coach of the Week honors.

"I came to TCU (to replace the ousted Billy Tohill) because my friends asked me to come back," he said. "It was the only college I would have gone to."

"I decided that if I could do the job — great. But if I could not do the job I would be the first to admit it and say 'let's get somebody who can.'"

"My plans were to come here, stay here and get the job done. But after not being able to win a football game for so long a time, I felt like I might have to make a decision next year about whether I felt like I was accomplishing anything and whether I was the guy to do the job.

"I had a talk with the chancellor here this year and we decided we would go through next year and make a decision.

"I had made up my mind that at the end of next year I would decide. Now, with this win, I think I might be the right guy after all."

TCU played a few close games during the year, but after one loss piled atop the others Shofner began to wonder if his players would quit.

"We were going pretty tough and had a real good game against Texas A&M (losing to the Aggies, 14-6)," said Shofner. "But we went downhill and did not play at all well against Texas Tech (losing, 34-0 in the ninth game of the season).

"I said, uh oh, we have a real chance to throw it in right here. But we did just the opposite. We played well the last two ball games and I think the youngsters enthusiasm was the reason we did not crumble."

Now, with a season ending win to cheer up the athletic staff, Shofner must go out and convince high school prospects TCU is the place to play their college ball.

"We need to let the high school kids we know we are rebuilding and we are stable," Shofner said. "The youngsters need to know TCU is going to be here. But those are just words and this win gives them evidence that we are on the right road."

"Recruiting gets to be a chore. What happens is that everyone gets so competitive and a lot of things are said that should not be said. I think I have learned enough to relax and just tell the youngsters about our school. We have a fine university, we have a competitive football team and if you like that, fine."

Overnourished Grigger

Members of the Pampa Harvester district co-champion football team were honored — and fed — at the Pampa Optimist Club's weekly meeting Monday night. Dub Taylor, senior defensive tackle, put away more than his fill gobbling down eight hamburgers.

Bowlers To Host Tournament

By GIL WUEST
Manager, Harvester Lanes

I want to restate on the Pampa Bowling Association's 34th Annual Men's City Tournament.

The tourney will take place Dec. 6-7 and Dec. 13-14. Team event will be on both Saturdays with doubles and singles on Sundays. Entry deadline is 12 midnight Thursday, Dec. 4th.

Both the men and women's bowling associations hold a city tournament annually. This gives bowlers a chance to win back some of the money they have invested throughout the year. Of course, a tournament is only as successful as the support given it. I want to encourage you to enter this year.

Handicap given each bowler on their averages makes it an even opportunity for each of you to place well in the tournament. Please consider entering and any question you might have give us a call; we'll be glad to help or tell you who to contact.

We would like to extend a Happy Thanksgiving to all of our patrons. Those of you traveling, have a safe trip and we'll see you here when you return.

COMMISSION FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI) — The Van Cliburn International Quadrennial Piano Competition has commissioned a piano work from composer Samuel Barber to be used as part of the required repertoire in the fifth Van Cliburn piano competition to be held here in September, 1977. It is expected to be a ballad of six to eight minutes duration, and will be performed by all 12 semi-finalists as part of their one-hour recitals.
