Terrorists Surrender

ALGIERS, Algeria (UPI) — Pro-Palestinian terrorists who kidnaped the world's top oil ministers in a bloody shootout in Vienna surrendered quietly today, freeing their hostages unharmed at the end of a 25-hour hopscotch flight around North Africa.

The guerrillas—four men and a woman calling themselves the "Arm of the Arab Revolution"—stepped slowly from the Austrian Airlines DC9 and handed over their machineguns to Algerian police.

The terrorists decided to end the siege after airline crewmembers, exhausted from criss-crossing the Arab world, said they were too tired to fly any further.

Algerian and Austrian officials at Algiers Airport then negotiated the surrender.

After the gang gave up, Algerian officials whisked the commandos to police headquarters in an official Algerian government car.

Some Algerian officials said the commandos might be put on trial. Others said they might be handed over to the Palestine Liberation Organization, which has condemned their action.

Other officials recalled that in the past, other terrorist gangs simply have "disappeared"—apparently allowed to return to their guerrilla bases.

Among those released today were two prize prisoners: Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the oil minister of Saudi Arabia, and Jamshi Amouzegar, the oil minister and interior minister of Iran. Both are powerful figures with international clout.

The guerrillas originally seized 11 oil chiefs and a number of their aides in a daring raid Sunday on the Vienna headquarters of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. Three persons were killed in the takeover.

The terrorists demanded an end to Arab cooperation with Israel and called on oil-rich Arab lands to contribute money to the Palestinian cause.

The Austrian government met their demands for a plane to fly the guerrillas and almost three dozen hostages out of the country.

The band unloaded seven oil ministers and a number of their aides Monday during stops in Algiers and Tripoli, Libya.

At Tripoli, the terrorists tried to get a long distance jet to take them across the Mediterranean and much of the Middle East to the Iraqi capital of Baghdad, where they had hoped to find a welcome.

Belaid Abdessalam, was released in Algiers but voluntarily reboarded the plane for a flight to Tripoli.

The terrorists released the Libyan oil minister and Belaid at the Tripoli Airport.

From Tripoli, the terrorists ordered the pilot to fly to Tunis but Tunisian authorities refused to let them land, an Austrian government spokesman said in Vienna.

The plane then changed course for a return trip to Algiers, he said.

In addition to Sheikh Yamani and Amouzegar, other oil ministers held hostage on the last flight were Tahen Abul Karim of Iraq and Abdul Muttalib al Kazem of Kuwait. Algerian Foreign Minister Abdelaziz Bouteflika, who spent nearly three hours negotiating with the gang Monday said they planned to free their captives one-by-one in various Arab capitals.

But Libyan authorities refused to provide the new plane and the weary crew refused to continue the flight after it returned to Algiers in the early hours.

Facing a stalemate, the gunmen freed their remaining 15 hostages and surrendered.

The identities of the gunmen were not known, but a hostage told an Algerian reporter they were four Palestinians and one German. A sixth gunman was seriously wounded in the Vienna shootout and was hospitalized in Algiers when the plane first landed Monday.

There had been speculation the commandos were led by a mysterious Venezuelan terrorist known as "Carlos the Jackal," wanted for the murder of two Paris policemen and a rash of bombings in London.

During the first stop in Algiers, they released the non-Arab captives, including the oil ministers of Venezuela, Gabon, Nigeria, and Ecuador and the representative from Indonesia.

The Algerian oil minister,

It was a very well organized and well thought out operation," he said.

Most Arab countries and even the Palestine Liberation Organization condemned the raid on OPEC headquarters, making it difficult for the terrorists to find a final haven.

States Seek Ban On Aerosol Goods

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nine states joined environmental groups in filing a petition with the Consumer Product Safety Commission today seeking a ban on aerosol products containing fluorocarbons.

The petition said such aerosol products may be destroying the ozone layer of the stratosphere, which prevents ultraviolet radiation. Scientists say a reduction in the ozone layer could cause an increase in skin cancer cases.

Thomas B. Stoel Jr., a lawyer for the National Resources Defense Council Inc., said the commission has legal authority to ban the use of a major portion of such products.

Also joining in the petition were the Environmental Defense Fund, Minnesota Public Interest Research Group and the states of Colorado, Florida, Michigan, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New York, Oregon, Vermont and Wisconsin, the NRDC said in a statement.

NRDC first petitioned the commission in November, 1974, to ban such aerosol products, and the commission denied the request by a 3-2 vote, saying there was insufficient evidence linking aerosol products to depletion of the ozone layer.

The Food and Drug Administration, also citing the need for further research, denied a second petition filed by NRDC and four states last July.

Today's petition said recent findings of high-altitude balloon tests by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the National Center for Atmospheric Research support the theory that the ozone layer is being depleted.

Five Charged In IRA Arms Sale

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Five men have been indicted on charges of purchasing and supplying arms to the outlawed Irish Republican Army, engaged in a long and bloody battle with British troops in Northern Ireland.

The indictment was returned Monday by a federal grand jury which since 1973 has been investigating a possible link between funds raised in the Philadelphia-New Jersey area and the shipment of military wares to the IRA.

British Prime Minister Harold Wilson recently charged funds for IRA weapons were being raised at dinners and dances in Philadelphia, New York City, Boston, Chicago, Baltimore and San Francisco.

Indicted were Daniel Cahalane, 51, Newtown Square, Pa., contractor; Neil Byrne, 42, Warrington, Pa., a grocery clerk; former auto agency employe Daniel Duffy, 42, Upper Darby, Pa.; and Vincent Conlon, 45, and Thomas Regan, 51, both formerly of the Philadelphia area.

Authorities indicated at least two of the defendants are now in Ireland.

The five were charged with conspiring with two unindicted co-conspirators to "act as agents of the IRA" to purchase and then export to Northern Ireland an estimated 378 rifles and 140,000 rounds of ammunition.

The unindicted co-conspirators were identified as William McNichol and Marjorie Palace.

The indictment described the five as "agents of a foreign government — the Irish Republican Army — a body of insurgents — within a country with which the United States is at peace — the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland."

Cahalane was charged with seven counts of transporting weapons from the United States without license or permission from the State Department. Conlon was charged with six similar counts, Byrne with three and Regan with two.

If convicted, the defendants could receive up to five years each in prison and a $10,000 fine on the conspiracy charges, two years and a $25,000 fine for illegal export of weapons and 10 years and a $5,000 fine for acting as a foreign agent.

Tragedy Fueled Church Efforts

"All things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are called according to his purpose." — Romans 8: 28

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

It was two years ago at 5:15 p.m. on this date when the Rev. Claude Cone, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Pampa, looked up from the sermon he was preparing for the evening worship to learn the church was in flames. It was Sunday.

He and many of the members stood helplessly by and watched a blaze destroy the church building which is requiring $1.5 million to replace.

But the new building will be a "little bigger and a little better," the pastor commented.

Construction is scheduled for completion by June 1.

Rev. Cone took time Monday to reminisce about the events that destroyed a building which had been a part of Pampa for many years.

Paul Barrett and a little girl who was going to choir practice discovered the fire — and both called the fire department about the same time," he said.

His sermon topic for that Sunday evening on Dec. 23, 1973, "The Meaning of Christmas," was delivered from KPND radio station.

On that Sunday Cone delivered the sermon he had scheduled and concluded with the question, "Is Christmas in your heart?"

The pastor, his wife, Jeanne and the church organist, Eloise Lane, went to the station about 7 p.m.

That is the only service missed at the church due to the fire. Services now are in the educational building.

Bids were opened for construction of the new building on Dec. 20, 1974, with ground breaking on Jan. 19, 1975.

The contractor moved in on Jan. 20.

"We hope to be in by June 1 — but there are a lot of ifs," Rev. Cone explained. "There is no roof as yet."

In applying Romans 8: 28 to the church fire, the pastor said in these two years "our people have given $412,066 to the building fund and we collected $609,156.47 from insurance."

He said that the church also has made $69,373 on interest from the insurance money and contributions to the building fund.

Milo Carlson heads the building committee.

The church membership has increased from 1,683 in 1973 to 1,761 today. Sunday school attendance in 1973 averaged 701. The average now is about 850 weekly.

Although services are held in the educational building, baptism ceremonies are being scheduled in the Central Baptist Church.

Rev. Cone said that the new church will have two color cameras for televising the Sunday morning services. There was a single black and white camera in the old church.

The new sanctuary will seat 1,300 as compared with 1,000 in the old one.

We will have a new 35 rank pipe organ which is more than twice the size of the old one," he added.

Fire Chief Finaee Dyer said the 1973 flames were controlled and cut off from the adjacent buildings three hours after the fire was reported. But the sanctuary continued to burn for two or three more hours.

Dyer said 34 firemen — virtually the whole force were called to the fire. Eight pieces of equipment were used in the effort, including four pumps and an aerial ladder truck.

The fire broke through the roof by 6 p.m. and the roof caved in piece by piece, Dyer said.

The Rev. Cone said he doesn't know the cause. It was believed to have begun in the choir loft.

Firemen said hundreds of curious onlookers gathered near the building at 203 N. West, and were repeatedly ordered by police to move back to prevent possible injuries.

The pastor said the membership was grateful that no injuries occurred in the blaze.

Many of the women who watched the church flames leap high into the air were weeping. In addition to loss of the building, records and many of the pastor's personal belongings turned to ashes — sermons, books, correspondence dating back 20 years.

The church was built at the West Street site in 1929, and was remodeled in 1966.

Protests Re-echo in City Hall

By TEX DEWEESSE
Pampa News Staff

Protests against the bringing of Texas under the federal Voting Rights Act of 1965 re-echoed at today's meeting of the Pampa City Commission.

City Commissioner Landon Shepherd, who attended a public hearing and federal briefing on the Act's requirements in Austin Wednesday, gave city officials a report on what impact it will have on future elections in Texas.

He explained how two representatives of the Justice Department told the Austin meeting what will be required in all elections under the Voting Rights Act.

The law provides that elections must be conducted on a bilingual basis with ballots, notices and all election material printed in Spanish as well as English.

He said the law is retroactive to Nov. 1, 1972, and also requires that two annexations of property made by Pampa since then will have to get approval of the Justice Department in the District of Columbia courts.

Shepherd went through the various ramifications of the law and described them as virtual federal control of local elections.

While the law is going to be a burden on the city, Shepherd said, "we need to begin preparations to comply with it for our upcoming city election on April 6."

Shepherd praised Atty. General John Hill and Secretary of State Mark White for their attack on the legislation at the Austin seminar last week.

He also said representatives of various political subdivisions at the meeting expressed disappointment in Texas senators and representatives who voted to bring Texas under the Voting Rights Act.

He said the state officials still hope to have the law declared unconstitutional in a test case from Harris County now pending in the District of Columbia court.

Shepherd said it is possible the law can be carried to the point that any election notices printed in newspapers would have to be in bilingual languages.

Commissioners also heard a report from City Manager Mack Wofford on the progress being made in the replacement of two-inch water lines in various city areas.

Wofford said the total project calls for replacement of 35 miles of the water lines at an estimated total cost of $1.32 million.

To date about seven and a half miles have been replaced at a cost of $217,000 over the last two municipal budget years.

The city manager said if the money is available it should be possible to complete the project within the next five or six years.

In other business today, Commissioners approved changing an order for equipment to be used in the construction of the city's sewage treatment plant at an additional cost of $7,000. The change became necessary, it was explained, because the original low bidder was given a misquoted figure and it became necessary to award the bid to the next low bidder.

An ordinance providing an increase in the city's contribution to the Texas Municipal Retirement Plan was approved on final reading. As set up in the 1975-76 budget the city will contribute $1.50 for every $1 contributed by an employee up to a maximum $6,000 salary.

Buildings located at 530-536 N. Warren were removed from the list of abandoned structures to be removed when City Manager Wofford reported they had been sold and currently are being remodeled.

Jan. 13 was set as the date to receive bids on the proposed paving of a portion of Perry St.

Following the regular meeting commissioners adjourned into executive session to discuss with legal counsel Pampa's further part in the Tri-City lawsuit against the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority in connection with methods of determining the operation and maintenance costs of the aqueduct system.

Holiday Tragedy Hits

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Three more persons have died in holiday tragedies, one a fire in Dallas and another a scaffold collapse in Wichita, Kan.

A "living Christmas tree" of 65 carolers in a church parking lot crashed 30 feet Monday night onto a nativity scene containing live performers. One man was killed and 28 other persons were injured.

Two hundred spectators watched in the parking lot of the Bethel Assembly of God Church as the wooden scaffolding laced with Christmas tree branches collapsed.

"There was no warning or anything," said Rev. Ron Wilson, assistant pastor. "I was under the tree when it fell and I happened to see it start to fall and I ran out of its path."

Stanley Bustline, 41, was killed. Fourteen persons were hospitalized at three local hospitals.

The accident occurred as the carolers, most of them members of the church choir, leaned forward on the scaffolding to bow to the applause. Under them was a nativity scene, including live performers and a number of sheep. Atop the stable roof was a young girl dressed as an angel.

The singers tumbled onto each other and onto the asphalt pavement.

Rev. Wilson said the platform was constructed by church members.

"We looked at it after it was put up and it seemed perfectly safe," he said.

Some of the persons in the nativity scene managed to escape the crash. A few told authorities they heard a cracking noise, but others reported hearing only car horns honking and people applauding.

Most of the persons hospitalized suffered minor injuries, but several persons suffered fractures.

"It happened during the first performance of the Christmas Cantata program," said Jess Myers, a member of the congregation.

"The smoke was just terrible," said an inspector. "It was just too thick to move around. We tried to set up cross ventilation, but we couldn't clear the smoke."

Parkland Hospital said families of the dead firemen had not been notified.

Energy: Crucial Facts

As Congress and the White House mull the new energy bill, which would keep controls on oil production for the next 40 months, the urgent need to decontrol energy production should be obvious. To the politicians, who are customarily blighted, it isn't obvious. That is why the circulation of this study by the American Economic Foundation, reprinted below with permission, is so important.

Every since the 1770s, when American whalers produced enough oil to export 4,000 tons a year, private enterprise has proven its ability to meet our energy needs.

Admittedly, doomsday types have always contended that government had to manage our "nearly exhausted" energy resources. In 1886 the U.S. Revenue Commission worried about making synthetics available when crude production ended. In 1914 the Bureau of Mines figured total future U.S. oil production at six billion barrels—the quantity we now produce every 20 months.

None of the catastrophic predictions came to pass, and for over 150 years, private business delivered abundant energy at prices as low as they could be and still provide economic incentives needed to maintain adequate supplies.

But in the 1930s, politicians got the idea that the people were entitled to energy at prices even lower than the competitive marketplace provided. Washington decided to make natural gas a "bargain fuel," by forcing price controls on gas producers. The immediate effect on consumers seemed "positive"—just as the government intended.

But the long-term effects on all groups were negative. Artificially lowered price increased the demand for natural gas but made gas profits shrink. This reduced capital available for exploring and developing new gas fields.

Understandably, consumption of gas has exceeded new discoveries for the past seven years. At this rate, we will soon have no natural gas at all, while sizable reserves remain in the ground. Meanwhile, to compete with price-controlled gas, the coal industry had to keep its prices artificially low. Thus it did not have enough capital to modernize old mines and open new ones.

Then Congress decreased the depletion allowance in 1969 from 27.5 to 22 percent (a blow to all energy industries) and in quick succession passed the Mine Health and Safety Act, National Environment Policy Act, and Clean Air Act. While well-intentioned, these laws increased the cost of mining, reduced profits, and further curbed coal production.

Result: despite the fact that coal is the world's most abundant fuel, and America owns half the known supply (a storehouse that exceeds even the Arabs' oil wealth), we are now producing only 630 million tons per year—same as 20 years ago!

Again, our government has long intervened in the domestic oil industry—through regulatory interference, high taxes, inadequate depreciation allowances, and price controls. This made it more profitable for American oil producers to develop petroleum resources abroad (that is why they built the Mideast oil facilities later expropriated by the Arab nations, who formed the cartel that tripled oil prices.) Control of domestic oil prices made the number of new American wells decline drastically, as costs went up and oil prices remained frozen. Thus domestic oil production has dropped since 1970, and continued to go down, even after the Arabs jacked up prices!

Other government interventions have shockingly delayed completion of the Alaskan pipeline and building of nuclear energy facilities.

Words of Wisdom

Everything in America's garden may not be roses, but it surely isn't stinkweed. As Margaret Thatcher, first woman leader of Britain's Conservative party, remarked during a recent visit to the U.S. as I look at America, if this is failure, what in Heaven's name is success?

As she sees the struggle for human dignity and the human spirit, she says "we are working ourselves into a decline, talking ourselves into failure."

There is wisdom to her words. Her knowledge and common sense may make her Britain's first woman prime minister.

Mrs. Thatcher has withstood the heat of the kitchen in face of a condescending press. She is adamant in defense of "the morality of capitalism" which she terms more durable and rewarding than any other political economic system.

America's founding fathers, Mrs. Thatcher notes, set the tone for "morality of work of self-sacrifice, of trying to do the right thing at whatever cost." In her opinion, what is needed now is the rediscovery of a sense of moral purpose.

Mrs. Thatcher wants "to return power where it belongs—to the people. The people have good sense." The task of politicians, she says, is to help provide constitutional stability (without which there can be little confidence in the future); opportunity (the possibility for ordinary men and women to get ahead); and incentive (the prospect of reward and profit).

The British leader believes hard work and a reorganization of values can pull both the United States and Britain through their crises. "For too long," she says, "we have chosen the soft option."

Say you put up a considerable grubstake to start a business—a business, a used car lot, a cement business, whatever. Then you hired, at a considerable salary, a foreman, a manager, an administrator—somebody with one of those kinds of titles.

Everything goes well and the business makes a profit. Now, who would the profit belong to? Would it belong to the high-salaried fellow you hired to run things? Would it belong to the business and come under the manager's jurisdiction to spend as he thought best? Or would it belong to you, the original investor who would have had to stand good for the losses if things hadn't gone smoothly?

Maybe you would give part of the profits to your high-salaried manager. Maybe you would let him put some of the profits back in the business. But it would be your money and your decision.

Well, everyone doesn't look at things the same way. Take, for example, our local Highland General Hospital operation.

I was at a pretty interesting hospital board meeting Monday night (not as guest of honor, I can assure you, simply as part of The News reporting team). And at the meeting, Robert Monogue, the hospital administrator, and Fred Neslage, the chairman of the board of managers, mentioned several improvements and additions accomplished at the hospital under their guidance the past four years. They emphasized, as they are wont to do quite often, that all the improvements were accomplished without spending any taxpayers' money, just by using hospital profits.

Balderdash. Hospital funds ARE taxpayers' dollars. Obviously they are not tax dollars, but since it was the taxpayers of Gray County who invested in the hospital in the first place, and since they would have had to foot bills if the hospital were to lose money, doesn't it follow that hospital-earned money is taxpayers' money?

That principle is a big stone in the very foundation of our country.

Buy yourself some cement mixers and the other necessary trappings, get you some qualified people to run things, then, provided it is all set up right and business is good, you reap the profits of your invested dollars. I think there is some pretty concrete evidence that hospital money belongs to Gray County taxpayers and every dollar of it that is spent for anything costs taxpayers a dollar—a profit dollar instead of a tax dollar, perhaps, but a dollar no less, 100 pennies. That makes sense.

A MERRY TUNE

CONSERVATIVE ADVOCATE

Was Harry Gold 'Neurotic'?

By WILLIAM RUSHER

Supporters of Ethel and Julius Rosenberg, the convicted atom spies executed at Sing Sing in 1953, have obtained the FBI's files on the case under the new Freedom of Information Act and are now pawing their way through 29,000 pages of documents looking for something—anything—that can be used to cast doubt on the Rosenbergs' guilt.

It is a tall order, because the Rosenbergs were as guilty as sin and no two death sentences were ever more richly deserved. Thanks to this pair of dedicated Communists, the basic design of America's atomic bomb was stolen from the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory in New Mexico in 1945 and delivered to the late Joseph Stalin. As Judge Irving Kaufman remarked in 1951 in sentencing the Rosenbergs to electrocution, "your conduct in putting in the hands of the Russians the A-bomb years before our best scientists predicted Russia would perfect the bomb has already caused, in my opinion, the Communist aggression in Korea, with the resultant casualties exceeding 50,000, and who knows but that millions more of innocent people may pay the price of your treason."

Even by Communist standards, though, the Rosenbergs were a tough pair. When the worldwide Communist propaganda machine went to work on their behalf as the date for their execution approached, they played the role of injured innocents up to the hilt and went to their deaths like the fanatical soldiers they were, despite repeated offers by the Justice Department to commute their sentences in return for their cooperation.

It was strange indeed if a careful winnowing of those 29,000 pages doesn't yield some loose ends which can be used as the basis for a tendentious argument that the Rosenbergs weren't guilty after all. Thus far, however, all that has turned up is an FBI summary of a psychiatric report on Harry Gold conducted in 1950 by Dr. Samuel Leopold, director of the Neuropsychiatric Division of the Philadelphia Municipal Court.

The significance (if any) of the Leopold report lies in the importance of Gold, whose testimony, together with that of Ethel Rosenberg's brother David Greenglass, was central to the case against the Rosenbergs. Gold, who had been a Soviet agent in the field of industrial espionage for over a decade, was the courier who, at Julius Rosenberg's instigation, obtained the crucial bomb data from Greenglass (who was working at Los Alamos) and transmitted it to the Russians. Indicted with the Rosenbergs, both Gold and Greenglass turned state's witnesses and testified freely—which saved their lives, though both drew stiff prison sentences for their crimes.

Dr. Leopold's report, as summarized by the FBI, indicated that Gold has above-normal mentality. He is not insane but shows a neurotic personality characterized by extreme orderliness and compulsions.... On the other hand, a team of five psychiatrists who examined Gold concluded, according to the FBI, that he "showed no latent or potential psychopathic tendencies."

As it happens, I had a lengthy personal talk with Gold in 1956, in the austere visitors' room at Lewisburg Penitentiary. I was associate counsel to the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee at the time, and we were interested in the largely unexplored story of Gold's activities as a Soviet spy in the years 1934-44, long before the theft of the bomb design. Though I have talked to many other ex-Communists and other witnesses in my time, I have never known one who was more thoroughly convincing, or whose statements were more transparently honest, than Harry Gold.

Gold had not only put his life as a Soviet spy behind him, but had become, so to speak, something of a connoisseur of his own past. He could look back across the years with a sort of sad, rueful amusement at his own youthful "cocksureness." His memory, which of course he had trained to razor sharpness as a spy, had not deserted him either. He spoke with soft precision, as one who knows he has little left to lose.

No wonder the jury believed him. And if the opinion of one psychiatrist that Gold was "neurotic" is the best the Rosenbergs' defenders can come up with, they are scarcely going to overturn the verdict of history.

EDUCATION

History Under Attack In Public Schools

By MAX RAFFERTY

As an old—"ancient"—is not yet completely appropriate—history teacher, I am forced to cast a jaundiced and disapproving eye on current attempts to impede the teaching of history in American public schools.

Example: Montana's secondary education supervisor, James R. Burk, wants to make American history an optional instead of a required course. He also wants to "reduce requirements" in such basic areas as English and mathematics so that the kids can "get out in the community for some real-life experience" instead of fooling around with those dull old textbooks.

This sort of half-baked guff is par for the course these days for the surrendering and collapsing educational Establishment. What adds a little zip to the depressing Montana backdrop, however, is the porcine reaction of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the American Legion and University of Montana history Prof. K. Ross Toole, who cracked scathingly: "We heard rumors of Burk's proposal last spring, but we dismissed them on the grounds that no educator in his right mind would suggest such a palpably absurd proposition."

That's telling it the way it is, professor! Be my guest.

Universities today are being inundated by high school graduates who can neither read nor write nor think. Even more frightening is the increasing number emerging from our high schools who have not the remotest idea of what kind of country they live in, who have no sense of the basic principles which distinguish freedom from tyranny, who have not the remotest idea of the difference between justice and injustice as these antipathetic forces have operated in their country's history.

I'm enjoying this, so indulge me while I quote Toole's final advice to the inefable Dr. Burk: "The reform that is needed is not to delete American history as a requirement...it is, on the other hand, to each more of it, better and more often."

(c) 1975

The VFW and the American Legion are also passing critical resolutions, and Burk is stewing torridly in his own juice. Predictably, his reply is no reply at all: "I'm not going to enter any newspaper argument with Ross Toole."

He'd better not—nor any other argument, either. Toole, I'm confident, would blow him right out of the water.

But it's not just in Montana that high school history is being done in. A special report by the Organization of American Historians documents "a movement away from history" occurring simultaneously with a "preoccupation with 'presentism,' which is a fancy word for 'current events.'"

This isn't new. For 30 years in too many teacher-training institutions, history has been mixed and blended and homogenized with half a dozen other formerly independent subjects and labeled "social studies." In a "unit" called "The Westward Movement," for example, the history part deals with Daniel Boone and Davy Crockett. Geography is taught by tracing the course of the covered wagons as they lumbered through the Cumberland Gap. Science is a little harder to work into the act, but you can always demonstrate the action of flint on steel as Dan lit his pipe while waiting for the Indian attack.

English I shudder even to think about—the pioneers not having been very strong in this discipline—but Teacher makes shift to teach some spelling through the medium of such vital and meaningful "unit" words as "charivari," "Conestoga" and "matchlock." I knew one teacher who was the envy of our whole faculty. She had succeeded in working home economics into "The Westward Movement." She and her class spent an entire week making soap out of ashes, just the way the pioneers did.

The scary part of all this nonsense is that the typical "social studies" teacher doesn't see how nonsensical it is. This is the real reason why history is in big trouble in American schools today.

Dear Abby

Wife Doesn't Dig Co-ed Coal Miners

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband works in the coal mines, and I just found out that they recently hired some women to work right alongside the men!

Abby, I don't want my husband working with women. I've talked to lots of other wives, and they feel the same way about it. We can see nothing but trouble ahead. What can we do about it?

CUMBERLAND, KY.

DEAR CUMBERLAND: You may not dig your husband working with women, but it's highly unlikely that "his" and "her" coal mines will become a reality.

I personally dig equal opportunities for women—above or below ground.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 33-year-old male who has been seeing a psychologist about a stuttering and stammering problem I've had since puberty.

My therapist is a middle-aged woman, who recommended to me by my physician.

During our last session, my therapist suggested that a sexual relationship between us might be the answer to my problem. She knows that I am married, and although I have told her that my sex life at home is not ideal, I've also said it is not a serious problem to me. Anyway, I don't know how this could be related to my stuttering and stammering problem, do you?

Will you please ask your consultants what they think about this situation?

Hurry your reply as I told her I would think about it. Perhaps I should tell you that the therapist is also married.

WAITING TO HEAR

DEAR WAITING: I urge you (and any other patient whose therapist suggests that sex between them should be part of the "treatment") to refuse firmly, report the incident to the ethics board of the therapist's professional association and look for a new therapist. (P.S. The physician who recommended this therapist should also be informed.)

DEAR ABBY: My husband died of a heart attack two months ago. He was only 39. He knew he had a heart condition because he had two "warnings" last year.

My husband told me that he wanted a simple funeral service and then cremation.

None of his family ever said yea or nay about their opinion of his wishes until I tried to make the arrangements—then I got static from all sides about what "we" want.

I tried to carry out my husband's wishes without getting into a big fight with his mother and father, but it wasn't easy.

The point I am trying to make, Abby, is this: Please tell your readers to put such wishes in writing. My husband didn't. And it sure was rough for me.

WIDOW

DEAR WIDOW: Although death is one of the few certainties in life, too few people are sufficiently realistic to prepare for it. Perhaps your letter will jar a few into action.

Commission To Approve First Campaign Funds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Election Commission, with the threat of a Supreme Court injunction removed, is prepared to approve the first $2 million in federal campaign funds.

The court refused Monday to grant an injunction blocking the funds until a ruling is handed down on a constitutional challenge to the 1974 campaign reform act.

The action cleared the way for the FEC today to ask the Treasury to make payments of about $1.5 million to nine or 10 presidential contenders and $700,000 to the Republican and Democratic National Committees to finance their political conventions.

The money represents the initial payments to the candidates and parties from the pool collected by $1 individual checkoffs on federal income tax returns.

Sen. James Buckley, R-N.Y., independent presidential candidate Eugene McCarthy and others sought the Supreme Court injunction. They said the money should be held up until the court decided on their suit challenging the constitutionality of the law.

They said the law is unconstitutional because the limits on campaign contributions and spending prohibit the First Amendment rights of free expression. The court has adjourned its regular work sessions until Jan. 12 and was not expected to rule until then on the overall question.

On the injunction request, the court split 4-4. Because there was no majority, the injunction was denied.

While the expected FEC action clears payments immediately to the two parties, the candidates cannot receive money until the first of the year. The Republicans will receive $250,000 and the Democrats $460,000, both down payments on the $2 million for each party provided in the campaign law to finance the national conventions.

Three presidential candidates will receive substantial payments in the first round of FEC action. President Ford will receive $374,000. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., $492,000 and former Gov. Terry Sanford of North Carolina, $214,000.

The remaining candidates will receive $100,000, the minimum matching fund payment under the law. Larger payments will come when the FEC completes detailed audits of their campaigns.

In the $100,000 category are Republican Ronald Reagan and Democrats Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington, Gov. George Wallace of Alabama, Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona and former Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma.

Packages, Packages Everywhere

Pampa Postmaster J.D. Williams estimated today that by the end of the Christmas package rush, local postmen will deliver 20 - 25,000 parcels to Pampa residents. Delivery of 15,000 packages had been made through Monday, and it appears a parcel-laden postman has made more than one stop at the Anderwald home at 2601 Comanche. From left, Aaron, 10; Missy, a Norwegian Elk Hound; Lauri, 7, and Krista, 5, survey the Christmas lode.

Judge To Review Agnew Evidence

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Responding to two law students who say the American people are entitled to know why Spiro Agnew resigned, a federal judge has ordered the Justice Department to give her the evidence used against the former vice president.

Judge June Green said Monday she will review the materials privately and decide whether they can be made public.

The Justice Department has been resisting for six months, ever since Bruce Feder, 25, of Phoenix, Ariz., and Roy Baldwin, 24, of Lincoln, Neb., students at George Washington University's Law Center, filed a "freedom of information suit to obtain the full case against Agnew."

Agnew was the only vice president forced to resign to avoid going on trial.

Baldwin argued the case himself in a voice so low the judge interrupted to tell him to speak up.

Agnew pleaded no contest to a single charge of income tax evasion Oct. 10, 1973, received a suspended prison sentence and left office. He did not dispute a 40-page Justice Department summary which said he systematically solicited and received bribes from engineering firms with business with Maryland when he was governor and took cash even in the vice president's office.

Church To Mark Midnight Mass

Observance of the Feast of the Holy Nativity of Jesus Christ will begin at 11:15 p.m. Wednesday with celebration of Midnight Mass at St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church, 2300 N. Hobart, according to the Rev. Frederick Marsch, S.M., pastor.

The Christmas Eve Mass will climax locally the Holy Year of 1975 which was proclaimed by Pope Paul VI.

Lay lector at the service will be Frank Sokolosky and acolytes will be Adam Akst and Mark Ebenkamp. Crucifer will be Jason Akst and Thurifer of incense will be Steve Qualls.

Tracy D. Cary, choirmaster and organist, will direct the 60 members of St. Vincent's Adult and Junior Choirs in a service of carols and anthems, including "Adestes Fidelis," "The Snow Lay on the Ground" and "Gloria in the Bells."

In addition the choir will perform three selections composed by Cary. Music for the liturgy will be "Choral Mass of the Holy Spirit" which was composed especially for the Holy Year. Cary's anthems to be performed for the first time are "Lo, I Hear A Host of Herald Angels Singing" and "Shepherds Watched Their Flocks By Night." The anthems will be performed by the fourth, fifth and sixth grade choirs of St. Vincent's School.

Soloists and ensemble vocalists to perform are Carol Mayo of Baylor University, Paula Homer of Indiana University, Ron Gabriel of Utah University, Mrs. Wanda Sherman Hickey, Mrs. Rochelle Lacy, and Mr. and Mrs. Terry Scoggin of Clarendon College.

Flutists will be Majuanta Hills, Stephanie Hills, and Vicki Bailey. Kathy Davis, Nita Parsley and Danny Cowan will play trumpet. Tympanist will be Butch Casey.

Masses are scheduled at 9 a.m. and 11 a.m. Christmas day. All holiday services at St. Vincent's are open to the public.

Students Of Guitar Give Program

Seventh and eighth grade guitar students of Randy Cantrell presented a recent program of Christmas music for members of the Upsilon Chapter of the Beta Sigma Phi Sorority.

The students included Glenna Wilkins, Nancy Kay Sharp and Brenda White with Kevin Gantz on guitar and Miss Zindi Walberg on the piano.

Miss Walberg also served as accompanist for Mrs. Calvin Lacy who sang "O Holy Nights."

Patsy Strawn and Nancy Chase were in charge of the program.

During the business session, Mary Ann Anderson of the courtesy and service committee, reported that the Christmas tree decorations and fruit had been delivered to the Community Day Care Center.

Sue Hoggatt, treasurer, reported on the recent bazaar.

The next regular meeting will be Jan. 5.

The Beta Sigma Phi Scholarship Fund dance will be New Year's Eve.

Gray Returns

Ms. Zella Mae Gray has returned to Pampa after attending the 12th Annual Director's Achievement Seminar hosted by Con - Stan Industries Inc. at the Dunes Hotel in Las Vegas. Ms. Gray was among the more than two hundred and fifty key sales representatives attending the firm's 1975 convention.

Lesbian Wants Custody

DALLAS (UPI) — A domestic relations court jury met today to study nearly a week of testimony and decide whether Richard Risher, 9, should continue to live with his mother, a lesbian, or be placed in the custody of his father.

The jury of 10 men and two women, all of whom said they would not award custody in the case solely because Mary Jo Risher maintains a homosexual relationship with Ann Foreman, met for two hours Monday night but were unable to reach a decision.

The case stemmed from attempts by Doug Risher to gain custody of his son, Richard, because, he argued, the atmosphere in Ms. Risher's home is detrimental to the child. Risher has since remarried and is caring for his 17-year-old son.

"Don't punish Mary Jo Risher because she is a homosexual," attorney Frank Stenger said in closing arguments, "and more important, don't punish Richard Risher because his mother is a homosexual."

A psychiatrist testified earlier in the trial Richard does not know his mother is a homosexual. Neville Murray testified changing Richard's custody for a reason unknown to him would be injurious.

Michael Foreman testified Monday he does not think his 10-year-old daughter is being harmed because she lives with her lesbian mother.

"I felt I was acting in Judie Ann's best interest in leaving her with her mother," said Foreman.

Foreman said he learned of his wife's sexual preferences after they separated in 1969. They were later divorced and he made no move to take his daughter from the house.

"She is being cared for properly," he said. "I don't believe she is being harmed by living there."

Foreman said his daughter and Richard Risher consider themselves brother and sister.

Three psychologists testified last week a child raised in a homosexual environment was not more likely to become a homosexual than one raised in a heterosexual environment. Clinical psychologist Dr. Dolores Dyers also said Richard told her last year he wanted to continue to live with his mother.

But Mrs. Risher's older son, Jimmy, a senior in high school, said he preferred living with his father because his mother's homosexuality embarrassed him.

Doug Risher said Richard would have a "father and mother image portrayed before him to see and model himself after" if the jury awards him custody. But the aircraft mechanic who has since remarried, testified he had sexual relations with a young woman and paid her father $150 for an abortion. He also admitted pleading guilty to a driving while intoxicated charge in 1971.

The National Organization of Women has passed a resolution supporting Ms. Risher and is raising funds in her behalf. Martha Dickey, the Dallas NOW representative, said Ms. Risher was being discriminated against because of her sexual preferences.

Second Extension Given on Hoffa

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (UPI) — A second extension has been issued for a warrant to search a dump in an investigation related to the disappearance of former Teamsters President James R. Hoffa.

In a brief statement Monday, U.S. Attorney Jonathan L. Goldstein announced that the warrant was extended on Friday for 10 days to search for a body believed buried at Brother Moscatto's 47-acre dump.

The FBI and the Newark Organized Crime Strike Force declined comment on any plans to dig at the sprawling site.

Federal authorities were issued the first warrant Dec. 2 to dig for the body of Armand Faugno, a reputed Hudson County loan shark who has been missing for three years.

Reports also said officials were investigating the possibility that Hoffa's body was shipped to New Jersey in a 55-gallon steel drum and buried at the marshy dump adjacent to the Hackensack River.

Authorities have said an informant pinpointed a 10-acre area of the dump where he claimed a body could be found.

Faugno was indicted in 1971 with Salvatore Briguglio, 47, business agent for Teamsters Local 560 of Union City, N.J. Briguglio, his brother Gabriel, 38, and Thomas Andretta, 38, were ordered to appear in a lineup two weeks ago by Detroit authorities who said a witness saw the three men with Hoffa on the day he disappeared.

The results of the lineup were not disclosed, but Andretta's brother, Stephen, 40, was jailed in Michigan after he refused to testify before a federal grand jury investigating Hoffa's disappearance.

Last Thursday, Salvatore and Gabriel Briguglio and seven other officials of Local 560 appeared before a federal grand jury in Newark, N.J. All nine men reportedly refused to testify before the panel.

Anthony "Tony Pro" Provenzano, who recently regained control of Local 560, reportedly opposed Hoffa's plan to return to union politics.

Although Hoffa's family says Hoffa planned to meet with Provenzano the day he disappeared, Provenzano has told authorities he was playing cards at the Union City local with Stephen Andretta.

Potential Jurors 'Poisoned'

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Attorneys for Steven Soliah, a friend of Patricia Hearst, say a bank robbery charge against him should be dismissed on grounds he cannot get a fair trial anywhere in the United States.

Soliah's court-appointed attorneys filed motions for dismissal Monday in U.S. District Court. They argued that "every town, city, and hamlet and home in the United States" had received news accounts "calculated to prejudice and bias the minds of potential jurors."

Attorneys Sheldon Otis and Steffan Imhoff of San Francisco also asked that, if the case is not dismissed, it be moved from Sacramento because the area is

"poisoned" by prejudice.

Soliah has been described as Miss Hearst's lover.

Soliah was indicted in October by a federal grand jury for a Symbionese Liberation Army-linked bank robbery in which Mrs. Myrna Opash, a mother of four, was shot to death. Soliah is being held in lieu of $250,000 bail in Sacramento County jail and is scheduled for trial Jan. 20.

Police said four persons committed the April 21 holdup at the Crocker National Bank in suburban Carmichael.

FBI agents say they have linked Miss Hearst to the case through a garage they believed she rented in which a stolen getaway car used in the holdup was stored.

The attorneys argued in their motion that "from and after the time of indictment of Steven Soliah, the eastern district of California as well as every town, city, hamlet and home in the United States of America has been saturated by information, misinformation, facts, falsehoods, concerning Steven Soliah."

It said, "The facts supposedly surrounding his case ... were and are calculated to prejudice and bias the minds of potential jurors who may be called upon to deliberate in a trial."

Soliah, 27, a San Francisco house painter, was arrested Sept. 18, the same day Miss Hearst was taken into custody. She and SLA companion Wendy Yoshimura were captured in an apartment shared with Soliah.

Saxe's Past Surpressed

BOSTON (UPI) — Susan Saxe's past, certain descriptions of her, and facts presented during efforts to suppress evidence should not be reported during preliminary stages of her trial for murder, according to the trial judge.

Ms. Saxe, a onetime Brandeis University honors student who spent five years on the FBI's "10 Most Wanted" list, is charged in the slaying of Boston policeman Walter Schroeder during a September, 1970, bank robbery.

Suffolk Superior Court Chief Judge Walter McLaughlin said he issued his three orders

Monday to prevent prejudicial pretrial publicity.

"We are dealing with two precious constitutional rights; the right to free press and the right to a fair trial," the judge said. "We have to walk a very narrow line."

He said he would not call the orders a gag rule. "I would call it a pleasant conference with the press and a mutual exchange of views," he said.

In an impromptu conference with reporters outside his eighth floor courtroom, the judge indicated the orders would be changed once a jury is chosen.

"Once I have a jury in this case, I intend to segregate the jury, then you are on your own to do anything you want," he said.

Defense lawyer Thomas Shapiro said Ms. Saxe's attorneys had not sought the orders. "I am not at all anxious to see gag orders issued to the press," he said.

One order was, "If I have a hearing on a motion to suppress, what takes place by way of evidence in the motion to suppress shouldn't be reported if a jury has not been empaneled and segregated."

Another order restricted reporting of Ms. Saxe's past.

Cotillion Has Party

Twentieth Century Cotillion met Dec. 16 in the Don Morrison home north of Pampa for a Christmas party and gift exchange. There was no planned program for the meeting.

Mrs. Robert Blake and Mrs. Charles McKinney were accepted as new members by Twentieth Century Cotillion.

New England To Have White Christmas

By United Press International
"If you wanted a white Christmas," said a Boston radio weatherman, "you've got it."
Most New Englanders got more Christmas snow than they bargained for as winter made its official debut Monday.
"We've got it coming out of our ears," police officer A. Roland Carson of Nashua, N.H., said. Parts of New Hampshire received up to 21 inches of snow. Some didn't mind.
School children rejoiced as all schools in New Hampshire's major cities closed Monday, giving students a long Christmas holiday. Up to a foot of snow also closed elementary schools in New Jersey and Connecticut.

Ski resort owners, hungering for holiday snow, also were elated.
"It's like Maalox to an ulcer," said David Ingemie, spokesman for New Hampshire's Mount Washington Valley Chamber of Commerce.
Piggyback storms left 1 1/2 to 2 feet of snow on the ground in the Northeast Monday. Meanwhile, the half-million holiday travelers who visited Florida seeking a break from winter weather fared poorly — a cold snap hit the sunshine state.

The twin storms that assailed New England for three days left five persons dead and two missing.
Carol Gateley, 19, of Manchester, N.H., was killed when a lobster boat capsized off Gloucester, Mass., Sunday. Two others aboard were missing.
The frozen body of Richard Nasiatata, 42, of Hartford, Conn., was found along a railroad track. Authorities said the man apparently slipped while walking with the aid of crutches, was knocked unconscious and froze to death.

A skimobile crashed through thin ice in Rehoboth, Mass., killing the driver, and an auto accident on a snow-covered highway near Granville, Vt., claimed another life. The weather also was blamed for a fire that killed one person at Brattleboro, Vt.

A Boston woman was seriously injured when she fell four floors while building a snowman atop a downtown hotel.
Winter officially arrived at 6:46 a.m. EST Monday and the weather was appropriately bleak in much of the country.
At New York City's Kennedy Airport Monday, blowing snow blinded the pilot of Braniff Flight 907 while he taxied for takeoff. The plane slid off the taxiway, skidded 175 feet on its nose and came to rest in a snowbank. None of the 116 passengers or eight crew members was injured.

In Florida, the second day of a cold spell dropped temperatures to the mid-20s in the northern part of the state and cleared the beaches at Miami Beach of just about everyone not wearing scuba suits.

It was 25 at both Tallahassee and Jacksonville and below freezing at Daytona Beach. Agricultural officials were wary about estimating crop damage but said some frost was reported as far south as Miami.

Sleet and freezing rain plagued portions of the Pacific Northwest and dense fog pestered Arizona and parts of Southern California.

Ford Plans Holiday Work

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford left today for a week-long skiing vacation with his family at Vail, Colo., where he will also sign a tax cut extension bill and work on his State of the Union address to Congress.
Air Force One, the President's jetliner, took off from Andrews AFB, Md. at 8:20 a.m. for the four-hour flight to Vail.
White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said the trip "is a chance for the President to get away for six or seven days and relax with his family." Nessen said Ford has been working hard lately, spending 77 hours in his office during the past week.
The President has promised to sign the tax cut bill, which was approved by Congress last Friday after it included a watered-down promise to limit federal spending in fiscal 1977.
Monday afternoon Ford signed the compromise energy bill, which provides a small initial rollback of fuel prices and allows a rise over 40 months.
He also "reluctantly" vetoed a bill expanding union picketing rights in the construction industry, primarily on grounds he felt it could lead to "greater, not lesser" conflict between labor and management.

The President already has said he will sign the $6.4 billion tax cut extension bill, which arrived on his desk late Monday.
Ford was expected to put in some time on the State of the Union address he will deliver to Congress Jan. 19. Nessen said it would be "a broad look at where the country is and where the President wants to lead it."
He said it would be followed by "more than a dozen" messages on specific proposals. "The State of the Union will be a broad, more philosophical setting of national goals and pointing of the national direction," Nessen said, "not a shopping list of legislative proposals as some have been in the past."
Ford's eldest son, Michael, 25, and Michael's wife, Gayle, daughter Susan, 18, and son Steven, 19, arrived at Vail

Saturday, Jack, 23, will fly in from the West Coast, where he is looking over job prospects.
The Christmas lights and carolers are ready for President Ford's stay in the Rocky Mountain resort, but the weather forecasts say no fresh snow, not even for Presidential skiing.
Although the slopes will be well covered with snow when Ford, his wife Betty and their son Jack arrive today, no snow is in sight for several days. Vail has not had a snow storm in more than a week.
The Fords' other children, Susan, Michael and Steven, arrived early and already have spent three days skiing the wide open slopes of the area. Despite the lack of powder covering, all three said the skiing was good.

The town, which welcomes thousands of skiers during the holiday, has been decked out like a Swiss village Christmas, complete with lights and festive trimmings.
Even the guard house in front of the home occupied by the First Family is trimmed with Christmas lights.
Inside the home, owned by Texas oilman Richard Bass and rented to the Fords for their stay, stands a two-story high Christmas tree, decorated and waiting for the First Family's Christmas gifts.

Skiing traditionally has been the high point of the Ford's visits, with the President expected to head for the slopes shortly after his arrival. Mrs. Ford is the only member of the family who does not ski, she prefers ski-touring because of a pinched nerve.
Before the First Family arrived, rumor abounded that Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis and her two children, Caroline and John, would join Ethel Kennedy and her family in Vail for the holidays.

Moluccans Charged

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (UPI) — Seven South Moluccan gunmen who held a 25 Indonesian and Dutch hostages in the Indonesian consulate for 15 days were charged today with deprivation of liberty, murder threats and firearms violations.
Prosecutor Jan Abspool said he might increase the number of charges after he has fully studied a 500-page dossier on the case.
The gunmen, who seized the consulate Dec. 4, demanded Dutch support for the independence of their home islands from Indonesia but surrendered after Dutch authorities agreed to discuss social and political problems with leaders of Holland's 35,000-member South Moluccan community. It was Holland's longest hostage drama.

Seven other South Moluccan gunmen who seized a train in Holland's northeastern countryside and held 23 hostages for 12 days have already been charged with murder. The train gunmen shot three persons, the train's engineer and two passengers, and dumped their bodies onto the tracks during the siege.

CB Radios Stolen

A stolen puppy, missing bicycles and lost jewelry were among the incident reports today at the Pampa Police Department.
Dan Cook of 701 Lefors said someone took one of his puppies while he was away from home.
He said a neighbor saw the car and reported the license number, but the puppy has not been located.
Robert Kenney of 121 S. Faulkner reported that someone had stolen his daughter's bicycle.
Dick Sullins of 2131 Christine said his vehicle was broken into Dutch authorities agreed to discuss social and political problems with leaders of Holland's 35,000-member South Moluccan community. It was Holland's longest hostage drama.

Seven other South Moluccan gunmen who seized a train in Holland's northeastern countryside and held 23 hostages for 12 days have already been charged with murder. The train gunmen shot three persons, the train's engineer and two passengers, and dumped their bodies onto the tracks during the siege.

Isabel Eeron Unshaken

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — President Isabel Peron, unshaken by an attempted coup and widespread calls for her resignation, says she is determined to remain in office until her term ends in 1977.
"No one should doubt that I will fulfill my irrevocable duty to exercise the powers that the people have given me," she said in a nationwide broadcast Monday.
The four-day uprising ended peacefully Monday morning when its leaders were arrested and rebels holding the Buenos Aires airport and suburban Moron airbase surrendered.

There was no casualties during the uprising, although loyal air force planes bombed and strafed the Moron base Saturday.
Commenting on the rebellion, Mrs. Peron said "in the same way I have avoided bloodshed among brothers, I will defend the constitutionality of the country and its government, which I lead and represent."
"I will not allow anyone with petty pretenses to usurp the power which belongs to the people of the Argentine nation."
"I have acted with human and Christian sentiments, but no one should confuse serenity with weakness," she said.

Mrs. Peron took power 17 months ago following the death of her husband, President Juan Peron.
Her term officially ends May 25, 1977 but she recently announced national elections would be moved up from March, 1977 to October, 1976.
The rebellion sparked strong military and political pressure for her resignation.
According to military sources, Army Commander Lt. Gen Jorge Videla, who refused to support the rebellion, told Mrs. Peron she must either resign or allow a military takeover of the government if she wanted to end the uprising.

Navy Planes Defective

WASHINGTON (UPI) — About one out of every five Navy planes cannot be flown because it is missing parts or components, a trouble rate nearly double that of three years ago, according to Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis.
Aspin, quoting figures he said were from the Pentagon, Monday said that as of last June 30, 21 per cent of the Navy's operating inventory of aircraft were not "safely flyable and cannot perform even one of their primary missions simply because they lack parts."
He said this compared to 12.3 per cent in 1972, 15 per cent in 1973 and 18.1 per cent in 1974.
The combat readiness of naval aviation forces is rapidly deteriorating," said Aspin, a member of the House Armed Services Committee. "If the Navy spent as much time worrying about preparedness as it did worrying about the size of its carriers... our forces would be in a lot better shape."
He said the statistics were supplied by Rear Adm. S.S. Fine, acting director of budget reports in the Navy comptroller's office, and showed more than 1,000 aircraft are classified NORs—"not operationally ready supply."

Shooting Causes End Of Parliament Meeting

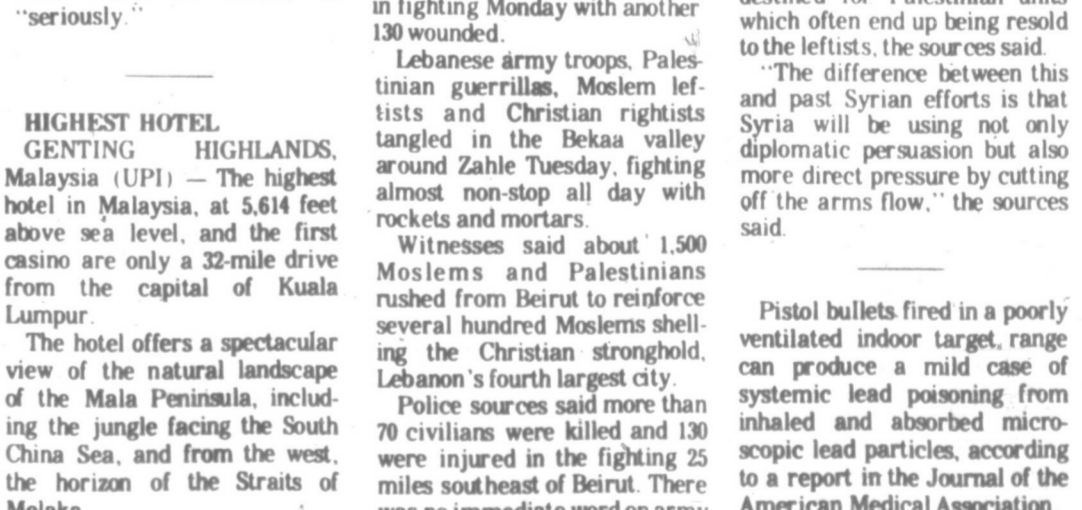

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — New shooting in Beirut forced cancellation of a scheduled meeting of parliament today.
East of the capital heavy fighting was raging for the second day in Zahle, Lebanon's fourth largest city.
Government sources said Syria has agreed to crack down on illicit arms shipments into Lebanon in an attempt to halt a rapidly expanding war east of Beirut that has killed more than 70 persons, according to government sources.
Sniper fire and gunshots roaming the streets of downtown Beirut kept the commercial sector deserted and deputies were unwilling to brave flying bullets to reach parliament house, located in the downtown area.
Only nine members of the 99-man house managed to reach parliament — driving up in armored cars, and surrounded by bodyguards. Speaker Kamal Assad canceled the session when there was no quorum.
A security bulletin said the situation had deteriorated in Zahle, 25 miles from Beirut where more than 70 persons died in fighting Monday with another 130 wounded.
Lebanese army troops, Palestinian guerrillas, Moslem leftists and Christian rightists tangled in the Bekaa valley around Zahle Tuesday, fighting almost non-stop all day with rockets and mortars.
Witnesses said about 1,500 Moslems and Palestinians rushed from Beirut to reinforce several hundred Moslems shelling the Christian stronghold, Lebanon's fourth largest city.
Police sources said more than 70 civilians were killed and 130 were injured in the fighting 25 miles southeast of Beirut. There was no immediate word on army losses.

The fighting was the worst involving the Lebanese army since civil war erupted nine months ago. The death toll since then stands at 6,000, with more than $5 billion in damages.
The clashes Tuesday lasted most of the day but began to taper off in the evening a few hours after Premier Rashid Karami returned from a trip to Damascus with assurances from Syria that it would take "new steps" to help end the fighting, Lebanese government sources said.
The sources said Syria, which has helped to mediate most of the score of broken cease-fires since April, agreed to increase pressure on Palestinian guerrillas and leftists to respect the current cease-fire.
They said Syria also promised to take "new and active steps" to help restore peace.
These steps included the intercepting of arms shipments from Syria, particularly those destined for Palestinian units which often end up being resold to the leftists, the sources said.
The difference between this and past Syrian efforts is that Syria will be using not only diplomatic persuasion but also more direct pressure by cutting off the arms flow," the sources said.

Pistol bullets fired in a poorly ventilated indoor target range can produce a mild case of systemic lead poisoning from inhaled and absorbed microscopic lead particles, according to a report in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Pampa Not Pampa in Guthrie Movie

Allensworth, Calif., a small community thought by movie producers to look like Pampa might have been in the 1920's and 1930's when balladeer Woody Guthrie lived here, is playing the part of Pampa in a movie being made about Guthrie.

Stars of the movie, pictured here, are David Carradine and Melinda Dillon.

The Pampa city limits sign erected by set people on the edge of Allensworth reportedly was based on one which stood on the edge of Pampa years ago, atop a couple of wooden derricks. "We couldn't have picked a better place," said Harold Leventhal, coproducer with Robert F. Blumofe, as he looked around the Allensworth landscape.

He was talking to James Foley, a staff writer with the Fresno (Calif.) Bee, about the production.

The area is flat, dry land, with little vegetation, thought by the producers to resemble the Texas Panhandle during the dustbowl days.

About Guthrie and the movie, Blumofe said, "We're going to show a man with a real zest for life, a man who always had a smile on his face. And we will be careful to get into this film the humor and comedy that was unique to Woody."

Case of the Mechanics And Two Identical Cars

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — There were two identical cars parked in the same block, two sets of ignition keys fitting both vehicles and a request to take one of the cars to a service station for repairs. It all added up to two confused mechanics being jailed mistakenly for auto theft.

David Johnson, 26, and Larry Cowher, 25, answered a call early Wednesday to repair a flat on a 1966 white Ford Mustang in the downtown area.

They met the owner at a bar and he gave them the keys. When they returned to the bar after fixing the flat, the owner asked them to try to start his car, which he had been unable to do.

If they could start it, he told them, they should take it to their service station for the necessary repairs.

While Johnson and Cowher were receiving those instructions, however, someone else drove up in an identical white 1966 Mustang and parked in the same block.

The mechanics returned to the scene, but got into the wrong car. The keys fit the ignition, however, and when the vehicle started without any trouble they decided to give it a test drive before reporting back to their customer.

The owner of the second car, returning at that moment, saw them drive away and called police, who stopped the vehicle a few blocks away.

Johnson and Cowher swore the owner had given them the keys to the car. The owner claimed he had the only keys and had never seen the mechanics.

Police Capt. Ralph Duncan tried to resolve the conflicting stories by sending a patrol car to the scene of the "crime," where they discovered the unhappy customer and his still disabled car.

The owner of the first car verified the mechanics' story and Johnson and Cowher were released from jail about 4 a.m.

"I guess those keys fit both cars," Duncan said. "It's just one of those one in a million deals that I seem to get every night or so."

$4 Million Bonus For Christmas

PELLA, Iowa (UPI) — For nearly 2,000 workers in the Pella area, it's going to be a green Christmas this year.

They will share nearly $4 million in Christmas bonuses being paid by two Pella manufacturing companies.

Officials of the Rolscreen and Ver Meer companies in this primarily Dutch-American community of 7,200 said they were presenting their employees with a combined total of nearly $4 million in Christmas bonuses and profit-sharing funds.

"Needless to say there's great rejoicing when the bonuses come out," said Ray Koenigs, Rolscreen advertising manager. "When you figure that it's 15 per cent of a year's salary — that's a pretty good lump of cash."

Koenigs said his firm was giving its employees $2.88 million dollars in cash bonuses and profit-sharing funds this year. During the past 29 years, the company has distributed just under $25 million to its workers at Christmas.

"We're still owned by the original founder, Peter H. Kuyper, who's the chairman of the board, and we're in our 50th year," Koenigs said. "He has always referred to us as his 'Rolscreen family.'"

The bonus encourages long service, Koenigs said. More than 103 of the window manufacturer's 1,271 employees have been there at least 20 years.

The profit-sharing is actually a retirement fund begun after employees have worked at least three years for the firm. Each gets varying percentages of his salary each year. After 10 years, the entire account is his or hers and may be withdrawn if the employee leaves the company.

At Ver Meer, Bob Ver Meer, secretary-treasurer, said, "We just feel we have an excellent employee organization. They've helped to make the year very successful for us. For example, last spring we were faced with the decision to hire more people and our workers said they'd rather work the overtime than to hire more."

The slightly more than $1 million paid out is a record for the 26-year-old, 700-worker industrial and agricultural equipment manufacturing firm.

Ver Meer employees who have worked at least three years receive an amount equal to 50 days pay. Those who have worked between one and three years receiving an amount equal to 28 days. Parttime employees and workers with less than one year's service receive 2 per cent of their salary.

The U. S. Navy's first coed Officers Candidate School class graduated from the Naval Education and Training Center in Newport, R. I., on Nov. 2, 1973. It had 120 men and 43 women. Since then, more than 300 women have completed the 19-week course.

Pioneer Corporation Honors Pampa Employees

Six Pampa residents were honored Thursday at Pioneer Corporation's annual service award dinner for employees in its natural gas division.

Pampa employees receiving the award at Amarillo's Tascosa Country Club were Earl R. Hobbs, Trueitt Wren, Troves B. Gilbert, Dale Everson, Perry Moore, Ellis Knight, and W.L. Winkleblack.

Heading the list for long-term service is Hobbs, a 30-year veteran, who serves as a Pampa Compressor Station operator. Awards for 15-year service were given to Wren and Gilbert, also operators at the compressor station.

Winkleblack and Everson, employees for 10 years, work for Pioneer in Pampa as senior general plant operator and construction and maintenance crew leader, respectively.

Five year awardees are Moore and Knight, who are operators at the compressor station.

K. Bert "Tex" Watson, president of Pioneer, presented the awards at a banquet which was the last of three such events this week held by the company at different cities in its service area. A total of 187 awards, representing 2390 years of combined total service, were presented during the week.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 24

Your birthday today: You begin to consolidate your progress, taper off on some long-term habits and develop a conservative approach. The importance of even the smallest details is emphasized all through your work and study this year. Relationships rely not so much on what you do, but on the manner in which you go about things and the company you keep. Today's natives persistently concentrate on perfection.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Immediate circumstances and financial intuition favor your earning powers. Busy as everyone is, a spirit of goodwill hovers in the air. Don't spoil it with your quick temper!

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: A lighthearted mood tempts you to buy more than you need. Others expect you to express your feelings but show conflicting emotions themselves.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: While a gala atmosphere prevails, there are more work details than can be handled conveniently. Settle in and do your steady best. Tension among family members is upsetting.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: A bright idea provides a shortcut, which allows you to get several things done in one operation. Communication with distant people takes priority over nearby festivity. Restrict travel to essential trips.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Begin early with your checklist of things to do. By looking in unlikely places, you find specialized items you'd given up on. Social activity tops budgeted expenses, but relax and enjoy!

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Everyone you meet offers distracting suggestions. Stick to areas you'd planned on exploring. Skip the big party this evening or slip away quietly at a decent hour.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Remain close to home base and attend to those projects that count most to you. Confidential matters take up a lot of energy. Give yourself ample time.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Just because you see a point doesn't mean others can see it with only a few words from you. Explain fully or let them find out from experience.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: The earlier you quit work today, the better. In the pre-holiday scramble, take care that you don't ruin things for others by spilling their secrets. Slow down a bit.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: There's really little to talk about. You have your situation as well organized as you're likely to manage now. Study the overall picture, then adjust the finer details to fit it.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: It's a day of passing opportunities, with good news from many people and distant places. Be willing to meet others half-way. Celebrate moderately.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: A pause to collect your thoughts save much confusion. Decide what you want done, and don't expect cooperation from friends. Romance sparkles.

Mrs. Jordon Gives Program

Mrs. Rufe Jordan presented a program on the story "How Come Christmas?" to a meeting of the Retired Teachers Dec. 15 in the Flame Room of the Pioneer Natural Gas Co.

The meeting included the Rev. Billy Zeali's "Christmas Prayer" read by Mrs. L.B. Penick and a gift exchange.

Sixty members attended the meeting which was hosted by Mrs. W.H. Burden, Mrs. A.E. Berry, Willa McDaniels, Miss Roy Riley, and Mrs. and Mrs. McHenry Lane.

Bentsen Wants Fed To Pay for Answers

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, says federal bureaucrats should pay for the privilege of asking questions of private industry.

Bentsen said he has introduced legislation to give businesses 10 cents credit for every question they are asked on government forms. The credits would be charged to the agency asking the question.

"If it's worth asking, it's worth paying for," Bentsen said Saturday. He said the nation needs more efficient administration of federal agencies.

"The number one issue in this election is the economy," Bentsen said during a news conference. "There's too much red tape in federal government. We are spending $18 billion on government forms."

He said he has supported appropriation cuts in foreign aid, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, and highway construction. He also has introduced a bill to encourage investment by decreasing the capital gains tax.

"Competition stops inflation. so we should help small businesses," said Bentsen, who built a corporate empire of apartments, shopping centers, oilfields, and banks. "We must moderate interest rates so small businesses can compete."

The Federal Reserve Board has been too tough in its interest rates, he said. Moving away from an identification with his home state's largest industry, Bentsen supported abolishment of oil depletion allowances for major industries, while retaining them for independent companies.

The energy bill which has been approved is a "political hypocrisy," he said. "Election year politics won out." "It penalizes the independent companies who do most of the domestic oil exploration."

Bentsen said he supports deregulating new oil and phasing out controls on old oil to stimulate domestic oil development. He also said geothermal, solar and nuclear energy resources must be developed.

However, energy development cannot proceed without environmental protections, he said.

State Expenses Up

AUSTIN — Comptroller Bob Bullock said Thursday that state expenditures during the first quarter of the 1976 fiscal year, which began September 1, were $1.75 billion, up 28 percent from the first quarter of last year.

"More than half the increase was in education costs," Bullock said, pointing out that state expenditures for education rose 29 percent. Revenues for the first quarter of fiscal 1975 were $1.45 billion, he said, up 15 percent from the comparable quarter a year ago.

The largest jump in revenues was in federal funding, up 29 percent over the previous fiscal year, the Comptroller said. Bullock said tax collections were up 10 percent over the previous year. The 10 percent figure was probably low, he added, because the combination of Thanksgiving and the last weekend of November caused many quarterly tax returns to be late.

The information was contained in Bullock's November financial statement. Canada's province of Newfoundland had the first court of justice in North America.

making, a syndicated reporter and an ambassador's wife." Author Richard Condon, who said he has spent 15 years researching the late president's sex life, was interviewed in the London Sunday newspaper, News of the World. He said Kennedy had "scored" with 470 girls by the time he was elected to Congress.

"When he entered the Senate only five years later his total, by his own records, was up to 903. By the time he was President his score had soared to nearly 1,600. "He even made love to three women on the morning of his inauguration."

The interest in Kennedy's sex life was prompted by a Senate committee report last week, which said a "close friend" of Kennedy was also a close friend of men in organized crime.

Mrs. Judith Campbell Exner later held a news conference in San Diego, Calif., to announce she was the "close friend" in the report. "To me," she said, "he was Jack Kennedy and not the President."

Once, Time said, two top advisers interrupted Kennedy in the Lincoln bedroom with a young woman assigned to the National Security Council. Newsweek magazine reported stories of Kennedy's love life "with stenographers and stewardesses, an off-broadway star and a Hollywood star-interrupted by his Office of Planning and Research. For the first time, the report included information on the crude oil industry.

"The news there is that Texas crude oil production tax revenue has doubled since 1972, even though production has declined slightly," Bullock said. "The reason is that during the same period crude oil prices have shot up faster than a spooked quail."

Magazine Reports On JFK Outtings
By United Press International President John Kennedy was handsome and fun-loving and "never stopped pursuing attractive women — nor they him," Time magazine says in this week's edition. Washington has buzzed with gossip about women in Kennedy's life for years, and several publications aired the stories this weekend. Time said airline stewardesses and actresses were among Kennedy's frequent visitors at the White House. Time also said two women White House staffers, named "Fiddle" and "Faddle" by the Secret Service, often traveled with Kennedy. The magazine did not identify them.

Trojans Walk Over No. 6 Aggies 20-0

MEMPHIS (UPI) — Southern California coach John McKay didn't send his team into the Liberty Bowl against Texas A&M with a plea to win his last collegiate game for him. That's never been his style.

"I just told them to go out there and play hard," said the 52-year-old, white-haired veteran after his unranked Trojans stunned the sixth-ranked Aggies 20-0.

"Yes, I have some of those feelings," McKay said, expressing some emotion about his last college game before taking charge of the National Football League's new Tampa Bay Buccaneers. "But I don't want to talk about them. I am just glad my boys saw fit to send me out on a winning note. I'm going to miss these boys."

Instead, the man who compiled a 127-40-8 record in 16 years at Southern Cal wanted to savor an upset in which his offense pierced the vaunted Aggie defense for 315 yards and his defense matched the Aggies tackle for tackle.

All-America running back Ricky Bell cracked 28 times for 82 yards, shattering O.J. Simpson's Southern Cal rushing record on his way to being named the game's Most Valuable Player.

Quarterback Vince Evans, who had trouble passing all year, had six completions in 13 attempts for 174 yards and one touchdown, a 76-yard screen pass to Bell.

"I think you saw a typically balanced SC offense," McKay said. "Evans can throw. I think his thumb (injured at midseason) felt better. Others have said we're the best balanced team in the nation."

"I was surprised by the attitude of some people who thought Texas A&M was the only defensive team in the game. I thought we might surprise some people on defense."

The Trojans surprised the Aggies, fashioning the first Liberty Bowl shutout since Oregon State beat Villanova 6-0 in 1962 at Philadelphia. And Bell confessed pleasant surprise at the offensive performance as well.

"I was a little surprised at how we could run on them," said the 215-pound junior. "I lost some yards out there but you get hurt when you're slanting. Mostly, we just muscled them out."

Evans credited the Southern Cal offensive line.

"Our offensive line did a great job all night," he said. And he touted Bell, who finished third in balloting this year, for next year's Heisman Trophy. "He's got to be the best back in the country," Evans said.

"I think I'll be a potential candidate next year," Bell said. "But that won't be my top consideration. I'll just go out there and do my best and, if we win, maybe I'll win it."

The Trojans showed their intent to go over instead of through the Aggie defense on their first drive. Evans passing on four of the first eight plays in moving from the Trojan 43 to the Aggie 28 for a Skip Walker field goal.

The 206-pound junior quarterback then found receiver Randy Sumrinn for a 65-yard strike that carried to the Aggie one. Fullback Mose Tatupu jolted over from there to make it 10-0 early in the second quarter.

After another Walker field goal 2½ minutes later, Bell scored his touchdown with 5:14 left in the half. He took a screen pass from Evans at the Trojan 20 and rushed by the A&M secondary into the end zone.

"Leading 20-0 at the half, we felt like there was no way they could win in the second half unless we gave it to them," McKay said. "So we didn't get foolish."

The second half was a scoreless defensive struggle, leaving Southern Cal 8-4 and Texas A&M 10-2.

Pastor Praises Woody

DALLAS (UPI) — The Rev. C.H. Gerald is not yet ready to call Woody Hayes a saint.

But it seems as if he thinks Hayes at least qualifies for Good Old Boy status.

"There is fellowship among the coaches at Ohio State," said Gerald. "Did you know that not one of the coaches on that staff smokes? And the boys have to be in bed by 10 p.m."

"I love that."

Gerald's glowing character reference for Hayes came in response to published reports in Dallas that Hayes dropped a $100 bill in the collection plate early this year while on a recruiting trip — the chief subject of which was Gerald's son.

Roderic Gerald, who eventually enrolled at Ohio State, was a highly prized recruit from Dallas South Oak Cliff high school. Although he played sparingly in his freshman year, Gerald scored twice against Wisconsin and is a major factor in the Buckeyes future plans.

The reports published Sunday said Ohio State, Tennessee and Colorado had come under NCAA scrutiny for their activities in attempting to recruit Gerald.

Southern Methodist University has also had to answer an NCAA report into an attempt to recruit Gerald.

The elder Gerald, pastor of the Community Baptist Church and a member of a national Baptist missionary board, said he could not say whether Hayes had donated the $100 to his church other than his own conviction that Hayes would not do such a thing.

"I don't like a whole lot of publicity on that stuff, especially when it's not true," said Gerald.

"I don't see where a man can come to church, worship God and hear the gospel preached and then have his name hung all over the world."

"A man of Woody Hayes' standard could not be in the business he's in these many years if he did anything wrong."

"I'm positive that nothing was done and that there was no foul play by any school."

Tennessee was investigated because of a $500 loan made to Roderic Gerald by an alumnus of that school (the elder Gerald said the loan was made by a personal friend and that it was paid back).

Colorado reportedly was a party to the investigation because of a job offer to the reverend from an airlines that would enable him to fly to Boulder and see his son play (Gerald again says the job offer came from a personal friend).

The NCAA has already asked SMU to respond to an allegation that a Mustang assistant coach waved a fistful of money in front of the younger Gerald's nose and said he could have had it if he had come to SMU.

"That man from SMU didn't mean anything by it," the reverend said. "It's pitiful the way people run other people down."

Gerald was most incensed at any attack on Hayes. The Ohio State coach has denied putting $100 into the church collection plate. Hayes said he visited the church twice and each time contributed $10, which he said was his standard contribution when he attended a church.

"I have to travel a lot on my missionary work," Gerald said, "and I left the recruiting pretty much up to Roderic. I tried to guide him along, though."

"Actually, my preference was Baylor. But Roderic had to live with the school for four years so it was his own choice."

"But the old man (Hayes) came down here and Roderic listened to him and liked him."

"Now he loves it there and they love him. He is treated just like a member of the family. I didn't want him to go that far away from home. And when I was able to go and see Roderic play and I talked with the old man there I saw that he is just like a father to those children. Those people took my boy and they love him and they are all like brothers."

"I came home relaxed and very happy."

Ramirez Stops Jimmy Connors

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Mexico has put the United States out of the running in the Davis Cup North American Zone, but international politics may keep the Mexicans from playing their next rival — South Africa.

Mexican ace Raul Ramirez wrapped up the North American elimination series for the home team Monday, whipping a faltering Jimmy Connors, 2-6; 3-6, 3-6, 4-6.

Mexico is scheduled to play South Africa next, but could be barred from doing so because of the Mexican government's condemnation of that nation's apartheid policy.

A press spokesman for the Mexican Foreign Ministry said Monday night there was so far "no information" as to whether the government would permit the Mexican Davis Cup team to play South Africa.

But politics or no, Ramirez was savoring his triumph. Playing at the top of his form throughout the series — which went into a fourth day Monday after darkness interrupted play on Sunday evening — the 22-year-old ace was largely responsible for the Mexican victory.

Ramirez received the personal congratulations of President Luis Echeverria Monday afternoon. The chief executive praised him as "an example for Mexican youth."

The young tennis star said his defeat of Connors:

"This is definitely the most important victory of my life, particularly since it was over a player of the stature of Connors."

Connors had no comment, but seemed greatly upset by his defeat.

Traber said he had "no excuses" for the American defeat, adding:

"I take full responsibility."

Ramirez led Connors, two sets to one, but trailed three games to two in the fourth set when play resumed Monday in their fifth and deciding match.

Ramirez won the sixth game to even the score. Connors took the seventh game, and Ramirez tied it again by winning the eighth.

Dallas Must Fix 'Weak Points'

DALLAS (UPI) — Coach Tom Landry was pleased enough with the Dallas win over the New York Jets Sunday. The Cowboys came away with a 31-21 win, and, although it was unimpressive, the game produced no new injuries.

But Landry is still concerned about a couple of things — problems that he said have to be resolved if the Cowboys are going to come home from frosty Minnesota next week with a first-round playoff victory over the Vikings.

"We had some weak points in the kicking game," Landry said Monday. "You just can't lose field position the way we did and expect to beat the Vikings."

"It's something that has got to improve considerably. It's got to be like it was the week before against Washington."

One thing the Cowboys had to put up with in New York was the cold, always a popular topic for playoff games in Minnesota. For the record, it was 25 degrees Sunday when the Cowboys-Jets game began and icy winds reduced the chill factor to barely above zero.

Landry, however, discounted the weather, apparently trying to develop the proper mental attitude for a trip north.

"Cold?" he said innocently. "I didn't really think it was too bad. The wind was a big factor, but as far as being cold, it didn't seem too cold to me."

The word, however, hadn't reached the players.

"That was one of the coldest games I could ever remember," said free safety Cliff Harris. "I never noticed the cold as much."

To protect the sore ribs of quarterback Roger Staubach, the starting assignment against the Jets went to backup Clint Longley. It was his first pro start at quarterback.

"I enjoyed it," said the onetime rattlesnake hunter from Abilene Christian College. "It was a lot of fun. But, of course, it wasn't a very significant game. The game plan wasn't that difficult to understand."

Houston Bosses Expect Sellout

HOUSTON (UPI) — Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl officials are expecting a sellout for Saturday's battle between Colorado and Texas.

Fewer than 2,000 tickets remained on sale Monday.

"We expect to sell those final seats pretty quickly as soon as," said bowl spokesman Weldon Humble. "As soon as those are sold they will begin putting up some temporary bleacher type seats. Standing room only tickets will also be sold if necessary."

The last time the Colorado Buffaloes played in the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl, against Houston in 1971, was also the last time the bowl had a sellout. The game drew a record crowd of 54,720.

The Buffaloes planned to practice every day this week, including Christmas. A team spokesman said Monday the players worked on kick returns and the offensive and defensive sets to be used against the Texas formations.

"We are working on all the things we couldn't do in the snow," he said, referring to the change from winter-bound Colorado to the Texas Gulf Coast, where temperatures were in the 60s.

"This is a summer's day for most of us," said split end Dave Logan.

The Longhorns worked for 90 minutes in Austin's cold weather, scrimmaging at full speed for a half-hour.

Freshman quarterback Ted Constanzo ran with the first team and directed three touchdowns while senior Marty Akins, struggling to overcome a knee injury suffered against TCU, ran the second team offense to a pair of scores.

Texas planned workouts today and Wednesday, and a resumption of practice Friday after a break for Christmas.

In Houston Monday, the Colorado players did some Christmas shopping at Neiman Marcus before their workout.

"Going to Neiman's didn't exactly get us ready to play a bowl game," a spokesman for the team said. "But then, this is the Christmas season, isn't it?"

Although the shopping trip was a team venture, the players were being allowed plenty of free time, said all-America offensive tackle Mark Honcar.

Firearm Prices To Climb Again

CHICAGO (UPI) — Hunters and target shooters with itchy fingers for new firearms to add to their collections should be warned that the prices are climbing again in 1976.

One only has to flip through the new gun catalogs for the news, wandering among the booths at a local gun show or talk to a gun dealer.

In many instances, suggested gun prices for 1976 represent an increase of 10 per cent or less, especially for moderately priced guns such as .22 caliber rifles. However, increases of more than 20 per cent also are shown, especially on some popular firearms, such as over-and-under shotguns.

A visit to a local gun show will reveal that not only are new guns increasing in price, but used firearms are bringing premium prices — in some instances more than the new models are selling for.

Some consumers are blaming the increasing prices of guns, especially premium prices on used pistols and revolvers, to continuing campaigns to ban handguns and for tighter gun control.

Obviously, it has had some effect on the used gun market and consumer demand.

But used shotguns are another matter. The attitude that "they don't make things like they used to" is reflected in the prices of quality smoothbores.

For instance, I recently visited a show in Illinois where dealers from several parts of the country were displaying their wares.

"How much are you asking for that used Winchester Model 12 trap gun?" I asked one of the dealers.

"I've got three," he said, looking me over similar to a used car salesman. "The one on the top of the rack is a Model 12 with pigeon grade wood (not a pigeon grade, just pigeon grade wood). Only $700 for that beauty. The next is a Black Diamond, and not too many were made. Only $625 for it. The third used Model 12 you can have for $425."

Now, according to suggested prices for 1976, a new Model 12 for trap shooting with a Monte Carlo stock should list for about $470. Last year, the same gun listed for about $435.

But, some shooters believe that when Winchester first revived the Model 12, it wasn't as good as the earlier models. Thus, of course, is a matter of opinion. I've talked to Winchester spokesmen who said the new Model 12 is as good as it ever was, and shooters who agree.

However, the more popular the gun, the more difficult it is to find on the used market, and those available command higher prices.

For instance, a Parker double with modern steel barrels, depending on grade and condition, can sell for upwards of $1,000.

The continuing popularity of over-and-under shotguns also is reflected in suggested new price lists. For example, the field model Browning Citori was supposed to sell in 1975 for about $325. In 1976, that suggested price jumps to about $395.

The novice who is interested in purchasing a used gun, should take a few precautionary steps.

First, he should find an experienced friend who knows about guns to take shopping with him. Often, the friend can point out faults in the firearm the novice may overlook in his excitement to purchase.

Regardless of how good a used gun may look, it is best if the purchaser can test fire it before he buys. This is not always possible, especially if the firearm is purchased at a gun show. But, often when buying from a local dealer, the gun can be test fired.

One of the most important points is to know if the gun fits the purchaser. Of course, a gunsmith can alter a gun to make it fit, but that's an added expense that must be taken into consideration.

The novice who purchases a new gun has the advantage of a warranty, and he can return the firearm if something goes wrong during the warranty period. Also, a local dealer can insure a new gun will fit properly before money exchanges hands.

Winter Bird

Turkey season is over, but it's not too late to shoot a pheasant for Christmas — the season ends Sunday. Limit is two cocks per day, with four in possession. Pheasants, highly regarded as a table bird, are common in northern areas of the Texas Panhandle and around Hereford. They are usually found in grain fields, but permission should be obtained from ranchers before hunting on private land.

Eagles Ax McCormick

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — With a 10-line statement, Mike McCormick suffered another bitter defeat Monday. One day after the Eagles finished their season with a disappointing 4-10 record, owner Leonard Tose fired McCormick as head coach.

"It is with personal regret that I announce that Mike McCormick's contract will not be renewed," Tose said in the statement.

"This is an independent judgement made by me based on the facts as I know them, and of course in no small way measured on our won-lost record," he said.

"I will make no further comments except to say without fear of contradiction from any source, that in the entire history of the NFL no coach or general manager or combination of both has had the total willing and unstinting cooperation and autonomy granted by me in all the past three years."

Tose read the statement at a noon news conference and then left.

Tose said he had not interviewed anyone to replace McCormick, who was in the last year of a three-year contract. Tose said he and Jim Murray, the Eagles' general manager, "will go to work" on finding a successor.

McCormick, cleaning out his desk as Tose was speaking at the news conference down the hall, said quietly, "They're burying me."

Smith, 2 Others Miss Jayhawk Practice Monday Because of Flu

EL PASO, Tex. (UPI) — Three Kansas players, including leading rusher Laverne Smith, missed the Jayhawks Sunbowl workouts Monday with the flu.

Smith wide receiver Richard McAuliffe and cornerback Caleb Rowe missed practice and coach Bud Moore was worried the illness might spread to more members of the team.

Just one Pitt player was suffering the lingering effects of the illness, but he was running back Tony Dorsett, the nation's No. 3 rusher during the regular season with 1,544 yards.

Dorsett, 15 pounds lighter than when he caught the flu last week, said he ate his first solid meal in days Monday and worked out with the squad during a one-and-a-half contact drill. Dorsett said he thought he would be at full speed Friday.

Pitt coach Johnny Majors refused to discuss his game plan for the Sun Bowl, but said he expected Kansas to be more explosive offensively than any team Pitt faced this year except Oklahoma.

Rookie Killed After Stopping Van

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (UPI) — A rookie police officer radioed headquarters he was stopping a van for a traffic violation. Other officers arrived minutes later to find the police car empty and the van and the young officer missing.

The body of officer John Tillman Hussey, 22, was found nine hours later Sunday in a ravine near the burned shell of the van 15 miles west of Fayetteville. The body was sent to Little Rock for an autopsy, but police said he apparently had been shot five times in the head.

Authorities were checking leads in Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Missouri today in the case.

"We suspect the vehicle (van) may have been involved in a burglary of a clothing store in Rogers, north of Springdale," said Springdale Police Chief Joe Sims.

"We're running down a bunch of leads at this time. Nothing has developed yet."

Hussey joined the police force in Springdale, a town eight miles north of Fayetteville, a month ago. He was popular with his fellow officers.

"He had no enemy in the world," fellow officer George Cabaness said. "He was stable, cool, sharp and intelligent. He was very good with a gun, so whoever got him had to have had the drop on him."

"You wouldn't be able to print what I have to say about whoever did this," said Sims.

Hussey was to have directed his Baptist church youth choir in singing Christmas carols later Sunday.

Hussey held a second degree black belt in karate and had been a campus policeman at the University of Arkansas, where he was in the Department of Public Safety program. He joined the Springdale police force Nov. 15.

Hussey radioed police personnel early Sunday he was stopping a van, bearing a Texas license plate, for a traffic violation just inside the Fayetteville city limits.

Police said a backup patrol car arrived at the scene four minutes later and found Hussey's empty patrol car, its light still blinking. The investigating officer, Tom Dickens, said there was no sign of a struggle.

Hussey's body and the burned van were discovered on a side road by a man giving hunting lessons to his young sons.

Hussey is survived by his widow, Toni, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hussey, all of Fayetteville.

OIL OUTPUT

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — Production of crude oil in the non-communist world fell last year for the first time in a quarter century, according to the Oil & Gas Journal. Figures show that output in the non-communist areas fell 1.6 per cent to an average of more than 45 million barrels a day.

No Coverup at Attica

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Lawmen retaking Attica prison in 1971 after a riot that left 43 persons dead committed "acts of brutality" but there was "no intentional coverup" of official misconduct, according to a report released by Gov. Hugh Carey.

"Clearly the state has dealt unfairly with the inmates and affirmative action is necessary to correct the situation," former State Supreme Court Justice Bernard Meyer said in the report Carey released Sunday.

Carey had asked Meyer to look into charges of "selective prosecution" of inmates in the aftermath of the Sept. 9-13, 1971, rebellion, one of the nation's bloodiest, at the maximum security prison.

Of the 43 killed during the rebellion, a guard and three inmates were believed slain by prisoners while 39 inmates and hostages died from police bullets in the retaking and 89 others were wounded.

Meyer said only one law enforcement officer has been indicted in the riot while 62 inmates have been charged. But he told Carey errors by state police and "mistakes in judgment" rather than a coverup by chief Attica prosecutor Anthony Simonetti were responsible for the "imbalance."

Labor Secretary May Quit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford has vetoed a bill that would have expanded construction workers' picketing power — and it could cost him his secretary of labor.

Labor Secretary John Dunlop helped steer the bill through Congress after negotiations between construction unions and the building industry, then strongly urged Ford to sign it.

When Ford's veto came, Dunlop did nothing Monday to dispel reports he would consider resigning in protest.

The veto meant Ford reneged on his promise earlier this year to Dunlop and the AFL-CIO to sign the bill under certain conditions. It also meant the politically potent AFL-CIO would, as promised, "actively work against" Ford in the next election.

A spokesman said Dunlop would take a couple of weeks to consider his next move. Dunlop issued a statement saying the veto "comes as no great surprise, for the pressures on him to do so were substantial."

"I am naturally disappointed, for I maintain my conviction that on its merits, the enactment of this legislation could have done much to stabilize this nation's construction industry."

The construction industry hailed the veto, but the Associated Builders and Contractors urged Dunlop to stay in his job because "the industry sorely needs his pragmatic approach to its problems."

The veto came after pressure from Republican politicians who warned the President his signature on the bill would cause many conservatives to turn to GOP challenger Ronald Reagan in the 1976 election. Reagan opposed the bill.

The bill would have given labor something it had sought for the past quarter-century, the right to shut down an entire construction site in a dispute with only one subcontractor.

It also would have streamlined the chaotic system of local contract bargaining in the construction industry.

More Mansons Put Behind Jail Bars

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — The arrest of Lynette Fromme's roommate, Sandra Good, on a charge of conspiring to send death threats through the mail puts all known hardcore followers of convicted mass killer Charles Manson behind bars.

Miss Good, 31, who shared a $100-a-month attic apartment with the convicted would-be assassin of President Ford, was arrested by the FBI Monday along with a late-comer to the Manson "family," Susan Murphy, 28.

Vincent Bugliosi, who prosecuted Manson for the 1969 Tate-LaBianca murders and an expert on the cult, said he believes Miss Good "was the last hard-core member of the 'family' on the loose."

Miss Good and Miss Murphy were held on $50,000 bail each. Arraignment was expected today or Wednesday. The two face up to five years in prison and $10,000 fines if convicted.

Miss Good, who earlier gained wide attention for disclosing a so-called "death list" of persons whom Manson cultists consider corporate environmental polluters, and Miss Murphy were arrested minutes after being indicted by a federal grand jury on one count of allegedly conspiring to mail 171 death threat letters. The letters were never sent.

"Why don't they arrest Nixon and all of his people?" Miss Good said as she was led handcuffed from her apartment. Still visible on her forehead was the scar of an "X" she carved to display her devotion to Manson during his trial.

Named as an undicted co-conspirator was Miss Fromme, in federal custody in San Diego awaiting assignment to a prison to serve a life sentence for attempting to assassinate the President Sept. 5.

Authorities declined to discuss details of the letters or to whom they were addressed. But assistant U.S. Attorney Bruce Babcock Jr. characterized them as containing "death threats" related to earlier Fromme-Good warnings that environmental polluters will be "viciously murdered."

'Work Ethic' Yields To More 'Goofing Off'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The "work ethic" may be yielding to a new American way of life manifested by lower worker productivity and more "goofing off," says an insurance industry analysis of social trends.

A report from the Trend Analysis Program prepared by the Institute of Life Insurance for industry executives says America may be "in the middle of a turbulent transition" that could lead in 15 years to a new culture, more public frustration and worker alienation with increased potential for slow-downs, sabotage and riots.

"The industrial era was ushered in on the strength of a particular set of philosophies, and there is much evidence that these have been weakening as new ones have arisen," the report said.

The 1880-1960 era of internal combustion engines, instant communications and fossil fuel energy sources was based on a belief in hard work, thrift and self-reliance — the "work ethic" — it said.

"TAP has documented many manifestations of this erosion in the work ethic: lower productivity, more 'goofing off,' more looking to government and employers for financial security."

"Whatever happens, the consensus seems to be that the odds are stacked against those who believe that our political system has seen in the Watergate affair the last of rough times," the report said.

It concluded: "We may be somewhere in the middle of a turbulent transition to a new, or at least somewhat different culture," beginning about 1990.

One indication of the change in values is an increasing "no-risk" attitude, "with everyone wanting assurance of what's coming to him or her, and someone to ... hold responsible if things go wrong."

"People increasingly want to be 'insured' against such risks as loss of jobs, breakup of families, inadequate or incorrect medical attention and unsafe or faulty products."

More government regulation of the industry may be possible, the report said, but could be offset by "increased disenchantment with the regulatory process, coming not only from business, but from the liberal political and academic communities."

Among the new problems caused by inadequate solutions to old problems the report cited are lighter criminal sentences, busing, bureaucratic red tape and reverse discrimination in hiring.

Bernadette Peters will guest star on an episode of Dennis Weaver's "McCloud" series.

STAR-SPANGLED HISTORY

HISTORICAL DRAWINGS BY JOSEPH BOGGS BEALE (1841-1920)

"CHRISTMAS WITH THE BEALE FAMILY"

Christmas has always been a time for families to gather together to celebrate the holiday season. At the turn of the century, candles were used on the tree. It is said that the candles represent the stars in the sky on the night of Christ's birth; and the star at the top of the tree, the Star of the East which led the three Wise Men to Bethlehem. Every member of the family helped to decorate the tree by making paper ornaments, strings of popcorn and cranberries and candy. ## People in the News

FAMILY POLITICS
NEW YORK (UPI) — Jack Ford, the President's son, says he'd rather his father didn't win the White House in next year's election because of the strain on family life. Newsweek magazine reports.

"In terms of my own personal selfish reasons, I'd rather he didn't win," the magazine quoted the President's son as saying.

Newsweek said Betty Ford has softened her once-rigid opposition to her husband's 1976 presidential bid and intends to campaign with him.

Honor Roll

Glen Blanscet, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Blanscet of 2108 N. Zimmers, was recently named to the president's honor roll at West Texas State University. He had a 2.9 point average out of a possible 3.0. Blanscet, a 1975 Pampa High School graduate, former drum major for the PHS band and former president of the student body, is serving currently as freshman senator at WTSU.

The magazine quotes her as saying, "I want to travel with my husband whenever it's possible. I think people like to see a couple together. They like to take a look at a man's wife and maybe she counts."

MOYNIHAN ATTACKED
MOSCOW (UPI) — The Communist party newspaper Pravda has attacked Daniel Moynihan, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, for "insulting and defiant" behavior at the recent General Assembly session.

An article signed by Yuri Zhukov, one of Pravda's top commentators, said Sunday the meeting of the General Assembly had been fruitful despite the efforts of Moynihan.

"This figure assumed at the closing meeting of the session the pose of supreme judge, fulminated against the overwhelming majority of the U.N. member states and anathematized them for disobedience," the article said.

TANAKA SHAVES
TOKYO (UPI) — Former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka has shaved off his famous trademark, his moustache.

Tanaka appeared Friday at a lower house session without the moustache, and his new look renewed speculation about a political comeback.

Tanaka, 57, stepped down from office in the midst of corruption charges in December, 1974. He has kept away from the political arena since, but he is still young enough and heads the largest political faction in the ruling Liberal Democratic Party.

COLBY TO NORWAY?
NEW YORK (UPI) — William Colby, outgoing chief of the CIA, will be offered the post of American ambassador to Norway. Newsweek magazine says.

In its current issue Newsweek said "President Ford has found a post for CIA chief William Colby, who is to be replaced by George Bush. Ford will offer Colby the job of ambassador to Norway."

Newsweek said "final acceptance has not yet come from the CIA director who earlier refused an offer to become ambassador to NATO, explaining that his spy work made him too controversial for the role."

Krumkake-a Holiday Delicacy

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Grandma always did the baking around Christmas time and quite often failed to show the children her secrets of ethnic cooking, says home economist Lois Heid.

Mrs. Heid, 46 and a mother of three, carries on one Norwegian tradition by demonstrating the making of krumkake pastries, a holiday delicacy, at Maid of Scandinavia, a Minneapolis mail order firm, and several shopping centers in the area.

She said many of Minnesota's Norwegians have forgotten how to cook holiday specialties.

"All the holidays are so meaningful for any nationality if they preserve their food traditions," she added.

Mrs. Heid said her audiences include men with their families, "older gals who love to bake and come for new ideas," and third and fourth generation women who never learned from their mothers or grandmothers.

She said a common comment is: "Oh, my husband is Norwegian and wants sandbakelse for Christmas. I even sold a krumkake iron to a gal from Denmark."

Mrs. Heid began the demonstrations last year. Just before Christmas, she shows how to make krumkakes and rosettes, which are fried pastries in fancy shapes.

One recent viewer was Mrs. Raymond Brown, 67, Hopkins, Minn., who never before made the flaky cone-shaped pastries. "I had a friend who made krumkake, but she moved away."

Krumkake baking was also new to Irene Halder, 34, St. Louis Park, who came with her preschoolers, Tim and Jackie.

"I think it is a neat thing to do for the holidays," she said.

Krumkake is Norwegian for crumbling cake. The name fits. The fragile pastry made on a special patterned griddle is rolled into a fragile cone that breaks easily after it cools.

"My speciality is rosettes," said Eileen Jaglo of Brooklyn Park. She said she had just made 12 dozen, but needed advice on krumkake.

Darlene Hanson, St. Louis Park, said, "My mother was German and Dad, Norwegian. She never made it, and I never learned."

Mrs. Heid said the mistake most people make in baking krumkake is in preparing the six-inch griddle, which looks like a small waffle iron.

"Never scrub the inside of the iron, just wipe it off and wash the outside," she said. "The leftover shortening seasons the iron and keeps it ready for the next time."

She said there are many different recipes, but a favorite of hers calls for a little extra lemon flavoring.

Mrs. Heid's krumkake recipe:
Melt and cool one half cup of margarine or butter. In a mixing bowl, add one half cup of sugar to 3 eggs, and mix with wire whisk. Stir in the cooled margarine or butter, one half cup of flour and 1 tablespoon of lemon extract. Let stand about a half hour. Heat the griddle on a medium high burner, put about a tablespoon of batter on griddle, bake for a few seconds, turn over the griddle and bake a few seconds longer. Remove the flat cake and roll it quickly white hot on a krumkake cone.
