Don't Blame Alcoholism Among Indians on Genes

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — The high rate of alcoholism among Indians can be attributed to the stress of poverty and unemployment rather than genetic factors, an Indian health project director said Wednesday.

Hickory Starr, director of the Central Oklahoma American Indian Health Council, said Indian health workers believe Indians do not respond differently to alcohol than whites, a belief upheld by a recent Phoenix study.

"We've always thought this was the way it was anyway and there was more difference in consumption," Starr said.

An Indian alcoholic might drink more than a non-Indian alcoholic because of many Indians' deprived living conditions, he said.

"I think in just about all the problems involving American Indians you can go right back to the economic situation and the general attitude of non-Indian people toward the American Indian," he said.

Two doctors at the Phoenix Clinical Research of the National Institute of Arthritis, Metabolism and Digestive Diseases in Arizona recently measured the rate of alcoholic metabolism in 30 American Indians and 30 white volunteers.

They said there was no significant difference between Indians and whites in the variation among individuals in the rate of blood alcohol disappearance, the variation in rate of alcohol metabolized per person or the variation in rate of alcohol metabolized per unit of body weight.

Starr said alcoholism was a serious problem among Oklahoma Indians.

There are at least six alcoholic treatment facilities for Indians in Oklahoma, but one is badly needed in Oklahoma City, he said. He said a group was working to establish such a center.

"From research we've done we found that out of 16 different alcoholic facilities (in Oklahoma City) maybe one or two Indian people are using the things," he said. "The arrest rate of Indians downtown is tremendous and most of them are alcoholics. These people don't have any place to go."

He said the reason they avoid the centers is "a cultural type hesitancy."

Muscle Drug May Be Killer

By United Press International

Four women nurses appeared today before a federal grand jury investigating a series of mysterious patient deaths last summer at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Ann Arbor.

One of the women was identified as Mrs. Leonora Perez, 39, a Filipino nurse transferred last autumn from the Ann Arbor facility to a VA hospital in Chicago. The Ann Arbor News said in a copyrighted story earlier this week that she faces possible indictment in the case.

Mrs. Perez, who was making her second appearance before the grand jury, when asked if she was worried said "No."

Her attorney said Mrs. Perez was cooperating fully with the grand jury.

The other three women were not identified by name.

The grand jury is investigating 35 mysterious cases of breathing failure that resulted in 11 deaths at the Ann Arbor Veterans Hospital.

Authorities said eight of the victims died from deliberate injections of a powerful muscle-relaxing drug.

In a separate probe in New Jersey, forensic experts are awaiting results of tests on five exhumed bodies to determine whether the patients who died 10 years ago at Riverdale Hospital in Oradell were killed with curare, a poison used by South American Indians and sometimes administered as a muscle relaxant.

The New Jersey Medical Examiners Board in Princeton today was reported to be studying a prosecutor's request that the license of a doctor under investigation in the deaths be suspended.

The physician identified in published reports only as "Dr. X" reportedly used curare in a series of experiments. Authorities were trying to learn whether "Dr. X" was responsible for the deaths.

The Ann Arbor News story said a second Filipino nurse, Filipina Narciso, 29, who lives in Ypsilanti and works at the Ann Arbor hospital, also faced indictment.

U.S. Attorney Ralph B. Guy Jr. refused to comment on the News story and Richard L. Delonis, chief of the criminal division of the U.S. Attorney's office, called the report "speculative."

Man Killed in Dispute

LAKE CHARLES, La. (UPI) — About 100 men armed with rifles, pistols and shotguns today attacked a labor-troubled chemical plant construction site, killing one worker and wounding four others.

The attack at the Jupiter Chemical Co. was believed to be the result of a labor dispute over use of "multi-craft" union workers belonging to Local 102 of the American Federation of Independent Unions, a group not affiliated with the AFL-CIO.

Witnesses said the attack started when an earth-moving machine tore through the construction gate and rammed a nearby trailer occupied by eight or nine workers. Gunmen on the machine and in cars then opened fire on the work site. The dead man was identified as Joe A. Hooper, 26, Lake Charles, who died of a bullet wound.

Those wounded by the gunfire were Mike LeDoux, 25, Lake Charles; Thomas Lee Edwards, 23, Sulphur; Arthur Dear, 65, Alexandria; and Cary Ladner, 26, Lake Charles.

Lutcher LaBove, 53, Vinton, a plant guard, suffered a knee injury but was not shot.

Edwards, who suffered wounds of the back and thigh, said he heard Hooper shout from inside a trailer, "They're shooting me! They're shooting me!"

Hooper was dead on arrival at a hospital.

A spokesman for Local 102 said his men had expected violence and had warned law enforcement officials about the possibility. The Local 102 workers were employed by Payne and Keller of Louisiana, a Baton Rouge firm. The attack occurred one week after a similar attack on a Payne and Keller project employing the multi-craft workers near Houston.

The Calcasieu Parish sheriff's office and other law enforcement agencies were investigating the incident, but no immediate arrests were made.

Hearst, Moore Wait

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A drawn-looking Patricia Hearst says she broke down and cried repeatedly when a government psychiatrist accused her of plotting her own abduction and proudly participating in a bank robbery.

The newspaper heiress testified Wednesday in her first court appearance since she was kidnapped by the Symbionese Liberation Army nearly two years ago.

Miss Hearst, speaking softly to a hushed courtroom, also testified that she "didn't feel proud" to have participated in an armed bank robbery with S.L.A. members of the Symbionese Liberation Army.

The surprise hearing was held on a defense contention that government psychiatrist Harry Kozol had browbeaten the 21-year-old woman in jailhouse talks and should be barred from talking to her again.

The hearing also saw defense attorney F. Lee Bailey question co-defense lawyer Albert Johnson.

Miss Hearst, daughter of San Francisco Examiner president Randolph Hearst, said she broke down and cried three times during a Jan. 7 interview with Kozol and asked Johnson, who was present, whether she should continue.

She said Kozol "asked me if I felt proud about robbing a bank, and I told him I didn't feel proud. He said, 'But there must have been congratulations going around,' but I told him I didn't feel proud."

Kozol, expected to take the stand when the hearing resumed today, declined comment Wednesday.

Miss Hearst testified that at one point Kozol said: "Let's go to Feb. 4 (1974, the date of her kidnap). You've got yourself kidnapped. What happened then?"

Bailey asked her if any other doctor had accused her of "getting herself kidnapped."

"No," she replied.

"Was his attitude and manner similar to the other doctors?"

"No. Everything was like an accusation. He really didn't care what I did or didn't say."

Under cross-examination, she told U.S. Attorney James Browning she left the consultation room in the San Mateo County jail to speak with Johnson.

"She was in a state I can best describe as emotional collapse,"

Johnson said. "She was crying — sobbing. She said the doctor had made derogatory remarks and didn't believe anything she told him."

Also in San Francisco for former FBI informant Sara Jane Moore, today was the end of her waiting to learn what penalty she must pay for firing the first shot at a U.S. president since John Kennedy was killed in Dallas in 1963.

Miss Moore, 45, pleaded guilty Dec. 16 to shooting at President Ford with a .38-caliber pistol as the chief executive walked from the St. Francis Hotel Sept. 22. Ford uninjured and police quickly subdued the matronly looking woman.

Bulletin

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Former FBI informant Sara Jane Moore was sentenced today to life in prison for firing a pistol shot at President Ford outside a San Francisco hotel Sept. 22.

All Shares Sold For New Bank

By TEX DEWEESE
Pampa News Staff

Sale of 41,000 shares of stock in a new bank proposed for Pampa was oversubscribed seven hours after being offered to the public Wednesday, according to Buddy Cockrell, chairman of the six-man control group planning the project.

The stock was subscribed for in minimum blocks of 20 shares and a maximum of 300 shares by 326 individuals, Cockrell stated. The sale price was $10 per share for a total of $4,100,000.

When the subscriptions were closed off, Cockrell said there still were many persons seeking to buy stock.

"We are elated over the interest shown in the desire for another bank in Pampa," he said. "We think it points out that there is a definite need."

Cockrell said the group's legal counsel is being contacted in Austin.

Cockrell said names of persons desiring to subscribe for stock will be taken the remainder of this week pending word from the group's legal counsel in Austin regarding the feasibility of increasing the proposed bank's $1 million capitalization.

Plans call for papers on the stock subscriptions to be sent to Austin for filing with the State Banking Commission within the next few days.

He said action on the charter application probably would come within 60 days.

He also stated a meeting is scheduled next Wednesday by the control group to discuss preliminary considerations on a location for the bank.

Other members of the group planning the bank are Joe Cree, Delmar Watkins, Joe Hawkins, Douglas Mills Jr. and James Allen, all of Pampa.

Baker Rats Dine On Cafeteria Food

By JEANNE GRIMES
Pampa News Staff

Baker Elementary students are learning nutritional sense during a six-week program prepared by the American Dairy Council.

Fifth grade teacher Mary Keim, program supervisor, explained that the school has received four male rats from the Dairy Council for use in growth experiments.

"Male rats are used because they show growth changes better than the females," Ms. Keim said.

"Controlled experiments show the children the importance of milk in their diets and the importance of a balanced diet."

This period is a time of crucial growth, Ms. Keim said, especially of bones and teeth. And at the end of the three week period, the rats' age is equivalent to three or three and a half human years.

"If a rat gets to looking too bad," Ms. Keim said, "the children get upset." So, if a rat appears in poor health, the diet may be changed prior to three weeks.

During the second three weeks of the program, all four rats are fed the same diet and all four receive powdered milk on their rations. But the two experimental group rats will never make up lost growth.

By the end of the six weeks, control group rats will weigh 240 - 250 grams each and experimental rats will average 200 grams each, Ms. Keim said.

Age of the rats at the end of the experiment is equal to four and a half or five human years.

Fifth and sixth grade students share in the care of the rats and a schedule is worked out to allow them to visit weekly all the classrooms in the school — giving every Baker student an opportunity to witness first hand the differences in size and condition of the control and experimental animals.

During the four years Ms. Keim has administered the nutrition project at Baker, the classes have never lost a rat. In fact, the students take a very protective interest in the care of the animals.

"The children make leashes and harnesses for the rats and exercise them up and down the halls," said Floyd Sackett, Baker principal.

Ms. Keim added that the children "are trying to design a diaper to handle the clean-up problems" which result from the walks through the hall. A variety of other clothing items are made for the rats during their stay at Baker.

Before Ms. Keim began teaching at Baker and started the rat program there, she taught in the Pampa Junior High School for "eight or nine years" and used the nutrition experiments as part of her work there. She said she is the only teacher in Pampa to use the rat experiments.

She said that the program designed by the American Dairy Council this year is a new one and is not really designed for students on the fifth grade level, but she believes the familiarity her students have with the experiment more than compensates for this difference.

Plans for the rats are not firm once the experiments are over. Ms. Keim said last year the first children to come to her with a proper cage and a note from the parents granting permission were given the rats as pets.

A similar arrangement will probably be instituted this year, she said, except she plans parental conferences this year before allowing a child to take a rat home.

"These rats are clinically clean," she said. "They have never been touched by human hands before they arrive at the airport."

"They are healthy, but we must make it absolutely clear to the parents that the school cannot be responsible for the care or the health of the animals once they leave the school."

Rufe Jordan

Jordan Announces For Re-election

Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan has announced his candidacy for re-election.

Jordan, a native of Pampa, has served for 26 years as county sheriff.

"For years I have been honored by the people of Gray County in serving as sheriff and I am very proud to have served in that capacity and would like to continue," Jordan said in announcing his candidacy.

"I, along with a very fine group of concerned and dedicated deputy sheriffs and office personnel that have been with me for years, wish to welcome and solicit the support and cooperation of the people here who have helped us earn for Pampa and Gray County, Texas, the reputation of being one of the cleanest areas in the state.

The sheriff is a member of the First Baptist Church, the Noon Lions Club, and other civic organizations. He served as a director on the board of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce.

Oliver Found Guilty

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

A Gray County Court jury found Jerry Bowers Oliver Jr., 34, of Pampa guilty today on charges of possession of less than two ounces of marijuana.

The deliberations began about 10:20 a.m. today and 40 minutes later jurors requested permission to go to the local police station to observe windows and booking rooms.

"We have some questions about this," the foreman said in a written note to Judge Cain.

The judge allowed the inspection under the supervision of the bailiff and attorneys for both sides.

The trial began Wednesday with Jean Martindale representing Oliver.

The charge came as a result of a Pampa Police Department officer stopping Oliver for a traffic violation in July 1975.

John W. Warner, county attorney, said this morning in closing arguments that Officer Randy Stubblefield saw Oliver put a substance in cubbie hole in the booking room of the police station.

Martindale said it is the defendant's position that this was a physical impossibility.

"Our position is that he (Oliver) never had it. He was searched at the time he was stopped and it would have been physically impossible," Martindale said.

"Mr. Warner would have you believe that good law enforcement is conviction? This is not true. Good law enforcement is justice," Martindale emphasized. The defense counsel told jurors that they were not working for the state or the defendant.

He emphasized that his client is innocent and that the burden of proof is on the state.

"If you think about the evidence and even if 500 police officers testified — the defendant is not guilty," Martindale said.

In rebuttal Warner opened a courtroom door leading into a hallway and said each of the six jurors would have a different angle into the hallway.

He added that the defense is trying everyone, except the defendant, "try the personality of the prosecutor and get attention from the defendant onto something else. It is called misdirection," Warner said.

He told jurors that his job is to see that justice is done — not necessarily, to obtain a conviction.

"I look at a courtroom trial as a search for the truth," Warner explained.

The Master Has Spoken

By REED LARSON
(Right to Work News Service)

This is not a column about forced school busing.

This is a column about George Meany, president - for - life of the AFL - CIO, and his spat with the Massachusetts AFL - CIO hierarchy, which has adopted a resolution opposing the busing of school children to achieve racial balance in public schools.

Meany says the state union, organization can't do that, they are violating the rules of the national AFL - CIO, they are violating national AFL - CIO policy; and he's gonna let 'em have it but good if they don't toe the line.

He Meany, is the Master; and the Master has spoken.

Again, this is not a column about school busing - a matter about which men and women of good conscience are less than unanimous in their opinions. This is a column in which we are asking whether George Meany, or any union czar, has the right - moral or otherwise - to compel people to join and financially support his organization, and then use their money to promote and enforce points - of - view which are anathema to many of the conscripted members.

Meany's mandate to the Massachusetts union bosses is not without precedent. He issued similar ultimatums to everyone from Frank Fitzsimmons, Teamster union president, to Gerald R. Ford, president of an even larger Union, Presidents Ford and Fitzsimmons, however, aren't bound to Meany's decisions the way his Massachusetts "followers" are.

Samuel Gompers, the very first AFL president, had some very strong opinions about Meany - style arrogance. Meany might do well to have one of his more literate AFL - CIO underlings read him a few lines from Gompers' president's report to the 1888 AFL convention.

"There are people in the labor movement who seem to believe that success can only come by entrusting great, yes, absolute power in the hands of an individual or an executive officer," Gompers said. "I warn you against a calamity none greater than which can occur to the labor movement. Autocracy is as dangerous in our movement as in the state. Mistakes may be made by the masses but they learn to do better by reason of their mistakes. The individual, on the contrary, when having absolute power rarely makes mistakes, rather commits crime. The man who would arrogate to himself in the labor movement absolute and autocratic power would be a tyrant under other circumstances and has no place in the labor movement."

Of course the "labor movement" was very different then.

Men and women belonged to unions then because they had to in order to keep their jobs. Today, as a matter of union policy, and a matter of federal law, many million of AFL - CIO "members are conscripts - including pray tell, many of those Massachusetts dissidents who dare voice their independent beliefs.

It's easy for Meany to pick on these folks, because they can't fight back. Make union membership voluntary - as it should be - and we'll see how quick he is to force his beliefs on others.

"That's all very good, Mr. Hotchkiss -- however, as collateral..."

CONSERVATIVE ADVOCATE Heavy Guns Aimed at Reagan

By WILLIAM RUSHER

The nation's leading journalistic cheerleaders for liberalism have not cut out the clowning and gotten down to the serious business involved in the New Hampshire Republican primary. Not surprisingly, this turns out to be defeating Ronald Reagan. I confess to being a bit breath - taken, though, by the breezy cynicism with which they are counting on the presumed stupidity of New Hampshire's Republican voters to help them achieve that objective.

For several months the Washington press corps and its liberal hangers - on around the country have entertained themselves by building an image of Gerald Ford as a physically inept stumblebum comically unfit to be president. This image is now well established, and will prove extremely useful if and when the time comes, next fall, to oust Ford and hand the White House over to some suitably liberal Democrat. Meanwhile, however, Ford must first be smuggled successfully through the Republican primaries, lest he lose the GOP nomination to Ronald Reagan, whom the knee - jerk liberals in the press rightly regard as a far more formidable adversary than Ford. From this perspective, premature bombardments of Ford are - shall we say? - counterproductive. So now the heavy guns are being trained on Reagan instead.

First, the public must be prepared to accept the unsettling fact that the Reagan they have known and admired for years is about to be replaced by a "new" Reagan: a glib, handsome, empty - headed trivialist with one good speech but no serious answers to the nation's problems. To facilitate the sudden change - over, we are all being told repeatedly that now, for the first time, Reagan is about to be forced to answer "the tough questions."

This is, of course, pure balderdash. Reagan served for eight years as governor of the largest state in the Union, and was a major contender for the 1968 Republican presidential nomination. He has been asked, year after year, for a decade, every "tough" question that hostile reporters could devise. What is about to change isn't the toughness of the questions but the volume of misrepresentation and sheer nastiness in the reportage of his answers.

The first example of this, and thus far the worst, is the media's ruthless distortion of Reagan's proposal that a large number of federal welfare programs be turned over to the individual states, which could then manage (and finance) any they chose to continue. Reagan estimates that his proposal would permit an immediate 23 percent reduction of the federal income tax, and while state revenues would of course have to be increased to cover the costs of whatever federal programs within their borders they chose to shoulder, the net saving to every taxpayer (from boondoggles discontinued, and from elimination of the extra expense of sending money for meritorious programs to Washington to be run from there) would unquestionably be enormous.

Yet the liberals have leaped on this proposal with whoops of delight, asserting (quite falsely) that Reagan wants to eliminate every program which his proposal would de - federalize. On the contrary, as already noted, any state that wanted to could continue (and pay for) every federal welfare program now existing within its borders and still save buckets of money for its citizens, since their federal income taxes would fall so steeply.

Just in case New Hampshire Republicans (who are a canny lot) succeed in grasping this, the boys in the liberal back room have devised a second line of defense.

New Hampshireites have long resisted both a state income tax and state sales tax - so long that these positions have become articles of faith, not lightly challenged by ambitious politicians. But if Reagan were to succeed in de - federalizing welfare, New Hampshire (and every other state) would either have to drop the programs or raise their state taxes, right? So let's push Reagan into the buzz - saw: does he favor a state income tax? Never mind that Reagan is battling not for higher net taxes but for exactly the reverse. All we gotta do is keep these yokels confused until February 24. After that we can forget about New Hampshire for another four years and head for Florida - and pull the same trick all over again, down there.

Why Are We In Angola?

Fears that the United States could get itself into another Vietnam type mess in Angola could, of course, be overdrawn, but there are enough disturbing similarities between the two situations to warrant close scrutiny.

For one thing, it again seems to be a case of a few high officials and advisors in the executive branch perceiving a direct threat to the interest of the United States in the prospect of a Communist victory in a power struggle being waged in a former European colony - this time not French Indochina but Portuguese Angola.

And again, apparently proceeding on the assumption that the American people cannot be trusted to grasp the realities of world politics, these few men have decided on their own initiative to do what has to be done by clandestinely funneling some $50 million to anti - Communist factions in Angola through the governments of Zaire and Zambia.

The difference this time is that they got caught early in the game and people started asking questions.

And just as we were warned of all kinds of dire consequences if the United States "lost" Vietnam, we are warned of terrible things that will happen if the Communists take over in Angola. It would give the Soviet Union control of the shipping lanes from the Persian Gulf to New York and a jumping off point for invasion of Brazil, says Daniel P. Moynihan, our ambassador to the U.N.

But horrific possibilities like this would seem to demand a rather more strenuous U.S. response than a measly $50 million slipped under the table, as it were. Maybe even a sharp remonstrance to the Soviet Union - though nothing so sharp as to impair detente, of course. Certainly nothing so severe as threatening to cut off their grain if they don't stop meddling in Angola Heavens, no!

One suspects, however, that there may be certain other similarities between Angola and Vietnam.

It is possible, for instance, that the situation in the former, as it was in the latter, may be a little more complex than simply the embattled lovers of democratic freedom waging a valiant fight against the ruthless running dogs of Soviet imperialism.

There is also evidence that, as was the case in Vietnam, the escalation of Soviet arms aid to the pro - Communists in Angola is in part a response to prior U.S. aid to the anti - Communists (the Kremlin may be worried about possible American control of the shipping lanes or something), and that, as also happened in Vietnam, a counter - escalation would provoke a counter - escalation.

Or have we learned the lesson of Vietnam too well? Is what is happening in Angola, or could happen there, if direct bearing on the security of the United States?

A couple hundred million Americans are waiting to be convinced.

Well now, New York City, according to Theodore White, has lost the ability to govern itself, it has spent its way into representational as well as financial receivership (the latter still a possibility despite Congress's aid bill). The District of Columbia, until only recently, had no voice in its own governance.

Clearly then, the means of political organization, top - down or voter - up, cannot guarantee the financial solvency of any city. What matters is that whoever is running the show, if they regard taxes as a permanent wellspring, will spend toward oblivion, thereby splicing the allure of municipal bonds.

At the rate voters are disappearing, they may become an endangered species.

If Ford doesn't solve the unemployment problem this year, he could be part of it.

No wonder the Chinese were impressed with Ford. His jet had more bathrooms than Peking.

Reagan promised to cut $90 billion from federal spending as soon as the states decide to pay the difference.

Democrats are worried that their convention hall won't be big enough for all their candidates.

The nation's capital may well become the first illustration of the "domino theory" at work in the aftermath of New York City's bankruptcy.

Gerald Ford's Washington went into a great moralistic pother when the political fathers of embattled New York City appealed for financial help, only to bail them out, of course, with your tax dollars in the end. Probably the president didn't intend to put across such a meaning, but a tacit message did reach the media: New York is less competent to handle its affairs than Washington, D.C.

Now, the District of Columbia, which is run by Congress, is showing some of the same symptoms New York began to evince a year or so ago. Comptroller General Elmer B. Staats issued this preliminary diagnosis: "The task of reconstructing the accounts may be impossible, or so major, as to preclude the rendering of an opinion at the conclusion of the audit."

Translation: D.C.'s books are in a hopeless mess, but let's not startle anybody by saying so with certainty and forthrightness.

Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, who chairs the congressional committee on the district, inched a little closer to a pronouncement of doom. He saw, he said, "disturbing similarities" between Washington's fiscal condition and New York's.

The D. C. Domino

Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, who chairs the congressional committee on the district, inched a little closer to a pronouncement of doom. He saw, he said, "disturbing similarities" between Washington's fiscal condition and New York's.

THE VANISHING NICKEL

Another of New York City's traditions fell by the wayside when the city abandoned the nickel fare on the Staten Island ferry.

In absolute terms, the new 25 cent fare will hardly produce enough by itself to make a dent in the $6 billion cash flow problem confronting New York. But it does illustrate the fact to New Yorkers, and hopefully to others, that unnecessary municipal subsidies are joining the ranks of the dodo bird.

It also illustrates the truth of the classic homily that a penny saved is a penny earned. Even in New York enough quarters eventually will total $6 billion.

For the last three years popular and scholarly periodicals have been bulging with articles advocating that American business become "socially responsible." Well-meaning people inside and outside of business have talked about "social investments," "social costs," and "social dividends." Corporate executives have patted themselves on the backs after making "social gestures" - a minority hiring program here, a convict training effort there. Individual businesses have instructed advertising firms to put greater emphasis upon their company's "involvement," "concern," and "trustworthiness."

Business bedecked in the habiliments of "social responsibility" may be a heartening sight to some. For others, like myself, it creates an increasing uneasiness. Why?

First, if business is actually to attack a set of social problems head-on - poverty, racial and sexual discrimination, and crime - then it must recognize that these have been stubborn problems that have not responded very well to decades of thought and billions of private and public dollars. One can view the persistence of the poor, the prejudicially treated, the criminally inclined, as a challenge. But, the challenge is also a warning: these problems are complex and deep - rooted.

No cursory application of business management techniques to them will produce lasting changes. Tilted at chronic social problems is a "high-risk" venture.

Enterprises that do institute ambitious social projects may find themselves having to back-out of them by 1980. By then these firms will have such a heavy burden of government bureaucracy to bear and such problems of prediction due to unstable currencies, that they will be required to use all their energy and ingenuity in order to produce just what they produced in the past.

Finally, the grandiose phrases of "social responsibility" make us forget that the central function of business enterprises is to provide goods and services to paying customers. That may seem to be a rather unglamorous, old - fashioned goal for business. Indeed, to some it may appear to be unfeeling.

However, when a profit-making enterprise does these things well, it will automatically, though unintentionally, be producing a very large social good. Bluntly put, a well - run business will provide satisfactory goods to consumers and in the process pay wages to workers and dividends to investors.

American business ought to continue to concentrate on that which it does best - the production and distribution of goods. To do otherwise would be socially irresponsible.

Wife Sick of Bad Hospital Jokes

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1974 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has had a lot of back surgery, which required several long stays in the hospital. While there, a couple we were friendly with sent him get-well cards regularly, which we both appreciated, but all their cards had the same theme: "The male patient was fooling around with his nurses."

After my husband came home, this couple visited him, and their conversation was full of teasing about the nurses giving him massages, backrubs and baths. I was even asked point blank if I wasn't afraid my husband would run off with a pretty young nurse.

Whenever we are with this couple now, they get back on the pretty young nurse subject until I am sick of hearing it.

Perhaps because I am a rather young nor pretty and have such a meager quotient of self-esteem, I'm depressed for days about these remarks, especially when they are made in the presence of others, which is often the case.

My husband never stands up for me, which may indicate that he enjoys the talk.

What can I do to put an end to this? I've tried to avoid being with this couple, but I can't do that forever.

HURT

DEAR HURT: Bring your feelings out in the open and tell them exactly what you've told me. After that they wouldn't dare "kid" you in that feign again.

DEAR ABBY: This problem has me upset. My husband and I must attend classes one evening a week, and we have one child who is deaf.

A young woman who lives in our apartment building has two small children, and she is willing to babysit for us, but she refuses to take any money.

Her husband is unemployed, and I know they could use the money, but I gave her a check once, and she tore it up.

Things would be okay if I could sit with her kids in return, but they can't afford to go any place.

I threatened to find another sitter, but she looked so hurt. Should I accept it as a blessing in disguise?

Any suggestions will be appreciated.

DEAR ABBY: In a column, some time ago, you said that some airlines offered a course designed to help persons overcome their fear of flying.

I have a daughter-in-law who is terrified of flying, so I immediately telephoned American Airlines, TWA and United, and none of these airlines could help me.

Where do I go from here?

Mrs. Javits Iran Agent

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., says he sees nothing wrong in his wife's working as a foreign agent for Iran.

Javits, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, was commenting on a story appearing in Wednesday's Village Voice newspaper which pegged his wife Marion as a registered agent for the oil-rich country.

Javits said, "In our private lives, we are husband and wife. But when it comes to our professional obligations, we pursue independent lives and make independent judgments. "That's the way it has been for most of 28 years, and that's the way it will continue to be."

Marvin Frankel, president of Ruder & Finn International where Mrs. Javits works, confirmed she was registered as a foreign agent for Iran in connection with her $67,500 a year job.

Persons representing foreign governments, corporations or individuals in the United States are required to register with the federal government under the Foreign Agents Registration Act of 1938.

Frankel said the 50-year-old wife of New York's senior senator has worked on a promotional campaign for Iran Air since September. He said the Iran Air project currently was her only account.

She previously had been employed as a consultant for the firm, primarily in the arts field, Frankel said.

According to Frankel, Mrs. Javits registered six months ago as a foreign agent.

Iran, second largest oil-producing nation in the Middle East, is a Moslem nation, but its people are not Frankel said Mrs. Javits first visited Iran in 1970 and was impressed with its health, education and literacy programs. She decided those activities would be good to promote abroad and suggested the program to Ruder & Finn, Frankel said.

"In our respective professional activity, my wife and I lead independent lives," Javits said. "I do not attempt to direct her as to choices and attitudes in her work, and she does not influence me in mine."

King Calls for Jobs

BY WALT SMITH

United Press International
Charging the Nixon and Ford administrations with forcing the poor to bear the brunt of inflation, Mrs. Martin Luther King Jr. issued a call today for full employment in one of many ceremonies around the nation marking the 47th anniversary of her late husband's birth.

"The poor, minorities, and average working people have been deliberately chosen by the immediate past and current administration to bear the brunt of our economic policy," said Mrs. King in Atlanta.

A massive march from Ebenezer Baptist Church, where the slain civil rights leader preached, to the Federal Reserve Bank in downtown Atlanta was scheduled today to dramatize the need for jobs.

Mrs. King also planned to place a wreath at the King gravesite.

A petition asking Congress to investigate the King slaying was signed by 888 persons, circulated in Milwaukee and sent to Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis.

In a letter to Mrs. King, President Ford pledged renewed dedication to the achievement of equality for all Americans, citing King's "eloquent commitment to the cause of civil rights" and his forceful leadership.

Observances also were planned in other cities. The Southern-Christian Leadership Conference sponsored a march in Louisville, Ky., designed to counter strong antibusing sentiment in the area stemming from a court-ordered school desegregation plan.

Marches were set for Memphis, Tenn., where King was assassinated while leading a garbage workers strike in 1968, and in Montgomery, Ala., where he rose to prominence in the Montgomery bus boycott 20 years ago.

Black leaders again met with Apodaca later Wednesday but Johnson did not attend the second session. The evening meeting was closed to newsmen. Chief target of black leaders charging inaction was Rudy Ortiz, director of the Employment Security Commission. He was accused of failure to respond to a Dec. 18 proposal that a task force be established to deal with black joblessness in Albuquerque.

Participating in the ceremonies will be Marie Parsley, installing officer; Bernice Keen, grand senior; Joyce Howell, grand junior, and Mrs. Ray Barnard, emcee.

Apodaca Threatens Activist

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Gov. Jerry Apodaca told a black activist to "shut up" and challenged the man to a fight Wednesday during a meeting with black community members upset about government actions on black unemployment.

James Andrew Johnson and Apodaca exchanged bitter words during the meeting.

Johnson was one of two men who occupied a state official's office last October in a protest action aimed at bringing attention to black unemployment. The two demonstrators were acquitted of charges of false imprisonment after the incident.

Johnson refused to shake hands with Apodaca before Wednesday's meeting and was told to "shut up" when he interrupted the governor during the session. After several verbal exchanges between the two, Apodaca told the man "why don't you and I settle the issue separately if you're that tough."

Johnson told Apodaca the

Chou Ashes Scattered In Solemn Ceremony

HONG KONG (UPI) — China's leaders paid final tribute to Premier Chou En-lai at a Peking memorial service today and then had his ashes scattered across the land for which he fought and served for more than 50 years.

The solemn ceremony, attended by more than 5,000 persons, climaxed a week of national mourning that saw the greatest outpouring of grief for any Chinese leader in modern history.

All the top party leaders were present except Chairman Mao Tse-tung, who is 82 and ailing. Mao has not attended such functions in the past when other close comrades have died.

The eulogy was delivered by Teng Hsiao-ping, the man mentioned as the likely successor in the chief executive's job that Chou held for more than 26 years.

"Comrade Chou En-lai's life was one of glorious struggle for the cause of communism," Teng said. "He is an example that the whole party, the whole army and the people of the whole country should learn from."

The New China News Agency, reporting on the service almost six hours after it was held, said, "Comrade Chou En-lai's ashes are scattered in the rivers and on the land of our motherland in accordance with the wishes he expressed before his death."

Senate To Vote On Each Charge

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Attorneys in the impeachment trial of South Texas District Judge O.P. Carrillo say the Senate's decision to vote individually on the first two of 10 articles against Carrillo could jeopardize the proceedings.

The Senate decided Wednesday to vote on the two articles which have been debated this week, indicating that if Carrillo is found guilty of those two and removed from office, the remaining charges could be dropped.

The decision could end the trial next week. The motions allow the Senate to vote separately on the two articles after hearing final arguments.

Special prosecutor Terry Doyle also objected and asked Senate members not to consider the impeachment articles individually.

"More than once in the last few days, senators have expressed the possibility that they could go home after one or two of these articles," Doyle said. "Disposing of one or two of them would put the Senate in the position of not doing what is required in the constitution in impeachment cases."

Judge Stops Protests

HOUSTON (UPI) — A state district judge has granted a temporary restraining order against mass violence or picketing at a chemical plant where a pre-dawn melee Wednesday caused an estimated $1 million in damage.

State District Judge Arthur Leshler cited as defendants in the order the Houston-Gulf Coast Area Building and Construction Trades Council and 15 union locals.

At least 17 fires were set and construction equipment was damaged extensively Wednesday at Charter International Oil Co. near the Houston Ship Channel. Charter and its contractor, Payne and Keller Inc., sought the order after the third consecutive day of labor strife at the plant.

M.A. Graham, executive secretary of the building trades council, called the order ridiculous and said he was surprised at the judge's actions.

"Without calling anybody and investigating, it looks like he is a little haywire to me," Graham said. He contended construction trades unions were trying to quell unrest in their ranks.

About 300 union members, protesting the hiring of non-union construction workers besieged the plant for four hours Wednesday, set fires, overturned a crane and blocked nearby streets.

A security guard and a maintenance supervisor at the Charter International Oil Co. were injured in the disturbance. Both were treated and released at a nearby hospital.

No one was arrested and police said union officials dispersed the crowd.

Officers said several of the protesters got inside the plant gates before dawn and used a crane to overturn another crane which caught fire and exploded. Two small buildings at the construction site were also burned, police said.

Police officials, fearing a major confrontation and violence, ordered all off-duty police officers to work, but they were sent home when the protesters left. A handful of officers remained at the scene near the Houston Ship Channel on the city's east side.

One reporter said several men grabbed his tape recorder and smashed it with a ball pen hammer. Another reporter had his notebook snatched away and ripped up by the protesters. Neither was injured.

The protest began last Friday when nearly 100 union workers arrived at Charter Oil to work for a construction sub-contractor at the plant. They had been working for an all-union contractor at the site, but Charter changed to an open shop contractor Friday.

Texas Asks Kissinger To Demand Extradition

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Texas officials have formally asked Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to demand the extradition of Dallas insurance executive Ben Jack Cage, who embezzled $100,000 and fled to Brazil.

In a letter to Kissinger Wednesday, Texas Secretary of State Mark White asked the State Department to assist in the return of Cage, who was convicted in 1957 of embezzling the money from the I.C.T. Corp. and sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade renewed efforts to extradite Cage last year upon learning the insurance man had been arrested in Brazil and charged with corporate crimes.

This week Attorney General John Hill delivered extradition papers to White's office for Gov. Dolph Briscoe's consideration. Hill says besides the embezzlement conviction, Cage also is wanted for a second embezzlement in Dallas and bribery in Austin.

In 1960 the government indicted Cage and six others on four counts of conspiracy, mail fraud, and fraud by wire and violations of federal security regulations involving $2 million in municipal bonds.

Cage went to Brazil in 1956, but returned to Texas in 1957 to stand trial on embezzlement charges. He was found guilty and sentenced to 10 years. Freed on $15,000 bail, however, Cage returned to Brazil during the appeal of the case and failed to return in 1958 when the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals upheld the conviction.

Cage could not be brought back to Texas forcibly because Brazil did not have an extradition treaty with the United States.

Rape Conviction Upheld

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals has upheld the conviction of a McLennan County man given a life sentence for the 1974 rape of a high school girl.

The appeals court agreed the trial court should not have allowed the attorney representing Phillip David Hunnicutt to practice in Texas without a state license. But the appeals court said Hunnicutt did not prove the lawyer was incompetent.

Hunnicutt also contended the trial court erred in admitting into evidence items seized from his car during an unwarranted search.

Hunnicutt was convicted of raping a 17-year-old high school girl who lived in a Waco apartment with a girlfriend. The girl testified she was raped May 19, 1974, by a hooded man wearing white gloves and carrying a pistol. She said the assailant threatened to kill her if she screamed.

Hunnicutt was arrested May 26, 1974, outside the Casa Royale apartments in Waco. Officers on a stake out said Hunnicutt acted suspiciously — wandering aimlessly throughout the complex — and held him after questioning.

According to testimony, Hunnicutt told officer Michael Larrew he could look for his keys in his car. While searching

Simants Schizophrenic

NORTH PLATTE, Neb. (UPI) — To Erwin Charles Simants, wiping out a family of six was no more momentous than buying a pack of cigarettes at a drug store, according to a psychiatrist.

Simants was on trial for the slaying of six members of the Henry Kellie family at their Sutherland, Neb., home.

Dr. Jack Anderson, a Lincoln, Neb., psychiatrist, told jurors Wednesday Simants killed the Kellie family with the same ease "you would expect him to have if he went down to the drugstore to get some cigarettes."

Anderson said Simants, 30, experienced an "acute schizophrenic episode" when he grabbed a 22-caliber rifle from the home of his sister and brother-in-law and went next door to the Kellies Oct. 18 and began the six-murder spree.

The psychiatrist said Simants didn't know right from wrong, was unable to grasp the consequences of what he had done and had no comprehension of pending punishment.

Simants has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity to six counts of first-degree murder or murder in the commission of a sexual assault. The prosecution contended Simants knew what he was doing and asked the death penalty. Anderson and Dr. Sam Campanella, a North Platte clinical psychologist, concluded the defense's case Wednesday. Simants' ex-wife, former sister-in-law and mother also testified for the defense.

Campanella said Simants moved around "more like a machine than a human" during psychological testing.

"He has no emotions," Campanella said. "No emotions whatsoever."

No motive for the killings has been established, but Campanella speculated Simants may have been bent on suicide. Immediately following the incident, Simants scrawled a note which said, "I am sorry to all. It is the best way out. Do not cry."

Anderson testified Simants' mental illness had been "apparent for a matter of years."

Simants blamed himself, Anderson said, for the failure of his on-again off-again five-year marriage and for fathering a child born paralyzed from the waist down.

Deputy Lincoln County Attorney Marvin Holscher said he expected to call five lay witnesses and a psychologist today and two psychiatrists Friday to wind up the state's case.

Peron Fires Cabinet

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — President Isabel Peron asked her entire cabinet to resign today to pave the way for a government reorganization. She then accepted the resignation of four of her ministers.

Presidential press secretary Osvaldo Papaleo announced that the resignations of Interior Minister Angel Robledo, Defense Minister Tomas Votero, Justice Minister Ernesto Corvalan and Foreign Minister Manuel Arauz Castex, had been accepted by the president.

Papaleo announced the appointment of Roberto Ares, president of the country's most important government bank, as interior minister, and Juan Alberto Deheza as justice minister and acting defense minister.

No replacement was announced for the foreign minister, but Education Minister Pedro Arrighi was named as acting minister of that cabinet post.

Papaleo did not say whether any more resignations would be accepted by the president.

There was no immediate explanation as to why Mrs. Peron had decided to shake up her cabinet, although the local press had speculated that one of the main targets of an eventual shakeup would be Robledo.

Robledo, who was sworn in as interior minister Sept. 16, 1975, was considered by headline Peronists to be insufficiently loyal to Mrs. Peron, according to press reports.

Robledo, who is also first vice president of the Peronist party, was considered a moderate and one of the ministers most willing to seek agreements and compromise with opponents of Mrs. Peron, something unacceptable to the hard liners.

Teething Ring Danger

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Food and Drug Administration today announced the recall of thousands of teething rings which it said could cause babies to vomit if the fluid inside escapes.

The products involved are the Nuk Orthodontic Gum Soother, Assorted Protect-O Gum Soother and the Protect-O Cool Ring Gum Soother.

The FDA had no exact figures on how many of the rings were being recalled but it said the rates of use for the items were 19,200 per month, 14,400 per month and 6,600 per month respectively for the three items.

Those involved were distributed prior to Sept. 1, compound does not stop bacteria from growing, and that furthermore if the fluid happens to escape into the baby's mouth, vomiting may result.

Berl Springer Elected Head Of SWPS Co.

Berl M. Springer was elected president and chief operating officer of the Southwestern Public Service Co. Wednesday at the organizational meeting of the board of directors which followed the annual meeting of stockholders in Amarillo.

Roy Tolk, who continues as chairman of the board and chief executive officer, had been filling both the chairman and president roles of the electric company since 1972.

The board also elected three new vice presidents. They are Adrian Sebastian, who will also continue as secretary and treasurer; W.R. Esler, who has been chief engineer; and Roger Owen, who has been director of rates and budget.

Springer, a Texas Tech graduate, joined Southwestern in 1946 as a draftsman. He later became a rate engineer and then manager of the rate department. In January of 1969, he was elected vice president of rates and budget, and he has been executive vice president since 1972. He was elected a director of the company in 1974.

Sebastian, a graduate of The University of Texas and a certified public accountant, came with Southwestern in 1955. He was elected comptroller in 1967, secretary in 1962 and secretary-treasurer in 1975. All others were re-elected.

NEW FIND BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — New gold and copper deposits have been discovered in Catamarca Province in northwest Argentina, Economy Minister Antonio Cafiero announced.

Cafiero said the government is investing the equivalent of $393,000 in developing the La Alumbraera field. He said estimates show about one million tons of copper and a small amount of gold is present in the area.

Vegetable Often Called Second Class

By JANE P. MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff

The vegetable is often designated a second class citizen in the food kingdom, despite his necessity.

He bears the brunt of many snide remarks from spinach haters and dieters.

He plays a part on song titles and book names: plant a radish, cabbages and kings, beans in their ears.

Yet he's vital to many American cliches: peas in a pod, red as a beet, onion in a petunia patch.

He's also vital to make each person healthy.

Here are some ideas to make him a little more fun in your family's winter meals:

Green Bean Casserole
3 tablespoons butter

2 tablespoons flour
1/4 teaspoon sugar
1/2 teaspoon grated onion
1 cup dairy sour cream
2 packages frozen French style green beans
1/2 pound grated mild cheddar cheese
1/2 cup cornflake crumbs

Cook green beans as directed on package. Drain. Two cans of drained green beans may be used instead of the frozen ones.

Melt 2 tablespoons butter and add the flour. Cook gently and remove from heat. Stir in sugar, onion and sour cream. Add beans.

Pour mixture into two - quart casserole and cover with cheese. Top with crumbs which have been mixed with remaining butter.

Bake in a 350 degrees oven until hot and bubbly.

Asparagus Casserole
2 pounds fresh asparagus or 4 cups cooked asparagus
4 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
1/4 teaspoon pepper
salt
4 hard cooked eggs
1/4 cup cracker crumbs

Melt 2 tablespoons butter and blend in flour. Add milk and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens. Add salt to taste and pepper.

Arrange half cooked asparagus and the four eggs, sliced, in bottom of 8 inch by 8 inch by 2 inch baking dish. Cover with half of white sauce. Add remaining asparagus and the rest of the white sauce.

Sprinkle with cracker crumbs and top with dots of remaining butter. Bake in 350 degree oven for 30 to 35 minutes.

Grandma's Sweet Potato-Brussel Sprout Casserole
1 large can sweet potatoes
2 packages frozen brussel sprouts
1 teaspoon chopped onion
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
2 cups shredded cheddar cheese
1 cup light cream

Cook frozen brussel sprouts according to directions on package. Drain. Also drain sweet potatoes.

Mix nutmeg, cheese and cream. Add to onion sprouts and potatoes. Place mixture in casserole and bake, covered, in 325 degree oven for 30 minutes.

This recipe comes from Rusty Mitchell, food editor from the Colorado Springs Gazette Telegraph. She probably made it up; she does that many of her recipes which combine vegetables unusually. It's delicious and so colorful.

Vegetable Casserole
1 large cauliflower
2 cups cut green beans
2 cups sliced carrots
1/2 cup finely chopped onion
1 chicken bouillon cube
1/2 cup boiling water
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
1/2 cup butter
1 cup cherry tomato halves
2 cups soft bread crumbs

Cut cauliflower into flowerettes. Thaw green beans (one 9 - ounce package) if frozen ones are to be used.

In buttered casserole, at least a three - quart size, combine cauliflower, green beans, carrots and onion, mixing well. Dissolve bouillon in water and add salt and all but a teaspoon of the Worcestershire.

Pour over vegetables and dot with half of the butter. Cover and bake at 350 degrees for one hour.

Add tomatoes, cover and bake 10 minutes longer.

Remove casserole from oven. Increase temperature to 500 degrees. Melt remaining butter and stir in bread crumbs and remaining Worcestershire.

Spoon around outside of casserole, return to oven, uncovered, and bake for five minutes until crumbs are browned.

This recipe serves six to eight.

The next recipe is a little extra trouble because you have to separate the eggs and beat them. But it is light and flavorful, just the right touch for a heavy meal of ham or chicken.

Corn Pudding
3 tablespoons butter
3 onions, sliced
1 green pepper, chopped
1 can cream - style corn
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
3 eggs
pinch nutmeg

Melt butter in skillet and saute onions and green pepper until tender. Add corn, salt, pepper and nutmeg. Heat thoroughly and remove from heat.

Separate eggs and beat yolks. Stir yolks into corn mixture. Pour into greased casserole or soufflé dish and fold in egg whites, beaten stiff.

Bakes 15 minutes at 300 degrees until pudding sets. Do not let it get too dry.

Serves 4.

Spinach Provencale
2 pounds fresh spinach
1 large onion
1 clove garlic olive oil butter
2 beaten eggs
1 cup grated Parmesan cheese
Salt and pepper

Wash spinach carefully. Chop onion and mince garlic. Heat olive oil in large kettle and saute onion and garlic for a few minutes. When onion is transparent, add spinach and cover tightly. In about two minutes, the leaves will be reduced in bulk. Stir in with oil and onions and cook a few minutes longer.

Butter medium - size baking dish. When spinach is cooled slightly, stir in eggs and half cheese. Season with salt and pepper and pour into baking dish.

Sprinkle with remaining cheese and dot with butter. Bake in 375 degree oven for 10 to 15 minutes.

Lemony Beef Pot Roast

Serve this beef on a warm platter lined with buttered noodles and serve with gravy. Broccoli spears, rye bread and a tomato - cucumber salads complete the menu. To make the roast, dredge 3 to 4 pound beef blade roast in mixture of 2 tablespoons flour, 2 teaspoons salt and one - eighth teaspoon white pepper. Reserve any excess flour for gravy. Brown meat in 2 tablespoons lard or drippings, pour off drippings and add one - third cup water, 3 tables-

Save Lunch Money, Calories

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

It's no secret that lunch carried from home is cheaper than the same meal bought in a restaurant or delicatessen.

Consumer experts at a New York City bank say even a modest $2.50 a day lunch totals $590 over 236 working days in a typical year. They recommend reducing not just the cost of lunch in dollars, but the number of calories, if you are one of the thousands of overweight persons in the work force.

As an example, a classic lunch of cheeseburger with toppings, french fries and a milk shake adds up to about 1,150 calories.

To halve the calories and the price, the experts suggest a plain burger without cheese or french fries, and milk instead of a shake.

Some restaurants and delicatessens with office delivery service offer a discount for weekly lunch orders placed in advance. It's worth asking about even if your lunch source doesn't provide the service currently.

First National City Bank's consumer newsletter also estimates that a balanced lunch carried from home can cost as little as 50 cents, or about half what you'd pay a delicatessen for the same food: an apple, about four ounces of cheese and a slice or two of bread. The newsletter also recommends as a good buy a container of plain yogurt with nuts and fruit or a sprinkling of cereal. The yogurt alone costs less than 40 cents at many food markets, compared with 55 cents or more at take-out lunch spots.

A carried lunch can also make good use of leftovers from last night's dinner. A few slices of chicken or lean meat wrapped around cherry tomatoes or carrot or cucumber sticks can substitute for a sandwich. Or pack a small disposable container or wide-mouth vacuum bottle with four ounces of cottage cheese, seasoned at home with herbs. Add a bag of carrots, green pepper sticks, cauliflowerets or other raw vegetables. A container of milk or fruit juice adds very little to the cost, even from a vending machine or deli.

If for business reasons you must eat in expensive restaurants several times a week, the experts suggest shopping the full menu carefully. They estimate a patron can have a glass of white wine, an omelet and a cup of coffee for as little as $6.75 in a French restaurant whose lunches generally run around $12 per person.

In a seafood restaurant where main dishes average $6.95, you might have instead a large, filling bowl of fish chowder with hot bread for only $2.95. Or substitute a hearty appetizer such as prosciutto (Italian ham) and melon for a main course, to save calories and cash; or a pate or terrine in a French restaurant, if your waistline can stand the extra calories.

In restaurants whose portions are very large, some twosomes share a salad or appetizer and a hot main dish.

If you know you'll eat both lunch and dinner in restaurants on the same day, you usually can save money by ordering a complete meal at midday and a lighter one at night.

If you drink coffee, tea or bouillon often during your work day, either invest in an immersion heater or get together with colleagues to buy a small heating unit and a pot for boiling water. A cup of tea made with an instant product or tea bag costs less than two cents, compared with 15 cents from a vending machine. At this rate, a $1.49 immersion heater pays for itself in 11 uses.

Anne Armstrong: Texan as Ambassador To Britain

Anne Armstrong

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford nominated Anne Armstrong as ambassador to Britain Wednesday and said his wife Betty deserves credit for a woman being named to the post for the first time.

Ford made the announcement in his Oval Office with Mrs. Armstrong, Mrs. Ford and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger at his side.

"You'll have to give some of the credit for this appointment to Betty," said the President, referring to his wife's push for women's rights. He added that Kissinger feels the Mrs. Armstrong, 48-year-old wife of a wealthy Texas cattleman, will do a "superb job."

Mrs. Armstrong will have to be confirmed by the Senate, but there did not appear to be any opposition to her nomination. If confirmed, she will succeed Elliot Richardson, recently named Commerce Secretary by Ford.

The nomination marked the first time a President has chosen a woman as envoy to the Court of St. James.

"I am extremely pleased and very very happy" about the nomination, Ford said. The President said he believes Mrs. Armstrong, who has been a White House counselor in the latter days of the Nixon and the early days of the Ford administrations, will be warmly received in Britain.

"Thank you, Mr. President. Thank you, Betty. Thank you, Henry," Mrs. Armstrong said. Mrs. Armstrong, first woman to serve as co-chairman of the Republican National Committee, said she was pleased that the post will not mean splitting her from husband and children.

Her Texas rancher husband and "some" of her five children will go with her to London, she said.

Mrs. Armstrong said her goal will be to "strengthen Anglo-American relations. And, going to a country ruled by a queen and where the opposition Conservative party is headed by a woman, Mrs. Armstrong said, "I don't downplay my being a woman."

Ambassador designate Ann Armstrong, a headstrong South Texas ranchwoman, says she does not know much about the Common Market or British politics, but she is ready to learn, and quickly.

President Ford has nominated Mrs. Armstrong to be U.S.

ambassador to Britain. If confirmed by the Senate, she will be the first woman to hold the job, replacing Elliot Richardson, the new Commerce secretary.

Mrs. Armstrong, the wife of Tobin Armstrong, who runs his family's 50,000-acre Santa Gertrudis cattle ranch on Texas' coastal plains and plans to accompany his wife to Britain, said before her departure for Washington she planned to begin boning up on her new job immediately.

"I will call on the best brains available, a great variety of people from all walks of life, and pick their brains as hard as I can," said Mrs. Armstrong, adviser to former President Richard M. Nixon and mother of three sons and two daughters, including twin boys. "I'm determined, smart and energetic to learn it."

Mrs. Armstrong said she already had spoken with returning ambassador Elliot L. Richardson, the new Secretary of Commerce, who "gave me a very positive preview of what I'm going into."

She said she probably would meet with Richardson again about the post.

She denied her husband was a millionaire but acknowledged they would have enough resources to finance the extensive entertainment schedule that is expected of America's ambassador to Britain.

Mrs. Armstrong, dressed casually in a red turtleneck, tan jodhpurs and knee-high cowboy boots, told newsmen last week on the family ranch said she wanted to take a taste of Texas to Britain.

"I want to host a Texas barbecue to show how we entertain down here and I hope to take Rosie with us," she said.

Mrs. Rosario Munoz is Mrs. Armstrong's Mexican-American house keeper who specializes in Mexican dishes.

Mrs. Armstrong has lived on the Armstrong Ranch for the past 22 years. She is a native of New Orleans and a graduate of Foxcroft School, Middleburg, Va. and Vassar College where she was Phi Beta Kappa in her junior year.

She has been active in the Republican Party in Texas and, if her appointment is successful, will resign her position as co-chairwoman, with Sen. John G. Tower, R-Tex., of President Ford's Texas campaign.

Mrs. Armstrong started out as a Democrat, a volunteer in Harry Truman's 1948 presidential campaign.

She switched her affiliation in the next presidential campaign and rose to the top of the GOP, her loyalty so unquestioned that Richard Nixon appointed her a special presidential counsel after his re-election in 1972.

Untainted by Watergate, she stayed on for several months into the Ford administration before returning to her husband's sprawling cattle ranch in Texas under the press of "family responsibilities."

The Armstrongs have five children, including twin 19-year-old sons, who will stay behind while they are living in London.

Mrs. Armstrong, a tall, chic, dark-haired woman, comes by her political involvement naturally. Her great-grandfather, Leonidas Jefferson Storey, was lieutenant governor of Texas in 1880.

After she made the big switch from Truman to Eisenhower in 1952, she became active in grassroots Republican politics in Texas until her election as state party vice chairman and GOP national committeewoman.

She was a delegate to the GOP national conventions of 1964 and 1968, and served on the platform committee. In 1969 she was on the executive committee of the Republican National Committee, and was elected the party's co-chairman in 1971.

After Nixon's re-election, Mrs. Armstrong was named presidential counselor with Cabinet-level status. Her duties consisted of liaison between the Oval Office and the nation's Spanish-Americans, women and youth.

Ford was known to have chosen Mrs. Armstrong for several reasons — to reward her for her long loyalty to the party, to demonstrate the administration's commitment to women's rights and because the Armstrongs are independently wealthy and able to afford the social functions attendant to the job of representing the United States at the court of St. James.

Assertiveness Training Can Help

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Have you ever: — Been reluctant to ask a doctor questions because you didn't want to take up his time? — Been too timid to ask a mechanic exactly what was wrong with your car because you didn't want to appear stupid?

— Been hesitant to question an error on a restaurant bill because you were afraid of making a scene?

If you have trouble bringing yourself to do these and other things you feel you have the right to do, maybe what you need is assertiveness training.

It can help anyone, according to counselors Joan Pearlman and Karen Coburn, but women need it more because they have been taught for too long that being passive and being feminine are one and the same.

Ms. Coburn and Ms. Pearlman, along with Lynn Z. Bloom, wrote "The New Assertive Woman," a guide whose title may bring visions of a modern-day

Amazon imposing her will on anyone daring to cross her path.

But the technique isn't as aggressive as it sounds. A basic distinction is made between being assertive and being aggressive.

"It's a matter of what your intent is," Ms. Coburn, a counselor at Fontbonne College, said. "Assertive behavior is a direct, honest expression of ideas, desires and feelings. Aggressive behavior expresses the same things, but without taking into account the rights of others. The intent is to dominate and get your own way no matter what."

The key to assertive behavior is self-confidence, Ms. Pearlman, a counselor at the University of Missouri-St. Louis, said. "There is a great deal of power in assertion, confidence in what you're doing and being straightforward and honest."

Too often, they said in an interview, someone trying to decide what to do puts the issue in extreme terms: what is the worst thing that could happen if I go ahead and do what I want? But there is no reason to expect the worst, Ms. Pearlman said — too many other options are more likely to occur.

Once one decides what to do, they said, one should act. Men often urge their wives or employees to become more assertive, Ms. Pearlman said, and the relationships usually improve.

"The idea of an assertive woman as an okay thing is new," she said. "Being feminine and being assertive used to be almost mutually exclusive."

"Society is still reinforcing passive behavior in women. In a man it's called wishy-washy or milktost, and a man who acts that way may even be called feminine. In a woman it's called being nice and accommodating."

"If a man suddenly becomes assertive, he gets positive feedback from society. But a woman gets treated differently, like she used to be someone who could be counted on but not any more."

Ms. Coburn said, "All the things all of us were brought up to believe — be nice to others, don't rock the boat, if you can't say anything nice don't say anything — these injunctions against saying what you feel keep people non-assertive."

"It's not a case where a woman can have two counseling sessions and say to her husband, 'Now I've had assertiveness training and I'm going to tell you what I've wanted to say for all these years.'"

Learning how to be assertive is one thing, they agreed. Learning when to be assertive is another. One may not choose to assert oneself every time. If something at work bothers you, but speaking up might cost you a job you like, you may have to suffer in silence.

When you do choose to assert yourself, Ms. Pearlman added, the training won't always work the way it did in the practice sessions.

"You may not get your request," she said, "but you feel better about yourself. You have the right to ask, just as the other person has the right to turn you down."

At Wit's End

By ERMA BOMBECK

A new baby-sitter once came to the house where I introduced her to the kids. She looked from one to the other, then carefully scrutinized their father and me and said, "What happened? None of you match."

I said, "I phoned 'em in."

I could have. We have one of the most dissimilar, mismatched, variety-packed families you ever laid eyes on. No one has the same hair coloring, the same color of eyes or the same temperament.

One tan, one burn, one silks, one talks you to death, one is freckled, one is bronze, one tall and lean, one chubby and close to the ground. I don't think we ever really had a sense of humor about children until we were thrown a brown-eyed, freckled nose, redhead. Now they're a real conversation piece.

One day at the bus stop a strange woman (not to be confused with a woman who is a stranger) approached me and said, "Is this your son?"

I nodded.

"Does his father have red hair?"

I said, "No."

"Did you have him late in life?"

I bristled. "Why do you ask?"

"Well," she smiled, "my husband and I were blessed with a redhead very late in life. I had a friend who said one word everytime she looked at him... Rust!"

I broke up every time I thought about it. From then on my crazy quilt family became a joy. I became a woman of mystery. When carry-out boys said, "Does his father have red hair?" I'd reply huskily, "I can't remember."

I could change the color of my own hair four times a year and still look related to someone in the family.

But the greatest advantage to a family of opposites happened one Sunday in Church. My son was sitting in the pew ahead of me where I duly noted there was a chunk of hair missing where before had been bubble gum. He had grabbed his school jacket with the zipper hanging loose down the front. And when he took it off, he revealed to the entire congregation words to live by: "SAVE WATER. BATHE WITH SOMEONE YOU LOVE."

A woman next to me whispered, "Can you imagine a mother sending a boy to church like that?"

I shook my head in disgust and whispered back, "She probably phoned him in."

New $2 Bill

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — Whose picture is on a $2 bill? Thomas Jefferson, the nation's third president, will be on one side of $400 million worth of $2 bills issued by the U.S. Treasury on April 13, Jefferson's birthday. A rendition of the famous Trumbull painting "The Signing of the Declaration of Independence" will be printed on the backside.

"They're gorgeous," said U.S. Treasurer Francine Irving Neff, whose signature will appear on the bills.

It will be a sort of bicentennial bill but I hope we'll use it forever," she said at a news conference Tuesday.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, JANUARY 16

Your birthday today: This year's goal is expansion. You are open to the world as never before. In commercial matters, exercise self-discipline since you tend to spend first. Then look to see what you're getting. Relationships become intense. Today's natives are militant and not very tactful, are practical, rather than spiritual.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: People contradict each other about anything. Stay uninvolved, help reconcile their bickering and coax them back to work. Share special entertainment with companions of similar taste.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Care of your health continues to be essential and requires new habits, diets and exercise. Wind up the workweek in normal fashion. Dodge some eager beaver's bright experiment.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Watch details. Resist efforts to persuade you to take less than your share. Don't fiddle; even brief travels takes time and is subject to detours.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Some moves are obvious and must be pursued for your own best interests. Counting and measuring are important. Extra expense is likely. No one is quite at ease under these circumstances.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Overstatements and generous promises are made all too blithely now; you'll have problems fulfilling them later. Set priorities and stick to them.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Business runs well, but watch your spending and sudden impulses to buy too far ahead. Home life is easily upset by temperamental moods and passing stress.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Settle accounts wherever possible and clear the way for future action. Push ahead with no additional frills or diversions. Conservative approaches work best.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Don't provoke conflicts or stimulate competition. Leave major decisions for a calmer time. Avoid local mix-ups. Travel during off-hours.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Overoptimism leads you into taking on more than is practical. If you can't get slowpokes to work, do the intellectual problems yourself. Groups suffer disagreement.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: You must now mesh your endeavors with those of others to produce some collective condition or constructive result. Personal plans are difficult to finance.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Attention to detail continues to be vital to success. Much that seems feasible in theory really isn't. Stop to think what you're doing and do the minimum to get by.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: You're naturally generous with people and enthusiastic about local situation. Remember your budget and spend and save accordingly, despite an urge to splurge.

PRICE REDUCTIONS STILLWATER, Okla. (UPI) — Watch out for exaggerated price reductions during seasonal inventories, clearance sales, stock reductions and similar promotions. Dorothy Blackwell, Oklahoma State University extension home management specialist says.

In most cases 25 to 40 per cent price reductions make the sale price close to the wholesale price, she said.

Claims of savings greater than this may involve merchandise which had been marked up higher than usual for retail sale or is less desirable because it is shopworn, obsolete or out-of-fashion, Mrs. Blackwell said. She said in some cases professional liquidators bring in merchandise inferior to that of the regular store inventory when a store is going out of business.

CLOSE DRAPES LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Floor-length drapes help prevent heat loss indoors if they are drawn about sunset, says Norm Teter, Extension agricultural engineer at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. Teter said the drapes help keep a convection current from being set up behind them to carry heat from the house through the windows after dark.

Houston Denies Wrong in Grain Scandal

(Editors note: This is the fourth in a series of five articles on corruption in the U.S. export grain industry. In this article, Texans declare themselves innocent of wrongdoing.)

By BRUCE E. HICKS
HOUSTON (UPI) — Baird Lee Sibley, a grain inspector for 25 years and chief inspector of the Houston Merchants Exchange for seven, describes himself as more embarrassed than nervous about the investigation of corruption in the Texas grain exporting industry.

"I think we inherited guilt from across the way in New Orleans," Sibley said. "If they have a problem over there, they need to clean it up. But why hurt us?"

"I think in Houston — and not just because I've been here for 25 years — the inspection department has done a fine job. I can't remember a complaint from overseas in the last 15 years, unless it's about weevils or something."

Sibley was understating the problem. The USDA said from 1971 to 1975, 26 countries lodged over 150 formal complaints that grain arriving was infested with bugs or other foreign matter and was of a poorer quality than contracted for. Of the 100 complaints which told where the grain was shipped from, 45 were from Texas ports and the bulk of those were from Houston.

The complaints do not prove wrongdoing because the shipments could have become contaminated in transit.

Investigation of the industry by five federal agencies began nearly two years ago in Louisiana and led to 52 indictments and 47 convictions.

It soon became apparent the Louisiana investigation was in its early stages and had expanded, in an equally large proportion, to Texas.

A federal grand jury in Houston indicted five inspectors — all employees of Sibley's Houston Merchant's Exchange — last March 25 on charges of accepting bribes totaling $5,350 from 1970 to 1974 from Capt. Victor Diaz who commanded grain ships owned by the New York-based Maritime Overseas Corp. Diaz claimed he bribed the inspectors to certify his ships clean and free of insects without an actual inspection.

The U.S. Attorney's office said Diaz became ill in New York and could not testify and so the trial was delayed.

"I've known those men for a long time and I believe they're innocent," said Frank Hemmen, Houston general manager of the Cargill, Inc., grain firm based in Minneapolis. "Why won't the government bring them to trial? That's the real story."

"I don't believe they're innocent," Sibley said.

Similar pleas of specific and general innocence for the Texas industry echo from the Sabine Pass in the north to Brownsville in the south.

Clarence Danysh, chief gain inspector for the Corpus Christi Grain Exchange responsible for all of Texas south of Houston, said: "We've had the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Office of Inspection. We've had the FBI. We've had the General Accounting Office. They've contacted every firm in South Texas and talked to them."

Asked whether illegalities had been discovered, Danysh replied: "No sir, not in South Texas that I know of. As far as quality, we've had, oh, maybe a couple of complaints from Russia about insects. Insects are a big problem and people in Russia say a lot of the stuff is infested. But it is infested in transit."

Ersel Lantz is operating officer for the Brownsville Board of Trade, a publicly owned corporation which hires grain weighers, who are bonded and licensed by the Texas Agriculture Department, and employs the Corpus Christi Grain Exchange to inspect grain.

He said Brownsville exports 21 to 22 million bushels of produce, most of it milled in the Rio Grande Valley. Ninety per cent of the exports are feed grain for animals.

"They (federal authorities) have increased the checking on every plane, I think as part of the result of this thing in New Orleans," Lantz said. "In our case, and as far as I know in Corpus Christi, they haven't found anything. There's been nobody even threatened with indictment here."

The strongest suspicions about the Texas grain exporting industry centers around the Port of Houston, the nation's third largest.

In New Orleans, the investigation had been underway for 15 months before the first indictments were returned. Further indictments — or a clean bill — are expected to be similarly slow in emerging in Texas.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Rene Gonzales told UPI a federal grand jury in Houston is investigating the industry and interviewed its first 17 witnesses late last year.

He said more witnesses may be called and, notwithstanding claims of innocence in the Lone Star State, the current panel and subsequent grand juries may remain occupied with the investigation stage of their duties for a year.

Patman Plans To Retire

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Wright Patman would stop swiveling in his high-backed chair and, his blue eyes shining, look down at William McChesney Martin. "Now, Mr. Martin," he would say, "about this conspiracy you admit to have entered into with the bankers..."

Patman could drag a grudge through a decade. His feud with Martin lasted from 1951 to 1970, when Martin retired as Federal Reserve chairman. Now Patman fights Arthur Burns, Martin's successor.

In 1928, the year Herbert Hoover was elected President,

Patman drove to Washington to take his seat in the House and fight the banks and their high-interest rate policies and the Federal Reserve System, which he calls "a wholly owned subsidiary of the American Bankers Association."

The fight is about to end. On Wednesday, in Texarkana, Tex., Patman, 82, announced he would not be a candidate for a 25th term in Congress.

His name has appeared on a Texas ballot every even-numbered year for half a century — and he has never lost. Only three men have served in Congress longer. Carl Hayden, D-Ariz., served for nearly 57 years in the House and Senate and, in the House, Carl Vinson, D-Ga., served 50 years, and Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., more than 49 years.

In his six-page statement, Patman gave no reason for retiring. But last January freshmen Democrats who were in diapers when Patman came to Congress took away his chairmanship of the House Banking Committee.

The freshmen said he had refused to answer their questions sensibly. To them, he was something of a crank, with funny money theories. Typically, Patman blamed pressure from big banks for his loss.

Before Richard Nixon's reelection in 1972, Patman tried to investigate the source of the money which financed the Watergate break-in. Republicans and southern Democrats on Patman's committee refused to give him subpoena power. The investigation died.

Patman looks like anyone's grandfather. Potbellied, he walks with a bowlegged gait, but swiftly. In the most innocent, reasoned voice, he asks outraged questions.

His life's work has been to bring the Federal Reserve, created in the Woodrow Wilson administration, under congressional scrutiny and influence. The Fed, with governors appointed for 14-year terms, is independent of political direction.

It dictates money supply, which helps fix interest rates, which, in Patman's view, determine whether the farmer's and cafe owners and carpenters who live around Texarkana will or will not prosper.

For the last decade or so, Patman has been backing a bill under which the General Accounting Office, an arm of Congress, would audit the Federal Reserve.

Last September, even though Patman had 120 cosponsors, the House Rules Committee voted 8-6 to shelve the bill. Patman is seeking to revive it before he goes back to Texarkana.

Soliah Free on Bail

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Despite the judge's reluctance, accused bank robber Steven Soliah, a San Francisco house painter who was living with Patricia Hearst at the time of her capture, was free on $100,000 bail today.

Soliah, charged in the Symbionese Liberation Army-linked $15,000 robbery in which the mother of four children was shot to death, said, "I want to be vindicated as soon as possible." He has spent nearly four months in jail.

Soliah was released on bail Wednesday when Miss Hearst was appearing in court in San Francisco for the first time since her kidnaping by the SLA nearly two years ago.

U.S. District Judge Philip Wilkins said he had no choice but to permit Soliah's release on bail under the federal Speedy Trial Act. He blistered prosecutors for delaying the case and forcing the move.

Soliah, 27, shared an apartment with Miss Hearst and was taken into custody shortly after her capture Sept. 18. He refused Wednesday to answer reporters' questions about his relationship with the newspaper heiress or whether he was a member of the SLA.

"I'm glad to be out of jail," the pale and drawn defendant said. "I'd like to thank all my friends for helping me out."

"I think it's unfortunate the prosecution is delaying my trial. I want to be vindicated as soon as possible."

Soliah also said the prosecutors' request for a delay in his trial until Feb. 23, a move that prompted reduction of his $250,000 bail, showed "they obviously have problems with their case." The trial was to begin next Tuesday.

Soliah is accused of participating in the April 21 robbery of a branch of the Crocker-National Bank in Carmichael, Calif. During the holdup, Myrna Opsahl, 42, was killed by a shotgun blast from one of the four robbers.

The judge granted Soliah's release after approving a motion by prosecutors to delay the trial because their star witness, bank teller Kathleen James, is pregnant and medical complications will prevent her from testifying until after the birth of her baby in February.

Officials To Attend Meeting

Mayor R.D. Wilkerson, Public Works Director R.B. Cooke and Street Superintendent Gene Winegeart will attend a quarterly meeting of Texas Municipal League Region II in Amarillo Thursday night.

The City of Tulia will host the meeting scheduled for 6:30 p.m. in the Holiday Inn East.

Danny Deanda Found Guilty

A Gray County Court jury Wednesday found Danny Deanda, 23, of Pampa guilty of charges of possession of marijuana under two ounces.

Judge Don Cain said judgment of the court would be a $250 fine and 180 days probation term. Court costs are $53 and probation fees are $10 monthly.

Formal sentencing will be at a later date in the Deanda case.

In other action Tuesday in county court, Judge Cain fined Debra Winters Chapman, 22, of Pampa $300 and court costs on charges of possession of marijuana. She was granted a 180-day probation term. She pleaded guilty to the charge.

Jubilee Set For McLean

A Derbytown Jubilee is set for 7:30 p.m. on Saturday, Jan. 24, at the McLean High School Auditorium in McLean.

The jubilee is sponsored by the McLean Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA), a high school organization.

George Terry will serve as master of ceremonies for the jubilee.

Persons interested in participating as a performer in the event may contact Terry at Terry's Appliance in McLean for additional information.

One of the oldest social clubs in Atlanta, Ga., was founded in Jan., 1887, as the Gentlemen's Driving Club, largely for the use of young men who owned horses but had no place to ride them.

Cyclamates Cleared

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A government advisory panel has tossed the cyclamate controversy back to the Food and Drug Administration by concluding there is insufficient evidence to label the once-popular artificial sweetener as a cancer causer.

But the six scientists declined to clear cyclamates of all suspicion. They said tests so far have not been good enough to rule out the possibility the substance once consumed by millions of Americans may be a very weak cancer-causing agent.

"Science today is just not good enough to answer the question to everyone's satisfaction," said the committee chairman, Dr. Arnold Brown of the Mayo Medical School, Rochester, Minn.

Abbott Laboratories, which produced cyclamates before they were banned by the FDA in 1969 because of cancer suspicions, said the committee report "should lead to the early availability of cyclamate to the U.S. consumer."

"We see no valid scientific reason for the FDA to delay further," said Abbott vice president Richard Kasperson.

After the committee issued a similar preliminary report last month, FDA commissioner Alexander Schmidt said he was not happy with sentiment to the effect there was a possibility cyclamates may be a weak cancer-causing agent.

"I'm looking for a clean bill of health, not a wishy-washy, iffy answer on cyclamates," he said.

The panel agreed in its final report that 20 animal tests conducted around the world on cyclamates were not sensitive enough to detect small increases of cancer that might be caused by the substance.

Judge May Close Prisons

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — A federal judge has ruled that bring in an Alabama prison is "cruel and unusual punishment" and promised to close them unless the state brings them up to the standards he outlined.

U.S. District Judge Frank Johnson Jr. delivered the decision Tuesday and set down a long list of specific standards that must be met.

The judge gave the state until Dec. 15 to bring two major prisons up to the standards and an additional year to bring two others into compliance.

"The living conditions in Alabama prisons constitute cruel and unusual punishment," Johnson said in his ruling.

The director of the Alabama Civil Liberties Union, one of the groups that pressed the prisoner suits that led to the ruling, estimated it could take $100 million to comply with the order and said Gov. George Wallace was to blame for the prison conditions.

State house speaker Joe McCorquodale said it was "highly possible" the state would be unable to comply with the order and would have to close the prisons and release the inmates.

Wallace declined immediate comment. The state's lawyer in the case said no decision had been made on whether to appeal.

Johnson said a lack of funds would not be an adequate excuse for failure to comply.

The order set minimum standards for virtually every area of prison operation, from the number of postage stamps that must be given each inmate to the number of toilets required.

He ordered the number of guards to be more than doubled in an effort to end homosexual rapes and other assaults witnesses said were common. He said only minimum security prisoners could be assigned to dormitories, while others must be confined to cells.

Graduates Have Few Marketable Skills

By PATRICIA MCCORMACK
UPI Education Editor

Add to the "why can't" chants directed at the schoolhouse: "Why can't Johnny or Janie get a job?"

Parents and the public join Johnny and Janie in bewilderment over affairs upon graduation: Few marketable skills and little or no preparation for work. That is, after 12 years of exposure to the costliest education in the nation's history.

The gap between schooling and a fairly good job is the biggest in education.

The "career education" movement aims to help by putting education into closer alignment with the work world.

Schooling, as currently structured, best meets the needs of the minority — those who someday will graduate from college. So say education critics.

The other students fall between the cracks. Once out, they must guide themselves the sink-or-swim way.

Getting on a good job track is as much a matter of luck as anything, unless such graduates have friends or relatives to open doors for them.

The National Advisory Council for Career Education, after studying the problem, thinks it has the bare bones outline of a solution—have the government shovel millions of dollars into a greatly expanded program of career education.

The Council's Interim Report with Recommendations for Legislation was issued a while back over the signature of Dr. Sidney P. Marland Jr., chairman. He is the father of the contemporary career education movement.

Marland, president of the College Entrance Examination Board, got the movement rolling while U.S. Commissioner of Education.

The council, established by Public Law 93-380 in 1974 and first assembled in April of 1975, is charged by Congress with two general tasks:

— To assess, monitor and report upon the condition of career education as a reform movement in the United States.

— To recommend to Congress appropriate legislation for the furtherance of career education.

The council is composed of educators, school board members, federal education office authorities, representatives from many areas of the world of work.

It recommended plans calling for federal assistance of nearly $90 million a year to help the state and local school systems.

The money would fund broader state plans, pay for state coordinators, train teachers and counselors and fund jobs for local career coordinators.

Some $8 million would purchase training for the coordinators. Around $6 million would go for instructional materials.

"One of the central themes of career education... in state plans is the involvement of industry, labor and business in the process of education," the council said in its report.

The U.S. Office of Education's collection of "exciting and innovative" examples of career education practices, includes the following:

— A ninth grade course in social economics, in Riverton, Wyo., involves students in setting up a company, deciding on a product to produce, selling stock, producing and marketing the product and using advertising and sales techniques.

— The New Orleans Center for the Creative Arts is providing both career exploration and skill development opportunities for highly talented students in the visual and performing arts.

— The County Alliance for Career Education and Industry Education Councils of Los Angeles represent more than 100 groups in business, industry, government and labor unions.

The Alliance sponsors work experience, observation, and work-study activities for students. It also sponsors Career Expo for students—a kind of career fair. The Personnel Exchange Program allows teachers and counselors to explore work, gaining hands-on experience of different work than teaching.

— A job development program in Cleveland, Ohio, for non-college bound seniors covers job preparation, field trips to places of work and spring interviews with employers.

'Gov Regulation Poor'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said Wednesday the government is doing such a poor job of regulation that a relatively minor economic setback could "conceivably" force the failure of some of the nation's largest banks.

Proxmire, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, placed the blame on the federal government's three regulating agencies—the Comptroller of the Currency, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the Federal Reserve Board.

"The problem is there are three supervisory agencies," Proxmire said in an interview on the CBS Morning News. "They are all competing to see if they can get more banks under their jurisdiction."

Mrs. Freeman Talks About Colonial Trees

A bicentennial program on "Colonial to Contemporary Foliage" was presented by Mrs. Carlton Freeman, National Life Judge of Texas Garden Clubs, at a recent meeting of the Pampa Garden Club.

Mrs. Freeman traced the history of several tree foliages, including the mulberry used in the colonial silk industry and the apple trees of the mid 1800's, when some 128 varieties of apple were displayed at a horticultural meeting.

She reported that the Texas bluebonnet and some other wild flowers from as far away as Palestine came to Texas by the Padre and his mission. Mrs. Freeman listed unusual vines, hanging baskets and a variety of ferns as popular contemporary foliages.

A soil-less potting mixture for houseplants listed by the speaker includes vermiculite, peat moss, perlite, small amounts of egg shell and epsom salts (for lime and magnesium, respectively), mixed with a slow-release fertilizer.

The next meeting will be at 9:15 a.m. Monday in the Flame Room with a program on red plantings, the first in series on red, white, and blue plantings.

Cappy Dick Winners Told

Winners of sets of three Super Bounce Balls offered as the local prizes in Cappy Dick's gold coins puzzle contest published in the comic section Sunday, Dec. 21, are:

Donnie Ledbetter, 9, and Ronnie Ledbetter, 12, 641 N. Wells; Angie Bailey, 10, 1943 Grape; Kristy Hutchinson, 6, 211 N. Ward; Melissa Crossman, 10, 1009 E. Kingsmill; John Freeman, 11, 909 Fisher; Timothy Anderson, 9, 2123 Beech; Terry Scobee, 11, 814 E. Browning; James Tucker, 9, 1037 Huff Rd., and Ginger Woodard, 11, R. 1, Box 81, Pampa.

Winners of the national grand prizes in the same contest are Christine Breen, 10, Brookline, Mass.; Davis Nelson, 12, Lewisville, Tex.; Kathleen McCabe, 11, Davenport, Iowa; Lori Chorazewitz, 7, Dayton, Ohio; Mike Procter, 11, Hessville, Ind.; Ann Vassil, 9, Lancaster, Pa.; Ellen Mayo, 11, Westhampton Beach, N.Y.; Brenda Evans, 12, McRae, Ga.; Jerry Lucas, 10, Omaha, Neb.; and Mike Wagner, 11, St. Louis, Mo. Each will receive a Pogo Stick.

All the winners will receive their prizes by mail.

"The banks move into the jurisdiction of the agency that does the softest, easiest job of supervision and this kind of competition and laxity has resulted in the weak supervision."

"We are very concerned now about the biggest banks in the country because what we have found is that the 10 biggest banks in the country have the thinnest capital in relationship to their liabilities. A relatively limited economic setback could result, conceivably, in the failure of some of these banks."

Proxmire has proposed a bill to consolidate the three bank regulatory agencies into one agency.

The Washington Post reported today that New York's First National City Bank, the nation's second largest bank, had on deposit $1.7 billion from the government of Kuwait—approximately $1 out of every $25 it has on deposit.

The Post said federal bank examiners expressed concern last year that the oil-rich Kuwaitis could adversely affect Citibank by withdrawing their money. They also questioned whether such a nation could

"pressure" the bank by using large deposits as "leverage."

Big Bird

MCALLEN, Tex. (UPI) — A radio station has offered a $1,000 reward for the capture of the elusive "Big Bird" rumored for two months to have been gliding around South Texas terrifying citizens and police.

"We'd like for somebody to bring it into the studios alive so we can dispel all the rumors about it," a spokesman for KRIO said Tuesday. "One guy saw it and said whatever it was, it was not of this earth and statements like that."

"So we'd like to find out one way or the other so we'd like the creature brought in alive."

Two policemen at San Benito said they saw it several days ago and the bird had a wingspan of 15 feet. A Harlingen television station photographed three-toed bird prints in a newly plowed field it said were nine inches wide and 12 inches long.

Reports of sightings of the bird have come since November from a South Texas area from Robstown to Brownsville to Rio Grande City.

Schramm Looking Proud

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — Tex Schramm had the look of a proud papa watching his kids cavort in the playground.

The sun was shining and Schramm was dressed like any other business executive who had made a quick dash to Florida for a brief winter respite.

The Dallas Cowboys' president and general manager was decked in a pair of light blue slacks, wore a soft cotton shirt with the Super Bowl X emblem on it and he had donned a pair of sunglasses.

Across the way members of the team were posing for photographers and throwing footballs around.

"All of this gives us all a tremendous feeling of pride," said Schramm, who was selected in 1960 by Cowboys owner Clint Murchison as the man he wanted to build the expansion franchise.

"It's always a tremendous excitement to come to the Super Bowl, but it is doubly so when you didn't expect to be here in the first place.

"Of course we always strive for that goal. But realistically you would have to say this is a large surprise because we have lost 27 of the players who brought us to the Super Bowl just four years ago.

"This season we have blended youth and experience. The youthful enthusiasm has brought a new vigor to our football team and that permeated to the veterans.

"This brought about a character to our football team that does not always happen in professional football."

Schramm's organization is the envy of the NFL. Dallas has been in the Super Bowl playoffs nine of the past ten seasons which is proof enough the Cowboys have some idea of what is going on.

"You have got to have an organization, good coaches and good players," Schramm said. "You must have all three. There are teams that have two of those and still don't make it very far."

It was Schramm who hired coach Tom Landry 16 years ago and with the retirement of Paul Brown at Cincinnati, Landry has become the dean of NFL coaches.

"Tom has been the victim of his own success," Schramm said. "He has never received all the credit he deserves as coach."

"When you have good football teams you are supposed to win. And that is what people expected of us for years. This year he is receiving some of the recognition because our team, was not expected to make it this far."

"But after defeating Washington, Minnesota and Los Angeles I think we have proved we are the best team in the NFC."

One of the best rivalries in the history of the NFL is the current series of battles between Washington and Dallas and members of the Cowboys front office look upon this as a confrontation of philosophies as much as a struggle of individual players.

Dallas has built its team through the draft — only running back Preston Pearson and former WFL linebacker Warren Capone have ever played for another pro team.

"That was my philosophy when I came to Dallas," Schramm said, "because that is what we did when I was general manager at Los Angeles and it worked well there."

"And we were very fortunate to have started with a coach who embraced that philosophy."

"In the early years of the Cowboys we did not win that many games, but we never thought about changing our approach. We could see progress every season."

"When we started we had to look at the long range instead of immediate goals. And I think it is clear that paid off."

West Texas State's athletic program is going through a financial crisis, according to Jim Campbell, business manager of the university's athletic department, who addresses Pampa boosters of WT sports at the Coronado Inn. The deficit, although not as bad as in previous years (the athletic program lost $302,000 in 1970, its first year in the Missouri Valley Conference), can be corrected through individuals' contributions, says Campbell. A $1 donation gives a person membership in the Buffalo Club.

NCAA Delegates Defeat TV Profit-Sharing Plan

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Delegates to the third annual special NCAA convention Wednesday approved only three items and defeated a plan to distribute television profits to all football playing members.

The delegates completed business on the agenda of the special convention, which was a continuation of the summer meeting called to deal with economic troubles. The 70th annual NCAA convention opens today.

The special session approved a proposal eliminating scoring, except in basketball in Division I, where one scouting trip per opponent will be allowed. The delegates also eliminated Division III spring football unless the Executive Council grants an exemption and prohibited schools from providing travel clothing for athletes.

Among the items defeated was the addition of a 12th football game. Most of the 79 items on the agenda were tabled.

Walter Byers, executive director of the NCAA, said, "Measures are being tabled because I feel many members feel there are too many regulations on a national level, and there just isn't enough dollar savings to warrant additional ones."

Stephen Horn, president of Long Beach State who sponsored the television plan, also sponsored a proposal to divide profits from postseason football games to all NCAA institutions, but the plan for the bowl money was ruled out of order. NCAA President Dr. John Fuzak of Michigan State said the association does not have the power to control the income from football games which are merely sanctioned by the NCAA but not operated by it.

Horn's television plan, overwhelmingly defeated in a show of hands, would have provided that teams in televised games would receive 15 per cent of the net proceeds with Division I football schools dividing 50 per cent of the remaining proceeds and Divisions II and III getting 25 per cent each. The NCAA television committee, represented by Seaver Peters of Dartmouth, opposed the plan.

"If this proposal would have been adopted, it would have marked the end of control over college football on television," he said. "The major institutions which make this series possible would have refused to participate, and that would have made the plan unmarketable."

Executive Council Secretary Stan Marshall of South Dakota State — smaller schools must realize "those members who play the strongest football and basketball schedules have gone a long way in supporting the 700 members. Sixty-five per cent of the funding for this association comes from these schools."

C. D. Henry, assistant commissioner of the Big Ten and former Grambling official, brought a chuckle from the delegates with his stand on Horn's proposal.

"It's hard to expect to get anything from television unless you deserve it," he said. "I wouldn't expect it anymore than I expect to be getting welfare and food stamps when I get back home."

Ellis Back in Lineup

Pampa Hosts Elk City In Non-Conference Tilt

Pampa, coming off its best rebounding effort of the season, will have even more help on the boards as 6-6 post Winslow Ellis returns to the lineup when the Harvesters host Elk City, Okla., at 7:45 p.m. today.

The varsity contest will be preceded by the B-team game between the schools, who meet at 6 p.m.

Ellis suffered a broken left arm Dec. 12 against Liberal and has not been able to play since. He won't start yet, according to Coach Robert McPherson, but the big junior is expected to see playing time today.

Pampa, 15-3 for the season, has done all right without Ellis, having won five of the seven games in which he has been out. In a 60-44 win over Perryton last week, Pampa outrebounded the Rangers 55-36.

"I thought we played a super defensive ball game," McPherson said, "and we rebounded as well as any team we've ever had here. We rebounded super."

Six-2 guard Brian Bailey and 6-1 forward Jewell Landers each pulled down 15 rebounds, while 6-4 post Donnie Hughes, Pampa's tallest player besides Ellis, grabbed 14.

"You can't get much better than that," added the Harvesters coach.

"Brian played a super ball game — it's one of his best. He graded out a plus-32, and any time you get into the 30's you've had a super ball game."

McPherson is glad to see Ellis back, especially since the Harvesters have only three non-conference games left before district play starts a week from Friday against Amarillo Caprock.

"You bet, I'm glad. He had a real fine practice Monday. He didn't favor his arm at all."

The defense is, right now, the strongest phase of Pampa's game. The Harvesters are yielding an average of just 48.2 points per game, the best statistic among District 3-AAAA teams.

"We have three games left in non-conference," McPherson said, "and I think we're playing real well. The defensive effort against Perryton was probably the best defensive effort we had all year."

"It was just an intensified effort, relentless. They just stayed after it for 37 minutes. Perryton has improved a bunch. They played probably as well as they've played all year."

McPherson hopes that Pampa will not suffer a mental letdown against Elk City, a double-A school with an 8-5 record.

"They have a real good shooting ball club. They beat our jayvee's (the Shockers) by 31 and they could have beat them worse."

Elk City is led by 6-1 senior forward Randy Lewallen, who McPherson calls "one of the best shooters we'll face all year. A fantastic shooter."

Lewallen, held to eight points in Elk City's 60-50 loss to Woodward, Okla., Tuesday, is averaging 17 points and 12 rebounds. Other starters (with point and rebound averages in parentheses) are 6-3 senior post Steve Williams (six, nine), 6-2 junior forward Clemmie Branch (10, 11), 5-10 junior guard Eddie Savage (five, two) and 6-1 senior guard Bobby Rainey (eight, three).

Pampa starters are Hughes (13.6, 8.9), Bailey (12.1, 6.2), Landers (5.9, 8.0), 6-1 forward Richard Lane (8.3, 4.3) and 5-10 guard Pee Wee Steele (2.0, 4).

Guards Rayford Young and Forrest Taylor should also see action. Young is scoring at an 8.7 clip.

Elk City Coach Richard O'Hara expects his team to have its hands full against the Harvesters.

"I've heard a few things about them. They have real good guards, they play well as a team and they're hard to beat out there."

"We were playing well up till about a week ago. We were 7-2 and we went to the Clinton Tournament and lost to a couple of three-A schools. And we lost to Woodward last night (Tuesday)," O'Hara said.

"If we don't play a little better, we're not going to be ready for our state tournament. I don't know what's wrong. We're just not hitting as well as we have and we're making too many mistakes to beat the good teams."

"Lewallen has done pretty well at times but last night he didn't. He's a streak player — he has hot and cold nights and he's not as steady as I'd like him to be."

The Pampa junior varsity is 13-3 for the season and coming off a 55-50 overtime win over Perryton.

Tech Triumphs Over Texas

By United Press International
Texas Tech triumphed in its first close Southwest Conference game this season Wednesday night, and coach Gerald Myers says that's the kind of experience the Red Raiders needed to get ready for Texas A&M.

Surprisingly the Raiders' close game came against Texas, which has lost all four of its SWC games this season.

Tech jumped to an early lead and maintained a four-to-six point margin throughout most of the second half, but Texas cut it to one and two points on several occasions before Tech finally won 67-61.

Rick Bullock's 32 points and 17 rebounds paced Tech in a game marred by four technical fouls, including two against Myers.

"It was a tough defensive game and real physical," said Myers. "We had to fight all night. Both teams were aggressive. We hung in there when it got tough."

"I wasn't sure how we would react after three games which were not close. I was pleased with our performance."

SMU Betting on Rogers

DALLAS (UPI) — San Jose State coach Darryl Rogers is the man Southern Methodist University officials hope can return the football program to a winning record and financial success.

SMU President James H. Zumberge said Wednesday Rogers has been offered the job and will come to Dallas Friday to "work out a satisfactory contractual arrangement."

Zumberge said an announcement of Rogers hiring is expected by the weekend.

Rogers' team was 9-2 last season and won the Pacific Coast Athletic Association title with a 5-0 record. Rogers went to San Jose from Fresno State in 1973. He has a 22-9 record at San Jose and that first year brought the Spartans their first winning season in 12 years. He had a 43-33 record at Fresno.

Rogers faces a number of problems at SMU where football attendance has declined steadily in recent years.

Dave Smith was forced to resign the SMU head coaching job last month after his team finished a 4-7 season. In Smith's three years the Mustangs were 16-15-2. During Smith's term, the NCAA investigated SMU several times and put the school on probation for payoffs to special team members.

The NCAA recently completed another investigation into SMU athletics because of reports of a monetary offer to a Dallas high school player. The results of that investigation have not been announced.

"We were convinced Darryl Rogers was a man who could produce a very successful program in intercollegiate football at SMU," Zumberge said of the selection procedure that began with a six-coach list. "I have every reason to believe that Darryl Rogers is as interested in Southern Methodist University as we are in him."

Rogers visited the SMU campus last week and was one of only two coaches to do so. The other was former Kansas City Chiefs coach Hank Stram who is expected to become the new coach of the New Orleans Saints.

Sources indicated other coaches on the list compiled by SMU's selection committee included Lou Holtz of North Carolina State, George Welsh of Navy and Johnny Majors of Pittsburgh.

According to SMU's associate athletic director, Jim Brock, the job was offered to "two biggies," presumably Stram and Majors, who rejected it.

"If he (Rogers) doesn't accept it," Brock said, "I don't know where we'll turn."

"Our program needs some instant recognition. We need a guy who people can identify with automatically as a successful coach. That's the biggest problem we face."

American League Says It Will Expand in '77

PHOENIX (UPI) — The American League, which twice before tried to settle its problems by expanding, is on the verge of doing it again.

American League club owners Friday adopted a recommendation of the combined franchise committee, headed by M. Donald Grant of the New York Mets, and voted to expand to 13 teams in 1977 with Seattle its choice. National League owners, busy trying to extricate themselves from the mess surrounding the San Francisco Giants franchise, left expansion alone at the meeting in Phoenix.

"I think there is some sentiment in our league to expand," said Grant, "but whether or not there is enough to put the idea over now, I'm not at liberty to say."

The American League is hoping the N.L. will decide to expand by granting into Washington, D.C., which twice lost American League teams to other cities.

Buffaloes Solicit Here

By PAUL SIMS

Things are looking up for the West Texas State athletic program but it's going to take more than a winning basketball team to keep Buffalo sports from operating in the red any longer.

That was the summation of Jim Campbell, business manager of West Texas State's athletic department, who addressed a group of West Texas State supporters this morning at the Coronado Inn.

Campbell reported that $125,000 must be raised by May 1.

"We have until May 1 to have in the bank or in West Texas State's hand $125,000. If we do not, they will cut our budget more. We've cut it about as far as we can. If we cut any more, it'll jeopardize the athletic program," Campbell said.

He listed several examples of areas that have been cut, including the salaries of the sports information director and secretaries and $21,750 in football travel expenses. Campbell added that trimming expenses alone won't solve WT's financial problems, which recently have raised questions of whether the university would leave the NCAA, become independent instead of competing in the Missouri Valley Conference or drop certain sports.

Contributions from area individuals are the main source of athletic funds. The West Texas State Buffalo Club, the only fund-raising organization for the athletic department, is comprised of individuals who have donated at least $1. If a person donates $250, he receives a plaque.

Campbell's stop in Pampa and visits to other Panhandle cities are an effort to add to the membership of the Buffalo Club and to increase the contributions of those who are already members.

"The Buffalo Club contributes the least amount of money of any club in the Missouri Valley Conference," Campbell said.

Which is in line with the school's athletic budget of $686,000, the smallest in the conference. The next closest is New Mexico State, which has a budget of $1,050,000. The largest budget is Wichita State's figure of $1,420,000, more than twice that of West Texas State's.

The average cost of a scholarship is $1,250. WT currently gives 110 scholarships, compared to 130 by New Mexico State and 200 by Wichita State.

"Our deficit this year was projected to be $150,000 roughly," Campbell said. "I think that, with the success of the basketball season, the deficit will be closer to $120,000."

The basketball program was expected to lose $23,000 prior to the season. It has made money and probably will earn $3,000 by the time the season ends.

The Buffalo basketball team has a 10-1 record and is ranked 19th in the country by both the Associated Press and United Press International.

Next Thursday's Amarillo Civic Center Coliseum contest against Louisville is already listed as a sellout. Over 4,000 fans are expected for tonight's home game against untouted Chicago State and an even bigger crowd is anticipated for Tuesday's game against conference foe Bradley.

Basketball can't do it alone, though, said Campbell.

Persons interested in joining the Buffalo Club may write Box 49, WT Station, Canyon, (Tex.), 79016. Contributions must be received by May 1.

Ellis Back in Lineup Pampa Hosts Elk City In Non-Conference Tilt

Pampa, coming off its best rebounding effort of the season, will have even more help on the boards as 6-6 post Winslow Ellis returns to the lineup when the Harvesters host Elk City, Okla., at 7:45 p.m. today.

The varsity contest will be preceded by the B-team game between the schools, who meet at 6 p.m.

Ellis suffered a broken left arm Dec. 12 against Liberal and has not been able to play since. He won't start yet, according to Coach Robert McPherson, but the big junior is expected to see playing time today.

Pampa, 15-3 for the season, has done all right without Ellis, having won five of the seven games in which he has been out. In a 60-45 win over Perryton last week, Pampa outrebounded the Rangers 55-36.

"I thought we played a super defensive ball game," McPherson said, "and we rebounded as well as any team we've ever had here. We rebounded super."

Six-two guard Brian Bailey and 6-1 forward Jewell Landers each pulled down 15 rebounds, while 6-4 post Donnie Hughes, Pampa's tallest player besides Ellis, grabbed 14.

"You can't get much better than that," added the Harvesters coach.

"Brian played a super ball game — it's one of his best. He graded out a plus-32, and any time you get into the 30's you've had a super ball game."

McPherson is glad to see Ellis back, especially since the Harvesters have only three non-conference games left before district play starts a week from Friday against Amarillo Caprock.

"You bet, I'm glad. He had a real fine practice Monday. He didn't favor his arm at all."

The defense is, right now, the strongest phase of Pampa's game. The Harvesters are yielding an average of just 48.2 points per game, the best statistic among District 3-AAAA teams.

"We have three games left in non-conference," McPherson said, "and I think we're playing real well. The defensive effort against Perryton was probably the best defensive effort we had all year."

"It was just an intensified effort, relentless. They just stayed after it for 37 minutes. Perryton has improved a bunch. They played probably as well as they've played all year."

McPherson hopes that Pampa will not suffer a mental letdown against Elk City, a double-A school with an 8-5 record.

"They have a real good shooting ball club. They beat our jayvee's (the Shockers) by 31 and they could have beat them worse."

Elk City is led by 6-1 senior forward Randy Lewallen, who McPherson calls "one of the best shooters we'll face all year. A fantastic shooter."

Lewallen, held to eight points in Elk City's 60-50 loss to Woodward, Okla., Tuesday, is averaging 17 points and 12 rebounds. Other starters (with point and rebound averages in parentheses) are 6-3 senior post Steve Williams (10, 11), 5-10 junior guard Eddie Savage (five, two) and 6-1 senior guard Bobby Rainey (eight, three).

Pampa starters are Hughes (13.6, 8.9), Bailey (12.1, 6.2), Landers (5.9, 8.0), 6-1 forward Richard Lane (8.3, 4.3) and 5-10 guard Pee Wee Steele (2.0, 4).

Guards Rayford Young and Forrest Taylor should also see action. Young is scoring at an 8.7 clip.

Elk City Coach Richard O'Hara expects his team to have its hands full against the Harvesters.

"I've heard a few things about them. They have real good guards, they play well as a team and they're hard to beat out there."

"We were playing well up till about a week ago. We were 7-2 and we went to the Clinton Tournament and lost to a couple of three-A schools. And we lost to Woodward last night (Tuesday)," O'Hara said.

"If we don't play a little better, we're not going to be ready for our state tournament. I don't know what's wrong. We're just not hitting as well as we have and we're making too many mistakes to beat the good teams."

"Lewallen has done pretty well at times but last night he didn't. He's a streak player — he has hot and cold nights and he's not as steady as I'd like him to be."

The Pampa junior varsity is 13-3 for the season and coming off a 55-50 overtime win over Perryton.

Tech Triumphs Over Texas

By United Press International

Texas Tech triumphed in its first close Southwest Conference game this season Wednesday night, and coach Gerald Myers says that's the kind of experience the Red Raiders needed to get ready for Texas A&M.

Surprisingly the Raiders' close game came against Texas, which has lost all four of its SWC games this season.

Tech jumped to an early lead and maintained a four to six point margin throughout most of the second half, but Texas cut it to one and two points on several occasions before Tech finally won 67-61.

Rick Bullock's 32 points and 17 rebounds paced Tech in a game marred by four technical fouls, including two against Myers.

"It was a tough defensive game and real physical," said Myers. "We had to fight all night. Both teams were aggressive. We hung in there when it got tough."

"I wasn't sure how we would react after three games which were not close. I was pleased with our performance."

SMU Betting on Rogers

DALLAS (UPI) — San Jose State coach Darryl Rogers is the man Southern Methodist University officials hope can return their football program to a winning record and financial success.

SMU President James H. Zumberge said Wednesday Rogers, has been offered the job and will come to Dallas Friday to "work out a satisfactory contractual arrangement."

Zumberge said an announcement of Rogers hiring is expected by the weekend.

Rogers' team was 9-2 last season and won the Pacific Coast Athletic Association title

Texas Judge Takes Hard Line on Gun Toters

HOUSTON (UPI) — Offenders convicted of illegally carrying a pistol or drunk drivers causing serious accidents find a brand of frontier justice in Judge Charles M. Coussons' criminal court.

Render justice swiftly and make it tough, says the newcomer to the county's criminal court system.

"The maximum penalty is a year in jail for illegally carrying a pistol. I am not receiving pleas for less than 30 days," the soft-spoken Lufkin, Tex., native said recently.

"I thought the penalties were too low and justice was not being served."

Coussons, appointed to the bench last week, revealed his hard line policy in a memorandum to lawyers defending cases in his court and to the district attorney's office.

The judge said he will consider each case individually, but his policy will be strict punishment — with no exceptions in pistol cases. Carrying a gun openly is not in all instances illegal but it easily can be, and if brought before Coussons' court will mean at least month in jail for the bearer.

"You have to consider the greatest good for the greatest number of people," he said. "People should realize pistols are not play things."

"I have no objection to ownership of firearms as long as they are confined to home or a recreational home. However, carrying a pistol on your person can lead to trouble for either the person carrying the gun or another person."

"If a person is in a small fist fight and has a pistol available, he would likely reach for it — where he would not, if he didn't have one," he said. "People just aren't trained enough to use a pistol for their own defense."

The judge has equal disdain for drunk drivers. "Anything that can be done to alleviate that (the high incidence of alcohol-related accidents) would be in the public interest," he said.

He plans to assess 30-day jail terms in pistol cases and will not grant probation to drunk drivers who cause serious accidents. Otherwise, drunk drivers can expect a stiff fine and jail time.

Some attorneys think Coussons' position may make it difficult for him to achieve a second goal he has set for himself — to bring all cases to trial in 90 days.

"I think it will actually speed up the docket," Coussons said. "People will plead guilty if they know there is a swiftness of a trial and a certainty of trial."

"Sixty days is the American Bar Association standard for trial and it is certainly going to be my standard and I am going to see to it." In his first week Coussons had as many as three jury trials a day and ultimately plans to dispose of 50 cases a day through pleas.

About 90 per cent of the cases in the county are handled through plea bargaining, where prosecutors and defense lawyers work out an acceptable punishment for a guilty or no contest plea.

O'Rourke Says Government Stereotypes Texans as Rich

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — A Railroad Commission candidate says the state's energy problems are being ignored by Congress because the government has stereotyped Texas as being full of wealthy oil tycoons.

Houston attorney Terence O'Rourke, who filed for the post at Democratic party headquarters Tuesday by taking in $1,000 in two oil barrels, said the nation's oil policy was unfair to Texas.

worst of all worlds. We in Texas are paying more for less."

He said federal price fixing schemes would not remedy energy problems. What the nation needed was energy. O'Rourke said, not talk from Washington politicians.

He said the legislature should increase taxes on oil shipped out of state because Boston was paying less for Texas natural gas than Texas cities.

"They're not paying their share of the burden right now," O'Rourke said.

O'Rourke said he had broad-based support in the state and that he considered himself a candidate for all of Texas — not just a specific representative of consumers or industry.

He said because of federal regulations, Texas received $5.25 per barrel of crude oil for most of the state's production while oil produced by the Arabs costs Americans $12 per barrel.

"Texas needs a railroad commissioner who will fight the efforts to sabotage the natural resources of this state and who will be an effective advocate for Texas' interests in Washington," O'Rourke said.

"Essentially, we are unrepresented in Washington on vital energy issues. We're getting the WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Trade Commission says a false advertising suit against the makers of Geritol, a non-prescription preparation, has led to a history-making $280,000 remedy.

The FTC won its largest civil penalty ever in an out-of-court settlement in connection with nine Geritol television commercials in 1969.

The previous record judgment in civil penalties for false advertising totaled $150,000 assessed against W.T. Grant Co. involving federal truth-in-lending legislation last year.

The FTC said the J.B. Williams Co. of New York had been ordered to stop claiming Geritol or any similar preparation helped relieve tiredness, loss of strength, rundown feelings or irritability without also saying that iron-deficiency anemia is not usually the cause

Capitol Dome Gold Going Down Drain

DENVER (UPI) — One lawmaker joked about staking a claim under the drainpipes of the Colorado Capitol, but state Sen. Hugh Fowler doesn't think it's a laughing matter to see the 250 ounces of gold adorning the impressive Capitol dome going down the drain.

Time and weather are eroding the gold from the dome and legislators are going to have to act quickly if they want to save the precious metal, said Fowler, R-Littleton.

Fowler said he would prepare legislation to create a Capitol Commission to look into various problems at the building, including a contract to spray the dome with some type of bonding agent to keep the gold in place. Similar legislation which he introduced last year was killed in the House.

"As far as I'm concerned, this building has suffered from 70 years of benign neglect," Fowler said. "We have got to do something about it. The state capitol and its grounds represent to the people of Colorado, in an architectural sense, the government of Colorado."

"I guess you could say a lot of money is going down the drain," Fowler said. "I don't know if it's called flaking, but it's leaving the dome. The gold is washing down the drains."

Fowler has been battling for years for repairs for the Colorado Capitol, and he says the trouble with the dome is just one of the more visible problems with the historic old building.

The Colorado Mining Association in 1908 accepted various donations totaling 200 ounces of 24-carat gold with which to decorate the dome.

In 1950, another 50 ounces were donated through the cooperation of the same association for repair and refurbishing.

"We have no idea how much has gone, but if anyone goes out and looks from the west side, it will certainly be evident to them that something is happening," Fowler said. "Some of that gold is beginning to disappear."

When Fowler recently mentioned the problem with the dome at a legislative committee meeting, a fellow lawmaker joked about setting up a mining claim under the capitol drainpipes.

Fowler said he would prepare legislation to create a Capitol Commission to look into various problems at the building, including a contract to spray the dome with some type of bonding agent to keep the gold in place. Similar legislation which he introduced last year was killed in the House.

Geritol and False Advertising

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Trade Commission says a false advertising suit against the makers of Geritol, a non-prescription preparation, has led to a history-making $280,000 remedy.

The FTC won its largest civil penalty ever in an out-of-court settlement in connection with nine Geritol television commercials in 1969.

The FTC said the J.B. Williams Co. of New York had been ordered to stop claiming Geritol or any similar preparation helped relieve tiredness, loss of strength, rundown feelings or irritability without also saying that iron-deficiency anemia is not usually the cause of those symptoms.

In short, the commercials were supposed to say that persons with those symptoms would not benefit from Geritol.

Under the settlement approved by the U.S. District Court for the southern district of New York, Geritol representatives agreed to pay $125,000 in civil penalties for the contested commercials.

The company previously paid $155,000 in civil penalties for two other commercials contested in the suit, television promotions of "Fem-Iron."

The original order curbing Geritol commercial claims was issued in 1967. The FTC said the nine Geritol and two Fem-Iron commercials were shown at least 100 times on television networks between June and October, 1969.

The first nails were used in Egypt in about 2700 B.C.

Women Apply to Academy

West Point on Pregnancy

WEST POINT, N.Y. (UPI) — More than 500 women already have applied to be among the first to march in skirts in West Point's "long gray line."

Brass at the U.S. Military Academy, initially wary of the whole idea, have moved quickly to ready the battlement-like barracks, and they have done some vigorous recruiting.

"Many of our men have been planning to join the academy since they were in their early teens," said Col. Thomas Garigan. "But for women it requires a whole reorientation of their career goals."

Since President Ford opened the nation's service academies to women in November, scores of recruiters have visited high schools across the nation.

Garigan, West Point's public affairs officer, said one girl asked, "Do you have to be a virgin to apply?"

Precedent already has been set: what applies for men, goes for women — mostly. Example: bras will be worn by women cadets because they are underwears and cadets are required to wear underwear as part of the uniform.

policy on this."

Initially, the response from women was slim — only 134 had applied by mid-November. But it more than doubled in December for the 80 to 100 openings allotted to fill "the needs of the service" for commissioned women officers in 1980.

As separate showers and latrines were installed for women in the barracks this month, the application deadline for women was extended from Jan. 31 to "sometime in February."

ties and a physical aptitude test, slightly modified for the females.

"It used to be called the 'Whole Man' score," Garigan said. "Now it has been changed to 'Whole Candidate'."

The women among the 1,400 plebes reporting to the academy in July can expect almost equal treatment.

Latrines and showers will be separate, but their rooms will be in the same barracks and on the same floors as the men.

Kidnaped Women Shot

GULFPORT, Miss. (UPI) — After several fruitless trips, bank executive Charles Marter managed to pay the $25,000 ransom a kidnaper demanded for his wife. Hours later, her body was found, a single bullet hole in the back of her head.

FBI agents and police said they had arrested a suspect, Richard Gerald Jordan, 29, of Hattiesburg, Miss., in the slaying of Edwina Marter, 36.

Authorities said Mrs. Marter's body was found in underbrush near U.S. highway 49 about 15 miles north of Gulfport Tuesday hours after her husband, vice president of Gulfport's Gulf National Bank, had paid the ransom.

Harrison County District Attorney Albert Nacaise declined to disclose whether the $25,000 in marked bills, which had been paid earlier in the day according to instructions by the kidnaper, was recovered.

He said a murder weapon had not been found and reported no additional suspects in the case.

Officials provided no additional background information on the accused man, who was assigned an attorney, arraigned before Circuit Court Judge Gaston Hewes and placed in the county jail.

Nacaise said a preliminary hearing was not immediately set but that his office was ready to proceed with evidence in the case.

Donald Sullivan, agent in charge of the Jackson, Miss., FBI office, said Mrs. Marter apparently was kidnaped around 2 p.m. Monday from her home in East Gulfport. The kidnaper then called Marter at the bank and demanded the $25,000 for his wife's safe return.

"Mr. Marter then received several repeated phone calls, causing him to make several fruitless trips to various locations in the area in an effort to meet the demands of the kidnaper," Sullivan said.

"Sometime after 9 a.m. Tuesday, Mr. Marter received another call directing him to a location on Interstate 10 where the ransom money was deposited according to the kidnaper's instructions.

The FBI chief said a subsequent investigation resulted in the recovery of the victim's body and the arrest of Jordan. He said several additional federal charges, including kidnap, were pending against the suspect.

Copan Corporation

The Copan Corporation at 1216 Wilkes Street in Pampa and at 306 E. Third in Lefors does complete well servicing, according to J.L. Romines who, with Eben Warner, owns the company.

"We've had this shop in Pampa about three years," Romines said, "but we've been in business in Lefors for about 17 years."

He said the firm employs about 35. "Most of them are field workers. There are two pushers besides myself," Romines said.

He explained that a pusher is one who "looks after the work and makes sure it's carried on like it should be."

Romines said he feels there probably is "some deep oil in this field and I think they'll eventually go after it. Especially if the price stays up like it is at the present."

He said that business for Copan has been good in the past and "I think that as long as there are oil wells going up and down in this field, we'll be in business."

PG.PLAY
NEW YORK (UPI) — The producers of "Lampost Reunion," the Broadway play about a pop singer who closely resembles Frank Sinatra, have come up with a new gimmick to attract audiences. They say that because of the strong language used they will ticket purchasers that it is rated PG (Parental Guidance in film parlance).
