Balloon To Be in Pampa

A seven-story hot air balloon will drift in flight across Pampa from a launching site south of the Coronado Inn at 9:15 a.m. Saturday.

The inflation and launch is sponsored by the Gray County Heart Division of the American Heart Association in conjunction with the second annual CPR Week.

CPR, or cardiopulmonary resuscitation, is a life-saving technique employing mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and external heart massage.

Mayors John Archer of Lefors, Sam Haynes of McLean and R.D. Wilkerson of Pampa have signed proclamations designating the week as official Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation Week for their cities and Gray County Judge Don Cain made a similar proclamation for the county.

CPR may prevent death if it is initiated in four to six minutes after a heart stops beating efficiently. The victim may be resuscitated and kept alive until specially trained personnel and advanced treatment can be obtained.

A goal of the Gray County Heart Division, according to Dr. C.F. Sparger, president, is to teach everyone beyond the sixth grade level in Gray County basic CPR.

"By teaching this life-saving emergency technique to our closest friends and relatives, we are assuring ourselves of being protected from sudden, unexpected death," Dr. Sparger said.

Programs have been scheduled for every day during CPR Week in an effort to reach as many people as possible in Pampa and Gray County.

Week-long activities will begin at 7 a.m. Saturday with a breakfast and speech contest in the Starlight Room of the Coronado Inn.

Competing in the first annual All-Gray County Speech Contest will be Zndi Walberg, Dr. Roy Braswell, Ken Daugherty, Ted Everhart, David Gantz, Dr. Ronald Hendrick, Max Presnell, Bob Steger, Dr. V.L. Trammell, John Warner and Floyd Watson.

Sponsors of other speakers are the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, Southwestern Public Service and the American National Bank of McLean.

Breakfast tickets may be purchased by calling Kishan Thakrar at Highland General Hospital, 665-3721, ext. 261.

Movies on the problems of the heart, furnished by the American Heart Association, will be shown from noon to 1:30 p.m. Monday through Friday in the conference room of Highland General Hospital to all interested physicians and dentists. A free lunch will be served.

CPR programs and demonstrations have been scheduled for Highland General Hospital medical and non-medical personnel, the Junior Service League, Cabot Corp., Top of Texas Medical Society, Rotary Club, Pampa High School health classes, the LVN Association, and to physician and dental clinics.

A television program, "Tri-State Forum," will be shown at 6:30 p.m. Saturday on Amarillo's channel 10, featuring representatives of the Gray County Heart Division in an interview with Ron Slover, news director. A CPR demonstration will be a part of the program.

Other television programs promoting CPR Week in Gray County are set for KAMR and KVII television, according to Dr. Sparger.

Carrillo Attorney Exits

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — South Texas District Judge O.P. Carrillo, the first Texas official in four decades to face an impeachment trial, testified in his own defense today against charges he took Duval County welfare funds to pay for his groceries and collected county money for rental of nonexistent equipment.

Carrillo, who at times has assisted defense attorney Arthur Mitchell in questioning witnesses in the trial, stepped quickly to the stand after Mitchell completed a 10-minute opening defense statement.

The prosecution has completed its evidence on the first two of the 10 articles of impeachment, and Senators will vote on those articles as soon as Mitchell completes his defense.

Mitchell, in his opening statement, told senators the prosecution has failed to prove Carrillo was involved in any conspiracy to illegally obtain county funds, either through the welfare program or for rental of equipment.

"In Articles 1 and 7, there are no acts that span Judge Carrillo's present term of office. That is the basic defect in the state's case, there is no act for which Judge Carrillo can stand impeachment."

Mitchell has contended throughout the trial Carrillo cannot be removed from office in his present term for acts committed prior to his reelection in 1974 and new term which began Jan. 1, 1975.

Senators planned to hear Carrillo's testimony until about 2 p.m., then adjourn for the weekend.

Mitchell caused a furor at the impeachment trial Thursday by walking out of the proceedings in protest of an admonishment from the presiding officer, but returned to avoid the threat of a contempt citation.

He had objected to testimony concerning a contract for the purchase of two bulldozers.

"I consider that objection frivolous and insulting to the Senate, Mr. Mitchell," said Lt. Gov. William Hobby in dismissing the motion.

"Well now, I'm going to take exception to that remark, Mr. President," Mitchell replied.

Hobby tried to gavel down Mitchell and said, "Sit down, Mr. Mitchell."

"I'll not only sit down, but I'll remove myself from the chamber and you can proceed to try him independently," Mitchell said, walking out a rear door.

Carrillo and Senate members were stunned at the action. Sen. Bob Gammage, D-Houston, moved Mitchell be held in contempt unless he returned immediately. A sergeant-at-arms escorted Mitchell into the chamber as the roll was called on the motion.

"I might have overreacted," Mitchell later told reporters. "I leveled what I thought as an attorney was a proper objection, and I think the court's comments were inappropriate."

The objection was to an attorney general's investigator's comments on a 1972 Benavides Implement and Hardware Co. contract to purchase two bulldozers. Carrillo is charged with funneling county money to himself through the rental of nonexistent equipment.

Seeks Office

O.L. Presley, owner of O.L. Presley Contractor, has filed for the office of Gray County Commissioner, Precinct I which includes the Lefors-Laketon area. Presley has lived in the area for the past 36 years and says he believes that his experience as a businessman and in equipment work qualifies him for the post — now held by Joe Clarke of Lefors. Presley is married and has a daughter, Carolyn Hanover, who lives in Pampa. Presley is the second to file for the post. Jay T. Wallis filed earlier. Clarke, who has held the post for the past 22 years, does not plan to seek re-election.

Labor Violence Won't Halt Work

HOUSTON (UPI) — A construction contractor plans to complete work at a chemical plant despite labor protests and violence, according to a company attorney.

The protesters have caused an estimated $1 million damage in the week-old dispute in Houston. An armed mob killed one worker and wounded four others Thursday at a construction site with the same contractor in Lake Charles, La.

More than one-third of Houston's 2,500 police officers surrounded the Charter International Oil Co. refinery Thursday and a state district judge has issued a temporary restraining order against further protests.

There was no violence Thursday, but Wednesday, more than 1,500 protesters demolished a chain link fence around the site, overturned two trailers containing payroll records and two cranes, and destroyed other property, official said. Seventeen fires were set.

The protests center around Payne & Keller, a merit shop contractor working on a plant addition at Charter. A spokesman said, however, the work would continue.

"Payne & Keller fully intends to complete its contract at the Charter facility, and the company has been promised the full cooperation and support of Charter," attorney Carolyn Randall said. "Payne & Keller is cooperating with Charter in legal efforts to maintain peaceful operations at the Charter job."

Mrs. Randall said she didn't know what caused the problem in Lake Charles or if the two incidents were connected.

"There had been no prior violence at the Jupiter (Lake Charles) plant," she said. "However, there had been informational picketing at the job site by another union. The company and federal law enforcement officers are investigating the matter."

The Houston problems began last Friday when Charter terminated its contract with Lummus Construction Co., a union subcontractor that has been building two processing plants for Charter for about a year. Charter then hired Payne & Keller to complete the work.

M.A. "Peewee" Graham, executive secretary of the Houston Gulf Coast Building and Construction Trades Council, said the 17 building and trade unions named in the court restraining order had not called for nor condoned the violence at Charter.

"We don't know who is behind these demonstrations. Our own building has been threatened," Graham said. "We're trying to stop it."

Psychiatrist Believes Hearst

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A prosecution psychiatrist, under fire from defense attorneys for allegedly browbeating Patricia Hearst, says he is convinced she had nothing to do with engineering her own kidnap.

"She had no more to do with getting herself kidnaped than you and I," Dr. Harry Kozol told U.S. District Judge Oliver Carter during a special hearing Thursday on whether he should be allowed to continue examining Miss Hearst.

Carter took the issue under consideration and said he would rule later.

Miss Hearst, 21, daughter of San Francisco Examiner President Randolph Hearst, was kidnaped by the Symbionese Liberation Army in February.

Defense lawyers had asked that Carter keep the Boston doctor from questioning their client. Federal prosecutors then asked the judge that Miss Hearst's lawyers be banned from using testimony about her mental captivity unless she cooperates with Kozol.

1974. She was charged with being a member of an SLA team which held up a San Francisco branch bank the following April.

Miss Hearst is scheduled for trial Jan. 26.

She testified Wednesday that she broke down and cried while Kozol examined her in San Mateo County Jail in nearby Redwood City, where she is held without bail.

Defense lawyers had asked that Carter keep the Boston doctor from questioning their client. Federal prosecutors then asked the judge that Miss Hearst's lawyers be banned from using testimony about her mental captivity unless she cooperates with Kozol.

A Poem As Lovely

Today is Texas Arbor Day and while it may be too early to plant trees in the Pampa area, it is never the wrong season to appreciate them. One of the earliest trees planted in Pampa is in front of the White Deer Land Museum. It has such a determination to stand strong against Panhandle winds that it is widening its base over the curbing. Other big trees in the city are found in Central Park. Jason Rowell and Toni Holland walk beneath some of them on their ways home from Middle School.

Take a Tree to Lunch

By THOM MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff

Today is, officially, Texas Arbor Day, but you'd be better off observing it by taking a tree to lunch rather than planting one.

It's too early in the year for tree planting in our part of the state. Pampa generally observes Arbor Day on April 10, which is the birth date of J. Sterling Morton, the man who established Arbor Day.

Perry Gruhkey, Soil Conservation Service district conservationist, said, "Arbor Day is always early for us in this country because of our weather. Small trees planted this early would freeze. A larger tree, a good-rooted one, may make it if it is kept properly watered, but we try not to plant trees before the last of February or the first part of March."

Gruhkey urges area farmers and ranchers to plant trees for many reasons.

"A belt of trees or shrubs established next to a farmstead or a feedlot provides a windbreak," Gruhkey said. "It will protect the soil resources, control snow deposition, prevent wind damage, provide livestock shelter, improve conditions for wildlife, screen areas from excessive noise levels or unsightly views, and provide beauty."

Clotilde Thompson, curator of the White Deer Land Museum, said that most native trees in the Pampa region are cottonwood but most of those planted in past years have been Chinese elms, because they grow fast and don't require as much water as other varieties.

Mrs. Thompson said that the first tree planted in Pampa was put in the ground in 1901 in an area across the alley from what is now the museum.

The pair of large trees in front of the museum at 116 S. Cuyler are the last two remaining of many which once lined Pampa's main street, Mrs. Thompson said. "Trees were so scarce around here that was quite an attraction," she said.

The two trees still are strong. "The trunk of one of them has climbed across the cement curb," Mrs. Thompson said. "It has fought everything."

Some of the earliest trees planted in Pampa still are growing in Pampa's first addition, the Cook-Adams addition, between the park and the high school," Mrs. Thompson said.

Commissioners Consider Revenue Sharing, Bills

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

The Gray County Commissioners Court today briefly discussed the Revenue Sharing report on the county census, which was 25,138 in December — 11 more than the February 1975 report.

"I don't agree with it," Judge Don Cain said, "but we don't have supporting data without taking a census which would cost more than we would gain."

The Pampa Chamber of Commerce lists Gray County with a population of 27,273. Judge Cain said the revenue sharing report is based on 1973 figures.

In other discussion today, Joe Clarke, Lefors Commissioner, said he will not seek re-election.

"I may regret it but I haven't planned to since re-elected four years ago," he said. Clarke has served as a member of the Gray County Commissioners Court for the past 22 years — one of the longest periods of service in that capacity in county history.

"I'll say one thing," he said. "I sure miss being up here."

He added that he had enjoyed working with and serving county residents.

Three names were drawn at random from the grand jury list to serve on a salary grievance committee which is necessary according to state law.

The three names are Paul Appleton of 1319 E. Francis, Mrs. Maxine Watson of 2320 Aspen, and A.Z. Griffin of 511 Red Deer.

Wanda Carter, county clerk, said she would contact each of the three to determine if they can serve on the committee.

In other action, the commissioners approved an amendment to the Texas Retirement System which is a plan to increase benefits for older employees.

"It will encourage employees to stay with us 20 or 30 years if able to work," Judge Cain said.

Commissioners approved the December welfare report of $2,145,077 which included services for 28 families.

The First National Bank was authorized to cash $25,000 in airport bonds and $85,000 in hospital bonds and to exchange others as security.

The court approved payment of $38,579.09 to Texas Engineering and Development Co. for construction of an addition to the livestock pavilion tentatively scheduled for completion in March.

Judge Cain said this is not full payment since the court retains 10 per cent of the total amount until the addition is completed and approved.

The court also approved payment of $2,257.28 engineering fees to Merriman & Barber.

The next meeting of the court will be at 10 a.m. on Feb. 2.

Victim of Bureaucracy

LONDON (UPI) — Steven Meurs starved to death at the age of 16 months — a victim of bureaucracy.

He died in King's Lynn, 80 miles north of London, last April. He weighed just 10 pounds, half the normal weight for a child his age.

A report of the official inquiry released Thursday said he died from "callous neglect" by his mother but that he might have been saved had there not been a disastrous breakdown in communications between various welfare services involved in the case.

Solons Learn Political Savvy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Seventy-five new Democratic congressmen came to Washington last January and shook up the system. Now they are coming back, somewhat shaken themselves.

This time the freshmen are more interested in passing people-pleasing legislation than in reforming congressional institutions. They want to make good on their campaign promises of 1974.

They want to be re-elected. Half the freshmen were expected to attend a conference this afternoon and Saturday in advance of the new congressional session and to ask four committee chairmen for action this year on health insurance, revenue sharing, tax reform and campaign reform.

Rep. Martin Russo, Ill., secretary of the freshman class, says that despite the freshmen's vigor, Congress remains low in the public perception.

"Something is still lacking," he told reporters Thursday. "We hope to show the American people that we are still interested in their needs."

History shows the freshmen have reason to worry. The election mortality rate usually is high among congressmen elected in a landslide such as that of 1974, which gave the Democrats a two-to-one margin in the House.

The Democratic Study Group, an organization of liberal House Democrats, says, "46 of the 50 most vulnerable Democratic seats in the House are held by freshmen members."

Freshman class chairman Jerome Ambro, N.Y., says speculation about heavy freshmen losses in November ignores year-long efforts by the freshmen to stay close to constituents with such devices as mobile trailer offices and post office meetings.

One of the freshmen's achievements was to use the caucus — an unofficial meeting of members of one party — to instruct members of committees to send legislation to the floor, where Congress can work its will even if the committee members personally oppose the legislation.

Fifty signatures can bring an issue before the caucus. It is unclear if a majority vote in the caucus can bind members, but the caucus has the ultimate weapon: the following year it can take away committee membership from those who defy caucus instructions.

Ambro says the freshmen are generally united on issues to be discussed at the meeting, plus others: employment stimulation, welfare and regulatory reform, energy and greater congressional participation in foreign policy formulation.

The freshmen have a small paid staff, a communications system, weekly meetings on forthcoming legislation. Their most solid triumph last January was to overthrow the seniority system and dispose three chairmen.

They also adopted other structural reforms, enhancing the caucus' role and making the House leaders agents of the caucus.

Aside from that, as the year wore on the freshmen claimed a big role in ending the depletion allowance; fixing energy-consumption standards for new cars and appliances; blocking an attempt to turn over a new Library of Congress building to congressional office space; and killing a little-noticed bill to raise the salary of the director of the Office of Management and Budget by a third.

Don't Let Them Fool You

Today any politician, cognizant of your growing resistance to taxes and wanting to gain your attention and vote, will ultimately bring up the subject of "tax reform" meaning, of course, that he has a plan to reduce the amount of taxes you pay.

Pushed to explain just how he intends to reduce your taxes, the usual explanation offered is that he plans to "close the tax loopholes" being enjoyed by others. That, almost without exception is what a politician means when he talks of "tax reform"; not that he intends really to reduce taxes, but that he plans to shift the impact of taxes from one group to another. The implication being, naturally, that those "others," by the employment of "tax loopholes," are somehow retaining something that is not rightfully theirs.

In order to understand, expose and counter this political trick by which Americans are turned against each other and the economy of this county is being systematically damaged, it is necessary to first grasp how your earnings are viewed by the political - bureaucratic establishment. Toward the end, Walter B. Wriston, chairman of CITICORP, provided some invaluable though - prodders in an address to members of the Financial Executives Institute in New Orleans last month. Titled his speech, "The Ultimate Loophole - Spend Your Own Money," Wriston noted that:

"As early as 1753, Benjamin Franklin suggested a (tax) standard. He wrote: 'It would be thought a hard government that should tax its people one-tenth of their time, to be employed in its service.' The fundamental principle (of minimal taxes) laid down by our founding fathers (who understood that when the government takes a part of our income, it is commandeering the fruits of our labors) has now been reversed. Today, the part of your income you succeed in keeping for yourself is denounced as a 'loophole.' The ultimate logic of that assumption is that everything you earn belongs to the state. The benevolent congress may permit you to keep a little, not as a right, but only as a benefit."

Obviously, if all the "loopholes" were closed, the political bureaucratic establishment known as "The State" would soon have it all, and you would have nothing but your slavery. Just as obviously, the neighted earner and taxpayers should not be interested in closing tax loopholes, his own or anyone else's, but in prying them all wider and wider until, finally, "The Ultimate Loophole" is made available to one and all and you are free to "Spend Your Own Money," all of it, as you think best.

There are two other aspects of taxation which we all need to better understand. They are: 1. The ultimate result of all taxes, regardless of what they may be called, and irrespective of where they may be applied or upon whom initially imposed, is to funnel capital into the governmental nonproductive sector. This process, which is nothing less than the legal taking of wealth from those who earned it and giving it to those who did not incur the capacity of the nation's people to produce. With less produced, there is less for all to consume. All are harmed. It is as simple as that.

2. Ultimate, all taxes again regardless of the name given to them, again irrespective of what applied or upon whom initially imposed, are taxes upon production, simply because it is not possible to tax anything else. Consequently, since consumers consume what is produced, and must pay the costs thereof, all taxes wind up being borne by the productive consumers.

Enough of this political prattle of "tax reform" based on the promise of "closing the tax loopholes" of some for the benefit of someone else.

The only meaningful "tax reform" is one that will reduce taxes, including the tax of monetary inflation, rather than spreading them around. That means less government spending! And any politician who refuses to talk in such terms, including the specific government programs he would cut, should be walked away from and left talking to himself.

thom marshall's FORUM and against 'em

Some of the most interesting reading available in Gray County you won't find at Lovett Memorial Library. You won't see it offered by your book club. You can't buy it in any bookstore.

Nonetheless, you might find a little review of a portion of the volume of interest. The book is entitled "Gray County Budget Book" and while there is much of interest throughout the volume, this review will deal only with the chapter on Gray County Constables.

We read that Gray County sustains three constables. Constable Number One lives in Lefors. Constable Number Two is a Pampa resident. And Constable Number Five lives in McLean.

An element of suspense enters the account at this point. Whatever happened to Constable Number Three and Constable Number Four? Reading on we discover that constables now earn $630.34 per month each, plus assorted expenses that include mileage. That salary figure, by the way, is up 10 per cent over last year due to the recent across-the-board raise for county employees.

Last year, Constable Number One was paid, salary and expenses, $7,444.50.

Constable Number Two gleaned $5,812.36.

But one of the most exciting portions of this part of the chapter is that Constable Number Five was paid $10,748.54 which included the payment of $4,747.40 for mileage. That is 14 cents per mile for 33,910 miles for the year.

If one allows two weeks off for vacation time and divides 50 into 33,910, one will see that Constable Number Five drove an average of 678.2 miles each week last year - or, figuring an average of six working days a week, more than 100 miles each day.

Back to the element of mystery in this chapter. Could all the mileage by Number Five be because he is covering the ground once covered by Constables number Three and Four?

Are Constables Number Three and Four no longer written in each year's chapter on the subject because no one has sought the positions or are they no longer existent because they are no longer necessary? And if Three and Four are no longer necessary, how necessary was it for Gray County taxpayers to spend the $24,005.40 last year for the other three Constable Numbers?

The chapter falls short in explaining to the reader such questions that arise. That is not the fault of the author, however, as it is clearly not his duty to supply such justification for expenses.

All in all, it is an interesting chapter and an interesting book. And here's an interesting footnote to this review: over in Moore County (Dumas country) the taxpayers hire only one constable each time they go to the polls. He is paid, salary and expenses, a total of $1 annually.

Congress to view U.S.- Russia-China triangle

By EDWARD NEILAN
Copley News Service

Had enough of congressional hearings about Central Intelligence Agency tricks and multinational corporation overseas payoffs?

Get ready for some intensive probing of a relatively untouched subject: the triangular relationship between the United States, Soviet Union and People's Republic of China.

How do those two Communist powers relate to each other?

How do they relate to the United States?

These are among the questions which the Future Foreign Policy Research and Development subcommittee of the House International Relations Committee will be asking experts.

Subcommittee chairman, Rep. Lester L. Wolff, D-N.Y., has timed the hearings for the weeks just prior to President Gerald Ford's scheduled trip to China, now set around Thanksgiving.

The lead-off witness is likely to be John Paton Davies, the U.S. foreign service official who has been alternately praised and damned for his work in China before that country turned Communist.

Davies was a class-one foreign service officer whose extensive knowledge of China included the fact of his birth there, language fluency, his schooling in Peking, and assignment to diplomatic posts in Peking, Kuning, Mukden, Hankow and Chungking. He was one of a group of China specialists hounded out of the State Department for having "lost China," according to some.

Others regarded Davies and his colleagues as highly competent. In his new book reviewing that era, "The China Hands" (Viking Press), author E. J. Kahn Jr. calls them some of "the most skilled diplomats the foreign service had ever posted anywhere in the world."

Beyond their appeal for political scientists and world affairs buffs, the hearings are likely to produce what amounts to a hard critique of detente.

What are warmer relations with Peking gaining the United States?

Are we getting as much as we are giving in our thawed relations with the Soviet Union?

Those and related questions are significant enough in themselves. They are given added edge when it is remembered that the United States is entering into the political season.

Aspiring presidential candidates will leap at the chance to criticize the incumbent president for going either too fast or too slow in relations with the world's two great Communist powers.

Every bit as fascinating as U.S. relations with Peking and Moscow is the question of future accommodation or lack of it between China and the Soviet Union.

So far the United States' progress in relations with both Moscow and Peking has been based, at least in part, on those capitals' fear of each other. Should the United States play this leverage game more earnestly or with more restraint? Will China and the Soviet Union ever bury the hatchet of animosity and become allies once again?

The great triangle is a likely focus for foreign policy debate in an election year.

FREEDOM! Cause of Freedom Is Cause of All Mankind

By C.R. BATTEN

Two hundred years ago, the 13 colonies of North America were at war with what they considered to be a foreign invader. British troops occupied Boston, which in turn was besieged by 16,000 New England merchants and farmers.

The "shot heard 'round the world" at Lexington had been fired ten months earlier. George Washington had accepted appointment as Commander in Chief of the Colonial army only the day before the Battle at Bunker Hill on June 17, 1775.

In July, the Continental Congress had published the "Declaration of Causes for Taking up Arms." "We have not raised armies with ambitious designs of separating from Great Britain, and establishing independent states." Congress declared in that document.

But sentiments change rapidly during times of stress. On January 15, 1776, came a clear call for the separation of America from Britain. "The authority of Great Britain over this continent, is a form of government, which sooner or later must have an end," wrote Thomas Paine in his pamphlet, Common Sense.

"It is repugnant to reason, to the universal order of things, to all examples from former ages, to suppose, that this continent can longer rearing subject to any external power...The utmost stretch of human wisdom cannot, at this time, compass a plant short of separation, which can promise the continent even a year's security. Reconciliation is now a fallacious dream."

Tom Paine's pamphlet presented an idea whose time had come. Within three months, 120,000 copies were in circulation - a major achievement in those days of hand operated printing presses and horse-drawn transportation.

Paine, in simple language, flailed monarchy as rule imposed by conquest. He reminded his countrymen that "Europe, and not England, is the parent country of America. This new world hath been the asylum for the persecuted lovers of civil and religious liberty from EVERY PART of Europe" (emphasis his).

"There was little if anything new in Tom Paine's COMMON SENSE, but it put into words the feeling of many of his compatriots. Paine's call for separation was debated throughout the colonies until the Liberty Bell rang out on July 4th, 1776, announcing that the Declaration of Independence had been signed.

Tom Paine's COMMON SENSE is worth re-reading during this bicentennial celebration. I found it in THE ESSENTIAL THOMAS PAINE, a paperback, published by the New American Library, New York (1969, $0.95). The book also contains THE CRISIS and THE RIGHTS OF MAN.

Paine's words ring as true today as they did in 1776. "The cause of America is in a great measure the cause of all mankind," he wrote. "Many circumstances hath, and will arise, which are not local, but universal, and through which the principles of all Lovers of Mankind are affected, and in the Event of which, their Affections are interested.

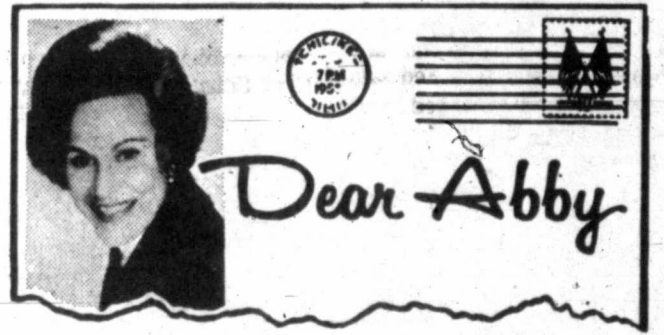

The American colonists discovered liberty. Since then the rest of the world has looked to America as the standard-bearer for freedom. But events of the last 40 years and more have caused the standard-bearer to weaken and falter in his step.

In this bicentennial year, perhaps a good dose of Thomas Paine, along with Thomas Jefferson and others of that day, will remind us of the causes for which they fought, and create a new vigor in the world's standard-bearer for freedom.

And the true American Revolution will continue to spread the ideas of individual liberty.

The White House needs a stunt man to precede Ford and trip before the President appears.

We shouldn't complain about too much government. Just think if we got what we paid for.

Reader Doesn't Like Doll That Develops

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune, N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I understand that they now have a doll on the market that looks like a flat-chested pre-teen girl until you twist her arm. Then she "grows" an inch or so and sprouts a pretty little bust.

Abby, what kind of toy is this? Do you think children young enough to play with dolls should know about such things?

Where will all this end? Next thing you know there will be a boy doll that "becomes a man" when his arm is twisted.

I think toys of this kind should be outlawed. Please print your opinion in the paper. Maybe others would like to comment.

DISGUSTED IN CLEVELAND

DEAR DISGUSTED: I see nothing wrong with a child's knowing that pre-teen girls develop into shapely young women. I think you're making mountains out of molehills.

DEAR ABBY: Although I've always been in a good physical condition, for the last year I've been lifting weights - regularly as a form of exercise. I want to keep my muscles strong and maintain a good physique.

I've had people tell me that weight-lifting is very hard on the heart. Others say it creates back problems, and I've heard that if I discontinue it in later life, I will become soft and flabby.

What do you say? Is weight-lifting beneficial to one's health? Are there any dangers? How does it compare with calisthenics such as push-ups, sit-ups, jogging and bicycling?

I've had so many different opinions. Maybe you can get the straight dope from someone who really knows.

WEIGHT-LIFTER

DEAR LIFTER: That's a heavy assignment, but I've polled some experts and the word from here is: Don't go in for weight-lifting without coaching from an expert. Weight-lifting alone will build muscles, but it won't keep you in shape unless you combine it with other forms of exercise. Before you undertake any strenuous exercise program, SEE YOUR PHYSICIAN to find out how much you can safely take.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem that I hope you won't think is too dumb to consider. It's my rotten mouth. Whenever I get angry, I lose my temper and cuss a blue streak.

I am a 27-year-old housewife with average intelligence and two children ages 5 and 3.

When I use foul language, my sweet husband gets disgusted with me and says, "I wish you wouldn't use language like that."

I really want to stop it because I don't want to set a bad example for my children. I surely wouldn't want them to imitate me.

Please help me.

ASHAMED OF MYSELF

DEAR ASHAMED: Anger is an honest emotion. It's unhealthy to suppress it, so let it out! But instead of using foul language, substitute other words and expressions. ("Oh shoot!" and "Son of a sea cook!" work very well.) It's not easy to break lifelong habits. But it's not impossible.

Ecological Zealots And Vanishing Jobs

To its credit, the Consumer Products Safety Commission (CPSC) refused to panic and impose the ban on fluorocarbons in aerosol containers demanded by militant environmentalists. By a split three to two vote last week, the commission ruled that there was insufficient evidence to justify the ban pending the outcome of intensive studies over the next three years.

By just such a narrow margin were the environmentalists, among them our own Governor Richard Lamm, thwarted and the disruption of an $8 billion a year industry avoided.

Nevertheless, to some extent, damage had already been done. The adverse publicity, growing out of the theory that fluorocarbons might be harmful to the ozone blanket shielding the earth and the possibility that the government might be pressured into imposing a ban on their use, had already done its damaging work for some harm had already been done to an industry upon which over a million workers depend for their livelihoods.

Soviet, China Trade Insults at UN Debate

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UPI) — The Soviet Union and China, trading angry insults at the U.N. Security Council debate on the Middle East, have accused each other of helping Israel against the Arabs.

Soviet Ambassador Yakov Malik and Lai Ya-li, deputy chief of the Chinese delegation, tangled Thursday in a bitter exchange that threatened to bog down the debate on Palestinian rights.

Lai warned the Arabs the Soviet Union was "more sinister than the Zionists, with murder in its heart."

He said neither of the two superpowers — Peking's term for the Soviet Union and the United States — had any intention of seeking Middle East peace and were primarily interested in the area's oil potential.

Lai accused the Soviet Union of providing manpower to Israel while the United States provided money and arms.

Malik charged the Chinese sought to "exacerbate and heat up tension in the Middle East" to provoke war between the Arabs and Israel and eventually between the Soviet Union and the United States.

"War in the Middle East is a fire under our window, sir, not under yours," Malik said. "We have quite enough of our own oil, thank you — more than enough. We don't need the Middle East oil."

Although Lai said China "firmly condemns the Israeli-Zionist aggression and opposes the superpowers for their intervention and their support to Israel," Malik said Peking now found itself "not on the side of the Arabs but rather on the side of the aggressor."

Malik shrugged off the Chinese charges, saying: "We were slandered by (Nazi leaders) Goebbels and Hitler and they are now part of the past. We survive."

"The Soviet Union is following in the footsteps of Hitler," Lai replied.

Reagan Attacks Doom Criers

By United Press International
Ronald Reagan says his plan to trim the federal budget is beset by "doom criers."

Reagan was back in New Hampshire, where 11 days earlier his proposal to save taxpayers $90 billion by transferring federal programs to the states became the center of a political free-for-all. This time he appeared to be on the offense, not defense.

"The well-orchestrated chorus of doom criers, their voices-amplified in this political season, have predicted every disaster but a plague of locusts if such a plan were adopted," Reagan said Thursday in Keene, N.H.

"They said there would be increased local taxes, the elderly would be thrown out into the snow and there would be fiscal disaster if we have to reduce the size and power of the Washington bureaucracy."

Reagan says he never meant $90 billion could be lopped from the budget immediately but that the figure illustrated how much could be saved by turning various federal social programs, including Medicaid, over to the states.

Elsewhere, other candidates pursued these themes:

— In Cambridge, Mass., Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., campaigned against oil monopolies. He told a group of fuel oil dealers, "Sentiment is growing in Congress for my legislation to break up the major petroleum producers, which would result in more competition and lower the cost of fuel oil in New England."

— In Des Moines, Democratic contender Sargent Shriver urged a package of welfare, tax and other reforms aimed at helping families. Under one of Shriver's proposals a woman would earn Social Security benefits for the unpaid work of making a home and caring for her children.

— In Washington, President Ford told reporters the State of the Union speech he will make to Congress Monday will describe the national condition as "better than what I said last year."

Speaking of recession and energy problems, Ford said last January: "The state of the union is not good."

The President's address Monday will include a proposal that the federal government give the states control of $10 billion in health programs, including $8 billion in Medicaid funds. Aides said it was the product of 10 months' planning and was not a reply to Reagan.

Lending Rate Lowered in NY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Trend-setting First National City Bank of New York, responding to the Federal Reserve Board's easier monetary policies, today lowered its prime lending rate to 6 1/4 percent from 7 percent.

That put the key rate banks charge their most creditworthy corporate customers at the lowest level since June 6, 1975, when Citibank went to 6 1/4 percent but most other banks stayed a quarter of a point higher.

The latest reduction, effective Monday, was in response to Fed efforts to pump more money into the commercial banking system to stimulate the economy and lower short-term interest rates.

Late Thursday, the Fed reported interest rates on commercial paper, corporate IOUs, declined to 5.15 percent from 5.44 percent. This is the rate on which Citibank bases its prime. Banks base their lending rates on how much it costs them to borrow money.

Another factor leading to lower prime was the slow demand for commercial and industrial credit. The Fed said loan demand dropped $687 million during the latest reporting week.

Sewing Class To Be Offered In February

Registration is now underway for the Basic 8 sewing classes taught by Mrs. Helen Lemons of the Stretch and Sew Center in Amarillo. Fee for the eight lessons is $20.

Classes will be held on four consecutive Wednesdays beginning February 18. Class times will be from 10 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m. each Wednesday according to Elaine Houston, county extension agent.

In order to bring the classes to Pampa, 40 participants must register by February 11, she said. Registration will be at the County Extension Office at the Courthouse Annex or mail registration fee to Mrs. Houston, Star Route 2, Box 33, Pampa. Phone 669-7429.

There are eight interested in an evening session but he have to have 40 so if you are interested in an evening session, let us hear from you by Feb. 11. Registration fee for evening classes is also $20.

Oliver To Appeal Marijuana Case

Notice of appeal was given the Gray County Court Thursday in the case of Jerry Bowers Oliver Jr., 34, of Pampa found guilty of possession of marijuana.

Jean Martindale, Pampa attorney who represented Bowers, argued that it was a physical impossibility for Oliver to have hidden a controlled substance in a cubbie hole at the police department booking room.

During deliberations the jury asked permission to examine the booking area. Judge Don Cain granted the permission.

Judge Cain said judgment of the court in the case would be a $250 fine plus court costs and 30 days in jail.

Oliver was stopped by a Pampa Police Department officer for a traffic violation in July 1975.

During final arguments,

Martindale told the jury panel that his client was innocent of the charges.

"Mr. Warner would have you believe that good law enforcement is conviction. This is not true. Good law enforcement is justice," Martindale emphasized.

During the rebuttal Warner asked jurors if they thought a police officer would risk a perjury charge to gain a misdemeanor conviction.

As Warner continued his arguments he asked:

"Are we going to have enforcement of drug laws in Gray County? This is an important case. This afternoon when the paper comes out let's let that guy who is reading the paper over a cup of coffee say, 'they finally did something about the drug business in Gray County.'"

Martindale asked for a mistrial alleging that Warner's statement would indicate much of the drug business here is a result of Oliver's case.

Judge Don Cain overruled the request.

Warner responded:

"I am making a plea for good law enforcement."

Police Talked To 3541 Persons

During 1975, Pampa Police Officers addressed 3541 persons on drugs, safety and police activity.

The same type programs are being presented in 1976 with newly commissioned Officer Johnnie Pontenet speaking a 4-H club Monday on the duties of police officers.

She spoke on drug abuse at Carver Center Wednesday.

Police Find Knife, Injured Man Here

Pampa Police Department Officers Roland McGill, Roy Denman and Travis Rowland found a blood stained knife and an injured man about 10:30 p.m. Thursday when they were called to the 200 block of Tyng in regard to an alleged fight.

Upon arrival at the Tyng Street address Sgt. Denman said he observed someone attempting to hide something in the bushes.

The man went inside, he said, and the Sgt. Denman ordered him outside.

A 10-inch boning knife was found and a large amount of blood was discovered in the area.

Inside officers found another man in the bathroom "nursing a cut on the left side of his head."

The injured man told officers he was struck by another with some kind of pistol.

During the time officers were there, two other men came to the address and denied having had a gun. However, a complainant said he heard three shots fired.

One man went to the emergency room for treatment, but was released.

The incident is under investigation today and no charges have been filed.

In other action, a 12 gauge gun was reportedly stolen from a pickup at 1120 Willow Road.

Lebanese Planes Bomb Christians

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Lebanese air force planes bombed the outskirts of the Christian coastal resort of Damour today in a desperate attempt to prevent the town from falling into the hands of 4,000 Moslem leftists and Palestinians besieging it for four days.

Reports which could not be confirmed immediately said the air force Hawker Hunter jets also bombed the Sabra Palestinian refugee camp, on Beirut's southern outskirts. These reports said at least one of the Lebanese planes was shot down by anti-aircraft fire.

The Sabra camp is on the road to Beirut airport. Airport officials said the airport was closed to traffic shortly after noon after mortar bombs landed on a runway.

It was the first time the airport has been closed in nine months of civil strife in the Lebanese capital.

The bombing attacks were the first intervention by Lebanon's small air force in the nation's internal strife since

May, 1973, when jets strafed camps on Beirut's outskirts several times during two weeks of clashes between the army and Palestinian guerrillas.

There were no immediate reports of casualties from today's bomb and rocket attacks by the air force planes.

But other fighting in Beirut and other areas of the country during the past 48 hours killed at least 112 persons and wounded 250. This brought the total killed in the Moslem-Christian fighting since April to an estimated 8,600 dead and 18,500 wounded.

Palestinian spokesmen said several air force planes took part in the strafing attacks at Damour, a town about 12 miles south of Beirut on the coastal highway leading to Sidon.

In Beirut, Moslem forces attacking by land and sea pushed into Beirut's deserted Jewish quarter, trying to break through Christian lines and cut the embattled capital in two.

DWI Offenders Fined, Sentenced on Thursday

"I was going to see a psychiatrist to see (if I have a drinking problem). I guess so," a 20-year old White Deer man told Judge Don Cain Thursday after pleading guilty to three charges of driving while intoxicated that were filed since May 1975.

Ronald Wayne Maxwell said he has spent 25 days in jail since he was arrested for DWI in December.

Prior to pleading guilty to each of the three charges, Maxwell was asked by John W. Warner, county attorney, if he knew the three offenses could result in a maximum fine of $1,500 and six years in county jail.

He said he knew — but still wished to waive his right to a trial by jury and plead guilty.

Judge Cain asked the defendant if he had attended Alcoholics Anonymous meetings.

"If you are an alcoholic you need to find out," the judge said.

"I've tried to quit drinking," Maxwell responded.

The judge handed down a $50 fine and court costs with a 10-day jail term on the first charge; a $100 fine and court costs and 20 days in jail on the second, and a $150 fine and court costs and 30 days in jail on the third with the jail sentences to run concurrently.

He also directed Warner to allow Maxwell $5 per day for all jail time over the required sentence he has served.

In other action Charles Lynn Moore, 25, of Skellytown, pleaded guilty to charges of driving while intoxicated on two charges — Nov. 9 and Nov. 29.

"Do you have a drinking problem?" Judge Cain inquired.

Rowdy Bowers, who represented Moore, said he did not think his client has a drinking problem.

He has just been unlucky, consumed more than he should," Bowers said.

The judge commented that Moore had too many charges of driving while intoxicated.

"You need to get lucky or drink less," he said. The judge set the fine at $50 and court costs on the first charge and $100 and court costs on the second charge with a three-day jail term in each case, sentences to run concurrently.

The court found Gary Don Cotton, 24, of Pampa guilty of possession of amphetamines. He was fined $250 plus court costs and given a six-month probation term.

An expectant mother pleaded guilty to driving while intoxicated. Patricia Claudine Phillips, 23, of Pampa, said she is four months pregnant and living with her mother. She and her husband are separated, she said.

"Have you learned a lesson from this?" inquired Warner.

"Yes," she said. "If I'm going to do any drinking don't get under the wheel."

"I'll take into consideration that you are with child and not able to work," the judge said.

He set her fine at $50, and court costs and granted a six-month probation sentence.

Hosea de la Cruz, 42, of Pampa pleaded no contest to charges of driving while intoxicated. He was fined $200 and court costs and given a six-month probation sentence.

Mobell Defends Hunting Trips

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. says the hunting trips it provided a former member of the Missouri Public Service Commission were "entertainment" and not gifts in violation of state law.

Jefferson City, Mo. (UPI) — The telephone company filed its 40-page final argument in the commission's year-old investigation of Bell's political activities Thursday. Once again, it denied ever contributing corporate funds directly or indirectly for political purposes in Missouri.

The five-member commission which regulates Missouri utilities expects to rule in the case in February or March. "The innuendo, half-truths and unsupported allegations should go no further," said Bell's attorneys Jack C. Lorenz and Leo E. Eickhoff Jr. of St. Louis. "The commission should enter the only finding possible from the record: that is, Southwestern Bell has not made any expenditures or corporate funds for political contributions in Missouri, nor has it engaged in improper political activities."

Industry Men Meet With Pampa Chamber

Procedures for attracting industry to Pampa and the surrounding area were discussed Thursday at a meeting of representatives of Southwestern Public Service Company's Industrial Development Department and officials of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce and Pampa Industrial Foundation.

Attending the conference here were Larry Milner, director of industrial development for SWPS; Lloyd Moore, industrial consultant for the power company; Kay Fancher, president of the PIF, and E.O. Wedgeworth, general manager of the Chamber of Commerce.

In a discussion on how best to continue the program started some time ago, it was decided to publish new maps showing industrial areas of Pampa including a 213-acre tract of land recently purchased east of the city and designated as Pampa's third industrial park.

The brochures will be put together with the cooperation of the industrial foundation and the utility company. They will be available for potential industrial development and will detail what Pampa has to offer as site locations.

Angola Seeks Mercenaries

SILVA PORTO, Angola (UPI) — Thousands of Soviet-backed forces in Angola have launched major offensives in the north and south, forcing their pro-Western rivals to seek international mercenaries to stop the Marxist advances.

Leaders of the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola said Thursday an armored column of about 1,000 soldiers of the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola, backed by Cuban troops and Russian advisers, was advancing south toward the strategic eastern town of Luso.

The town straddles the Benguela railroad, which is the copper export route for neighboring Zaire and Zambia. Commanders of the pro-Western forces about 300 miles south of the Marxist capital of Luanda said their troops were heading out against the strong attacks, which one ranking officer said were spearheaded by Cubans.

There is not a black face in sight," he told reporters. In the north, pro-Western army sources said, the Popular Movement was consolidating its position after forcing soldiers of the National Front for the Liberation of Angola out of operational and military headquarters and capturing large quantities of arms and several aircraft.

In Washington, the State Department denied a report by the Scripps-Howard newspapers that troops of the 20,000 member National Front were fleeing for their lives into neighboring Zaire.

Scripps-Howard said the report was made in a secret cable issued by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. "All (National Front) resistance has collapsed," the cable was quoted as saying. The State Department said the situation was serious, but that fighting was continuing.

Farenthold To Head College

HOUSTON (UPI) — Frances "Sissy" Farenthold, a former Texas legislator and twice unsuccessful candidate for governor, says her acceptance of the presidency of a women's liberal arts college in New York will not end her political career.

Mrs. Farenthold, a legislative reform leader during the 1960s, takes over March 1 as the 13th president and first woman to head the 500-student Wells College in Aurora, N.Y.

George McGovern's 1972 running mate, has been on the faculty of the Texas Southern University School of Law and active in women's Democratic groups. She served as first chairperson of the National Women's Political Caucus from 1973-75. Her full-time move to academics will not end her political work, she said.

"I see it all as one cloth myself," she said. "As I have said, I never programmed my political life and I have not programmed my academic life. This is just one more example of going from the political to the private sector."

Grain Industry Fearful of Takeover

(Editors note: This is the last in a series of five articles on corruption in the U.S. grain exporting industry. This story outlines reform measures being considered.)

By EDWARD A. FULTON DALLAS (UPI) — Dealers and inspectors in the U.S. export grain industry are fearful they are about to be "nationalized."

The fears of a government takeover of their trade are not unfounded. Because federal investigators have uncovered a nucleus of scandal in the industry reflecting on the country's reputation abroad, that is precisely what some government men are recommending.

"The grain trade, if you'll check with nearly anyone in it, is running a little scared because there are some very unusual regulations being threatened by the government," said Ersel Lantz, operating officer for the Brownsville, Tex., Board of Trade.

Texas dealers and inspectors contacted by UPI say it is not grand jury indictments that worry them. They say the Texas operation is clean. Their fear is that proven corruption in New Orleans might trigger a government overreaction, resulting in a federal takeover of grain inspection.

"I really don't think a federal government takeover of the exports is the answer," said Baird Lee Sibley, chief inspector for Houston Merchants Exchange.

"The federal government doesn't have the market on honesty exactly cornered, you know."

Nevertheless, the federal government is considering drastic revision of its laws. Results from investigations resulting in 52 indictments to date will be given to Congress which promises to write loophole-plugging amendments to the U.S. Grain Standards Act.

Tom Baize, staff consultant for the House Subcommittee on Livestock and Grain, has been in the middle of the controversy since the subcommittee began hearings on the grain law late last year. He said the amendments likely will be written by February.

"One opinion is that the federal government should merely increase its oversight and surveillance of private-state grain inspection," Baize said. "The other opinion, the opposite, is that the federal government should take over all the grain inspection with civil service employees."

"The feeling is that the law must be tightened up to give some credibility to our grain for the importers, so the importers would be more assured that what they are getting is what they bought." Dealers and inspectors in Texas defend private inspections.

"The systems we have are good," Sibley said. "If there are problems, they should be corrected. But don't throw away the whole system. It's a great system. We've been doing it this way for over 100 years and there's no reason we can't continue."

Clarence Danysh, chief inspector for the Corpus Christi Grain Exchange, said: "We do a good, honest job. Get more supervision and update this thing. It's just like airline hijackings. Everytime you turned around somebody was hijacking an airplane. They put a little closer checks on it and you don't hear anymore about it now."

"I really don't think I can be any more honest working for an independent agency as working for the government."

Lantz said the government merely would have to hire the same people who now work for private firms to do their same job.

"Remember that inspection and weighing is the financial bloodstream of the trade," he said. "From the time the farmer takes it to the county elevator until it reaches the marketplace, the grain is sampled and weighed and graded maybe six times."

continued private grain inspection "if we get authority to impose proper safeguards." Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz had supported a federal takeover, but ran into White House opposition to extending federal authority.

Knebel said there also would be "tremendous problems" in setting up a civil service type inspection system, including lengthy delays in hiring qualified people. "Hopefully, they will pass a bill consistent with what we favor," he said. In early December, the House Agriculture Committee voted 22-10 for a federal takeover of inspection at seaports.

A few weeks later, Rep. William Wampler, R-Va., led a move toward continued private inspection with a strong conflict of interest provision and authority for the federal government to make emergency inspections anywhere, anytime.

Louisiana Raiders Kill Man

LAKE CHARLES, La. (UPI) — The workday began normally at the Jupiter Chemical Co. plant, the site of a union power struggle, but some workers glanced nervously at the crowd waiting near the entrance. Then "all hell broke loose."

A mob of more than 100 men, armed with rifles, shotguns and pistols, used an earth mover to break through the gates and sprayed the construction site with hundreds of shots, killing one man and wounding four others.

The raiders, who were not identified, also overturned cars and trailers at the site before fleeing.

Joe A. Hooper, 26, of Lake Charles, was applying for a job inside a trailer when the raiders plowed into it with a fork lift truck, shredding the metal and dumping half of it on its side.

"They're shooting me! They're shooting me!" Hooper screamed. His body was found inside the trailer.

"There were a couple of hundred men hanging around the gates and then, all we knew all hell broke loose — shooting, cars being overturned and a lot of yelling," said one worker. "All we could do is crouch low on the ground."

Another witness said the raid reminded him of World War II. He started to leave a trailer when the attack began, but was confronted by four armed men.

"They told me to get back in that building before I got my head shot off. I was in a state of shock and ran back inside," he said.

The workers who talked to reporters refused to give their names or be photographed, saying they feared more violence.

The incident, apparently a spill-over from earlier violence in Houston, was apparently sparked by a feud over workers for Payne & Keller, a contractor at the site. The men are members of Local 102 of the American Federation of Unions, which is not affiliated with the AFL-CIO.

State Paid UT Athletic Worker

AUSTIN, TEX. (UPI) — A woman listed as a state employee actually worked for the University of Texas Athletic Department for six months in 1974 and received $3,600 in state pay, according to Senate sources.

Deborah Denny, subpoenaed along with eight others to appear before a grand jury investigating Senate Secretary Charles Schnabel, allegedly was assigned by Schnabel to work on the annual Texas Relays and other track events.

Mrs. Denny, who now is employed by the secretary of state's office, refused to talk to reporters Thursday about the allegations. She is one of five state employees believed involved with the relays although being paid by the state.

Mrs. Denny and the four others, Linda Willis, Shirley Hearn, Joslyn Diskin and Gayle Evans, were scheduled to appear before the jury today. Also subpoenaed was University of Texas Track coach Cleburne Price.

The other four women allegedly worked after hours on the relays but received state bonuses of between $50 and $92 each for the work.

The grand jury indicted Schnabel Dec. 30 for theft and official misconduct.

Louis Dan Jackson, a Senate porter, and Eddie Harris, supervisor of the Senate's night maintenance crew, also have been ordered to appear for questioning by the grand jury. Jackson received $140 in bonuses in November and December, 1974.

He said he put in some extra time working at the Senate because he needed money to pay his niece's hospital bills, but Harris says he has no records of Jackson's overtime or extra work.

Also subpoenaed to appear today were Alex Martinez, former supervisor of the Senate print shop, and Richard Moreno, a salesman for a private printing company.

Martinez was fired by the Senate in September, and was charged with theft of paper from the state. Information he gave the district attorney initiated the investigation of Schnabel.

'Big Bird' Bounty Hunters Better Beware of Game Law

WESLACO, Tex. (UPI) — Persons hoping to claim a $1,000 reward for bringing in South Texas's "Big Bird," a huge creature supposedly having a wing span of 15 to 20 feet, may find themselves in $5,000 worth of trouble.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission said Thursday it's not sure what type bird is being sighted, but it's probably an endangered species no matter what it is — which means trouble for potential bounty hunters.

"We have a number of species of birds that do exist in South Texas in the Valley area, many of which have wing spans up to perhaps 10 feet or in excess of 10 feet, and some of them are on the rare endangered species list," said commission officer Ed Dutch.

"All birds are protected by state or federal law, so if any of these birds should be killed or chased or caught for whatever reason it may be they're going to be subject to prosecution by state or federal officials."

A radio station in McAllen has offered a $1,000 reward for "Big Bird," primarily to prove to South Texas residents it's not a creature from outer space.

Dutch said from the descriptions given, the bird may be a brown pelican which already holds a place on the endangered species list. He said it was not unusual for brown pelicans to have wingspans of 10 to 15 feet, and it was not unusual for people to be afraid of them when seeing them at close range.

Detective Denies Airport Violation

NEW YORK (UPI) — A handicapped detective who has a pistol built into one of his artificial arms denied he was removed from an airline at Dallas-Fort Worth airport because of a security violation.

Airport sources said they asked private detective Jay J. Armes, of El Paso, Tex., to deplane because it was illegal to carry a .22-magnum pistol aboard, but Armes says he was actually detained by the FBI to discuss a case he was working on.

"They wanted to talk about somebody else that is involved in a case in which I was a witness," Armes said, denying he was asked to leave the plane. "The way they distort things, it's unbelievable."

Armes, national known for his rescue of actor Marlon Brando's son from a Mexican jail, reportedly was traveling to New York to investigate the bombing at LaGuardia Airport.

"Our department detained him for the FBI until they arrived," sources at the scene said. "He was not prosecuted."

The sources said Armes was enroute to New York when the weapons question arose. A stewardess said Armes was "taken off the flight in Dallas," but would not say why.

A source said Armes was detained for a checkpoint violation.

"Somebody indicated there was a possibility that he had a weapon," the source said. "It was alleged he had a gun in something. The man said if you feel that way I'll take it off and make the next flight."

"He removed his arm and went on to New York." After the delay, Armes continued to New York on another flight.

Jesse B. Hecht, a Manhattan attorney, said he retained Armes on behalf of an unnamed New York client.

"All I can tell you is this," Hecht said. "I got a call from a client, and was told to retain him. I knew he was to arrive this afternoon, but my interest in the matter didn't even extend to my going to the airport."

Clarendon Sets Spring Enrollment

Enrollment at Clarendon Junior College's spring semester will be 9 a.m. - 4 p.m. Jan. 19 at the College's Academic Center.

Students may enroll in day classes until Feb. 4, but a late enrollment fee will be charged for any registrations after Jan. 30.

Registration for evening classes will be Jan. 19 - 22, from 6 - 7 p.m. in the Business Office. Evening class enrollment stops Jan. 29.

Clarendon Junior College, in cooperation with Amarillo College, will offer Real Estate Principles and Practices during the spring semester.

The class is offered as an adult and continuing education course and will not count toward degree requirements.

This basic course includes 36 hours of instruction necessary to obtain state certification from the Real Estate Board of Texas.

Cost of the class will be determined by the number of entries and the class is subject to cancellation if enough people do not enroll. The class will meet on Tuesdays, Jan. 20 - April 6, from 6:30 - 9:30 p.m.

For additional information on the course, contact the Office of Admissions, Clarendon Junior College, Box 968, Clarendon, or call 874-3571.

Mrs. Bentsen in Panhandle

Mrs. Ruth Osborne of Pampa, left, was among those who assisted with a reception Tuesday at the Hilton Inn honoring presidential hopeful Lloyd Bentsen and his wife, B.A. Mrs. Bentsen took time to express appreciation to Mrs. Osborne before departing from the Hilton Inn where she and her husband would board a plane for other campaign stops.

Area Reception Honors Mrs. Lloyd Bentsen

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

AMARILLO — B.A. Bentsen, wife of presidential hopeful Texas Senator Lloyd Bentsen, appeared relaxed and confident Tuesday when she accompanied her husband on a campaign tour to the Panhandle.

Attired in a street-length dress of apricot color designed in simple lines, she smiled approvingly as she shook hands with youngsters and renewed acquaintances with all ages during a reception at the Hilton Inn.

Mrs. Bentsen was guest of honor during a reception June 7 in the home of Mrs. J. Ernest Batson, 1522 S. Rusk, here.

Her husband was interviewed for KVII Hotline To Politics show Tuesday in the same studios where his wife was interviewed on June 7.

"I feel very honored," she said then. "No one has ever wanted 30 minutes of my time."

During the reception Tuesday Mrs. Bentsen expressed appreciation to those who had made arrangements.

She nodded approvingly when she heard the Texas-shaped tea cakes with blue lettering.

Bentsen all the way in '76. Of the Bentsens' busy schedule in Texas, she said that he made his last appearance at 10 p.m. before retiring for bed, and was up early Tuesday for additional meetings including the one in Amarillo.

Security was tight around the Bentsens during the Tuesday visit, while her husband was almost unnoticed by law enforcement officers.

She talked briefly with a Pampa Daily News reporter and said her first television appearance on her husband's behalf was in the Texas Panhandle area. However, she added that she would probably make other appearances.

She was accompanied into the reception room by Mrs. Jerome W. Johnson, wife of an Amarillo attorney. Johnson is assisting with the Bentsen campaign in the Texas Panhandle.

Mrs. Bentsen also discussed activities with Ruth Osborne of Pampa, 31st District Democratic Committeewoman. As she departed, a photographer asked if she could pose for "just one more picture."

"They are waiting for me," she said and rushed to a waiting car.

In June, Mrs. Bentsen was asked to comment as to why her husband had thrown his hat in the presidential ring early.

"There is a lot of territory involved," she said. B.A. Bentsen remembers when her husband ran for county judge in Hidalgo County almost 30 years ago that women were amazed when she asked them to become involved. Bentsen said he has and will support the Equal Rights Amendment.

plan to find out," Loughlin said. "Meanwhile, we are giving him dog food and hamburger meat."

"He has the run of the place, perching on warm pipes and machinery all over the building," Miss Young said.

"He seems to have adopted us, and we certainly plan on adopting him and keeping him around just as long as he will stay," she said.

Owl Finds Home In Tech Center

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI) — Owl the owl has shamed himself. He has forsaken his wilderness spirit and to escape the harshness of winter has crawled into the lair of man where he must eat dogfood and hamburger meat.

Another way of looking at it, of course, is that Owl was merely proving the legendary wisdom of his kind by coming in out of the cold.

Whatever the reason, Owl's decision has won him a new home on the campus of Texas Tech University where he has been adopted by students of the Textile Research Center.

Owl — that's his name — is a common West Texas ground owl who was first noticed by students in the fall of 1974 glaring down from various perches around the outside of the center — nesting in trees and making a home in a building drain pipe.

Last week, with a Texas blue norther hard upon him, Owl made his move. He slipped inside the research center building.

"No one is sure how he got inside, but now that he's here we plan to keep him," says Penny Young, public relations director for the center. "We all knew he was around outside, and often we would talk to him as we entered or left the building. But we never did anything to make sure he stayed around."

"But now that he's moved inside he has become everyone's pet," she said.

The owl was first noticed inside the center Friday morning, perched on a fabric dyeing machine.

"We looked to see how he got in — and we just don't know for sure," said J. E. Loughlin, head of the chemical processing plant. "He just couldn't handle all that cold weather outside — so he moved inside."

Loughlin said the staff and students of the center planned to feed him and make him their own.

"We don't know the eating habits of owls right now, but we

Heat Pic Look for Breast Cancer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sensing devices that show heat pictures of the female bosom on a cathode ray tube aid scientists looking for cancer.

Cancerous tissue tends to emit more heat than normal. But even with normal tissue in the breast, some parts are hotter than others.

Heat pictures, for example, show nipples the coolest, according to Dr. Stephen A. Feig, of Thomas Jefferson University Hospital in Philadelphia.

Taking the heat pictures is a process known as thermography. It is one of the techniques used along with palpation and mammography — x-rays — in the hunt for hidden breast cancer.

Thermography does not expose the female bosom to ionizing radiation the way mammography does. Too much radiation itself has been known to be involved in the causation of cancer.

Doctors worried about routinely exposing women to mammography had thought that perhaps thermography — which merely records heat given off by the body — might be a good substitute.

Feig, in a report in Family Physician, journal of the American Academy of Family Physicians, faces up to the question — "How Good is Thermography in Breast Cancer Screening?"

In a capsule, his conclusions:

— With the present level of experience and with current equipment, thermography does not seem sufficiently reliable to substituting clinical examination or mammography in breast cancer detection.

— However, it is of adjunctive value and can be used in frequent screening and in younger individuals.

— Women with positive thermograms should be followed more closely, both clinically and radiographically, than the average patient. Among the limitations of thermography, Feig reported that it is not diagnostically specific.

"Positive scans are produced by a wide variety of benign and malignant conditions," he reported.

"Another disadvantage is lack of precise localization. The 'hot' area on the thermogram may not conform in location to the abnormal portion of the breast.

"Thus, biopsy should never be performed solely on the basis of an abnormal thermogram."

Studies in the period from 1969 to 1972 and involving 15,000 females in the U.S. and Great Britain seemed to indicate that thermography alone could detect three out of every four breast cancers.

"Studies currently under way suggest significantly lower breast cancer pickup rates for thermography," Dr. Feig said.

These studies are being carried out at 29 hospitals throughout the U.S.

Feig is Chief of the Section of Mammography and Thermography and an instructor in radiology at Thomas Jefferson University School of Medicine.

What he has to say about thermography raises questions about the diagnostic value of what might go down as one of the most unusual new developments of the 1975s — a bra with heat detectors built in.

The idea: when one part of the bra shows up hotter than the rest it might be time for the wearer to rush out for a breast cancer check.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, JAN. 17
Your birthday today:

Your convictions and personal values lead you far from anticipated pathways this year and into places and positions you aren't ready to cope with. Every moment of exploration adds to your chances of success. Natural limitations can be worked into constructive forms. Relationships are heavily tested and thrive from then on. Today's natiaves have high ideals, believe in helping others.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: You can't please everyone. Start with yourself and do what you can to fill your needs without disturbing others. Newcomers are not well enough known to ask cooperation.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Exceptional care and consideration is needed with people and conditions. Travel isn't favored and must be well arranged. Pursuing VIPs gets you nowhere.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: There's too much to do of the things you'd rather skip and too little of what you'd like to do. Turn your mood around, make the best of it, and enjoy!

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: Competition runs high. Do something few people expect of you to improve your public image. Most personal plans have to be deferred.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Don't let friends' erratic conduct force you into abrupt reactions or shun those who owe you compensation. Keep your opinions flexible as you deal with family situations.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Moderation is the key to success in today's changing influences. Watch others' behavior and see that yours remains conventional. Reach out to aid someone's welfare and happiness.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: You intentionally upset your mate's plans or routines. Diplomacy is in order, particularly in travel. Start early and allow for schedule disruptions.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Pay attention to what people do rather than what they say. Govern yourself both ways so that you present a coherent, consistent surface. Stay away from anyone or thing you dislike.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Being patient doesn't mean you don't hold your own ground; be firm. Financial moves are unusually stressful. Wait until all facts and figures are clear.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Agree only in principle on money matters and stay within budgets. Everyone's off the track, including fast-talking acquaintances who are selling something.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: For once, you can't persuade people into special arrangements. Matters you consider closed must be opened up again. Tell the optimistic side of news to those who ask.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Charity begins at home and spreads a little further with good reason then. Replenish what you lack first. Don't upset anybody unless they're determined to differ with you.

Rev. Moore will speak on his work in Guatemala. Sunday School at the church, located at 801 E. Campbell, begins at 9:45 a.m. All Sunday services are open to the public, Rev. Palermo said.

World Lacks New Religion Leaders

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer

One of the commonplaces of contemporary religious thought is the notion that American theology is in a shambles.

Christian faith claims such as the transcendence of God, the resurrection of Jesus and the notion that salvation cannot be found apart from God.

The reason for this supposed state of chaos is that the church is between generations — the generation of Tillich, the Niebuhrs, Barth and Bultmann has passed and no new theological giants have risen to take their place.

Neuhaus and Berger, who both serve as editors of the influential magazine Worldview, both hoped that the Appeal would provoke widespread discussion.

Indeed, just a little over a year ago, six religious magazines sought to come up with a list of the new giants — those "who were shaping and sometimes shaking — the Christian faith today."

Their hopes were well met. For a year, a group of Boston-area theologians, educators and activists bounced off the Hartford Appeal and came up with the Boston Affirmations.

Significantly, none of the 11 the editors came up with are signatories to two of the liveliest theological documents to be made public in the last year or so: the Hartford Appeal, issued Jan. 26, 1974, by an interfaith group of 18 Christian thinkers, and the Boston Affirmations, issued on Epiphany of this year.

Norman Faramelli of the Boston Industrial Mission says the new statement — 1,500 words long — is not meant to be a "critique of what others have said" but an "affirmation of our beliefs."

The Hartford Appeal, essentially the brainchild of two Lutherans, the Rev. Richard John Neuhaus and sociologist Peter Berger, is a rejection of 13 themes the thinkers find pervasive in contemporary religious thought, particularly what it views as the excesses of liberal or radical theology that developed out of the 1960s.

Nevertheless, as the Hartford Appeal was implicitly a critique of the theology most publicly symbolized by theologian Harvey Cox (best known for his book "The Secular City") so, too, the Boston Affirmations, of which Cox was a signer, are an implicit rejoinder to the Hartford statement.

Specifically, the thinkers gathered at Hartford were concerned about the way in which faith and involvement in the world's social and political struggles were related, viewing with alarm the current justifications for Christian social activism.

The Boston Affirmations, while not rejecting the idea of the transcendence of God, stress the notion that "the living God is active in current struggles to bring a reign of justice, righteousness, love and peace" and that the Judeo-Christian traditions are "pertinent to the dilemmas of our world."

On a positive level, the signatories stressed age-old

It criticizes "present trends in our churches, in religious thought and in our society" that seem to be a retreat from the struggles.

An investment in Your Future

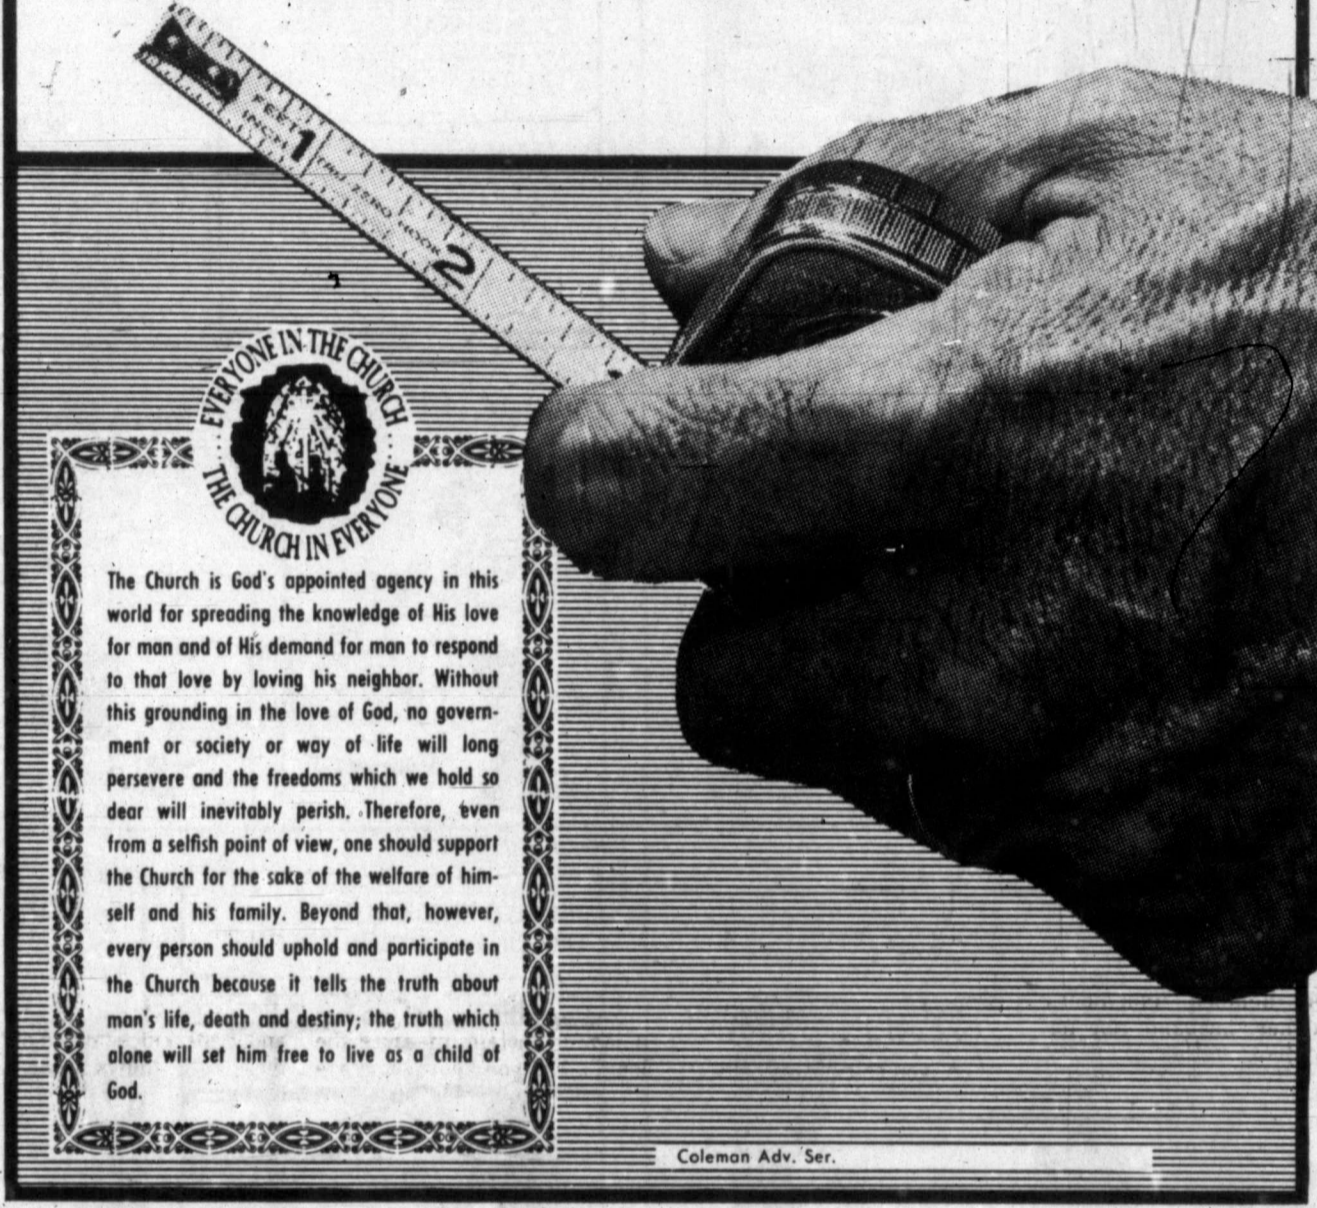

ATTEND CHURCH

The Carpenter's FRIEND

To build... one must have plans, and plans give exact measurements. The carpenter who makes careful measurements finds that the work is made easier. Careful measuring prevents waste... waste of time and materials. Therefore the measuring device is truly a friend to the carpenter.

The church wants to be your friend, and help you to a easier and better way of life. The Bible clearly gives us a way to measure life. Through many centuries man has found no better rules than those given in the Bible.

Attend church and receive the friendly welcome that awaits you.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Tigers Earn All-State Honors

Four players off Groom's state finalist football team were named to the Class B all-state team, which will officially be announced Sunday by the Associated Press.

The all-state team, selected by the Texas sportswriters Association, with the help of several coaches, includes Groom defensive end Mike Koetting, tackle Art Brown, linebacker Chris Britten and defensive back Bimbo Bivers. Britten is a junior, the other Groom players are seniors.

Groom lost 28-2 to Big Sandy in the state championship game. Only two Big Sandy players made the first team defense — defensive back Tony Newman and linebacker Lovie Smith.

Britten, who, like Smith, is a bruising linebacker, averaged 25 tackles per game last season in leading the Tigers to a 12-1 record. He also intercepted three passes.

The 190-pound junior also was named to the second-team offense as a fullback. Britten ran for 1,580 yards on 225 carries.

Koetting, "the best defensive end we've had since I've been here," according to Groom Coach Don Sessom, was also named as a second-team offensive guard.

As a defensive player, "not too many people got outside of him and hardly anybody got inside of him," Sessom said, "Big Sandy got outside of him but Big Sandy got outside of everybody."

Brown, a repeater on the team, averaged 14 tackles and recovered six fumbles over the season. The 200-pound senior tackle also made the second-team offense on the line.

Bivers, Groom's quarterback

but not a selection on offense, made the first-team defense by virtue of his eye for the football which resulted in 15 interceptions during the season.

First team running backs were Big Sandy's David Overstreet, who topped the 3,000-yard mark as a junior last season, Jayton senior Mark Fincher, who gained over 2,100 yards, and Ben Bolt junior Juan Bernal.

Big Sandy quarterback Gary Chalk, a senior, was named the first team quarterback.

It Sims To Me...

Is Team Representative?

Anytime you put out an all-state team, you're bound to get complaints from coaches who felt that one or two of their players were deserving but didn't make it.

That's the case with this year's Class B team and Groom Coach Don Sessom, who is upset that noseguard Mike Britten didn't make the team.

Sessom goes on to add that the team, as a whole, is somewhat farcical, and his feelings are probably justified. The team, which will be officially released Sunday by the Associated Press, is chock full of question marks and probably isn't too representative of the best players in the state.

"I think it's not too representative of the best boys in the state, on the first team especially. I think the top four teams should have more boys on there," said Sessom, on hearing the list of players who made the first and second team offense and defense.

Art Lawler, associate sports editor of the Abilene Reporter-News, agrees with the Groom coach. The Abilene paper, until recently, employed Bill Roberts, who was in charge of the nominations for the Class B all-state team.

"The sportswriters nominate these players. My own personal gripe is that coaches benefit more than anybody with an all-state team and some of them don't even nominate," Lawler said.

Lawler went on to add that since only a few coaches nominate and most of the voting is left up to the sportswriters, often the best players are left off. How can a sportswriter, who has never heard of a player 500 miles away, vote for him?

"The Texas Sportswriters Association has looked at several proposals," Lawler said. "like getting a committee to study and film the players."

Britten, who was placed on every Panhandle-area team including the all-district team, was considered to be one of the quickest defensive linemen in the state. He caused an average of five fumbles per game in leading Groom to the state finals last season, was in on 17 tackles a game and averaged four quarterback sacks.

Britten's main attribute was his ability to jump into the opponent's offensive backfield on the snap of the ball.

"It's a shame he didn't make it. I think all of them should have made it that did off our team (defensive end Mike Koetting and tackle Art Brown), but I sure think Mike Britten should have been in there," Sessom said.

"He was in the offensive backfield on almost every play, putting pressure on the quarterback in every ball game, in EVERY game we played. He's made every team that's been picked in the Panhandle, and he doesn't make this all state team."

Surprisingly, Sessom is also upset that Celina had no players make either the first or second team offense and defense. Celina's Scot Tingle, who can boot it a mile high and just as long, was named as the first-team kicker.

"Celina was the state co-champ last year and they were up there in the state semifinals this year (Groom won that game 15-13) and had a lot of the same boys play for them.

"It just doesn't seem right."

The Groom coach added, "I do think we were real well represented, but I think we should've had at least one on the offensive first unit."

Sessom is probably right about Britten. Those who saw him play were awed by his quickness and area sportswriters considered him a shoe-in for all-state honors. One Amarillo writer said, during the state semifinal win over Celina, "If he's not all-state, nobodys."

Probably no all-state team will ever be completely representative. There isn't a sports writer in the state who has the time to see every player compete and to evaluate each of the several hundred standouts individually.

It's all just a matter of living with the inadequacies.

Pampa Trims Elk City

By PAUL SIMS
Sports Editor

Pampa capitalized on an Elk City, Okla., shooting slump in the second to overcome a halftime deadlock and whip the Elks 65-48 before more than 1,300 fans Thursday night in Harvester Fieldhouse.

Elk City, 8-6 for the season and a Class AA ball club, surprised Pampa, 16-3 overall, in the first half. The teams were tied 14-14 at the end of the first quarter and 26-26 at halftime, thanks to consistent outside shooting by the Elks and several Harvester turnovers.

Donnie Hughes of Pampa scored nine of his game-high 19 points in the first half, while Elk City guard Randy Lewallen managed 10 of his 18 points in the half.

Elk City connected on only two of 18 field goal attempts in the third period and was outscored 18-8 as Pampa took a 44-34 lead into the final quarter.

Consecutive baskets early in the period by Richard Lane and two by Brian Bailey, all on rebound shots, gave the Harvesters a 36-30 advantage. A pair of free throws by Lane at 3:22 increased the lead to 38-30.

Bufs Rout Chicago

AMARILLO, Tex. (UPI) — Nineteenth ranked West Texas State, led by Brad Schreck with 20 points and eight rebounds, romped over Chicago State 99-69 Thursday in a non-conference game at the Amarillo Civic Center.

and it never got closer for the remainder of the game.

Pampa outscored the visitors 21-14 in the final period. Bailey scored six points to spark the Harvesters in the fourth quarter.

The Harvesters held a 50-31 advantage on the boards, as Jewel Landers pulled down 12 rebounds, Hughes 10 and Bailey eight. Steve Williams grabbed seven rebounds to pace the Elks. Elk City shot only 29 percent from the floor, a result of Pampa's relentless defense, which held an opponent to under 50 points for the 13th time this season.

"Lane did a super job on defense," Pampa Coach Robert McPherson said. "I put him on Lewallen midway in the first quarter. Lewallen was too physical for Jewel."

"Jewel had an excellent ball game on the boards, and Donnie and Brian had good ball games."

"Elk City played well — they were sky-high for us."

Pampa visits Liberal, Kan., Saturday for a game at 8 p.m. in the Seward County Junior College gymnasium. The junior varsities will play at 6:30 p.m.; the sophomores at 5 p.m.

Pampa's junior varsity upped its season record to 13-3 with a 39-37 win over Elk City's B-team prior to Thursday's varsity contest.

Rusty Ward scored 27 points to lead Pampa, while Ricky Bunton and Tim Reddell added 17 and 14, respectively.

Change May Be Nixed

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The NCAA Council has recommended passage of reorganization for Division I football, but sources said chances of approval by delegates to the 70th annual NCAA convention were slight.

A source said movements were under way to table the reorganization plan, as well as a motion to create a football playoff system for the major schools. The major conferences and independents have scheduled a meeting Sunday to discuss future plans should the reorganization plan fail.

"I am hopeful but not optimistic we can effect reorganization of Division I," said

Boyd McWhorter, commissioner of the Southeastern Conference.

The SEC, Big Eight, Atlantic Coast and Western Athletic conferences strongly advocate reorganization. The Big Ten, Pacific Eight and Southwest conferences have mixed feelings about the proposal.

National Heritage or Eyesore?

YORK, Pa. (UPI) — One person's historical site is another person's eyesore.

Charles Billmyer's mansion has been standing on Market Street for more than a century, but its days may be numbered. Leaders of the First Presbyterian Church next door, which owns the three-story mansion, have been trying to wreck it since 1971.

Now the church and city council are tied up in a heated court battle over the future of the mansion Billmyer built in 1863 after making a fortune by selling fancy Victorian railroad cars.

"If we can save the house it would be sort of a tribute to the kind of industrialist that made York what it is today," said Carol Woodbury, vice president of Historic York, Inc.

"That's the trouble with America today — we're destroying things that have real value and then building imitations to replace them."

It would take quite an imitation to replace Billmyer's house. He decorated it with all of the opulence that graced the railroad cars that made him wealthy.

"He built himself a beautiful townhouse in the Italian Villa style of Victorian architecture," said Mrs. Woodbury. "An artist who worked on the national capital dome painted the parlor in that house. It is one of a kind."

But the people at the Presbyterian Church don't see Billmyer's mansion in the same light. They say it has to go. "We want to take it down because we need the space for future expansion and that is the only area we have that isn't hemmed in by streets or alleys," said Victor Crona, church business manager.

He says the mansion obscures the view of the new chapel and conflicts with another historical site, the resting place of James Smith, who signed the Declaration of Independence.

City and county courts have blocked every attempt by the church to get a permit to demolish the building. The church is appealing to the state's Commonwealth Court.

Church officials say that even if they wanted the house it would take a quarter of the annual church budget to renovate it, repair damages from a 1972 fire and run it for one year.

"They are not interested in doing that at all," said John Thompson Jr., the city's lawyer.

"We asked them at one point if they would keep the building if Howard Hughes came in and said take all the money you need to renovate and run it, and they said they would still demolish it."

Undertaking Myths Told

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It's time for the American consumer to be told he or she doesn't have to buy the full-blown, casketed, embalmed funeral, according to President Ford's consumer adviser.

Mrs. Virginia Knauer believes the undertaking industry is fraught with myths, most of them revolving around "indestructible" caskets, burial vaults with half-century guarantees and the misconception that more than one person cannot be buried in the same grave.

She told the Federal Trade

Commission Wednesday it should expand its proposed crackdown on the funeral industry to provide consumers with information manuals telling them that no matter how much money they spend they are only delaying the inevitable — and natural — disintegration of the remains.

Caskets, she said, often are sold to survivors with phrases like "last forever" and "impenetrable."

"Many metal caskets with these kinds of designations do not even have welded joints, and a tarlike substance is used to plug holes and protect the interior of the casket. In others, handles penetrate the casket body permitting slow seepage through the handle holes.

"Very often rubber gaskets are held in place by double-faced tape," she added. "Even in caskets with welded joints, most consumers would not be aware that use of a second metal in welding creates a bimetal electrical reaction which hastens corrosion and actually limits their ability to withstand deterioration."

The proposed FTC rules would force funeral homes to disclose that embalming is "not required except in limited circumstances." Mrs. Knauer said that should be expanded to tell consumers embalming does not act as the long-term preservative many think it does.

"In many cases the total funeral expenditures could be reduced up to $1,000 if the consumer is aware of the non-embalming option," she said.

Steelman Says Labor Will Support Ford

TYLER, Tex. (UPI) — Senate candidate Rep. Alan Steelman, R-Tex., says he does not believe labor's support at the polls this year will automatically go to the Democrats, despite President Ford's recent veto of the common situs bill.

Steelman, who is running for the seat held by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., said Wednesday rank and file union members do not blindly follow their national spokesmen.

"There is a need in 1976 to liberate not only the rank and file union member from this power elite that's built up in its ranks, but to liberate the entire Congress from the domination of these big, impersonal special interests that dictate to the Congress because they've got campaign contributions to pass out," Steelman said.

"The Congress has lost step over the last 200 years with majority rule and I feel like we've got to restore that."

Steelman also accused Congress of stereotyping Texans as "rich Texas oilmen," which he said last year nullified petroleum producers' efforts to deregulate oil and gas prices.

"They don't see it the way it is and that is a great battle: to try to take care of that stereotype and have this issue debated on its merits."

He predicted a high turnout in this year's elections by Americans disgusted with the way Congress is run and the way public officials generally have conducted themselves for the past several years.

Steelman says Bentsen has done a 180-degree philosophical turnaround in the past six years by trying to run for the presidency and for re-election.

"In trying to become a good national Democrat so he could be on the presidential ticket, he is off in New York and New Hampshire taking other positions," Steelman said. "I think he would have been far better advised to have chosen which of the two offices he wanted to run for and to have run for one or the other."

SEA CHARTS NEW YORK (UPI) — Ship groundings occur at the rate of three-a-day around the globe, according to "Compass" magazine, a publication of MOAC, the nation's largest commercial marine insurance company.

Better sea charts are needed if nations are to avoid huge economic and environmental losses, the publication claimed, pointing out that the most up-to-date chart of the Straits of Magellan is dated 1896, based on one of 1830.

Modern tankers cost upwards of $65 million dollars, carry three million barrels of oil and draw some 90 feet of water. The size of these ships and the inaccuracy of ocean charts make environmental disasters a real possibility, the publication said.

Engineers' Speaker

Hugh B. Barton, regulatory affairs manager with Exxon Co., Houston, and a 1975-76 distinguished lecturer for the Society of Petroleum Engineers, AIME, will address the Panhandle section of SPE at 6:30 p.m. Monday. The meeting will be at the Pampa Club in the Coronado Inn. In his speech Barton will examine environmental legislation such as the 1970 Clean Air Amendments and 1972 Federal Water Pollution Control Act Amendments and their technical and economic effects on the energy resource industry.

'Barbed Wire Enema'

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Gov. George Wallace has built part of his political career on challenging the federal judicial system. Now he says a vote for him for president "might give a political barbed wire enema to some of these federal judges."

The comment came during Wallace's announcement Wednesday the state will appeal a federal court ruling that Alabama must upgrade its prisons or shut them down.

"We're living in a society in which thugs and federal judges have just about taken charge," Wallace told a news conference. He said the ruling would turn prisons into "vacation resorts."

U.S. District Judge Frank Johnson Jr. ordered Wallace and other state officials Tuesday to implement a large number of changes. He said the prisons are inhumane, barbaric and unfit for human habitation and that he would order them closed if his order was not obeyed.

Wallace said it would cost between $40 million and $100 million to comply with the order.

That would mean a large tax increase, he added.

"I don't know but what a good vote for George Wallace might give a political barbed wire enema to some of these federal judges, and it might be good for the country," he said.

"Under this court order," Wallace said, "if you want a couple of years of good rest, you can go out and mug somebody and get a couple of years of rest in a resort atmosphere."

Johnson's ruling covered virtually every aspect of prison administration, from the number of toilets to be provided to the minimum size of each cell and the number of meals to be served.

Wallace conceded prison conditions could be improved but said there had been no "intentional neglect."

Asked if there had been unintentional neglect, he said he was not sure.

"I haven't been out there to the prisons much," he said.

"Academically Strong in the Texas Panhandle"

RADIO OPERA

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Metropolitan Opera's Saturday afternoon live radio broadcasts started the 1975-76 season Dec. 14 with a gala Bizet centenary performance of "Carmen." This is the 36th season of the Met broadcasts, all of them sponsored by Texaco.

The other operas to be heard this year are: "Così fan Tutte," "Hansel and Gretel," "Trittico," "Elektra," "The Siege of Corinth," "Boris Godunov," "The Barber of Seville," "Fidelio," "La Traviata," "The Marriage of Figaro," "Norma," "Aida," "L'Urliani," "Ariadne auf Naxos," "Der Rosenkavalier," "Madama Butterfly," "La Gioconda" and "Die Meistersinger."

The Met again is suggesting that all listeners contribute $1 per performance, or $20 for the season, to help overcome its deficit.

Vatican Condemns Unbridled Sex

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — The Vatican said Wednesday premarital sex, homosexual relations and masturbation are sins that can never be condoned, but only God can judge the degree of guilt of each sinner.

An unprecedented contemporary sexual code for Roman Catholics condemned modern society's "unbridled exaltation of sex" and said there was no acceptable sexual activity outside marriage.

The document, published today, said some present-day theologians erred in saying there could be no mortal sin in sex.

Quoting from St. Paul, the code said "you can be quite certain that nobody who actually indulges in fornication or impurity or promiscuity — which is worshipping a false god — can inherit anything of the kingdom of God."

But it also said the guilt of individual sinners, such as reputedly incurable homosexuals, "will be judged with prudence." Quoting from the Old Testament, the code said "Man looks at appearances but God looks at the heart."

"The Church is not trying to substitute herself for the merciful judgment of God," the Rev. Roberto Tucci said at a news conference following the document's publication.

The document did not change any traditional church dogma on sex but presented with unusual candor and clarity the Vatican's rejection of modern society's — and some of its own theologians' — arguments for liberalizing sexual ethics.

"The use of the sexual function has its true meaning and moral rectitude only in true marriage," it said, adding that church teaching on sexual ethics "cannot be considered as having become out of date or doubtful under the pretext that a new cultural situation has arisen."

It did not touch on abortion, contraception or norms of sexual life within marriage.

Pope Paul VI ordered and approved the 20-page "Declaration on Certain Questions Concerning Sexual Ethics" authored by the Sacred Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, the Vatican's watchdog body on church dogma.

"In the present period the corruption of morals has increased and one of the most serious indications of this corruption is the unbridled exaltation of sex," the document said.

"Sexual union before marriage ... is contrary to Christian doctrine which states that every genital act must be within the framework of marriage."

It said homosexual acts "can be in no case be approved of" but added: "Homosexuals who are definitively such because of some kind of innate instinct or a pathological constitution judged to be incurable ... must certainly be treated with understanding and sustained in the hope of overcoming their personal difficulties and their inability to fit into society."

in no case be approved of" but added:

"Homosexuals who are definitively such because of some kind of innate instinct or a pathological constitution judged

NY Finances Doubted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An accounting firm asked by the Treasury to take a new look at New York City's finances is raising doubts that the city will be able to regain solvency, even with $2.3 billion in federal loans.

Despite the report's pessimistic tone, Treasury Secretary William Simon said he is approving a third loan, of $140 million, to the city, to be made today.

That brings to $510 million the amount the city has received under the program proposed by President Ford and accepted by Congress.

Simon said he has satisfied himself — as the program requires — that "there is a reasonable prospect for repayment."

The report from the Washington firm of Arthur Andersen & Co. draws no final conclusions about the feasibility of the city's financial plan.

But it says the city is counting on revenues it may not receive, economies it may not achieve and does not have an accounting system that allows auditors to figure out exactly where the city stands.

For instance, the report says, a balance sheet by the city comptroller as recently as Dec. 26 lists at least $1 billion in assets which are known to be "uncollectable."

Among the troublespots isolated in the report were these:

— Economies of $110 million were budgeted for the fiscal year ending June 30, but "only about $12 million of projected savings have been achieved to date."

— Despite the spending cutbacks planned and higher taxes imposed, the city still must find an additional $400 million for the current fiscal year. That shortfall results partly because $192 million in taxes which would have been due this fiscal year were collected — and spent — early, in fiscal 1975.

— The city is counting on borrowing $2.5 billion from public employe pension funds, 50 per cent of pension assets. The report questions whether such a heavy investment would be legal if the new pension reform law is applied to public pension plans.

— The city's anticipated expenditures may have been understated by as much as $1 billion to $2 billion through underfunding pension plans and using funds for road, school, sewer and other construction to meet daily operating expenses.

— The city is counting on receiving $800 million in advance aid payments from the state this spring, but the state is running a deficit of up to $700 million.
