

34 Candidates File for County Races

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

Gray County Democrats and Republicans alike are off and running today — following the 6 p.m. deadline Monday for candidate filings in the May 1 primary.

Thirty four candidates filed for Democratic county spots resulting in seven contested races.

No Republican candidate filed at the county level, but local Republicans are greasing the wheels to concentrate their efforts toward reseating former U.S. 13th District Congressman Bob Price, a Gray County rancher who lost the post in 1974 to Jack Hightower, a Vernon Democrat.

In addition to the congressional race, Democrats here are interested in the 31st district attorney post where two local candidates are attempting to unseat incumbent Guy Hardin of Shamrock. Harold Comer, Pampa attorney, and John W. Warner, Gray County attorney, are seeking the spot.

At the presidential level Republicans here have qualified the names of both President Gerald Ford and former California governor, Ronald Reagan, for the local ballot.

As for Democrats, only three of the 11 hopefuls will be on the Gray County ballot according to Ruth Osborne, 31st District Committeewoman who called Austin this morning. They include U.S. Senator Lloyd Bentsen of Texas former Georgia Governor Jimmie Carter, and Alabama Governor George Wallace.

Local candidates who will run opposed include Sheriff Rufe Jordan, County Tax Assessor Collector Jack Back, County Commissioner James O. McCracken, Justice of Peace Nat Lunsford and County Chairman Rex H. McAnelly.

However the only contested precinct chairman race is Precinct 1 and 6 — the Lefors area — where the two were combined. Mary A. Crutcher and Walter E. Elliott both filed for the spot.

Locally, David Martindale and Robert D. McPherson, both Pampa attorneys, are seeking the post to be vacated at the end of the year by Warner.

McLean will have a contested justice of peace race with Carey Don Smith and Dorothy M. Beck as candidates for the unexpired term created by the death of Mrs. Beck's husband in 1975. She was appointed by the commissioners court to serve until the next election.

In Lefors, Jay T. Wallis and O.L. Presley are hopefuls for the county commissioner post to be vacated by Joe Clarke.

The Lefors area also attracted five candidates for the constable post now held by Ben White who isn't seeking re-election.

The five are Earl R. Winegart, Billy McMinh, Eddie Mayfield, Jene M. Jennings and Jerry Dean Williams.

Three are seeking to unseat Precinct 1 constable R.R. "Bob" Watson of Pampa. His opponents are Bill Langley, Jesse B. Goad and John Thomas.

Candidates for Precinct 5 Constable in the McLean area are J.D. Fish and Jimmy Joe McDonald. Constables are paid $630.34 monthly plus mileage.

Other precinct chairman names to be on the Democratic ballot include Mrs. Leon Brown, Precinct 1, Fred E. Vanderburg, Jr. Precinct 3, Mary Dwyer, Precinct 4 and 5 (the McLean area), Ott Shewmaker, Precinct 7, Georgia Mack, Precinct 8, L.G. Perce, Precinct 9, W.A. Rankin, Precinct 10, Mrs. R.C. Brown, Precincts 11 and 13, Myrt Leigh, Precinct 12, Phillip R. Kimbley, Precinct 14.

A Pampa Democrat has filed for railroad commissioner — a statewide race. He is Bob Wood who has both Democratic and Republican opponents.

Moving into the Republican races, Mrs. Scott Nisbet, Gray County vice chairman, said today that the two Republicans have filed for the U.S. Senate seat now held by Lloyd Bentsen. They are Alan Steelman of Dallas and Louis Leman of Crosby.

For railroad commissioner, Republicans will attempt to seat Walter Wendlandt, Republican legislative district candidates are Bob Close of Perryton, 64th; Bob Holt of Amarillo, 65th; Joe Jaquess of Amarillo, 67th, and John Smith Jr., 67th. The 31st District Committeeman for Republicans is Joe B. Curtis of Pampa with Ila Jo Hart of Gruver as district committeewoman. Dr. Julian M. Key is county Republican chairman.

Republican precinct chairmen are Mrs. Robert Stubbs of Lefors, Precinct 1 and 6; Mrs. Lyda Gilchrist, Precinct 2; Ralph Gardner, Precinct 7; William R. Chafin, Precinct 8; Alfred J. Smith, Precinct 9; J.S. Skelly Jr., Precinct 10, and Jeff Anderson, Precinct 14.

County Democrats filed with Peggy Baker, secretary to the Gray County executive committee.

Runoffs will be June 5, with the general election set for Nov. 2.

Outspoken UN Ambassador Resigns

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UPI) — Daniel Moynihan, who resigned Monday as the nation's outspoken ambassador to the United Nations, said today he is "leaving the door open" to run for the Senate this year.

Moynihan said again his main reason for quitting is to take up his long-neglected Harvard professorship and that he was not "pushed" out of the U.N. job due to some State Department opposition to his tough talk.

"I'm going back to teach. If things like this come up later I guess I'd have to think about it," he said when asked about reports he might run on the Democratic ticket against Sen. James Buckley, R-N.Y.

"I'm leaving the door open without in any way trying to open it myself. No person in the party has spoken with me about this subject. It's that possibility that any one of us could say maybe."

"It seems to me that vice president is the best job," he joked. "You get that big airplane, you know, and that bed."

"If I had chosen to stay in this job, he would have been entirely happy to have me do so," Moynihan said of reports that he was disliked by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

"I'm leaving in good spirits," he said.

Moynihan was interviewed on the CBS Morning News and the NBC Today program.

He declined Monday to rule politics out of his future when asked about opposing Buckley.

"Who would want to do that?" he asked in a bantering tone during a corridor news conference.

But, he added, "I think I will be back in government one way or another at some time."

Several months ago Moynihan said he would consider it "dishonorable" to seek public office while serving as UN ambassador.

The silver-haired diplomat said he was resigning after spending 13 of the last 19 years in government because his tenure as a Harvard professor was about to expire and his career as a teacher would be jeopardized unless he returned now.

He said he had agreed to stay at his U.N. post until President Ford appoints a successor and that the President already "has someone in mind, a very distinguished person."

Moynihan said he was under no pressure to resign, despite criticism of his tough-talking policy within the State Department and, among his UN colleagues.

"I certainly wasn't pushed," he said. "The time came when my time was up."

Although White House press secretary Ron Nessen said Moynihan gave no indication to

Ford as recently as five days ago that he intended to resign, the ambassador said he changed his mind in the month of January "about staying on."

Moynihan told reporters his rough and tumble tactics at the U.N. applauded by many Americans but denounced in some diplomatic circles as "abrasive," had the approval of both Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Ford.

In his letter of resignation, Moynihan told Ford, "You have been unfailing in your encouragement and support and I have with the fullest commitment sought to carry out your general policies and your specific instructions."

In a "Dear Pat" letter, Ford accepted the resignation "with deepest regret and reluctance."

White House aides said today America's voice at the United Nations will continue to assert the U.S. position, in President

Ford's words, "forcefully, cogently and honestly."

There was no word as to who his successor might be, but White House spokesman Ron Nessen said one would be appointed as soon as possible.

Ambassador Shirley Temple Black's name arose immediately, but there was other speculation the appointee would be another Democrat as part of Ford's goal of restoring bipartisanship in international affairs.

Nessen announced the resignation after reports it was impending had appeared on news wires. He said it came as a surprise and had not been discussed in the meeting between Moynihan and Ford five days ago.

Moynihan's departure in no way changes Ford's policy nor his determination that America's spokesman in the world body will speak out in any lesser manner than did the departing envoy, sources said.

What could bother the President, they said, was that Moynihan's going might be a bump on Ford's path toward the election because Moynihan has built up a national popularity for his verbal assaults in defense of U.S. policy in the U.N.

There was speculation from New York that Moynihan might have quit the Republican administration to seek the Democratic nomination for the New York senate seat now held by Conservative Republican James Buckley.

The President said Moynihan became a voice of America at the United Nations, a voice that "asserted our position forcefully, cogently and honestly."

"Your fellow citizens owe you a debt that can never adequately be repaid. On their behalf Betty and I offer our profound thanks to you and Elizabeth (Mrs. Moynihan) for your service to the Nation," said Ford.

Goldwater Knew of Plots Against Castro in 1962

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., said today he knew about assassination plots against Cuban leader Fidel Castro in early 1962 and that the authorization could only have come from President John F. Kennedy.

"It had to be on the orders of the government," he told reporters after testifying before the Senate Government Operations Committee. "There's no other way."

Gesturing toward the White House—occupied by Kennedy at the time—Goldwater said "Everything points right down there."

Goldwater, who is one of five Republican members on the 11-man Senate intelligence committee, said that panel spent nine of its first 10 months "trying to get Kennedy's name out of it."

He said "all the evidence" is in some 900 to 1,000 pages of the transcript taken during the committee's investigation of assassination plots.

The official report released by the committee Nov. 20 was ambiguous in placing responsibility for assassination plots the CIA devised but never carried out.

"The committee finds that the system of executive command and control was so ambiguous that it is difficult to be certain at what level assassination activity was known and authorized. This situation creates the disturbing process that government officials might have undertaken assassination plots without it having been incontrovertibly clear that there was explicit authorization from the president. It is also possible that there might have been a successful 'plausible denial' in which presidential authorization was issued but is now obscured."

Goldwater said that word of assassination plots "came to me early in the '60s, early in 1962 from someone in the know. I didn't think it would ever come out except in later history."

"Everything points right down there," said Goldwater, gesturing toward the executive mansion.

Goldwater said it also "pretty well known to the Armed Service Committee that efforts were under way to sabotage the government (of Cuba)—including the sabotage of power stations and its sugar crop."

Asked if other members of Congress knew about the assassination plots before they were brought out by last year's intelligence investigations, he replied, "I would think that other members of Congress knew."

Goldwater declined to say who told him about the assassination plots.

Although the House committee's mandate expired last Saturday midnight, the House gave a technical extension until Feb. 11 to allow time to complete work on recommendations.

The panel has approved four recommendations including: — Establishing the National Security Agency by specific legislation and putting it under civilian control. The agency, which intercepts foreign communications and breaks codes, was created by a presidential directive in 1952 and is run by an Air Force general.

— Giving cabinet rank to the director of Central Intelligence, a post presently combined with the CIA director, and making him responsible for supervision and control of all U.S. intelligence agencies. George Bush, the new CIA director, would retain that title and exercise day-to-day control of that agency.

— Prohibiting intelligence agencies from hiding their appropriations in other budgets or secretly transferring funds from one agency to another or "reprogramming" money or reserves or contingency funds without specific approval of a proposed permanent oversight intelligence committee.

Henderson said that there is a general shortage of blood currently throughout the Panhandle area.

He said that in 1975 Highland used about 500 pints of blood.

Coffee Memorial Blood Center in Amarillo serves the general Panhandle area, Coffee said, and he emphasized the importance of the replacement drive Wednesday "to insure that blood is available when it is next needed."

Hospital Sets Blood Drive Wednesday

A replacement blood drive is set for Wednesday at Highland General Hospital, according to Jerry Henderson, community relations director of Coffee Memorial Blood Center in Amarillo.

"People who would like to replace blood for anyone can come by Highland between 9:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m.," Henderson said.

He explained that by replacing blood that has been used, an individual's cost can be reduced and "if they get enough blood replacement to offset charges for blood, any excess is applied to hospital charges."

Decontrol Would Help Texas Agriculture

DALLAS (UPI) — Consumer groups say removing regulations on natural gas prices may not lower gas costs in Texas, but a farm spokesman thinks agriculture would be helped by decontrol.

Congress is considering a bill to remove controls from the interstate price of natural gas.

Texas gas used in the state is not subject to the control rate of 55 cents per thousand cubic feet and sells at three and four times as much. Industry leaders say they want the interstate controls taken off to stimulate increasingly costly exploration for declining gas reserves.

Richard Fouke, of the consumer group Citizens Association for Sound Energy, said with decontrol prices would rise nationally as they have already in Texas.

"People in Texas have been financing the effort to expand the exploration for natural gas and with federal decontrol this effort will be spread over the whole country," he said.

An organizer for another consumer group said he was not convinced deregulation of natural gas prices nationwide would bring about lower prices. In fact, he said, such a move would likely cause an opposite effect.

"This is a complicated issue and particularly complicated in Texas," said Steve Holt of Texas Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now (ACORN).

A lot of what gas companies are saying about energy and natural gas shortages are exaggerations, Holt said, though noting he was not speaking for ACORN. "There seems to be evidence that there is not as much of an energy shortage as they have been arguing. One thing deregulation certainly would do is increase their profits."

Raymond S. Tapp is a Lubbock cotton shipper and former president of the American Cotton Shippers Association, as well as a small investor in oil production and a small farmer.

Tapp supports removing the controls

"I think there should be no controls on natural resources if we are going to get people to drill and/or explore for gas and oil," he said.

"My feeling is simple without federal controls we have a more competitive and a more stable situation for agribusinessmen and farmers."

T.W. Stockton, a Crosbyton, Tex., cotton farmer, says the farmers in his area have mixed feelings about deregulation.

"We can't see the need for regulations on interstate gas when there is nothing in the state. But, I doubt the decontrol means natural gas is going to be cheaper for the farmer," he said.

"I was just going over my books and trying to estimate costs for the 1976 crop. The cost of running my irrigation wells will be just unbelievable compared to what I had to pay two years ago."

"Without question, the decontrol will create some big problems for all of us, both on and off the farm."

Waiting for Spring

There's something a little lonely about a tree house in the winter. There are no leaves to help ward off cold winds and it's better to be out under the sun, soaking up warmth while it's available — as it has been the past several days in Pampa. Temperatures today may reach the 70-degree mark, but colder weather is possible tonight and with a high on Wednesday not expected to be much more than 40.

Getting Down To Bicentennial Basics

Since his appointment in 1974 as head of the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration, John Warner has traveled more than a quarter-million miles, crisscrossing these not-so-United States.

You might think that urging Americans to look back across their first 200 years to rediscover the nation's strengths of spirit and wisdom would be an easy task, says Warner, a former secretary of the Navy. "It is not always."

He freely admits there are dissenting views on the Bicentennial. Many blacks and American Indians, for example, complain that they haven't much to celebrate.

To them, Warner replies, "O.K. Use the Bicentennial to point up to the whole country your problems and needs. America is strong enough to look at its sometimes gray past."

Then there are complaints that the Bicentennial celebration is being turned into a "Buy-centennial Sell-ebriation" because of a flood of shoddy souvenirs aimed at cashing in on patriotic fervor.

But only a part of this outpouring of memorabilia is officially sanctioned by the American Revolution Bicentennial Commission in Washington, in return for royalties that will be used to help sponsor 1976 festivities.

As established by Congress, Warner points out, the ARBA has no power to tell anyone what to do. It can only advise and help state and local Bicentennial commissions in planning their observances.

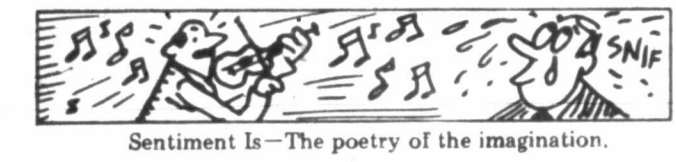

The freedoms won two centuries ago included not only freedom of speech but freedom of taste, he reminds us.

On a more encouraging note, he also reports that "what strikes me most as I move around the country is the great enthusiasm of citizens from every walk of life for activities that say, 'You bet, I'm proud to be an American.'"

So far, the ARBA's computer that keeps track of what Americans are doing or planning in observance of the nation's 200th birthday has recorded more than 30,000 activities, with an unknown number yet to be reported.

"The year 1976 will be a benchmark for generations," says Warner, "a point in time when America stood amid massed flags and exploding fireworks to look both backward and forward at what America is and should be."

"Not everyone can afford gold or silver medallions. But I'm sure most Americans will want something that says, 'Yes, I was there then. And what we say and thought and did will become part of the heritage the nation will celebrate at the Bicentennial.'"

Before doctors were polite, not intimate

By Tom Tiede

COLEBROOK, N.H. — (NEA) — Some years ago a farmer phoned Herbert Gifford, M.D., to complain about an injured horse. "It's got a big cut over the eye, Doc, and I can't get no veterinarian way out here — will you come?" No problem. For more than 30 years in the practice of family medicine, Doc Gifford has been making both house and stable call over some 1,200 square miles of Canadian country; a horse, he explains, is part of the family up here.

Called Mr. Bones by the children to whom he shows his closet skeleton, and Mr. Berle by the adults who must suffer his gags, Gifford is a wonderful remnant from an American past when physicians were more than healers, they were friends. Stubby, droll, his eyebrows sticking out from his head like lazy exclamation points, he is just short of legendary in these parts. "There ain't none like him," says a patient, "he's the damndest best-hearted man I know."

One has to be good natured, perhaps, to survive family practice in an area where as many as 10,000 people are served by fewer than a half dozen physicians. Until recently, the region did not even have a hospital, and as Gifford says "you can't expect people just to get sick in your office." Winter snows here drift to 20-foot banks, the temperature sinks often to 20-30 below, but Doc Gifford is ever available. He flew a plane 60 miles, by the way, to treat that horse.

His loyalty to his patients is returned in kind. Locals who talk of the times Gifford has cut their bills when things were hard, or recall his gentle advice in hours of social stress, say they will wait for the Doc for days rather than go immediately to another physician. Last year an elderly woman refused advice to see someone else while Gifford was away; she was dead when he returned to town.

"When I was young," says the Doc, "I noticed there were two kinds of medical people: those who were strictly professional, polite but not intimate, and those who weren't. I decided to be one of those who weren't. I just can't put a curtain between myself and my patients; these are not just bodies, they are my friends." Friends indeed, Doc Gifford has delivered 7,000 to 8,000 babies over the decades, and the word is he remembers every name, and perhaps birthmarks as well.

He says the intimacy can be risky. Familiarity can breed a lack of respect, and all that. Then, too, there is the grief of personal affection: "I remember a young girl named Jo who had a rheumatic heart. She asked me one day if I'd tell her the truth about her condition. I tried to avoid it but she pressed me. Finally, I told her as gently as possible that she wouldn't see another Christmas. And you know what she said? She said don't tell her ma because she had enough troubles already. God, I'll never forget that child."

Nor will Gifford forget many of the patients lost over the years to the absence of proper medical facilities. Because of this he has spearheaded drives to erect a regional hospital and create a well-equipped, well-staffed family services medical center. The hospital has been built (38 beds) but the vital family services center has been ditched. Gifford says lack of funds killed the center, and also lack of bureaucratic sympathy. He says neither Washington nor Concord appreciate the fact that backwoods people still die from government neglect.

Still, he would have it no other way than rural medicine. He is disgusted everytime he tries to take a holiday and finds no urban physician will visit here for relief, disgusted because the city specialists do not know what they're missing. Wonderful place, this, says Doc Gifford, exceptional people. Heart-break, of course, and raw edges, but for people who like people there is pure gold here.

"You take old Sam, for instance. I remember he came into the hospital once convinced he was going to die. He summoned his sexton here and asked him to have a grave dug. The sexton refused. Sam argued that if the grave wasn't dug soon, the ground would be frozen — and what would they do with him then? 'Don't worry, Sam,' the sexton said, 'we'll sharpen one of your ends and pound you in with a mail.'"

New Design For Defense Vital Need

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

As the presidential election campaigns get under way, the American people should hear serious discussion of defense policies. It is clear that the strategies and alliances linking the United States and its friends are in need of a major overhaul. Anyone who wants to be President should be prepared to offer a new design for defense.

One of the critical areas of defense policy involves Europe. For almost three decades, the United States has helped Western Europe remain free of communist tyranny. Today, however, the NATO alliance is in disarray. Something needs to be done to safeguard Western Europe against Soviet attack in the late 1970s.

An eminently sound article in Orbis, a publication of the Foreign Policy Research Institute in Philadelphia, offers a defense plan that a sensible candidate for the Presidency would do well to adopt.

Marc A. Geneste, the author of the article, is a distinguished French authority on military matters. Col Geneste proposes the "Europeanization of European defense." The heart of his message is that "with American understanding and assistance, Europe is capable of checking a Warsaw Pact invasion by means of tactical nuclear weapons."

For a generation, Americans have carried the main burden of European defense. Col Geneste recommends that today "Americans take up the burden that is in their national interest, deterrence of the Soviet strategic forces and mastery of the seas." That is a position which should be applauded on this side of the Atlantic.

If Europe is to shoulder the main burden of defending itself against the Russians, however, it should be understood that Europeans must have full control over their nuclear defenses. As Col. Geneste explains, "Europe is not going to be defended with bows and arrows. Europeans are not going to raise conventional mass armies, but will rely on defensive technology, including nuclear weapons adequate in quantity and quality. The nuclear trigger will be in their hands."

Americans can't expect to remove the nuclear umbrella from Western Europe and still determine when or if tactical nuclear weapons will be used against Soviet attackers. If American forces are to be reduced on the Continent, the Europeans must have adequate battlefield nuclear weapons under their own control. Col. Geneste states the U.S. forces in Europe "could be reduced in size as the nuclear defensive wall is erected."

As Col. Geneste makes clear, the combined resources of the United States and Western Europe far exceed those of the Soviet Union. But the Western forces are poorly organized. The U.S. government has been unable to decide how the Soviets would be stopped in Europe in the event of an attack whether by tactical nuclear weapons or World War II vintage ground forces. Certainly there is no likelihood of matching the Soviet conscript army man for man.

Col. Geneste stresses that the West has listened to the "siren's songs of detente, arms control, and the like." And he warns that the U.S. must not "supply the faltering Soviet economy through detente and economic cooperation with all the resources Moscow is currently seeking."

A realistic defense foreign policy for the United States would involve effective utilization of the military and technological capacity of America's European allies. It would be based on a recognition that the West Europeans, if they are to deter the Soviets, must be able to convince the Kremlin that Europeans can pull the trigger.

"OH THAT'S JUST A HOBBY, DOCTOR!"

FEDERAL RIPOFF

The Great Food Stamp Folly

By WILLIAM RUSHER

When the story of this country's vast welfare programs is written someday, historians may conclude that the liberals' worst mistake, purely in public relations terms, was the food-stamp plan. For, like busing, its abuses are much too visible to the average American.

Most of the ripoffs now being perpetrated in the name of government-mandated charity take place out of sight, or nearly so. The almost $600 million in welfare payments that, according to a recent official estimate, were made in error to undeserving recipients during the first two years of the new Supplemental Security Income program went unnoticed by any independent critic; some government computer spewed forth a check, and some greedy hand reached out and took it; at best, the only independent observer of the transaction was a postman, who of course had no way of judging its propriety.

That sort of thing may ultimately give rise — in fact, has already given rise — to a deep and general suspicion, on the part of the tax-paying public, that it is being had; but the suspicion is almost impossible to pin down. For information on most welfare abuses, we have to depend on defecting case-workers.

Not so with the food-stamp program. There is hardly a supermarket shopper in the country who, waiting in line at the checkout counter with such few over-priced necessities as he or she could afford, hasn't watched some woman so fat you could hardly see around her roll a mountainous wagon of luxuries up to the clerk, slap down a bundle of food-stamps, and stagger away with her booty. In two separate cases reported to me, moreover, the needy soul arrived and departed in a Cadillac.

I do not want to be understood as saying there is no obligation to make sure that every American is adequately fed; there most certainly is. Nor is there anything inherently wrong about using surplus commodities for that purpose. But this particular combination is especially subject to abuse.

That very fact is probably what attracted liberals to the food-stamp plan in the first place. Ordinarily, any proposal to subsidize the indigent, who are largely residents of the inner-city ghettos, can count only on the votes of the congressmen from those areas — Abzug, Dellums, and the like — and the senators who are almost equally dependent on such support. And of course any plan to have the government buy, at suitable prices, whatever farmers can grow will have the loud support of the congressional farm bloc, but usually not much else.

But some anonymous genius hit on the notion of having the government buy food from the farmers and give it away in the ghettos, via food-stamps — and there went the ball game. The combination of urban and farm-bloc pressures was irresistible. Begun in 1964 as a comparatively modest and sensible proposal to have the government buy truly surplus commodities and distribute them to the genuinely needy, the program swiftly mushroomed into a monster that is now subsidizing twenty million Americans — almost a tenth of our whole population — through food-stamps, and bringing joy to Lord-only-knows-how-many farmers as well. As usual, only the rest of us suffer.

In addition to being grossly larger than anything the could conceivably be warranted, the food-stamp program suffers from a whole array of technical defects. The most important is that, as matters stand, the stamps can be used to buy any food fit for human consumption. This pleases the further-out libertarians, who cherish the individual's sacred right to spend his money (or in this case stamps) as he pleases. But those stamps represent the earnings of yet other individuals, taxed out of their hides on the grounds of social necessity, and I fail to see what social necessity requires American taxpayers to subsidize the purchase of comestibles that can only be called luxuries. Once again I warn the social planners: you have sown, and are sowing, the wind.

SALT loopholes could 'Backfire'

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — The Kissinger-Brezhnev strategic arms limitation proposals the Secretary of State is passing from hand to hand in the administration are incredible. So much so that some among the President's men are advocating postponement of public debate on whatever is finally decided along these lines, if possible, until after November's elections. And most certainly until after the Republican and Democratic nominating conventions.

The delay would be accomplished, according to this scenario, by holding off as long as possible on fine details — so that it would be late in the year before the projected treaty went to the Senate for ratification.

This missile is a bone of contention because it can be made to fly long distances at altitudes so low it can sneak under defense radar. Experts say satellite photographs do not provide the information necessary to distinguish between the 375-mile cruise missile which Kissinger and Brezhnev define as non-strategic and which therefore could be built at will — and a 1,000 or 1,100 mile strategic missile.

Without on-site inspections, which Moscow will not agree to, the Russians could thus safely build strategic weapons in violation of any treaty provisions. This is possible because increased range does not require outward design changes which would be detectable from the air, but rather improvements in the fuel and internal engine structure.

The Russians, in fact, could safely argue their 1,000-mile cruise missiles actually had a 375-mile range. With the proper choice of fuel they could "prove" it.

The proposals also reportedly call for limiting strategic cruise missiles to a 1,500-mile range — a proposal which is patently absurd on its face, because this limitation too can be so easily evaded. While it is possible for a satellite to tell a 375-mile missile from a 2,400-mile type, this ability does not extend to distinguish between 1,500 and 2,400 mile weapons. This assumes only that the Russians have the design knowhow which exists in this country or that they will achieve that ability in a few years.

Once you get above the 2,500-mile range, specialists say, the design, to be effective, must be significantly different. And certain distinguishable changes must be made in auxiliary equipment.

The Kissinger-Brezhnev proposals include other absurdities. They provide, as reported, that Soviet intercontinental Backfire bombers would not be considered strategic weapons, thus would not be counted against the USSR strategic weapon total. But U.S. B-1 intercontinental bombers would be counted against the American allowance.

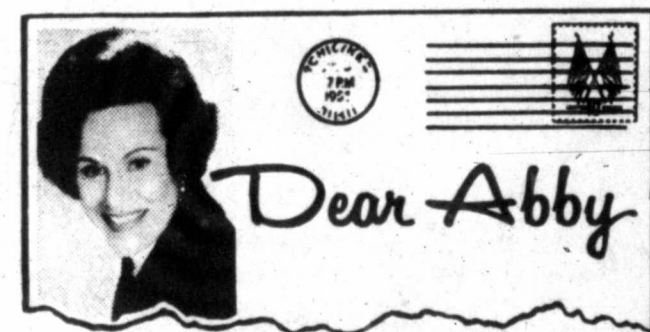

Kissinger's sophistry is apparent in the arguments he presents to convince one and sundry the Soviet Backfire is not strategic and therefore not capable of bombing strategic U.S. targets if its refueling gadgetry is removed and the plane is barred from Arctic bases in peacetime.

This is stuff and nonsense. Estimates on the time it would take for the Russians to reinstall the refueling equipment on a Backfire range from several hours to a day if the plane were manufactured with that in mind and the needed supplies were kept at hand. And regardless of basing restrictions, in time of war, which is what counts, the big Backfires could be staged through Arctic bases at will.

More importantly, the Backfires can reach American targets without refueling and without using Arctic bases.

In the 18th century, a tourist in Cornwall was rebuked for shooting a raven, which might have been the reincarnation of King Arthur!

He Thinks Woman's Work is in the Home

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for 16 years. He's a wonderful husband and devoted father to our two children, ages 12 and 14, but he's terribly stubborn about one thing — and that is my problem:

Three months ago he was laid off from his job (machinist at an aircraft plant), so he took a job at a local department store as a salesman. His take-home pay is about one-fourth of what it was previously.

When I suggested that I also get a job to help make ends meet, he became furious. "No wife of mine is going to work," he screamed.

Abby, I know he means well, but every time I try to discuss it with him, he becomes upset. Please help.
GLENDA IN GLENDALE

DEAR GLENDA: If I can help by saying that it's no reflection on a man's masculinity if his wife works — I've helped.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter has been sexually active for a number of years with quite a few partners.

Now that she is in her middle 20s she is marrying one of those partners who probably knows about the rest.

We are happy for her and approve of the marriage, but she wants a white gown and veil!

We are shocked at her dishonesty and bad taste. So many of our friends and relatives are aware of her lifestyle.

We are not trying to punish her by refusing to go along with her wishes, but we're reluctant to make a mockery of what a white wedding stands for.

There must be other parents with this problem and other young people in this situation. Will you and your readers help?

DISTRESSED PARENT

DEAR PARENT: In planning a wedding, the wishes of the bride and groom should take priority. The bride who wears a white gown and veil is not necessarily declaring herself to be a virgin.

DEAR ABBY: My father has had a drinking problem for as long as I can remember. My poor mother is about to have a nervous breakdown because she just can't handle it any longer.

My sister and I are married and living away from home. We've both tried to talk to Dad rationally and calmly about his problem, but he won't even admit he has one.

He refuses to listen to anyone from Alcoholics Anonymous, and he says if we ask the minister to come and talk to him, he will throw him out. Please don't suggest a psychiatrist. My father would never go to one.

Abby, my sister and I are at the end of our rope. How can you help a person who won't help himself? Heaven knows we have done our share of helping and praying.

Files for Constable

Earl Winegeart, 40, has filed for the position of constable of precinct 1, which includes Lefors and Laketon. Winegeart, who lives in Lefors, has been a Gray County resident for 38 years. He is self-employed as an oilfield contractor and has served in the Air Force. Winegeart and his wife, Mary Lou, have three children; David and John who attend Lefors Public School and Sabrina who is a sophomore at West Texas State University.

Wallace on Texas Ballot

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Alabama Gov. George Wallace and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., led the Democratic candidates filing for places on the May 1 Texas presidential primary ballot.

Wallace officially entered the Democratic side of the race Monday, the filing deadline, by presenting state party leaders petitions with 24,619 names. The showing outdid the state's favorite son candidate, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., who officially filed with 23,515 names on his petitions.

Liberal Democratic candidates will also be on the ballot. Former Oklahoma Sen. Fred Harris and Sargent Shriver each qualified delegates for the presidential primary ballot in some districts, while former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter — working with the Texas liberals in some instances — planned to be on the ballot in all 31 senatorial districts.

"It is our intention to conduct a strong, aggressive campaign to get as many delegates as possible," said Hall Timanus, head of Wallace's Texas organization.

"My own personal opinion is that Sen. Bentsen is in trouble in Texas because the conservative element in Texas that put Sen. Bentsen in office is very disillusioned by his poor voting record."

Timanus said Bentsen probably would win most of the 130 Texas delegates going to the Democratic National Convention but anticipated Wallace could pick up 30 to 40 per cent of the delegation — as many as he had at the 1972 convention.

On the GOP side of the ballot, both President Ford and former California Gov. Ronald Reagan easily qualified in all districts.

Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., filed petitions last week qualifying Ford for the GOP ballot. Sen. Betty Andujar, R-Fort Worth, announced Monday more than 7,000 persons — 10 times the number needed — had signed petitions putting Reagan in the race against Ford.

"Certainly we have an administration in Washington today that is one of integrity and honesty and one that has tried hard, but honesty simply isn't enough," Mrs. Andujar said. Barbara Staff of Dallas, co-chairman of the Reagan campaign in Texas, said the former California governor had the charisma to bring adverse groups together.

"Some of us feel this is the last gasp of democracy. That's a little dramatic, but some of us feel if we lose this one we will be very disillusioned."

Timanus expressed concern Reagan's candidacy might draw some conservatives away from the Democratic primary and into the GOP voting.

The first U.S. mint was established in Philadelphia in 1792.

Precinct I Post

Eddie Mayfield, 24, of Lefors has filed as a Democratic candidate for constable, Precinct I, a post now held by Ben White, who is not seeking re-election. Mayfield, who works at Pantex near Amarillo, is married and has one child, Kevin, 4. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Mayfield of Skellytown. He is a graduate of White Deer High School.

Mother Arrested In Kidnaping

MULESHOE, Tex. (UPI) — A young mother of two who wished for another child was arrested Monday night and charged with kidnaping a baby at gunpoint from Albuquerque, N.M.

FBI agents, alerted by the suspect's father-in-law, arrested Eileen Lowe, 30, and recovered the infant John P. Norris, now 10 days old.

Mrs. Lowe was taken to Lubbock, Tex., for arraignment.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Norris of Albuquerque, flew to Muleshoe today to bring their son home from the West Plains Medical Center. Their only child was in good condition.

The baby was taken by a woman posing as a delivery agent for a florist, who tied Mrs. Norris and her mother-in-law in the family home. Mrs. Norris had told authorities the kidnaper wore a frosted wig and had a "large stomach."

The suspect's father-in-law, Gene Lowe, said he called the sheriff's office in Muleshoe about the baby. Lowe said his daughter-in-law, who separated from her husband last year, had wanted another child.

Lowe said he had taken his daughter-in-law to a physician last October when she claimed to be pregnant, but the doctor said she was not. The woman then began wearing a pillow under her clothing so she would appear pregnant, Lowe said.

Mrs. Lowe was arrested at the home of some friends.

About a week before last Friday's kidnaping, Lowe said his daughter-in-law left Muleshoe, saying she was going to Oklahoma City. He said he didn't see her again until last weekend.

FBI agents, acting on Lowe's tip, went to Muleshoe Monday with a photograph of the baby. They contacted a minister, who went to the home where Mrs. Lowe was staying and the minister said he believed the child was the kidnaped baby, Lowe said.

"It's fantastic; we are just ecstatic. It's too good to be true," Norris said.

"We have been told we couldn't have any more children, so this was even more traumatic for that reason. We didn't know how long it would take, but we never lost hope."

The family had offered a $10,000 reward for the return of the child.

Police had speculated the kidnaper had either seen the baby in the hospital or had read the birth announcement in the newspaper. The kidnaper apparently had called Norris and his wife twice before the kidnaping to confirm the family's address, police said.

Attack Investigated

Pampa police officers are continuing their investigation of an alleged sexual attack on a four-year-old boy Jan. 24. Police Chief Richard Mills said today.

The boy had been missing from his southside home slightly over two hours, according to the parents who said they had been looking for him.

When the boy returned home, Chief Mills said, he told his parents that an older male had taken him to a vacant house and attacked him.

A doctor at the Highland General Hospital emergency room confirmed the boy had been molested, but said there had been no permanent damage.

The child was not hospitalized. Mills said the police have located a vacant house near the boy's home which fits his description of where he was taken. The boy was not able to tell police the exact location of the house, Mills said.

Several suspects have been investigated by the police and Mills said officers have "one fairly good lead" in the case. Currently officers are investigating one suspect Mills described as being "quite capable" of such an attack.

According to local records, this is the first such offense investigated by the Pampa Police Department in several years.

Nurse Aide Charged in Arson

CHICAGO (UPI) — A 21-year-old nurse's aide was charged with arson and murder early today for allegedly setting a fire that killed 15 elderly residents of the Wincrest Manor Nursing and Rest Home.

The charges were filed against Denise Watson after a judge denied the request of Cook County State's Attorney Bernard Carey that Miss Watson be committed to a state mental institution for examination.

She was charged with one count of murder and one count of arson.

Miss Watson was arrested Monday after being released from a suburban hospital, where she had undergone treatment for smoke inhalation suffered in Friday's tragic fire at the nursing home.

"We have a strong case," Carey told reporters at police headquarters early today. "If it was an accident, we would not charge her."

Super Hooker Gets $600

HOUSTON (UPI) — Vice squad officers smashed a high class prostitution ring by posing as wealthy night clubbers willing to pay $900 for four girls.

Police Sergeant C.W. May said officers, acting on a tip that the girls were operating out of a west side club, contacted Judith Griffin, 28, at the establishment. Arrangements were made. May said, and the officers met Miss Griffin and three other women in a motel on the Southwest Freeway. According to police, the prices were $600 for Miss Griffin and $300 for the other girls.

With the exchange of the money, Miss Griffin was arrested and charged with aggravated promotion of prostitution. The other three were arrested, but have not been charged.

Police earlier said Miss Watson, who had worked at the home for less than two weeks, had a "bad history of pyromania" and had been questioned in five fires of suspicious origin since she was 17 years old, though no charges ever were filed against her.

Carey refused to say if Miss Watson had signed a statement in connection with the fire or otherwise cooperated with investigators following her arrest.

The charges came after Carey's civil action seeking commitment of Miss Watson failed.

Carey had met with Associate Judge Joseph T. Lavorci in the judge's chambers for 45 minutes and decided not to present the petition for commitment.

"I did not sign that order because they did not have enough to justify it," Lavorci said. "I was convinced that they should not hold this young lady on the findings that they had."

The judge quoted Carey as saying: "We will have to get more evidence."

A short time later, formal charges were filed against Miss Watson.

She was charged with arson and felony murder. The murder charge stems from the death of Virginia West, 78, who died of smoke inhalation in the blaze.

Sources in the state's attorney's office said only one murder charge was filed as a precaution and the others were reserved and could be filed later.

Investigators said witnesses saw Miss Watson in Room 306 of the nursing home shortly before the blaze began in a portable closet in the room.

The fire sent heavy smoke billowing over the floor and trapping elderly and infirm residents in a chapel where they had been attending a Roman Catholic mass.

It was the smoke, not the flames, that claimed the lives of the elderly patients.

TV Watchers Complain About CB Interference

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Oklahoma television viewers are complaining with increasing frequency about garbled reception caused by citizens band radios.

Television repairman Larry Fikes of Moore puzzles over it about three times a week.

"The major problem is just the teen-agers that get on it and run for three hours at a time during the evening," said Fikes. He said one man could not listen to his stereo at night without hearing CB conversations of teen-agers across the street.

"When they run out of things to talk about they key up the mike. He's talked to the parents and threatened to beat up the kids and they still do it," Fikes said.

Sometimes the CB user is breaking regulations by transmitting too powerful a signal. Other times the CB radio is just too close to televisions and stereos. Television repairmen often can do little to help although filters placed on television sets can stop some of the interference.

"I'd talk to the individual first and if he didn't cooperate then I'd turn him in," television repair shop owner Anthony Cuchiara said Monday. "A lot of people will just live with it. They don't want to get their neighbors in trouble."

"If the man who owns the CB is not using it properly or has got a linear amplifier on and hasn't adjusted it or has tried to beef it up himself... I don't care what kind of filter you use it's not going to remove the interference," he said.

Two men won a suit against a CBER in Yukon, near Oklahoma City. Monna Klaus of Dan's TV Sales and Service said.

The Federal Communications Commission engineer in charge of Oklahoma and North Texas, Carl Pyron of Dallas, told the Enid Morning News he receives 40 complaints a day on TV interference. In about 80 per cent of the 55,000 complaints in the nation last year the TV was at fault and needed a filter, he said.

"This is a problem and it's growing in direct proportion to the growth of CB," CB Magazine advertising and production manager Ed Minderman said.

He said the simple solution would be for the CBER and his television watching neighbor to buy a filter for $2.98. The FCC is working on a requirement that TV manufacturers put filters on sets at the factory and he said it might cost the TV maker as little as 98 cents.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — Attractions in Buenos Aires do not include swimming at riverfront beaches. Authorities have declared beaches along the River Plate Estuary contaminated and unfit for humans.

Sunbathers still use the beaches, but Buenos Aires residents and visitors must travel to the distant ocean shores for a safe swim.

Pampa Democrats Get Pat on Back

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

The top of Texas Democratic Club in Pampa could be a foundation building block in organization District 1 Texas Federation of Democratic Women's Clubs. The organization president said here Monday night.

"And men are eligible for membership," Mrs. Raymond Daughtery of Amarillo emphasized.

"We would like the people downstate to know we are alive and well up here in the Panhandle," she added.

The Pampa club has 81 members as compared with 115 in the Amarillo Club.

The number of delegates to the Texas Federation depends on the number of members in the club," Mrs. Daughtery said.

She was introduced as the keynote speaker by J.L. Holmes, club president. Another special guest was Mary Jo Spradlin of Amarillo, Potter County Democratic Chairman.

Mrs. Daughtery told an estimated 50 persons that if the Democrats keep Jack Hightower, 13th District U.S. Congressman in office, "we must get busy."

She referred to the fact that former Republican Congressman Bob Price of Pampa announced Monday that he will attempt to regain the seat he lost in 1974 to the Vernon Democrat.

Speaking of the Pampa club she said it "organized and successful."

"You can be a real leader in the district," she added. "And I urge you to accept this leadership role."

She announced that the pre-organization meeting for District 1 is set for 9:30 a.m. Saturday at the Hilton Inn of Amarillo. Judge Mary Lou Robinson of the 7th Court of Civil Appeals in Amarillo will speak on the "Value of Organization."

During the business session, Ruth Osborne of Pampa, 31st District committeewoman, said March will be voter registration month — a time when special efforts will be made to get every eligible resident registered to vote in upcoming elections.

The Monday night session was held in the hospitality room of the Citizens Bank & Trust. Members voted to hold future meetings in the Senior Citizens Center.

Holmes announced that members of nominating committee, Helen Sprinkle, Thelma Bray and James Schaffer, will present names for new officers at the March meeting.

Announcement was also made that Robert Strauss, chairman of the National Democratic party, and John White, secretary of agriculture, will be in the Panhandle area at a date to be announced later.

Steven Weed To Be Witness

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Patricia Hearst's attorney says a former fiancé whom she once reviled and ridiculed would be his "No. 1 witness" in her trial on a charge of bank robbery.

The details of her abduction will be described to the jury by Steven Weed, who was living with Miss Hearst in Berkeley, Calif., when she was abducted by a "commando squad" of the Symbionese Liberation Army Feb. 4, 1974, according to defense attorney F. Lee Bailey.

"If the government doesn't call him, I will," Bailey said Monday. "He will be my No. 1 witness."

U.S. District Judge Oliver Carter told attorneys Monday the week-long chore of selecting 12 jurors and four alternates was nearing an end — setting the stage for opening statements Wednesday on the second anniversary of Miss Hearst's kidnapping.

The defense hopes the testimony of Weed, called a "clown" and "sexist pig" by Miss Hearst during her days underground with the SLA, will lay to rest any doubts she was an unwilling kidnap victim, and not a secret radical who helped plot her own abduction.

In a soon-to-be-published book, Weed describes how Miss Hearst struggled with her kidnapers until she was slugged with a gun butt and dumped in a car trunk.

When Carter ended his closed door questioning of prospective jurors Monday, he tentatively had seated 25 persons — 16 women and nine men. A total of 36 is needed so 12 jurors and four alternates will be left after prosecution and defense lawyers each use their 10 challenges.

The judge also issued a memorandum Monday defending his closed-door questioning of potential jurors, saying they would be inhibited from answering honestly if their every word was going to be instantly televised and headlined on newspaper front pages.

Weed, who last saw Miss Hearst as he staggered from their apartment after being beaten with a wine bottle during the kidnapping, had planned to marry her.

After Miss Hearst rejected him, she professed her love for SLA member Willie Wolfe, who later died in a police shootout in Los Angeles. At the time of her arrest in September, she was living with housepainter Steven Soliah.

James Earl Ray Wants Guilty Plea Tossed Out

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Seven years ago, James Earl Ray pleaded guilty to the murder of civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. Now, Ray wants that plea tossed out and a new trial ordered.

Ray was to go back to court today with his request that, if granted, would reopen the investigation into King's assassination in Memphis, Tenn., April 4, 1968.

Should Ray win a new trial, it could help provide answers to the widely debated question of whether there was a conspiracy to kill King.

That hearing could have led to a trial, but Memphis Federal Judge Robert McRae, after hearing 10 days of arguments, ruled against Ray Feb. 27, 1975.

It was that ruling of nearly a year ago that Ray was appealing today. The three-judge panel hearing the arguments between Ray's new attorneys and lawyers from the Tennessee state attorney general's office was not expected to rule for several weeks.

Ray, now in Tennessee State Prison in Nashville, based part of his appeal on the Sixth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which guarantees lawyers for defendants.

Ray claims Foreman coerced him to plead guilty March 10, 1969, to try to avoid the death penalty. But in a deposition taken Nov. 22, 1969, Ray said he and Foreman "kind of had the understanding (that) in a year or two I would go ahead and try to get the case reopened."

McRae refused Ray a new trial because the "total circumstances do not reflect a violation

Mercenaries Reinforce West

LUSAKA, Zambia (UPI) — Hundreds of tough white mercenaries have reinforced pro-Western forces in Angola for an expected assault by Soviet-backed troops along the southern front later this week, allied spokesmen reported.

Military sources with the pro-Western armies said the mercenaries would also back up a planned northern attack against the Marxist Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola.

The mercenaries — expected to total as many as 3,000 within weeks — were recruited to train the 30,000 pro-Western troops and to man tanks and heavy equipment.

Several hundred European mercenaries, including at least 150 former British paratroopers, have massed in Kinshasa, Zaire to join the National Front for the Liberation of Angola in its planned thrust along the northern corridor of the West African nation.

The military sources said the attack would include guerrilla sorties against the Popular Movement. The sources said the National Front and the mercenaries had already made several successful guerrilla raids, but gave no details.

Officials of the National Front's ally, the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, said Monday the Soviet-backed forces would launch a major offensive on the southern front this week.

The judge also issued a memorandum Monday defending his closed-door questioning of potential jurors, saying they would be inhibited from answering honestly if their every word was going to be instantly televised and headlined on newspaper front pages.

Weed, who last saw Miss Hearst as he staggered from their apartment after being beaten with a wine bottle during the kidnapping, had planned to marry her.

After Miss Hearst rejected him, she professed her love for SLA member Willie Wolfe, who later died in a police shootout in Los Angeles. At the time of her arrest in September, she was living with housepainter Steven Soliah.

Ray already has lost several attempts to gain a trial, but today's attempt was before a court that once was somewhat sympathetic to his plight — the U.S. Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals.

About two years ago, the appellate court ordered a hearing to sort out the facts of Ray's claim that he was unconstitutionally coerced by his attorney, Percy Foreman, into pleading guilty.

Two Bodies Recovered

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The Coast Guard recovered the bodies of two fishermen in the Gulf of Mexico Monday about three miles from an oil rig where a pleasure boat capsized with five men during the weekend. Two men were still missing.

The bodies with life jackets were recovered by the cutter "Valiant" out of Corpus Christi, Tex., after being spotted from an airplane. They were not identified.

He said two of the men had lifejackets, one was clinging to an ice chest and the fourth was trying to swim in seas of four to five feet.

All four were described as strong swimmers, but a Coast Guard spokesman said a man would normally lose consciousness in three hours in the 60-degree water in the area.

The Coast Guard found the capsized boat seven miles from the platform where Moustakelis was rescued. If the others had stayed with the boat, they would have been rescued, a spokesman said.

Harold Comer, candidate for Gray County district attorney, will speak at a Pampa Area Man Power Association meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Fellowship Hall of the First Presbyterian Church, 525 N. Gray. The public is invited to the meeting.

Police are investigating a single vehicle accident on Starkweather Monday night. Othall H. Hicks lost control of his motorcycle.

In other reports, officers were informed of the loss of a license plate and a wallet containing personal papers.

A fifth person aboard the boat, Tonis Moustakelis, 27, swam to the platform when the vessel began taking on water Sunday. He was rescued from the rig, 35 miles east of Galveston, by an oil company supply boat.

The others aboard the boat were service station operators Sam Pavlides, 35, and Paul Christopher, 24, restaurant owner Paul Pavlides, 35, and Jack Kikolaidis, 17, all were from Houston on a fishing trip.

Moustakelis helped direct the search from the Coast Guard cutter Point Hope.

Schnabel Bought Stereo

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Indicted Senate Secretary Charles Schnabel used a Senate employee's paycheck to buy a stereo set now in his Capitol office, according to testimony given to the Travis County Grand Jury.

Records presented to the jury showed a $184 state paycheck written to Beth Beto, daughter of former prison director Dr. George Beto, was used as security for the loan Schnabel needed to buy the equipment.

Miss Beto, however, testified Monday she never saw the check — and did not receive payment for June 1971 above her normal $349 take-home pay.

Richard Ehlert, vice president and treasurer of Texas Warrant Co., which accepted the check, presented records showing Schnabel borrowed $181 and paid the debt with the $184 check made out to Miss Beto.

Schnabel's personal secretary, Peggy Brinkman, testified Monday the stereo was purchased from Montgomery Wards. Wards officials said records to verify the transaction probably had been destroyed, but they confirmed the store sold stereos such as the Webcor receiver.

Schnabel said he bought the set about four years ago but refused to say if it was purchased with state money. The equipment was not put on state inventory records.

Investigators checking extra checks issued to some Senate employees found a payroll entry showing Miss Beto was paid twice in June, 1971. One payroll entry showed her getting $204, another showed her regular $424 salary for the month.

Miss Beto said she was not aware two checks were issued in her name in June, 1971. She is the second witness to testify they did not receive Senate paychecks issued in their names.

The grand jury indicted Schnabel Dec. 30 on charges of theft and official misconduct.

A special extension was granted to allow the grand jury to continue its investigation of wrongdoing by the longtime Senate secretary.

In addition to the payroll records on Miss Beto, the grand jury Monday questioned a man about purchases of 23 canoes from an Arkansas manufacturer in 1973.

The man signed the witness register as "B. Brinkley" and listed his address as 6101 Ricker Dr. When contacted by reporters at his job at the State Treasurer's Office, however, he denied knowing anything about canoe purchases or appearing before the grand jury.

Records of the Ouachita Manufacturing and Industrial Co. show Brinkley purchased and picked up 23 canoes in three trips to Arkadelphia, Ark. Brinkley bought at a discount by listing himself as "Texas Research," and his business address as the State Finance Building.

Did Nixon Promise Aid?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration won't say whether Richard Nixon promised in writing to give North Vietnam $3.25 billion in postwar aid. But it won't deny it either, saying the issue doesn't matter anymore.

White House press secretary Ron Nessen said Monday Hanoi's continued drive to capture South Vietnam after the 1973 peace accord automatically ruled out U.S. aid.

"Therefore the whole question became moot."

But he did not deny the existence of a Nixon memo to Communist leader Pham Van Dong promising the reconstruction aid, a memo four congressmen say North Vietnamese officials told them about during their recent trip to Hanoi to pick up the bodies of three missing U.S. servicemen.

State Department spokesman

John Trattner said it was possible a figure of $3.25 billion was discussed in meetings of the U.S.-North Vietnamese Joint Economic Commission created by the accord.

"There were discussions in the JEC about the possibility of reconstruction aid following the signing of the Paris agreement," he said, "but any figure that was used was only for discussion subject to congressional approval and also, of course, subject to approval in the JEC.

No specific aid requests were presented to Congress or pledged by the United States for a simple reason: Hanoi's behavior in both Vietnam and in Cambodia was clearly in violation of the agreements.

Moreover, consultations with Congress showed there was no support for an aid program for North Vietnam. It was clear as early as June, 1973, that further discussions of aid would not change Hanoi's behavior," Trattner said.

Skirts, Pants Share Fashion Spotlight

NEW YORK (UPI) — Somewhere along the way fashion forecasters predicted the return of skirts and the end of the pants look for women.

They were 50 per cent correct. Skirts are back, but pants haven't disappeared by any means. They're a strong trend in the women's garment industry for spring and summer 1976. And it looks as if they will continue to be as long as sportswear is the major force in American fashion.

Women's Wear Daily, the trade publication, in a national sales survey reported a "peaceful coexistence" between skirts and pants. "Retailers view the return of the skirt as a plus and maintain the customer is not deserting pants, just tossing in some skirts to give her variety."

"Pants are still a staple and are being given fashion impetus through new fabrics and silhouettes — such as the ankle tie, the jumpsuit and different lengths."

One of the new directions of pants is toward the uniform, such as copies of workers' jumpsuits, painters' pants, mechanics' suits, waiters' jackets, parachutists' gear and filling station attendant coveralls. One Fifth Avenue, New York, store is advertising a coverall with the store's label across the back. Other coveralls carry labels for various gasoline brands.

Come summer, pants will be available in all lengths from the ankle right on up to the fanny. Back are the long Bermudas (just above the knees), clam diggers (just below the knees), and culottes or the pants-skirt.

Jumpsuits for day are tailored in sturdy fabrics; in evening are done in the dressiest of chiffons, satins and beaded materials. A lot of the fancy pants for evening bare the shoulders and are strapless.

Skirts are part of the sportswear action, the new ones cut to sling low on the hips, many pleated on the sides or cut on the bias for flare; others have tie waistlines. Favorite tops these days are the T-shirts in infinite variety and ornamentation.

Putting it all together as New York manufacturers-designers call the signals for the coming season, it is going to be one of casual looks.

The classics, such as blazers, will be strong, and so will the layered look of winter, going on into spring and summer with lots of loose layers of lightweight fabrics making the garment. Buttons give way to wraps, elasticized waists, drawstrings and ties, all for a softer, easier silhouette.

No one even mentions hemlines these days, but generally in skirts they're below the knees for daytime.

As part of the softened look watch for dresses that play up fabric, not figure. They include clear geometrics, linear looks and stripes of every kind. Prints include florals, oriental motifs, leaves and old-fashioned calico.

Spring brings a lot of the "hard work" fabrics such as twill, duck, denim and heavy cotton in sportswear. A season when cotton is back shows in lightweight batiste and voile, heavier wrinkle muslin and glazed chintz.

Polyesters aim for the real silk look in honan, shantung and pongee finishes. For evening, the soft look comes from georgette, chiffon, satin, crepe de chine and nearly weightless jersey.

Colors for spring range from the earth neutrals to the bright florals. They are marigold, azalea pink, cornflower blue, strawberry, jade green and clear pastels. White is everywhere, looking cleanest and newest with black or blue. Other neutrals are the beige, vanilla and ivory tones. Naturally, in a Bicentennial year, look for combinations of red, white and blue.

Women's streamlining of their wardrobes, and making many parts interchangeable, carries over to accessories. Shoes are no longer the chunkies, but refined T-strap pumps, high-heeled Mary Janes and the simple sling and plain pump. In the so-called "sensible" shoe category are spectator oxfords, espadrille sandals and lots of flats.

Belts are narrowed and classic, with lots of low-slung hip belts and sashes or the new skirts. Handbags are either all purpose or slim and sleek to carry only a few accessories. Watch for the vertically shaped shoulder bag, the big pouch, the slim envelope and the multipocket look.

Hats are kept simple, with knit skull caps, brimmed straws, neat cloches and occasionally a modified copy of the cowboy Stetson.

Apparently women are paring down themselves as well as their wardrobes.

The president of the Los Angeles Fashion Guild says the trend is to smaller sizes with customers. Paul Scott, who heads the organization of better ready-to-wear resources, told Women's Wear, "We all have been noticing that our bestselling sizes... have slipped to a 4-6-8 and 10, away from the larger 14 to 16 sizes."

The classic Chanel style appears again for spring, this time in beige stubbed polyester.

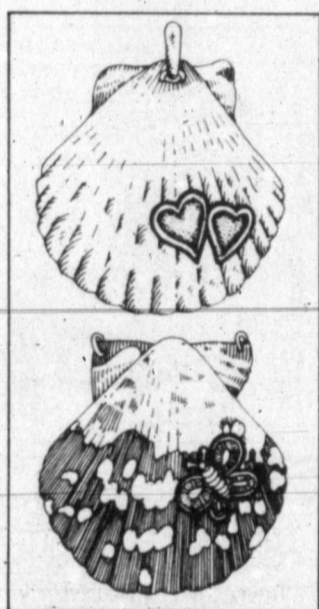

Shirt jacket and tailored trousers feature a glen plaid in newest shades of loden, rusty red and soft camel.

Simple Accessories Blend into Layers

NATURAL shells play host to two-tone enamel hearts (top) and a gold butterfly. By Martinez.

DIGITAL watches get slimmer, more efficient and attractive. These by Arnex have a brushed metal effect.

WOVEN leather handbags are perfect foils for soft, layered look. Hobo shape is a Morris Moskowitz design.

NEW YORK (NEA) — Unequivocally, the most outstanding fashion trend thus far is layering. It is evident with shirts, sweaters, jackets, coats, scarves and shawls which are all designed to harmonize and interrelate. The more you wrap, the more you establish a look. However, the attitude towards accessories is in the inverse proportion. Don't eliminate bags, belts, hats or scarves but pare down the individual items. Nothing should be obvious, just clean, simple accessories to blend with the layers of clothes. Here is an overview of favored items:

SCARVES AND SHAWLS: Colors are softer, murkier and designs more versatile, varying from subtle ombres to pointillistic flowers, from Pennsylvania Dutch-inspired patchworks to great geometrics. But the new shapes and variations in fabric really tell the story. Old stand-bys squares are interchangeable but each better suited to a different use. The small ones are good for tying at the neck and the larger ones and oblongs make exquisite ascots. The extra long versions and those cut on the bias are perfect for bowing. Triangles are recommended for easy head wrapping or draping around shoulders since they are designed to have the pattern fall in the right position. And, it is the reintroduction of the crepe de chinese scarves that is creating excitement. Made for the most part in larger sizes, they are the ultimate in softness and femininity.

The shawl is an integral part of layering. Mohair, tweed, tartan, cashmere in triangles and squares are wrapping up the fashion story. Elegant and tailored, feminine and flamboyant, dramatic and warm, the big shawl is the final word in accessories.

BAGS AND BELTS: With pocketbooks, the pared down accessory story really comes alive. Bags are less rigidly constructed and frames and decorative trims are more streamlined and less fussy. Clutches are big, bigger than ever, and including bags that aren't clutches — hobos, buckets, satchels, duffels, knapsacks, totes — have a flat, soft quality that makes them comfortable to tuck under your arm. Even bags with wrist loops, adjustable handles and shoulder straps are squishable, huggable and fit close to the body.

Belts take their color direction from the pocketbooks with beige, brown and luggage colors the best selections. Regardless of color, belts have never been so beautiful or so comfortable. The new narrower belts measure slightly more than an inch, and there are cinch belts and the softer sashes and obis.

Whether leather, suede, hemp or silk, belts can be found that are solid, stitched, quilted, woven, twisted or braided.

JEWELRY: Collections of costume jewelry vary substantially from carved Lalique and shiny finished plastics to natural, dyed and marquetry woods, to marble, horn and shells. All are strong, clean and contemporary.

American Indian, Oriental and South American are three of the influences that crop up in many collections. And amazing as it seems, silk cord — not gold, silver or stones — is one of the most important components of costume jewelry. It is wrapped around circles for bracelets, knotted for earrings and twisted and interlaced with gold thread or strung with big gold buttons, then topped off with long silk tassels for necklaces.

For the most part, necklaces hug the collarbone, but for occasions when an ascot is tucked in a shirt or a bias scarf is tied in a bow, there are longer ropes of sleek beads, and, of course, long silk ropes embellished with stones.

Bracelet cuffs are either one large metal or plastic circle or created by "layering" numerous bangles. Earrings are more geometric and fit closer to the ear. Both in costume and precious designs, the creations are simpler, with hand-hammered or intensely shiny surfaces.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 4
Your birthday today: Introduces a prolonged opportunity for you to learn self-discipline. This year's external influences range from stimulating to frustrating. You outgrow these conditions rather than resolve them by direct actions. Relationships at all levels are sensitive and require dedication. Today's natives are definite personalities, have some occupational specialty or precious talent.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Channel today's excess energy into constructive use. Straighten out the main situation and placate associates. Keep your sense of humor.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Secret deals made now are certain to backfire at awkward moments. Don't get involved. News you hear has some undercurrent of meaning.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: It's better to stick with traditional methods, despite your desire to take shortcuts. Grin and bear the idiosyncrasies of trusted associates.

Cancer [June 21-July 21]: If there's no trouble today, you're able to invent some in record time simply to escape boredom. Business and personal activities don't mix.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: You and everyone else seem overly sensitive. Reconsider that drastic gesture; wait things out a little further. Take extra care when traveling.

Iodine Essential
Iodine is an essential mineral, but "a little bit goes a long way," Mrs. Sally Coble, a nutrition specialist, said. "Lack of iodine causes goiter, an enlargement of the thyroid gland on the front and sides of the neck. But recent studies indicate some people with high levels of urinary iodine, reflecting a high iodine intake, also have evidence of goiter."

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: Being firm and determined is misunderstood by easygoing friends with unrealistic whims. Speculative ventures and gambling of any kind run to extremes and take strange and deceptive forms.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Take life seriously enough to do things right. Double-check what you buy. Give the family a break from your moods.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Confidential matters tend to come out, but don't assume everyone's heard the entire story. Debates quickly turn into quarrels; don't provoke or react to annoyances.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Neither sudden extravagance nor overcaution serves your best interests. Continue what's expected of you without hesitation or doubt despite distraction.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Nobody has patience. Remember distant goals, assign priorities, set schedules and stay busy. There's a break in an old problem if you see it from new perspective.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: You may find you've been on the wrong track for awhile. Consider how best to redirect your attention and energy. Resolve to profit from various comments.

Pisces [Feb. 19-March 20]: Your first impression of unfamiliar people is a sound guide for future reference, but snap judgments aren't valid. Be tactful.

CLEAN PLANTS
COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — Clean house plants are healthier house plants, says a Texas A&M University agricultural specialist.

"Dust on leaf surfaces reduces the amount of light available to a plant," says Everett Janne of the university's Agricultural Extension Service. "Thus the plant may not get enough light for photosynthesis. Also, a dusty plant looks drab and uninteresting."

Janne says to remove the dust brush the leaves with a soft camel-hair brush or damp sponge and polish with a soft cheesecloth about once a month. He says heavily soiled leaves should be washed with mild soap and warm water.

Smith Not a Pioneer

"The pioneer days are gone." With that statement, it seemed unnecessary to pursue the matter any longer. Asked what it is like to be the first black head basketball coach in District 3-AAAA, Ed Smith had answered the question simply and left no room for further inquiry on the subject.

Smith, 42, became Amarillo Palo Duro's coach shortly after Tom Gilley was deemed a misfit and fired by the Amarillo School board last year. Hiring Smith was a logical move since he had coached the Palo Duro junior varsity — successfully — since 1970.

Smith's other coaching tenures, not all as a head man, included a year at Jefferson, two years at Sealy, three at Clarendon Junior High and seven at Amarillo Carver, an all-black high school.

The firing of Gilley, who did so well for so long at Palo Duro but had criticized the Amarillo basketball program and whose on-court antics sometimes bordered on the obscene, came as a surprise to Smith. His own hiring was even more of a shocker.

"When they fired Tom, I didn't believe it at first. It took a while for it to sink in. They never did say they would hire me. When they hired me, I was glad it happened but I had to pinch myself several times to believe it," Smith said.

Paul Sims

Gilley was the first to offer Smith advice concerning the new position.

"He told me to step in there and not be afraid," said Smith, whose Dons are 5-14 for the season but have played better than last year when they won only three games.

"Palo Duro, called 'the best 5-14 team I've ever seen' by Pampa Coach Robert McPherson after his team's narrow, 38-33, win over the Dons last week, was slowed at the start of the season with three starters having to begin late because of football commitments.

One of the footballers — Sylvester Moore — has become the district's No. 2 scorer. Although the team revolves around Moore, Palo Duro has surprised rival teams with its balance. And its discipline, something missing in recent years.

"We try to go out and do things in the manner it takes to win. We try to get the kids to do things in practice the way they do things in the ball game," said Smith, spilling a bit of his philosophy on this writer.

"I ask that they do their best at all times. I've enjoyed this year. We haven't won a lot but the kids have hustled and learned. And when they learn, you can't complain."

Smith had to give up a lot to become the head basketball coach. As the junior varsity coach, he had time to assist with the football and track teams.

"I miss football. I coached it forever and ever and it's become a part of me. The kids all like me from football — I had a good rapport with them in football so it (full-time basketball) wasn't a big transition for me."

Smith added that the jump from the B-team to the varsity was a giant leap.

"You have more say on what you're gonna do and how you're gonna do it."

"It's better than the JV. I like it much better."

Hubbard Makes 2 Fame Halls

TREASURE ISLAND, Fla. (UPI) — Former major league umpire Cal Hubbard had just become the first athlete ever named to the Hall of Fame in both baseball and football; but he wanted to make sure.

"No kidding? I can hardly believe it. Are you sure?" Hubbard said Monday when notified he had been selected to the baseball Hall of Fame by its Veterans Committee.

A little way up Florida's Gulf Coast, Fred Lindstrom, a star third baseman in the National League from 1923 to 1936, learned of his selection to the Hall when a neighbor shouted the news to him as he walked off a golf course in New Port Richey.

"I just got off the golf course and the lady next door yelled at me and said she had heard it on the radio," he said. "I live right on the golf course and one of the fellows just now yelled at me that it had come over the radio."

The Hall of Fame Monday also announced the selection of the late Roger Connor, a slugger from the 1890s, who hit 131 homers during his career. That total was the all-time major league record until it was surpassed by Babe Ruth.

The 75-year-old Hubbard spent 10 years in pro football before turning to umpiring. He was an offensive end and linebacker for three years with the New York Giants and played tackle for seven years with the Green Bay Packers. He was selected to the All-Time All-Pro football team for the first 50 years of the 20th century.

Hubbard, a 43-year umpiring veteran, who retired in 1970, was just getting settled in his new apartment Monday when he heard the news. He had been ordered by his doctor to come to Florida from his Milan, Mo., home for a couple of months because of his emphysema, and arrived here Saturday.

"We had been out shopping and I had just gotten into the room and was sitting down to catch my breath," he said. "Now I'm going to have to start all over again trying to catch my breath," he said.

"You always kind of feel like you would like to be named," he added, "not because I was so good, but because it would be nice to be the only one named to both the baseball and football Hall of Fame."

Lindstrom, 70, was also "overwhelmed" at his selection.

"I'm very happy that the Lord allowed me to live to enjoy this day," he said. "There are so many others that are under consideration that you never feel like you will be the one until it is announced."

Lindstrom was signed in 1922 by the New York Giants at the age of 16. He was brought up to the majors in 1923 and played in the 1924 World Series, "making me the youngest player ever in a World Series," he said.

He was traded to Pittsburgh in 1933 and played there two years before going to the Chicago Cubs for the 1935 season and appearing in another World Series. He finished his career with Brooklyn in 1936.

Pampa, Sandies Tangle

By PAUL SIMS

Gary Abercrombie admits that the pressure is greater on his Amarillo High Sandies today than it is on Pampa, adding that "we got in a bad position right at the start."

The Sandies host Pampa at 7:45 p.m. today in a crucial District 3-AAAA contest. In other games, Amarillo Tacosa is at Berger and Amarillo Palo Duro is at Amarillo Caprock.

Following three games in District 3-AAAA play, Pampa and Berger are 3-0, Amarillo High is 2-1 and Caprock and PD are 0-3.

The Sandies, 15-7 for the season, lost 66-57 to Berger in the first district game. Since then, Amarillo has beaten Caprock 67-56 and Tacosa 54-42.

"The pressure's on us," Abercrombie said. "We've got to win both games (against Pampa and Palo Duro Friday). We got in a bad position right at the start when we lost that first game."

"We had to fight back and now we're back in it. And we've got two home games coming up."

The first half of district ends Friday. Pampa should win its remaining two games — against Amarillo and Berger — will earn the first-half title outright.

"I feel like we've got a psychological edge over Amarillo tonight since this group's never beaten us. If they win, they're gonna have to play extremely well," said a confident Robert McPherson, Pampa's basketball coach.

"We can win the district if we win the next two games. We'd already have half of it and everybody else would be struggling to win the second half."

Pampa starters against Amarillo probably will be 6-4 junior post Donnie Hughes (averaging 14.2 points, 8.3 rebounds), 6-1 senior forward Richard Lane (8.2, 4.4), 6-1 junior forward Jewel Landers (5.6, 8.1), 6-2 junior guard Brian Bailey (12.1, 6.1) and 5-10 senior guard Forrest Taylor (13.3, 10).

Amarillo High's top scorer has been 6-2 junior guard Mike Smith, averaging 15.9 points. Other Sandie starters are 6-6 junior post Eric Jacobson, 6-5 senior forward Larry Lamb, 6-4 senior forward Gary Holcomb and 6-2 senior guard Terry McKee.

Amarillo High will have a very noticeable size advantage over the Harvesters.

"We have average size but I don't think we're much taller than anyone else," Abercrombie said. "We don't always have all three of our big kids in there at the same time."

"It depends on what kind of defense we play — if we zone, we'll play all three big ones."

Concerning the game tonight, Abercrombie said, "We're gonna have to play well. We've played two good ball games in a row. We're gonna have to shoot the ball well."

McPherson, regarding his opponent, said, "They are obviously good but they're inconsistent. If they play real well, they'll be hard to beat. They don't have the quickness that a Palo Duro or a Tacosa does."

Pampa owns consecutive wins over Tacosa (43-39) and Palo Duro (38-33).

Gomez Good as Ambassador

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Preston Gomez, a Cuban-born contemporary of Fidel Castro, is baseball's international ambassador with a chance of improving American relations with Cuba.

Even though Cuba and the United States have no diplomatic relations and communication between the two countries is difficult, Gomez, a naturalized American citizen, has been invited back to his native land three times by the Cuban government.

"The reason is baseball," said Gomez, who was fired last season as manager of the Houston Astros. "Baseball is the No. 1 sport in Cuba, and the people are interested in talking about it."

Gomez, who comes from the same province as Castro, has known him for some 20 years dating back to before Castro took over as premier. Gomez tells how Castro still carries a baseball bat in his jeep and occasionally stops at baseball fields to take batting practice with various teams.

"Baseball is his hobby," said Gomez. "He played in high school and college. He's a big sports fan."

The relationship of Gomez with Castro and other Cuban officials could help in the arrangements for a possible baseball series featuring a team of touring American major leaguers on an unprecedented trip to Communist Cuba. Gomez has worked with the office of Commissioner Bowie Kuhn in planning the trip, but the plans are now dormant because of Cuban intervention in Angola.

"When I was in Cuba last year, that was one of the things everybody was talking about," Gomez said. "I've been the middlemen in the negotiations."

Since Dec. 10 Gomez has been employed by the St. Louis Cardinals, who plan to assign him as third-base coach this coming season. There has been talk that Gomez could be chosen to manage the San Francisco Giants, when that club's ownership is settled, and Gomez has a Cardinal contract that would permit him to take the San Francisco job.

But the Cardinals hope to keep him on their coaching staff as a special adviser for the team's Spanish-speaking players. Shortly after the Cards traded their regular third baseman, Ken Reitz, Gomez was dispatched to Puerto Rico to spend

Rutgers Wins NJ Battle

By JOE CARNICELLI

UPI Sports Writer

It was billed as "The Battle of New Jersey," seventh-ranked and unbeaten Rutgers against No. 19 Princeton, the top defensive team in the nation. What it turned out to be was just a little skirmish for Rutgers.

The Scarlet Knights' scoring machine, with Phil Sellers and Mike Dabney combining for 40 points, rolled to a 75-62 victory Monday night and raised its record to 17-0. Princeton fell to 12-4.

There was one big scare for Rutgers. That came with 11 minutes to go when the Scarlet Knights led, 55-53. Princeton stalled for four minutes, hoping to throttle Rutgers' high-scoring attack, but Dabney stole the ball and drove the length of the court for a layup. The basket sparked a 12-4 spurt and Princeton never threatened again.

"I think they went into the stall too soon," said Rutgers Coach Tom Young. "We just laid back and I knew it was just a matter of time before one of our guys stole the ball."

"I just anticipated the ball and there it was," said Dabney, who finished with 18 points. "We were laying back to guard against the back door play a bit and let them hold the ball. But we were just waiting for an opportunity."

Sellers hit 12 of his 22 points in the first half to lead Rutgers to a 42-36 lead. With Hill and Hauptfuhrer leading the way, Princeton closed the gap to two before Dabney's key steal of Frank Sowinski's pass.

In the only other action Monday night involving ranked teams, No. 8 Tennessee beat Mississippi State, 75-66. No. 14 Michigan whipped Wisconsin, 107-86, and No. 15 Alabama edged Georgia, 69-67, in overtime.

Ernie Grunfeld's 22 points carried Tennessee over Mississippi State. The Bulldog defense held Tennessee star Bernard King, the Southeastern Conference's leading scorer, to just seven points, the lowest output of his two-year varsity career.

Ricky Green's 32 points carried Michigan to an easy win over Wisconsin and Alabama, down four points with just 40 seconds left, tied the game on two long jump shots by Tommy Bonds before winning in overtime.

In other major games, Furman edged Appalachian, 77-76. Georgia Tech beat Virginia Military, 66-56. Kentucky whipped Louisiana State, 85-71. Vanderbilt nipped Mississippi, 61-60. Virginia Tech trounced Oklahoma City, 87-66. Creighton dumped St. Louis, 76-58. Loyola (Ill.) toppled Ohio University, 86-82, in overtime. Michigan State drubbed Northwestern, 91-71. Minnesota stopped Illinois, 72-62. Purdue ripped Iowa, 91-76, and Arizona State defeated Montana, 79-71.

In Amarillo Pittsburgh's Holmes Arrested for Cocaine

AMARILLO, Tex. (UPI) — Two plainclothes officers stopped at a motel to use the restroom, but instead, they said they found Pittsburgh Steeler defensive tackle Ernie Holmes handing cocaine to another man.

"It was the fickle finger of fate I suppose you'd say," said Dan Carter, a spokesman for the law enforcement agency. "They just walked into it."

"When they walked in, Holmes threw a silver container of powder toward the toilet bowl, but it fell short and some of the powder spilled out."

Carter said the officers took Holmes, 27, into custody Saturday night pending charges after the powder was tested. The test results were received Monday and Holmes was officially charged with possession of 250 milligrams of cocaine.

He was released on $1,000 cash bond and immediately left the city for a Phoenix, Ariz., where he was scheduled to attend a meeting of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

The other man in the restroom was not charged and his name was not released.

Holmes was in Amarillo for a wedding. Other guests at the wedding included Joe Greene, from North Texas State, who played next to Holmes on the Steeler's defensive line during their last Superbowl victory, and Ron Shanklin, from the University of Kansas, former Pittsburgh wide receiver who now plays for the Chicago Bears.

Holmes, 27, has played four years for the Steelers after graduating from Texas Southern University. During the 1974 season he cut off most of his hair, leaving only enough to form the shape of an arrow.

On March 16, 1973, Holmes was captured after a four-hour chase near Salem, Ohio. During the chase, Holmes fired at three moving trucks and a police helicopter and wounded Ohio Highway Patrolman Larry W. Myers.

Pampa Blue Tips Berger

BERGER — Darryl Hughes scored 20 points for the game and sparked a second-half comeback, as the Pampa Blue freshman team whipped Berger White 72-65 in junior high basketball action Monday.

Doug Baird added 16 points for the winners. Hank Weigel and Doug Skaggs 12 apiece. Berger led 37-23 at halftime but Pampa shot 48 percent (44 percent for the game) in the second half to take the win.

Today, both the Pampa Red freshman and eighth-grade teams host Berger Red.

SWC Recruiting Derby Begins; 'Horns Shine

By United Press International

The Southwest Conference recruiting derby, sometimes known as the University of Texas sweepstakes, opens today. The Longhorns appear to be ready for a quick start as usual.

Today is the first day prospective high school players who have completed their high school eligibility can sign a letter of intent with a Southwest Conference school.

Once an athlete does that he can never participate in football with any other conference school. The signing of a SWC letter of intent, however, would not keep that youngster from changing his mind and going to another school outside the conference.

Each conference team is allowed 30 recruits and most of the league clubs were expected to sign the bulk of their prospects today and Wednesday.

Texas' recruiting haul was beefed up last weekend with a commitment from wide receiver Johnny Johnson, a widely sought pass catcher from LaGrange.

In one of the several mini-battles conducted around the state this winter, Johnson had been wooed heavily by Texas A&M and the Aggies appeared to be in front in the race for Johnson's services.

But after making a trip to the University of Texas campus last weekend, Johnson called home to and told his mother he wanted to play for the Longhorns. A&M recruiters were in the house when the call came and left somewhat disgruntled.

Such tableaux have been played out during the past month and several star players have publicly announced their commitment in an attempt to ease the recruiting pressures.

Quarterback Sammy Bickham of Plano has said he plans to attend Baylor, running back Curtis Dickey of Bryan says he will go to Texas A&M and one of the outstanding defensive linemen in the state — Amarillo Palo Duro's Wesley Roberts — appears set for TCU despite a whirlwind effort by Oklahoma.

The Sooners, however, are given a good chance to sign Killeen quarterback Darrol Ray, who, along with Bickham, was one of the more highly recruited signal callers in the state.

Texas Tech, with folksy head coach Steve Sloan having had a year to get used to the territory, is expected to do well in the recruiting game and Arkansas is reported not to have had any problems in recruiting the top talent in its own state.

The teams in the most trouble this year are SMU and Rice since both schools hired head coaches very late in the recruiting season. Rice still has only two assistants to help coach Homer Rice in the recruiting campaign.

New Method for Blind

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI) — Debra Kimbrough is blind, but a new machine enables her to read printed material at 20 words a minute.

Miss Kimbrough is a special student at Texas Tech University taking a two-week course in the use of the OPTACON, an electronic device which enables the blind to read printed material.

"I first learned of the machine through an American Foundation for the Blind catalog," said the Abilene native. "My hobby as a licensed ham radio operator helped me learn more about it through conversations with people across the country."

Debra is the first person who was not a regular student at the university to be trained to use the device. The OPTACON is about the size of a portable cassette tape recorder, uses a miniature television camera to scan printed images and converts them to tactile patterns which may be read with the user's index finger.

"The machine can be used on type up to two inches tall or as small as agate — the size used by most newspapers for printing legal notices," says Geneva Adams, a Texas Tech librarian trained as an instructor for the special equipment.

Since completion of her training two years ago, Mrs. Adams has taught 12 students to use the machine.

"I contacted the manufacturer after learning about the machine, and after a demonstration I decided to purchase one," Miss Kimbrough said.

"I have learned to read 20 words per minute, and with more practice I'm told I will be able to increase my speed," she said.

Miss Kimbrough operates a photographic service booth in Abilene. With her new machine she will be able to read checks, catalogs, labels and telephone directories.

"Just about any printed matter will be accessible to her now for leisure reading," Mrs. Adams said. "She already read braille and used a typewriter. Now that she can read, there are just no limits for her."

Longtime Rogers Fan Meets King of Cowboys

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI) — Hairstylist Robert Tucker has seen all 87 movies Roy Rogers made during his reign as King of the Cowboys. Large theatre posters from the movies line the living room of his apartment.

Tucker, 30, got to meet his idol in person for the first time Monday night Rogers is in Lubbock for Thursday's World Premiere of his first motion picture in 20 years — "Mackintosh and T.J."

Tucker said although he had never met Rogers before he felt like he had known him for more than half his life.

"I like Rogers because he's like the guy next door," Tucker said. "Most movie stars would rather talk about how much money they have, but he'd rather talk about his horse or his dog."

"I'll never forget reading that fairly early in his career his manager told him he had made enough money to buy a horse. Instead, he bought a chicken farm for his parents because they had always wanted one. That's the type guy he is — and that's another reason Lubbock is proud to host the world premiere of his latest movie.

"I wouldn't miss it for anything."

Rogers filmed the movie on location 75 miles east of Lubbock on the 6666 and Pitchfork ranches — both large spreads still operating with cowhands and Old West.

"I've got my tickets to the world premiere, and I've even been invited to exhibit some of my memorabilia at the post-premiere party with Roy Rogers," Tucker said. "I hope to have a little time to get to know him better."

Tucker said he is sorry his children don't know who the King of Cowboys is. He is hopeful after this week they will have some idea.

Rules Changed On Who Must File

By Ray De Crane (Second of a Series)

Forget all those old rules you learned in the past on filing requirements for income tax returns. They have all been changed this year.

Here are the new 1975 rules. If gross income meets these levels you must file a tax return for last year:

Single, under 65	$2,350
Single, 65 and older	3,100
Married, filing joint return, both under 65	3,400
Married, joint return, one is 65	4,150
Married, joint return, both 65	4,900
Married, separate return	750
Surviving spouse, under 65	2,650
Surviving spouse, 65 or older	3,400

A self-employed person must file if net income from self-employment is at least $400. He may not owe any income tax, but could be liable for self-employment (Social Security) tax.

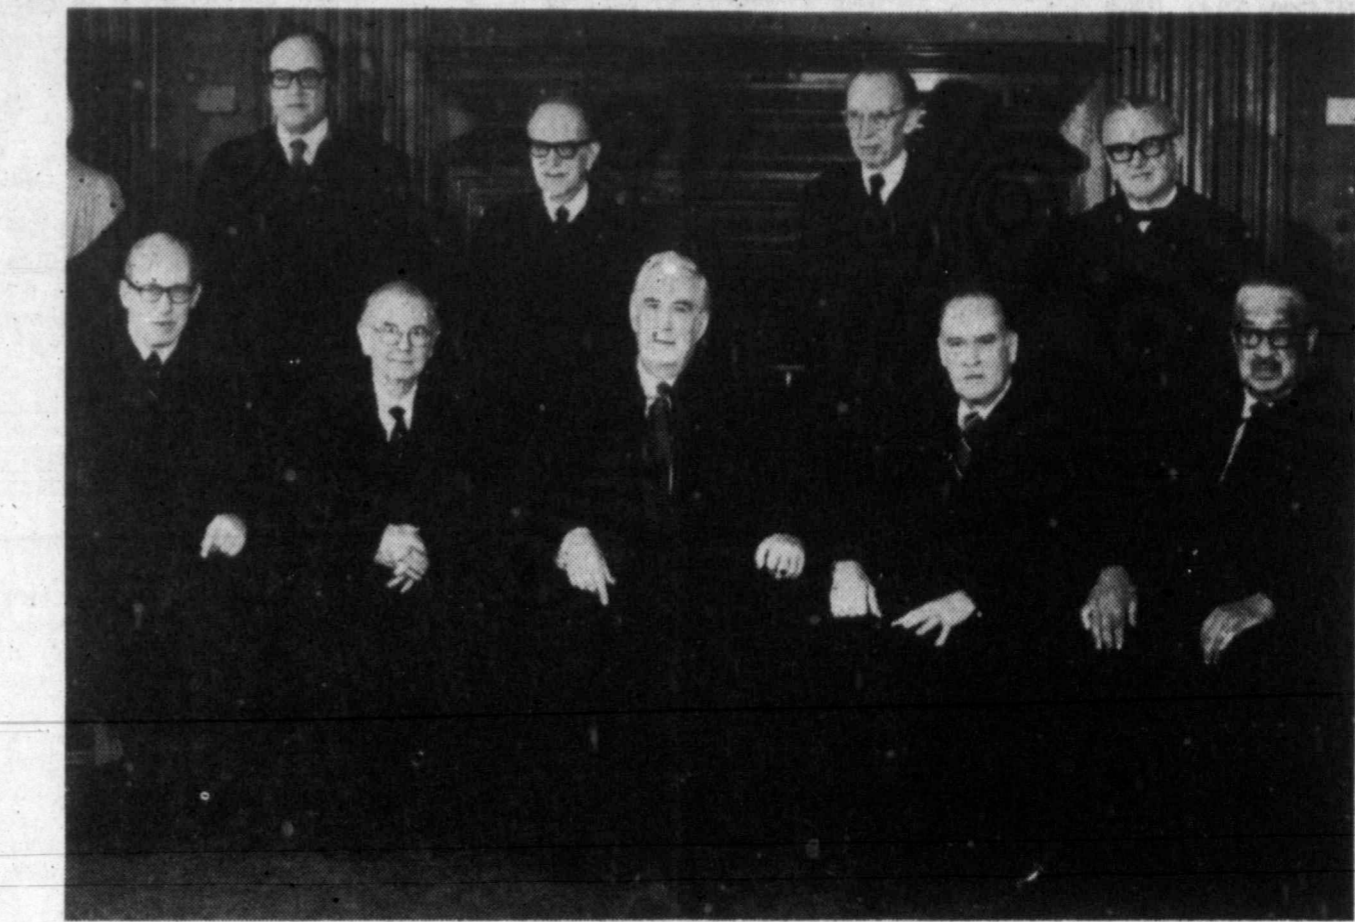

In addition, single persons who can be claimed as dependents on their parents' return, must file their own return if they have gross income of $750 or more that includes any taxable dividends, interest, or any other unearned income.

at the relatively few wealthy students, who may have sizable interest, dividend or trust income, but who still qualify as a dependent on their parents' tax return. In order to deprive them of the low-income allowance — which is designed to assist low-income workers — these dependents are required to file in a special way.

For the vast majority of younger people who find themselves in the position of having more than $750 of gross income that includes a modest amount of interest or dividends, use of the Tax Table is still permitted.

In addition to the foregoing, anyone who had withholding tax deducted from his earnings should file a tax return, even if not required to file. It is the only way to obtain a refund.

Thousands who were required to file tax returns in the past will be relieved of this requirement by the new rules. But another new group of low-income workers will want to file a tax return this year. For the first time ever they will get a refund, even if they have paid nothing into the system through withholding tax. (NEXT: Earned income credit.)

Socrates' Dying Place Identified

ATHENS, Greece (UPI) — An American archeologist says he has identified the prison building where Socrates drank hemlock and died more than 2,000 years ago.

For years, guides have labeled a small cave on a hill opposite the Acropolis as the prison of the ancient philosopher.

But now Eugene Vanderpool, retired professor of archeology at Athens' American School of Classical Studies says a stone building discovered 20 years ago near the city's ancient Agora — or marketplace — served as the jail.

The professor, associated with Agora excavations for more than 30 years, said a rereading of Plato's account of Socrates' last days, including details of the prison and its furnishings, led to his conclusions.

"I tried the details of the Poros Building and they all seemed to work," he said in an interview.

A popular court condemned Socrates to death in 399 B.C. and sentenced him to drink the poisonous hemlock for corrupting the young men of Athens with his teachings.

According to Plato, Socrates spent 30 days in prison before he drank the poison from the fruit of the hemlock — an herb of the carrot family.

The philosopher was fettered, but his friends were allowed to come and go. He was certainly a very special prisoner and his wealthy friends were probably able to obtain certain amenities for him, like a couch and a stool," Vanderpool said.

One cell was turned into a bathroom with a basin sunk into the floor. Another large vessel near the center of the room was for fresh water.

"Plato says that Socrates interrupted the conversation with his friends shortly before the end, saying he would take a bath so his corpse would not have to be washed for burial later."

"He left the room and returned shortly before sunset, the appointed time of execution," the professor said.

In an annex of the building, a group of 13 small vases — a type usually called medicine pots — was found at the bottom of a cistern.

"This was a remarkable concentration and I wonder if these pots did not contain hemlock, with each pot a single dose of the drug."

The final clue, Vanderpool said, is a marble statuette found in debris from the Hellenistic period when the building was destroyed. It shows Socrates, a bearded man, bare-chested, wearing a cloak thrown over one shoulder.

"What it was doing in the offices of the state prison we can only guess. But we may recall that the Athenians soon repented of having put Socrates to death. They punished his accusers and later erected a statue to him."

"Perhaps a prison official thought it was appropriate to have a small replica of the statue in the place where Socrates was executed."

More Than Mountains High in Aspen, Colo.

DENVER (UPI) — Federal drug officials say the more than 14,000 foot elevation of Aspen, Colo., isn't the only thing keeping the ski resort community's residents high.

John Ray Enright, regional head of the federal drug enforcement Administration, said recent drug arrests in other states and abroad prompted the agency to believe Aspen has become "a base of operations for at least a dozen major narcotics dealers."

"If the people of Aspen were using all the drugs that we've found destined there, they wouldn't need ski lifts to get up on the mountain," Enright said.

He said authorities in Thailand, Mexico, Mississippi and Georgia had in recent months seized unusually large quantities of heroin, cocaine, hashish and marijuana that were to be delivered to Aspen.

Enright blamed the increased drug traffic in Aspen on local law enforcement officials who he said "have been less than enthusiastic."

Aspen officials, however, said they were concerned about the city's drug problem but objected to the federal drug agency's interference.

"I don't think there is a factual basis for the DEA claims," said deputy district attorney Barry Bryant. "I know that the Aspen Police Department doesn't get along with the DEA."

"The sheriff's office doesn't get along with them. We don't get along with them. I know what they do. I know their kind of tactics."

Councilman Steve Wishart, a bartender, said the DEA's primary source of information was from undercover work which is unfavorably looked upon by city residents.

"It's a subhuman thing to do," he said.

The city's population is made up of about 2,500 residents but during peak periods of the ski season it soars to about 35,000.

State Could Cut Social Services

By ALAN BERLOW Pampa News Bureau

WASHINGTON — A new allocation formula proposed by President Ford in his Fiscal Year 1977 budget for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) could mean a reduction in funds for social service programs in Texas of as much as 25 per cent.

The Ford proposal would allow states to drop entirely their funding of social service programs including day care, foster homes for mentally retarded adults, halfway houses for drug addicted youths and several senior citizen programs.

An HEW spokesman, who asked not to be identified, confirmed that the Ford plan could mean reductions of nearly 25 per cent from current social service funding levels.

States are presently required to put up 25 per cent under the social service grant program, with the federal government making up the other 75 per cent. Under the Ford proposal, states could terminate their share of the funding and still receive federal money.

While Texas received $140.5 million in federal funds for social services in Fiscal Year 1976 and is expected to receive slightly more federal money in FY 1977, the new funding mechanism would allow the State to eliminate funds it is currently committing under the grant program.

President Ford has requested $2.4 billion for social services nationwide — up from $2.25 billion in FY 1976.

The HEW spokesman said he thought the new proposal would appeal to many congressmen because it gives additional power to State Authorities.

A statement on the HEW budget released by the agency said the new funding mechanism is designed to reduce "federal intervention in state social service programs" and eliminate "requirements that impair coherent service delivery."

Social services are available in Texas to families receiving income under the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program and those receiving Supplemental Security Income. Families with income below $14,901 may also receive social service assistance although families with incomes above $10,399 must pay for the services.

School To Tax Cars, Trucks, Boats

By THOM MARSHALL Pampa News Staff

In order to help finance the increasing price of Pampa's public education system, the Pampa Independent School District board of trustees voted Thursday night — late Thursday night — to tax automobiles, pickup, mobile homes, boats, recreational vehicles and the like.

The 15-item agenda at the board meeting required several hours and many quarts of coffee to complete.

Consideration of a tax equalization program was moved from the far end of the agenda and, following the reluctant acceptance of San Anderson's resignation from the board and the presentation of an concerning the school tax situation from various members of the audience of 40-plus persons.

Proceeding the comments from the citizens, Dr. Dan Lang, superintendent of schools, said that because of a new state finance bill (House Bill 1138) Pampa school-

Back Tax Total Almost $1 Million

By TEX DWERSE Pampa News Staff

Local tax entities are putting additional push into efforts to collect as much as possible of the nearly $1 million dollars in delinquent taxes owed to the City of Pampa, Gray County and the Pampa Independent School District.

A check with tax officials shows delinquent back taxes in the amount of $977,000.

tax entities — city, school district and Gray County — are in suits filed on top of the delinquent tax bill if delinquent taxes are not paid.

Back taxes total $977,000. That's a record for the city.

City Attorney Bob Gordon said he files approximately 25 or 40 cases a year to collect delinquent city taxes.

Gordon stated he has "six cases going right now and three more in preparation involving both personal and real property."

Wrestling on The Move—But Not Locally

By PAUL BISH Pampa News Staff

High school wrestling isn't mentioned by the University Interscholastic League but programs in increasing and that's why it's adding the sport to the curriculum.

And, if the sport is found to be not feasible as a part of the overall athletic or physical education program, it might be a good idea for an organization or club in Pampa to sponsor wrestling.

"In five years in the state of Texas it's gone from maybe 10 teams to 40 teams. That's a big increase. I would like to see the state's schools add wrestling to their program before the UIL would have a vote on sponsoring the sport."

Dr. Bailey Marland, director of athletics for the UIL, says the number now is "more than 40."

He said, "We currently have a policy where at least one-third of the schools participate in an activity before the legislative council will vote it in."

Money Holden, at Pampa Central district who has instructed high school wrestling in each of the schools, says 300,000 started on the intramural level in Pampa for an individual to push it. I would like to see the school could pick it up and have a coach."

Amerville schools have a type of safety against each other and boys ranch annually and the teams are represented in the state meet.

Kyle said, "It's not an organized wrestling between amateur and professional wrestling — they don't see amateur wrestling on television."

"I think it goes back to school officials in Texas, when we think of school officials in the school."

Students must take their own place to keep track of the work and travel time for the school.

Meanwhile, a new play, "Carbana," by Cynthia Buchanan, opened Jan. 13 as the first of an "In the Process" series at the new cabaret theater — known to the company as the "Old Vat Room." The improvisational Living Stage continues its program of free inner-city performances.
