Belfast Catholics React Violently to Stagg Death

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) - Rioting erupted in Roman Catholic areas of Belfast today in a second day of violent reaction to the death of Irish Republican Army hunger striker Frank Stagg

With the death toll at three since Stagg died Thursday. mobs of rampaging youths hijacked cars, barricaded streets, set fires and attacked one police patrol. Police warned motorists to stay away.

A Protestant gospel hall was set ablaze and destroyed as rioters stoned firemen in the Ardoyne district, one of the Catholic areas where support for Stagg, 34, was highest.

The rene wed violence came as British officials met to decide how to counter it. They were reportedly concerned at how the IRA could mount such widespread and simultaneous violence among the population.

The IRA blamed the British for Stagg's death and vowed revenge. British officials had rejected his demand to be moved from jail in England to Northern Ireland. He died on the 61st day of his hunger strike.

Within hours of Stagg's death, widespread rioting broke out in the bomb-scarred Catholic ghettoes of Belfast and spread to Catholic areas of Londonderry in the north and Newry and Lurgan to the south and west.

Marauding youths in Belfast set fire to shops and hijacked cars and buses. Seven incendiary bombs started fires in various parts of the city.

The disturbances lasted late into the night but the incidents were not serious by Northern Ireland standards, police said.

Triska...whatchacallit is the term describing folks who harbor a fear of the number 13. Put the 13th day on a Friday portion of the week and the result is, according to many, an unlucky day

The belief goes back a ways. Friday was named for the Norse goddess Frigga who had a friend by the name of Balder who was killed at a banquet with a guest list of a dozen gods when the 13th god, Loki, showed up uninvited.

Thirteen also was the number of diners at the Last Supper

No telling how serious it might be if the snowdrops were brought into the house on a Friday, the 13th of February. One would be foolhardy indeed to risk such folly.

And a last word of advice in view of these unusual holiday circumstances. It might be better to stick to the more conventional Valentine's gifts of candy or flowers and stay away from such choices as dark colored kittens, step ladders, or fragile

Blast Damages SAN SIMEON, Calif. (UPI) — A powerful bomb Thursday ripped a guest cottage at the seaside palace built by William Randolph Hearst, doing more than $1 million damage in an attack blamed by the Hearst family on radical "maniacs" trying "to terrorize Patty. The bomb blasted through a concrete wall in the two-story guest house overlooking the Pacific near a similar cottage the Hearst family uses as an occasional weekend retreat, a privilage retained when they gave the lavish $50 million estate to California in 1958. It is now known officially as the Hearst San Simeon State Historical Monument and is open to the to the public. A group of 53 tourists had just left the three-cottage compound when the bomb, left on the veranda, blasted a hole three feet wide through the eightinch thick concrete wall. It shattered marble, tile and glass art objects and destroyed rugs, tapestries, vases and statues dating back to the Middle Ages.

Hearst's father Randolph blamed the bombing on "a bunch of maniacs" with "the same mentality as those who killed Marcus Foster and kidnaped Patricia" - crimes committed by the Symbionese Liberation Army

"It shows the vicious, terrible people Patty was with," said her mother Catherine, calling the bombing "an attempt to terrorize Patty.

Plunder Isn't Charity

How easy it is to be confused and misled by the improper use of words. Take the word "charity," for instance.

Charity, in its true sense. means the voluntary sharing of one's own wealth or resources with others whom the giver believes to be in need. Truly, that is a noble, compassionate and commendable act, provided that the gift is voluntarily received as well as given. Many people even believe that those with much are obligated to share with those less fortunate: which, of course, is still all right. so long as the property they have in mind to be shared is their own and not someone

But take the same word, "charity," in its corrupted. political sense, and you have an entirely different concept. Now, instead of a voluntary exchange between willing -participants. you have a third party, the government bureaucrat. entering the picture who proceeds to take from those he believes to have too much in order to give to those he believes to have too little. What's It Worth?

Anyone for some staggering statistics? Government regulation is expected to cost General Motors, according to its vice chairman Richard L. Terrell, at least $1.3 billion this year. That is enough money to have operated the entire federal government during the first 75 years of the United States' history as a nation

A lot of people feel the national right government, relatively those early days than it is now.

They might ask as well as if the supposed benefits of all this regulation, which ties up GM's most competent people in nonproductive work, is worth the cost. And if it is true of GM. what about Chrysler, American.

Better to ask those questions quietly, however, and of the want to form a government speaking, was more responsive committee to do the cost - at least a tamer animal - in benefit analysis. Happy

States Also Have Their Big Spenders

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

While public attention is focused on the mushrooming cost of federal government operations, the rising cost of state government also deserves the closest scrutiny. Many of the worst spenders in the country are in state legislatures and executive offices.

Like federal officials, the spenders in state government regard government as a growth industry. Each year, they demand that new taxes be imposed on state taxpayers. Oppressive taxation has become a reality in many states. The state income tax, in particular, has been increased to the point where it is a severe burden.

Not every state in the Union has an income tax, but the spenders in those states that don't have such a tax are making a maximum effort to have such a tax imposed on the Tennessee is one of those states where a drive has been mounted to enact a state income tax law. Happily, the legislature and people have indicated strong opposition to the tax.

Richard M. Hoe. in a letter to the Chattanocga Times, set forth some of the reasons thoughtful citizens are opposed to the income tax proposal. He

"State and city income taxes seem to have the effect of turning both state and municipalgovernments into growth

"Government, I believe, should not be a growth industry. When government acts like a growth industry it soon loses control. Unfortunately, when the damage is done it is almost impossible to return to cost efficient government

Mr. Hoe also pointed out that government is supposed to be responsive to the needs of citizens. But in many states and cities — and New York City is an example - the taxpavers are forced to respond to the demands of the bureaucracies, a complete turnaround.

Mr. Hoe made a very strong case for opposition to a state income tax, saying that government should streamline operations in order to be responsive to the people and ease the burdens on them. He added that "The mechanisms required to collect income taxes require vast expenditures and a sizable number of new employes. In time the income tax bureau would probably cost more by far than expenditures for which it was originally designed.

The point the taxpaying public should bear in mind is that government cannot become a swollen entity if limits are placed on its tax - gathering capability. Thus it is important to impress upon officialdom that new tax sources will not be developed.

Politicians at the state and local level must understand that what tax - paying citizens want is curtailment of grandiose public spending, a reduction in the number of government offices and employes, and a general dismantlement of bureaucracies.

In short, the times call for state and local governments that are models of restraint in

"We prefer the subtle approach."

By Ray Cromley WASHINGTON - (NEA) - A wide ranging series of studies by Congressional committees and the General Accounting Office are learning why the average citizen puts little trust in the bureaucracy. Though it has been estimated that fraud and bumbling in Medicare, Medicaid, Social Security, Supplementary Security Income and other Health Education and Welfare programs run into the multi-billions, one report concludes that HEW takes as long as five years to take corrective action against discovery of the deficiencies

The HEW Office of Security Investigations has a 10-year backlog of uninvestigated cases.

The organizational structure of HEW's fraud and abuse units was described as "fragmented and confused." Numbers of investigators are said to have little training or experience. No meaningful attempt has been made to even evaluate the extent of fraud or other abuse. Investigators found that the Interior Department knows so little about the oil leases it offers for sale on the continental shelf that officials have no way of being even reasonably sure they are receiving fair market value for properties worth Though considerable sums have been spent by the Small Business Administration to help disadvantaged firms become self-sufficient and competitive, the program has been a flop. In six years, the program's success totaled a mere 31 small firms nationwide. Recidivism is perhaps the major problem in crime control today. Though the Labor Department has been spending considerable sums on pilot rehabilitation programs, the management of these projects is so lax and the records kept are so incomplete it is impossible to evaluate and compare results. Much of the money spent on these programs therefore is The Energy Research and Development Administration is assuring Congress it will need less than $2 billion for a demonstration Clinch River Breeder Reactor, no mean sum. Yet investigators looking into the basis for ERDA's estimates, found them fuzzy. Obvious costs were slid over, and almost certain problems ignored. The investigators, after considerable study, were unable to come up with any reasonable data from ERDA to determine what price the project could be built for or to estimate reasonably when it could be finished. Congress, in essence, was asked to vote blindly.

Though there has been much criticism of irregularities on the commodity futures trading markets, irregularities which eventually result in exorbitant prices for consumers with little benefit to producers and high profits for some speculators, a team of government investigators found there has been little meaningful attempt by the government to study the major factors usually believed to be responsible.

The Federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration has been so rough with private companies it is estimated that industry has been required to put in from $1 billion to $2 billion in equipment of such doubtful value no appreciable reduction in injuries has been achieved thereby. By contrast, an investigating team found severe noncompliance in a sampling of government workplaces where OSHA makes only spotty, ineffective checks.

And as for the federal government's own showplace, the District of Columbia, investigators found refuse collection employes, paid for a 40-hour week, worked an average of 24.5 hours. Labor productively for processing individual tax returns declined 40 per cent between 1968 and 1972.

Question Box

QUESTION: It has been proposed that the federal government allow survivors of deceased small business people and farmers up to 25 years to pay inheritance taxes, so that it will not be necessary to liquidate the operations to pay the tax. As I understand the proposal, heirs would be allowed five years to pay without penalty, and then would be allowed 20 years more to pay off installments at 4 per cent interest. Isn't this a good solution? Would this be considered a government subsidized loan of taxpayers' money?

ANSWER: If one is to accept the theory that government should be taxing inheritances at all (another Karl Marx proposal+, then we believe the proposed deferal of taxes to be less harmful than the present requirement of almost immediate payment. We have been particularly critical of the fact that many times widows and children and surviving partners have been forced to liquidate operations in order to pay taxes. However, we believe the theory of taxing inheritances is one of the most objectionable of all taxes, since it assumes that a person is not entitled to dispose of honestly acquired property. That, of course, is the socilaist - communist objective - to deprive earners of their right to invest, accumulate and dispose of earnings.

Therefore, allowing survivors to pay the tax in five years without penalty is a move a to make the inheritance tax more acceptable (or less objectionable) to people of all political faiths.

We believe, however, that it is a mistake to say that the heirs are being granted a subsidized loan under the proposal. The politicians might like people to believe that they are granting a form of largesse, but they are

If one considers such a transaction a loan, one is saying the government owns the property farm or other business). And that is a reversion back to slavery, when it was believed every person and his property belonged to the king or government. It is repugnant to individuals believing they have a right to their lives and the product of their lives.

Polluted pipedreams of EPA mandates

WASHINGTON - (NEA) - The official from the Environmental Protection Agency wasn't happy. "A company asks us to proffer advice on cutting pollution," he said, "we go but if we find something wrong, we lay on a fine and report the firm for noncompliance.

We ease our consciences by telling the plant manager in advance that's what we're going to do," he said.

'We enact regulations few companies from quite a range of industries can possibly follow this year or next. And we know

Yet the men who make the decisions, lawyers almost to the man, say EPA is an enforcement agency, and that there's no place for those hoping to lend a helping hand." 'We're supposed to catch violators and punish them - not let them escape," they say. "I sometimes think," the EPA spokesman says, "that some of those legal types are looking to their own future when they're setting policies and writing intricate regulations laymen can't understand. After a period at EPA they'll resign make a good living advising clients for a fee on how to deal with the regulations they've written. 'We at the agency," says my contact, "know that the pollution practices we're attempting to change overnight have been common for decades in one form or another. I'll be happy if we can correct them in 10 or 30 years. "Though we know that the average businessman, especially the man with little capital working on close margins, can't possibly comply with our demands, we hope that by these rough tactics we can push most firms into doing more than they think they can more quickly than they're willing to admit. And sometimes this iron fist approach works. In the meantime we've stirred up a lot of ill will. There must be a better way,' he continued

"Instead of asking companies to do the impossible, we should be out there working with them to learn what they can do, with what they have, to cut back on the pollution their firms create.

"I've had company men tell me if we'd be reasonable they'd do everything they could to clean things up as fast as their finances and their production techniques would permit," an EPA official continued. "But if I push them to the wall, they'll buck, not bend. The smart ones know we can't carry out our threats. Some tell us so to our faces at then ask us what we want, cooperation to the limit of their abilities or a dog eat dog fight we can't possibly win. In cases like this - where the businessman stands up for his rights - my experience is that we at EPA back down. Not always, but a good deal of the time, with one face-saving gesture or another, though the true facts don't get in the record.

In one form or another, their conversations run like this: 'These environment men say we've got to do this and we've got to do that. A lot of these regulations they throw at us don't make sense. To us, they're theories someone has dreamed up, not bothering to check what they'll do to our production schedules or our costs. They give us no evidence that their demands are necessary. Some sound like pipe dreams. But we go ahead, spend considerably more than we can afford, to

'Then someone discovers the regulations were wrong. The things we were forced to do were ineffective or do more harm than good. So they change the rules. Then change them again. In my business we're losing respect for EPA which is too bad because we do have to do something about pollution. But somebody better find out what is essential and what not - and what kind of a timetable is necessary.

DEAR JAKE: You're funnier than John (maybe).

DEAR ABBY: I am a teenager, and because so many adults keep asking us "ungrateful" teenagers what we want to be accepted for what I am. I want to be loved by those who brought me into this I want a home that is rich in honesty, sharing and caring.

I want to be heard: I just might have something to say that you need to hear. I want to know more about myself-my sexuality, my Randolph said the $1 million bombing of a guest house near the baronial castle built by his father was an "outrage" and a 'stupid, vicious thing to do to the people of California." The Hearst family gave the estate to the state several years ago.

A hushed, packed courtroom heard Miss Hearst's soft but firm voice on the oft-played tape recording. She nervously fingered her face while the tape was being played, then wiped her nose with a handkerchief after it had finished.

"This is Tania," she said on the tape. "On April 15, my comrades and I expropriated $10,660.02 from the Sunset Branch of Hibernia Bank."

She went on to say the idea she was brainwashed was ridiculous to the point of being beyond belief." She scorned her parents and called Weed a "sexist pig."

His final witness was agent Thomas Padden, one of the two officers who arrested Miss Hearst and fugitive Wendy Yoshimura at their apartment last Sept. 18.

"I drew my weapon as I went up the back stairs," Padden said. "I observed two females through the window in the back door. I said, 'FBI, freeze.' They did not immediately comply so I repeated the order. They did not comply because they were in the middle of getting up from the table.

"Miss Yoshimura complied and Miss Hearst continued to move. I told her, 'Freeze - or I'll blow your head off."

Prices Unchanged For January

WASHINGTON (UPI) -Wholesale prices were unchanged in January as the cost of food and farm products declined for a third consecutive month, the Labor Department said today.

A 1.8 per cent drop in farm and wholesale food prices last month offset an 0.4 per cent increase in the prices of manufactured goods-the smallest advance in six months.

Wholesale prices have shown little or no change since October, when they rose a $ substantial 1.8 per cent. They were unchanged in November and dropped a slight 0.4 per cent in December.

The report provided another piece of good news in the administration's battle against inflation. But administration economists expect food prices to begin leveling off in the near future as the current moderation in inflation becomes more gradual.

Prices declined 2.8 per cent for farm products and 1.5 per cent for processed foods and feeds in January, contributing to a downward trend that began last November. Farm and food product prices have declined at a compound annual rate of 20 per cent over the past three

Hightower Fund Leads

Jack Hightower, D. Vernon, has taken a modest lead over his Republican challenger Bob Price in raising funds for the 1976 election campaign.

Through last year, Hightower had $7,513 on hand, according to Federal Election Commission (FEC) records

Price had a cash balance of $1,175, although records show he still owed $41,644 from his costly 1974 campaign against Hightower.

Neither Price nor Hightower have competition in their respective May 1 primary races. Price raised a total of $83,089 last year, but most of the money was earmarked toward retirement of outstanding loans.

In the last three months of 1975 alone, he received approximately 200 contributions of varying amounts.

Hightower not only paid off a $5,967 debt from the 1974 campaign, but raised enough

Dudley's three-point play with 1:53 left helped Golden State pull away to a 113-104 win Thursday night, in what had been a see-saw contest. Coach Al Attles' timely use of Dudley and other reserves was a hallmark of the 1975 championship drive and is, in part, responsible for the Warriors' current 38-15 record, the best in the NBA.

Dudley's key play Thursday night came after he swiped a rebound "I go for the boards a lot for a guard," he said. "It just is an instinct." Phil Smith, who scored 30 points, said Dudley "is a vicious rebounder for a guard and he has a tremendous instinct for the ball. This tremendous instinct for rebounding is what keyed the Warrior victory."

Low fat diet cuts cholesterol

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I have been on a low fat diet for over a year. My cholesterol was 337 and I brought it down to 294, 254 and finally 245. When I ask what level should I aim for my doctor just says I'm doing fine. What is the normal level?

I am 60 years old and in good health. I have read different articles on high cholesterol that say that it cannot be dissolved once it's in the arteries. Is that true? The triglyceride level is normal. I have brought my weight down to 143 from 163 pounds. I would like to know if am doing all right and what is normal

DEAR READER - In general the risk of having a heart attack or other complications from fattycholesterol deposits increases as the level of cholesterol increases and decreases as the level decreases. Different laboratory procedures also vield different results.

Depending on the type of test done, once your cholesterol level is around 220 or less your level is low enough that it becomes a less important factor.

I wanted to include your letter in the column for another reason. Your case is a good example of how a low fat diet works. You can debate the value of a low fat low cholesterol diet in some instances for the general population but there is very little doubt about its value in decreasing the cholesterol level in people who have high levels to begin with. Most physicians who have really tried this approach and who succeed in getting their patients to lose unhealthy pounds have observed such changes.

Your results sound like you are moving in the right direction and as you continue to lose extra pounds the results will probably be even better. While you are about it, gradually get rid of all your excess pounds so you don't have any significant amount of fat on your body.

Those articles you have read about not being able to dissolve the cholesterol in your arteries once it is there are completely wrong. A well planned study on monkeys put on a high-fat high-cholesterol diet and then put back on a low calorie monkey diet showed that the changes dis-

From worldwide studies we know that the deposits disappear. Prisoners of war in World War II on calorie restricted low-fat diets who died and were examined had arteries as clean as a 17 year old girl. Heart disease nearly disappeared in occupied countries of Europe and in Germany at the close and after the war. It was common before the war and is now even more common. The limited food intake resulted in significant changes in the fatty-cholesterol deposits in

Of course you can't reverse the actual muscle damage that might occur to the heart if you have had a heart attack or the brain damage from a stroke but you can accomplish a lot in the way of cleaning out your arteries with a good treatment program.

A lot of people don't get the results they should get because they don't go far enough. When you need to lose 40 pounds and lose only 10 you can't expect miracles.

Presidio--Texas' Hotspot

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI) - The town that for decades was the most publicized among all of those in Texas is back in the news.

It is not the romantic western towns of El Paso, Laredo or San Antonio, nor the computer centers of Dallas or Houston.

It is little Presidio, the community of 1,000 persons struggling in the wasteland of far southwest Texas, built in the Big Bend country in a brown valley on the rocky banks of the Rio Grande, with little to recommend it but the heat.

Evening after evening for year after year, Presidio led the weather forecasts on the 6 o'clock news across the country — "The nation's hotspot today was, again, Presidio, Texas, with 109 degrees (or 101 or 114)."

But in 1972 Oliver Harper retired. Harper, from his downtown hardware store, had monitored the temperature and rainfall gauges for the National Weather Service in Presidio and called the daily high-low to the regional office in Lubbock.

Mr. F. Daly, an 84-year-old gentleman who was born in Presidio and has spent his life there, took over a portion of the chore. He kept the daily log, but is hard of hearing, especially on the telephone, and had to mail his report to Lubbock once a month.

Presidio was dropped from the afternoon Temperature and recipitation Tables.

Earl Clark, head of the Data Acquisition Department for the NWS in Fort Worth, said Daly's daughter, Thelma McKeel, solved the problem.

"Mr. Daly reads the temperatures and phones them to his daughter," Clark said. "She is the one

Clark said the average temperatures might be lower from now on at Presidio.

"The exposure around Mr. Harper's hardware store was a hotter area because of the store itself and reflections and the confinement of the city,' Clark said. "The exposure where the thermometer is now is more nearly representative of the area.'

The location of the new thermometer is precise. It was outlined by Daly: "From the post office go easterly .05 miles to Highway 67; southerly for a distance of .25 miles to a street (unmamed), westerly on that street a distance of .2 miles and that is the driveway of the observer's house."

Mrs. McKeel suggested her father's house is still a hotspot, even in the backyard were the official thermometer is located.

she said. "It's going to be hot here, just like always. You can't really call downtown Presidio confining. It doesn't matter where the thermometer was; it's always in the wide-open

"I was born and raised here. I remember 112degree readings quite often. We're extremely dry. The average annual rainfall is seven inches and we haven't had any rain in months.'

Presidio's return this week occurred with a shade less than it's old fever, er, fervor. On its first day back in the news - Tuesday - Presidio recorded a high of 88, not even good enough to lead the state. Alice, Tex., recorded an 89.

But there is time. It is going to be - officially another long, hot summer in Presidio.

Is 'Right Turn' Logic Wrong

By ANN GHERLEIN

Pampa's Washington Bureau WASHINGTON - One of the objectives of the new energy bill signed by President Ford last, month is to stimulate state energy conservation measures, but to date the law has provoked more controversy than action. according to a recent Wall Street Journal report.

The right - turn - on - red provision, for example, is generating more heat than (green) light. Officials of many states and cities that now prohibit right turns argue the danger element is too great.

Karagheuzoff calls the provision "asinine." "At any given time in the city there are a half - million cars moving" and million of pedestrians, he said. The right on - red provision's estimated energy savings are also provoking skepticism. Originally estimated to save yearly one billion gallons of gas, estimates are now as low as 50

Other conservation provisions of the law include establishing state efficiency standards for lighting in all public buildings, New York City Traffic insulation requirements and Commissioner Theodore heating and cooling efficiency standards for buildings.

Since many states have no uniform building codes, these provisions are also creating complications since state legislatures must act first and they are sometimes reluctant to

The energy law provides for a total of $150 million in federal funding over a three - year period for state energy conservation programs which meet the federal requirement.

* * * Construction costs for the country's first demonstration originally estimated $500 million four years ago - have reached $1.9 billion, up $200 million from the previous estimate less than a

The most recent cost hike resulted from delays in beginning construction, according to Thomas A. Nemzek, director of reactor development for the Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA). Inflation increases the cost about $10 million or $15 million a month, he said.

Construction was to have started last August, but is now planned for this November, according to Nemzek.

The breeder - so called because of its ability to produce more fuel than it consumes - is the highest single energy research and development expenditure in the nation's energy budget, and a subject of growing controversy.

The Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) has claimed that the breeder will "produce significant financial benefits, resulting primarily from critics contend that such claims - based on inflated estimates of future energy demand and underestimates of capital costs and cost overruns - are overly

The expansion of a temporary arrangement for diverting Department of Defense (DOD) air flight passengers from chartered flights to unoccupied seats on commercial airlines could result in yearly jet fuel savings of 48 million gallons and dollar savings of up to $3.5

(GAO) report. Currently, ADOD charters an aircraft for transporting groups personnel' to overseas locations. The Pentagon pays about $3.5 million yearly for unoccupied seats on these flights, according to GAO.

The Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB), which regulates commerical airlines, is considering whether to make the diversion arrangement permanent.

FPC Says Deregulation Means Soaring Profits

By ANN GHERLEIN Pampa's Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON - The Federal Power Commission (FPC) has calculated that deregulation of natural gas prices would result in huge million, according to a recent margins of profit for gas General Accounting Office producers.

An administration - supported deregulation bill, versions of which have been approved by the House and Senate, would gradually lift price controls on natural gas over five years.

The FPC calculated the rate of return on investment for two types of "new gas" covered by the deregulation bill at the request of the National Observer. For newly discovered gas, the rate of return would be 49 per cent a year and for gas already found but sold under new or. renewed interstate contracts, 114 per cent.

But Rep. Robert Kreuger, D. Tex., sponsor of the administration bill, says the FPC's calculations "won't hold in the future. Inflation and other factors will drive up the cost of drilling in years to come, lowering the percentage of profitability more than is orseeable at this time.

assignment, Anderson will report to B.R. Nunn, natural gasoline plants manager. Anderson, 31, has a B.S. degree in chemical engineering > from Iowa State University and joined Skelly in June 1967. He and his wife, Mary Ann, have three sons.
