

Seven Die in Houston Grain Explosion

HOUSTON (UPI) — Rescue workers today found the body of the seventh victim of a thunderous explosion which demolished a grain storage facility Sunday. Two more men were missing.

Firemen and volunteers tried to clear the pulverized rubble and twisted steel remains of the 10-story facility to locate the missing men, but were hampered by a heavily damaged wall which threatened to crumble.

Fire department spokesman Paul Carr said at midmorning five firefighting units were battling several blazes in the ruins of Goodpasture, Inc., a massive grain storage and loading facility on the Houston Ship Channel.

At least seven persons were injured. "There is a grain inspector missing, there is a grain sampler missing. And there is a Goodpasture employee missing," Carr said.

He said there were numerous rumors of others missing, but he said they could not be confirmed.

The thunderous explosion hurled hundred-pound chunks of concrete-like shrapnel, leveled a section of the 200-yard long main elevator and damaged adjacent storage bins.

One official estimated damage at $45 million — $25 million for the plant and at least another $20 million worth of corn, wheat and sorghum, most of which was bound for overseas shipment.

One of the dead was 9-year-old Larry Lawrence Lopez who was crushed inside his father's car by tons of concrete. His father, Larry Lopez, 34, an assistant supervisor at Goodpasture who also was in the car, was in critical condition.

"He loved to go work with his daddy on Saturdays and Sundays," Larry's mother said. "He just liked to go up there and watch his father do whatever he had to do."

The Houston Medical Examiner's office said six bodies were recovered from the rubble and Fire department Capt. L.O. Martin said officials knew where two more bodies were located but they could not be reached because of the threat of a falling wall.

Martin described the scene as "total devastation" at Goodpasture, which handled at least one-half of the U.S. grain shipped to Russia through the Port of Houston.

"There's heavy equipment here that has been flattened. Boxcars are on their sides. It's going to require some heavy machinery to come in here and move this debris and find the deceased," Martin said.

Martin said it could take as long as five days to search the rubble for the missing men.

The explosion at the sprawling grain storage facility along the Houston Ship Channel was heard more than 20 miles away and shattered store windows two miles away in the suburb of Galena Park. Looters ransacked some of the stores until police moved in.

"We've had lots of looting in Galena Park," a police department dispatcher said.

The blast hurled concrete chunks more than 200 yards across the Goodpasture facility, a series of loading docks and storage tanks stretching for a half-mile along the ship channel. A two-story metal building housing a chemical laboratory was blown apart in the blast. The tops of six or eight metal storage sheds resembling oil tanks were blown off and grain spilled onto the ground.

The cement main elevator was punctured by numerous pieces of flying concrete, which ripped huge chunks out of the side of the structure.

Ford Swipes at Reagan

United Press International
President Ford, on the eve of the New Hampshire presidential primary, took a swipe at GOP challenger Ronald Reagan today by promising the nation's governors never to "irresponsibly transfer serious problems" to them.

Ford's speech to the National Governors Conference appealed for their help in pressuring Congress to extend revenue sharing, but he got in a few political jabs against Reagan's controversial proposal for transferring many federal social programs to the states.

"It is all too easy to offer unrealistic suggestions in the heat of an election year," Ford said. "But a President, or a governor in office, has to provide accountable and realistic leadership. I will never irresponsibly transfer serious problems from the federal government to state governments without regard for human needs and fiscal realities."

Reagan and Ford are locked in what looks to many like a toss-up race in Tuesday's New Hampshire primary. The former California governor was in Illinois today while Ford did his politicking in Washington and his wife, Betty, prepared to leave Tuesday for a week of solo appearances in Florida.

Four Democrats — Morris Udall, Jimmy Carter, Birch Bayh and Fred Harris — remained in New Hampshire today to make one last pitch for the undecided vote, but all planned to leave by mid-afternoon and join the fifth New Hampshire Democratic contender, Sargent Shriver, in Boston.

Their supporters are ringing doorbells and phones throughout New Hampshire today in an attempt to reach what in political jargon are referred to as the "threes" and the "not-at-homes."

Wander into the campaign headquarters of Jimmy Carter or Birch Bayh or Morris Udall and they'll all tell you the same thing: "The threes will decide it, and the man who gets to the most threes will win."

The "threes" are those undecided voters in the middle of a one-to-five scale in which "ones" favor a candidate, "fives" favor an opponent. A close relative of the "threes" are the "not-at-homes" — those out when canvassers last tried to reach them.

Carter is making the biggest effort to reach the "threes." He has 80 Georgia "neighbors" going door to door and has hired 20 telephone canvassers. He is the only one using paid canvassers — from the same firm George McGovern used here four years ago. Udall and Bayh, the other two candidates considered leaders in the race, are using all volunteers to reach the undecided vote.

"Mo" Udall has his strategy for reaching the undecided voters. Wherever he goes he tells his audience that if they can't make up their minds in the voting booth to just go "eeny, meeny, miny, MO!"

Gov. Meldrim Thomson already has voted. Thomson cast an absentee ballot Wednesday, mailing it to the town clerk at his home at Orford.

Thomson will be in Washington for the National Governor's Conference on primary day. He presumably voted for Ronald Reagan, his candidate in the Republican race.

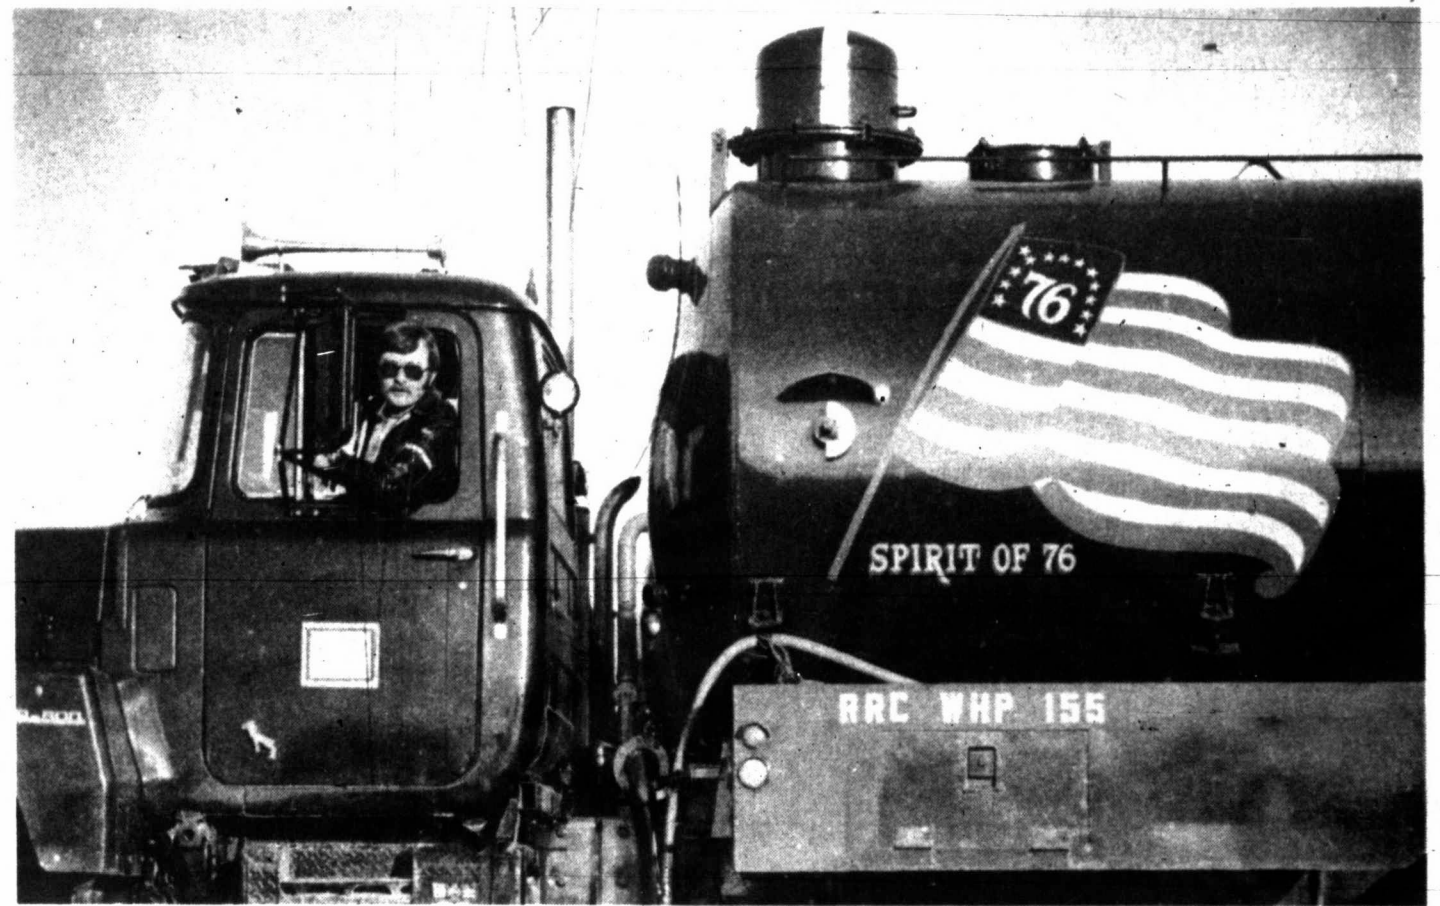

Former Oklahoma Sen. Fred Harris had all the comforts of home when he campaigned in New Hampshire. He's touring the state in his camper home. And the Harris campaign won credits from the news media for press accommodations along the way. He's added a second camper for reporters and stocked it with chili and beer.

If Democratic voters cannot decide who to run for president, some Democratic governors are more than ready to do it for them. Some governors, assembling in Washington for the National Governors Conference, see themselves as kingmakers if the primaries fail to produce a favorite.

They are confident that if the governors marshal behind one candidate, he will be the winner. But Gov. Philip Noel of Rhode Island, chairman of the Democratic Governors Caucus, has warned any premature move might invite charges of undermining the party's reforms.

When former Gov. Lester Maddox of Georgia came to Manchester, N.H., last week to campaign against Carter, about 30 Carter supporters showed up waving ax handles. In the 1960s, Maddox sold ax handles in Atlanta to protest desegregation of his restaurant, suggesting at the time the handles could be used to "bust heads."

"Did you bring any ax handles, Lester?" yelled one Carter backer. "No, and I never used ax handles," Maddox replied. "I used pick handles. Ax handles are too light — they bounce right off."

In the Spirit

Dwight Chase, president of the Chase Oil Field Service south of town, wanted to show people he backed the bicentennial. So he hired local sign painter Bob Gilchrist to design a suitable expression of his feelings and put it on the side of one of his tank trucks. Five other trucks in the fleet remain unpainted, though. His office explained that it is a problem to bring a truck into the yard, clean it up and get it painted. (Pampa News photo by Michal Thompson)

35 Hostages Seized

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Gunmen led by a Lebanese complainant he had been wrongly expelled from Canada on grounds of insanity invaded the Canadian embassy today, fired a shot into the wall and seized about 35 staff members as hostages.

Two hours after the band of eight gunmen took over the embassy — on the third floor of a downtown building — they released six hostages, all women employees.

Lebanese and Palestinian police forces surrounded the building, moving up with rocket-propelled grenade launchers and a .50 caliber machine gun.

A police officer identified the leader of the gunmen as Mohammed Haimour, about 45, who demanded that the physician and the lawyer who testified to his insanity publicly admit they were wrong, a police officer said.

He also demanded the return from Canada of his four children with money he said was his, the officer said. Haimour also demanded the refund of money he said he had spent buying an island in Canada.

One of the women freed by the gunmen said all the hostages had been treated well "but the gunmen were very noisy."

"When they first came in, one of them fired a shot into the wall which sent us ducking for cover," she said.

"They gathered us all in one room and Haimour told us of his demands. The embassy officials were in contact with Ottawa to discuss what would be done when the gunmen let us go."

Security forces, backed by a 35-man unit of the Palestine

Armed Struggle Command, the guerrilla police force, surrounded the embassy on the third floor of a 12-story building on Hamra Street — the heart of Beirut's shopping district.

Officers negotiated with Haimour, accompanied by seven other men — apparently relatives — who held about 35 persons in the embassy at riflepoint.

The Canadian Charge d'Affaires, Alan Sullivan, was the senior man in the embassy at the time.

Secretary Giselle Chevalier, contacted by telephone, reported from inside the embassy that the men were holding the hostages in one room.

Asked if anyone had a weapon pointed at her she said: "Yes, and I am afraid I must go now."

Apart from his other demands, Haimour asked for an unconditional pardon for his action in storming the embassy, a police officer said.

Further negotiations were taking place in the mid afternoon and police sealed off the top end of Hamra Street near the embassy causing a massive traffic jam as vehicles were routed down narrow side streets.

Flu Strikes Many Here

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

Flu patients were crowding physician offices in Pampa this morning looking for a quick solution to the illness.

However, Dr. W.P. Beck, Gray County health physician, said the malady which is highly contagious, usually lingers for about a week.

"I have a waiting room full, the hospital is full, and children are home from school with it," Dr. Beck said.

She added that Saturday's blowing dust didn't help.

She explained that the 126 bed Highland General Hospital may not be filled according to the number of beds available but it is full room-wise.

"You cannot mix these patients," she added.

"What kind of flu it is I don't know," she said. "It is striking all ages — from babies up," she said.

Robert Monogue, administrator, said this morning that 100 patients were in the Highland General Hospital. The 19-bed McLean had 10 patients, four of them with the flu, he added.

Dr. Beck said hospital employees are doing a "terrific job" in caring for the sick.

"They are working their legs off," she said.

A local pharmacist said he is filling one flu prescription after another.

He added that in one day earlier in the month 25 per cent of his employees had missed work because of the flu. "They are now back at work, but the flu still seems to be raging," he added.

For a precaution, Dr. Beck advised individuals to stay away from large crowds.

One man said he was busy selling furniture when he became so ill he could hardly stand up.

"It came on suddenly and I was never so sick," he said looking at bottles of prescription medicines in his hands.

Bill Ragsdale, manager of the Texas Employment Commission's Pampa office, said one business representative called this morning for temporary help because of illness among his employees.

A check with the Pampa Independent School District today revealed that the overall percentage of students out with the flu is not high, but at Lamar and Pampa Junior High Schools students were in the nurse offices waiting to go home because of illness.

Baker School reported 16 students absent Friday, with 46 out today.

Wilson School reported only 14 absentees.

Pampa High School officials said records show 72 of 1,063 were absent today.

"That isn't high," a spokesman said.

At Pampa Junior 68 students were absent. The enrollment there is 781.

Hearst Judge To Rule About 'Missing Year'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The prosecutor has set his sights on questioning Patricia Hearst about her "missing year" in her 19-month underground life — but so far the U.S. Constitution has blocked him.

U.S. District Judge Oliver Carter was expected to rule today on whether Miss Hearst can invoke the 5th Amendment when questioned by U.S. Attorney Robert Browning Jr. about what occurred between the fall of 1974 and her capture last September.

Browning would like to question the newspaper heiress about a Carmichael, Calif., bank holdup in which a woman was killed in April, 1975, and about the possibility the Symbionese Liberation Army had planned other stickups.

Miss Hearst used the 5th Amendment 21 times last week when questioned by the federal prosecutor about this period. Her attorney, F. Lee Bailey, said the time span was irrelevant to the bank robbery charge on which she is on trial.

She was accused of being a member of an SLA team which struck a San Francisco Hibernia Bank branch in April, 1974. Carter also was expected to rule on whether the prosecution could use a tape-recording of a visit at San Mateo County Jail between Miss Hearst and longtime friend Patricia Tobin, daughter of the president of Hibernia Bank.

In the visit Miss Hearst expressed her feelings for Steven Soliah, an SLA associate awaiting trial for the Carmichael robbery, and said she was concerned about raising bail for him.

Soliah was arrested shortly after the capture of Miss Hearst, Wendy Yoshimura, William Harris and his wife, Emily, in San Francisco. Miss Yoshimura is awaiting trial in Oakland, Calif., on explosives charges and the Harris are awaiting trial in Los Angeles.

Browning said he wanted to question Miss Hearst about documents found in the San Francisco home where she, Soliah and Miss Yoshimura were living at the time of the arrests.

The government said some of the documents listed possible bombing and bank targets.

A prosecution brief said Miss Hearst was "delegated full protagonist responsibilities tending to belie the claim of being a reluctant partner in SLA activities."

Bailey has said she was brainwashed into becoming a revolutionary.

Hearst portrayed the eight terrorists who made up the Symbionese Liberation Army as gun-crazy madmen who shared each other's bodies as well as a common toothbrush.

She describes the SLA in her trial testimony as a gang addicted to rambling revolutionary rhetoric, to perpetual "practice" with an arsenal of weapons and to random killing as a means of sparking a revolution by minorities and the poor, "especially pimps and prostitutes."

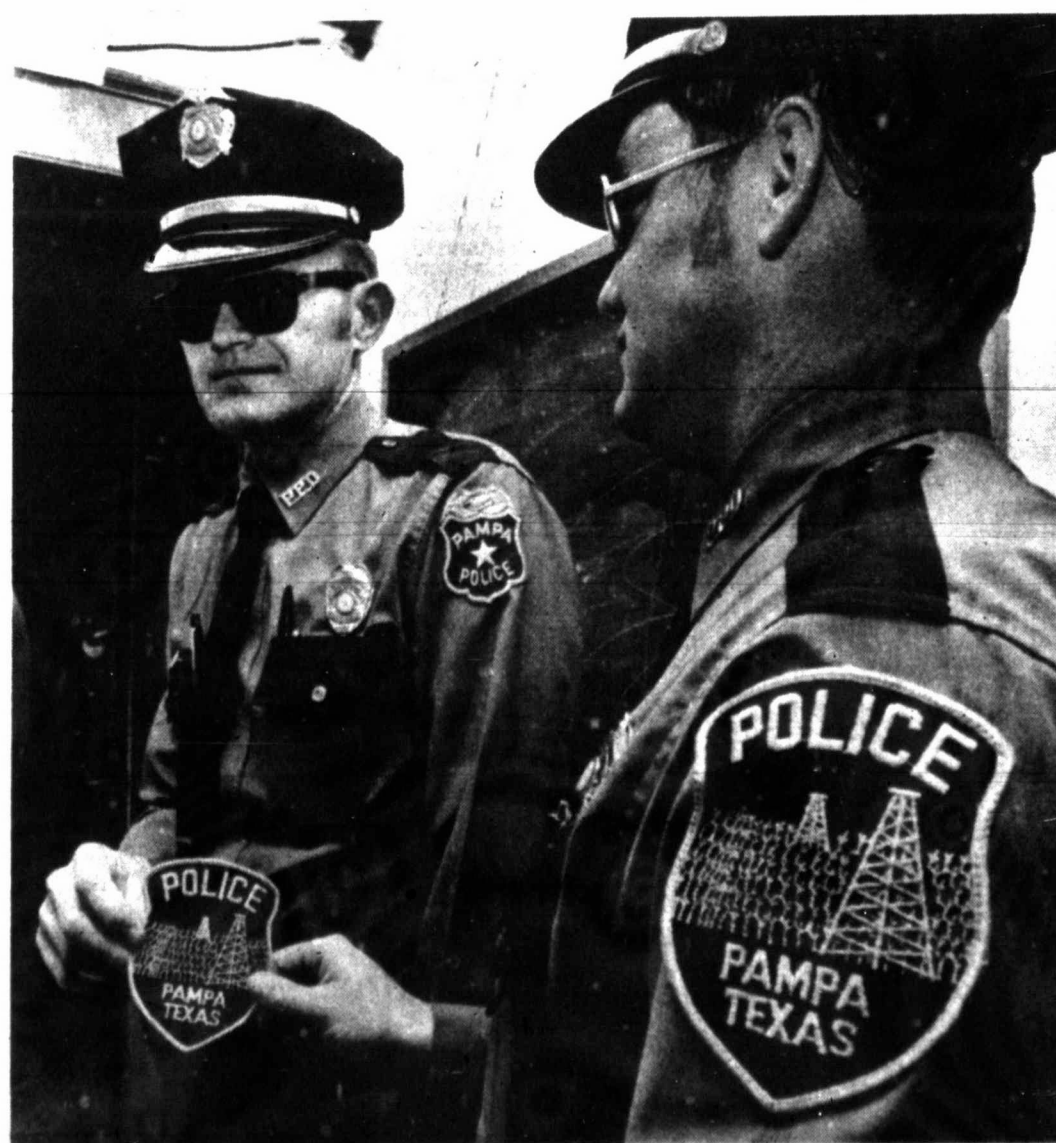

"William Harris ... wished that he wasn't white. Because if he wasn't white then he would be much more together in the way he put it," Miss Hearst testified.

Earth Dam Breaks

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (UPI) — In the still of the night, a faint noise marked the shifting of the earthen dam. Seconds later, the valley filled with the roar of tons of water, boulders and trees sweeping down on a sleeping community.

Mrs. Wayne King heard it. "It was just a big roaring sound, like a wind was coming up on us from far away. It just kept getting louder and louder."

Mrs. King's husband desperately sounded his car horn in an attempt to warn other residents of the Newfound community.

But the sound of the horn was lost in the roar of the wall of water from the dam, 1,600 feet up the mountainside, that had given way Sunday after nearly two inches of rain from thunderstorms had swollen the lake.

The water slipped past King's house and slammed into one across the street, killing Mr. and Mrs. Bud Ledbetter, their son, Leslie, 15, and his grandmother, Mrs. Savannah Ledbetter, 77.

Officials said about 25 other homes, house trailers and farm buildings, along with eight vehicles, were either destroyed or heavily damaged.

According to officials, a preliminary check indicated the bottom portion of the earthen dam holding back a three-acre lake became waterlogged. It shifted forward. At about 2:30 a.m. EST, the top 15 feet of the dam crumbled.

"I assume that the reason for it was either the way the dam is constructed or there was just too much water in the dam," said Civil Preparedness director William Perrigo.

About 100 families were evacuated temporarily but allowed later to return home. Most of those whose homes had been damaged stayed with friends or relatives, although the Red Cross set up a shelter nearby.

The waters that rolled about a mile down the mountainside through a ravine also washed away a community park, killed numerous farm animals, and took with it about 50 acres of topsoil.

"This was a beautiful valley," said the Rev. Jackie Collins of Zion Hill Baptist Church.

Two of the victims were members of his congregation. "There was no warning. They were taken in their sleep," he said.

No other injuries were reported.

Safety And Statistics

The nation's traffic patterns have always been a splendid laboratory in which to find out just how efficacious are government attempts to regulate away dangers. Indeed because of the mania for safety, legislators have passed, and are passing, all manner of new traffic regulations.

The National Traffic and Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1966 is widely acknowledged as a first major step in the history of attempts to legislate safety. Indeed, the safety lobby pretty uniformly attributes the decline of the rate of traffic deaths to that act, which conclusion the statistics would seem to support.

Deaths per vehicle mile declined an average of 3.5 percent annually from 1947 to 1960, then climbed about 1 percent a year until 1966, when the politicians decided to act. Starting in 1967 the death rates again declined at an annual rate of 3.5 percent through 1972.

Pretty convincing, huh? The law is a good thing, right? Hold on. A University of Chicago professor of business economics has concluded a study for the American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy: his findings have a marvelous take - nothing - for - granted tenor to them.

Prof. Sam Peltzman contends that had the traffic safety law been as effective as it was predicted to be, actual death rates would be lower by steadily increasing percentages above the current 3.5 percent. "But nothing like this," Peltzman calculates, "occurred; indeed, with regulation, even more deaths occurred in 1972 than would have been expected without regulation."

The fallacy, Peltzman points out, is to look at the Vehicle Safety Act in terms of naive interpretations of medical - engineering data. "The 1966 peak and the subsequent decline in the death rate can be explained entirely by nonregulatory forces, the most important of which was demographic."

And looking at the Act demographically is just what Professor Peltzman insists on doing. Drivers under 25 are the biggest contributors to the highway death toll. Because of the postwar baby boom, there was a dramatic increase in the number of young drivers in the early 1960's, which led inexorably to a kited death rate. By 1966 this group of drivers was growing older; fatal accidents per mile dropped. Simultaneously, the 1960's birth rate decline produced a smaller number of under - 25 drivers after 1966.

Now then. Armed with that kind of data, Peltzman suggests that the safety devices, far from insuring the safety of America, actually encouraged parents to permit their offspring to drive more, and perform more incautiously behind the wheel, than they would have done without the safety equipment. Which stands to reason, doesn't it? The more you think you're protected by external devices the less you rely on internal motivation to drive, as they say, defensively.

Whether Professor Peltzman is perfectly accurate, we do not know. He has nevertheless supplied very worthwhile data indeed: he has rendered an important - hugely important - service to those accustomed to the fallacy that political government can protect people from themselves. That fallacy needs to be put to rest, now more than ever.

PREMEDITATED FIBBING Kisinger's 'Plausible Denials'

By CLARK MOLLENHOFF
WASHINGTON, D.C. — While "plausible deniability" may be a useful tool for presidents to avoid responsibility for nasty business in foreign affairs, it can become a corruptive mechanism when practiced frequently outside of a sharply defined sphere.

In a general way Kissinger has declared that it was really Nixon who "initiated" the list and that he was simply transmitting it.

Rep. John Ashbrook (R-Ohio) and his Senate Foreign Relations Committee, in its report on U.S. involvement in assassination plots against foreign leaders, raise the most serious questions about the "plausible deniability" of actions taken by the CIA in Chile.

"Plausible deniability" is a term describing the premeditated planning to tell a false or misleading story to Congress, the press or the public.

While there may be a need for a "cover story" in some aspects of international affairs, like a planned assassination of a foreign head of state, these deceptions should be used with restraint and only after serious consideration.

President Nixon practiced "plausible deniability" on payoffs and misuse of the CIA and FBI in the Watergate cover-up, and tried to excuse his federal crimes with a defense that he was defending the office of the presidency. The White House tapes proved otherwise.

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is facing similar problems because of his wiretapping of subordinates and members of the press.

"Plausible denials" by Kissinger, told under oath before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, have him in trouble, because he believed that evidence contradicting him would never surface.

But is he surfaced from the files of former FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, who had recorded that it was Kissinger he had talked to about the identity of the targets to be wiretapped.

Now that the plausibility of the original denials are destroyed, Kissinger gets angry at questions on the subject and relies on the fact that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee had written a report that it is satisfied he did not perjure himself in his initial testimony.

Hardly a day goes by when there are not new questions raised about Kissinger's credibility by liberal Democrats and some not so liberal Democrats, such as Sen. Henry Jackson (D-Wash.), as well as conservative Republicans such as Sen. Jesse Helms (R-N.C.), Rep. Phil Crane (R-Ill.), and CIA officials, supported by memorandums and other documents, contend that Kissinger knew all about the actions of the CIA to give guns to the coup leaders and to encourage the kidnapping that led to the shooting of Gen. Rene Schneider.

The House Intelligence Committee, headed by Rep. Otis Pike (D-N.Y.) has made even sharper charges against Kissinger for his deceptions and use of State Department power to block exposure of his responsibility for major intelligence blunders in Vietnam, Portugal and Cyprus.

And retired Admiral Elmo R. Zumwalt, former Chief of Naval Operations, has accused Kissinger of using "detente" to make a farce of U.S. foreign policy. Zumwalt, now seeking the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate from Virginia, quotes from a conversation with Kissinger which he reduced to memorandum form:

Don Oakley Monopoly on public interest challenged

By Don Oakley

Environmentalists, welfare rightists, consumer advocates and the like are learning that nobody holds an exclusive patent on "the public interest." More and more of these groups are finding themselves on the defensive end of legal actions.

The list also includes at least one government agency, Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Corp., for example, has filed suit against the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission to prevent the commission from continuing to release "misleading, incomplete, inaccurate and unfair" information relating to the safety of household aluminum wiring.

The company charges that this information has caused numerous local government agencies to ban or propose to ban aluminum wiring and has led contractors to stop buying the product.

Whether this suit is in the public interest as well as that of Kaiser stockholders is for qualified, impartial experts to decide. But it does suggest that companies are no longer as willing as they once were to roll over and play dead to please consumer activists.

A better illustration of this turnaround is a "public interest" law firm in California, the Pacific Legal Foundation, which has scored notable successes against environmentalists and others, according to Barron's magazine.

The PFL has balked environmentalists trying to halt construction of a Trident missile base and a flood control and irrigation dam on the American River, and has knocked down the Environmental Protection Agency's "master plan" to force cars off California's streets and freeways.

Since its founding in 1973, the PFL has won 25 out of 40 cases it has argued and 15 are still pending. It has yet to lose a case in final appeal.

The firm's most notable work, however, has been in the field of welfare reform. It helped institute a computerized program to ferret out welfare cheats by matching the Social Security numbers of recipients with quarterly wage reports filed by employers. The PFL successfully beat back attempts by welfare rights groups who attempted to have the program enjoined as an "invasion of privacy."

One year after the system's introduction under former Gov. Ronald Reagan (it has been continued under Gov. Edmund Brown), there were 785,000 fewer people on welfare in California and the state had saved $1 billion, yet deserving recipients received benefit hikes of more than 30 per cent.

This, in anybody's book, is serving "the public interest."

Capitol Comedy

Those Lockheed payoffs have the Dutch worried. Instead of a finger in the dike, they found a hand in the till.

Kennedy denies he's a candidate. Those "Ted in '76" buttons are only for this birthday celebration.

The State Dept. is in a state of shock at the low state of its bribed statesmen.

The House CIA panel recommended two agencies. One for spying and one for lying.

With the devaluation of the peseta, it should cost less for the pentagon to pay off Spanish officials.

Congress is convinced big business has a secret under-cover program to teach executives how to make under-the-table bribes.

The Pentagon is worried about unions organizing soldiers. It has too many sit-ins by the brass now.

Senator Bentsen dropped his presidential campaign when he discovered his "favorite son" support came only from Mrs. Bentsen.

Ford stressed his experience in running the government. That's like a reference for naval skill from the captain of the Titanic.

Rockefeller insists he won't be a presidential candidate until he approves plans to remodel the Oval Office.

If those union organizing drives succeed in the Pentagon, we can expect picket signs to read, "Unfair - Don't Patronize Tank Corps 87."

TEXANS IN CONGRESS Eye On Washington

By BILL CHOYKE
News Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — Here are some items of interest to Texans originating from the nation's capital.

REGIONAL SPORT: The Animal Welfare Act Amendments of 1976 sounds like just another obscure piece of legislation — one of the hundreds approved by Congress annually. The bill, which passed the House overwhelmingly, created a good deal of consternation for a number of Texas congressmen.

The legislation makes it a federal crime to move dogs or other animals across state lines for purposes of fighting — a provision which was okay to most Texas congressmen. However, what several took issue with was an amendment to include "live birds" within the definition of animal fighting ventures.

"The fighting of live fowl has existed for centuries in some parts of the American jurisdiction," argued Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., the chairman of the House Agriculture Committee which considered the bill. "And some people conditioned by culture and tradition regard it to be in a different category than the fighting of other animals."

Texas congressmen joined Foley in his argument against including the "live bird" provisions in the bill. Rep. W.R. Poage, D-Waco, said there is "not the organized crime" element in cockfighting as there is with dogfighting. Rep. Jake Pickle, D-Austin, said Congress should leave the matter of enforcing laws against cockfighting to local authorities.

But their arguments did not prevail. The House voted 289-176 to include "live birds" in the law. But only four members of the 23 member Texas delegation voted with the majority.

FIRST TO BOLT: The exit of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Houston, from the presidential race nationally has apparently prompted some moderate and liberal members of the Texas congressional delegation to reevaluate their positions.

The first to publicly bolt from his support of Bentsen was Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Lufkin. Two days after Bentsen announced his withdrawal, Wilson said he was supporting Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Liberal Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-

Houston, who has been silent on his presidential choice, is also reconsidering his position, as aide to the congressman said.

The Wilson endorsement is expected to help Udall elicit support from the state's uncommitted liberal states in the May 1 primary. Wilson's support might also eventually help Udall's campaign coffers, as the Second District lawmaker is closely allied with the state's independent oil and gas industry.

"I don't think it will hurt him" said the Lufkin congressman on the additional funds his support to Udall might bring.

BIG JOLT: Sometime in early February, the bubble burst for Rep. Robert Krueger, D-New Braunfels.

Only a freshman member of Congress, Krueger had attained national attention, as it appeared he would skillfully maneuver long-term natural gas deregulation through the House. His picture was in the New York Times and the Washington Post and Krueger appeared on national network news and TV talk shows.

But the sweetness of his temporary notoriety soured on Feb. 5. The first jolt occurred when the Washington press disclosed that the oil and natural gas industry was pumping thousands of dollars into Krueger's campaign coffers to pay off his 1974 campaign debt.

In a three-month period, ending Dec. 31, 1975, a check by the Pampa News Washington bureau showed that the New Braunfels Democrat received approximately $44,000 from oil and natural gas interests to retire his debt. During that time, Krueger raised about $162,228, according to his office.

The freshman congressman explained that the oil and gas contributions represented only a small fraction of the money he raised since last year to pay off his original huge campaign debt of approximately $208,000. He called the news stories "smear tactics" by those who opposed natural gas deregulation.

Just hours after the stories ran, Krueger's proposal lost in the House by a scant four votes. He attributed some of the loss of support to the news stories.

"I knew as early as December there would be an attempt to smear me," Krueger said.

"Next week," he quipped, "I'll just go back to sending a batch of letters to constituents."

Dear Abby Tops and Bottoms Rate High in Reader Survey

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Yesterday, I published the first part of the results of my reader survey on what men first notice about women. (Bosoms were way out in front, with figures—including legs and fannies—coming in second and eyes, third.)

Here are the remaining results:

Twenty per cent of the men who wrote in notice a woman's clothes and grooming first. In this category was included "how she smells." From Arizona: "If she looks attractive and seems interested in me, I get close enough to get a whiff of her. If she doesn't smell 'clean,' I move on. Many Canadian men said, "Heavenly perfumed women lose me!"

A woman's attire was noticed by more men from eastern states: Pennsylvania, Maryland, Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire!

More Southern gentlemen, on the other hand, first notice a woman's "complexion." (From New Orleans, one man wrote: "I don't like to see women with a lot of makeup. The less paint and varnish, the better I like her.")

Mail from men in every state (but not in great numbers) mentioned that they notice a woman's hair first. ("Blondes catch my eye first," a Sarasota, Fla., man wrote, "but most blondes aren't natural, and I prefer nature's color.") Many men said they prefer longer hair on women and hair-dos that look natural—"the kind a man can run his fingers through," wrote a Virginia male who took his own survey at a poker club.

Next on the list of things noticed first by men came "teeth and smile." (a Denver man wrote, "I notice a woman's teeth first because I'm a dentist.")

I observed that more men from small towns notice a woman's teeth and smile than do those from the big cities. From Sioux City, Iowa, one girl-watcher wrote: "If a woman has a smile on her face, I am attracted to her like a magnet. I don't mean a phony, put-on smile; I mean one that comes from within and makes her eyes shine and her lips turn up."

Of the 32 men who stated that they noticed a woman's "voice" first, 21 were from Canada!

More than 100 men wrote that they notice a woman's jewelry first because "I'm in the jewelry business," or a woman's shoes, because "I'm in the shoe business." Many plastic surgeons wrote that because of their professions, they notice whether or not a woman had plastic surgery. Ditto for dentists, who automatically notice a woman's teeth first. Men in fashion noted that they notice a woman's apparel first. Physicians admitted they notice if a woman has a "healthy" appearance.

From Rome, Italy: "Her posture—how she carries herself and how she moves. Is she graceful or clumsy? Does she have confidence and poise? If not, she probably lacks experience and sophistication."

One man wrote from Missoula, Mont., "I'm only 5 foot 4, so the first thing I notice about a girl is whether she's taller than I am."

Next week I'll disclose the results of the survey on what women notice first in men.

Symington Suggests Free Heroin Program

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI) — For his U.S. Senate campaign Rep. James W. Symington borrowed an idea a few weeks ago from the British. His opponents have since moved swiftly to put him on the defensive.

Indians Won't Pay Taxes

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — New Mexico's Indian pueblos will not allow the state to tax property on their land, even if it is owned by non-Indians, the head of the All Indian Pueblo Council says.

Del Lovato asked Gov. Jerry Apodaca Friday to veto a bill passed by the legislature which allows the state to collect taxes on non-Indian property located on Indian land. But he said he doubted Apodaca would veto the measure.

If the bill becomes law, Lovato said, the Indians will refuse to recognize it and will fight it in the courts.

"We will not recognize any attempts by the state government to carry out collection of such a tax," he said.

The bill, and a recent decision by the State Supreme Court giving the state jurisdiction over water rights on reservation land, are unconstitutional, Lovato said. He said only the federal government has jurisdiction over the Indians.

He said the tax bill "confirms the belief of many Indian people that there are some elected officers who will not be satisfied until the very existence of the Indian people and culture and traditions have been destroyed."

Symington, 51, hopes to succeed his father, Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., who is retiring after a 24-year career. He suggested an experimental, free heroin program to combat drug-related crime.

"Missouri has more addicts than England, and the U.S. has 100 times more," Symington said. "We have to do something. An alternative that might have some merit is a very tightly controlled program of providing heroin for addicts."

Saturday, his major opponents agreed Missouri's voters would soundly reject the idea in selecting the elder Symington's successor in the August primaries and November general election.

Symington first advocated the free heroin program in January but then backpedaled, saying it should only be considered as an alternative and be tightly controlled. He emphasized the program is not designed to combat drug use, but the crime which revolves around addiction.

"The main thing," he said, "is you don't have this vicious ring of organized crime, Mafia crime that touches everyone."

Rep. Jerry Litton, a Democratic primary candidate, agreed the proposal may reduce thefts. But, he said, it would increase addiction and waste taxpayer money.

"How many addicts from Canada and other countries would come to the United States so that they could get a free fix at the expense of the American taxpayers," asked the Western Missouri congressman.

Litton asked Dr. Richard Phillipson, a psychiatrist considered one of the founders of the British system, about Symington's proposal.

"Dr. Phillipson told me that providing a maintenance drug program will not alleviate crime problems and the British system will not work in America," he said. Phillipson also said free heroin in the U.S. would probably be resold, creating more problems.

"This has been a problem in Britain, where these drugs are not illegal and where their availability has deterred the development of a black market. Therefore, I hate to imagine what the effects would be here."

Attorney General John C. Danforth, the chief Republican candidate, said he does not believe it can be documented such a program will slow the crime rate.

"It would give the government's stamp of approval to the use of heroin, which is more than a sickness," Danforth said. "There would be a black market and pilferage. It would increase the use of heroin."

"We must be certain that it's right. We don't experiment with something as significant as giving heroin away to people. I would be very surprised if the majority of the people in this state are ready to dispense free heroin to anyone."

Former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, the most conservative of the Democratic candidates, said Symington's proposal is "simplistic and carrying the potential for great harm." He said he favored "treatment for drug addicts, but I am distinctively opposed to having the federal government participate in the traffic of hard drugs."

Reduction in the crime rate will only come, he said, when "judges, prosecutors and corrections officers more strictly observe the common right of all members of society to exist unthreatened by crime."

Henry Attacks Traffic Of Drugs in Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, calling for a "concrete program" of hemispheric cooperation, conferred with Colombian President Alfonso Lopez Michelsen Sunday night on the Panama Canal negotiations and the problem of illegal narcotics traffic.

Kissinger, who leaves later today for Costa Rica, also made it clear the United States will not use military force in future Angola-type situations.

Kissinger arrived in Colombia Sunday from Rio de Janeiro and spent the night at Hato Grande, Michelsen's country retreat some 30 miles north of Bogota.

A senior U.S. official in the Kissinger party said the Panama Canal issue was of key importance in the secretary's talks with Colombian leaders.

Historically and economically, Colombia has a special interest in a successful outcome of negotiations between Panama and the United States on a new treaty.

Panama was a Colombian province until 1903 and some Colombian domestic trade between its Caribbean and Pacific Ocean ports goes toll-free through the United States. Panama has promised material aid to the Bogota government in the battle against illegal drug traffic.

Colombia is considered the main processing point for U.S.-destined cocaine from other South American countries.

Kissinger's comments on intervention in Angola were made during a news conference.

"Our view with respect to Angola, and that is our basic view with respect to other countries, is that countries should be permitted to settle their domestic affairs without having a government imposed on them by foreign troops," he said.

The secretary also said he hoped to work for a "concrete program of cooperation that will be implemented in the months to come by the nations of Latin America."

He dismissed criticism of him in Washington as "political noise in an election year." He said he has the confidence of President Ford and will stay as long as that confidence lasts.

During his 22-hour stay in Costa Rica, Kissinger was expected to be asked for assurances the United States will stand by that small Central American republic in case of eventual Cuban-inspired subversion.

Nixon Meets with Mao Chairman

PEKING (UPI) — Former President Richard Nixon met with Chinese Communist Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung today and the aging Chinese leader asked Nixon to convey his regards to President Ford when he returns to the United States.

Nixon spent one hour 40 minutes with the 82-year-old Mao. A Chinese government spokesman said they "had a friendly conversation" on a wide range of subjects. He did not elaborate.

Nixon was accompanied to the noon meeting at Mao's residence in Peking's Forbidden City by his wife, Pat, and an aide, retired Col. John Brennan. However, they did not stay for the entire session.

Sitting in on the Chinese side were Hua Kuo-feng, the new acting premier; Chiao Kuan-hua, the foreign minister; Huang Chen, the chief of China's liaison in Washington; Wang Hai-jung, vice foreign minister, interpreter Tang Wensheng; and Chang Han-chi, deputy department directors of the foreign ministry.

At the conclusion of the meeting, the spokesman said, Mao "asked Mr. Nixon to convey his regards to President Gerald R. Ford upon returning home."

Nixon first met Mao four years ago on his historic visit to China that ended almost a quarter century of Sino-American estrangement.

Mao invited the former president to pay a private visit to China because of the "significant role" Nixon played in the improvement of Sino-American relations.

Nixon drove to Mao's residence after a morning visit to the Peking Agricultural Exhibition Hall.

Nixon also met for two hours 20 minutes Sunday with Hua.

Chinese officials gave no details of those discussions, saying Nixon and Hua talked about "international questions of common interest."

Nixon was scheduled to talk again with Hua today while his wife visited a kindergarten. In the evening they planned to attend a Chinese variety show.

At a banquet Sunday in the Great Hall of the People, Nixon told his hosts the security of the world depended on "the reliability and capability and determination of our two nations to work together."

Hua served as host at the dinner, but none of the other-top Chinese leaders turned out for the modest affair. Four years ago, Nixon was lavishly feted in the same banquet hall by the late premier Chou Enlai.

Hua delivered a toast praising Nixon's "courageous action" in visiting China in 1972 and pledging China's continued adherence to the Shanghai communique, which was signed during that visit and which still guides relations between the two countries.

He also warned, without mentioning the Soviet Union by name but clearly identifying it, that the Kremlin had "become the main source of war."

"The Chinese have made their opposition to the American policy of detente with the Soviet Union clear, particularly during Ford's visit in December. Hua warned anew against this in an oblique fashion and Nixon alluded to it in his remarks."

"There are, of course, some who believe that the mere signing of documents or a statement of principles or a diplomatic conference will bring instant peace," Nixon said.

"This is naive."

"There cannot and will not be lasting and secure peace until every nation in the world respects the security and independence of every other nation, large or small."

He then read a section from the Shanghai communique referring to a declaration by both China and the United States opposing attempts by major powers to divide the world into spheres of influence.

Police Report Missing Person

Weekend investigations by the Pampa Police Department included one missing person, four thefts, one malicious mischief, three non-injury automobile accidents and one auto-pedestrian accident.

Joyce Lee Kent, 17, of 1816 N. Zimmers was reported missing Saturday. She was last seen in a local lounge last Friday.

Theft reports were received Saturday from Larry Branley of 1230 E. Browning and Alfred Nichols of the Pizza Hut at 855 W. Kingsmill.

Branley told police he had been visiting at 1034 E. Twford and when he started to leave, he noticed someone had stolen his CB radio.

The Pizza Hut theft report concerned food and $1.13 that was taken.

One non-injury accident was reported Saturday in the 300 block of S. Cuyler.

On Sunday, officers worked non-injury accidents in the 900 block of E. Frederic and in the Ideal parking lot.

Bessie D. Pacheco of 428 N. Zimmers was driving a car which struck Brandt Jones of 1816 N. Zimmers. Police said Jones suffered some abrasions, but did not require hospitalization. No citation was issued.

Alice Appleton of 210 E. Tukey who had called to report a broken window on Saturday, called back Sunday to say a rose-shaped diamond pendant and a tool to turn on the water were missing.

Paul T. Edwards of 1044 S. Christy told officers someone had stolen gasoline from his pickup.

A malicious mischief complaint was made by R.L. Price of 221 E. Atchison who said that sometime during the night someone had shot at a metal windmill with a BB gun. Damage to the structure was slight.

The Pampa Police Department also operated a drivers license check point in the 400 block of W. Francis on Sunday. Two hundred licenses were checked and four citations were issued.

Our view with respect to Angola, and that is our basic view with respect to other countries, is that countries should be permitted to settle their domestic affairs without having a government imposed on them by foreign troops," he said.

The secretary also said he hoped to work for a "concrete program of cooperation that will be implemented in the months to come by the nations of Latin America."

He dismissed criticism of him in Washington as "political noise in an election year." He said he has the confidence of President Ford and will stay as long as that confidence lasts.

During his 22-hour stay in Costa Rica, Kissinger was expected to be asked for assurances the United States will stand by that small Central American republic in case of eventual Cuban-inspired subversion.

High Court in Session

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The issues of abortion and zoning will frame the crowded case docket for the Supreme Court when it returns at full strength to public sessions and concludes a four-week midterm recess.

With Justice John Paul Stevens bringing its membership to full strength, the court was set today to resume public sessions that will carry through February, March and April on a number of major cases.

The abortion cases deal primarily with the right of states or doctors to require preabortion consent from the husbands of married women, or the parents of minor women, and with other complications springing from the 1973 ruling overturning basic abortion laws.

The zoning cases have to do with the right to build public housing in white suburbs.

Ford Enlists Govs Help To Extend Revenue Sharing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford showed the nation's governors his "mess chart" of bureaucratic red tape today, and asked them to help him win a five-year, $30 billion extension of federal revenue sharing programs.

If Congress does not extend revenue sharing, Ford told the annual mid-winter meeting of the National Governors' Conference. "It could force the states to fire workers, to increase state taxes, and even to institute new taxation."

He asked the governors to help him win approval of his revenue sharing program.

"You are right in saying that our present economic recovery would be endangered if the Congress would end revenue sharing," he told them.

Ford also announced several legislative proposals aimed at ending "a complicated and categorical tangle of federal regulations."

Calling for a reduction in categorical grant programs, the President pointed to two large charts which showed bureaucratic entanglement in following federal health care programs. He referred to them as his "mess charts."

He asked the governors for help on Capitol Hill, where state officials have indicated a growing concern that Congress might not pass an extension of the revenue sharing program due to expire at the end of this year.

Gov. Robert Ray of Iowa, conference chairman, told a news conference Sunday the status of a new bill was "much more critical than we dreamed of a year ago."

He said chances of reenactment might be less than 50-50 and that, such a failure would have "some catastrophic effects in local government."

Ford planned to send Congress today a Community Services Act, saying it would significantly increase the flexibility of states in delivering social services to low income families.

Included were programs for day-care, foster care and homemaker services.

Later this week, he said, he will transmit proposals consolidating Medicaid and 15 other categorical health programs into a single $10 billion block grant.

"With it is a commitment to each of you that your state will receive more federal funds from this single new program in fiscal 1977 than your state received in 1976 from the 16 existing programs," he told the governors.

Ford also said he soon will send Congress an education block grant proposal to give states maximum flexibility in using federal dollars to meet educational needs.

"In offering these proposals," he said, "I do not suggest a retreat from national concerns, nor the wholesale elimination of federal funding. I intend to make federal dollars available to you for your states."

Candidates Make Final Rounds in NH

MANCHESTER, N.H. (UPI) — The people of New Hampshire are spoiled. Or victimized.

In this age of 3,000-mile-a-day jetstop campaigning, multimedia blitzes and computerized direct mail "personal" appeals, 824,000 people here get, for several months each, presidential year, the undivided attention of most of the nation's political image-makers, regiments of high-powered reporters and commentators and a dozen or so men and women who claim they are good enough to be President of the United States.

New Hampshire becomes the stage for the first act of the country's presidential campaign. The state likes the role — it changed its primary date to Feb. 24 to make sure it would be number one — and it puts on a good show for the visitors. The people, perhaps welcoming the break in routine or the off-season tourist dollars, generally greet the candidates with good manners and attention.

The candidates, naturally, say they love it while they sash and slip around New Hampshire looking for votes. Most know how to canvass door to door and "work" shopping centers. And most know that if they survive in New Hampshire they will be conducting far different kinds of campaigns as the crowds and political stakes grow in the spring and summer.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., went campaigning during the weekend, trying to make up for his late entry into the New Hampshire race.

While men like Jimmy Carter, Fred Harris and Morris Udall visited and canvassed the state last year, Bayh delayed his decision. So he was running hard when his five-car motorcade pulled out of Manchester at 7:30 a.m. bound for Keene, about 50 miles west.

The first stop was at the Monarch Restaurant on Highway 101. Bayh hustled in, shed his topcoat and began shaking hands, asking for support and adding: "Tell your friends about us."

His first subjects informed him they were from Massachusetts, but he said: "You vote next week. I'd be glad to have your support." A young local man volunteered he was for Bayh but was somewhat nonplussed when his son asked Bayh: "Are you Jimmy Carter?" The senator laughed and headed back to the cars, leaving his coat behind.

By 9 a.m., led by a police car, the motorcade was in Keene, a town of about 20,000 in a setting of small, wooded mountains. Bayh, now wearing a quilted down jacket, tramped through melting snow into a former printing job shop now serving as his local headquarters.

Handshaking, coffee and, with former Mayor Bob Mallatt, off for River St. and door to door canvassing. Bayh bounded across snow-covered lawns, shook hands and asked for votes — a few minutes at each door. He twirled a little girl playing in a driveway and cautiously approached a house with a "Beware of Dog" sign.

Working Pearl St. in another ward, he came across Bob Begin and his mobile hotdog stand. Bayh bought a hot dog and Begin asked him for a poster for the front of his van. Put it over the Ford sign, he said. Bayh was elated.

After a coffee at the George Bergeron home (handlettered "Please Don't Smoke" signs in all the rooms) and a quick stop on the crowded noontime main street, the motorcade set off — a half hour late — for Jaffrey, about a third of the way back to Manchester.

Slow going on winding roads. About 40 minutes of popping into shops and shaking hands. A freshly barbered man grinned and informed Bayh, "I don't vote Democrat." As Bayh started away, the man added: "I don't vote Republican either."

In the florist's, Bayh astounded a young woman by asking in he could put a card with his best wishes on flowers she was sending to her sister in the hospital.

At a real estate agency, he was asked to explain his first name. A local Bayh supporter said it was like the birch tree, "white, straight grained, tall." One man in the agency added, "and it bends in the wind."

"So do I sometimes," Bayh said, laughing with the rest.

Back on the road to Manchester. The schedule in shreds, nearly an hour late. In the city's West End, back to canvassing in the company of state legislator Chris Spirou. Bayh saw a woman standing in a doorway and ran to shake her hand. A woman with the party yelled: "Oh, Chris, she's a Republican."

Several more hours of this, and off to Memorial High School, to sit with Carter, Udall and Harris at a forum starting at 7:30 p.m. The crowd was large — mostly activists from the four campaigns — and the auditorium was steaming.

Like the rest of the candidates, who had spent the day in similar exertions, Bayh looked rested, cool and eager to please.

'1776' Set for Friday

The familiar tale of the men who made the American Revolution will be retold in Pampa Friday night when the Pampa Community Concert Association presents "1776," the Broadway musical, as its final attraction in the 1975-76 concert season.

Curtain time will be 8 p.m. in the M.K. Brown Auditorium. There will be no box office seat sale and admission will be by association membership card only.

The play by Peter Stone, with music and lyrics by Sherman Edwards, captures the wit as well as the seriousness of the Founding Fathers.

The company, which brings the play to Pampa carries a cast of 20 male and two female characters.

It will be presented in a single setting representing the chamber and anteroom of the Continental Congress in Philadelphia. The time of the action is May, June and July of 1776.

Advance notices say "1776" is not necessarily designed for flag-waving. It is mostly funny, mostly musical and is designed to entertain theater audiences.

And the show's advance man adds: "But if you feel like standing up once again for your country, we'll understand."

Concert association officials now conducting the annual membership campaign for the 1976-77 season, have announced there will be a desk in the auditorium foyer Friday night and renewals will be taken before the concert, during intermission and after the concert.

British Honor to Payne

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Ben Iden Payne wanted to be an actor, but necessity made him a director. For 60 years he devoted his life to directing and interpreting Shakespeare.

"I think he's really responsible for it (Shakespearean drama) being on today," said Payne's wife Barbara. "He felt Shakespeare's lessons could be learned today — if they (plays) were done correctly."

Payne, 94, Sunday received the award of Honorary Officer of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire (O.B.E.), bestowed by Queen Elizabeth II.

The award was presented in a simple ceremony at St. David's Hospital by Acting British Consul-General in Houston, W.C. Hodgkins, Esq.

Payne has been guest professor of drama at the University of Texas since 1946.

His wife, a few close friends and colleagues and a handful of reporters attended the brief, quiet ceremony. Because of the professor's ill health he could only be moved briefly in a wheelchair for the short distance to the conference room ceremony.

The last play he directed was "The Tempest," Shakespeare's fairytale in which all wrongs are righted and true love lives happily ever after.

"He closed with 'The Tempest,'" said Mrs. Payne, 71. "It was Shakespeare's last play and it was Iden's last play."

Since his boyhood in Newcastle-on-Tyne in northern England, Payne wanted to become an actor. He began his lifetime career in a Ben Johnson production of "She Stoops to Conquer" at the age of 18 in 1899.

Payne, according to his wife, began directing by necessity and was general manager of the famous Abbey Players in Dublin from 1907-1911. He directed more than 200 plays during those four years.

"There was no alternative," Mrs. Payne said. "He is a very sincere and conscientious person. He put himself into the place of his parts — it is an almost God-given talent."

Payne, who introduced drama at Carnegie Institute of Technology, directed and produced in New York and Chicago until his appointment in 1934 as director of the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre in Stratford-on-Avon.

Payne's revival of "Anthony and Cleopatra" was widely acclaimed and he continued to direct — sometimes three to five plays annually — at Stratford-on-Avon throughout the years of World War II.

"My husband would have been the greatest director in the world, but he wouldn't live in New York," Mrs. Payne said. "He wouldn't buy the art there."

MEMORABLE BUILDINGS
TOKYO (UPI) — Tokyo has many memorable buildings of unusual design.

Steel cables stretched from two concrete pillars suspend the curving roof of the National Gymnasium, built for the 1964 Olympics.

The Supreme Court is composed of a block structure, and the Tokyo Metropolitan Festival Hall, designed to maximize acoustics, gives an appearance resembling the traditional Japanese forms.

AIR RIGHTS
HONG KONG (UPI) — Air Siam has applied for rights to fly to Israel, Sri Lanka and Switzerland. A spokesman said if the airline obtains permission to fly the new routes, it will put into service a second DC10 jet capable of carrying about 300 passengers.

Oil Incentives Needed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Oklahoma Gov. David Boren says the Democratic party must be honest with the people in the area of fiscal responsibility and provide encouragement to the oil industry for recovery of oil and natural gas reserves.

The governor Sunday told the platform committee of the Democratic National Committee, federal incentives for exploration and development of oil and natural gas in Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle were necessary because of the expense involved in such operations.

"Forty natural gas deep wells, just 40, in western Oklahoma can produce as much energy in one year as the entire Tennessee Valley Authority during the same period," Boren said.

The American people "are smart enough to know we cannot advocate more spending programs on one hand and a balanced budget on the other," Boren said.

"The party must be honest with the people and should move toward a balanced federal budget."

Boren said a balanced budget could be achieved if spending priorities were shifted to place more responsibilities at the state and local levels.

Boren was among several governors who testified before the committee the day before opening of the National Governors' Conference.

Moscow Prepares for Congress

MOSCOW (UPI) — Five thousand Soviet delegates and hundreds of foreign guests virtually have taken over Moscow for Tuesday's opening of the 25th Congress of the Communist party.

It was the kind of Moscow rarely seen in midwinter — or at any other time: clean, spruced up and relatively well stocked with consumer goods.

Flower sellers appeared on the streets for the first time this winter. Imported goods, including East German leather products, Czechoslovak glassware and Hungarian clothing, appeared in store windows.

"A policeman stopped a foreigner driving a muddied car and, while sparing him the customary $1.33 fine for operating a dirty vehicle, told him to wash it "for the congress."

Delegates bustled around town in fleets of red-flagged, black automobiles, hidden from view by gray rear-window curtains.

Foreign Communist guests arrived at regular intervals to be received with bearhugs and backslaps at the international airport. They included Cuba's Fidel Castro, Portugal's Alvaro Cunhal, Hungary's Janos Kadar and Alves Batista, a leader of the victorious Marxist forces in Angola.

However few their supporters at home, people like Gus Hall of the U.S. Communist party and Gordon McLennan of Britain rated star treatment in Moscow.

Georges Marchais of the French Communist party, who has criticized the Soviet Union for its alleged violations of human rights, did not come.

Authorities did not appear to be locking up dissidents and Jewish activists as they have on previous important occasions. But some — including writer Andrei Amalrik who was released by police after a weekend in jail — said they would leave Moscow for the duration of the session.

The congress, at which delegates unanimously will approve policies and elect leaders already decided in advance by the party's rulers, probably will run 10 days in the glass and concrete Kremlin Palace of Congresses.

It will open with a policy speech by General Secretary Leonid Brezhnev, which already has been "unanimously"

NOW Pickets Mass

METAIRIE, La. (UPI) — A group of National Organization for Women members picketed a church Sunday during Mass, protesting the firing of a teacher who says she was fired because she was pregnant and unwed.

The woman, Lisette Tassin, taught sixth grade at St. Catherine of Sienna School before her recent ouster. She says she had been told she was a good teacher, but was asked to resign when her pregnancy became known. She said she refused to quit and was fired.

The protesters marched quietly and carried signs saying, "Is pregnancy indecent?" "Rehire teacher Tassin now," and "No reward for honesty."

Mrs. Tassin has since married the father of her unborn child.

"I think it's very unfair," she said. "I was doing my job well, and they even told me I was doing my job well."

"I've done nothing wrong," she said.

Mrs. Tassin has filed suit over her dismissal.

The Rev. Gerald Barrett, the pastor at the church, described the furor as a lot of foolishness and said two other teachers at the school have resigned this year without incident. He said Mrs. Tassin's firing was not based solely on the pregnancy.

Pills May Hurt Heart

CHICAGO (UPI) — Women using oral contraceptives have a greater chance of heart disease than women not using them, a study in this week's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association said.

A research team from Stanford University School of Medicine's Heart Disease Prevention Program studied heart disease risk factors in 986 women in three northern California communities.

Women using oral contraceptives had higher levels of fats in the blood and higher blood pressure than women not using oral contraceptives, said Dr. Michael Stern and colleagues.

Both high blood pressure and high fat levels in the blood are important risk factors determining the probability of heart disease.

Poland China Takes Third In Contest

Pampa High School vocational agriculture students competed in the junior barrow competition of the San Antonio Livestock Exposition last week, according to Randall Williams, vocational agriculture teacher.

The highest placing of a Pampa-owned animal went to a Poland China which took third in its class. It was exhibited by Joe Coats.

A Duroc owned by Kevin George was placed 13th and Durocs owned by Russell Thornburg and Pat Bailey tied 17th and 18th respectively.

Kevin George also showed his Chester White entry to a 13th placing and Jim Bill Walters exhibited his Chester White barrow to 12th position.

Ron Dyer's entry was judged 20th in a class of crossbred barrows.

Host UCLA Falls

By United Press International
Humility has never been one of Oregon coach Dick Harter's outstanding virtues.

"This victory wasn't unexpected," Harter said after the Ducks had ended UCLA's Pauley Pavilion winning streak Saturday at 98 games. However, he certainly didn't envision the 65-45 score by which the Ducks became the first visiting team to win in Pauley Pavilion since March 6, 1970.

The Ducks' domination of the game prevents the result from being labeled a fluke.

Oregon played a great game. UCLA coach Gene Bartow said. "I don't think they're going to lose again this season."

"We've played phenomenal basketball the last few weeks," boasted Harter, whose team has won nine straight. "We were clearly the better team tonight."

Greg Ballard scored 16 points and Ron Lee 13 to pace the Oregon offense, but it was the Ducks' defensive performance that was exceptional as the fourth-ranked Bruins scored only 14 points in the first half.

The Bruins, who now lead the Pacific-8 Conference by one game over Oregon, Oregon State and Washington, trailed by 30-14 at the half and never got any closer than 40-26 after the intermission.

Top-ranked Indiana ran its record to 23-0 with a 76-64 victory over Minnesota. Indiana center Kent Benson was held to only six points, but Tom Abernethy came through with 22 for the Hoosiers. Scott May finished with 18.

Earl Tatum's outside shooting carried second-ranked Marquette to a 72-62 victory over No. 14 Louisville. Tatum finished with 23 points in the nationally televised game.

Mitch Kupchak's last-second shot gave third-ranked North Carolina a 73-71 victory over Virginia. Phil Ford led the Tar Heels with 22 points and Kupchak added 15.

The Tar Heels' nationally-ranked Atlantic Coast Conference rivals did not fare as well with No. 7 Maryland and 15th-ranked North Carolina State each losing.

Mark Crow scored 19 points and Tate Armstrong 16 to lead Duke to a 69-67 upset of Maryland. Clemson held Kenny Carr to only 15 points and got 20 points apiece from Greg Coles and Stan Rome to beat the Wolfpack, 103-90.

Fifth-ranked Rutgers ran its record to 23-0 with a 94-79 victory over American University. Mike Dabney, who finished with 25 points, sparked a typical Rutgers' spurt with six minutes to play that broke open the game.

Sixth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas, getting 32 points from Stan Smith, overwhelmed Hawaii, 114-99.

Lars Hansen scored 34 points in eighth-ranked Washington's 95-75 romp over California.

No. 9 Tennessee rolled over Mississippi, 105-81, behind a pair of 30-point performances by Bernard King and Ernie Grunfeld.

No. 13 Alabama needed a pair of free throws by Leon Douglas with 11 seconds left to defeat Mississippi State, 65-61. Douglas led the Crimson Tide scoring with 22 points.

Billy Paterno scored 23 points to lead 10th-ranked Notre Dame to a 90-83 victory over South Carolina while Phil Hubbard scored 22 points and Rickey Green 20 to lead 11th-ranked Michigan to a 92-81 victory over Purdue.

Whitworth Wins Classic

SARASOTA, Fla. (UPI) — After 18 years on the LPGA circuit, Kathy Whitworth knows how to keep her head when it counts the most.

The tall Texan held off a challenge by 21-year-old Hollis Stacy Sunday for a one-shot victory in the $60,000 Bent Tree Ladies Golf Classic. She did it by keeping her cool following a hole that probably would have meant disaster for someone without her experience.

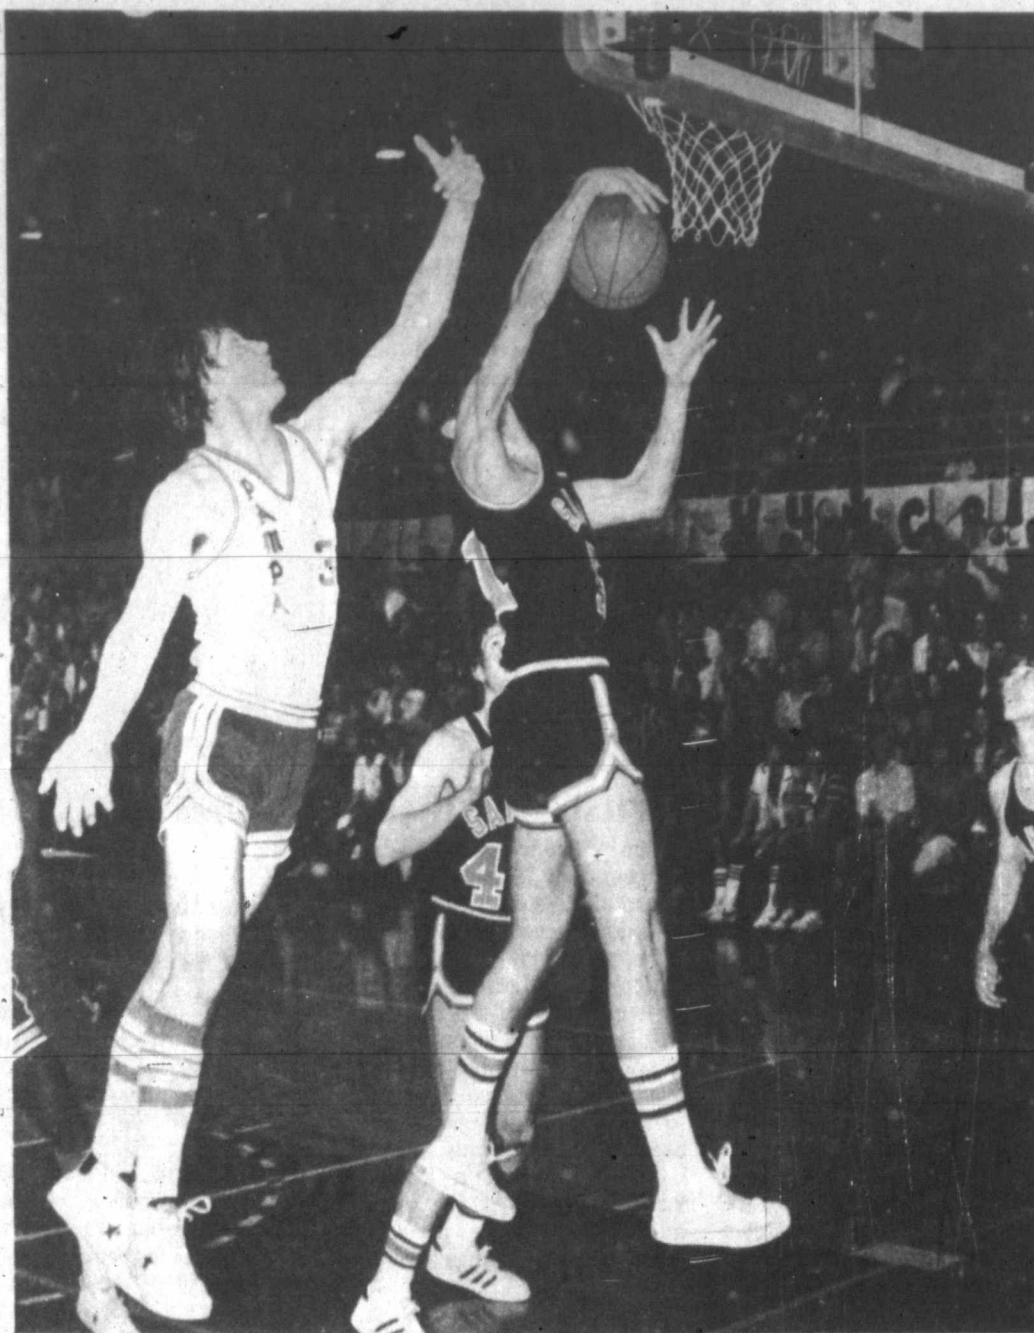

Whitworth bogeyed the par 3, 17th hole and fell into a tie for the lead when Stacy birdied it. But the 36-year-old veteran played it safe on the 18th for a routine par while Stacy hit her drive into the water and suffered a costly bogey.

Whitworth finished with a 71 for a 54-hole score of seven-under-par 209 over the 6,115-yard, par 72 Bent Tree Country Club course. It was her 76th career victory in the Ladies Professional Golf Association.

"She made only one mistake the whole round and it cost her the tournament," said Whitworth. "I know Hollis will relive that hole for weeks. The next time she's in that position she'll be a little more careful."

Stacy, a third-year player from Boca Raton, Fla., couldn't wait to hit her tee shot on the 18th after she tied for the lead. The ball sailed into water on the right side.

"I got a little excited after that two-stroke swing on the 17th," she said. "My heart was going about 1,000 beats a second. I just swung a little quick. The next time, I'll know there is only one way to play that hole — safe."

Takes a Swipe

Pampa senior forward Richard Lane takes a swipe at the ball before Amarillo High's Larry Lamb gets the rebound. The Harvesters beat the Sandies, 72-55, to set up Tuesday's second-half showdown at Berger. Tickets for the District 3-AAAA battle went on sale at 8 a.m. today in the school business office and high school co-op.

Under-Rated Irwin Victorious

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Hale Irwin bristled at the question. Clearly, he was tired of answering it.

"Let's get out there and print those words, boys," the bespectacled former University of Colorado defensive back snapped. "Keep the faith, brother."

"No, it doesn't bother me. And yes, it would be nice to be recognized."

Irwin may not like to talk about the amount of recognition he does or doesn't get, but the fact remains — he probably is the most under-rated player on the tour.

In a re-play of the 1974 U.S. Open, the nine-year pro from St. Louis came from behind to beat British Open champion Tom Watson and capture first place money of $37,000 in the Los Angeles Open. Two years ago, he won the U.S. Open at Winged Foot, N.Y., after trailing Watson by one shot after three rounds.

In the Los Angeles Open, he trailed Watson by three shots at the end of three rounds and was five shots back after the first three holes Sunday.

"But I just hate to give up the ship and I wasn't about to give up," said Irwin, 30.

"I still had 15 holes to play. What I needed were quick birdies — which I got. What I needed from Tom were some mistakes quickly — which I got. So I guess it was the roll of the dice."

Watson, who led after the second and third rounds, finished with a 73 to wind up two shots behind Irwin's 72-hole score of 272, a tournament course record. Although the pair played in separate threesomes, it was strictly an Irwin-Watson shootout, and Irwin, winner of two straight World Piccadilly Match Play championships in England, was the superior head-to-head man.

Irwin's check gave him $69,995 for the winter and the momentum going into this week's Tournament Players Division championship in Florida. Watson got $21,000.

"Any win is satisfying, but I like the way I won," Irwin continued. "I wouldn't have wanted to win with a 70."

Irwin's card included a 60-foot chip shot for an eagle three on the 506-yard opening hole. However, Watson, playing in the threesome behind Irwin, matched that and Irwin bogeyed the second and third holes.

He got back in the match with birdie putts of 15 and 12 feet on the fifth and seventh holes while Watson bogeyed four and six and double bogeyed five.

"Five and six were very important holes," Irwin noted.

"Tom made a double bogey at five and I birdied the hole, so that was three shots. Then I got it up and down from nearly an impossible place on six. It looked like I was going to make at least a four, and I wound up with a three."

"Then he bogeyed the hole. So I picked up four shots in two holes."

Tickets Go on Sale For District Contest

Adult and student tickets for the Pampa - Berger contest Tuesday night in Berger went on sale at 8 a.m. today in the downtown high school business office and the Pampa High co-op.

Borger allotted 196 adult tickets for $1.25 apiece and 225 students tickets for 75 cents, then announced that no tickets would be available at the door Tuesday night.

Pampa is 25-5 for the and can wrap up the District 3 - AAAA championship by winning at Borger. The Bulldogs are 25-6 and tied with Pampa at 3-1 in the second-half of district play.

A Borger win would force a playoff between the two schools Friday, since Borger would win the second-half title and Pampa was the first-half champion.

Pampa whipped Amarillo High, 72-55, Friday in Harvester Fieldhouse. Borger stopped Amarillo Tascosa, 61-54.

Playoffs a Question

Aggie Stars—To Play or Not to Play

By MIKE RABUN
UPI Sports Writer

It is all settled that Texas A&M will appear in Dallas March 6 and play in a game that will decide the Southwest Conference's representative in the NCAA playoffs.

But the size and makeup of the Texas Aggie roster is still a matter of debate.

With the idea of deciding the issue before the SWC post-season tournament begins, league officials will gather with Aggie freshmen Karl Godine and Jarvis Williams Thursday in Houston to determine whether the players will remain eligible. Williams and Godine were declared ineligible last week by the conference for alleged recruiting violations. But a U.S. district judge ruled the players had not received a fair hearing and ordered that one be conducted. In the meantime, the judge reinstated the players to the team and they played in two games last week.

The hearing will come about Thursday, with the players' attorney — Hugh Smith — presenting evidence of his own and bringing witnesses to rebut the case gathered by SWC investigators.

Before then the Aggies, already assured of at least a tie for the SWC title, should have won the undisputed crown for the second straight year. All A&M must do to achieve that goal is to whip Rice (1-14) in Houston Tuesday night.

Then the Aggies must wait on a decision concerning Williams and Godine and wait to see which of the other eight teams in the conference they will face for the NCAA berth.

The post-season tournament opens next Saturday with games at Texas Tech, SMU, Arkansas and Baylor. The only pairing established for certain will be a

Nastase Defeats Partner Connors

SALISBURY, Md. (UPI) — Ilie Nastase began his Sunday having breakfast with his close friend Jimmy Connors and ended the day playing him in an exhibition match in Providence, R.I.

In between, however, the Rumanian star took the National Indoor Tennis crown from his American doubles partner 6-2, 6-3, 7-6.

The victory ended Connors' three-year reign as champion of the $50,000 event. Nastase, who also won in 1970, captured this year's title without loss of a set during the week's play.

Prior to their showdown, Nastase jibed at Connors in jest:

meeting between Tech and Rice. But, since Arkansas and Baylor will not decide the battle for fourth and fifth place until they meet Tuesday night, and since the seventh and eighth place finish is still to be decided between TCU and Texas, the matchups for the other three games has yet to be determined.

"I'm going to make you sweat and swear. I'm going to run you around like a turkey," he said.

Connors offered no excuses. "I just didn't have what it took to execute today," he told newsmen.

Nastase contended he was "lucky on some of my shots and I did a few unexpected things. Whoever does the unexpected usually wins in our matches because we play together so often that we anticipate what we do normally."

Texas Sheriff Charged

ODESSA, Tex. (UPI) — Sheriff candidate W.T. Bill Bowen was arrested on seven charges of violating the Texas Election Code Friday, released on his recognizance and then arrested again because of remarks he made about his release.

District Attorney John Green Saturday said Bowen, the Ector County constable, had suggested the court could be bought.

which was not the case. He said many of Bowen's fence signs, billboards and bumper stickers did not comply with the new election code because they did not contain the name of the person paying for the materials. He said a complaint had been made by Alan Martin, news director of KRIG, and a young woman. Justice of the Peace Jimmy Harris set bond at $1,000 on each of the seven counts, but released the constable because he promised not to produce new material without the proper disclosures and that he would add them to the present fence signs.

Odessa American reporter Robert Borden said the constable told him the decision to allow a recognizance bond was made because of "big money" people who were ready to post bond on his behalf.

"Twelve to 15 money people, and I mean big money people, were there to get me out," Bowen said. "When they saw the big money people were there to get me out, they let me go on my own."

Green said he took the remarks to mean the court had been influenced improperly. "He is inferring big money people can buy law enforcement off," Green said. "That ain't gonna go."

Bowen was arrested for the second time about 7:30 p.m. and within 30 minutes the recognizance bond had been revoked. By 10 p.m. a local bondsman had posted $7,000 property bond for Bowen's release.

Bowen, the first of 12 candidates to announce for the job of sheriff, said he contacted the Ector County clerk last year to make certain he was in

Ford Could Withdraw

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. James L. Buckley, C-R-N.Y., said Saturday President Ford is on "dangerous" ground in portraying Ronald Reagan as the candidate of the Republican Party's far right wing.

In an interview with UPI, the New York conservative Republican also said he thinks Ford could withdraw his candidacy if Reagan won "decisively" in both the New Hampshire and Florida primaries.

Buckley said, "for the simple reason... that I happen to believe that the majority of Americans on the specific issues happen to fall on the conservative side."

"I think that labeling or pigeonholing people is dangerous and I would much prefer that Ford were not doing this in case Reagan is the candidate," he said.

Such "rhetoric tends to brand or isolate a particular guy," Buckley said, "and place him on the political fringe."

"I believe that Reagan has demonstrated in California, which is hardly a radical right state, that he has that capacity to sell himself not as an ideologue but as someone who has a point of view that he can explain persuasively," Buckley added. "In other words, I disagree with Ford."

Buckley also branded as "specious" the argument that because Ford carries the mantle of the presidency, he can run a stronger race than Reagan against the Democratic candidate in November.

Buckley described Ford as "a conservative who has made more gestures to the left than the other way around," but declined to say whom he will support for the GOP presidential nomination.

"I am very close philosophically and personally to Reagan," he said, but added he wanted the primaries "to decide or at least educate me as to who is going to be the strongest man."

Ford, who faces Reagan in the New Hampshire presidential primary Tuesday, has said, without mentioning Reagan, that no one to his political right can win the election this fall.

"I reject that (argument)."

Bowen will set the date for their school board election and will hear a census report. Consideration will also be given to adjusting the school calendar, to superintendent reports and payment of current bills.

Other items on the agenda include approval of the board minutes from the previous meeting and recognition of guests.

Grandview Trustees Meet

The Grandview - Hopkins Independent School District Board of Trustees will meet to consider a seven-item agenda at 7 p.m. Tuesday.

Members will set the date for their school board election and will hear a census report. Consideration will also be given to adjusting the school calendar, to superintendent reports and payment of current bills.

Other items on the agenda include approval of the board minutes from the previous meeting and recognition of guests.

Antiabortion Stand Is Basis

MANCHESTER, N.H. (UPI) — Democrat Ellen McCormack, the "pro-life" presidential candidate, said Saturday her antiabortion stand is the basis of her position on other issues.

"The philosophy that brought about busing is probably what brought about abortion," said the Bellmore, N.Y., resident in her only campaign appearance before Tuesday's New Hampshire primary. "We use our children to force the issues." When asked by a reporter what issues she was concerned about beyond abortion she replied angrily. "Any of the laws that are passed in this country will affect me... The philosophy that brought us abortion is detrimental to all other areas."

Mrs. McCormack, 49, spoke to about 75 students at St. Anselm's College and condemned leaving the nation's business in the hands of "professional politicians. When it's convenient they promise anything," she said.

She said Democrats Sargent Shriver and Jimmy Carter were "less than honest" in their stands on abortion.

Carter and Shriver have said they are against abortion but oppose a constitutional amendment banning it, preferring to provide alternatives to women with unwanted pregnancies.

"Why do we allow nine lawyers (the Supreme Court) to decide for us if we will allow abortion?" she asked, drawing applause from the mostly male crowd.

She also got applause when answering a question on how she would pull the country free from its economic problems and deficit spending.

"As far as the budget is concerned, the experts have put us, where we are today," said Mrs. McCormack. "I'm not bankrupt. I manage my little funds very well."

Mrs. McCormack is fighting a delay by the Federal Election Commission in matching the $100,000 raised for her campaign. The commission is investigating claims the money was collected for the Pro-Life Action Committee, which is sponsoring her candidacy, instead of for Mrs. McCormack herself.

But the money is expected to be authorized next week.

Govs Warn of High Tax

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's governors, assembling for their annual mid-winter meeting, waved a warning flag Saturday of higher taxes or drastic curtailment of public services if federal revenue sharing is discontinued.

The current five-year revenue-sharing program expires Dec. 31, and President Ford has said it may not be reauthorized.

Ford will get a chance to deliver that message directly to the governors Monday when he addresses them at their opening business session.

On the eve of the three-day meeting, the National Governor's Conference released a 66-page draft report on a survey of governors on the impact of an end to revenue sharing.

"Assuming no substitute federal programs, the polar alternatives to the loss of revenue sharing funds are to reduce programs or increase taxes, with many hard choices in between," the report said.

"It is probable, however, that most states would distribute the loss among various alternatives so that either several taxes would be raised or numerous programs reduced, or both," it added.

Gov. Robert D. Ray of Iowa, conference chairman, said the basic concept—state and local governments know their needs better than the federal government—remains valid.

"This was the cornerstone used in the passage of the original act and should be used again," Ray said.

Gov. Hugh Carey of New York, facing a $650 million budget deficit this year, said revenue sharing was needed more now than when enacted five years ago.

"While some economic forecasts predict a gradual recovery from the current recession, that recovery will be hindered if state and local governments are forced to increase taxes and further curtail their work forces," Carey said.

Gov. Ed Herschler of Wyoming said it was doubtful expiration of revenue sharing would result in reduced federal income tax.

"The taxpayer then is pushed further into his cruel dilemma of higher taxes without proportional increase in service levels," Herschler said.

If the program was ended, and the states made up the loss only by increasing taxes, 11 governors indicated the increase would come in personal income taxes; nine in sales taxes, and five in corporate income taxes. Three others just said state taxes would rise.

Senate To Reconsider Daylight

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The old arguments against tampering with "God's time" will be heard in the Senate this week as lawmakers consider a bill to have eight months of daylight savings time a year instead of six.

Although the legislation only involves two more months a year of daylight savings time, elected to deal with the rights and wrongs of the concept rather than the merits of the bill.

The nation operates under the Uniform Time Act of 1966, under which DST begins on the last Sunday in April and ends on the last Sunday in October. The Senate bill would make the switch March 7, returning to standard time the second Sunday in November, a two-month difference.

But even if the Senate approves, it is unlikely the House could pass the bill by March 7.

The House Commerce Committee does not plan to hold hearings on the issue until April, so the March 7 idea appears doomed from the start, at least this year.

A Department of Transportation study endorsed the idea of two extra months based on a study made when DST was in effect year-round at the peak of the energy crisis.

That study concluded the nation would realize a 1-percent savings in electricity and a 7-percent reduction in traffic accidents that translates into 50 lives saved and 2,000 fewer injuries. Based on data from the District of Columbia, the study also forecast a reduction in street crime of 10 to 13 percent.

There has been criticism that having the clock ahead during the school year takes an hour's light from children in the morning and endangers them. But the DOT concluded there was no evidence having DST eight months a year would increase casualties.

However, Senate sources expect spirited opposition from the "fundamentalists" who never wanted to change "God's time." There also will be the traditional conflict between rural and urban areas, and between early risers and late risers.

One state that really has a problem is Kentucky since it is split, with half in central time zone and half in eastern.

Blake Laramore and Gary Miller

Blake Laramore changed occupations five years ago.

The longtime Pampa resident quit the grocery business he had operated for 20 years here and started the B & B Packing Company at 1423 S. Barnes.

But, in some ways, the change was gradual. Before he left the grocery business, Laramore said he did custom processing of meat for some of his customers.

Today, the B & B Packing Company employs eight people and does custom killing, smoking and curing of beef and pork. The plant processes between 70 and 80 head of stock each week.

Laramore, who also dresses out beef and pork for sale by the side or quarter, said he has noticed an increase in the number of people who fatten stock for their own consumption "ever since the price freezes."

Most of his business comes from return customers and he does slaughtering work for customers in Shamrock, McLean, Wheeler, Berger, Perryton, Stinnett and Groom, as well as Pampa.

In addition, the B & B Packing Company supplies some retail grocery stores in the area with meat.

The plant is open 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Mondays through Fridays for slaughter. Employees also do maintenance work at the plant until noon on Saturday, though the business is not open to the public on Saturdays.

B & B Packing Company is federally inspected by the USDA and Gary Miller, a federal meat inspector, is on duty whenever the plant is open.

To Debrief Nixon

BRASILIA, Brazil (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger or other Ford administration officials will debrief former President Nixon after his return from China, Kissinger said Saturday.

"We will, of course, wish to learn about the nature and the result" of Nixon's China trip, Kissinger told a news conference at the end of his three-day official visit to Brazil's capital.

Kissinger said the how and when of the debriefing would be decided after Nixon's return scheduled for Feb. 25.

Kissinger said Peking had not consulted the State Department about inviting Nixon to China.

"It is not an action by the U.S. government, but we are in favor of any act that stresses the significance either side attaches to our mutual relations," Kissinger said.

Earlier President Ford and Kissinger had taken a cool attitude toward the China visit and the State Department let it be known that Nixon carried no message to Chinese leaders from Ford.

Nixon arrived in Peking Saturday on the fourth anniversary of his historic 1972 visit that ended almost 25 years of Sino-American estrangement and restored partial relations between the two countries.

Inmate Wants To Buy Photocopy Machine

RAWLINS, Wyo. (UPI) — A Wyoming State Penitentiary inmate says his Constitutional rights are being denied because he is not allowed to correspond freely with the Church of Satan and to buy a photocopy machine. He also says he should not have to live with public address system noise which harms his mental health.

In three Carbon County District Court actions, Weldon M. Kennedy charged Warden Lenard Meacham and other prison employees with abridging his rights.

Kennedy claimed in his first lawsuit that he had been writing to the minister of the Church of Satan since 1974. However, on Feb. 11, prison officials would not allow a letter to the minister to be mailed, he said.

He is seeking $2,000 in general damages and the right to have the church on his mailing, telephone and visiting list.

In another petition, the inmate asks the court to direct Meacham to allow him to buy a photocopy so he can make copies of evidence to be used in future lawsuits.

Previous suits were dismissed because he could not attach copies of evidence to the complaints, Kennedy said, limiting his access to the judicial system and an equal chance for justice.

The last action seeks to restrain Meacham and other prison employees from using the public address system at high volumes "to a point where it causes mental damages upon the plaintiff and other prisoners."

Foreign Grain Buyers Have No Choice

By BERNARD BRENNER
UPI Farm Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Foreign grain buyers who complain about the quality or weight of shipments from the United States generally have no effective recourse because of the traditional system of selling grain on a "certificate final" basis, the General Accounting Office says.

The grade certificates involved are issued by government-licensed private and state inspection agencies at American ports. Once a ship sails with grain covered by such a certificate, the buyer is legally required by his sales contract to pay for the cargo on the basis of the grade shown on the certificate.

What if the ship arrives abroad with a lower-quality cargo than the certificate shows?

The GAO, in a lengthy investigative report released last week on corruption and inefficiency in grain inspection, relayed the story it got from one unnamed foreign buyer.

The foreign company received a shipment of 390,320 bushels of corn with a bill based on an inspection certificate listing the corn as number 3 grade.

Under United States regulations for that grade, the corn should not have contained more than 4 per cent broken kernels and foreign matter. Actually, a court-appointed inspector in the foreign country found the grain had 25 per cent broken kernels and foreign matter.

Later, the GAO said, the foreign buyer complained to the American exporting firm and got the following reply:

"...the inspection certificate is final and conclusive as to the quality-condition of the goods. You are certainly free to investigate about the inspection... but your action in this respect would be extracontractual and therefore of concern to us."

GAO said the buyer in that case estimated he lost $100,000 because of the high foreign matter content of the shipment.

In another case, a buyer purchased 714,933 bushels of wheat listed as number 3 hard amber durum, which is not supposed to contain more than 3 per cent wheat of contrasting classes and had an inspection certificate showing 2.2 per cent of contrasting grain. A test made by the Agriculture Department on samples taken by an independent firm showed wheat of contrasting classes ranging from 7 to 22 per cent.

Nothing was ever done about the discrepancy, however, the GAO said. It said the buyer reported he lost between $400,000 and $500,000 "because the lower quality wheat could not be used for its intended purpose."

GAO said the buyer complained to the Agriculture Department but was told it could offer no explanation for the difference between the quality shown on the inspection certificate and the samples taken later.

In some cases, the GAO said, the Agriculture Department actually made tests of contested wheat and decided the buyer had received lower quality than he had paid for. But nothing was done because the department did not revise the original inspection certificate which — under law — determines the value of grain even in cases where officials admit it is incorrect.

The GAO noted that the Agriculture Department can revise an incorrect grade certificate if a buyer files a formal request for an "appeal inspection" on a grain cargo. But regulations covering such appeals make them difficult to arrange in most cases, the GAO said.
