Sadat severs Soviet friendship

CAIRO (UPI) — A parliamentary committee today approved President Anwar Sadat's decision to abrogate Egypt's friendship and cooperation treaty with the Soviet Union, and diplomatic sources said a further anti-Soviet move will follow.

Parliament's Foreign Relations Committee acted on a draft law canceling the treaty which Sadat, accusing Moscow of playing "cat and mouse" with him over debts, presented to the full house in a major policy speech Sunday.

He presented a draft law calling for termination of the accord to the Foreign Relations Committee for review this morning. The full house was to convene tonight to act on the committee's recommendation.

Approval of Sadat's request appeared assured. There was no immediate official reaction from Moscow to Sadat's speech, which came at a time when Egypt is seeking increased support and arms from the United States and other Western countries.

Sadat said he instead received a request to pay $29.8 million in arrears on military debt interests. He said a recent exchange of letters with Soviet leaders "shows clearly that the Soviet Union is playing a cat and mouse game with me."

Ford supports revenue sharing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford suggested today opponents of the federal revenue sharing program are trying to force cities to cut public services and jobs or raise taxes. "You know that failure to renew this program would weaken the fiscal stability of your cities," Ford said in a speech prepared for delivery to the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

Livestock show opens today

Judging of 223 barrows began at 8 a.m. today at the Top O' Texas Junior Livestock Show in the County Show Barn. M.W. England from Panhandle State University in Goodwell, Okla., is judge for the annual show which draws junior livestock entries from a seven-county area.

Show action this afternoon will be nine classes of steers with 123 animals entered. England will be looking at 10 Angus steers in the first class. He will then judge 14 light weight Hereford entries, 14 medium weight Herefords and 15 heavy Herefords.

Each four-member team, comprised of students from Vocational Agriculture chapters, will be in competition judging beef cattle, swine and lambs, according to Quentin Williams, contest superintendent, and J.P. Smith, assistant superintendent.

The FFA livestock judging has been one of the highlights of the Top O' Texas Livestock Show since it was first held in 1945 and has grown to be considered one of the top contests of its kind in the nation.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coven'g Commandment.

HUD's sad record

It is not an exaggeration to state that the federal government's experience in subsidizing housing for Americans has been very discouraging since it ventured into the programs in 1968, propelled by the race riots of the 1960s.

Initially, the emphasis was on providing housing for the very poor. However, seven years of effort have failed to meet this objective to any great degree. Additionally, the various programs encouraged lawlessness and other scandals, and entrenched another lethargic bureaucracy in the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

As of last month, HUD was the owner of 65,000 boarded-up single family houses, enough to provide the residential needs of a city of 260,000, and an additional 85,000 multifamily units valued at $2 billion.

In the meantime, the emphasis of the federal housing programs changed in the early 1970s when federal subsidies were used to assist middle income Americans and contractors in order to prop up a sagging industry and to create jobs.

Now the administration has taken things a step further by proposing to spend $264 million in the next two years to subsidize 250,000 mortgages and $6.5 billion to generate construction activity. The goal of the next fiscal year is to provide federal subsidies for 500,000 units — some 42 percent of the number of houses built last year.

Philosophically, the thought of the federal government subsidizing Americans goes against the grain, even if the federal government is in large measure responsible for their plight.

Economically the program is even more frightening. As inflation makes more families eligible for HUD assistance, the federal budget, already in the red, simply will not be able to carry the burden without generating even more inflation. Federal subsidies to construction already were frozen once in 1973 because of insufficient funds.

It would be easier for the administration to turn back from the impending disaster now, before the program becomes more entrenched and before it gets a vaster constituency than it now has.

Wall Street's floor

The New York stock market is, or should be, a shrine of the free market.

It is based on the concept that willing buyers and willing sellers, freed of artificial restrictions and restraints, will negotiate together to establish a fair price for a commodity.

And it is further postulated by those who support the free market that this price-setting process will automatically result in the most efficient production of the goods and services demanded by the market, making them available at the lowest possible cost.

That is the textbook free market, and it seems good enough on the floor of the stock market, where stocks are bid up or down with a minimum of government restraint.

But it is not good enough for the acolytes of the shrine — the stock brokers themselves. Since May Day, the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission has freed the stock brokers' commission rates from government control. They have been able to offer their services on the free market and compete for customers by lowering their commissions or improving their services.

Now the chairman of the Securities Industries Association calls for a return to government price fixing. He wants a government-regulated "floor" below which commission rates could not fall.

He warns of the "instability" caused by a "price war," the term used to denote free competition by those who are afraid of it.

He wants the government to resist the pleas of these men of little faith in the free enterprise system.

What is healthy for the economy on the floor of the stock market ultimately will prove healthy for the brokers in their Wall Street offices.

Competition is strong medicine, and only the worthy may survive. But it is far better for all of us than subsidizing the inefficient through government regulation.

thom marshall's FORUM

and against 'em

Our Highland General Hospital administrator, Robert Monogue, said something rather amusing at Thursday's hospital board meeting and, so as not to take his statement out of context, I'll fill in the background that led up to his comment.

Board members and the administrator were discussing the pros and cons purchasing some new computer equipment that would aid in billing operations.

Board member Ed Patman mentioned to the other board members that at the beginning of the year almost a million dollars was out in accounts receivable and "we must step up our collection procedures."

Some more discussion followed and at one point, when the administrator had the floor, he referred to Patman's comments about the accounts receivable and this is what I thought was funny: "then Monogue said, 'A million dollars is a million dollars.'"

He seemed to express some respect for that amount of money. It apparently is a big enough piece of change to impress him.

Hopefully, the administrator's statement will go down in history with other quotable phrases concerning money. You remember them.

How about, "A penny saved is a penny earned." Or the ever popular, "Watch your pennies and your dollars will take care of themselves."

Now we have, "A million dollars is a million dollars." I might revise that just a bit, for my own use, because I am impressed by much lesser amounts of money. I might say, "A thousand dollars is a thousand dollars."

I come closer to understanding a thousand dollars than I do a million dollars. I know, for example, that if I had a couple of thousand dollars I could buy a nice little table and three open-armed side chairs and a plush leather executive chair for my office.

Or I could use a couple of thousand dollars to buy Christmas turkeys for hospital employees and expensive hams for hospital board members.

I could, But I probably wouldn't. I think there might be wiser ways I could use a couple of thousand bucks — even if it were somebody else's I could use. I was using. I think that if I could save almost $15,000 by buying a piece of equipment rather than leasing it for 60 months — especially if the machine only cost $15,000 to purchase in the first place — I think I would buy that machine. But I think small. I guess. Confronted with a lease or purchase choice like the one outlined above, Monogue suggested to the board that the machine be leased for 60 months at $495 per month, rather than purchased outright for $15,000.

Members of the board applied some elementary math to the figures involved and determined that even if the purchase price had to be borrowed, interest on the money would be considerably less than the lease arrangement. They approved purchase of the equipment. Monogue was not asked why he favored the lease arrangement.

Of course, there is only a few thousand dollars involved in each of the above examples. But I can't help thinking that even in the hospital's situation, if enough of those little thousand-dollar expenses could be stopped, the money would add up.

And, after all, "A million dollars is a million dollars."

Education in U.S.

Should we go back to basics?

By DR. MAX REFFERTY

"Centralia, Wash., is being bugged by startlings in its little park. They roost in the trees and make such a mess that it is 'unsafe' to walk through the park and certainly unwise to sit on the benches. A variety of solutions has been offered, one being the use of a rock-and-roll concert which will drive the birds away and still entertain the young folks."

This suggestion was made by a local radio announcer who said it more or less in fun. I couldn't help but think about your recent column on things that annoyed you, including rock combos.

If you were a starting, wouldn't you head out fast? — Mrs. M.L.D., Pe Ell, Wash.

A — You'd better believe it. And here I've been saying all along that rock "music" was for the birds. Come to think of it, not even for them.

Q — "It grieves me how rapidly the public school system has deteriorated in this country. I was happy to read in your column about the few schools (the so-called 'Fundamental Schools' in Pasadena and elsewhere) which have gone back to the basics and the old-fashioned system. One or two will not do the job of course, but it is a start."

I've been out of school 23 years, and it is hard for me to understand the things that go on in our schools today. I just read that Broward County (Fla.) wants to use 'The Godfather,' 'Jaws' and so on in its literature classes because the children today are more sophisticated (9th and 10th grades). So far, this has been blocked. Where do sex and violence fit into sophistication? If the children are so advanced, they should have no trouble with Shakespeare, Thoreau and so on. — E.C., Margate, Fla.

A — Are you kidding? The average 10th grader today has trouble reading "Dick and Jane." The attractiveness of "Jaws" and "The Godfather" stems from the fact that the kids have already seen the movies and thus can discuss them in class without actually having to read the books.

Q — "I enjoyed your 'Top Ten Trivia' column immensely. Not long ago I began the same method of relieving chronic tensions. May I unload a few of mine upon you?"

1 — I'm tired at nauseam of...

2 — People inconsiderately banging the sides of my car in parking lots.

3 — People who think they are entitled to peace and comfort without working for it.

4 — People who take our freedoms for granted.

5 — People who still throw garbage along our roadways.

6 — The news media swaying public opinion on major issues. I prefer to read the facts but not to be told how to think.

7 — Hearing of multiple daylight burglaries and no one really doing anything about it.

8 — Developers who insist on building more and more shopping centers.

9 — Drivers who travel at a snail's pace in the left lane.

10 — Gas station attendants who, upon seeing my Porsche 911S, remark, "What kind car is that, mister, a Fiat?"

11 — Turning on my AM car radio and getting only rock and country western music. What happened to Bach, Brahms and Beethoven?

Finally, it's a good thing we're in an energy pinch — A — Without 60 billion garish Christmas lights on the streets, perhaps Americans can find Christmas in the churches.

B — Maybe we'll walk more and ride less — maybe even lose a few pounds.

C — Frugality, resourcefulness and the ability to sacrifice are qualities which most Americans have lost. To regain some of the moral fiber of our Founding Fathers can only improve our lot in life. We've lost the respect of many foreign nations. Any wonder? — Dr. H.J.Y., Birmingham, Ala.

A — No wonder at all. But thanks for the list. I've included your whole letter because it was better than my original column.

Dr. Rafferty welcomes questions for use in this column once each week, but regrets he cannot answer all mail personally. Please send your questions to him in care of this paper.

Large families are apparently out of fashion. Births among women with three or more children dropped 60 percent between 1960 and 1975. The Conference Board reports. Even second births slumped by 10 percent. First babies, on the other hand, were up by about 15 percent. In all, 3.2 million babies were born in 1975, compared with 4.3 million 15 years before.

Price of hamburger vs. Civil Defense

By Tom Tiede

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — In its complex effort to cut the cost of some government to allow increases in the cost of some other government, the Administration is proposing a guillotine slice in fiscal 1977 for the nation's civil defense agency. The budget suggestion would reduce C.D. expenditures from the current $87 million to $71 million, or from 38 cents per capita per year to about 31 cents, providing less for this common defense of 220 million Americans than the cost of a hamburger per person.

At that, many in Washington feel the outlay is excessive. In a world where nations have accumulated at least 15,000 megatons of deliverable nuclear destruction (the Hiroshima bomb was 013 megaton), the popular notion is that a civil defense against doomsday is impossible, thus funds for C.D. are improvident. Besides, as they say, even if people could be saved from the atomic war, what would they be saved for?

Yet while the theory of hopelessness pervades America, it has few adherents across the water in other lands of hyperbolic hydrogenation. The Soviet Union spends approximately $5 per capita for civil defense and reportedly has the capacity of saving as many as 94 percent of the Russian people in a nuclear attack. China, too, labors on the side of survival optimism, having familiarized many of its 800 million people with an extensive underground shelter system.

Are we smart and they dumb? There are still a few around town who think not. Granted, the few are mostly paid employees of the C.D. industry, undoubtedly worried as much for their jobs as anything, yet there is an argument to be made that what is good or bad for the C.D. bureaucrats may be good or bad for the people of the Republic. Even our weak C.D. effort is being sabotaged by cost cutting. Soon our nuclear protection will perhaps consist of one watchman in Oshkosh turning on the siren and then running like hell with everyone else.

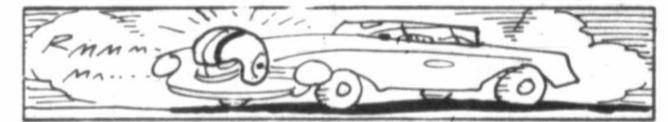

It is probably true that C.D. officials have unconsciously cooperated in the benign neglect of their purpose. When America first looked to them for advice in the frightening Fifties, they told everybody to build a bomb shelter in the backyard. After that debacle, C.D. shifted emphasis to community shelter programs, but the opportunity had passed. Today there are allegedly 230 million designated shelter spaces in the nation, almost all of them unknown to the people, and as for the supply stocks they have for the large part been eaten by rats or sent off to other countries as U.S. aid.

Besides the faulty thinking at C.D. (officially, the bureau is now called Defense Civil Preparedness Agency), there has been slumbering leadership. The present director, John Davis, has been in charge, it seems, since the days of the crossbows. His credentials include the fact he was once a mediocre governor of North Dakota. It has been unable for a decade to interest anyone in C.D., a failure that could have consequences beyond this editorial dig.

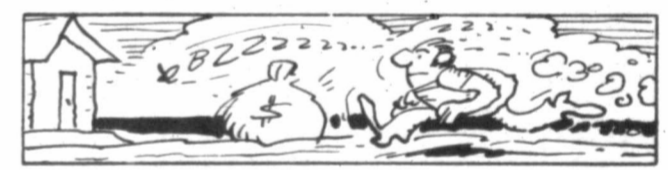

Yet crippling the C.D. bureaucracy because of its ineptitudes will serve only to compound the agency's weaknesses. Currently C.D. officers are studying a new approach to civil protection that of combining evacuation procedures with the in-place shelter program. It copies the Russian idea, and has merit. Yet it has no future if budget cuts necessitate a one-third cut of the DCPA staff of 650. Already the staff is too small to create a meaningful C.D. program in America.

Ultimately, it may be impossible to create meaningful C.D. in this country. Not having been attacked by a foreign power in 200 years, the United States suffers delusions of permanent immunity, and besides, free people are not easily herded into the kinds of educational and hypothetical restrictions necessary for mass security.

Still, it is the government's Constitutional task to try. Estimates are that proper C.D. could save an additional 30 to 100 million people during an atomic attack, and the subject here is you and me. Surely we are worth more than the price of a hamburger in the budget.

Think of your car as an athlete which needs to warm up gradually. Rev-up slowly.

Protestants Approve The Right to Die

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: I have signed The Living Will, a document that simply states that if I should become terminally ill, and my physician concludes that there is no reasonable hope for my recovery, I do not wish to be kept alive by artificial means. In other words, "when God calls me home, let me go."

Copies of that document have been given to my physician, my lawyer, my rabbi and my immediate family. I have no fear that someone will try to "do me in" before my time.

I wrote to Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, asking him to state the Protestant view on a person's right to die with dignity. His response follows:

DEAR ABBY,

As to the official Protestant point of view on the right to die with dignity, as far as I know, there is none.

The reason is that Protestantism is fragmented into denominations, and there is a variety of opinions on this issue. The very name "protestant" indicates the absence of uniformity.

My judgment is that the prevailing view would be that God alone should determine life and death. The individual should be in the hands of God, who gave life and whose function it is to take it.

There are increasing numbers who might question this view in certain circumstances, but I should think that the great majority of Protestants would subscribe to the above. I read you constantly. You are good for what ails America. Keep it going. You're the greatest.

God bless you every day all the way.—Cordially, NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Malpractice suits fewer in Texas

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The number of malpractice suits filed in Texas is well below the national average because of the state's judicial system, according to a spokesman for the Texas Trial Lawyers Association.

Don Davis, director of the trial lawyer group, said the National Association of Insurance Commissioners survey indicates rates could be reduced in Texas if the rates were based only on the experience of Texas doctors.

Asked about such a reduction, Davis replied, "You betcha. There's not any question about that."

"The survey that in this period of time from July 1, 1975, to Dec. 31, 1975, 82 per cent of all claims in Texas were closed without any payment at all, and only 38 per cent were closed in payment," Davis said. "Only 2.8 per cent of those claims resulted in a trial with a verdict for the plaintiff."

"What it shows is that our system is working for Texas physicians, and the reason it is working is that Texas does not have and will never have what you refer to as runaway jury verdicts."

Davis said the judicial system in Texas permits two appellate courts to review judgments in such cases, and thus prevents exorbitant judgments in malpractice and other liability cases.

Officials of the State Insurance Board, charged with regulating malpractice rates and preventing companies from charging excessive premiums, are not as convinced as Davis that the NAIC survey shows Texas doctors are paying too much for liability coverage.

"We don't know for sure what the Texas experience is because the insurers were not required to keep this information," said Tony Proffitt, research director for the agency.

"We do know our rates are lower than New York and lower than California, and we think they are in line with the Texas experience." Proffitt said the NAIC survey involved only a six-month time period, and may not have reflected malpractice claims voluntarily settled out of court by insurance companies.

"To say that our rates definitely are or definitely are not too high based on six months experience would be like calculating the annual rainfall by taking the rainfall for one month and multiplying it by 12 to determine what the annual rainfall should be," he said.

Two dead after talk about kids

PERRIS, Calif. (UPI) — What began as a discussion between five adults about a fist fight between two 9-year-old boys Sunday ended in a shooting that left two persons dead and one critically wounded.

Alvin Joseph Moya, 38, was booked on murder charges. Dead were Robert Lewis, 32, and Nathan Garcia Rogers, 24.

Errol Steve Gibson was in critical condition at Riverside County General Hospital. Moya's wife, Judy, was in good condition at the same hospital with a groin wound.

Perris police chief K.J. McAuley said Gibson, Rogers and Lewis went to the Moya residence to discuss a fist fight between the 9-year-old sons of Gibson and Moya.

The discussion turned into a heated argument, McAuley said, and one of the three visitors pulled out a .38-caliber revolver and shot Mrs. Moya in the groin.

Moya then grabbed a .22-caliber rifle, McAuley said, and began shooting, killing Lewis and Rogers and critically wounding Gibson.

MISSIONARY SPEAKS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — United Methodist Bishop Ralph E. Houston honors

The Houston Livestock Show proved to be a one-way trip for "Black Magic," a 1,113-pound English Crossbred steer. The animal tied second in his class and went back to take the breed reserve championship. Hank Jordan, owner, is at the halter. Also pictured is Jordan's brother, Randy Jordan, standing in for Bob Skaggs, agriculture teacher at Pampa High School. "Black Magic" was auctioned for $2.25 per pound. Jordan is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bush Jordan, 2109 Hamilton.

Locals place in Houston

Gray County 4-H members and FFA students from Pampa High School competed last week in the junior livestock division of the Houston Livestock Show.

Top winner from Pampa was Hank Jordan who showed his heavy weight English Crossbred steer to second place in his class and also took reserve champion honors.

Chris Skaggs' heavy weight Maine-Anjou steer was placed eighth.

A Chester White barrow was shown to a fifth place by John Mark Baggerman and Rebecca O'Neal won ninth with her Chester White. Phil George took 13th in the Chester White division, and a Chester White shown by Tricia George placed 25th.

Hampshire barrows were shown to sixth and 10th placings by Charlie Thomas and Artie Sailor respectively.

Mike Seely's animal placed seventh in a Poland China class and a Spotted Poland China entry shown by Clint Coust tied 23rd.

Crossbred barrows were exhibited to eighth and 13th placings by Chris Skaggs and Joe Coust.

Vocational agriculture teacher Bob Skaggs of Pampa High School accompanied the local entries to Houston. In competition with agriculture teachers and county agents across Texas, Skaggs received a 25th placing from the superintendent of the junior barrow show.

Other area winners included Tracy Brown of Groom who tied fourth with a shorthorn steer and who also competed to a first.

one second and two thirds in the Junior Breeding Beef - Angus Show.

In the Junior Breeding Beef - Hereford Show, Richard Russell of Panhandle won a second and a third and Robbie Russell of Panhandle showed entries to one first, one second and a reserve championship. Sheila Martin of Panhandle returned home with two fourths. Jamee Batton of Wheeler tied fifth and Shannon Batton of Wheeler placed second and fifth.

Palestinian forces halt rebel troops in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Rebel troops advanced up the coast toward the hilltop stronghold of Lebanon's defiant president today but Syrian-controlled Palestinian forces blocked the roads to cut them off.

An armored column of the rebel Lebanese Arab Army rumbled up the picturesque coastal road from Sidon but were stopped about a mile south of the crossroads that cuts northeast to the presidential retreat of Baabda seven miles southeast of Beirut.

Forces from the Syrian-backed Al Saqqa guerrillas blocked the road and began digging trenches to keep the rebel force under Maj. Yakoub Daher from passing.

Farther east, another rebel force loyal to Beirut coup leader Brig. Gen. Aziz Ahdab began moving south to reach the main Damascus highway that passes through Baabda from the east on the way to Beirut.

But a unit of Palestine Liberation Army troops blocked the highway just east of Sofar 16 miles east of the palace, witnesses said.

In Beirut, Phalangists loyal to Franjeh and leftists loyal to Khatab and Ahdab traded rocket and machine gun fire all morning from the shattered hulks of Beirut's luxury hotels.

At least seven rockets slammed into the top of the Phalangist-held Holiday Inn, sending big puffs of black smoke billowing up from its shattered windows.

Phalangists firing from the top floors of the 37-story hotel fired back four rockets in quick succession into the top of the nearby Murr Tower held by the leftists.

A spokesman at the presidential palace, where Franjeh has an estimated 1,000 loyal troops and a brigade of tanks to defend him, told UPI that "the situation here is good. The president is receiving phone calls from Arab and foreign heads of state."

The troop movements followed another ultimatum from Ahdab for Franjeh to resign or be ousted. A move against the palace had been expected at any time but it was not yet clear whether Daher's forces and those of the pro-Ahdab Hammama army commando barracks further east were moving at Ahdab's orders.

UPI correspondent Michael Keats reported from Khalde seven miles south of Beirut that Saqqa troops were digging in at trenches along the junction where the Sidon-Beirut highway forks off toward Baabda.

Daher's column of 12 armored cars and personnel carriers halted about a half a mile south of the Palestinians. "Where are you headed," Keats asked Daher.

"To the palace, of course," he replied.

Asked why he had stopped, Daher said he was "waiting for orders." Asked from whom, he replied, "No comment."

The United Nations formally came into existence Oct. 24, 1945, with the deposit with the U.S. State Department of the required number of ratifications of the Charter.

License tag sales lag

By ANNA BURCHELL, Pampa News Staff

Deadline for the purchase of 1976 license motor vehicle license plates is April 1.

The purchases are slower in Gray County this year than last. In a Pampa News poll these are among the reasons listed:

"I'm not going to allow the state to have the use of money ahead of time. If they draw interest on it, I'm that much behind," a Gray County farmer responded. He will purchase several tags on the deadline day.

Another said it just wasn't wise to buy ahead of time because one might wreck his car, "and then he has lost the purchase price of the tags."

A third explained, "I am a procrastinator. I don't do anything until I have to."

One woman commented that she thought she would move or at least change her address because she is tired of parking tickets.

"But 50 dozen people have out of town license tags," said Johnnie Fontenot, traffic control officer. "Therefore, we issue parking tickets to all vehicles in violation unless they are out of state or definitely have signs that they are owned by out of town residents... like clothes hanging in the car."

And then there are those who are waiting for pay day before buying the tags.

The tags are available in the office of Jack Back, tax assessor collector, who says his employees will be ready for the rush if and when it comes.

"And it usually does," he said.

District Deputy

J. Boyd Smith, past master of McLean Masonic Lodge No. 889 A.F. and A.M. and a Scottish Rite Mason, recently was appointed district deputy grand master of the 98th Mason's District Grand Lodge of Texas. The 98th District includes lodges in McLean, Mobeetie, Pampa, Wheeler and Shamrock.

Reports stolen gas

Officers of the Pampa Police Department investigated two accidents, two thefts of gasoline, one criminal mischief complaint and made one arrest for public intoxication and resisting arrest over the weekend.

The Minit Mart at 1106 Alcock reported that a total of $11.98 worth of gasoline was taken in two instances over the weekend.

Warren F. Williams told police that someone had broken a glass out of his pickup.

Officers picked up Larry Ross McWilliams, 37, on a traffic warrant. He was also charged with public intoxication and resisting arrest.

Non-injury accidents were worked in the 700 block of S. Henry and in the 1800 block of W. Alcock.

A customer at Ideal Food Store at 312 E. Brown found a bag of suspected marijuana and turned it in to Larry Engle, store manager. The substance, which police have confirmed to be marijuana, is in the Property Room at the Police Department until the owner claims it.

GOP needs to broaden support says Connally

FLGRESVILLE, Tex. (UPI) — Former Treasury Secretary John Connally says Republicans should set goals of four additional Senate seats and 30 more House positions in this fall's national elections.

The former Texas governor told Republican leaders from 21 states the party must broaden its support.

"Unless we can call on independents and Democrats, we're not going to win anything," he said during a weekend meeting in the den of his ranch house. "Things have changed and we're the advocates of the status quo."

Connally reiterated his proposals for limiting the president to one six-year term, senators to two six-year terms, representatives to four-year terms and mandatory retirement of federal judges at 70 with reconfirmation every 10 years. He said members of Congress should be required to resign before running for the presidency.

"I think we ought to limit the terms, frankly, because of the alliance built up between the executive bureaucracy and the congressional staff. They're running all our business, yours and mine and the congressmen and senator's as well, and I think we have to break it," he said.

Connally said he felt the winner of the race between President Ford and former California Gov. Ronald Reagan would be the Republican nominee and that a convention deadlock this summer was "hardly likely."

Costs up for Israelis

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israelis, the world's most heavily taxed people, have been given a new economic burden — a rise of up to 25 per cent in the price of dozens of basic commodities.

The government also announced a 2 per cent devaluation of Israel's shakly pound — the eighth since the Jewish state began its policy of "creeping devaluation" in June, 1975.

To investigate Calloway

DENVER (UPI) — A Senate subcommittee will investigate allegations President Ford's former campaign manager forced the transfer of three Forest Service employees who opposed expansion plans for a Colorado ski resort.

Sen. Floyd Haskell, D-Colo., says his subcommittee will start the investigations next month. He said the investigation will cover allegations that Howard Calloway, who holds a controlling interest in the Crested Butte ski area, used improper influence to push for the area's expansion.

Pampa fireman answer calls

The Pampa Fire Department answered two fire calls during the past 48 hours including one at the city dump and another at the Pampa Nursing Center.

Bomb blast kills civilian in Argentina

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — A powerful bomb exploded today next to army headquarters — across the plaza from President Isabel Peron's office — killing one person and injuring 21 others, police sources said.

The bomb was in a car parked outside army headquarters. Ten cars in the parking lot were destroyed and windows were smashed in government building within a six-block area.

One civilian passerby was killed by the blast, police sources said. Fifteen of the wounded were military personnel and six were civilians in the area.

Absentee balloting begins

Absentee balloting in both the municipal and school board elections began today at City Hall and the school business office, 119 N. Frost St.

The contested school election and the uncontested city election are scheduled for Saturday, April 3.

Absentee balloting in both elections will run through Tuesday, March 30.

There will be contests in each of the three places to be filled on the Pampa Independent District School Board.

Neal Stovall and Alfred J. Smith are candidates for Place 4, the one-year unexpired term of board member Harold Comer who is running for district attorney.

Curt Beck, current school board president running for re-election to a 3-year term, will be opposed in Place 5 by Foster Whaley, former County Extension agent.

Family shot to death

TREVOSE, Pa. (UPI) — One by one, members of the John Abt family plus the fiancé of one of his daughters arrived home for the day. And one by one, they were shot to death.

Bensalem Township police said today they had some "solid" leads but have not determined the reasons for the slayings Friday.

Each victim was shot in the head as he or she entered the Abts' modest, two-story home in this suburban Philadelphia community.

The victims were identified as Abt, a Bell Telephone Co. employe; his wife, Margaret, who worked for the Internal Revenue Service; daughters, Cathy, 13, and Margie 19; son, John Jr., 12; and Margie's finace, Garson Engle, 20, of Trevese.

"We're tracking down several leads, some solid," Police Chief Lawrence Michaels said Sunday. But he said neither a motive nor a suspect had been found.

He said murder-suicide and robbery were ruled out because no gun was found and nothing appeared to be missing from the home.

Police said they theorized the killer or killers gained entry by smashing the window of a kitchen storm door. The family's St. Bernard, Heidi, was shot to death first.

Cathy and John Jr. arrived home from school about mid-afternoon. They were the first to be shot.

Next was their mother, about two hours later, police said. Then Margie, a Bell Telephone secretary, was surprised by the assailants. Within moments of that shooting, John Abt was killed as he entered the home.

The last to die was Engle. Michaels said two of the bodies were dragged into the basement and "the other four were just thrown there."

Another son, Michael Abt, 20, came home and noticed bloodied rags and trails of red. He and flagged down Patrolman David Cleo, who discovered the bodies.

They were among 13 men who volunteered to descend deep into the mine Thursday to investigate an explosion that killed 15 other miners two days earlier.

A second blast trapped the inspection team. Two managed to escape, but the other 11 died 1,600 feet below the earth's surface.

Mine officials said their bodies would be left in the mine rather than risk still more lives trying to retrieve them. The officials planned to seal that section of the pit today.

The first disaster occurred Tuesday when an explosion, apparently triggered by methane gas, ripped through a section about 4 1/2 miles down a slope into Black Mountain.

The bodies of the 15 miners were found by rescue crews Wednesday. Nine apparently died in the explosion and the other six suffocated when they barricaded themselves in an attempt to form an air pocket.

The inspection team went into the mine to make sure it was safe to begin a formal investigation into the first explosion. They died while strengthening tunnel supports.

Officials of the mining company, a subsidiary of the Blue Diamond Coal Co., of Knoxville, Tenn., said they were uncertain when operations in upper levels might be resumed.

The last three of the initial 15 victims were buried Sunday. Among them was Jimmy Sturgill, who at 20, was the youngest of the 26 killed.

Sturgill was buried on a mountainside where he and his 19-year-old pregnant wife of six months had planned to build their first home.

Harvey Sturgill, 27, whose father, James, 48, was one of the safety team members killed, said he felt the inspecting team had not been told about an abandoned towing vehicle which he said might have sparked the second blast.

Sturgill is a distant relation to Jimmy Sturgill.

President Ford sent a personal representative to the southeastern Kentucky mining area to make sure survivors receive all benefits to which they are entitled.

Bodies to remain in mine

PARTRIDGE, Ky. (UPI) — For eight miners and three federal inspectors, the depths of the Scotia Coal Co. mine are their grave.

They were among 13 men who volunteered to descend deep into the mine Thursday to investigate an explosion that killed 15 other miners two days earlier.

A second blast trapped the inspection team. Two managed to escape, but the other 11 died 1,600 feet below the earth's surface.

Japan tax man seize $5 million in assets

TOKYO (UPI) — Tax authorities today seized about $5 million in assets belonging to Yoshio Kodama, an influential rightist accused of tax evasion in connection with his alleged role in the Lockheed bribery scandal.

The Tokyo tax office said the action was taken after Kodama failed to pay $4.3 million in 1970-72 taxes plus penalties due the Monday noon deadline.

He allegedly received money from Lockheed Aircraft Corp. during the three year period, but failed to report the money to the tax office.

Kodama, 65, a "secret agent of Lockheed" was alleged to have received about $7 million from the American aircraft maker between 1958 and 1975.

The officials said the $4.3 million assessment against Kodama was based on documents seized during a raid of his home and offices in Tokyo Feb. 24.

LACY-LOOKING GLOBE is the Laser Geodynamic Satellite (Lageos) to be launched in April. Receiving a preliminary inspection at the Bendix Corp., Ann Arbor, Mich., following installation of 426 retro-reflectors, the 903-pound NASA project is designed to track the Earth's crustal motion and rotation.

Moon rocks may solve mystery

HOUSTON (UPI) — Delegates to the Seventh Lunar Science Conference will work on one of the major unsolved questions about the moon — what happened to the lunar magnetic field.

Scientists have learned from studying moon rocks for the past five years that there was an ancient magnetic field. They don't know for sure what happened for the time the massive clouds of dust and gas evolved into a solid planetary state.

The week-long conference, which begins today, is expected to draw 700 scientists from throughout the world.

"The presence of an ancient magnetic field as recorded by the lunar samples is perhaps the major unsolved problem about the moon," said Dr. Robert O. Pepin, director of the Lunar Science Institute near the Johnson Space Center. The reason it is a problem is we now have a feeling the magnetic fields are generated by processes within the liquid metallic core of a planet.

"The moon may have a very small core today which may be partially liquid. But it does not have a magnetic field. The lunar samples clearly record an ancient magnetic field that was present at the time the samples (the moon rocks) were cooled.

"The question is where do the fields come from and how are they recorded by the samples?" Pepin and Dr. Larry A. Haskin, chief of Planetary and Earth Sciences at JSC, are co-chairmen of the conference.

Scientists believe discoveries about the moon can be applied to unlocking secrets of the formation of Earth and other planets in our solar system.

"If we can answer these questions for the moon, we may be able to answer them for other planets, including the Earth," Haskin said. "The fact that moon rocks are beginning to tell us something about other planets is one of the most exciting aspects of current lunar research."

Bodies like the Moon, Mars and Mercury apparently formed in much the same way, and their early histories are dominated by the impacts of large bodies and by widespread melting.

Scientists use data obtained from lunar rocks to try and understand what Earth and other planets were like between the time the solar system formed about 4.6 billion years ago and about 3.7 billion years ago, the age of the oldest rocks preserved on Earth.

Several scientists at the conference will describe how lunar data can be used to interpret the craters and volcanoes recently photographed by robot spacecraft on the surfaces of Mercury and Mars.

Other papers will discuss meteorites, the satellites of Jupiter (which are about the size of the moon) and the use of Earth-based telescopes to measure the chemical composition of the asteroids.

The Census Bureau reports that in 1974 the size of the average U.S. household fell to 2.97 persons. That is the first time it has dropped below three.

Zebra killers get live

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — "I believe justice was done."

This was the reaction of Arthur Agnos, who survived an attack by the "Zebra" killers, to the conviction of four Black Muslims on multiple charges in the random street slayings of 14 white persons in late 1973 and early 1974.

A racially mixed jury of eight women and four men — after a year-long trial and four days of deliberation — returned guilty verdicts against Jessie Lee Cooks, 31, Larry Craig Green, 24, Manuel Moore, 31, J.C. Simon, 29, Saturday on charges of murder, kidnaping and assault.

The charges carry mandatory life imprisonment sentences because the crimes occurred before the reinstatement of capital punishment in California.

The case took on the name "Zebra" because that was the radio channel special police units used in trying to track down the killers.

Clinton White, chief defense lawyer, said he would appeal. Superior Court Judge Joseph Karesch set today for defense motions. He will set a sentencing date later.

"I have mixed feelings,"

Agnos, a candidate for a state assembly seat, said "On one hand, these men did a terrible thing. They ruined people's lives with the damage they did to the victims and their families."

"On the other hand, I was a victim fortunate enough to escape without permanent injury."

White said: "I disagree with the jury and am at a loss to explain the verdict. The defendants said to me right after the verdict, 'We didn't kill anyone.'"

At the time of their arrest, then Mayor Joseph Alioto said the killers were part of a "death angels" cult which had the killing of whites as its aim.

Homicide inspector John Fotinos, who spent two years on the case, said the jury verdict was anticlimactic.

"This vindicates our thinking," he said. "We knew we had the right people."

PHS students awarded

Five Pampa High School art, crafts and journalism students gained 10 awards at the Northwest Texas Regional Exhibition in Amarillo Feb. 14-28.

The competition was also attended by students from Pampa Junior High School.

Rodgers Hoskins of Pampa High School entered jewelry which he made under the direction of crafts teacher Willetta Olds. That exhibit will be forwarded to New York for national competition.

Hoskins also entered jewelry made under direction of Janice Sackett, art teacher. That entry received a certificate.

Other students of Ms. Sackett who received key awards were Gay Carter, oils; and Vickie Trammell for mixed media and acrylics. Other certificate winners were Patricia Castleberry with two pottery entries, Vickie Trammell with an ink drawing and Gay Carter for an oils entry.

Journalism student Steve Combs received a key rating on his photography entry. Journalism teacher is Elizabeth Hurley.

Key awards went to Pampa Junior High School students Robert Echols and Gary Meador for photography entries. Echols also entered photography which received a certificate. Both boys were taught by Teresa Crone, arts and crafts teacher at the junior high.

Gary L. Watts, arts and crafts teacher, worked with two students who received certificates. Johnny Reagan and Cindy Quattlebaum entered a pencil drawing and pastels respectively.

The exhibition, sponsored by the Western Plaza Merchants Association in Amarillo, attracted entries from high schools and junior high schools in a 32-county area.

Strike closes Vegas

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — A dozen lavish gambling palaces, six of them owned by billionaire Howard Hughes, have been closed by a strike by four unions representing nearly 25,000 members.

But several hotels along the Strip stayed open and downtown action continued today as officials tried to keep tourists and their gambling dollars from deserting this resort.

Airlines scheduled extra planes Sunday to accommodate what they thought would be a heavy demand for flights out — but many tourists didn't fly away as expected.

"It just didn't happen, a Trans World Airlines spokesman said. "It's weird," a man at United Air Lines added. "I guess they're just waiting and hoping."

Nevada officials in a state heavily dependent on gaming revenues also hoped for an early end to the strike that started Wednesday against the 15 hotels represented by the Nevada Resort Association.

There was no indication through the weekend that owners of the affected resorts and leaders of the culinary workers, bartenders, musicians and stagehands union were any closer to a settlement.

The affiliated hotels paid $5,519,382 in state gaming taxes for the last quarter of 1975. That represented 39.8 per cent of the total gaming revenue collected by the state during the quarter.

Statistics suggest the state is losing $14,000 a day from the 3.5 per cent sales tax collected by the resorts and that Clark County is losing $21,700 a day in room taxes.

The dispute also has idled 23,000 workers at a time when Nevada was borrowing money from the federal government to finance its unemployment com-ensation fund.

The six resorts owned by Hughes and his Summa Corp. — the Landmark, Frontier, Desert Inn, Castaways, Sands and Silver Slipper — were closed, along with the MGM Grand, Las Vegas and Flamingo Hiltons, Tropicana, Thunderbird and Sahara.

The unions also walked out against Caesar's Palace, Circus

Recruit dies in exercise

HOUSTON (UPI) — A 20-year-old Marine recruit, who was struck on the head and knocked unconscious with a simulated bayonet during a training exercise last December, died Saturday.

A military spokesman said Pvt. Lynn E. McClure of Lufkin, Tex., died at the Houston Veterans Administration Hospital.

The spokesman said McClure and other Marines were taking

Charlie Rich says he'll slow down

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Charlie Rich, the Colt, Ark., farm boy who made good in pop-country music, says he's slowing down after three tough years on the road.

"Last year was probably one of the roughest we ever had," says the silver-haired singer-pianist.

In addition to traveling to the point of exhaustion, Rich, whose "Behind Closed Doors" ended 20 years in honky-tonks, got some sour publicity and came near ending his 23-year marriage.

He made a scene on national television, burning an envelope naming John Denver Country Music Association "Entertainer of the Year."

He had an encounter with an autograph seeker who accused him of roughing her up.

The way he talks now, though, his biggest problems are an expanding waistline and following up on his first gospel album entitled "Silver Linings."

"Everything seems to be getting better," he says. Now 43, Rich has cut back on touring to spend more time at home. "I don't like to make rash statements, but I do think we know a little bit better how to handle things."

Rich dismisses the CMA awards ceremony incident as the result of exhaustion and pain-killing drugs he was taking for a foot injury. He bluntly says the autograph seeker was lying.

It (burning the envelope) was a mistake," he says. "But it has been blown out of proportion. I have read stories that I was drunk and that's a damned lie. It was no reflection on John Denver or anybody else.

"I voted for John Denver. I think he's a fine artist and a fine musician. We sent him a present (at Christmas) last year and got a nice letter back."

As for the autograph seeker who asked him to sign her dress, Rich says simply, "I signed her dress and that was it."

Rich says he and his wife, Margaret Ann, the childhood sweetheart he married at Forrest City, Ark., in 1952, are working out their problems since she filed and then withdrew a divorce petition last November.

"The traveling and the things that built up had bothered our home life," he says.

"At one time we thought there wasn't any way that we could make it with the pressures that we had."

"And we thought that it might be better for Jack (age 9, the only one of four children still at home) if we did divorce," he says.

"But I think we can make it. I don't want to say, 'Yeah, we're gonna make it and you read next week that we're divorced.' But we're both trying real hard, as we have to."

Besides, he says, he and his wife are enjoying their first grandchild, Margaret Suzanne, born to his oldest daughter, Mrs. Renee Carver, in January.

His granddaughter "has taken priority over everything else the last few weeks," but Rich is excited about the new album, a musical shifting of gears.

Billy Sherrill (his producer with Epic) and I have this thing of having been brought up in the same scene," he says. "Billy's dad was a Baptist preacher and I grew up in a Baptist home. We always talked about doing country and black blues-gospel material."

Released Feb. 16, it includes standards like "Just a Closer Walk With Thee" and "Amazing Grace" done with the Rich touch and backed by The Jordanaires, The Nashville Edition and The Holladays.

Rich was back in Nashville last month for three days of recording toward another "pop-country-crossover" album, which is what we strive for.

"But I'm so enthused with this gospel album that there's some cuts on there I'd rather have out, or at least give them a chance, as a single than anything I could imagine I would cut now."

Will "The Silver Fox" who helped lead the country crossover to the popular charts lead gospel in the same direction?

"I'd love to," he says. "I never did go along with the categorization scene, the old died-in-the-wool country thing of never changing it."

"I sort of grew up in the hills of Arkansas hearing nothing but strings and people blowing on jugs and, you know, I love it. But is that where we're going to stop or are we going to try and do something different?"

Carson county committee announces area winners

Judges of the Carson County Bicentennial Committee have selected visual arts and essay contest winners in the "What America Means to Me" competition.

The winners from sixth, seventh and eighth grades will display their entries through March in the Freedom Hall of the Square House Museum in Panhandle.

First place winners in visual arts from Groom are Jerry Schafter, Jeff Jenkins, Jennifer Treadwell and Andrea Lamb. Danielle Byrd, Lenora Wieberg and Brett Stroppe won seconds and third placings went to Donna Bohr, Kelly Wood and Walt Fraser.

In essay competition, Tania Howard and Dorothy Kuehler, both of Groom, won firsts and Kelly Wood of Groom placed second.

Groom students receiving honorable mentions in visual arts included Sheila Whatley, David Britten, Karen Keuhler, Rita Britten, Gary Babcock, Wynel Mansel, David Duke and Tommy Ridges.

Visual arts winners from Skellytown were Marcy Ledford, Dean Payne and Andrew Ramirez. Seconds were awarded to Frank Moser, Billy Easley and Lynn Noble. Jesse Leds, Kevin Brown, Roy Noble and Terry Moser won thirds. Honorable mentions went to Carla McCann, Richard Sturgill, Terry Owens, John Marlar, Scott Roger, Teri Simpson, Jennie Vuicich, Shelly Welk, Bruce Sturgill, James Porter and Troyce May.

In essay competition, Skellytown winners were Ken May, first; Dennis Tollison, second; Jerry Thomas, third, and Darwin Music, fourth.

White Deer competitors winning in visual arts included Ray Asencio, Trena Ruthardt and Joe Martin. Seconds went to Lloyd Bohannon, Frank Moore and Lewis Newman. Judges awarded thirds to Jerold McCown, James Combs and John Kotara.

White Deer honorable mention winners were Lisa Hodge, Rita Smith, Kandy Myear, Sammy Webb, Kathy Powers, Denise Urbanczyk, Cindy Cummins, Mike Skaggs, Joe Swaney,

Winning essays from White Deer were submitted by Carolyn Barnard, first; Kala Haiduk, second, and Lori Grange, third.

Honorable mention essayists included Robyn Ford, Mona Parsley, Kristy Panches, Darin Skaggs, Dianna Freeman and Janet Timmons.

Exhibits by students from grades 4, 5, 9, 10, 11 and 12 have already been displayed. During April and May the exhibit will feature works by students, kindergarten through third grade and all winning entries from Groom, Panhandle, Skellytown and White Deer will be shown during June and July.

Judging was by Jim Fisher, director of the Amarillo Art Center, and the English Department of West Texas State University in Canyon.

Local dancers

Dancer students from Pampa receiving certificates following three-state competition of Chapter 27, Dance Masters of America, are left to right, Vance Bruce, second runner-up for Mr. Dance 1976; Anne Kadingo, third runner-up for Junior Miss Dance 1976, and Ed Sackett, third runner-up for Mr. Dance 1976. All are students of Madeline Graves of Pampa.

Kris Richardson of Pampa works on the ballet solo she will perform in competition for Miss Dance of America 1976 in Washington, D.C. in August. Miss Richardson reigns as Miss Dance of 1976 for Chapter 27 of Dance Masters of America, winning the title in a three-state contest which included competition in personal interview, leotard, evening gown and talent. She succeeds Kim Chisum of Pampa, Miss Dance of 1975. Second runner-up was Marqueta Wampler of Pampa. Miss Richardson, Miss Chisum and Miss Wampler are all students of Madeline Graves of Pampa.

Pigs wed in Kansas

WALTON, Kan. (UPI) — Old-fashioned weddings with all the hoopla are not passe in Kansas, even if the bride and groom are year-old pigs.

For Miss Lollipop, tradition will be followed, though slightly off color, with a pink veil and a green garter. Her bouquet, to be carried by a human bridesmaid, will be of dandelions.

The ceremony, according to friends close to Miss Lollipop and Mr. Candy Red, is being held to "get people's minds off the way things have been going." It also was scheduled in time to make the impending litter of piglets legitimate.

So on Sunday afternoon to the tune of the wedding march accentuated by recorded pig squeals, the swine will waddle down the aisle at the Henry Hiebert farm, ahead of two bridesmaids and two groomsmen.

Miss Lollipop will wear a pink net veil "with white trimming imported from Vietnam," says Hiebert, and a green garter on one of her forelegs. Why green?

"Well, she's red and we thought green would make a nice contrast," Hiebert said.

Mr. Candy Red, who Hiebert said is not as well trained as his future bride, will not wear anything special.

Friends and witnesses will consist mostly of members of a local club of CB radio operators. Miss Lollipop has been the group's mascot for a year.

As a result, the group holds her in high regard and when they gather at the farm for the union of "these two creatures of the animal kingdom," they will be expected to abide by Hiebert's gentle warning.

"Due to the delicate condition of the bride, Miss Lollipop, we should refrain from any undue noise or commotion," Hiebert wrote into the ceremony.

But the two most crucial moments will come at the "I do" and "kiss the bride" parts of the ceremony which Hiebert included in his original script.

Will Mr. Candy Red take Miss Lollipop as his wife?

"Please answer I do, bite my leg or otherwise show your willingness to take care of her as best you know how," he will be told. The same goes for the bride, but she will be told also to "love and cherish" the groom until death or any other separation.

Reporter dines on shark meat

By FRANK T. COOK

DALLAS (UPI) — Personally, I thought Susie Porter was either lying, bluffing or overly optimistic. Who could be excited about eating a shark?

"It sure smells good," she said, taking the red clay pot from the oven. "I think it'll be great. Do you think it's done?"

I didn't know and didn't care. I was wondering how to hide three bottles of wine in my expense account.

But Debbie Kline was interested and stood by the counter as the pot was set down, and Pat Harris watched over her shoulder. With a look of resignation, Barb Magar stood beside me and stared through the apartment's counter window opening.

"How do you know when it's done?" Debbie asked, as Susie removed the cover to reveal the puffy, white fillet in a yellow pool of melted butter and wine.

"I think it's done," Pat said. "It looks done — doesn't it?"

The shark was served and like most Americans, none of us had ever eaten a shark before — and I, for one, had never considered it.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission, however, says shark does deserve consideration as a food fish — especially since it is abundant in the Gulf of Mexico and could be marketed at prices competitive to other fish.

"There are 20 different varieties in the Gulf alone," said Bill Swartz, a commission fish marketing specialist. "All are edible — but the problem is whether people will buy it. They may think it's repulsive just because it's shark."

Exactly what I was thinking. But to get an unbiased opinion, in February the commission conducted a research program to see if Dallas area people, unaware of what they were eating, could taste the difference between unseasoned shark and other unseasoned seafoods. The survey showed the public could not opinion, I asked Susie to cook a Bonnethead shark and con her friends into helping us eat it.

We did, and then voted.

"Tastes a lot like a fish," I said.

"It's tender," Susie said. "It doesn't really taste like fish."

"It's like rubber," Pat said. "I mean it tastes good, but it's like rubber. But it's tender."

Debbie sat, poking at the baked shark with her fork.

"No," she said. "I think it tastes like any other fish. And it's flaky, you could probably substitute it for tuna."

With fork in hand, Barb stared at her plate.

"It tastes like a fish," she said, "but it's not fishy. You could probably use it in just about any fish recipe."

While none of us was repelled by shark, neither did we jump for joy at a new taste find, and we agreed the consumer might find it difficult to buy if he had a choice of established eating fish.

"Yeah, but I know who'd eat and love it," said Debbie, a first grade teacher. "They ought to give it to the kids at school. Everything is 'Jaws' this or 'Jaws' that. They'd love it."

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise:

I like fresh, clean-painted walls but when there are children around they don't always stay that way very long.

Paint always seems to get chipped off the walls, especially in the kitchen where chairs are pushed up against the walls, leaving marks and/or chipping paint.

The last time I painted my walls I used an empty fingernail polish bottle, cleaned it out well with fingernail polish remover, and filled it with some of the paint I had left from painting the walls.

Now, when the paint is chipped off, it's very little trouble to touch it up as paint and brush are always handy.

Josie Gray

Smart gal! Your hint is a dandy — and handy to know.

Paint does get nicked sometimes no matter how careful we try to be and you've made touching-up easier for us. Thanks.

Heloise

Dear Heloise:

When I'm typing at my metal typing table, I find the paper I'm copying from is forever slipping off the table.

I've just discovered that one of those round magnetic clips will hold the paper in place on the table.

Carol

Dear Heloise:

I subscribe to several magazines and when I receive one in the mail I mark across the top, "Have Not Read."

Then, when I finish reading a magazine I can mark off "Not" and can then pass it, along with others I've saved, on to someone else without having to glance through it.

Mrs. M.E. Hayes

Dear Heloise:

In cleaning out my desk drawers today, I found and re-read many of your clipped articles, especially the "Letters of Laughter."

On a gray, rainy day, that could be a better cheer-upper?

Mrs. Maurice Miller

Letters from the likes of you, dear friend, on any day. I love you all.

Heloise

Dear Heloise:

I have been putting new shelf paper in my cabinets and had a grand idea.

I got tired of cutting and didn't always do such a good job.

So I took the aluminum foil out of its box (temporarily), and put in my roll of shelf paper.

As it was so easy to just "rip" off what I needed, I'll always do it this way from now on, and will save the foil box for this purpose when it is empty.

Myra Jones

Dear Heloise:

If you have a colorblind male at your home, save the little plastic hangers that new socks come on.

You can then hang the proper color socks on the hanger with the pants or also use them to color-coordinate socks and tie to an outfit hung together such as a suit, shirt, etc.

Dear Heloise:

Baby crib blankets make excellent lap robes for those in wheelchairs or with cold legs and feet because they are just the right size.

Thermal blankets seem to work best as they seem to stay in place better and are lightweight.

Animals get more research than humans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — State and federal agriculture departments are spending nearly three times more for research on how to feed animals than for research on human nutrition, Sen. George McGovern said in a report released Saturday.

McGovern, D-S.D., chairman of the Senate Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs, said the public does not know what is best to eat because too little is spent researching human nutritional needs.

McGovern released a Congressional Research Service report that calls federal funding for nutritional research inadequate and cites a lack of planning and coordination in the development of nutritional data.

In a forward to the report, McGovern said state and federal agriculture departments spent $18 million on human nutrition research and $50 million on animal nutrition research in fiscal 1975.

The report said the $10 million spent by the Department of Agriculture "may be regarded as rather small for a department of the federal government which is so importantly placed in the center of the food enterprise."

Got surprise swim from jail

GEORGETOWN, Colo. (UPI) — Kari Jorgenson, one of 16 Americans freed from a Piedra Negra jail last week, worked in a mine to pay for her Mexican vacation which ended with five weeks in jail and a surprise swim across the Rio Grande.

"Kari said she didn't know about the jailbreak until it was happening," said her mother, Dottie Jorgenson. "And she still doesn't know the identity of her rescuers."

Mrs. Jorgenson said her daughter had left for the trip in December after working for seven months on the concrete crew at the Henderson Mine. She said Kari was arrested five weeks ago when she and Jim Rodgers of Evergreen, Colo., went to Piedras Nigras to find two friends from Colorado they were to ride home with.

"Kari and Jim were put in jail too," she said. "The women all were put in a bullpen together. The men were allowed to cook in their cells, but the women were not. The boys would cook and hand some thing through to the girls. There were cockroaches all over."

Mrs. Jorgenson said the escape, which occurred Thursday, took place suddenly with the men entering the prison yard and tying up the guards. The prisoners ran a block to the Rio Grande River and were told to swim to freedom.

"She's not a very good swimmer," said Kari's mother. "She made most of the swim on her back. When she ran out of the jail she said she grabbed her big leather purse and in the water it started pulling her down. But she still has it."

According to Mrs. Jorgenson, the American consul had refused to help and a Mexican lawyer she paid to free her daughter never even visited the jail. She said all of her daughter's clothing has also disappeared.

Dudley Huling, father of Sandra Huling, 23, a friend of Kari's who also escaped, said the two women were heading back to Colorado together with Rodgers and Joe Wilson of Georgetown.

Huling said a Mexican lawyer he hired also failed to contact his daughter and he had been called by a number of border residents offering to free Sandra for fees up to $3,000.

Mt. Everest becomes highest junkyard

KATMANDU, Nepal (UPI) — The task, in every sense, is of Himalayan proportions. But for the six dedicated young American environmentalists from Evergreen State College in Olympia, Wash., the effort means correcting "one of man's great injustices to nature." The student group, which includes two coeds, has undertaken to clear Mt. Everest and its vicinity of tons of litter and waste material left behind by mountaineering expeditions. Thousands of tourists and trekkers who visit the world's tallest peak every year. The result of this tourist boom is that the 29,028-foot-tall peak has come to be known as the "highest junkyard in the world."

Nick Langton, the leader of the student group, visited Everest in 1973 and was shocked by the extent of pollution in an area where this problem was virtually unknown as recently as 10 years ago. After returning to his college, he organized the group with the help of a fund-raising drive.

The students began their job last November and so far have burned or buried more than 3,000 pounds of trash and litter near the base of the peak located at an altitude of 18,000 feet, according to Langton, who returned recently to Katmandu. "You can hardly take a step up there without encountering garbage," he said. "This is one of man's great injustices to nature."

Several tons of trash still remain to be cleared, Langton said.

Nepalese officials, alarmed by the pollution problem and particularly its effects on the sherpas, the sturdy Himalayan climbers who make Everest their home, say trekkers are the main culprits. The officials privately admit that most of these trekkers are Americans. A holiday in the dizzying heights of the Himalayas now is a must on the itineraries of many American tour groups.

Mountaineering expeditions also are responsible for contributing to this problem. Everest, still the biggest challenge for mountaineers although it has been climbed several times, is solidly booked until 1985 by expeditions from all over the world.

An expedition, which normally is composed of 50 to 60 members and sherpas, spends an average of three months on the mountain. The climbers carry tons of food, equipment and gear which is left behind at the end of the expedition. No one cares to clean up the mess he leaves behind, officials complain.

The student group, according to Langton, had difficulties hiring sherpas who, used to being patronized by international expeditions, were not too keen about being conscripted to carry litter. The team even had trouble retaining the cook, who refused to prepare meals on kerosene stoves. The students did not want to use firewood in order to protect the trees in the area.

They spent nearly 20 days in the cold and rarefied Himalayan atmosphere digging huge pits to burn or bury the garbage. At one point, according to Langton, the group even thought of dynamiting the base camp area to make a huge crater in which to dump the piles of rubbish.

The harmless project nearly created an international incident when a British expedition, challenging the peak at the time, tried to stop the students from carrying out their project. According to Langton, the British climbers thought the project was "unnecessary and undesirable" and told the students they would themselves do the job of cleaning.

Langton said the climbers obviously did not want the Americans attracting publicity away from them. "After the British withdrew from the mountain after putting four climbers on the summit, their camp was disgusting. They hadn't even begun to fulfill the clean-up plans they told us about."

"We have just barely started," Langton said of his group's work. "We need 10 more similar treks to clean up all the mess." Following the students' example, the Nepalese government, beginning this spring, will require expeditions and trekkers to clean up their camps. The government also has declared the area around the base camp a protected zone where a park soon will be built.

NEGATIVE REPORT
ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — The Council of Presidents of the strife-torn Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod has reported it made little substantive progress in its most recent attempt to solve the doctrinal and political problems that threaten the 2.8 million member denomination with schism.

American industry will spend more than $195 billion on water pollution control equipment over the next decade, according to Ecodyne Corp. This amount represents three times the total Gross National Product of the Netherlands last year.

Spark could be deadly

FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI) — To dig and haul coal from mines to fuel this nation's industrial machines means sending men and equipment miles underground into an often hostile environment of highly flammable gases.

The 26 men who lost their lives last week in explosions at a southeastern Kentucky coal mine fell victim to just such an environment of methane, a chemical similar to natural gas.

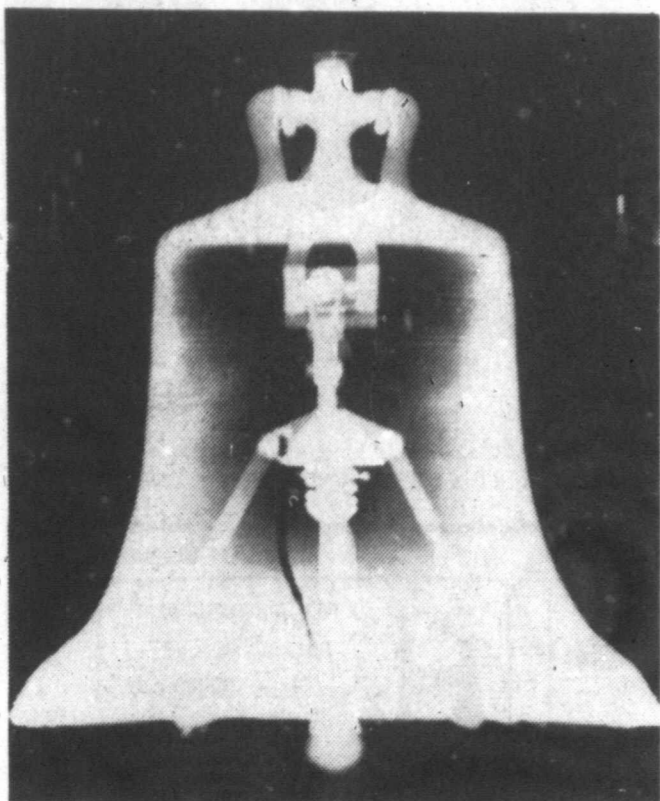

"A piece of drill steel hitting rock is all it takes to get a spark," says Bob Swenarton, spokesman for the U.S. Bureau of Mines.

And that spark, with a 5 to 15 per cent methane content in the air, "could cause an explosion," he says.

Conditions in a mine are constantly changing, including methane, which, when burned, turns into carbon monoxide, Swenarton explained.

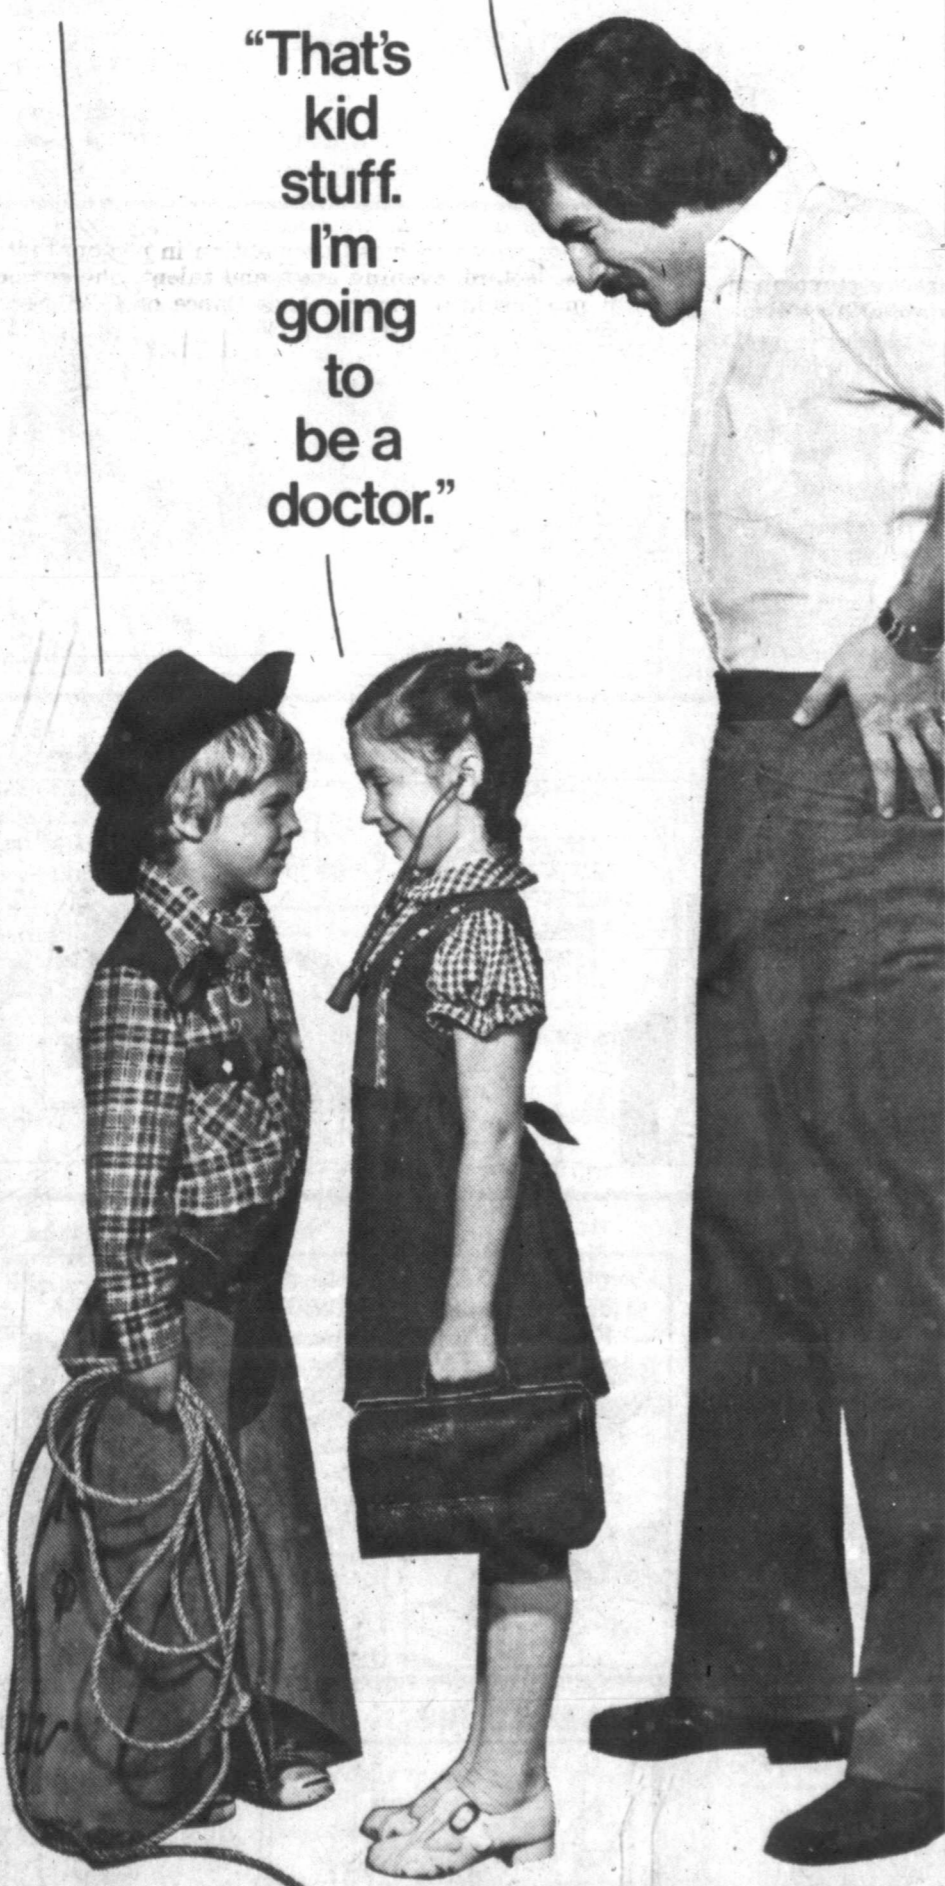

"In an environment such as that, accidents do happen despite safety standards in the mines," he said.

Taking its inspiration from the Pennsylvania Dutch, Woodward's Madison County Pine creates its own tradition in American furnishings. You see, Woodward combined authentic tulip carvings and decorative top supports with a rich wood-toned finish to bring you an unusually charming bedroom collection. The off-center treatment of the triple dresser adds the right spark of freshness to any bedroom. And, by selecting an authentically styled armoire, 5-drawer chest, night table, clever bookcase mirror, or your choice of cannonball or high bookcase bedstead, you can complete a very cozy room. All for a price you can easily live with. See what we mean. Madison County Pine is a real Dutch treat.

Green wins Doral Open

MIAMI (UPI) — Hubert Green didn't win in a walk, he won in a crawl.

He won so big Jack Nicklaus could hardly believe it.

"Good gracious, did he beat us by six strokes?" Nicklaus asked looking at the leader board after the $200,000 Doral Open Golf Tournament Sunday.

"Six strokes it was, the biggest winning margin of the year, breaking the 1976 best of four set by Ben Crenshaw at the Hawaiian Open.

Green's amazing 18-under-par, four-round 270 over the par 72 Doral "Blue Monster" course also was a tournament record, besting Buddy Allin's 1974 record by two shots.

Tied for second at 276 were Nicklaus and Mark Hayes.

Nicklaus shot his second straight 68 Sunday and the long-ball hitting Hayes carded a 71. Crenshaw (71) was another stroke back at 277.

Despite his easy win, Green took his ninth career win in seven years on the tour in stride and insisted he would not be satisfied with his career until he won one of the four elusive "major" tournaments.

"To me a great player is the guy who performs well when we're all together," he said. "You gotta win the majors. You gotta win more than one major to be a great player."

Green said the turning point in the final round came on the par five 12th hole, when he sank a 20-foot putt for a birdie. Hayes, playing in the same threesome, had a 15-footer for an eagle three, but missed it, taking a birdie four.

"I could hear him breathing heavy before we putted," Green joked. "I knew if he made his putt and I missed mine, there would be a three-stroke swing and he would be back in it. But I knew if I made my putt it would break his spirit. That hole hurt Mark a lot."

Another hole that hurt Hayes was the par four 18th. He was in sole possession of second place, a stroke ahead of Nicklaus, coming in, but he three-putted for a bogey five.

A finish alone in second place would have meant a check for $22,800. Instead he had to settle for $18,500 sharing second and third money with Nicklaus.

"I lost a chance to get it at 10 and 12. I got three birdies and an eagle on the first hole (one of four par 5's). But on 8 was one under for the tournament, on 10 I was one over and I was even on 12," said Nicklaus.

Indiana tips St. John's to advance in Mideast

By CHRIS SCHERF

UPI Sports Writer

The NCAA basketball championship tournament got off to a spectacular start Saturday with a half-dozen "whiteknucklers" among the 16 first-round games, but top-ranked Indiana breezed into the Mideast semifinals.

This year's Indiana team generally is not considered as deep in talent as last year's squad. But this year's Hoosiers have a healthy Scott May.

"I thought May played really within the scope of everything that we wanted to do," Indiana Coach Bobby Knight said after his All-America forward had scored 33 points in leading the Hoosiers to a 90-70 victory over St. John's.

"In the first half, he was the main thing in our offense and he didn't force anything. He's just a great basketball player."

Center Kent Benson, May's fellow All-American, had 20 points and 13 rebounds as the Hoosiers raised their record to 28-0.

Prior to Indiana's victory at South Bend, Western Michigan was forced into overtime before defeating Virginia Tech, 77-67. Jeff Tyson, who finished with a game-high 25 points, and Tom Cutter came off the bench with four fouls midway through the second half to pace the Broncos' victory. They combined for 26 of Western Michigan's final 35 points.

The East regional on Thursday pairs Rutgers against Connecticut and VMI against DePaul, while Alabama meets Indiana and Marquette plays Western Michigan in the Mideast. In the Midwest, Notre Dame faces Michigan and Texas Tech plays Missouri, with UCLA paired against Pepperdine and Nevada-Las Vegas against Arizona in the West.

Rutgers, the other undefeated team in the NCAA chase, almost had an early exit from the tournament, but Princeton's Pete Molloy missed a foul shot with four seconds left to allow the Scarlet Knights to escape with their 29th victory, 54-53.

Texas Tech to meet Missouri in semifinals

DENTON, Tex. (UPI) — When the Missouri Tigers are brought up in conversation, Willie Smith's name is not far behind.

And it was Smith, Missouri's high scoring guard, who Texas Tech coach Gerald Myers mentioned first once it was assumed the Red Raiders would tangle with Missouri in the Midwest regional semifinals.

"Missouri has just a great player in Smith," said Myers. "I would put him in the class of Otis Birdsong (of Houston) and Sonny Parker (of Texas A&M) and we haven't had any luck stopping them this year."

Tech did not have much success in stopping another quick guard Saturday night, but the Red Raiders stopped everything else.

The Raiders downed Syracuse, 69-56, giving the Southwest Conference its first NCAA tournament victory in four years.

Syracuse guard Jimmy "Bug" Williams scored 21 points to lead the Orangemen, but the ECAC-Upstate champions found they could not penetrate the lane with 6-9 Rick Bullock and 6-7 Mike Russell in the way.

Although Syracuse did an excellent job of preventing Bullock from getting his hands on the ball the Red Raiders still found ways of scoring points and Tech coach Gerald Myers said he expected to see more of the same when his team moves on to Louisville for the meeting with Missouri.

"Other teams have tried that kind of defense on us," said Myers, "but when they sag on Bullock it opens things up for our other players."

"Washington is the only team that really defeated us with a zone."

Washington, however, was knocked out of the tournament by Missouri, 69-67, in Larence, Kan., Saturday.

"I'm sure Missouri will try to do the same thing," the Tech coach said.

"Missouri, according to our reports, is a guard oriented team. They can get scoring from everywhere on the court, but most of their scoring comes from the guards and they are the people we must stop."

The second game at Providence also was a nail-biter as Connecticut overcame a 15-point deficit in the second half to defeat Hofstra, 80-78, in overtime.

Notre Dame needed a tip-in by Toby Knight with two seconds left to edge Cincinnati, 79-78.

The eighth-ranked Irish trailed by a point with eight seconds to play when Cincinnati failed to pass the ball inbounds within the allotted five-second time period.

In the opening game of the Lawrence, Kan., doubleheader, Jim Kennedy sank two free throws with 57 seconds to play to give 11th-ranked Missouri a 69-67 victory over Washington.

Rickey Green's 20-foot jump shot with six seconds left carried ninth-ranked Michigan to a 74-73 victory over Wichita State at Denton, Tex. Green.

Defending champion UCLA, which has a history of uninspired performances in the opening round of the NCAA tournament, had trouble with San Diego State before registering a 74-64 victory.

Second-ranked Marquette romped over Western Kentucky, 79-60. Butch Lee scored 21 points and Earl Tatum 18 to lead the Warriors.

Seventh-ranked Alabama, which doomed itself to the tough Midwest route to the NCAA finals by winning the Southeastern Conference title, upset sixth-ranked North Carolina, 79-64.

Tennessee, which appeared to have an easy first-round contest after losing the SEC title to Alabama, was upset by VMI, 81-75.

In other first-round games, DePaul beat Virginia, 69-60; Texas Tech topped Syracuse, 69-56; Pepperdine defeated Memphis State, 87-77; Arizona beat Georgetown, 83-76, and Nevada-Las Vegas clobbered Boise State, 103-78.

In the opening round of the National Invitation Tournament in New York, Providence routed North Carolina A&T, 84-68; UNC-Charlotte edged San Francisco, 79-74, in overtime; Kentucky beat Niagara, 67-61, and Holy Cross defeated St. Peter's, 84-77.

Season to start says Commissioner

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — The gates to spring training remained closed today amid more legal jousting between baseball's club owners and players, but Commissioner Bowie Kuhn gives his assurance the 1976 season will start on schedule.

The owners and players negotiated for nearly six hours Sunday before adjourning until 11 a.m. today. And although the controversial reserve clause remains the stumbling block to a settlement of the labor impasse, it was the spring training issue which suddenly moved to the forefront of the talks.

The owners would like to open the camps, but not without a "no-strike" pledge from the players.

"We're a long way from having a key to the padlock or a hack saw for the chain," said John Gaherin, chief negotiator for the owners, referring to the closed camps. "Opening the camps is not imminent."

Golden Gloves begins final go-round tonight

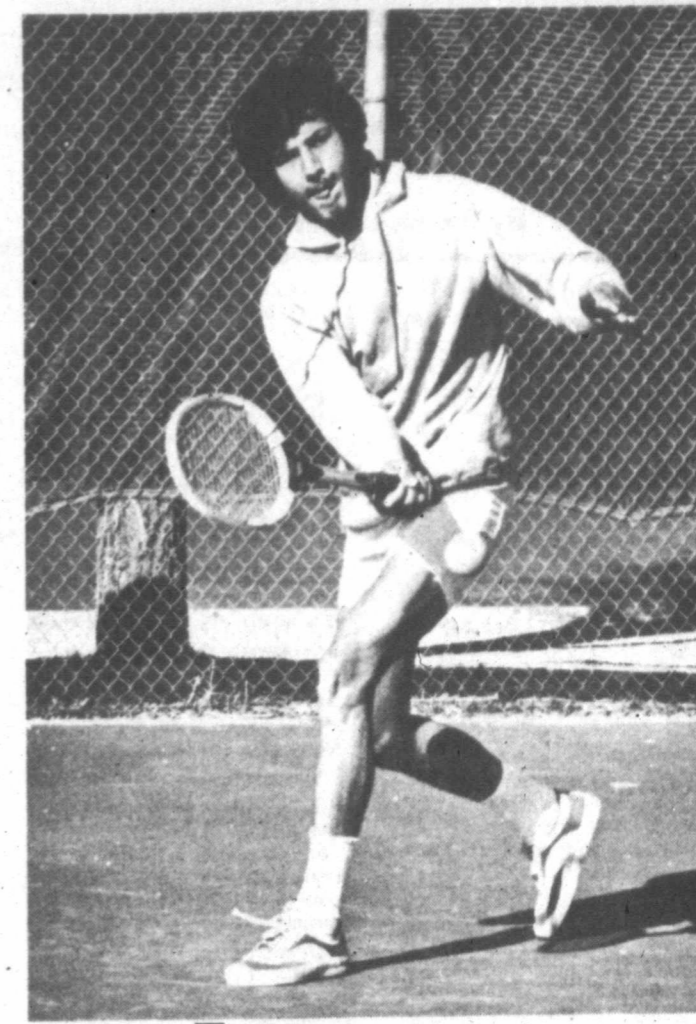

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI) — The Texas Golden Gloves champions will be crowned tonight, the first step toward a possible berth on the U.S. Olympic team that will battle for gold medals in Montreal this July.

Light welterweight Ronnie Shields of Beaumont and middleweight Johnny Johnson of Wichita Falls are the only defending champions left going into tonight's 25-bout card.

Semifinals will be held in the seven lightest weight classes to start the program at Will Rogers Coliseum and then the 11 title bouts will be conducted.

Shields, who survived a bloody nose and a rugged bout to win a decision over Ricky Wosales of Fort Worth in the light welterweight quarterfinals Saturday night, will take on Anthony Wiley in the semifinals tonight.

If Shields wins there he will come back later in the evening

Tourney entrants

Pampa's Stacy Douglass and Amado Meza were among area entrants in the Hereford Invitational Friday. Pampa's players, in spite of the chance to play in the consolation bracket, elected not to return on Saturday. Douglass defeated Joy Taylor of Lubbock High, 5-7, 6-4, 6-3, lost to the No. 1 seed, Ruanna Myers of Lubbock Coronado, 6-1, 6-0, then fell to Karen Harrison of Amarillo Palo Duro, 7-6, 6-3. Meza and doubles partner Wayne Williams lost to Coronado's White and McMillan, 6-1, 6-3, then beat Harris and Stanford of Palo Duro, 6-4, 6-0.

NFL meeting to begin

CORONADO, Calif. (UPI) — The National Football League opens its annual meeting today with the hope of setting a college draft date, despite a court challenge, and laying out the machinery to stock its two new franchises.

The league also is expected to choose a site for the 1978 Super Bowl, give an audience to two former World Football League franchises hoping to join the NFL, and look at the possibility of widening existing playing fields.

An NFL spokesman said the owners were optimistic about coming up with a workable plan for an allocation draft to draw players from the league's 26 existing clubs to help stock expansion franchises in Seattle and Tampa.

But a decision by the end of the week on whether to set a date for the NFL's traditional college draft remains in doubt. A federal court judge ruled recently the annual event violated federal antitrust laws.

First item on the agenda is selection of the 1978 Super Bowl site and an announcement is expected by late Tuesday. Pasadena's Rose Bowl hosts the Jan. 9, 1977 event.

Five cities are in the bidding for the chance to host the 1978 event: Miami with the Orange Bowl, site of four of the 10 Super Bowls; Los Angeles, which hosted the first and seventh Super Bowls; New Orleans with its new Superdome; Houston with Rice Stadium; and Dallas with the Cotton Bowl.

The owners also are expected to hear operators of the defunct WFL franchises in Memphis and Birmingham, which are seeking admission to the NFL.

The league's competition committee is to review several rule change proposals, including one to widen regulation football fields by 12-20 feet. The issue is before the NFL for the first time following several years of informal discussion.

In addition, the committee is scheduled to consider whether the league's constitutional limit of 36 players should be increased. The owners have handled the matter on a year-by-year basis in the past, setting it to 42 last year.

UTEP nets 3rd straight indoor championship

DETROIT (UPI) — United States athletes made a mild comeback in this year's NCAA indoor track and field championships.

After two years of being dominated by foreign athletes, the native sons who run and throw for American colleges won 10 of the 15 individual events in the two-day meet.

The trend was as well shown by the Texas-El Paso team as by anyone else. Two U.S. youngsters were largely responsible for the Miners winning the team championship for a third straight year and UTEP is known as being a haven for athletes who were born outside the country in which they compete.

A year ago, nine out of 15 individual events were won by athletes imported from outside the U.S. by the competing colleges. The year before was nearly the same.

The reversal likely has little relationship to how the United States is going to do in the Olympics this summer because most of this country's world-class athletes are not collegians.

Eamonn Coghlin of Villanova and Ireland won the mile, clocking a 4:01.48 over Cobo Arena's 11-lap to the mile pine board track.

Nick Rose, an Englishman running for Western Kentucky, lowered the NCAA two-mile indoor record to 8:30.91 in winning for the second straight year. Charles Dramiga of New Mexico and Uganda took the 600 in 1:10.58.

Kenyan John Ngeno won his third straight three-mile for Washington State on Friday night while Nigerian Charlton Ehiuzelen of Illinois took the long jump. There were five meet records set in all, but none of Olympic proportions. Those likely will come later, outdoors.

Earl Bell of Arkansas State set a new meet mark of 18-foot, ¼-inch in the pole vault; Dwight Stones, one of the few genuine Gold Medal threats, flopped 7-foot-4 for a new NCAA indoor high jump best; Villanova's Mark Belger's 2:07.29 was a new standard in the 1,000; and the UTEP distance medley relay troop lowered the best for that event to 9:43.16, helped by Wilson Waigwa's 3:59.6 anchor mile.

Most of the collegian runners have yet to make up their minds which Olympic events to point for, and Gold Medal winners don't have those kind of problems.

Pampa tests Liberal today

LIBERAL, Kan. — Pampa, playing over the 500 mark for the first time this season, meets Liberal, Kan., in a non-conference baseball doubleheader, beginning at 1 p.m. today here.

The Harvesters upped their season record to 4-3 Saturday by whipping Dumas, 12-2 and 8-2, in a doubleheader at Pampa's Optimist Park. Pampa collected a total of 20 hits, including 13 in the first game.

Probable starting pitchers for today's games are Tommy Washington and Joe Davis.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Because you're the first to be concerned with the interests of close friends or associates today, they'll make sure your needs are looked after.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You'll be ambitious and industrious today — even more so if embarking on a new project. You can accomplish a lot if you start early.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today you have a special talent for promoting your self-interests without being offensive. Toot your own horn.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Higher-ups know that if a job needs doing, you're the one! You take responsibilities seriously and will help them and yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You might find yourself in a business situation today where you can use confidential information to put together a package beneficial to all.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Where people turned a deaf ear yesterday, they could be more compliant today. It might be worth your while to restate your request.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Conditions having a direct bearing on your self-interests, work or career appear very favorable. Move boldly in these areas.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your ideas are best expressed through others today as you move behind the scenes. Act subtly to keep them on the track.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Others find you're a good person to turn to in solving problems. You quickly provide solutions they would never see.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you define your goals and are persistent and patient, you can sway others. Do it today while you have their allegiance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) The knowledge you've accumulated can be put to use today if you look for the proper avenue. It may take a little mental exercise.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A material advantage comes to you through another that doesn't look like much at first glance. You'll recall: A small return is better than none.

It's very likely you'll be far more enterprising this coming year than you've ever been. An auxiliary venture could provide you a source of additional income.

Gable-Lombard movie revives vivid memories

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Businessman Russell Fish, 51, hasn't seen the popular film "Gable and Lombard" yet and he isn't sure he wants to because the memories it invokes are too vivid.

Fish was the first person to find Carole Lombard's body in the wreckage of a DC-3 on a Nevada mountain on Jan. 17, 1942. He was 18 years old.

A flier assigned to McCarran Air Field near Las Vegas, Fish headed a crash investigation team.

"I heard this plane take off and it didn't sound right — it didn't sound like a DC-3 should," Fish said. "I don't know what it was."

Later he was driving into Las Vegas when he saw a brilliant orange flash on a nearby mountaintop. He learned a plane carrying 17 servicemen, about seven civilians and three crew members crashed into the mountain.

Fish and his crash team began scaling the rugged mountain at dawn the next day for the crash site. The night before he learned Miss Lombard and her mother were among the civilians on board.

Chances of anyone surviving the wreck were very slight, especially because temperatures were near zero overnight in the mountains.

Clark Gable had rushed to the airfield and asked Fish to find a special brooch which he thought his wife would be wearing.

"It was a complete shock to him," Fish said. "He was under tremendous pressure and was tremendously grieved."

"She had been working so hard to entertain the servicemen and to encourage our war effort. That's why she had a pin in the shape of a 'V' — for victory — in diamonds."

Fish searched all around the crash area, but could not find the "V" shaped brooch.

While looking around, he found a brooch with a red center stone surrounded by smaller clear stones. Fish put it in his pocket, thinking it was a piece of costume jewelry which might have belonged to Miss Lombard or her mother.

He and his crew carried the victims' bodies down the slopes, Fish toting the charred bodies of Miss Lombard and her mother, which combined weighed no more than 60 pounds.

"I started smoking one cigarette after another," Fish said. "When I got back down, I couldn't smoke for two months — they all smelled the same as the crash site."

The day after retrieving the bodies, Fish showed the brooch to a jeweler friend who offered him $20,000 for the piece.

"When I found out how much it was worth, I then went to Gable's hotel to tell him I'd picked this up," Fish said.

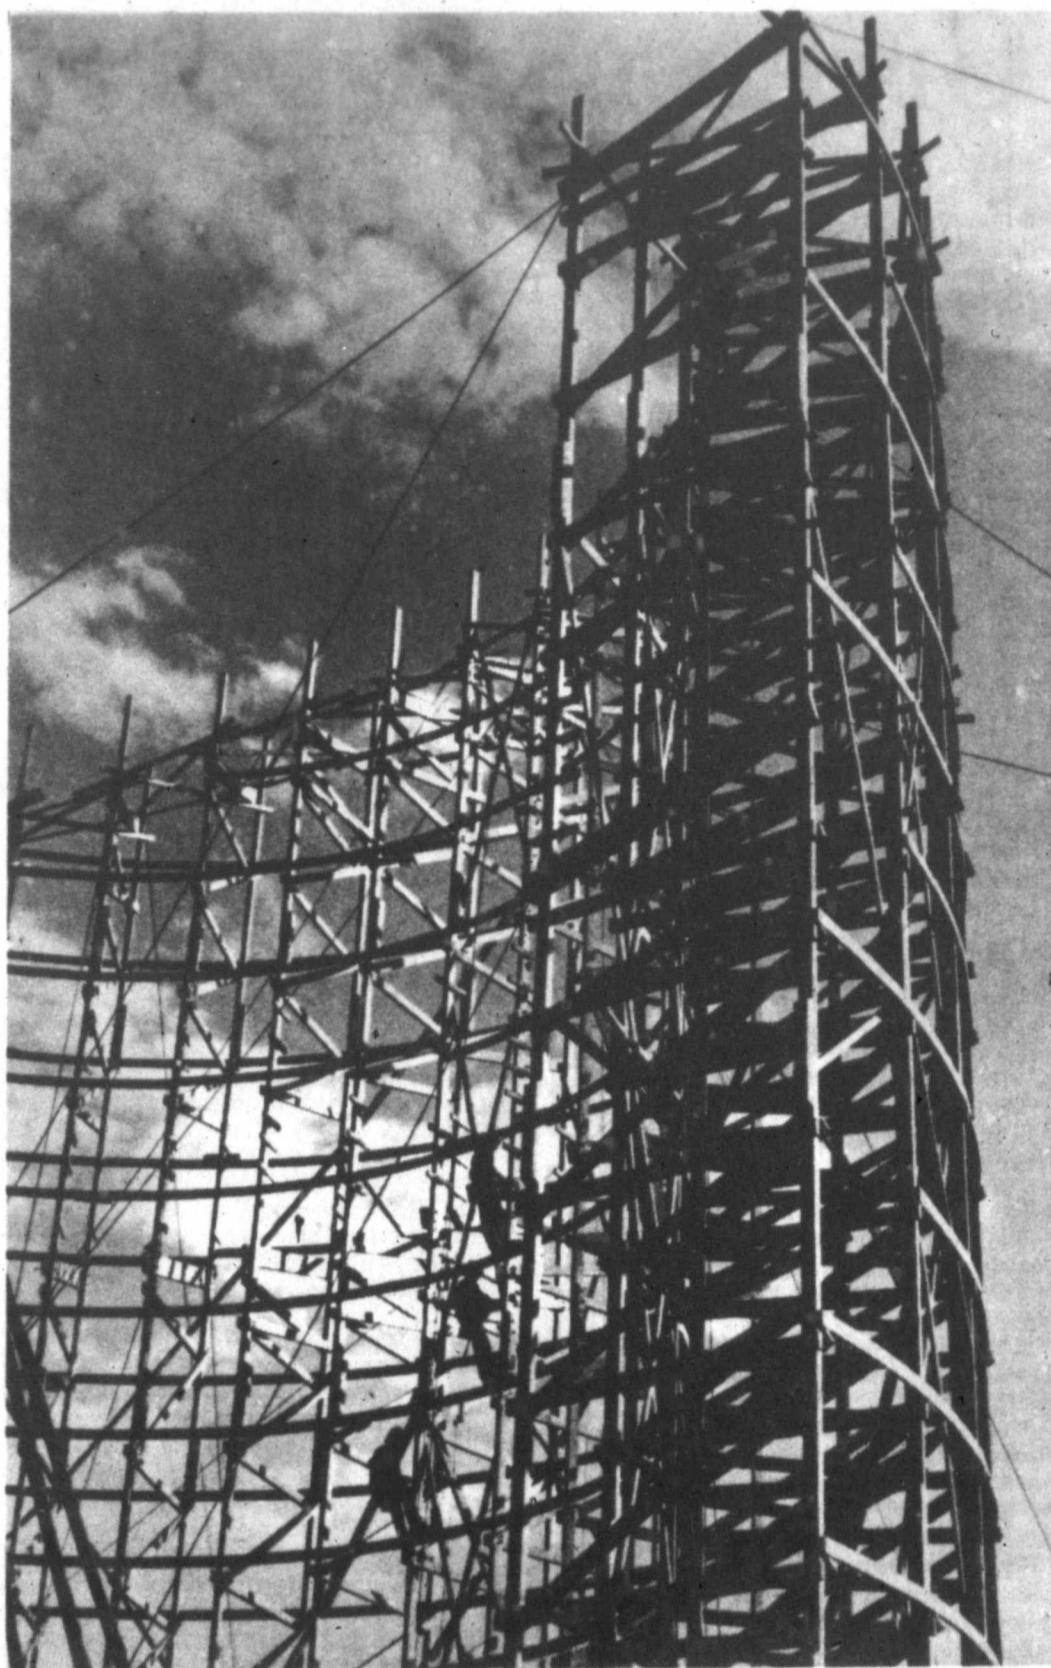

Fish did not get to talk to Gable, who was busy at the time, so he gave the brooch to the actor's manager. The manager said he would give the jewelry to Gable who would return it if it did not belong to his wife.

A month later, Fish received a letter from Gable thanking him for returning his wife's brooch. Gable also sent Fish an expensive pen and pencil set with Fish's name engraved on it and issued an invitation for Fish to visit him at MGM Studios whenever he was in Hollywood.

Fish later accepted the invitation and received what he called "red carpet treatment" from MGM personnel.

"I was pretty well accustomed to pulling bodies out of aircraft wreckage, but this one really got to me, somehow," Fish said. "After I got out of the service, I wouldn't even fly a commercial plane for five years."

"I haven't seen the movie yet and I don't know if I want to or not."

Rolling high rise

Astroworld construction workers in Houston have created a towering view in preparing a section of "The Texas Cyclone" roller coaster, now 50 per cent complete. In a major bid for national tourists to Houston, Astroworld is constructing a multi-million dollar Coney Island section to feature "The Texas Cyclone," a Texas sized replica of the 50-year-old New York Coney Island "Cyclone" roller coaster. Stretching 3,180 feet in length, the Texas attraction will reach peak speeds of 60 miles per hour after free-falling from an 88-foot lift onto a 53 degree angle drop. It will take approximately 336,000 board feet of lumber, 14,000 linear feet of rail and 25 tons of steel to complete. It is scheduled to open this spring.

At Wits End

By ERMA BOMBECK

I know how President Ford felt when he walked in to a dinner in New Hampshire and the band played "The Party's Over."

Once someone starts a rumor you're not a mental giant, it's uphill all the way.

Just slip once... like a few months ago at a dinner party, someone asked, "Just how much will detente with China cost?" and I replied, "If you have to ask, you can't afford it."

From that night on people treated me differently. They used single-syllable words around me. They spoke slower. And when I chanced on a group they would stop talking about Angola, turn to me and say, "Is Sissy still dancing with Bobbie on the Lawrence Welk show?"

"Did you hear that?" I asked my husband angrily.

"Hear what?"

"Hear Steve ask me about Sissy and Bobbie on the Lawrence Welk show."

"What's wrong with that?"

"He shouted at me like he was giving his order to the clown at Jack-In-the-Box."

"You're being sensitive."

"I'm not being sensitive."

"Well, maybe you should be. When Ethel leaned over and said how enchanted she was with Edith Wharton, you said you were going to call Edith in the morning. Edith Wharton is dead."

"No wonder she hasn't been answering her calls."

"The trouble with you is you try to fake your way through. You're just going to have to take the time to read more. Find out what's going on in the world."

"I know what's going on in the world. You think I don't know we have to keep an eye on Japan — my husband shook his head — or whoever is dirty this year?"

What really incensed me was that the rumors of my ignorance not only persisted, they grew out of proportion.

At a cultural affair one night, I was supposed to have said, "Don't see anything until you have seen the touring company of 'Tobacco Road.'"

One critic even accused me of recommending "Fear of Flying" because it was a courageous story of the Wright Brothers.

Last night, I really made some recovery points. In a loud voice I announced, "I renewed my subscription to Forbes today." Every eye in the room looked at me anew. "Loved their recipes," I added.

The band played "Born to Lose."

Scuba tunnel to be sealed

SANTA ROSA, N.M. (UPI) — State Police say they plan to seal a natural tunnel at the bottom of Blue Hole, a scuba diving attraction where two Oklahoma men drowned last week.

Officers said a grate is being made of heavy steel and will be put across the shaft opening 90 feet beneath the surface after divers recover the body of Michael J. Godard, 22, Bartlesville, Okla.

Divers, searching through caves 140 feet beneath the surface, were unsuccessful Friday in locating the body and continued the recovery operation into the weekend.

The body of the other drowning victim, David Gregg, 21, also of Bartlesville, was recovered Thursday.

Honors programs in college refer to special programs for very able students, offering independent study, educational enrichment, or acceleration.

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Would you please explain the difference between animal fat and cholesterol in the blood?

DEAR READER — This, or variations of it, is a constantly recurring question from my readers. Cholesterol is not a fat, it is a wax-like substance produced principally by the liver in animals. It is found in meats (minimal to moderate amount), butterfat, cheese, egg yolks and certain organ meats. It is never found in plants or plant products.

Fat is not cholesterol whether it comes from animals or vegetables. It has a basic chemical difference. Animal fat tends to be made up of large amounts of saturated fat. This is a kind of fat that many heart specialists think is particularly apt to contribute to fatty-cholesterol deposits in the blood vessels. Animal fat also contains a large amount of unsaturated fat. However, very little of the animal fat, except in fish and chicken, is of the polyunsaturated variety that some heart specialists think is important in helping to prevent fatty cholesterol deposits.

Significant amounts of saturated fats are less often found in vegetable products. However, there are some notable exceptions, particularly coconut oil which is over 80 per cent saturated fat.

The fat that builds up in the blood combines with cholesterol and the combined particles may lodge in the walls of the arteries. Some of the fat may be cleaned out of the artery leaving a higher percentage of cholesterol stuck in the artery itself.

These fatty cholesterol deposits are the basis for the arterial disease associated with heart attacks, strokes and many other circulatory problems. For more information on cholesterol and blood fats send 50 cents for The Health Letter, number 1-2, Cholesterol, Triglycerides, Blood Fats, Atherosclerosis. Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband and I eat fish at least three times a week — turbot, which is oily. We are on a low cholesterol diet and wonder if that fish is suitable.

DEAR READER — Turbot belongs to the flat fish group of flounder, sole and sand dab. I don't have figures for turbot but you can use the figures for flounder. These fish are relatively low in fat. Only about 10 per cent of their total calories is fat, which means that out of a 100 grams (3 one-half ounces) less than one gram is fat.

I have eaten turbot many times myself and have not thought of it as oily, but rather as a low-fat fish. As a general rule you can estimate that about one-third of the fat in fish is saturated fat, one-third monounsaturated fat and one-third polyunsaturated fat. That means it is one of the best foods you can use to provide items low in saturated fat from the meat basic food group. That's why fish is often recommended for diets that are designed for low-fat, low-cholesterol eating. I think you are wise to use fish regularly in your diet and feel that turbot is an excellent choice of the group. It is also economical and if you prepare it properly without adding a lot of fat to it, it is relatively low in fat.

Doc, family found shot in Houston

HOUSTON (UPI) — A prominent doctor, his wife and daughter and the family dog Saturday were found shot to death in the rear bedroom of their affluent home.

Police said evidence indicated two of the victims had been murdered and the third had committed suicide. Autopsies were being performed.

The victims were identified as Alexander Braun, 54, a pathologist at Houston Veterans Hospital; his wife, Hanna; and his daughter, Michaela, 23. All had been killed with a .38-caliber pistol bought a week earlier by Dr. Braun.

According to a police spokesman, the family was last seen about March 4. When Dr. Braun failed to appear at work, friends went to the home to check on him and saw the bodies through the window.

Police said the doctor had bought the five-shot pistol March 4. It was found in his hand beneath his body, according to investigating officers.

Hooks Boy Rests Feet After Lengthy Search

By THOM MARSHALL

Richard Hooks saw the plane crash on the hillside near the Pampa Independent School District building on Thursday night — late Thursday night — to tax automobiles, trucks, mobile homes, boats, recreational vehicles and the like.

In the above a boy had become separated from his father in some wilderness area and when night fell and temperatures dropped he left from (reaching) his father's house. That's what Richard remembered something from school showing out which direction he was to go. Richard took branches and placed them in the shape of arrows.

Locals Protest Club On Perryton Parkway

City and county officials were flooded with telephone calls today protesting an application for a wine and beer permit to be used in a night club to be located at 2801 Perryton Parkway.

A hearing on the application is scheduled for 10 a.m. next Monday before County Judge Van Can.

The application is being sought by Roy Underwood, city building inspector, formerly night club manager at the Calabina Club at 400 S. Caylor in Pampa.

Wrestling on The Move-But Not Locally

POSTER WINNERS PHILADELPHIA (UPI)
Two teen-agers from Winston Salem, N.C. and Greensburg, Pa. have been judged the winners of the national student poster contest sponsored by the 41st International Eucharistic Congress which convenes here Aug. 1-8.

Margaret Bauman, 15, a 10th grader at Greensburg Central Catholic High School, topped 87 finalists in the high school division with a poster depicting one of eight Congress sub-themes: "The Eucharist and the Hunger for Understanding."

Lisa Ganley, an 8th-grader at St. Leo's School in Winston Salem, won the grade school division, her poster envisioning "The Eucharist and the Hunger for Jesus, the Bread of Life."

The two girls and their parents will receive eight-day, all expense-paid trips to the Congress where, on Youth Day, Aug. 6, the poster winners will be honored.

Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel (1939-41) was the first Texas governor to use the fireside chat to communicate with the citizens of the state.

ELECTION ORDER AND NOTICE THE STATE OF TEXAS

On this the 11th day of February, 1976, the Board of Trustees of Pampa Independent School District convened in regular session, open to the public with the following members present: to-wit: Curt Beck, President; William Arrington, David Crossman, Harold Comer, Dr. Robert Lytle, Paul Simmons constituting a quorum and among other proceedings had by said Board of Trustees was the following:

WHEREAS, the term of office of Curt Beck, President of the Board of Trustees, expires on the 31st day of August, 1976, and a vacancy exists for the unexpired term of said term, and

WHEREAS, it is necessary for this Board to pass an order establishing the procedure for electing a trustee to fill the vacancy in said office;

THEREFORE, BE IT ORDERED BY THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF PAMPA INDEPENDENT SCHOOL DISTRICT:

1. That an election be held in said School District on April 12, 1976, for the purpose of electing to the Board of Trustees of said School District members to fill positions 4, 5, and 7 (unexpired term of said term).

2. That all requests by candidates to have their names on the ballot for the election mentioned in this order shall be in writing and signed by the candidate and filed with the Secretary of the Board of Trustees at the business office, 119 North Frost, not later than 30 days prior to the date of said election, such request shall designate the position on the Board to which the candidate seeks election.

3. That said election shall be held at the following places and during the following hours: a. On each day of said election, the polls at the above designated polling places shall be open from 8 o'clock a.m. to 8 o'clock p.m.

4. That the manner of conducting said election shall be governed, as nearly as may be, by the Election Code of this state, and all other applicable laws, and this Board of Trustees will furnish all necessary ballots and other election supplies requisite to said election.

5. Immediately after votes have been counted, the officers holding said election shall make and deliver the returns of said election and perform all other duties as provided by the Election Code.

6. The Board of Trustees shall give notice of said election and of the combined Election Order and Notice shall serve as Notice of said election. The President of the Board of Trustees is hereby authorized and instructed to post or cause to have posted said combined Election Order and Notice at three public places where notices are customarily posted in this school district, and said posting shall be made at least 20 days before the date of said election.

7. The President shall also cause a copy of this combined Election Order and Notice to be published one time in a newspaper of general circulation in the county where this school district is located. Said publication shall be not more than 20 days before the date of said election.

8. It is further found and determined that in accordance with an order of the Board of Trustees, the Secretary posted written notice of the date, place and subject of this meeting on the bulletin board located in the central administrative office of this school district, a place convenient to the public, and said notice remained posted for at least 72 hours preceding the day of this meeting.

9. It is further found and determined that in accordance with an order of the Board of Trustees, the Secretary furnished a notice of the date, place and subject of this meeting to the county clerk of Gray County, Texas, the county in which most, if not all, of this school district's pupils reside.

The above order being read, it was moved and seconded that the same do pass. Thereupon, the question being called for, the following members of the Board voted AYE: Curt Beck, William Arrington, Paul Simmons, David Crossman, Harold Comer, Dr. Robert Lytle.
