

School superintendent Long resigns

DR. DAN LONG

By JANE P. MARSHALL,
Pampa News Staff
Dr. Dan F. Long, who joined the Pampa Independent School District as superintendent in 1974, resigned today.

He has accepted a position as superintendent of the Carrollton-Farmers Branch Independent School District. It is located in Northwest Dallas County and employs more than 600 teachers and has an operating budget of more than $11 million. The district has almost 12,000 students.

The people of Pampa have given me such great support and cooperation that leaving will not be easy. However, the opportunity afforded me by Carrollton-Farmers Branch is one that I cannot turn down," Long said in his resignation letter to Curt Beck, president of the Pampa school board today.

Beck told The News today that the board accepted the resignation with great regret. "We aren't looking forward to finding a replacement for Dr. Long as this is a long and arduous procedure as many of us remember," he said. The school board will select Long's successor.

Board Vice President Bill Arrington added that Long was a capable administrator. "It will be hard to replace him. I'm sad to see him go," he said. PISD employs about 200 teachers and has a budget of $5 million.

The school system to which Long is going has 11 elementary schools, 2 junior high schools and 2 high schools, according to information from Carrollton-Farmers Branch.

Long did not disclose what his new salary will be. He said he looks at the job in terms of career opportunities rather than dollars and cents. "But it is a nice increase," he added.

"The members of the Pampa Board of Trustees have my gratitude and the gratitude of the community for their unselfish dedication to the children and youth of this community. Thank you for permitting me to be a part of your commendable education program," Long wrote to Beck.

Beck said that Pampa should be proud that its superintendent has been asked to take the job in Northeast Texas.

"Dr. Long has always been frank with the school board concerning his responsibility to Pampa Schools and we knew that he would not leave Pampa unless an outstanding opportunity for advancement existed. We understand that he did not apply for the Carrollton-Farmers Branch position, but that this board came to him requesting that he come for an interview," Beck said.

Two school officials were in Pampa last week asking about Long.

"When we asked Dr. Long to take our superintendency in 1974, we were well aware of his reputation as a top-notch school administrator. We did not expect that he would leave our schools before serving us for at least three years. We extended his contract for three years and granted him a salary increase at our January board meeting, by unanimous vote," Beck said.

Ford seeks 5th straight win in native state of opponent

CHICAGO (UPI) — President Ford went after his fifth straight win in Ronald Reagan's native state and Jimmy Carter was favored to strengthen his position as Democratic front-runner in today's Illinois presidential primary.

It was expected to be the biggest vote of the young primary season. Interest centered on a bitter struggle for the Democratic nomination for governor between incumbent Daniel Walker and Secretary of State Michael Howlett, the favorite of Mayor Richard Daley's Chicago organization.

Ford was the consensus choice to add Illinois to his previous victories over Reagan in Florida, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Vermont. After last Tuesday's loss in Florida, the former California governor all but conceded he had no chance to win in Illinois, the state where he was born.

Carter was a soft choice to defeat Wallace for the second consecutive week. The Alabama governor, fighting for enough primary strength to be a factor at the national convention, said he thought he would do well in Illinois but was pointing for victories later in Michigan and Wisconsin.

The Illinois primary was a double-bait affair. There was a preferential "beauty contest" which had no effect other than campaign public relations, and another vote to select the 155 Democratic and 96 Republican convention delegates at stake.

ACADEMIC FREEDOM

By JOAN WILKE

Letters to the Editor

Dear Mr. Marshall,

You have presented to the public one action that could be taken by the local school board in order to cushion the impact of whatever the state legislature gives the TSTA (Texas State Teachers Association) I am referring to your suggestion of doing away with the $500 per year per teacher that is now being paid above the state required base teacher salary.

I am assuming the citizens of Pampa want a quality education for the students of the Pampa Independent School District. To obtain this education the school system needs to employ professionals to teach the children. There are few professionals (i.e. accountants, lawyers, bankers, pharmacists, that would work for the salary a teacher is now being paid, yet you are suggesting we work for $500 a year less than we are currently earning.

The Pampa Classroom teacher more than earns his or her salary. With the rising cost of living I am appalled that you can suggest that a professional agree to work for $500 per year less next year than what they are making this year.

Sincerely,
Pat Jones

Dear Editor:

After reading in the Jan 23 Pampa News "Pampa Residents Suffer Gas Pains," a group of concerned citizens originated a petition to protest the exorbitant natural gas bills here for the following reasons:

1. Because of the many complaints about this situation.
2. Because of the discrimination of gas bills in different parts of town.
3. The increased price of gas at the well head.
4. Lack of support, interest in attending city commission meetings.

The right to express ourselves about situations like this.

The 40 per cent to 46 per cent increase in rates turned out to be much higher in many cases in December.

Harry Hubbard, president of the AFL-CIO labor union in Texas, said in a recent news article that "It is unbelievable that Texas - based gas companies would charge Texas customers three times what they charge customers in New York and Boston. Rates charged out of state consumers are regulated."

People voted our commissioners in office thinking they had enough judgement to prevent such a tremendous raise for a utility.

We contacted Harry Hubbard and talked to him about the situation here. He agreed that copies of these petitions should be presented to the city commission, sent to Harry Hubbard, to the Texas Rail Road Commission and to concerned legislators.

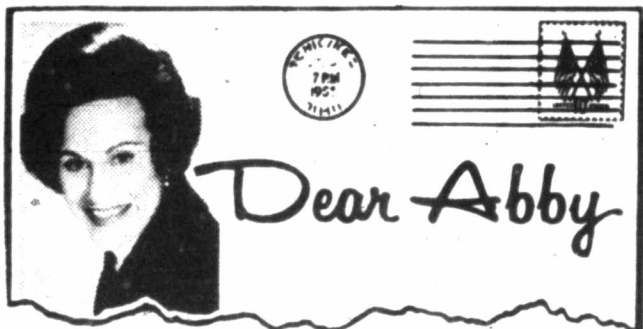

Hubbard was quoted in the article as saying, "Natural gas suppliers are skinning Texas consumers alive."

Therefore, anyone wishing to sign a petition may come to Union Hall, 527 W. Brown, from noon to 5 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday.

Already, more than 300 signatures have been collected. (Letter received Friday - Ed)

We appreciate the cooperation of each one who has helped in any way and all who have signed these petitions or who wish to sign them.

No Way to Avoid Uninvited Guests

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I had a New Year's cocktail buffet party at home to which 50 people were invited. We kept our guest list down because of limited space and budget.

The day of the party, six invited guests called to say that they had houseguests and to ask if they could bring them along! What could we say? So we had all these extra people in whom we had no interest whatsoever. They took up the space and ate and drank what could have gone to our own friends.

It seems to me that when people are invited to a party and they have houseguests, they should decline the invitation and not ask the hostess to entertain their houseguests, too.

How does one handle such rudeness?
BEEN HAD

DEAR BEEN: Sorry, but when you're stuck, you're stuck. When invited guests ask to bring their houseguests along, there is no way to tell them they are not welcome.

I can see where uninvited guests might present a real problem at a sit-down dinner, which I would not hesitate to point out, but a cocktail buffet can usually be stretched to handle some additional guests.

DEAR ABBY: Why does my boyfriend have to get drunk before he says, "I love you"?
PUZZLED

DEAR PUZZLED: Because he needs the "courage" either to lie or tell the truth.

DEAR ABBY: Get a load of the following, published April 3, 1919 in "The Alabamian," the weekly newspaper of the 167th Infantry in the Army of Occupation of Germany with the Rainbow Division:
EASY ON PANTS

Pants are made for men, not for women.
Women are made for men, not for pants.

When a man pants for a woman and a woman pants for a man, that makes a pair of pants.

Pants are like molasses: They are thinner in hot weather and thicker in cold weather.

There has been much discussion as to whether "pants" is singular or plural. Seems to us that when men wear pants they are plural, and when they don't, it is singular. If you want to make pants last, make the coat first.

JUST WHAT does "academic freedom" mean? Judging from the events of recent years, it means:

- (a) the students' rights to decide what they will learn
- (b) the faculty's rights to decide what they will teach and under what conditions
- (c) the institution's obligation to present all points of view
- (d) everyone's right to an education, through college
- (e) the right to the same education as someone else, regardless of aptitudes or economic means
- (f) the lowering or abandonment of standards of learning and accomplishment to make universal education possible and uniformly equal
- (g) anyone's right to disrupt the learning of others
- (h) everyone's right to learn on the other side of town
- (i) the right to appear at school in straggly hairstyles and sloppy dress
- (j) the right of boys and girls to share the same athletics and locker rooms
- (k) government subsidies of education based on race, sex and economic status
- (l) all of the above

Of course, the only reasonable answer can be: "None of the above." These are just some of the preposterous claims masquerading today as academic freedom.

The only meaningful academic freedom is the basic right of an institution's board to determine all conditions of education in the school under its management. That's why real academic freedom will be unrealized until educational institutions are free of government financing and control.

If a board is supposed to represent the interests of all the taxpayers, the result must be chaos. How could it be otherwise? The public body is a hodgepodge of interests, ideas and beliefs, all with a legitimate claim on a public system.

It is the tax base of education that gave one taxpayer the power to remove prayer from the schools. It was the tax base that justified bringing prayer into the schools in the first place. It is the tax base that justifies busing — and also anti-busing activities. And inviting Communist speakers to campuses. And protesting against Communist lecturers. And teaching sex in the primary grades. And removing sex from primary classes. And fighting over textbooks. And all the rest.

This pushing and pulling at the school system frustrates everyone and accomplishes nothing but disruption.

All education requires a point of view as to content, methods, directions, and the like. No point of view can be taken without offending someone. The nothingness that results from trying to accommodate all points of view could be called non-education. It's the essence of socialized education. It is the government control and enforcement of "equal opportunity" that has inevitably driven education to its lowest, most ineffective level.

That's education under the public imperative. And what is the alternative? What is the private imperative?

With private funding, schools must deliver the kind of education parents want for their children. How could schools avoid it? They would be individually selected on the basis of their performance. If they didn't offer what enough parents wanted, they would go out of business.

If schools were free to determine their own programs with an eye toward the market, everyone's freedom would be broadened by virtue of the choices that would become available.

The academic freedom of the institution to chart its own course would establish the only possible realistic basis for the academic freedom of students: a variety of offerings to choose from.

There would be schools with prayer and schools without. Some with athletic programs and some without. Some with coed athletics. Some allowing freaky dress. Others not. Some highly specialized. Some general. Some low cost. Some expensive.

All would prosper or fail on the basis of how they met the desires of the public.

Some things would be missing — the fighting, rioting, shouting, arguing and disruption that takes place when one system is supposed to be all things to all people.

This same academic freedom, the institution's right to provide the program it chooses, would also provide real academic freedom for teachers. There would be a real market for different points of view and new methods. The teachers' creativity would be stimulated by the variety of approaches and educational programs available as well as the drive toward improvement supplied by competition. There would be no lifelong lock-in to a stale job — no stagnation or inertia rewarded with raises acquired by carrying a sign.

No one can say what forms true academic freedom would take and how it would develop and all that it would produce. But some things are certain. Unlike our present static system, improved forms of education would not only be possible, they would be assured. And correspondingly, the archaic and ineffective would disappear.

Does anyone remember why we have those summerlong vacations?

There was a time when heat in the summer was a problem. And in some places, maybe the youngsters were needed to help in the fields.

Now we have air conditioning. And most families don't raise their own produce. But we still have those long summer vacations — often a problem for teenagers, a bore for youngsters, a trial for moms.

Under a system of private education, it is reasonable to assume that school facilities wouldn't remain unprofitably idle for months at a time.

In some instances there might be a choice of terms — on a rotation basis. Or continuous terms with several shorter vacation periods during the year. Or the choice of going to school year round. Or the alternative of going to school part time or in adjustable periods to accommodate employment in the case of high school and college students who want to work.

And the "free lunch" would be free at last. Instead of being paid for by the taxpayers, free lunches offered by a private school would be a competitive inducement to gain enrollment. It would only have promotional effect if the school's fees were competitive with those in comparable schools; so "free" in this case would take on some meaning.

Total educational programs might be offered in this same free and easy competitive way for example, builders and developers in increasing numbers would likely include schooling in their master plans, in the same way that they now include recreational facilities in the price of the home itself while keeping prices competitive.

There was a time when a development attracted buyers with just a swimming pool. Competitive pressures have led more and more builders to include recreation and in expanding ways. It is becoming more and more common to find included such features as tennis courts, putting greens, barbecues, clubhouses, game rooms — even golf courses and lakes.

In appealing to families, proximity to schools has always been a prime consideration for builders. Can anyone possibly believe such facilities wouldn't be provided if there were no public monopoly of education?

Whenever competition comes into play, extra services automatically result.

There would likely be programs to accommodate working mothers troubled by mid-afternoon dismissals. There might be pre-school programs tied in with elementary school enrollments.

Educational franchises could pop up faster than Jack-in-the-Boxes or McDonaldses — based on formulas that would make education more palatable, more fun, and more effective.

It is likely that companies in established educational fields would offer systems using their materials. An encyclopedia company or publisher would be in a good competitive position for introducing educational programs.

In spite of the fact that government is currently hostile to companies providing related services within an industry, calling it monopoly, great efficiencies can be offered by companies already in a field, economies that are passed along to the consumer quite naturally under competitive pressures.

The only real and deleterious monopolies are those that are forced upon us by government sponsorship and protection — the monopoly of education being a prime example.

A private system would offer schools appealing to different learning capacities as well as different economic levels. There would be good schools and programs for the handicapped and those needing special attention. There would undoubtedly be schools for advanced students that would avoid the difficulties posed by "skipping" youngsters into advanced age groups. We wouldn't be stifling the genius in our young Edisons as the uniformity of public education has done in the past.

Standards of accomplishment would be vitally significant because schools would have to depend on their reputations and performance for continued existence.

We could expect to see more schools in connection with churches — schools that are not economically feasible in competition with forcibly financed public schools. Academic freedom would then become a reality for certain religious sects that have been harassed for years by public educators in spite of the controversy over the separation of church and state and the Constitutional guarantees of religious freedom.

Those who see only illiteracy as the alternative to socialized (public) education should remember that our early colleges, such as Princeton, Harvard and Yale, were all founded and funded by church initiative, not the government.

It is also interesting to note recent research by the University of Texas indicating some of the failures of our public efforts to educate everybody. Of the 10,000 adults tested, 20 per cent cannot read newspaper help wanted ads, 13 per cent can't address an envelope properly, 58 per cent can't extract the meaning from a simple paragraph, 30 per cent can't figure out airline schedules. One out of five were found to be functionally illiterate.

Socialized education, like all aspects of socialism, is not anything so much as it is an emptiness, a void, an absence of expression and ideas.

It is accepted because somewhere along the line we have made the mistake of defining free and responsible institutions as those which present all points of view. There never has been and never could be such a thing.

"Equal Time" on T.V. and unbiased reporting in the press are utopian concepts and noticeably non-existent. Freedom of the press is the right of anyone to take a point of view in his newspaper and bear the responsibility for factual accuracy. It is the resulting existence of many newspapers that gives us the choice that makes freedom a reality.

And academic freedom — what is it?

- (a) It is the right of people to get the kind of education they want from the choices available on the market. As it is, there is no market at all.
- (b) It is the right of teachers to teach what they choose, any way they like, as long as there is a market for their services. It is not a license for quackery and demagoguery at other people's expense.
- (c) It is the whole body of freedoms that depend on an institution's right to offer what it will, as long as it can survive in the market place.
- (d) It is the freedom of choice only possible through privately funded institutions.
- (e) It is the variety of offerings that encourages differences, and the appreciation for individual differences, on which the progress of civilization depends.
- (f) It is the only system that can make learning as much fun as it should be, because it is the only system that can meet individual needs.
- (g) It is the system that places educational responsibilities where they belong — with parents and students.
- (h) It is the system that produces people with direction and goals. Not the kind of education that turns out people who think the absence of goals is a goal in itself.
- (i) It is the only system that can challenge young people of all capabilities and give them confidence in accomplishment.
- (j) It is a system of proliferating choices. a system that can change and grow.
- (k) All of the above.
- (l) And more. Much, much more.

An act of Congress can't provide academic freedom. Only private competition can, with the inexorable pressures of competitive alternatives pushing toward improvement and perpetuating progress.

Just two things keep the public system going. Financing by force, through taxation. And the willingness of people to accept the socialist notion that there is no alternative.

There is, of course. The alternative to nothing is everything.

Prosecution concludes rebuttal for Hearst

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The prosecution concluded its rebuttal testimony in Patricia Hearst's trial with a psychiatrist who described her as a frustrated and angry "rebel in search of a cause" who willingly embraced the hatred and violence of her kidnapers.

The 22-year-old newspaper heiress was swept up in the terrorism of the Symbionese Liberation Army and took part in the robbery of the Hibernia Bank of her own free will, Dr. Harry Kozol, 70, testified Monday.

But the Boston psychiatrist, who interviewed her on five occasions in his cell in January, said Miss Hearst's conversion was "purely a matter of circumstance. He called it a 'terrible, terrible misfortune' that in the midst of her search, she fell into the hands of the SLA.

"She was ripe for the plucking," Kozol said. "The cause found her."

Kozol and three minor witnesses wound up the prosecution's rebuttal case. Chief defense attorney F. Lee Bailey said he may call Miss Hearst's parents to the stand.

After final arguments and the judge's instructions, the case was expected to go to the jury Friday.

Kozol spent six hours on the stand Monday finishing his testimony, which had been interrupted when Miss Hearst came down with influenza Thursday, and then undergoing sharp cross-examination by Bailey.

Kozol said it was his opinion that in the weeks before the kidnaping she became "disenchanted" with her fiancé, Steven Weed, with whom she shared an apartment, and felt trapped at the prospect of marrying him.

"This girl who was kidnaped was a bitter, angry, confused person — angry at authority, angry at power, angry at hypocrisy, the hypocrisy of Steven Weed who talked social reform and liberalism but was becoming more, reactionary than anything she had heard at home or from anyone else," Kozol said.

"She was a girl with no place to go. She was a rebel in search of a cause or reaching for a cause, but the cause found her — a terrible, terrible misfortune that of all the causes she might have never discussed the Hearst case with the assistant, who he said he fired last fall for unspecified reasons."

Bailey accused Kozol of being hostile to the Hearst family.

Kozol denied Bailey's charges he had told an assistant prior to his interviews of Miss Hearst that her parents were "dangerous and vengeful" and had made disparaging remarks about Mrs. Catherine Hearst, the defendant's mother.

He called Bailey's charges preposterous and, under later prosecution questioning, said he had never discussed the Hearst case with the assistant, who he said he fired last fall for unspecified reasons.

Bailey told a reporter the assistant, Dr. Nicholas Groth, would be called as a witness.

Bailey remarked to Kozol that Miss Hearst was a victim of the SLA "who is now sitting in this courtroom just as they wanted."

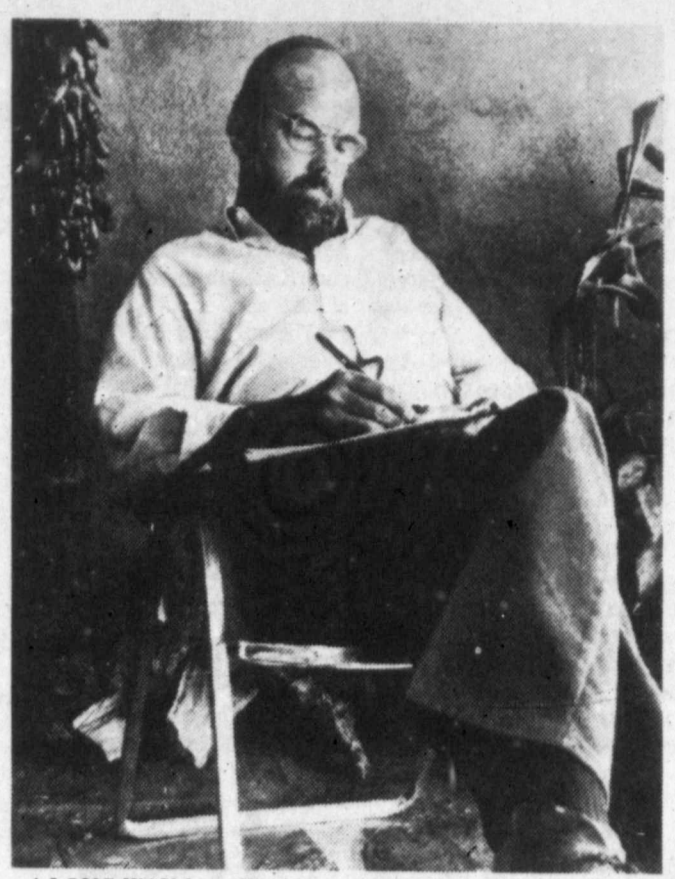

"No, Mr. Bailey," Kozol replied. "It was her choice of their life which resulted in her being in this courtroom today."

Earlier, Kozol told of a premonition by Miss Hearst four days before her abduction that she would be kidnaped. He said she told him she was "suddenly hit or struck by a terrible fear that she was going to be kidnaped."

When he told her it was not unusual for the daughter of a wealthy family to have such fears, Kozol said, she said her fear was "something altogether different" and she thought of running to her parents where she would be safe.

"But she didn't, and the thing she dreaded materialized."

Rebel Moslem army backs off

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Rebel Moslem army units, bowing to Syrian pressure, backed away from an assault on the palace of President Suleiman Franjeh today, but kept "their fingers on the triggers" until he resigns.

In Beirut, kidnap-murders and bloody clashes between Moslem and Christian militiamen killed 43, including a United Press International employee, and wounded nearly 100 in 24 hours.

The city slid further into anarchy after gunmen stormed Beirut's main jail and released about 700 prisoners—including murderers.

UPI telex operator Antoine Atallah, 19, was killed after being kidnapped while walking the 100 yards from his hotel to the UPI office on Hamra Street. His body was found four hours after the abduction — dumped in a street two miles from his hotel.

A statement from Moslem rebels who had advanced on Franjeh's palace Monday said they had decided to hold off an attack "for a very short period of time, in order to avoid the shedding of blood."

The statement said both the "Lebanese Arab Army" of deserter Lt. Ahmed Khatib, and the forces of Beirut garrison commander Brig. Gen. Aziz Ahdab were "keeping their fingers on the triggers" awaiting Franjeh's resignation.

Intensive diplomatic discussions began in Beirut and Damascus as Syria again tried to resolve the deteriorating situation in Lebanon.

Although the embattled Franjeh officially remained adamant in his refusal to resign under pressure, sources at the palace seven miles southeast of Beirut said he was "considering" changing his mind if certain conditions were met.

In a dramatic 11th hour move,

Syrian-backed Saiga and Palestine Liberation Army troops Monday, cut the main highways leading to the eastern and southern approaches to the palace, halting two armored columns of advancing rebels.

Brig. Gen. Aziz Ahdab, who seized control of the capital Thursday and demanded Franjeh resign or be ousted by force, united his 2,000-man army garrison Monday with the renegade Lebanese Arab Army.

Both armored columns that rumbled toward the palace were from the Lebanese Arab Army, a group of 2,000 Moslem deserters under command of Lt. Ahmed Khatib.

Saiga troops with anti-tank weapons dug trenches along the main Sidon-Beirut highway and halted a column of 12 personnel carriers and armored cars. Further east, the PLA stopped a rebel advance along the Damascus-Beirut highway.

Five inches of snow piled up at Columbia, Mo., two inches of new snow stacked up at St. Louis and an inch east reported at Kansas City, Mo.

Snow stretched from southeastern Kansas to northern Missouri and rain and snow extended into central Illinois.

Winter storm warnings for heavy snow were in effect in western Maryland and northwestern Virginia today as the gathering storm lumbered eastward. Winter storm watches were issued for central mountains of Pennsylvania and

Nursing home slates super walk for Dimes

Residents of the Pampa Nursing Home are scheduled to walk a mile for the National Foundation March of Dimes in an effort to raise funds in the organization's fight against birth defects.

Senior citizens will follow in the steps of younger walkers who traditionally have participated in the March of Dimes sponsored "Super Walks."

The walk at Pampa Youth Center is set from 10 a.m. to noon on March 27. Prior to the Senior Citizens Walk at Pampa Youth Center, residents who are unable to travel outside the nursing homes will walk the corridors in an effort to participate.

Local citizens who would like to sponsor a walker are asked to call the nursing home.

The walk will have a bicentennial theme as walkways 1776 feet in length will be laid out, and participants will be decorating their canes wheelchairs and walkers in the traditional red, white and blue.

Funds will be used in the March of Dimes programs including research, medical service, public and professional education and community service.

Texas was the 28th state admitted to the Union in 1845 and was the only one which, as an independent nation, came into the Union by treaty.

Memberships still available for concerts

With 75 memberships still available for the 1976-77 season, Curt Beck, president of the Pampa Community Concert Association, announced today extension of the current membership drive through Saturday, March 27.

Beck said persons wishing to take out season memberships entitling them to admission to all four concerts may do so by calling Mrs. Kermit Lawson at 665-2004 or Mrs. Bruce Riehart at 665-3362.

Concerts scheduled for the 1976-77 season include the Polish National Radio Orchestra, Art Hodes Jazz Four, the Four Freshmen and Danzas Venezuela.

Season memberships are $12 for adults and $6 for students.

Texas to be trusted on property

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — A study group reviewing school financing says it will trust Texans to volunteer accurate information on their property values to decide if commercial and industrial property is properly taxed.

John Poerner, director of the study, said Monday his group could save time and money through the voluntary supply of information about property in the state's 1,095 school districts. He made the comments at a hearing of the House Taxation Committee.

He said farm and ranch land would be checked by appraisers, but information on commercial and industrial property would be provided by the Dun & Bradstreet rating service and voluntary reports.

"I see some problem in that you're giving residential and farm land a pretty good going over," said committee chairman Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange. "I'm in hopes you can have something better than self-reporting in regard to commercial property."

Rep. Pete Laney, D-Hale Center, who interrupted Poerner's explanation of the checks on residential and farm property to ask how he would appraise "those tall buildings in Houston," said he was dissatisfied with the study.

"Anything Dun & Bradstreet has self-reported, and I'll just tell you these figures are going to be low," Poerner said. "We just don't have the time to go along and appraise every piece of property along the Texas Gulf Coast."

Injured worker awarded $2,000

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff
The 31st District Court Judge Grainger McIlhenny ruled Monday that El Grande Pet Food Inc. of Kellerville was negligent in providing a safe place for an employee to work.

The judge awarded Linden Immel $2,000 in lost earnings and $500 for pain and suffering. Immel had first asked for $27,500.

The suit stems from an accident in which, according to Immel's testimony, he received a shoulder injury when he fell from the wet, slick bed of a truck when unloading dead cattle just inside the Gray County line in 1972.

David Holt, attorney for Immel, said in the beginning of the trial that his client would reduce his claim for damages to $12,500.

The accident occurred Dec. 19, 1972. Immel testified that a chain which had a hook on it "came undone."

He said, "Someone hollered 'watch out' but it was too late then. I was already gone."

Robert R. Sanders, Amarillo attorney for the firm, which is a dog food processing plant, asked:

"You haven't been back to the doctor since the early part of 1973 about that shoulder?"

"No, sir," Immel replied.

adding that he had been treated by his stepmother.

"Is she a doctor?" asked Sanders.

"No, she is a nurse," Immel replied.

He testified that he doubted if he could lift 10 pounds today as a result of the injury.

However, Sanders called a witness who testified that Immel loaded some boxes of wire weighing more than that since then.

Van Horn, general manager and co-owner, testified that the firm paid Immel's doctor and medical bills which resulted from the accident in addition to a weekly income until he was released by a doctor.

"Mr. Horn, is it true that you employed more than three persons on that date?" inquired Holt. Horn said he had five or six on that day.

"Were they covered by Workman's Compensation?" Holt asked.

"No," replied Holt.

"During closing arguments, Holt said if the firm had provided the proper equipment — "a winch line of sufficient length, he wouldn't have been pulling on the chain when he fell from the truck."

Sanders argued that the accident was caused by the employee himself.

Considerable testimony had been heard about the weather conditions on the day of the accident which allegedly contributed to the wet, slick bed of the truck.

"The employer had no control over the snow," Sanders emphasized.

Holt agreed that the employer had no control over the weather but the truck was there, and he said his client was expected to help unload it.

No announcement was made in the courtroom Monday as to whether the decision will be appealed, but Sanders said outside the court that it probably would be. The defendant has 10 days to file notice of appeal.

400 scents add up to $5 billion

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Rumor has it that before Eve handed Adam that apple, she anointed herself with an aromatic blend of oils distilled for her by the serpent. Adam succumbed and women have been spritzing themselves ever since.

The Fragrance Foundation, which represents 50 perfume companies, estimates there are 400 well-known scents on the American market today, plus an additional 100 regionally popular fragrances.

You'd think by now every conceivable aroma would have been discovered and duplicated. But last year, 20 new fragrances wafted into the nation's air, more than three times the usual annual yield. And the same is expected next year.

The explanation? Test tubes on the one hand, the consumer on the other.

To begin with, there are several broad categories of natural scents: floral, green (grasses), woody, fruity, spicy, mossy, herbal and oriental (musk and ambergris).

Excluding a single note fragrance such as lavender or musk, a perfume, toilet water or cologne generally consists of three notes. The top note is the initial, dominating scent which is the most volatile. That dissipates quickly and you become aware of the modifying notes which last longer but not as long as the base notes. These are the most tenacious and represent the scent after hours of wear.

To the perfumer, the fascination lies in the various combinations he can devise.

Science helps him overcome the cost of increasingly scarce natural ingredients by synthesizing these natural scents in the laboratory. Then, too, chemists spend long hours experimenting with chemicals which produce their own, singular fragrances. The fragrance field, therefore, is fertile and the possibilities endless.

So much for technology. Welcome, now, the American woman between 18 and 34 who is responsible for an estimated $5 billion fragrance industry.

According to Richard Barrie, executive vice president and chief operating officer for Faberge, Inc., "The biggest change in the fragrance industry in the last 10 years is that today's woman uses more than one fragrance."

And the combat for her patronage, therefore, is nose to nose.

In April, for instance, Faberge will launch Babe, a fragrance designed, Barrie says, to entice the woman who identifies with Margaux Hemingway.

"A beautiful woman in an exciting career, into sports, active and interested in romance and all that, too."

Miss Hemingway will personally free-wheeling Babe in a several million dollar campaign for the scent (cologne $5-$9.50) which comes in an Art Deco bottle with a baseball logo, in shades of peach and apricot. The name was chosen, Barrie says, "because it's a great expression of warmth that's been with us for a long time."

Then there's Revlon's Jontue (cologne $4.50-$7.50), introduced last September. Jontue, with its obvious French allusion, means, well, nothing, according to Al Skolnick, Revlon's vice president, Richard Lockman.

"By design we're in the least number of outlets of any performer in the country. With our newest fragrance, it never entered our mind to bring out a perfume that lots of women would love. We worked on bringing out a totally new aroma."

Average layette costs $87 Young pianist blind from birth

By Jill Leslie Sealf

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Someone forgot to tell the several million babies who w-a-a-a into the world each day that this is Population Zero time. As a result, navel appearance still makes a great excuse for grandparents, aunts, uncles and very special friends to see that the wee one has more than diapers in his name.

This is to the good since most new parents get caught short when it comes to having clothes for baby in his first few months despite the fact that the traditional layette usually is selected between the sixth and eighth months of pregnancy. The layette provides basic items a newborn needs until he is about six months old.

Many couples have revived the exchange or hand-me-down concept as far as certain standard baby items are concerned. A big help, however, to doting relatives are the suggestions of layette and infant wear buyers such as Sophie Schmidt, who is with Lord & Taylor in New York. Sophie recommends this basic layette:

Six snapshirts, two gowns with drawstring and mitten cuffs, two teething bibs, two waterproof panties (snap style), one dozen prefolded diapers or disposables, three fitted crib sheets, two flannel-faced rubber sheets, one quilted mattress pad, three receiving blankets, one acrylic crib blanket, two hooded bath towels, four washcloths, two stretch terry coveralls. Optional items are kimonos which are covers with two snaps at the top and an opening in front for after bath or during feeding, and saque sets (shirts with matching panties lined in plastic) for summer or mild climates.

Sophie cautions relatives and new parents not to over buy optional ready-to-wear items because a baby grows so rapidly during this period. But towels, sheets and washcloths can be bought in quantity because they will be used for at least three years.

As for colors, the traditional pink still is thought of as right for girls and blue for boys. However, pink now is considered the least desirable choice for layettes and neutrals such as seafoam green, off-white and yellow are wise selections for boys or for girls.

Since the mid '60s when stretch clothes revolutionized the industry, there haven't been too many new trends with most innovations centering around the stretch suits. Since the application of the controversial flammability laws, according to industry spokesmen, the cost of the average layette has increased from $65 to $87. This includes all the basics.

Christening clothes, according to Sophie, justify a real splurge but this depends upon the family. The $23 to $300 outfits and up range from simple tailored dresses to fine laces and silks.

Those parents who are part of the jeans generation tend to select ready-to-wear baby outfits in bold, bright colors and there is a pleasing growth of humor in infant's wear such as minute swim suits that say "swim team" or carry messages such as "I'm a little stinker."

Most important in infants' clothes is their ease-of-care. Most are very practical and mix and match with adults' clothing such as the stylish T-shirts with artwork of dolls and sailboats, striped and dotted shirts, knitted geometric and jacquard dresses and little pant outfits. All in all the mini-wear is captivating and can entice the most reluctant of penny-pinchers to part with some dollars for a favorite tot.

(NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.) 12-17-75 (TAPE NO. 3)

OLDER infants look neat and keep cozy in a bedtime terry velour coverall. Designed by Trifit in a flame-retardant fabric.

ZIP-FRONT pram suit is of fluffy flame-retardant brushed orlon. Hood and yoke front have flopped eyelet. Comes with attached boots and mittens.

DALLAS (UPI) — Lynna Harbison, slight and fragile looking, could hum before she could talk. She taught herself to play three-finger chords on the piano when she was 4.

Now, at age 24, she plays the piano during the lunch hours at the Gran Crystal Palace every day, is a composer, plays all selections from contemporary music to the most difficult classical selections from memory, performs at country clubs, private parties, club meetings, debutante parties and wedding receptions and would like to join the concert tour.

Lynna was born practically blind, but with a gift for music.

That talent, frustrated in the early years by a handicap she has now overcome, flowed in emotional outbursts. But then, at the age of 5, she began piano lessons and musical therapy with Dorothy Brin Crocker who became to Lynna what Annie Sullivan was to Helen Keller.

Another important influence was Dr. Travis Shelton, a music professor at Southern Methodist University who became her protector and "second father" when she was 11.

Lynna's impact on her listeners resulted in an anonymous scholarship fund set up for her at SMU. It has been continuously funded for the past six years. Last June she earned her Certificate of Artistry and her magnificent recital earned her a standing ovation.

Lynna can read words in Braille but not music. She learns difficult sonatas and fugues by tape recording her piano teacher playing each hand separately and then together at a slow tempo. She memorizes everything and practices six to eight hours a day. Lynna has composed over 200 piano pieces since the age of 6.

"She is the most amazing young artist, the most brilliant young pianist I know," says Dr. Shelton.

With some lateral vision in her left eye, Lynna can see colors and read large type from three inches away. She lives with her mother who had major surgery for cancer and is slowly recovering. Lynna has done all the cooking and housekeeping for the two of them for several years.

"I don't consider myself handicapped. I didn't want to look like a typical blind person with a dog or a cane," she said.

Lynna found a group of friends last June when she started playing two services a Sunday at the Believers' Chapel in Dallas, a non-denominational Bible church. Her friends from church volunteer to take her to her job at the Gran Crystal Palace every day and won't accept payment.

In college Lynna's ambition was to be a concert pianist performing with symphony orchestras but she realizes that few make it on the concert circuit.

"I would also want a normal life and not be alone," she said. "I would like to keep up with classical music and have freedom to do housework, practice, have my friends and maybe get married someday, if it's right. I'm thankful for what I have and what I can do."

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — What can you tell me about hemolytic anemia? What causes it and what are the cures? What harm does hemolytic anemia do to the body and what do you know about the life expectancy of one who has anemia if nothing is done? The doctor recommends removal of the spleen although an exploratory operation showed the spleen, lymph nodes and all organs to be normal. No cancer was found. Right now I am taking medicines daily. I am sure the doctor is convinced that the spleen must be removed.

DEAR READER — Hemolytic anemia covers an enormous number of disorders. The term means an anemia resulting from destruction of red blood cells. The cells can be destroyed from a reaction to a drug or because of abnormalities in the red blood cells or a variety of complex biochemical mechanisms that result in chemical actions that destroy them. It is not enough just to say that a person has a hemolytic anemia.

In all hemolytic anemias the life span of the red blood cells is decreased. Normally red blood cells live 120 days. As they are destroyed new ones are produced maintaining a constant balance of an adequate number. If red cell destruction is increased the bone marrow increases its production of cells to prevent an anemia.

With the increased destruction of red blood cells there is a release of excess pigment from hemoglobin in the red cells used to carry oxygen and carbon dioxide. The excess pigment is eliminated by the liver. When this mechanism fails, the pigment produces a mild yellow jaundice. This is sometimes called hemolytic jaundice.

The excess formation of pigment which must be processed by the liver may lead to mild or even severe liver disease. Gallstones from bile pigments may also form.

The symptoms of hemolytic anemia are usually those related to the anemia itself; weakness, pallor or mild jaundice. The important information necessary for diagnosis comes from laboratory work, specifically examination of the red blood cells themselves, what their tendency is to fragment and how many immature young forms of red cells are present in the blood. Liver functions also tell how the liver is coping with the problem.

Those who want more information on the mechanisms of anemia can send 50 cents for The Health Letter, number 43, "Understanding the Anemias." Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Removal of the spleen is sometimes done as a form of treatment. Prior to making this decision, studies of how long the red cells last and how many of them are being destroyed within the spleen is sometimes done using radio isotope techniques. In many cases removal of the spleen will help to relieve symptoms even when the tests did not show that the spleen was a major factor.

I can't give you any solid answers on what to expect if you don't have a splenectomy. I can say that the management of most forms of hemolytic anemia today is rather good. You may have some inconveniences, but if you follow your doctor's advice and are kept under good medical supervision, the probabilities are that you can lead a fairly normal and productive life.

Traditional toys hold their own

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

A recent magazine cartoon showed a saleswoman demonstrating a pushbutton device to a father and son. The caption: "Just press this button and it plays with your toys."

It's probably only a matter of time until a manufacturer makes such a gadget for the Toy Fair, the New York City winter trade show that previews Christmas merchandise.

Meanwhile, manufacturers at this year's 73rd annual exhibit said more traditional toys are holding their own in competition with pushbutton, computer-age playthings. About 5,000 new products were displayed at the Toy Center in Manhattan and in a hotel and manufacturers' showrooms.

David A. Miller, president of the sponsoring Toy Manufacturers of America, Inc., said the hobby and craft area, including kits, is expanding, partly because of shrinking families with fewer children.

Miller sees renewed interest in model trains and continuing interest in dolls: everything from old-fashioned Kewpie and mama dolls to images of television and sports personalities and a millionaire private investigator. Jay J. Armes of El Paso, Tex., who lost both arms in a boyhood accident. Black dolls include one modeled after O.J. Simpson, running back of the Buffalo Bills of the National Football League. There are at least 20 anatomically correct American-made boy dolls, one of which depicts Archie Bunker's grandson, Joey Stivic.

A few years ago a store that carried an (imported) anatomically correct boy doll was picketed by consumers." Miller said.

Abe Kent, TMA vice president, said a study about five years ago showed quite a bit of resistance to such toys even on the part of children. But times change, and so do playthings.

"To date, we've had no flak of any consequence from consumers (about the new doll)," Miller said. "We can assume that individual manufacturers may receive some."

He said toys, games, hobbies and crafts tend to reflect society in a very large sense, with trends toward military weapons, armed vehicles and the like tending to parallel violence in society.

Miller thinks the popularity of western guns and cowboy outfits stems not from violence as such but from interest in America's past.

"The impact of 'Jaws' is not quite over," Miller added, pointing to a shark bath puppet and two games called "Jaws." One is a variation on traditional jackstraws; the other is a board game. Both obviously were inspired by the huge success of Peter Benchley's best-selling novel of the same name and the movie based on it.

Commentary on coping Pregnancy problem of teens

By Joanne Koch

What is three times as prevalent among teen-agers as venereal disease and twice as damaging?

What problem cripples the lives of one million teen-agers each year?

What is the greatest cause of suicide and school dropouts among female teen-agers?

The answer to all three questions is pregnancy. Pregnancy among teen-agers, including those in the 11 to 14-age bracket, is increasing at an alarming rate. One of the primary causes of this problem is ignorance — ignorance about conception and contraception.

"If you tell young people about sex, they'll do it," claim many parents. According to Dr. Sol Gordon, founder of the Institute for Family Research at Syracuse University, and author of many texts for parents and teen-agers, teen-agers are engaging in sexual activity whether their parents like it or not (or tell them about it). Fifty per cent of the teen-agers will have had a sexual encounter by the time they finish high school, states Dr. Gordon. Less than 20 per cent of the teen-age girls who are sexually active use any form of reliable contraception. In fact, ignorance about sex is often a cause of premature sexual activity rather than a preventive measure.

Dr. Gordon believes parents should express their own values about sex to their teen-agers. If parents believe young people should wait until they are married before becoming sexually active, they should say so. If they believe, as Dr. Gordon does, that the best form of contraception is "No!" they should say so. But they should also provide information about how pregnancy comes about and how it can be prevented.

Most teen-agers are not psychologically prepared for sexual involvement, in Dr. Gordon's opinion, but ready or not, many of them are sexually involved, and their involvement is beginning at earlier ages — 12, 13, 14 and 15. Venereal disease in that age group is up 150 per cent!

There are a number of causes for this sexual precocity. Young women begin to menstruate earlier now. One hundred years ago the average age of menarche, or onset of menstruation was 14-16; now the average age is 11-13. Young teens and pre-teens are bombarded daily with sexually loaded material from TV, films, commercials, rock music. And there is very little to offset this sexual pressure.

Whether parents are anti-abortion or pro-abortion, they rarely welcome a teen-age pregnancy. Of the 500,000 teen-age girls who decided to go through with their pregnancies last year, 50,000 were under 15. Low birth weight babies, child abuse, public assistance and more unwanted pregnancies are the grim predictions for the teenage mother, particularly if she is not encouraged to finish high school and avoid another pregnancy.

We should not be deceived by the pseudo-sophistication of today's teen-agers. Those far-out looking teens who could pass for 20 are the same ones who say: "We thought we couldn't get pregnant the first time." "We used one of mother's pills." "We thought we should use the foam after instead of before."

Perhaps you can help spread the rumor that knowledge is not harmful, that the lack of sex education that causes pregnancies. Once this rumor gets around, your community may want to cooperate with a local chapter of Planned Parenthood in starting teen talk groups. You may want to give your teenager some worthwhile but not condescending material such as the new paperback text, "You" by Sol Gordon which integrates sexual facts with information about psychology, creativity, school, alcoholism.

If you spread that rumor now, you may help the present generation to have children out of love and choice, not out of ignorance.

Hayes nabs HW crown

11 boxers advance to Miami

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI) — Eleven Texas boxers will make the trip to Miami later this month for a shot at the national Golden Gloves title and a chance for the U.S. Olympic team. And eight of them will be making the journey for the first time.

Robert Hayes won the glamour heavyweight division championship Monday night to highlight the final night of the Texas Golden Gloves tournament, which brought together the state's best amateur boxers.

Hayes, of Dallas, won an easy decision over Tyler's Larrell Brown and thus joined former champions Ronnie Shields of Beaumont, Bruce Curry of Fort Worth and Johnny Johnson of Wichita Falls in the contingent that will go to the national tournament.

Shields, defending national champion in the lightweight division, captured the light welterweight crown Monday night with a first round knockout of Jerry York of Temple. Curry won the welterweight title by knocking out Emmitt Carter of Wichita Falls in the first round; and Johnson won the middleweight division for the second straight year by decisioning Abel Escobar of Corpus Christi.

All of those boxers are given a chance at advancing to the national title as is Sammy Ayala, 16, a San Antonio high school student who won the featherweight championship.

Ayala's brother, Michael, won the national featherweight crown a year ago before turning pro and Monday night Sammy Ayala won by a second round TKO over Rodgie Smith of Tyler.

The other Texas champions included Mario Newman of Corpus Christi (light flyweight), Grayling Curry of Fort Worth (flyweight); Elvis Daws of Beaumont (bantamweight), Ladislao Vicencio of El Paso (lightweight) Morris McKinney of Dallas (light middleweight) and Robert Moore of Houston (light heavyweight).

The champions in the national tournament at Miami will win a berth in the U.S. Olympic trials to be held in Cincinnati this spring. In 1972 only one Texas boxer made the Olympic squad — Jesse Valdez of Houston.

In the team race Dallas and Beaumont (united) tied with 16 wins each and Wichita Falls was third with 15.

Harvesters ax Liberal in non-conference tilt

Pampa pounded out 12 hits to battle back from a 5-0 deficit and clip the Liberal, Kan., Redskins, 10-7, Monday afternoon at Optimist Park.

The second game was called shortly after it started because of wind and swirling dust.

Amarillo High crushed Plainview, 8-2, in another area game Monday.

The Harvesters, 5-3 for the season and winners of their last three games, fell behind, 5-0, after Liberal, now 0-1, scored two runs in the first and three in the second.

Arlo Ratzlaff walked to lead off the first, Greg Danforth singled and both were sacrificed by bunter Chris Grant. A fielder's choice, which put Tom Barrens on base, scored Ratzlaff. Danforth scored on a wild pitch.

Chris Grant knocked in two of the three second-inning runs with a single. The other scored on a fielder's choice.

Pampa's Mark Adair tripled to lead off the bottom of the second. John Agan singled in Adair.

Pampa scored four runs in the bottom of the third. Dave Edwards and Bobby Chance opened the inning with walks. Mike Knutson singled in Petty, then Adair walked to load the bases. Tommy Washington doubled to score Chance and Knutson; Adair scored on a sacrifice fly by Brian Bailey.

Liberal scored twice in the fourth for a 7-5 lead. The Harvesters retaliated with a single run in the bottom of the inning. Relief pitcher Larry Petty doubled and scored on a single by Agan.

Petty, who went five innings in relief of Mike Martin, picked up the win in his first decision of the season. Loser was Doug Shields, who went the distance.

Pampa pitchers gave up a total of three hits but walked 10 Redskins.

"Petty did a pretty good job. He threw hard. He really throws harder than anybody we have. His control was a little off but he did a good job," Pampa Coach Ronnie White said.

"We hit the ball good. We're getting closer to being a real good team, but I'm still not completely satisfied. Our hitting and defense is getting better every game, and we're giving our pitchers the required work they need."

Pampa committed only one error, compared to two for the losers.

The Harvesters meet Dumas at 10 a.m. Thursday in the first round of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Invitational Baseball Tournament at Hereford.

Letter to the Editor

Sports editor's note — Recently, The News called several people in Amarillo concerning the new Amarillo High School boundaries, which have made that school the largest in District 3-AAAA, and what effect those boundaries have had on the athletic programs of the four Amarillo High Schools in that city.

A parent of a Tascosa student wrote the following letter in regard to the situation.

Dear Mr. Sims:
Let me say, in my opinion the main problem with the athletic program in Amarillo is the way it is managed by the athletic department and the administration department. Until those in power at the athletic and administration departments are replaced with more open-minded individuals, the problems in Amarillo with athletics will exist.

My brother is a coach in the Lubbock system and, from conversations with him, Lubbock is years ahead of Amarillo in their athletic department. Another problem existing is the lack of interest in high school athletics in Amarillo by adults and students. I agree with Putt Powell on this matter. There is little or no merchant support for Amarillo High schools because the merchants will not support one school over another and, as a matter of policy, support none. I don't understand this attitude because that problem does not exist in Lubbock. All you have to do is drive through Lubbock's various sections to observe they do support the schools in their area of town. I noticed El Paso also supports the high schools in their area.

I have seen the excellent way Pampa supports its school in football and basketball. The students of Pampa High are very fortunate to have only one high school.

Tascosa's Booster Club membership was approximately 40 in 1974-75 and this year increased to approximately 120, so maybe we are turning this interest around. I hope so; however, they still do not turn out for the meetings.

Now to Tascosa's problems which are to some extent true for Caprock and Palo Duro. It is very evident in the Amarillo newspaper and in the boundary lines between Amarillo Tascosa that THE SCHOOL in Amarillo is Amarillo High. The sports department is so biased toward Amarillo High, it's just a laugh. One sports editor shouldn't even be allowed to cover anything but bowling. According to him, Tascosa beat AHS in basketball the second half of the season because Amarillo High just stood around. Tascosa's complete domination of the boards and strong defense evidently had nothing to do with Amarillo's standing around. When Tascosa played El Paso Coronado (in El Paso) a team which was one of the strongest in the state and had one of the best high school linebacks to play the game, the Amarillo sports department didn't even cover the game.

Now to the boundary problem. This boundary between Amarillo High and Tascosa divides Crockett (Junior High), put in half as (Robert) Ashworth (superintendent) stated, but in about 1/4 Tascosa, 3/4 AHS. Crockett was runner-up to Austin for city champs in football in 1972-73. Two players off that team went to Tascosa. Crockett was city champ in 1973-74 in football and four players went to Tascosa. Crockett was runner-up to Bonham Junior High in 1974-75 and approximately six players went to Tascosa. Crockett was runner-up to Bonham again this year and they will send approximately six to Tascosa. Next year, Crockett should win city in football as they have gone undefeated in the seventh and eighth grade and, as it stands right now, they will send 10 players to Tascosa.

Crockett is forced to run Amarillo High offense and defense and when these Crockett players get to Tascosa, they have to learn a new system, which Austin and Houston already have been running for three years. One thing in Tascosa's favor is these Crockett players going to Tascosa have been the better of the players at that time in the ninth-grade. The Austin team that won city in 1972-73 produced only six or so varsity players. Austin and Houston have finished in and around fourth place all these years. It's apparent that most of the Tascosa varsity team is made up of Houston players. Things do appear to be improving at Houston and Austin as far as next year and the years to come. So maybe things have a way of working out.

Lack of student interest in athletics wide-spread in southwest Amarillo; however, with the material available at AHS, it is less apparent. This lack of interest, I think, could be because of early-organized athletics in the Kids, Incorporated, program, plus the fact that it's no longer considered the in-thing to be a high school athlete. It's much more attractive to work and have money and drive new cars. If you are going to be an athlete you sure won't have any extra money and drive new cars.

Lack of parent interest also breeds lack of student interest. This works for you, to some extent, because those who stick to athletics are more dedicated than ever before.

As for the boundary, I would like to see it moved to, say, 34th to Coulter, west to Western, east to 45th, south to Canyon Expressway.

This way, Tascosa would get its fair share of Crockett. I might add, I certainly would object to it being moved nearer to Tascosa because that would make my son go to AHS and he doesn't want to, and I sure don't want him to.

Things have a way of taking care of themselves because as older families move out, younger families move in. But, it sure takes along time... I do think Tascosa's prospects are looking up as Lew Martin (assistant principal at Tascosa) told you, mainly because, although they're thin in numbers, they sure as hell are long on guts. They went through the roughest season possible last year, never laid down and quit as most teams would have, and came back at the end to win the last two games, beating AHS which is almost like having a winning season. As one of our Booster Club members stated, Tascosa is the only 3-4A team starting next season with a two-game win streak. We are proud of the Tascosa Rebels and have no desire to be Golden Sandies from THE SCHOOL. Besides, what the hell has Amarillo High done with all their material.

One thing you might not be aware of — Mr. Martin has a sophomore at AHS in athletics and Mr. (Gerald) Nipp (principal at Tascosa) has a sophomore at Caprock in athletics. I would think they sure have a lot of mixed emotions about what schools to support. I sure would.

Speaking of Caprock, they are going to be in a material problem in coming years because of this year. They no longer get River Road students and their varsity starting lineup surge had a bunch of River Road players in it... (Name and address on file)

Top seed opens Juco with win

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (UPI) — Top-ranked College of Southern Idaho started the National Junior College Basketball Tournament Monday just like it did a year ago — a little confused.

Coach Boyd Grant, whose team was the national runnerup last year, hopes the tournament ends a little bit differently. This year he would like to go home a champion.

"We weren't very smooth out there," Grant said speaking of Idaho's 71-68 win Monday over Lake Land (Ill.). "We played confused at times and I'm sure the pressure of being No. 1 had something to do with that. But last year my team played the same way in the first round and went on to get into the championship against Western Texas."

In other first round play Monday, No. 3 Mercer Community College (N.J.), beat Anderson (S.C.), 71-68; DeKalb County (Ga.) downed Johnson State (Kan.), 74-67; Allegheny (Pa.) defeated Henry Ford (Mich.), 69-59; Westchester (N.Y.) edged Arizona Western 56-55; and San Jacinto (Tex.) squeezed by McLennan (Tex.), 90-91.

An eight-point scoring burst in the final 10 minutes paced by Kim Goetz gave Southern Idaho a 58-47 lead which Lake Land could not shake. The closest the Illinois team came after that was within three points.

Mercer needed two free throws each from Tony Rubio and Joe McKeown in the final 31 seconds of play to whip Anderson.

Mercer was led by 6-10 Mike Davis with 21 points, and Anderson was paced by Karlton Hillon and Billy Reid with 22 game high points each.

Jarvis Heynolds, a 6-8 center, scored 37 points in DeKalb's 74-67 victory over Johnson County. Johnson County was led by John Revels with 22 points.

Allegheny's tight defense kept Henry Ford scoreless in the first four and a half minutes of play and never allowed the Michigan team to pose any real threat on its way. Rick Williams led Allegheny scoring with 17 points.

Charlotte whips Oregon

NEW YORK (UPI) — UNC-Charlotte, the poor boys of North Carolina basketball, brought Oregon's "Kamikaze Kids" down to earth with a loud crash Monday in the National Invitation Tournament to get a shot at hated North Carolina State.

Adopting Oregon's mugging tactics, UNC-Charlotte turned loose slender 6-foot-8 center Cedric "Cornbread" Maxwell, who scored 30 points and grabbed 14 rebounds to lead the 49ers to a 79-72 victory.

"It was just a thing of retaliation," the 185-pound Maxwell said of his second-half aggressiveness, which resulted in 22 points. "You can only knock somebody so hard for so long and they're going to start knocking back."

The victory, following a first-round victory over San Francisco, carried Charlotte into Thursday's semifinals against the Wolfpack, a 78-68 victor over Holy Cross.

In tonight's quarterfinals, Kentucky plays Kansas State and Louisville faces Providence, so the other semifinal game could be an all-Kentucky affair.

Guard Al Green scored 23 points and Kenny Carr had 21 to pace N.C. State's victory, which was the 400th of Coach Norm Sloan's career.

Pro grid draft slated

CORONADO, Calif. (UPI) — Commissioner Pete Rozelle says the National Football League expansion and college football drafts, delayed by the courts after a lawsuit filed by the league's two expansion franchises, will be completed by early next month.

Owners gathered here for week-long meetings, he said, will decide the exact dates for the player allocation draft of veteran players, going to the Seattle Seahawks and Tampa Bay Buccaneers and the regular draft of college players to all 28 NFL clubs.

"Both drafts will be held within three weeks of this meeting," Rozelle said at a news conference Monday. He said the owners will probably set the pick for top college players for one week after the two expansion franchises take their choice of unprotected veterans.

The two drafts were originally scheduled for late January and early February but owners of the two expansion clubs filed suit to block the Players Association from interfering.

Meyer wrecks Gunter in Virginia Slims meet

DALLAS (UPI) — On the books, it's an upset when unseeded Carrie Meyer knocks fourth seeded Nancy Gunter out of the Virginia Slims in the first round.

But Miss Meyer, the lanky redhead from Indianapolis, didn't look at it that way after she won the late-hour duel, 6-3 6-4, with marathon retrieving and a big serve and volley game Monday night.

"I've beaten her twice before, and I thought I would do it again," said Miss Meyer, 20, who had 14 years of youth on her side. "I just try to come to the net every chance I get. I felt confident of my serve, and I was only a little surprised that I was able to hold it so well throughout the match."

Mrs. Gunter, a veteran Sap Angelo, Tex., pro who has a powerful baseline game, ran Miss Meyer almost ragged in the late going, saved three match points and threatened to take the second set into a tiebreaker.

"I wanted to end it as soon as possible," Miss Meyer said, "because she was getting me winded and she has great passing shots."

Scientists reshape ideas on moon origin

HOUSTON (UPI) — A geologist says scientists have reshaped their ideas about the origin of the moon and its role in the evolution of the solar system because of findings from lunar rock samples returned by Apollo astronauts.

Dr. David Strangway, a geologist from the University of Toronto, proposed Monday at the Seventh Lunar Science Conference that magnetic properties in moon rocks resulted from the satellite's reaching such a high temperature that it lost historical evidence of a possible magnetic field.

Today only moon rocks offer insight to the formation of the cold satellite from clouds of dust and gas.

"These magnetic properties suggest the memory of an ancient lunar field," Strangway said. "Suppose the magnetism was due to the fact the moon was built cold in the presence of a strong magnetized field."

Fluoride flows after 23 years of debates

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Fluoride finally has started flowing into Cincinnati's drinking water.

23 years after the beginning of debates, referendums and court suits on the issue.

Lively to be speaker

Travis Lively, the 1933 Chamber of Commerce president in Pampa, will address the Chamber's membership luncheon March 29, according to Boyd Taylor, current chamber president.

But as the first sprinkles of fluoride powder were added Monday, another court suit to stop fluoride was under consideration.

The Ohio First District Court of Appeals refused a last-minute injunction against fluoridation, but the court did promise to consider an appeal by anti-fluoridationists within 30 days.

Scientists have speculated magnetic fields were generated by processes within the liquid metallic core of a planet. The moon may have a small core today but it has no magnetic field.

"Each of the planets carry a memory of what they have been," he said. "Unless they get too hot, they keep that memory."

The luncheon will honor all past presidents of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce. Taylor said. The meeting will be in the Starlight Room of the Coronado Inn and the buffet line will open at 11:45 a.m.

The anti-fluoridationists contend fluoridated water can lead to cancer, while pro-fluoridationists dispute the contention, saying fluoride will help prevent tooth decay.

Good refuses to give defense

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Charles Manson cultist Sandra Good, refusing to present a defense in her death threat trial, says she wants to spend the rest of her life in prison with her former roommate, would-be presidential assassin Lynette Fromme.

Miss Good also was charged with making threats in telephone calls to a newspaper and three radio stations.

She faced a maximum of 25 years in prison and Miss Murphy five years.

"I don't want to put on a defense until the (Manson) family gets a defense," she told U.S. District Judge Thomas MacBride. "I wish to proceed directly to prison... I want to be with Lynn."

"I wish you could give me life in prison," she added.

Miss Good's refusal to present a defense was made Monday outside the jury's presence. Closing arguments and instructions for the seven-woman, five-man panel were expected today.

MacBride asked Miss Good, "Do you wish to put on a defense?"

"Not until Manson gets a courtroom," she replied.

"Well, he won't get this courtroom," MacBride said.

After Miss Murphy joined Miss Good in declaring she also would not attempt to counter the prosecution charges, MacBride said: "The evidence in this case is closed."

Earlier, Miss Fromme, who spent three weeks in a jail cell with Miss Good waiting to be the first defense witness in the case, surprised the court by announcing she would not testify.

After a confrontation with MacBride, who sentenced her to life in prison for attempting to assassinate President Ford, Miss Fromme was ordered back to federal prison.

Tables turned on Barnes

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Former Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes says he will return two state-owned tables he found in his Brownwood warehouse.

broken.

"I assume they were removed from apt. because of breakage — They are very flimsy packed in box as they were," Mrs. Barnes says in her letter to Hobby.

Two tables are among $792 worth of state-owned furnishings reported missing from the lieutenant governor's apartment in the state Capitol after Barnes left office in 1973.

Both tables were written off as missing in December, 1973.

Senate inventory supervisor Don Jones said numerous items disappear from the Capitol each year and are routinely removed from property inventories when they are not found within a year or two.

The March, 1973, inventory of the apartment showed 17 items — including two dining chairs, a serving table, small executive desk and a brass compote — had disappeared since 1971. Another 30 items were listed separately with notations that records were unclear as to when those furnishings were last seen in the apartment.

Mrs. Barnes complained she and her husband should have been notified at the time that some items were missing from the apartment.

When Hobby sent her the list, Mrs. Barnes said she searched the Brownwood warehouse where some of the family's personal items were moved from the Capitol looking for missing items.

The tables Barnes says he now has were refinished and sent back to the apartment about nine months before the inventory recorded them missing.

Nancy Barnes wrote Hobby the legs of both tables are Besides the two tables she found an old Senate photo panel of the members of the 38th Texas Legislature.

She said movers were given a typed inventory of the items in each of the rooms where Barnes had personal property in the Capitol and told not to remove any state-owned items.

"I can assure you every effort was made to check carefully," she said. "It does seem that this loss inventory should have been called to our attention since it is dated March, 1973 — which is several months after you moved in but it has now been almost three years."

Mrs. Barnes said she and her husband will be glad to return the two damaged tables, photo panel, and another marble topped coffee table she found in the warehouse as soon as Senate officials tell them where to send the items.

TMA says malpractice suits make doctors more cautious

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The Texas Medical Association says malpractice suits are forcing doctors to be more cautious, and the cost of that caution is being borne by the patients.

— In comparison with 1968 the reported number of suits and claims filed in 1974 increased 613 per cent.

— The frequency of suits increased more than tenfold from 33 suits for each 100,000 people in 1960 to 3.61 in 1974.

The TMA said Monday four times as many malpractice suits are being filed now as in 1971. The organizational also said the suits sought more than five times the amount of damages that were being sought five years ago.

— Suits and claims seeking $1 million or more have increased so dramatically, that 72 per cent of all the damages ever demanded in Texas for medical malpractice have been filed since 1972.

"The problem has literally exploded during the last four years," said TMA president Dr. N.L. Barker, of Paris, Tex. "Trends have been established that must be stopped and reversed if medical care as we know it is to be continued."

Officers talk to students

Pampa police officers Johnnie Fontenot and Sue Matthew spoke to kindergartners and second graders at Horace Mann Elementary School Tuesday.

Barker said to avoid malpractice suits, doctors were ordering more costly tests and X-rays before treating patients. He also said doctors were becoming more reluctant to ask nurses to take responsibility of patient care.

Second graders heard a talk on safety, with emphasis on bicycle safety and the kindergartners received a safety talk and warnings on being aware of strangers.

He said the result was higher medical fees, more crowded waiting rooms and curtailed care to Medicaid and Medicare patients.

More than one-fourth of the doctors in Texas face possible loss of insurance coverage within the next six months, TMA lobbyist Ace Pickens said. Pickens said insurance companies that now sell policies to 27 per cent of the physicians in the state are not renewing coverage.

BOSTON (UPI) — Police said they found Joseph Mahoney, 43, stuck in mud up to his chin Monday night under the Broadway Bridge in South Boston.

Police said Mahoney apparently jumped off the bridge when the tide in the Fort Point Channel was low.

Suffering from exposure, Mahoney was admitted to Boston City Hospital. He was placed on the danger list.

Uncle promotes sterilization

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government is selling pamphlets to promote sterilization by describing increased sexual pleasure that may result.

Pamphlets being sold to the public for 30 cents each tell women they may achieve "greater sexual pleasure" after sterilization surgery, and similar pamphlets tell men vasectomies may result in "greater sexual desire."

The pamphlets were produced by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and are sold through the Government Printing office or distributed through HEW family planning and subsidized health programs.

HEW's top family planning official, Dr. Louis Hellman, said the descriptions of greater sexual pleasure or desire are valid because many sterilized patients "are no longer afraid" of resulting pregnancies and thus "it's like a second honeymoon."
