

Hightower: 'Scandal may leave Congress stronger'

Pampa's Washington Bureau

When Rep. Jack Hightower finishes a day's work in his office in the nation's capital, he drives his 1965 Buick about 10 miles to a one-room efficiency apartment in Falls Church, Va.

It isn't a glamorous lifestyle, but then, "I'm not up here to try to impress anyone," the Congressman said today in a telephone interview with the Pampa News. "I'm here to represent the people of my district to the best of my ability."

Of his old auto, Hightower said, "I brought it up here last year. It's a perfectly good car and I intend to drive it as long as the wheels will roll."

Hightower is not a high roller and he is an outsider when it comes to the current rash of sex scandals. He said the situation in Washington now reminds him of the Watergate period.

"I get up every morning wondering what I'll see in the paper. It's horrible," he said, "but it's certainly bound to have a cleansing effect. It should leave the Congress much stronger."

Asked for his opinion of the role the press plays in revealing the accounts, Hightower replied, "When a person is in a position of public responsibility and trust he is living in a goldfish bowl and should expect to adhere to higher standards of ethics. The news media has the responsibility of reporting any deviation from that."

Hightower, a Baptist and a teetotaler, said that if he was up to hanky-panky—even if it didn't interfere with his work—the voters back home would have a right to know.

"I'm a fulltime Congressman and I'm always on the job," he said. "A Congressman's behavior, whether public or private, should be subject to examination."

That opinion is not shared by many of Hightower's House colleagues. Most lawmakers and even most members of the Press Corps in Washington ascribe to the theory that a politician's private affairs should become public knowledge only when they interfere with his duties as a public official or when public funds are involved.

The two most recent cases involve the misuse of public funds. Both Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, and Rep. John Young, D-Texas, have been accused by former female staff members of either having them on their payrolls solely for sex, or paying high salaries for sexual favors.

Meanwhile, in a separate development, Rep. Allan T. Howe, D-Utah, was arrested by Salt Lake City police who said they caught Howe propositioning a pair of policewomen posing as prostitutes.

Hightower said that the Young and Howe incidents, especially, "came as a real shock." He said that he had never had any cause to suspect that such behavior was a part of the characters of the men.

Speaking of the former staff members who revealed their sexual roles—Colleen Gardner and Elizabeth Ray—Hightower said, "I think we ought to make a point. A lot of staff people are incensed at the activities of these two former staff people."

He said that because many secretaries are paid much higher salaries in Washington, D.C. than they could earn in their home districts, they are "afraid people will get the wrong idea."

Hightower said that because of the much higher cost of living, "We have to pay more than we would in the district for secretarial help."

He emphasized that "most of the people I have had the pleasure of getting acquainted with, both staff people and congressmen, are fine, dedicated, hard-working people."

But he added, "There is always the perpetual sophomore who causes trouble."

Hightower doesn't feel that the scandal stories will have any adverse effect on the House. "We ought to weed out the bad apples," he said—but the scandals could cause damage.

"If we have so many scandals and the people lose confidence in their own ability to elect good men, the system of government suffers," he said.

Hightower returns to the Panhandle almost every weekend. His wife has visited him in Washington—and the little Falls Church apartment—only three times.

"I thoroughly enjoy my job and my responsibility," he said. "But I live at home. I just stay here during the time Congress is in session."

FBI warns of letter bombs

By Associated Press
FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley warns that businesses and individuals should be on the alert for letter bombs similar to a series of bombs already received in five U.S. cities by seven corporations and a business executive.

Kelley said Monday night that the FBI was conducting an active investigation into the mailed explosives.

The FBI said the letter bombs were contained in manila envelopes 9 by 12 inches or 10 by 13 inches, three-quarters of an inch thick, bearing typed addresses on sticker-type labels and postmarked from Atlanta, Tex. and Texarkana, Tex.

Extreme caution should be taken in the event letters of this description are received and the FBI or local police should be notified at once, Kelley said.

An FBI spokesman declined to comment on possible motives behind the series of mailed bombs. Four women were injured slightly when one of the bombs exploded Monday, but bomb squads deactivated the other devices.

The letter bomb which went off was opened in New York City by an employe at Merrill Lynch Inc., parent company of the stock brokerage firm, police said.

Letter bombs also were sent to the New York office of the Bunge Corp., an international grain dealer, and to a Bunge executive, Roger Noall, at his Manhattan apartment.

Other bombs were delivered to the DuPont Co. in Wilmington, Del.; the Exxon Building in New York City; McDonald's Systems in Oak Brook, Ill., a Chicago suburb; and Beatrice Foods Co. in Chicago, while a small package containing a bomb went to Marathon Oil Co. in Findlay, Ohio.

A letter bomb turned up at the home of a Chicago resident Monday night—the third to arrive in the area in 24 hours. It was dismantled successfully by police.

Earlier Monday, a secretary at McDonald's Systems, Inc., in suburban Oak Brook may narrowly have escaped with her life, police said, as she attempted to open a letter containing a bomb.

Authorities said letter bombs received at McDonald's and at Beatrice Foods Co. in Chicago also were disarmed. The devices reportedly resembled others received Monday by various corporations nationwide.

The third letter bomb turned up at the home of Roger Pech of Chicago, authorities said. That letter was addressed to Dr. Leroy Pesch, formerly president of Michael Reese Hospital, who had lived there previously. It was dismantled without incident.

In Chicago, a McDonald's spokesman said agents of the Treasury Department's Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Bureau disarmed the device. Chicago police disarmed the bomb mailed to Beatrice Foods.

Oak Brook Police Chief Albert Seren said the McDonald's letter was mailed to F. Taylor, company president. Seren said the device came in a 9-by-12-inch manila envelope at 11 a.m.

The Pech letter bomb also came in a 9-by-12 manila envelope, authorities said.

A police spokesman said authorities were trying to link the Pech envelope to the earlier bombing attempts.

City locations bore a similar postmark.

Geurra said the bomb was the kind that "can really hurt somebody."

Mary McShane, Taylor's secretary, cut the end of the envelope with a letter opener, but had trouble removing the contents.

Seren said the envelope held a blasting cap, a nine-volt battery and some white powder set to explode when the envelope was opened.

Reception for the Longs

A bicentennial commemorative plate was among the many gifts and best wishes given to Dr. and Mrs. Dan Long and daughter, Dana, at a reception in the M.K. Brown lobby Monday morning, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, the school board and the school administration staff. Long, superintendent of schools in Pampa for two years, is leaving next week to be superintendent of the Carrollton-Farmer's Branch schools. The administrative staff presented the plate and a set of bicentennial coins to the Longs, while the chamber gave roses to Mrs. Long and a bicentennial almanac to Dr. Long. The school board presented the outgoing superintendent a plaque at their last regular meeting. The Carver Center staff and school business office gave a farewell reception to Dr. Long and presented gifts last Friday afternoon.

Court considers raises

The Gray County Commissioners Court today approved pay raises for seven executive employes of the county hospital.

Six Highland General Hospital employes received $50 monthly increases. They included Krishnadas Thakrar, Horace Williams, Emily Scott, Mark Jones, Mary L. Williams and Charles Tanner.

Grade raises—hourly hikes—were approved by the court for six hospital employes.

Meeting with the commissioners were Susie Wilkinson, hospital board member; Robert Monogue, administrator; and Horace Williams, administrative assistant.

In other action the court approved the May welfare report of $1,537.38 for 33 families. County Judge Don Cain noted the amount was a considerable reduction from the April report, which was an estimated $3,000.

W.C. Gillis of Phillips Petroleum Company, discussed estimates of relocation of Phillips Pipeline for construction of the McClellan Creek Watershed Project. The cost estimate was $16,963 to be paid by the County. The court took no action and will discuss the matter at the July 1 meeting.

The court approved a seven per cent salary retirement plan for county and hospital employes for the Texas District and County Retirement System. Employes now pay five per cent in retirement. The two per cent increase will cost the hospital $30,000 and the county $8,000, according to estimates.

Susie Wilkinson, board member, said she noticed that the expenses for May included more than $1,100 for employe attendance at conventions.

She said total convention costs for the year now exceed $3,400.

Soft water for hospital tabled

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

Convention expenses and installation of a soft water system at Highland General Hospital were among the issues questioned during a board of managers meeting Monday night.

The meeting was held in the conference room of the hospital. Financial operations of Highland General and McLean General Hospitals were reviewed.

Susie Wilkinson, board member, said she noticed that the expenses for May included more than $1,100 for employe attendance at conventions.

She said total convention costs for the year now exceed $3,400.

"I think the board should be more aware of who goes," she said. "In the future perhaps a month or so prior to a convention, it should be brought before the board. We approve expenses of much lesser amounts."

Robert Monogue, administrator, said convention attendance has been "strictly an administrative business."

He added that the sessions are generally for administrative personnel.

Fred Neslage, board chairman, said due to accreditation requirements he saw no way to get around it.

Monogue noted that the accreditation review had mentioned a "deficiency" in convention and seminar attendance.

"We try to weigh the benefits as how it will benefit the hospital and patient care," he said. "I get 20 to 30 flyers per month and they are all good programs."

Neslage requested that Monogue report to the board as the seminars or conventions are announced.

Mrs. Wilkinson asked about the programs offered by the Panhandle Hospital Division of the Texas Hospital Association which includes hospitals from a 26-county area in the Panhandle.

Monogue said the division is a "small" organization which usually meets monthly in Amarillo.

Don Ritter, board member, asked why the hospital shows no cash discounts on its expense list.

Monogue said most companies had eliminated the discounts and added that on the 30-day basis "we never know when the county is going to pay the bills."

Installation of a soft water system throughout the hospital, designed to preserve the plumbing, was tabled for further study after Dr. C.F. Sparger, chief of staff, expressed concern for some patients. He said the sodium content in the soft water causes swelling of feet and ankles in some persons.

Dr. R.M. Bellamy, board member, said out of 100 patients probably only six or eight would have a problem with sodium intake.

"I have a (water softening) system in my home, but I don't drink the water," he added.

The board approved a recommendation from Miss Vermell Meador, director of nursing service, to award a scholarship to a Pampa nursing student.

Miss Meador said the money does not come from hospital funds. It originally was awarded to a student by the Pampa-Gray Foundation (which no longer has funds). However, the student failed to fulfill requirements to return to Highland General Hospital to work for a year. She chose to accept a position with the Veterans Administration Hospital in Amarillo and repay the loan with 20 per cent interest.

The hospital, therefore, has access to $3,102 for scholarship purposes.

In other business, Mrs. Wilkinson asked for a report on improvements in patient rooms. Monogue responded instead with a lengthy detailed report on capital improvements to the hospital over the past three years.

In presenting the financial report, Monogue said the May patient census shows a summer slump. Highland General operations during May showed a net gain of $54.50.

"That's as close to breaking even as we could come," he added.

Neslage said inflation is "really eating at us—every hospital is faced with increased costs."

The patients in McLean dropped to 157—during May—but the number is still higher than last May when only 131 patient days were recorded.

The annual loss this year now stands at $1,676.79—far less than the losses for the first five months last year which totaled $15,955.56.

Oil companies face divestiture

By BILL CHOYKE
Pampa News
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON—At the height of last summer's oil pricing debate in the House, a representative of the American Petroleum Institute (API), the industry's trade association, downplayed the lobbying and hullabaloo.

"This is nothing, she observed. "Wait until divestiture. That's what the oil companies are worried about."

Now about 10 months later, the Senate Judiciary Committee is center stage for the fight over divestiture—the break-up of the major oil companies. The judiciary panel is scheduled to vote soon on a proposal that would force the 16 major oil producers over a period of five years to relinquish control of every other phase of the oil industry.

Proponents of divestiture—mostly liberals who have supported continued price controls on oil and gas—believe that congressional action is needed to make the sale of crude oil more competitive. Opponents of the proposal—including most if not all of the Texas congressional delegation—retort that divestiture will not only fail to achieve that purpose, but also lead to both increased dependence on foreign oil and higher prices at the gas pump.

The Senate bill would force the 16 major oil producers to choose between crude production or refining and marketing operations. It also prohibits pipeline ownership by any producer or refiner although it would allow existing refining-marketing operations to remain intact. The legislation would also ban any major refiner from operating a retail service station that it did not operate before this year.

The legislation, which was endorsed by the Senate Judiciary anti-trust subcommittee, a one-vote margin, also would establish a temporary petroleum divestiture court to handle any lawsuits filed under the law.

"There is not genuine free enterprise and competition in the oil industry," says Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., a proponent of the bill. "There are 15 to 20 of major, vertically integrated, petroleum companies in this country that control anywhere from 75 to 80 per cent of the market."

Hart's contention is challenged by the industry and by congressional opponents of the Senate bill. The API, which has budgeted $1 million to fight divestiture, maintains that vertical integration—the ownership of various levels in an industry—is not unique to the petroleum field.

"It is, in fact, commonplace in American business and industry," the API says in one of its slick-looking booklets on the subject.

To date, the API influence has been weighty. At least one senator on the Judiciary panel is known to have changed his position after listening to API's "facts." The API has widely circulated its material, including 50,000 copies of an informational brochure titled "Dismembering the Oil Companies."

API's chief consumer counterpart, the Energy Action Committee, has not been as successful. A new lobby formed late last year, Energy Action's total budget is $600,000. Less than half has been devoted to divestiture, said a spokeswoman.

"I really do think the petroleum industry has done the best job," said one anti-trust subcommittee aide. "Mainly just because they've put one effort of a lot of money in the effort. They've done the best job getting their side of the story across."

Opponents of divestiture contend that the bill is being pushed mainly for political reasons. They say liberal Democrats are playing to the emotions of the public, which has been led to believe that the big oil companies are mainly responsible for higher gasoline and home oil-heating prices.

One of the bill's chief sponsors, for example, is Indiana Sen. Birch Bayh, a former Democratic Presidential candidate. That prompted one Texas congressman, a friend of the oil industry, to term the cry for divestiture "campaign rhetoric."

Even Texas Rep. Robert Eckhardt, who has opposed the oil and gas industry on price matters, opposes congressional plans to break-up the oil companies.

Divestiture is not appropriate as a legislative process," said the Houston Democrat, one of the recognized constitutional scholars in the House. "Congress does not have the technical expertise to decide that all of the different entities in the oil business should operate in only one area of the industry."

"The moving force behind the congressional divestiture proposals are based on political considerations and not on a technical analysis of the industry," added Eckhardt, chairman of the Democratic Study Group, a House research organization.

Underlining the entire debate on divestiture are a number of questions that appear unanswerable at this time. Opponents of the bill maintain that the break-up would bring chaos to the industry and capital markets. Walter Measday, chief economist for the anti-trust subcommittee, replies that the new companies that will be formed from the break-up will also be large firms with enough debt coverage and capacity to undertake financing.

The State Department has also warned that divestiture would bring havoc to world trade markets. In testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee earlier this month, Julius Katz, deputy assistant secretary of State, warned that forcing U.S. companies to get rid of their foreign assets would create new opportunities for non-U.S. based firms to acquire the divested holdings.

This would further diminish United States control over essential energy delivery systems and would place current energy imports requirements under even greater foreign influence, Katz predicted.

Democrats hope to clear the bill through the House and Senate this year, even though President Ford has said he would veto it. One aide theorized it could become a political issue this fall and give Democrats a head start on a new bill next year, when a sympathetic Democratic president may sit in the White House.

Dishonor not restricted to cadets

By Don Oakley

In the worst scandal in 25 years, and possibly the worst ever, some 94 third-year cadets at West Point have been charged with cheating on a test or not reporting cheating they were aware of, in violation of the academy's simple and inflexible code of conduct which says that, "A cadet will not lie, cheat or steal, or tolerate those who do."

In 1951, 90 cadets were expelled from the Point for cheating, including 43 members of the varsity football squad. Unlike that scandal, however, which rocked the nation as well as West Point, this time both the academy and its honor code have come under fire.

Some of the criticism may be self-serving, as in claims by some of the involved cadets that violations of the 159-year-old code are far more commonplace than academy officials will admit. One cadet has filed suit in U.S. District Court in New York challenging the code as unconstitutional.

A lawyer representing the cadets has accused West Point of hypocrisy in administering the honor system. "If they wanted to, they could have one of these scandals every year," says Capt. Daniel Sharpborn.

West Point will survive this scandal, of course, as it did the one in 1951, and one hopes it will be the better for it. But the major trouble with the honor code, which has not been commented upon, is that too often it seems to be shuffled off, along with the cadet uniform, when West Point graduates enter the regular Army.

Were those cadets who were expelled in 1951 less fit to serve their country than those officers who, a decade and a half later in Vietnam, reportedly put in for combat medals they did not earn? Less honest than officers in the Pentagon who develop cozy relationships with the defense contractors? Less honorable than those officers who participated in the alleged My Lai cover-up?

The objective of the West Point honor code has been described as "fearless honesty in setting forth the truth regardless of the consequences. Quibbling, cheating, evasive statements or recourse to technicalities to conceal guilt or defeat the ends of justice are not tolerated."

If so, the code was never more flagrantly violated than in the My Lai affair, where one lowly lieutenant was singled out for all the blame.

To mean anything, the West Point honor code should apply throughout an officer's career, not just during his cadet days. We would more harshly judge those 94 cadets if we could believe that it always does.

Ah, poor ozone

Ah, the poor ozone layer. First it was manmade fluorocarbons which were breaking down the protective shield in the upper atmosphere that blocks harmful radiation from the sun. (Or which aren't breaking it down, depending upon what scientific report you've read most recently.)

Now another threat to the ozone has been discerned in the form of carbon tetrachloride, the familiar dry-cleaning compound, which is also used in fire extinguishers and for many other purposes. Like the fluorocarbons, carbon tetrachloride can trigger a chemical chain reaction which breaks apart ozone molecules.

According to Dr. Aubrey P. Altschuler of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, increasing amounts of carbon tetrachloride have been measured in the atmosphere, but the mystery is that there has not been enough of the chemical produced and used worldwide to account for it all. Thus, he believes, there must be a large natural source — still unknown — of carbon tetrachloride.

"It appears urgent," says the chemist, that we find out where this extra carbon tetrachloride is coming from. Pardon us, but we think we'll pass on this crisis. Our sense of urgency is showing signs of depletion worse than that of the much-abused ozone layer.

Efforts to feed the world's ballooning population are being stymied by inefficient uses of food, according to a Conference Board study. A major problem is that a large proportion of the world's food is eaten by animals. Domesticated animals consume almost five times more food than humans. It takes eight pounds of corn to produce one pound of beef. Large quantities of food are also lost through spoilage, processing and distributing.

Valuable background on the

CONSERVATIVE ADVOCATE

Sen. Buckley steps up to bat

By WILLIAM RUSHER

WASHINGTON — At 53, looking tanned, relaxed and almost unfairly handsome, United States Senator James Lane Buckley of New York is preparing to defend the seat he first won in a stunning upset in 1970. On June 12th, as predictably as sunrise, the Conservative party of New York will give him once again the nomination that led on to a victory six years ago. In the Republican primary to be held on September 14th, Buckley is the odds-on favorite to brush aside the challenge of liberal Republican Congressman Peter Peyser. (Peyser's real aim, many suspect, is to position himself favorably for the 1978 race to succeed aging Senator Jacob Javits, who is widely expected to retire.) Then Buckley will confront the winner of the Democratic primary in the final battle on November 2.

Six years ago it was a three-way race, with the incumbent (and frantically liberal) Charles Goodell the Republican nominee to retain the seat to which Governor Rockefeller had appointed him, and Congressman Richard Ottinger his Democratic challenger. Buckley, who until then had never held public office, was appalled at the choice thus being offered New York voters, and therefore ran for the Senate as the nominee of New York's young but determined Conservative party. When the smoke blew away on election night it was — to the astonishment of many seasoned politicians and political observers — Buckley who had garnered the largest number of votes and thereby won a six-year term in the U.S. Senate.

As noted, Buckley will almost certainly be running on two lines this time: Conservative and Republican. So, however, will his Democratic rival, who usually is routinely endorsed by the New York Liberal party (the state's fourth, and smallest, legal party). And since politics is a chancy game in which the only sure losers are those who don't run, Manhattan's canyons and the green Hudson and Mohawk valleys are all currently swarming with candidates for the Democratic senatorial nomination. Of these, the most visible (and, Lord knows, most audible) is Bella Abzug, the squat, colorful Congresswoman from New York City's Upper West Side who abandoned a safe seat in the House to toss her famous wide-brimmed trademark into the senatorial ring. Abzug, whom an unkind but imaginative critic once described as looking "like Jacob Javits in drag," may, just like her House Colleague Peyser, really have her eye on the Javits seat coming up in two years; but she clearly figures she has nothing to lose by taking two shots at the basket. If she wins the Democratic nomination this September and Buckley beats her, she won't fade away in two years. (No such luck!)

Meanwhile, as he awaits the Democratic choice of his ultimate challenger, James Buckley is eager to run on the record he has built in these past six years. Does he think he can make the voters understand that record, in the teeth of all the distortions and outright misrepresentations that are inevitable in politics?

"That's the test of this campaign," he replies. "I resist the shell game that money given by the federal government to New York doesn't cost New Yorkers anything. The only thing that will truly help New Yorkers is the sort of economic stability that will bring jobs to our state. So-called special-interest legislation will only hurt us in the long run."

What is the most important thing Buckley has learned since becoming a senator?

"The fact that we have so overloaded the Congress that it is impossible to get thoughtful policy from it."

And his solution to that problem?

"To rediscover the principle of federalism — which is to say, ascertain what only the national government can handle, and then restore to the states full authority to deal with all other areas."

It's hard to put that kind of talk to music, but quite a lot of people are betting that it will seem a sort of music itself this year, to the overtaxed, overregimented voters of New York.

ECONOMIC APPEASEMENT

Kissinger's 'resources bank'

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's proposal at Nairobi, Kenya, for a multi-billion dollar "resources bank" is almost as shocking as his recent speech at Lusaka, Zambia, in which he urged aid for revolutionary countries in Africa.

When he addressed the fourth United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, Dr. Kissinger engaged in profoundly disturbing appeasement of the Third World countries which want to share America's wealth.

The resources bank, which would finance production of raw materials in Third World countries, would depend on U.S. financial contributions. Moreover, it would lead directly to international price fixing for commodities. It would result in the creation of raw material cartels similar to the international oil cartel which has imposed such terrible strains on the American economy.

Dr. Kissinger has lent his influence to those who insist on capital transfers to Third World countries and who call for international price-fixing of commodities. This Kissinger effort is contrary to the interests of American taxpayers and consumers. It is in the interest of the United States that the marketplace govern prices.

Furthermore, U.S. officials should urge Third World countries to rely on private investment and other operations of the capitalist system, not on foreign aid and nationalization of properties owned by transnational corporations. The only way the Third World countries can solve their problems is by applying free market methods.

Valuable background on the same time, they call for increased U.S. foreign aid, and project plans for seizure of the property of foreign investors. Dr. Kissinger apparently gives his blessing to such a change in the world order. He would extend foreign aid to hostile countries such as the Peoples Republic of Mozambique, and give away American technology to Third World nations — even as they hiked prices and nationalized properties owned by Americans. As Mr. Feulner says in his study, the call of the Third World countries for "self-determination" is actually a disguised claim not for control over one's own resources and wealth, but for control and possession of the wealth of other nations and their citizens.

Clearly, it is very important that Congress indicate that the Kissinger compromises to the Third World countries are wholly unacceptable and don't reflect the views of the United States. American consumers want relief from high commodity costs, not institutionalization of new international cartels.

The economic appeasement conceived by Dr. Kissinger is as harmful as the political and military appeasement he favors on other fronts.

Color

Color, an electromagnetic wave phenomenon, is a sensation produced through the excitation of the retina of the eye by rays of light. The colors of the spectrum may be produced by viewing a light beam refracted by passage through a prism, which breaks the light into its wave lengths. Customarily the six primary colors of the spectrum are thought of as red, orange, yellow, green, blue and violet.

Military women

Women are now eligible for 93 per cent of all military job classifications and the combined services plan on having 88,000 women in uniform by 1977. The largest representation is in the women's Army Corps with, at the end of 1975, 1,466 officers and 35,656 enlisted women. The Coast Guard had the fewest women, 32 officers and 420 enlisted women.

Another triumph for Detente and the USSR

By ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON, June 15 — Chalk up another resounding triumph for detente — in the Russian manner!

The Kremlin is in the process of selling around $1 billion in major weapons to Jordan — MIG-21 fighter bombers, a high air defense system, tanks, anti-tank missiles, long-range fieldguns, and a big arsenal of small arms of various kinds.

King Hussein is going to Moscow next week to conclude this landmark deal.

Meanwhile Jordan, long-time beneficiary of large-scale U.S. aid ($1.5 billion in the past 20 years), is slated for another hefty handout.

Congress, at the administration's vigorous behest, has voted $170 million in military aid and $155 million in so-called "security support funds" for Jordan. These allocations are included in the $6.7 billion foreign aid authorization bill enacted by Congress last week.

A considerable portion of the "security support funds" is for balancing Jordan's budget.

In ironic contrast, the U.S. budget will wind up some $70 billion in the red.

Pandora's Box

This is just one of the mindless contradictions in the stupendous foreign aid program.

Under stern administration spurring, Congress cut off educational funds for Vietnam veterans — leaving thousands of them stranded without means of finishing schooling. Similarly, the administration is strenuously pressing Congress to sharply limit cost-of-living increases to millions of civilian and military retirees.

Thus, while unceasingly urging such budgetary crackdowns at home in the name of "fiscal responsibility," hundreds of millions of dollars are being dished out to countries openly allied with or playing footsie with Russia and other enemies of the U.S.

A graphic instance is Secretary Kissinger's "new African policy" — the first installment of which is costing U.S. taxpayers $85 million.

That's one of the prize contradictions in the $6.7 billion foreign aid bill.

It is particularly noteworthy because it squarely breaches the ceilings of President Ford's budget and Congress' budget — both righteously proclaimed as sanctified and untouchable, until Kissinger blandly disregarded them.

Sen. James Allen, D-Ala., determinedly sought to block this $85 million giveaway. He waged a good fight, but to no avail. Spearheading the administration's steamroller was the Democrats' top undeclared — yet presidential candidate — the ineffable Sen. Hubert Humphrey.

An inveterate internationalist, United Nations champion and foreign aid zealot, the voluble Minnesotan ardently defended Kissinger's $85 million African largesse — of which $12.5 million admittedly is earmarked for Mozambique, publicly branded as one of the most savage police states in the world.

Observed Allen bitterly: "The very people who support this $85 million for the African countries that joined in the conflict against Rhodesia are the same people who opposed aid to Communist factions in Angola."

Foremost among "these people" was Humphrey, once, as Vice President, a staunch Vietnam supporter, now an ardent dove.

Hubie's Choice

The odds on Humphrey becoming President are long — untiringly as he yearns for it.

Sixty-eight and with a dormant cancer, he is not exactly a gleaming prospect — sundry polls notwithstanding. But should he somehow miraculously finagle it, the Minnesotan already has one key cabinet choice in mind.

It is former Sen. J. William Fulbright for Secretary of State.

The haughty and erudite Arkansan (Rhodes Scholar and one-time head of Arkansas University) is highly regarded by Humphrey. As colleagues on the Foreign Relations Committee, which Fulbright headed for many years, they worked closely together on major policies and issues.

They particularly saw eye to eye on supporting the United Nations and favoring large-scale aid for "developing countries," although most of them are critical of the U.S.

Now a high-paid "consultant" to a big Washington law firm with foreign clients, Fulbright is in frequent touch with Humphrey — and Secretary Kissinger.

Throughout Fulbright's Senate incumbency, he and the controversial Secretary of State were on warm terms. It would be a curious turn of events indeed, if by some quirk of fate Fulbright should succeed Kissinger as Secretary of State.

Intimates of Humphrey say that would be very likely if he became President.

How It Happened

Real reason King Hussein is turning to the Soviet for a costly air defense system and other armaments is an angry row with oil-rich Saudi Arabia.

The Jordanian ruler is publicly blaming the U.S. for his seeking Russian weapons: claiming an inordinate hike in price for 14 batteries of HAWK ground-to-air missiles and eight batteries of VULCAN anti-aircraft guns forced him into Soviet arms.

That's self-justifying claptrap. What actually happened was:

The air defense system Hussein proposed to the U.S. was priced by the Pentagon at $350 million. That figure was agreeable to Saudi Arabia, which had promised to finance an air defense system for Jordan. But Hussein, under pressure of his military, extensively expanded his initial procurement proposals. To it were added a costly array of other weapons, including tanks, fieldguns, ground-to-ground missiles and other combat hardware.

Judge in Hearst trial dies

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The death of Oliver J. Carter, the federal judge who presided over the Patricia Hearst bank robbery trial with homespun wit, has left final sentencing of the newspaper heiress in limbo.

Carter, 65, collapsed Monday and died a short time later, apparently of a heart attack.

He had tentatively sentenced Miss Hearst, convicted of armed bank robbery on March 20, to a maximum 35 years in prison. But he ordered at least 90 days of psychiatric evaluation for her before imposing final punishment.

A three-judge federal panel must choose a new jurist to handle Miss Hearst's case. She is now in San Diego for the testing Carter ordered.

Speculation centered on U.S. District Judge Alfonso Zirpoli, who handled a pretrial matter in January while Carter was hospitalized for minor surgery.

Zirpoli is the only judge other than Carter who has been involved in the case. He would still need time to familiarize himself with the eight-week trial record.

U.S. Atty. James L. Browning Jr., who successfully prosecuted Miss Hearst with the argument that she willingly joined the terrorists who had kidnapped her, said "no new trial will be necessary."

Chief defense counsel F. Lee Bailey, in Albuquerque, N.M., on another case, said he would not seek a new trial because of Carter's death. "We will await the new judge's decision regarding sentencing," he said.

Bailey is expected to urge the new judge, as he did Carter, to convert Miss Hearst's sentence to time served and release her on probation.

Miss Hearst, 22, was found guilty of joining her terrorist captors in an April 1974 bank robbery. She had been kidnapped two months earlier and testified at her trial that she was coerced by threat of death to help rob the bank.

When she was arrested on Sept. 18, 1975, Carter immediately revoked her bail and later declared the guilty verdict well within the evidence.

Carter practiced law in his hometown of Redding in Northern California in the 1930s and represented the area as a state senator in the 1940s. As California Democratic party chairman in 1948, he fashioned President Harry Truman's upset victory in the state, and Truman appointed him to the federal bench in 1950.

He capped his quarter-century on the bench with the Hearst case, the hallmark of his judicial career. After the trial, he turned 65, moved to "senior" status and cut his workload in half.

He is survived by his widow, his mother and a daughter. Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

In slang, an egg is called "hen fruit."

personal or political wounds left. But he noted it would be a "fatal mistake" to be overconfident about the November election.

Carter also said he had several hundred thousand dollars in debts but "I think I will wind up the campaign year without being in debt."

Gov. Hugh Carey, New York City Mayor Abraham Beame, former Gov. Averell Harriman, former mayor Robert Wagner Jr. and other local leaders held a news conference calling upon other Democrats to support Carter. Only 33 delegates are legally committed to support Carter in New York.

Marcella Hudson's collection of rub boards — ranging from pewter tin to glass — will be only one of a myriad of antique displays at the Gray County Heritage Fair July 3 and 4 in M.K. Brown Auditorium. The fair, chaired by Pat Rich, is part of the county bicentennial committee's Celebrate America weekend. Mrs. Hudson has been collecting rub boards for 20 years and she said that her boards are as old as 200 years. Rub boards were patented 140 years ago in the United States, she said. Those wishing to exhibit in the free fair are asked to contact Mrs. Rich at 1103 Kiowa or the White Deer Land Museum. The fair will be 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, July 3, and 1 to 4 p.m. July 4.

Carter favors deregulation of natural gas prices

DALLAS (AP) — Presidential candidate Jimmy Carter has told Texas supporters he favors deregulation of natural gas for a period of time, under existing contracts, but he does not favor deregulation of oil prices.

That was the response of the former Georgia governor Monday night to business leaders on his state finance committee who pledged themselves to raise about $200,000 for his bid for the Democratic nomination.

About 80 of the committee members and their ladies attended the dinner gathering, at which they promised to seek $3,000 per couple from their friends in behalf of the Democratic front runner.

Questions were raised from the floor about Carter's energy policy, and one was whether he could not favor gradual deregulation of oil.

"That's built into the existing law," Carter replied. "and I would not try to change that. Instantaneous deregulation is what I don't favor."

He also does not favor divestiture of oil companies, Carter, adding that Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., told him earlier in the day this stand by the former governor was one reason Udall would not endorse him fully.

Texas Gov. Dolph Briscoe told the Georgian's backers that he believes Carter can sweep Texas this fall in a landslide victory.

Briscoe said Carter has the ability to make government once again the servant of the people "rather than the harasser."

At a news conference shortly after his arrival, said that while he now owes several hundred thousand dollars "I think I will wind up the campaign year without being in debt."

Although he claims more than enough delegates to win the Democratic nomination on the first convention ballot, Carter said it would be "a fatal mistake" to be overconfident about the general election.

He again said the party has come out of the primary campaign "unscathed — there are no personal or political wounds left."

Carter said he will not announce before the Democrats' national convention his choice for running mate.

Court jammed for trial

JOURDANTON, Tex. (AP) — The crowded court schedule of lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, the defense attorney for former state Rep. Oscar Carrillo, has brought about a three-month recess in Carrillo's felony theft trial.

State Dist. Court Judge Darrell Hester ordered the recess Monday after Haynes, of Houston, said he had conflicts in his trial schedule.

Hester said Carrillo's trial on charges that he stole over 2,000 postage meter stamps valued at more than $200 would resume September 13.

In Monday's brief session, Hester met with potential jurors before recessing the trial.

Carrillo, the brother of ousted State Dist. Court Judge O.P. Carrillo, said he was going to "pick watermelon and harvest my crops" until the resumption of the trial. He served three terms in the state legislature.

The trial was moved to Atascosa County of Duval County on a change of venue motion that claimed neither the defendant nor the state could get a fair trial because of "lawless conditions" in Duval County.

Howe readies innocent plea

By JONATHAN WOLMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Allan Howe was reported ready to enter an innocent plea at his arraignment on charges of soliciting sex from two Salt Lake police decoy prostitutes as the Utah Democrat promised a response to pressure from congressional colleagues to resign.

Arraignment was set today in Salt Lake City court on a misdemeanor charge. Howe was arrested Saturday night after allegedly offering two police decoys $20 for sex acts.

It was reported that an innocent plea would be entered by Howe's attorney, Wayne L. Black, Democratic national committeeman for Utah, and Howe was not expected to appear. Howe has proclaimed his innocence to reporters, claiming he was "set up."

Meanwhile, Colleen Gardner said she plans to talk to the U.S. attorney in Washington today about evidence she allegedly has of questionable sexual activities on Capitol Hill.

Mrs. Gardner has said she knows of a sexual rendezvous arranged by a congressman between Elizabeth Ray and Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, and of instances where her former boss, Rep. John Young, D-Tex., pressured her and other staffers to have sex with him.

Miss Ray has told the FBI that her sexual encounter with Gravel was arranged by then-Rep. Kenneth Gray, D-Ill., her one-time boss, who hoped to influence Gravel's position on public works legislation.

Mrs. Gardner also claims she was paid a premium salary and was not asked to do much work so she would be available as a sexual partner for Young, who calls her charges "poppycock."

Mrs. Gardner said Monday night that for two months this year she worked halftime for Young, but was paid a fulltime, $26,000-a-year salary and continued submitting to his sexual advances.

Young has denied the allegation but declined to say whether he had a sexual relationship with her. Joseph Prendergast, his administrative assistant, said Young is not planning to resign.

Gray has denied arranging a sexual encounter between Miss Ray and Gravel. Gravel called the allegations "patently ridiculous" and repeated that he has "no recollection of having met" Miss Ray.

The New York Daily News reported today that Miss Ray has told the FBI there is documentary corroboration for the charge in the form of a note from Gravel thanking Gray for arranging the "fine evening."

While Gravel conducted business-as-usual during much of Monday and chaired a hearing on Capitol Hill, Howe faced a decision about his political career because Utah Democrats are meeting this weekend to plan their slate for this November.

The 48-year-old Mormon met Monday with Sen. Frank Moss and Rep. Gunn McKay, both Utah Democrats up for re-election this year. Moss said he urged Howe not to seek re-election. He said Howe's candidacy could weaken the Democratic ticket.

Howe said in a Monday television interview with KTVX of Salt Lake City that he was considering resigning. "It may happen," he said.

Miss Ray has told the FBI she had sex with Gravel during a small party on Gray's houseboat on the Potomac River the night of Aug. 10, 1972, after Gray told her to do so, a source has said. The source said Miss Ray understood this to be an order.

Gray, who retired last year, said Monday he is meeting with federal investigators to prove he could not have influenced Gravel's support for the National Visitors Center, as Miss Ray has reportedly told investigators.

The visitors' center was a $44-million parking and visitor information facility at Washington's Union Railroad Station near the Capitol. Gray, chairman of the House subcommittee on public buildings in 1972, crusaded for years to have it built.

Gravel told the Anchorage Times, "I was not on the boat at any party which they (Miss Ray and Mrs. Gardner) mentioned."

"One member of Congress does not bribe another member of Congress," Gravel said in an interview. "As to the charge of having sex with Ray, if there were any, that's a private situation."

Gray told a reporter, "I've got my logs. The record clearly and indisputably shows that on the 9th and 10th of August 1972, in public hearings, we were considering the Eisenhower Civic Center — not the visitors' center. . . . Told of Gray's assertion, Miss Ray said Monday, 'I am vague. I don't know if it is the Visitors Center or the Washington Civic Center."

The Eisenhower Civic Center, to be built a few blocks from the visitors' center, was another project Gray was pushing.

In Ohio, Rep. Wayne Hays — recovering from last week's overdose of sleeping pills — probably will be discharged from the Barnesville Hospital Friday or Saturday, hospital officials say.

The 65-year-old Democratic congressman, a key figure in the congressional payroll-sex scandal, was reported in satisfactory condition. The controversy broke when Elizabeth Ray said Hays had her placed on his congressional payroll as a secretary so she could be available to him as his mistress.

Hays has admitted having a "personal relationship" with Miss Ray, but he has disputed her charge that she was on his payroll only to be his mistress. No one has said yet whether the overdose was a suicide attempt or an accident.

Hays is expected to spend several days resting after he is released from the hospital.

Also Monday, Washington photographer Barry M. Blackman said Miss Ray asked him one month after the alleged houseboat incident to photograph her nude and submit the pictures to Playboy magazine. The magazine rejected the photos and he forgot about them, Blackman said.

Recently, a lab technician noticed them as he processed pictures for a portfolio, Blackman said. His agent, who displayed them in his office, said he hoped to sell them for $20,000 to $25,000.

They show Miss Ray lying nude on a red couch, partially clad under a hair dryer and in other poses.

Uncle to inspect sewage plant

First federal inspection at the site of Pampa's new $1.4 million sewage treatment project is scheduled to start at the plant site at 9 a.m. Wednesday by representatives of the Environmental Protection Agency and the Texas Water Quality Board.

City Manager Mack Wofford said today the project is only 30 per cent completed. It is being built with the city paying 25 percent of the cost and a nearly $1 million grant from the federal government.

The ERA will be represented tomorrow by Jerry Langenfield of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, according to Harry D. Voight of the TWQB's grants section at Austin.

Accompanying the inspectors will be City Manager Wofford, Tony Anderson, city utilities superintendent and a representative from Parkhill, Smith and Cooper, Lubbock consultant engineers on the project.

Syrians capture gateway to Palestinian bases

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian tank forces advanced today toward Marjayoun, six miles from the northeast tip of Israel, after capturing Rachaya, the gateway to Palestinian guerrilla bases in southern Lebanon, a Palestinian spokesman reported.

"If Marjayoun falls," said the Palestinian, "the Syrians will have complete control of the northern and western fringes of the Arkoeb region." That 40-square-mile area north and west of Israel and its panhandle has been the Palestinians' last available staging area for guerrilla raids into Israel since King Hussein drove them out of Jordan in 1971.

Reports from Rachaya, 32 miles southeast of Beirut, said heavy Syrian fire drove guerrillas and renegade Moslem soldiers from the Lebanese army out of the town Monday after a week of resistance.

Rachaya, 10 miles north of the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights and six miles west of the Syrian border, was the principal way station on the Arafat Trail, the guerrillas' supply route from Syria to the Arkoeb.

Syria cut off supplies to the Palestinians and their leftist Lebanese allies months ago in an attempt to force them to make peace with their Christian adversaries in the Lebanese civil war. The Palestinians have been so busy with the civil war in Lebanon that they have made no raids into northern Israel for months. But the Syrians apparently are moving into southern Lebanon to insure that the raids don't start up again and provoke Israeli retaliation.

Following the capture of Rachaya, 22 miles northeast of the Israeli panhandle, Israeli Foreign Minister Yigal Allon said the Syrian advance still posed "no direct threat to our interests, and we have no need to take direct measures in Lebanon."

He also told the Israeli state radio that Israel would protect the Lebanese Christian community "if it finds itself isolated as in the past." But he did not explain how Israel would accomplish this.

The Palestinian spokesman said the Syrians moved more troops and an estimated 100

Accused of spying

BERLIN (AP) — Four more West Germans, including a labor union official and a political party official, have been arrested on suspicion of spying for the Communists.

The West Berlin prosecutor's office said Kathryn Burger, 30, admitted spying for East Germany, implicated her ex-husband, Heinrich Burger, 35, and said Kurt and Erna Nickel acted as their couriers to East Germany.

Prosecutor Dietrich Schultz said Mrs. Burger later repudiated her confession and the other three denied the espionage charge.

Burger is the press spokesman in West Berlin for the Social Democratic party, the government party in both West Germany and West Berlin. His former wife is spokeswoman for the public service and transport workers' union. They were divorced in 1974.

Schultz said they were suspected of passing information about her union and the Social Democratic party to the East Germans for five years.

Sixteen other West Germans have been arrested on suspicion of spying in the past four weeks. They included three employees of the Defense Ministry in Bonn and a 35-year-old secretary in the Foreign Ministry.

In addition, an executive of the public service workers' union was sentenced to two years in prison for passing trade union secrets to East Germany.

Democratic platform calls for fed money for elections

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic platform committee has approved a proposed campaign plank calling for partial federal financing of congressional elections.

Supporters of the plan argued Monday night that the apparent success of this year's system for the presidential campaign showed the value of providing federal funds for congressional races.

Opponents, however, contended that the proposal could commit the federal government to heavy new expenditures it could not afford.

No price tag was given for the financing plan, which was approved by the platform panel on a 68 to 30 vote.

The 153-member committee is expected to complete work by Wednesday on a draft document aimed at embodying the party's over-all stance for the November elections. The draft platform will go before the Democratic National Convention in July for final approval.

Delegates to the platform conference also approved Monday a proposal calling for restoration of the postal service as a government agency, but later voted it down after being requested to reconsider by Jimmy Carter's chief representative.

Subsequently, the committee adopted a statement simply urging improvement in the postal service.

The platform committee also voted to support a ban on cheap handguns known as "Saturday night specials."

But at Eisenhower's urging, the committee voted down a proposed endorsement of measures sought by gay liberation groups, along with a bid to put the party on record as opposing capital punishment.

"We are going to run a race against a conservative Republican," the Carter representative said. "There is no need to give him unnecessary ammunition."

Earlier Monday, platform task forces weighed various other issues, taking actions which included:

—Softening defense language in the proposed platform and supporting a delay in any decision to produce the controversial B1 bomber.

—Recommending that the federal government finance a comprehensive national health insurance program providing full medical coverage for all Americans.

The proposal, however, did not describe in detail how such a comprehensive health care system would be funded.

—Amending a commitment to the security of South Korea by adding that the party "in the denial of human rights" in that country.

—Voting to reject a platform proposal that the United States should encourage the formation of a "united Ireland."

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from FOREVER SORRY brought back some memories that this old grandfather would like to share:

I'll never forget when my wife called me at work and said, "Come right home after work, John, we've got a problem on our hands."

When I got home, there sat our 17-year-old daughter and her 19-year-old boyfriend with their eyes on the floor.

Nobody had to tell me what the problem was. My wife said, "Dotty's pregnant."

I was heart sick. I had wanted her to go to college.

Where I found the words I'll never know, but I said, "So what? There will be just one more to love."

I told the boy if he felt trapped the door was open. There would be no abortion.

The kids got married. That was six years ago, and they're still very much in love. And now they have TWO to love.

LUCKY GRANDPA

DEAR ABBY: I was in the same predicament as FOREVER SORRY until my beautiful daughter was nearly 3 years old.

Although my unforgiving mother worshipped my little girl, she constantly reminded me that I had "disgraced" her because I was a pregnant bride.

She would put on a long face and say, "I can't look at that child without feeling betrayed and ashamed, knowing that she was conceived in sin."

I finally had it with the guilt my mother was laying on me, so I said, "All right, Mother, I don't want you to suffer anymore, so if that's the way you feel, I'll never bring my daughter to your house again, and you need not come here."

Well, Abby, that was the last time my mother ever mentioned my "sin" again.

PROBLEM SOLVED IN LONG BEACH

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from FOREVER SORRY, the happily married mother of a beautiful 2-year-old daughter. She said her mother never forgave her for being pregnant when she was married, even though she had planned to marry the man anyway.

"If Mom would only say, 'I forgive you,' she wrote, 'it would help so much, but she won't.' Thanks, Abby, for telling her she didn't need her mother's forgiveness—that only God had the power to forgive."

May I say something to FOREVER SORRY? We must be sisters, Hon, because we have the same mother.

I'm 22 and have two sons. One is 8 months old, and the other is 4 years old.

My husband has made a wonderful home for us and we've been happily married for four and a half years.

My mother still throws my "lurid premarital affair" in my face. She dishes out guilt by the gallon.

I finally went to my County Mental Health Clinic where a wonderful woman therapist assured me that I had long since "paid my dues." She made me realize that I was a worthwhile ADULT person, not a "bad little girl" who needed Mama's approval.

While helping me to understand my mother's hangups, she freed me from feeling guilty. What an improvement she made in my life!

Please get counseling at your nearest Mental Health Clinic. It may take a while, but you will find that you can live happily without an "I forgive you" from your mother. I do!

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. DR. LAMB — Please tell me, will Coca-Cola damage my 15-year-old son's health? He drinks four or five each day along with lots of milk at meals.

These Cokes are drunk mostly between meals, while at work in a grocery store, after school and at recess in school.

He is 6 feet tall, weighs 135 pounds and is fairly healthy.

DEAR READER — It is not the worst habit in the world. There is some caffeine in Cokes, about 35 to 55 milligrams in a 12-ounce bottle. That is about one-third as much as in a brewed cup of coffee. Certainly he is not getting as much caffeine as most people get from their daily coffee habit.

Apparently the calories in them do not bother him as he is not fat. As long as he eats a well-balanced diet otherwise I wouldn't worry too much about it. The only problem I can see is that frequent eating, drinking or snacking increases the chances of dental caries.

To give you more information on colas I'm sending you The Health Letter number 1-1, Coffee, Tea, Cola, Cocoa. Others who want this information can forward 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I hear so much about whiplash and know very little about it. Could you explain the term and its symptoms to me?

DEAR READER — Whiplash means a violent backward jerking of the head as may occur if you are hit suddenly from the rear. It most often occurs in automobile accidents from a rear end collision. The head snaps back if there is not adequate support extending

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — I hope someone has a solution to my problem. All winter long our cat sits on our polyester rug from which she picks up a lot of static. She hates to be touched because when we stroke her fur we both get a shock. Is there any remedy?

My husband fixed up a doorbell for the cat by putting a buzzer on the porch with a board propped on it. When the cat steps on the board it buzzes in the house. When her friends come over they also buzz the buzzer. I always look forward to the column as it has helped me so during the years. — WILMA.

DEAR WILMA — I am sure some of our readers with cats will come forth with some suggestions for you. — POLLY.

Cosmetic puffery adds profits

By Ellie Grossman

(Last of Two Parts)

NEW YORK — (NEA) — If the merchandise isn't moving, puff it up.

The cosmetic industry follows that dictum eagerly, as the Helena Rubinstein company proved recently.

Just listen to the alarums in this letter from the Softness Group, Inc., a public relations firm representing the company.

We should interview Shirley Lord, vice president of corporate relations at Helena Rubinstein, the letter says, "because she is prepared to discuss some startling information concerning the effects of environmental pollution on health and beauty."

Everyone knows, it continues, "how technology is rapidly destroying our native natural resources. However, the constant assault of pollutants has taken its toll on human life as well. For example, skin and hair have no means of repelling the airborne hazards."

(The reader is left to infer what he will from the last two sentences.)

The letter continues about how the company is "investigating the problem to develop new products which will protect us from these environmental changes."

It certainly sounds serious. By all means, let's talk to Shirley Lord.

A former English newspaperwoman, Ms. Lord is one of the beautiful people, a globe-trotting "expert in beauty and health care," her bio reads, a former beauty editor at Vogue.

She is average height, chubby, a high-powered executive with teased, blonde hair.

All right, Ms. Lord, let's have that startling information.

"The American woman," she says, "lives in a punishing environment. Because of air conditioning and overheating, there is a constant stealing of moisture away from your skin. And all light, not just ultra-violet rays, ages the skin. Pollutants have deleterious effects on skin because the dirt and grime attack it."

However, she continues, with Helena Rubinstein's new skin and hair lotions, The Protectors, the American woman is safe from all that.

"The Protectors is the most superlative sunscreen on the market, though we were worried about positioning it as that. It's a barrier, a preventive measure for the skin."

It happens, though, that the Hair Protector is moving better than the Skin Protector, and that's where the press comes in. "We hope people like you will help spread the word about the need for a woman to protect her skin."

Yes, but you haven't given us any startling information yet; "the toll on human life" and all that. We're not making a case for air pollution but what research have you done with everyday pollution and skin?

Ms. Lord suggests we view a promotion film on The Protectors she shows to stores around the country.

Against typical shots of smoke stacks, car exhausts and garbage heaps, the announcer's voice intones, "We can no longer escape it. It's everywhere — the threat to beauty and health."

For example, look at what those atmospheric acids have done to that marble monument.

Cut to the laboratory. Here, shielded by The Protectors, skin and hair samples, even "protein-coated paper approximating human skin" survived desert-like conditions, ultra-violet light and corrosive acids and chemicals. Unprotected control groups, however, fared badly.

End of promotional film. Okay. We know ultra-violet light is harmful. But those other tests — most of us don't live in the desert, and is the concentration of chemicals and acids used in the lab the same as we encounter daily?

Perhaps Dr. Jack Mausner, vice president of research and development for Helena Rubinstein worldwide, can help.

"As far as pollution is concerned," Dr. Mausner concedes, "we don't have enough information of the effect on the skin, but we approach this from the point of view that it is very likely to be harmful."

"There are infinitesimal amounts of impurities in the atmosphere we think cause slow damage. By accelerating these conditions in the laboratory — and, okay, you can call them very severe — we proved The Protectors will protect."

Whether we desperately need that protection is something else.

Dermatologists and environmental researchers say that the airborne particulates which adhere themselves to the skin are washed away with soap and water.

Dermatologists also say that the outer layer of the skin renews itself every two to four weeks, unlike marble monuments, which is why monuments get eaten away by acids.

And dermatologists say that any barrier — make-up, for instance — will protect against everything but ultra-violet light. Therefore, unless you were to use The Protectors as a sun-screen — and its efficacy against other sunscreen products was not shown — it's kind of like arming yourself against snakes in Ireland.

SHIRLEY LORD: "The American woman lives in a punishing environment."

Therefore, unless you were to use The Protectors as a sun-screen — and its efficacy against other sunscreen products was not shown — it's kind of like arming yourself against snakes in Ireland.

Names make news

MOSCOW (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi of India has left the Soviet Union after a six-day tour.

She visited Yerevan, the capital of Soviet Armenia, and the city of Tbilisi in the Georgian republic.

During the visit no major new agreements were made public, but Mrs. Gandhi was accorded lavish hospitality and extensive publicity.

The visit ended with the Soviet news agency Tass reporting a declaration which said Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev and Premier Alexei N. Kosygin would return the visit later.

The declaration said the visits will be part of a series of "regular meetings between the leaders of the Soviet Union and India... to strengthen in every way Soviet-Indian friendship."

Mrs. Gandhi met several times with Soviet leaders and was given television time for an address in which she extolled Soviet-Indian friendship. She flew home Sunday.

SINGER ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — Tycoon John Donald MacArthur, who played host to the late billionaire recluse Howard Hughes, says Hughes was cold, brilliant, sometimes a "nut."

MacArthur, 79, was host to Hughes in his Colonades Hotel on Singer Island. Hughes died April 5.

MacArthur admits to being wealthy enough to "do anything I want," but he said he and Hughes were "as opposite as the day is from night."

But he was a very brilliant man," MacArthur added. "And you've heard all your life that the difference between genius and insanity is a hair's breadth. Every once in a while, he would slide over and become a nut."

MacArthur founded the Bankers Life Insurance Co., owns 45 other firms and directs his far-

Texan tops fiddler contest

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Terry Morris, 20, Hurst, Tex., won top honors Sunday in the fifth annual Grand Masters Fiddlin' Contest.

Runnerup in the contest for the past two years, Morris won $1,000 and the right to appear on the Porter Wagoner syndicated television show and the Grand Ole Opry.

The contest marked the end of the annual "Fan Fair," which attracted 11,500 country music fans to Nashville.

Funeral plans announced for Collier Rogers

TUBAC, Ariz. (AP) — Burial will be held here Friday for Collier Rogers, wife of Will Rogers Jr. Mrs. Rogers died Saturday at age 65.

She was living in Baja California with her husband at the time of her death. Mrs. Rogers suffered from severe emphysema.

She was born in Alamogordo, N.M., and married Will Rogers Jr. in 1940.

Rogers is the son of the late American cowboy humorist Will Rogers.

Funeral services will be in Nogales at 2 p.m. Friday and burial will be private. Mrs. Rogers is survived by her husband and two children.

flung empire from a cafe table in his hotel here.

How rich is he? "There's a lot of uninformed people who say I'm rich," he said in an interview. "Well, I admit I'm solvent. I do pay my bills."

BOSTON (AP) — An Italian-born printer who refused to let his dream boat turn into a nightmare, was on the high seas today, enroute to fulfill a lifelong dream to sail back to his homeland.

"Something like this happens only once in a lifetime," said Andrea Pertot, 54-year-old Revere printer. He set sail Saturday in the 44-foot ketch he laboriously spent nine years building.

A squadron of well-wishers escorted the two-masted vessel out of Boston Harbor. Aboard were Pertot and his three crew members.

"Today is my day, the proudest moment of my life," Pertot said.

Two years ago he had the ketch almost completed, but vandals broke in, set it afire, and destroyed the cabin area.

But, Pertot said then, "It has become a part of my life. I can't quit on her now." And he doggedly went back to rebuild the boat he named for his wife, Gloria.

He hopes to arrive at Rome next month and in about 30 days, to be at Trieste, where he intends to spend his retirement years. His wife will fly to Italy and sail the final leg with him.

Scholarship winner

Ballet student Rita Parsley, 17, has been accepted to the School of the Pennsylvania Ballet in Philadelphia. Ms. Parsley, a charter member of the Pampa Civic Ballet, will graduate from Pampa High School in 1977. She will dance in "Texas" this summer at Palo Duro Canyon. A student of Jeanne Willingham since she was three years old, Ms. Parsley also has received scholarships from the San Francisco Ballet School and the Bill Martin - Viscount Ballet Center in Ft. Worth which she attended for two summers. The Philadelphia school accepts only "extremely advanced" students, Ms. Willingham said. Ms. Parsley is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A.C. Parsley of 621 Tignor.

Authors judge telephone to Bic Mac

Capsule reviews prepared by the American Library Assn.

by Carol Felsenthal for the American Library Association

What do the Vice-President of the United States, a Big Mac hamburger and the telephone have in common? Very simply, they're all pervasive and prosperous products of American corporate ingenuity. Just as instant meals and communications have changed a nation's life-style, so, according to "The Rockefeller," has that family's once total control over the production and distribution of oil changed the course of the last century of

THE ROCKEFELLERS: AN AMERICAN DYNASTY by Peter Collier & David Horowitz (Holt, Rinehart & Winston, 746 pages, $15)
BIG MAC: THE UNAUTHORIZED STORY OF MCDONALD'S by Max Boas & Steve Chain (E.P. Dutton, 212 pages, $8.95)
TELEPHONE: THE FIRST HUNDRED YEARS by John Brooks (Harper & Row, 369 pages, $12.50)

American history. Authors Collier and Horowitz show how the fortune founded by family patriarch John D. — the man Sen. Robert LaFollette called "the greatest criminal of the age" — has purchased power in American business, political and cultural institutions. But the story of John D.'s ruthless rise from shipping clerk to billionaire has been told before. And anyone who followed the vice-presidential confirmation hearings of his grandson, Nelson, has already scaled the incredible heights of the family's assets. What makes this book remarkable is its final effect the part that probes the effect the Rockefeller riches and reputation have had on "the Cousins" — the fourth generation to shoulder the benefits and burdens of the Rockefeller connection. Two hundred hours of interviews with the 21 adult cousins yield fresh and revealing anecdotes and insights

Although several lead straight establishment lives, two have discarded the Rockefeller name and several have rebelled against it. Abby, daughter of Chase Manhattan Bank President David, calls her family's name "preposterous" and their wealth "indecent." Among her interests are Marxism, political activism — she was a draft resistance counselor — and feminism, not marriage and money. She is currently marketing "composting toilets," an ecological alternative to the flush toilet. Meanwhile, her family is torn between encouraging this manifestation of capitalism and cringing beneath what they suspect is her "new twist on the symbolic connection of feces and money." John D. III's daughter Marion runs an organic vegetable stand in northern California and Nelson's son Steven, a teacher, tells the authors: "I am firmly convinced that there is no rational justification for extreme privilege and the accumulation of vast sums of wealth." Not surprisingly, the authors conclude that this "American Dynasty" is crumbling. But while it's possible that the name Rockefeller may not be recognizable to the next generation of Americans, it's probable that the name Ronald McDonald will continue to be a household word. "An American tradition" is how McDonald's chairman, Ray Kroc describes the ever-expanding company which now boasts 3,500 outlets circling the globe. "Big Mac" is the irreverent and irresistibly interesting record of "Horatio Hamburgers" (i.e., Kroc's) rise from milk-shake mixer salesman to head of a multimillion dollar corporation — a corporation complete with its own Hamburger University where potential burger barons study "Hamburger Science." Among the unappetizing facts authors Boas and Chain serve the reader in their "unauthorized story" of the company is that 100,000 head of cattle are slaughtered to produce the billion hamburgers McDonald's sells every four months. Equally unsettling, 37 square miles of forest fall to meet McDonald's annual packaging needs — and the environmental study cited was conducted when the company was half its present size.

During the energy crisis someone should have suggested that McDonald's turn off its golden arches. The same study shows that even then, McDonald's used enough coal to supply Boston, Washington D.C. and San Francisco with electricity for one year. Unfortunately, all this consumption of resources produces a nutritionless meal, according to still another study cited by the authors. Even more indispendible to modern man than the "Quarter Pounder," the telephone is celebrating its hundredth birthday this year. Timed to coincide with its centennial, John Brooks' "Telephone" is billed as the first "independently written, objective and comprehensive account" of American Telephone and Telegraph — the giant corporation which maintains a stranglehold

"THE ROCKEFELLERS" traces this American dynasty from the time of William Avery Rockefeller (above), father of John D., to the fourth generation shouldering the benefits and burdens of the name.

Home still American Dream

By RICK SCOTT, Associated Press Writer
 SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Americans will continue to pursue their dream of a single-family home, even if it means making bigger sacrifices for less home, a real estate expert says. Byron W. Trerice Jr. of Southfield, Mich., president of the Realtors National Marketing Institute, says the demand for housing will continue to grow at least through the 1980s. And, while the price of new homes is reaching past the limit many Americans can afford, Trerice says more families are buying used homes. Trerice told a news conference Thursday that the so-called "war babies" born during the late 1940s and early 1950s are forming family units now and are looking for homes.

Although the recent recession has prompted home-buying prospects to put off a purchase, as the economy improves the pent up demand for housing will begin to show, Trerice said. Already, he said, "There is a whirlwind of activity in the used housing market." And, he said the existing home can often be a better buy than the new home since it may be better built, closer to town and less expensive. Trerice praised the new homebuilding industry for its efforts to hold down the costs of its product, but said the industry may never again enjoy the boom of the late 1960s and early 1970s. He noted that the price of the average new home in the United States is about $50,000 while the average existing home costs $40,000. Trerice cited government figures that the average new home is too expensive for eight out of 10 American families. But he praised the homebuilding industry for providing the cheapest housing anywhere in the world. He said the public had failed to respond to the concept of condominiums and attached housing. "The dream is still to own a single family house," Trerice said. To have that dream may mean owning a smaller house on a smaller lot with fewer amenities, he said. Builders, lenders and realtors will continue to work to bring the dream house and the buyer together, he added. Trerice was here for the annual convention of the Texas Association of Realtors.

International bank urges control on expansion

By DORIAN FALK, Associated Press Writer
 BASEL, Switzerland (AP) — A new boom for some of the industrialized nations may be just around the corner, the Bank for International Settlements said today in its annual report. But it warned that major economic problems still remain to be solved and that firm governmental measures are needed to keep the renewed expansion from going out of control. "Recovery in the Western world is now well advanced," said the report by the center for cooperation among Western central banks. "There are no signs that a premature slowdown lies ahead. Indeed, some of the leading countries appear to be on the threshold of a new boom. However, inflation continues at "historically high" rates in most of the industrial countries and unemployment is expected to remain "painfully high," the report continued. "And there are serious doubts about the chances of raising capital expenditures to a level adequate to ensure a satisfactory pace of long-term growth." Thus, governments must adopt policies that limit total spending and at the same time increase investment at the expense of consumption, the report said. It suggested that they also adopt income-control policies when needed. In the previous cycle, the report said, monetary excesses occurred not so much during the recession as in the early upswing. "There is now a danger of repeating the same mistake because authorities may be influenced by a temporary slackening in the pace of revival, the slow absorption of unemployment or continuing weakness in certain industrial sectors," the report warned. Commitment to a monetary growth target could lead to constraint on financing of the public sector and dampen inflationary trends, the report continued. But it warned that continued large government deficits combined with an expected decline in personal savings and a possible increase in enterprise external financing could impair all moderation efforts. The report said income-control policies could help shift domestic expenditure from consumption to capital investment, and from labor-saving investments to those creating employment. They could also help bring increases in incomes more in line with increases in productivity. The report said that in the United States only the market mechanism alone led to a slowdown in wage increases sufficient to cause a decline in real earnings. The report added that a workable restraint formula most likely would have to limit the rise of "personal incomes of all kinds, not only wages."

Dognapping increases

MOUNT PROSPECT, Ill. (AP) — Stealing pedigree dogs and holding them for ransom has become a nationwide operation by organized gangs, says a specialist who tracks down lost pets. "Teen-agers, adults and even entire families are dognapping throughout the country. In the Chicago area alone more than a hundred dogs a month are being stolen for ransom," said Bob Frank, who runs the nonprofit Society of St. Francis hotline for missing pets. Dogs are taken from backyards, unattended cars and under the nose of owners who momentarily let them off their leash, said Frank.

Accused of catering to wealthy taxpayers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee is being accused of catering to wealthy taxpayers by 14 senators who say they seek a fairer tax system which would raise the taxes of rich investors to benefit low- and middle-income families. Their package of amendments would tighten tax advantages available to the rich while making permanent a tax-reduction provision that would save a family of four $180 a year. But no matter what kind of tax bill is passed, it is all but certain that Congress will not allow tax-withholding rates to increase on July 1, when current tax cuts are due to expire. The 14 senators, mostly liberal and led by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., told reporters Thursday: "The time has come to stop using platitudes to feed the average taxpayer's hunger for tax reform. What is needed now are Senate votes that prove our real commitment to a fairer tax system for every citizen." They hope to amend a Finance Committee bill that would limit some tax benefits available to the rich while extending the antirecession individual and corporate tax cuts enacted last year. They complain that the committee's bill would end one big item of tax relief for most Americans in order to pay for continued tax breaks for the wealthy. "Professional dognappers will use tranquilized food or keep a female in heat in their truck as bait to attract males," he said.

"A Siberian husky recently was even stolen out of a kennel where he was being boarded," he said. "Once a dog is snatched, the thieves watch newspaper ads for missing pets and then call the owner. The ransom usually starts around $200. They call it reward money. The minimum usually is $50."

Two Pampans were among over 100 National Youth Leadership Summer Institute participants at Lake Texoma June 7-12. Participants attended sessions in communications skills, memory development, decision making, human relation skills and personal assessment of leadership styles.

To spread word about country music in Texas

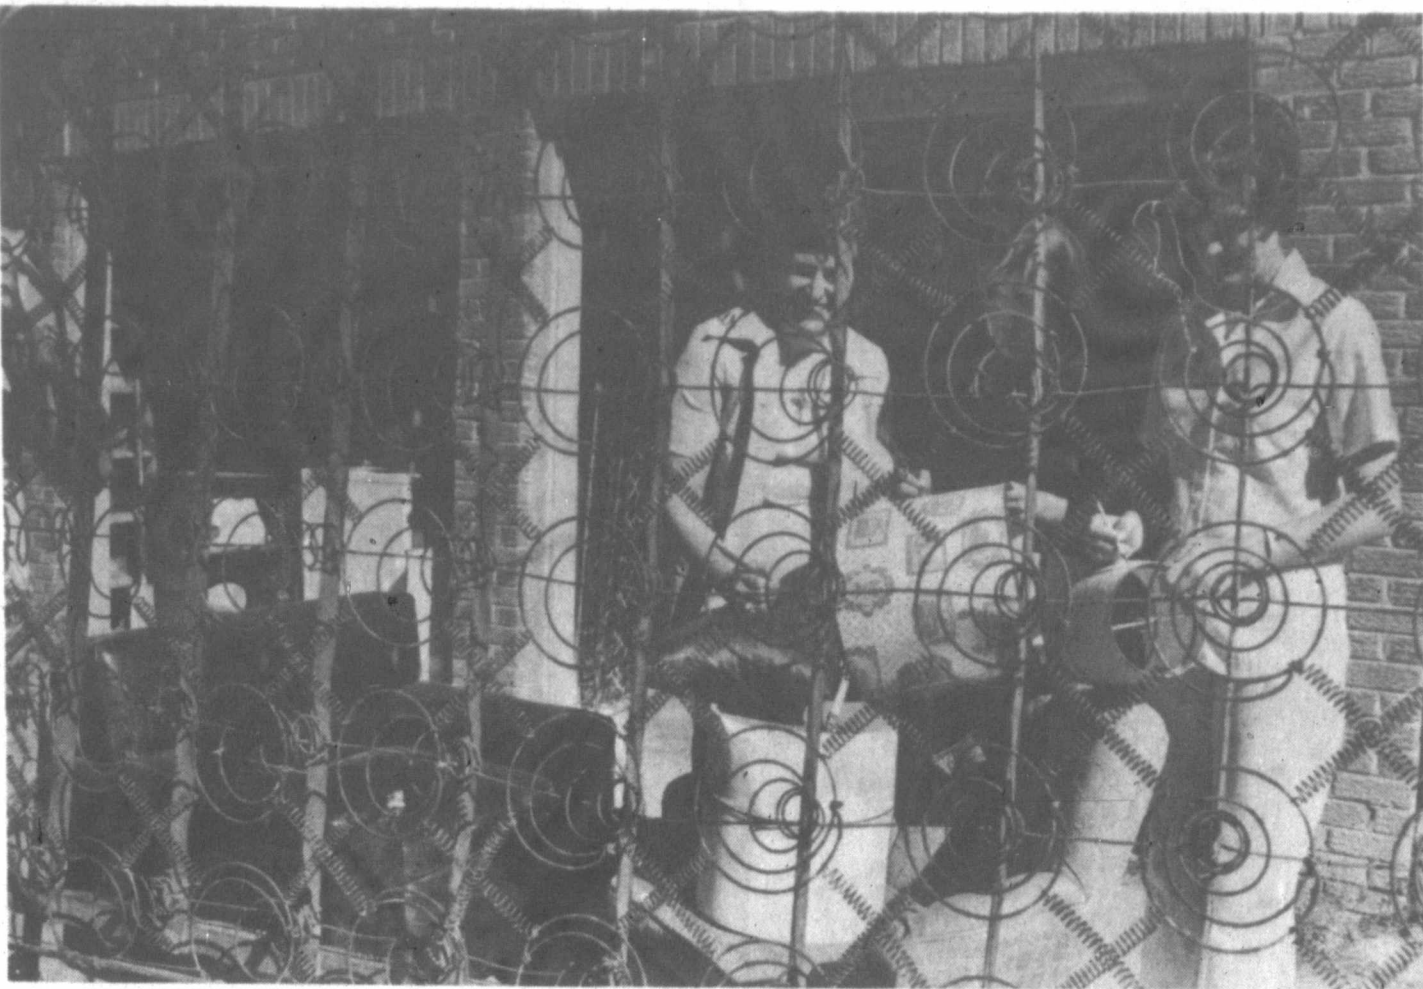

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The Texas Commission on Arts and Humanities is spending $1,200 to spread the word about country music in Texas. Maurice Coats, director of the commission, said the grant was made to the Kerrville Music Foundation to purchase copies of a new book, "A History of Country Music in Texas," which will be distributed by the commission to 300 libraries throughout the state. "This is the first time a grant has been made for a country music project," Coats said, adding that the commission usually encourages support in the fields of classical arts like symphonies, ballets, theater, sculpture, and painting. "We have contributed to arts and crafts fairs before and this was a normal outgrowth. We felt this was a reference book that many people would want to read and find out about country music, and we feel the best way to do it is through the public libraries." Rod Kennedy, executive director of the Kerrville Music Foundation, said the grant would handle about 10 per cent of the cost of producing the book. It is hoped a good portion of the rest of the funds will come from the June 30-July 1

Red Steagall Celebrity Golf Tournament in Kerrville. Kennedy said the book will be prepared by Bill C. Malone, author of "Country Music, U.S.," and co-author of "Stars of Country Music." "The book due out some time in 1977, will trace the folk background, the early commercial period, the transitional years, the post-war country music boom and into the contemporary period coming up to date with the 1970s in Texas," Kennedy said. "It will include the resurgence of honky tonk music and the emergency of the Austin scene as a national influence."

Pharmacists win right to advertise prices

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Americans all across the country soon may be able to compare prices on the lowest prices on prescription drugs in the same way they hunt for bargains on other items.

Until recently, state laws and codes of ethics established by professional organizations prevented pharmacists in more than half the 50 states from advertising prescription drugs. Similar laws and codes bar advertising by other professionals, including architects, lawyers and doctors.

Consumer groups have challenged several of these bans; the Federal Trade Commission and the Justice Department also have been moving to eliminate some advertising restrictions.

The latest development came last week when the Supreme Court overturned a California law prohibiting pharmacists from advertising the prices of prescription drugs. Earlier, the court invalidated a similar law in Virginia on the grounds that advertising is protected by the free-speech guarantee of the First Amendment.

The fight is still going on, but some stores have started advertising already. One New Jersey-based chain headlined its advertisements: "A Great Victory has been won in the courts. Now you have the right to know the Price of Your Prescription."

The FTC proposed new regulations a year ago to permit advertising of prescription drugs; the commission said it would go ahead with its regulatory plans despite the court rulings.

At the same time, the Justice Department has filed antitrust charges against the American Pharmaceutical Association and the Michigan State Pharmaceutical Association to end the advertising ban. That suit is still pending, as is a similar case involving the FTC and the medical profession.

Carl Roberts, legal counsel for the national pharmaceutical group, said he had no comment on the Supreme Court ruling. The group had filed a statement with the FTC earlier saying that advertising results in insufficient economic benefit for the customer.

Roberts said last week that as of now, the decision on whether to advertise was up to the individual pharmacist.

The Conference Board, a nonprofit business research group, says that Department of Commerce figures show Americans spent $10.6 billion for drugs and other medical items in 1973 — about one-fifth of what they spent on new and used cars.

John F. Cady, an assistant professor of marketing in the College of Business and Public Administration at the University of Arizona and a consultant to the FTC, reported in a recent study that a 1970 survey of the mean selling price of 10 representative drugs found prices to be 5.2 per cent higher in those states which prohibited advertising.

Other people are less certain of any savings. Supermarket News, a trade publication, quoted Keith Kellum of the National Association of Retail Druggists as saying he did not believe the court ruling would affect prices. Another retailer said there might be special sales for limited periods of time rather than general price cuts.

Soviets experiencing American lifestyles

By SETH MYDANS
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — At a highway underpass, a Soviet policeman surprises motorists with a black, snub-nosed radar pistol. It's made in America.

In a sports stadium at the edge of town two soccer teams battle fiercely on a field of bright green "Astroturf." Made in America.

Muscovites in the know take their suits to the one dry cleaner in town that will have them ready in 24 hours. Its machines are made in America.

The Soviet Union bought $1.832 billion worth of American goods last year: mostly agricultural products, machinery and transportation equipment.

But along with the wheat and rice and milling machines and tractors came a few oranges and lemons, some cow hides and computers and sewing needles, some tennis racquets, typewriters and pianos, and $2,075,314 worth of the almond — shelled, fried and dried.

American paper clips hold together Soviet documents, American-made soda fountains spout Russian beer and soft drinks, American cash registers sit on store counters, and in the cotton fields of central Asia one can see imported from America Eli Whitney's invention, the cotton gin, hard at work.

Soviet exports to the United States last year were $277 million, or less than one-sixth the level of imports. The imbalance is a source of concern here.

Most of the Soviet exports were fuel oil and minerals such as platinum, chrome ore, nickel and rhodium. But hidden away on the lists of raw materials are a few consumer items.

A major American import was cut Soviet diamonds, mostly of gem quality, about $15 million worth or about equal to the amount of American rice the Soviets bought.

The most visible Soviet exports, of course, are caviar, furs and vodka.

Collectors of Israel's stamps will be interested in a new series called "Stand-By" stamps. This first single denomination features the Star of David above the value. As the series continues it will include stamps of various denominations and colors. The usual tab of Israeli stamps shows the emblem of the Ministry of Communications — the running stag.

"Stand-By" stamps will be placed in circulation if, for any reason, stocks of regular definitives should run out.

The level of Soviet-American trade has soared since the inauguration of detente with President Richard M. Nixon's visit here in 1972. But still it lags far below the expectations of the dozen American companies which sent representatives to open Moscow offices in the early optimistic days.

American exports to the Soviet Union jumped from just $200 million in 1971 to $611 million in 1973 to last year's figure of almost $2 billion.

But these jumps represent almost entirely the increase in grain trade, and the figures are still much smaller than the $10 billion trade some Americans were predicting after Nixon's trip.

One of the major problems is a Soviet cash shortage and a low American ceiling on credit to the Soviet Union. Because of this, a number of major projects here have gone to Japanese or West European companies.

On the other side, Soviet exports to the United States are inhibited by duties of up to 110 per cent on consumer goods.

Newsman dies following scuffle with intruder

HOUSTON (AP) — Police searched today for an intruder who stabbed a Houston Chronicle reporter to death Sunday.

Gary Hill, 35, died of a stab wound in the chest, officers said.

Hill's wife, Susan, 29, said she and her husband awoke in their Montrose area apartment to find a man crouching at the foot of their bed.

She said she and her husband called for help and the intruder rushed at them. Hill and the intruder began fighting, Mrs. Hill fired a .22-caliber pistol into the air and the man left. She said she then found her husband unconscious and bleeding.

Hill died shortly after, police said.

Police theorized the intruder entered the apartment by cutting a screen on an open window.

Hill joined the Chronicle in 1972. He had worked for the Fort Worth Star-Telegram for about 10 years, working at various times as reporter, assistant city editor and assistant news editor.

Police made no arrests in the case Sunday.

Tax cut expires soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — With federal income-tax cuts due to expire July 1, the Senate begins voting this week on a massive tax bill that would extend the cuts.

The bill also would limit some of the tax-avoidance schemes available to the wealthy, and create some tax breaks while eliminating others.

The bill consists of up to 1,700 pages and requires a 500-page report to explain. Because of this size, there is growing doubt that Congress can complete action before July 1.

But there is virtually no chance that the lawmakers will allow taxes to go up on that date. Either the tax-cut portion of the bill will be split off and considered separately or the tax-cut extension will be made retroactive to July 1, no matter when it is passed.

If the anti-recession tax cuts enacted last year are allowed to expire, it would mean a $245 tax increase for a family of four earning $6,000 a year; a $204 hike for a couple earning $10,000; a $151 increase for a single person earning $10,000; and $180 for a typical four-member family earning $15,000.

While the Senate concentrates on taxes, the House will work on major appropriation bills this week.

Scheduled for a final House vote today was a bill to raise the national debt ceiling to $700 billion, an increase of $73 billion.

The biggest appropriation bill of all, $106 billion for defense, will be considered by the House on Thursday. Also on the agenda is a $9.5-billion appropriation for public works and $12.5-billion for agriculture programs.

Before beginning the tax debate, the Senate planned to vote today on a bill authorizing $6.7 billion in foreign military aid for the period ending Sept. 30, 1977. The bill also would give Congress greater control over U.S. arms sales abroad.

There is little disagreement between the House and Senate over extending the individual and corporate tax cuts enacted last year.

Alaskan oil price to drop at wells

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The price of North Slope oil will drop to about $7 per barrel at the wellhead because of competition from foreign imports, the Oil and Gas Journal predicted today.

Imported oil from Indonesia and elsewhere is unloading at the West Coast at about $13 a barrel and North Slope oil must compete with it, the business magazine said in its June 14 issue.

North Slope oil operators will have to subtract high transportation costs to compete with the imported oil. The pipeline tariff alone—due to the $7 billion cost of the North Slope project—will run about $4.50 a barrel, the magazine said.

From Valdez, Alaska, tankers will carry the oil to West Coast ports, principally Long Beach, Calif., for between 50 cents and $1 per barrel.

The Journal said the transportation costs don't include $1 to $2 a barrel for moving the Alaskan oil to inland refineries in the Midwest and Southwest.

The $7 wellhead price compares with $11.28 a barrel which newly discovered crude oil sells for at the wellheads in the "Lower 48" states.

The Trans-Alaska pipeline will begin pumping 600,000 barrels of oil a day next summer from Prudhoe Bay to Valdez with the flow expected to double by the end of the year.

An Oil and Gas Journal study shows that the petroleum industry is acquiring enough tanker ships to move the Alaska oil to the contiguous 48 states but warned that the industry's profit margin will be low.

Tower got $10,750 in honorariums

By BILL CHOYKE
Pampa News'

WASHINGTON — Conservative Texas Sen. John Tower continued to be a popular name on the Senate's unofficial national speaking tour last year by earning $10,750 in speaking fees.

Approximately 25 senators received more than $10,000 in honorariums last year.

The Wichita Falls Republican, who also earned $100 for writing a book review for the conservative publication National Review, collected less money moonlighting than he did in 1974. That year Tower supplemented his income as a public official with $17,650 in speaking fees and honoraria.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Houston, continued his policy of not accepting fees for speaking engagements in 1975. The former presidential candidate reported no outside income through speaking fees and honoraria last year.

The reports were on file with the Secretary of the Senate. Neither Tower nor Bentsen, however, volunteered to place on file a copy of their complete financial disclosure statement — including investments, assets, liabilities and net worth — which is filed confidentially with the General Accounting Office (GAO).

A total of 15 senators have voluntarily placed this material on file with the Secretary of the Senate. The senators include both liberals and conservatives.

Senate rules require members to file reports indicating all speeches for which they were paid more than $300. The 1974 federal election act put a $1,000 per speech, $15,000 total annual ceiling on all fees. The law was changed this year to limits of $2,000 per speech and $25,000 annually plus expenses.

Tower, the ranking Republican on the Senate Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee, received $1,000 fees from several groups that are keenly concerned with legislation considered by the committee. Early last year the senator spoke to the national Association of Housebuilders, the American Bankers Association and the Electronics Industries Association.

Other groups hearing the Texas Republican last year were the Retail Lumberman's Association, $1,000; U.S. Chamber of Commerce, $350; Mid-America Lumbermen's Association, $1,000; Association of Industrial Corrugated Converters, $1,000; National Airlines Management Club, $1,000; and Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, $1,000.

On the campus circuit, Tower spoke at Jacksonville State University (Alabama), $1,000; Huron College (South Dakota), $1,000; and American University (Washington, D.C.), $400 for two appearances.

Join our circle of friends.

Why do we emphasize "circle of friends" while other banks emphasize their "full circle of service?" Because we're the bank that pays special attention to customers: all of them, in a great big way, no matter what service or services they use. The bank that thinks of customers as a circle of friends. And the nicest thing about our circle is that it's always open. There's always room for one more. How about you?

Pampa Country Club records hanging tough

Max Hickey has come awfully close a couple of times but even he isn't sure that the 16-year-old record at the Pampa Country Club will ever be broken.

Hart Warren, then and now professional at the club, fired a 10-under-par 61 for 18 holes in August, 1960, and the score still stands as the lowest ever recorded. Circumstances, Hickey claims, have made 61 these days an improbable occurrence.

"It's doubtful it'll ever be broken. The course is in such good shape with more trees and all," said Hickey, who fired a 62 last year and 63 on May 9 this spring.

Warren agrees that tying or breaking 61 will be tough but adds that it isn't an unobtainable record.

"We've got more grass and trees now than we had then. I feel that somebody might shoot a 60. Not 59, though — breaking 60 would be like breaking the sound barrier," Warren said.

"It would have to be a visiting pro to break 60. Nobody has that much luck around here."

Warren added, "The course just plays tougher now than in 1960."

As far as layout, the course is practically the same. Warren, pro since 1955, has made few changes, with the major being the reconstruction of the green on No. 5.

Still, Hickey came close last month. If he could have parred No. 18, he would have tied the mark. As luck would have it, though, he three-putted the last hole and settled for 63.

Last year, Hickey shot 62 but missed one short putt for a bogey.

"To break 61," Hickey said, "someone's going to need a bunch of hole-outs and one putt every green... I came close last month — I just couldn't make a putt."

"No, there wasn't really any pressure to do it. I just had everything going right that day."

The women's record is 68, shot by Lila Austin in 1961. Mrs. Warren has been the closest this year to that mark — at 75. It's likely that Mrs. Austin's 68 will also stand for quite a while.

Paul Sims

It would probably be sound advice to recommend not playing to break one of the course records. Frustration would likely follow.

Maybe trying for a hole-in-one would be a more successful venture. There have been three more aces than 61's recorded this year.

Records are too soon forgotten when a team doesn't win all the marbles. Take, for example, the Pampa High baseball team.

Ronnie White resigned as head baseball and assistant football coach last week to accept similar positions at Kermit in District 7-AA.

In three seasons at Pampa, White's baseballers compiled a not unrespectable 36-34 record which didn't include any District 3-AAAA championships. Of course, there never has been a district championship team in baseball at Pampa, a fact either forgotten or not known by some of White's more vociferous critics.

For the first five weeks of their season, the Dallas Cowboys play only one team, Baltimore, which won more than five games in 1975. Dallas and the Colts meet in the third game.

In games outside their division, the NFC East, the Cowboys play only one team, Buffalo, which had a winning record last season.

Their schedule isn't exactly tough.

The now defunct Denver Nuggets of 1949, the Cleveland Cavaliers of 1970 and the Philadelphia 76ers of 1972 share the NBA record of 15 straight losses.

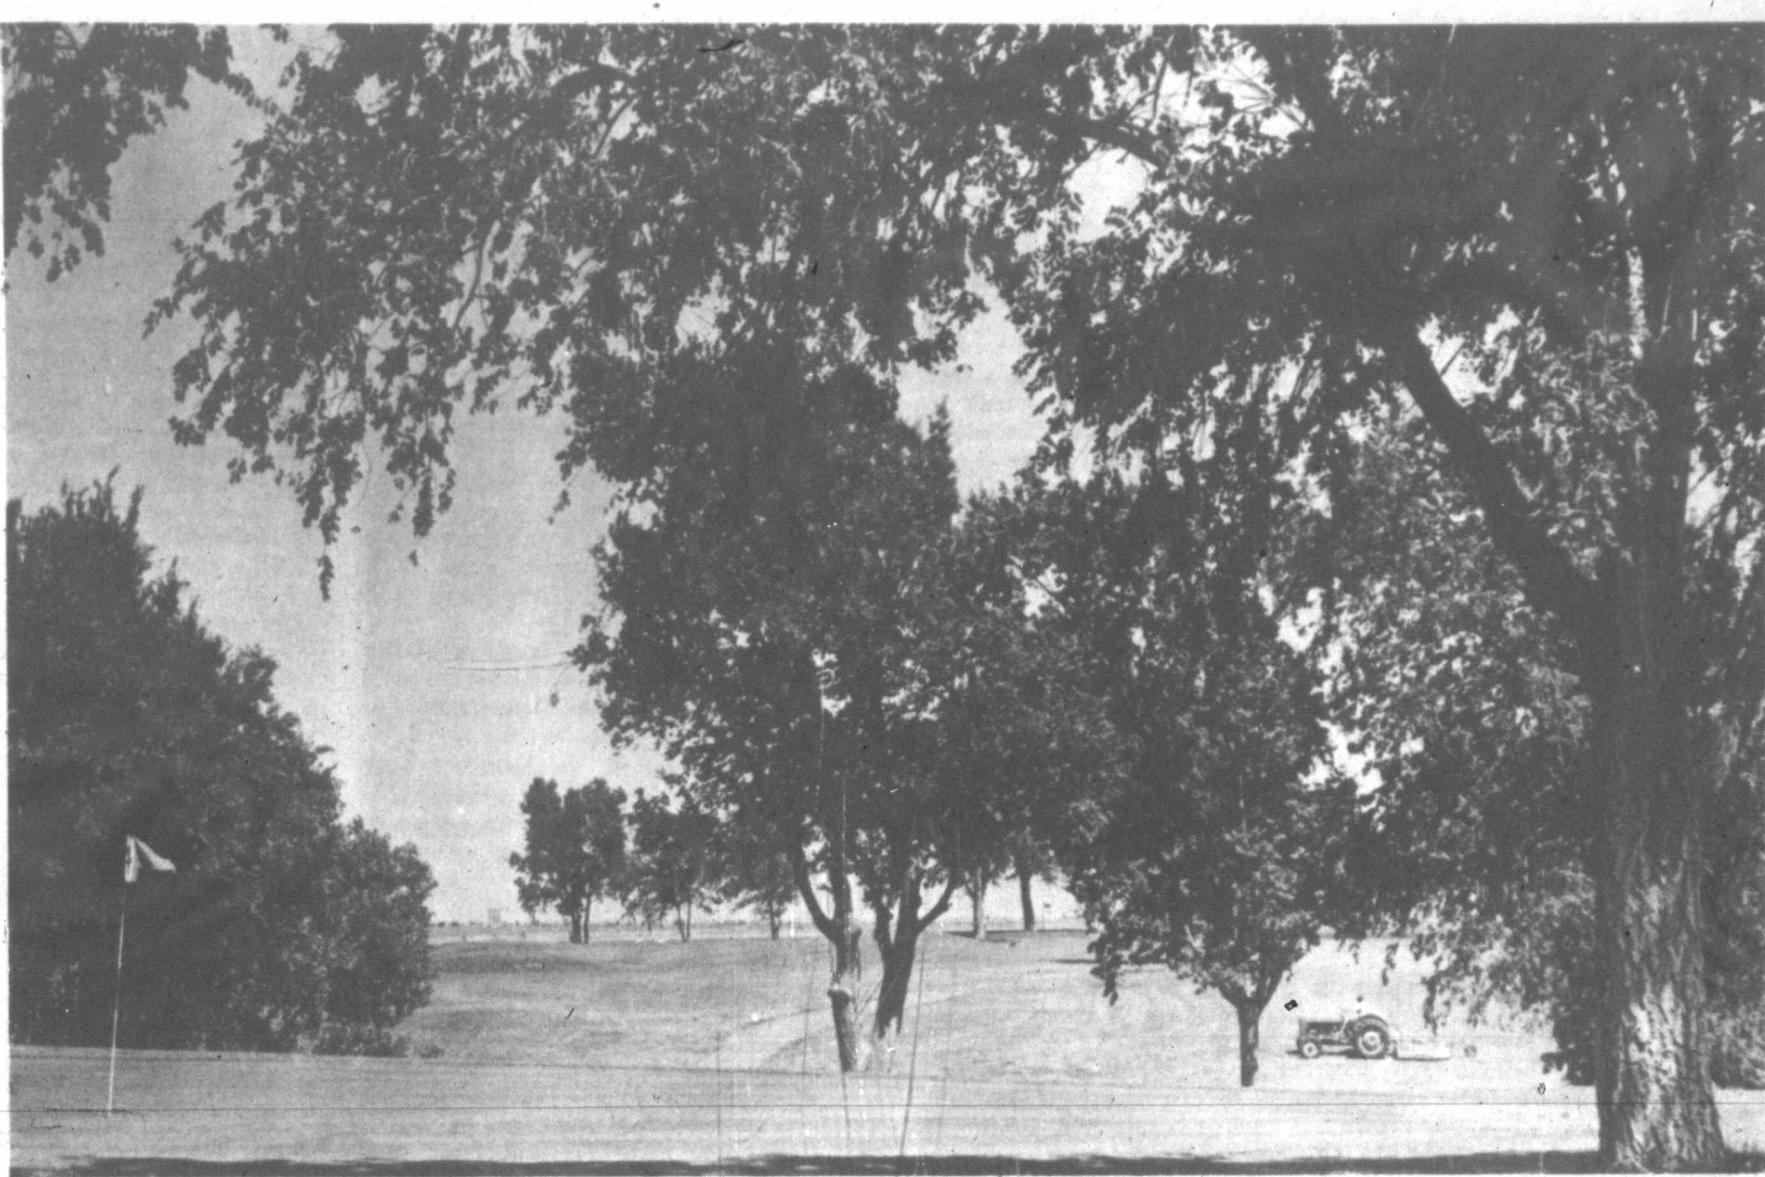

Bill Fitch of Cleveland, the NBA's present coach of the year and coach of the Cavs during the 1972 season, admits how bad his team was.

Fitch says, "I knew our team was bad when the rival coach called the airport all day to make sure our plane got in safely."

Four park policemen have been armed by the Sedalia, Mo., Park Board because of hostile baseball parents and coaches. In recent Little League games, parents and coaches have become angry with umpires and league officials.

In two incidents, park guards came close to fighting with participants.

Since the guards began wearing guns, there have been no major disturbances.

Pampa Country Club was tough 16 years ago when Hart Warren fired a 10-under-par 61, but with more trees and grass and hazards it's a lot tougher these days. That's why Warren's course record has stood through the years and may continue to stand. Lila Austin holds the women's record — a 68. See It Sims To Me. (Pampa News photo by Michal Thompson)

Tougher course now

ASU, Michigan also alive

By DAN EVEN
Associated Press Writer
OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The honor of Eastern baseball has been upheld.

"I don't give a darn what the poll says about us, we proved tonight that we belong here," said Maine Coach John Winkin after his scrappy Black Bears stayed alive in the 30th College World Series.

Maine, 29-8, stopped Washington State 6-3 to survive an elimination round game in the collegiate classic dominated by teams from the West.

Arizona, ranked second to tournament favorite Arizona State, was the night's other victor, thumping Clemson 10-6. The Wildcats' triumph kept alive the possibility of an all Arizona finale. Arizona State, 64-8, and Eastern Michigan, 45-14 — the only unbeaten left among the six teams — had the night off but clash Tuesday night.

Wednesday night, Arizona goes against Eastern Michigan and Maine battles Arizona State.

"I'll tell you, I've coached 30 years and my teams have won 26 different championships, but this is the biggest victory any of them has ever had," said Winkin.

"We don't have the All-Americans, the 400 hitters or the big draft choices but we keep on battling you. It will be a real honor for us to play No. 1. I'm not saying we're going to win but we've earned our chance."

Traditionally, Eastern teams have been doormats in the series. Since 1964, teams from the region Maine represents have compiled a record of 6-20 in the series.

Jack Leggett and John Dumont each knocked in a pair of runs and crafty Steve Conley and Barry LaCasse held Washington State, 43-15, to six hits as Maine won its second straight since an opening-round loss to Eastern Michigan.

After Washington State gained a 1-1 tie on an unearned run, the Black Bears rallied for three runs, two coming on Dumont's first home run of the season.

Sophomore Eric Wilkins took the loss although striking out 12.

Arizona again was impressive in scoring its second straight victory since a first-round loss to Arizona State.

"Our hitters carried us today early," said Coach Jerry Kindall. "But then when they (Clemson) started to come back, our fielding steadied us."

Kindall was referring to the fourth inning with Arizona leading 6-4. A strong throw by two-time All-American center fielder Dave Stegman held a runner at third base and another from rightfielder Pete Van Horne started a rally-killing double play.

Clemson came out of the inning with only one run and it gave the Wildcats some breathing room.

Don Zimmerman knocked in three runs for the Wildcats, 53-17, and Van Horne collected two hits including a solo home run. Bruce Ferguson pitched five and two-thirds innings of effective relief to gain the victory.

Jackson tops Shreveport 2-1

By The Associated Press
Jackson's front-running Mets came to life just in time Monday as they pushed across two runs in the bottom of the ninth inning to dump runnerup Shreveport 2-1 and put another game between the two clubs in the Texas League East.

On other fronts, Amarillo downed Midland 12-2 and moved up a game on West Division leader El Paso, which lost to San Antonio 7-6 in 10 innings, and the Arkansas Travelers edged the Lafayette Drillers 7-6.

In Jackson, Shreveport scored early and held on until the Mets put together a series of singles in the last inning to give reliever John Andrews his third victory against three losses. Rich Andrews absorbed his sixth loss against three victories in relief for Shreveport.

Frazier, Foreman to clash tonight

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Smokin' Joe Frazier will try to "cool it" tonight as he tries to save his career in a fight against George Foreman, who humiliated him in Jamaica almost 3 1/2 years ago.

"He's got to keep his cool," said George Benton, who helps Eddie Futch train Frazier. "If he gets hit, he has to back off and say, 'I got hit and can't let it happen again.'"

On Jan. 22, 1973, Frazier, then the heavyweight champion of the world, was knocked down six times and stopped in two rounds by George Foreman, who was a 3 1/2-underdog. After each of the first five knockdowns, Frazier got up and "smoked" toward Foreman.

But after the first knockdown, Frazier's attack was "smoke" only. The fire belonged to Foreman.

Should Frazier lose his cool tonight it almost assuredly will be "Goodby, Joe."

Frazier's career has reached the brink before. After he lost to Muhammad Ali in their second fight Jan. 28, 1974, there was pressure on Frazier to quit, and Futch told him that if he didn't beat Jerry Quarry big, he should stop fighting. On June 17, 1974, Frazier stopped Quarry in five rounds, surprising him with jabs, straight lefts and rights, all of which made the famed left hook more potent.

There was pressure again on Frazier to quit after he was stopped following 14 grueling rounds against Ali last Oct. 1. When it came time to reach a decision on whether to quit or not, Joe locked himself in his Philadelphia gym with Futch and Benton and went at it with someone described by Futch "as a good young heavyweight."

Saints acquire Joe Gilliam

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — "We certainly can't lose anything," said Coach Hank Stram after the New Orleans Saints claimed Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Joe Gilliam from the waiver list for a mere $100.

Pittsburgh waived Gilliam, one of the National Football League's top passers, after a year of mutual disillusionment.

"We are delighted to get a chance at him," Stram said Monday. "And we're not concerned with what problems he might have had in the past. We'll judge him for ourselves."

But it remained a perplexing situation. When Gilliam was put on waivers, all other teams in the American Conference had first crack at picking him up for the waiver price of $100. They passed.

In the National Conference, Seattle's new Seahawks were first in line. Then it came New Orleans turn to exercise the option. Stram took him.

Aaron homers team by Angels

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Frank Tanana, while rated by many as the American League's best left-handed pitcher, learned Monday night it still is risky to throw a mistake to Hank Aaron.

Aaron, 42, blasted a soft Tanana curve into the left-field seats with two men on, capping a five-run Milwaukee third inning. Don Money and light-hitting Gary Sutherland also homered off Tanana as the Brewers pounded the California Angels 8-2 for their third victory in four games.

Boston blanked Minnesota 5-0 on Rick Wise's one-hitter and Kansas City topped Detroit 5-2 in Monday night's other American League games.

Tanana, 8-5, struck out 10 batters, raising his major league leading total to 123 in 118 1/3 innings, but the Brewers hammered him for nine hits and eight runs before Andy Hassler relieved in the seventh.

"That will never happen to me again this year," Tanana said of his battering. "We've had a tough road trip and I'm tired, but I'm a big league pitcher and should be able to adjust. I didn't adjust. You've got to pitch. You can't be a thrower."

"My curve ball was good, but I lost the hard one about the third inning," he said. "I threw a real soft one to Henry, a roundhouse. I rolled it in instead of snapped it, and he hit it well."

But Aaron wasn't sure he had his 74th career homer, extending his own record, and third this year until the line drive cleared the wall.

The homers raised the total off Tanana this year to 14.

Red Sox 5, Twins 0

"When a pitcher has stuff like that, you just don't hit," said Minnesota's Rod Carew after Rick Wise had stuff like that and blanked the Twins on a jerry.

Jerry Terrell's infield hit in the third inning was the only safety Minnesota managed against Wise, who threw a no-hitter for Philadelphia in 1971.

Royals 5, Tigers 2

Fred Patek doubled home two runs and Al Fitzmorris picked up his eighth victory as Kansas City ruined the major league debut of Detroit's Frank MacMahon.

Mrs. McPhillips finishes in lead

Margaret McPhillips, who won the last race of the spring Friday, finished with the top average speed of the season — 1082.155 yards per minute — of all Top 'O Texas Racing Pigeon Club members.

The average speed was taken from the speeds of all her top birds throughout the season. Jim Cantrell finished second at 1064.550 yards per minute.

Others included Bob Baird, 1025.439; Jonnie Reece, 998.260; R.W. McPhillips, 991.610; A.P. Coombes, 978.569, and A.J. Tipton, 938.884.

Mrs. McPhillips won Saturday's Houston-to-Pampa 500-mile race with a red cock which averaged 1333.27 yards per minute. Her husband, R.W. McPhillips, was second at 1323.84 with a blue bar cock.

Others included Cantrell, red check cock, 1315.86; Reece, red check hen, 1284.18; A.P. Coombes, red check cock, 1261.77; Tipton, blue bar hen, 1195.14; Mrs. McPhillips, blue bar cock, 1187.92, and Reece, dark check with felt hen, 1184.11.

Texas county has 'lots of nothing'

Loving may have US' richest tax roll

Editors Note: God blessed Loving County, Tex. with a vast fortune in oil and natural gas. And the Devil cursed it with heat, sand, undrinkable water and a place off the beaten path. For the county's 112 residents there is good news and bad news. The bad news is there is nothing in Loving County. The good news there is a lot of it.

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

MENTONE, Tex. (AP) — Welcome to Loving County where, says a courthouse sage, "Everything here is unique. Course, there ain't a helluva lot here."

But this arid West Texas county does boast what is perhaps the richest tax roll of any such sparsely-populated county in America.

If the property value was evenly distributed, all 112 of the county's residents could winter on the Riviera each year, and the sheriff could patrol Loving County in a Rolls Royce.

Loving County sits atop an ocean of oil and natural gas.

Yet, it's hard to find drinkable water around here.

Mentone is the home of 20 or so good old boys, a surly sheriff, Newt's beer palace, lizards, snakes, and blowing dust.

Someone put it this way:

"Only those things, animal or vegetable, that can withstand dry weather, blazing sun and blistering wind survive and thrive ... You got to be someone raised in these red hills to live here."

Other than a trillion dollars worth of oil and gas, said Newt's oasis, there's not a great deal that can be said for Loving County and its lousy little capital city.

The closest thing to a brochure says: "Loving County is located in what is known as the West Texas Desert ... It is the least populated county in the United States, with 112 people in an area covering 647 square miles."

(That computes out to more than five square miles per person, although a third of the population is clustered in Mentone.)

Mentone ... has a post office, school house, courthouse, a service station and a cafe. The county has no doctor, no hospital, no Chamber of Commerce, the legend discloses.

The Rondo Mills 4-H Club and the Loving County Historical Survey Committee are the only civic organizations.

Mentone, incidentally, derives its name from a homesick surveyor from Menton, France. And the county is the namesake of Oliver Loving, a Kentuckian who succumbed to a Comanche bullet in 1867.

The two teachers of the Loving County Independent School District hold court daily for about a dozen children in grades one through six.

The 17 junior high and high schoolers attend class at Wink, 31 miles east in Winkler County.

Many of the county officials, while maintaining legal residences in Loving County, find it more convenient to live in Pecos, 23 miles to the south, or Kermit, 32 miles to the east.

The problem is water. Not the quantity but the quality.

An ample supply of underground water contains gypsum mineral deposits. The Pecos River water is salty almost to the point of being brine.

Therefore, ranchers as well as residents must haul fresh water from a far away as Pecos, the town immortalized by Billie Sol Este.

Newt himself, scratching his short cropped reddish gray hair, allowed as how it might be nice to have a water system, but not if it brought sweeping changes to Mentone.

"I'd just as soon it stay like it is," he said. "Really, though, I guess I just don't give a damn."

Although a sign says Keen's Cafe and Grocery, the specialty of the house is beer and burgers, and the groceries are mostly purchased by the six pack.

The motif is Early Disaster, decorated with three beer signs, red and white checkered curtains, a handwritten warning to "Stay on your side of the counter" and two pool tables.

A genial cross between Chill Wills and Slim Pickens, Newt hung him a sign which reads:

"I'm not a fast cook.
"I'm not a slow cook.
"I'm a half-fast cook."

The steady flow of customers, many of them roughnecks and members of countless drilling crews, also are greeted by this bit of cardboard wisdom:

"Be careful of the words you say.
"Keep them soft and sweet.
"You never know from day to day
"Which ones you'll have to eat."

It was while chatting with Newt and his customers that a visitor learned the folly of tracking down the sheriff.

"He don't like writers," one said. "He specially don't like writers with beards."

So the story goes, a bewhiskered free lance writer once dealt lightly with the charms of Loving County and its lawmen in a magazine article, the humor of which escaped the natives, particularly the sheriff.

"He's a buzzard," said a critic of the author. "Naw," said Newt, "he's a good ole boy and a helluva good storyteller."

Newt's partial to storytellers. And since his care is the only business establishment in town besides an Exxon station, he gets ample opportunity to exchange yarns with most everyone who passes through.

Of course, it should be pointed out that nobody accidentally passes through Mentone. It's on the road to nowhere. And to describe Mentone as quiet is equivalent to identifying Margaux Hemingway merely as a girl.

"I told my boss one time," chuckled Doc Shifflett. "Damn you, I never done nothing to you. Why the hell'd you send me down to Mentone? He said, 'Hell, Doc, you didn't expect me to go myself.'"

Nobody seriously disparages Mentone and Loving County, least of all County Judge Don Craeger, 41. Despite 15 years in politics there, he says:

"I don't really consider myself a politician."

A friendly, articulate man, one quite comfortable with a dollar, Craeger said he realized that in the era of Watergate and congressional mistresses, politicians are highly suspect.

"But the reason I don't consider myself political is because everything here is on a personal basis. I was 26 years old when I went into office as a county commissioner. I've been involved here since 1961, and I've enjoyed it," he said.

What's more, he said, Loving County's future is rosier than ever, due in no small part to a lucrative natural gas discovery two years ago that triggered new drilling activity.

"Some of the wells are producing quite prolifically," he said.

The judge said the county tax roll, roughly $4 million in 1972, jumped to $8 million in 1973, flurried with $15 million last year and "I'm hoping it'll reach $25 million this year."

With tax revenues increasing six-fold in four years, one might logically expect the county's 112 residents to be wallowing regally in the Good Life.

"People keep asking what a county with only 112 people is going to do with all that tax money," Craeger told one visitor.

"Well, the first thing we will do is catch up and make up for all the years of neglect when we didn't have any tax money."

The courthouse needs remodeling, he said, needlessly, and there is much work to be done on county roads.

A fresh water system?

"We've never had, we don't have now and I doubt we'll ever have enough money for a water system," he said. "The county would virtually have to finance the whole project and that's impossible."

Let's say there are 30 residents in Mentone and it would cost $200,000 to supply them with fresh water. A guy living half a mile out of town also would be entitled to tap.

"Piping it to each and every household is impossible, and if you ran it to one, the other's would have a right to it too. Pretty soon it would balloon into millions of dollars."

There's just no solution to it that I know of.

Mentone's plight brings to mind the story of the rich but crestfallen Texan pondering his misfortune at the local saloon.

"What's wrong?" he was asked.

"We drilled another water well," he replied. "And struck oil again."

Food stamp bill delayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal court is being asked to delay indefinitely the new Ford administration regulations that eventually would take food-stamp benefits from an estimated 1.66 million families.

The regulations were delayed last month by another judge but his order expires today and 22 states, 73 families, the U.S. Conference of Mayors and 108 private organizations were asking U.S. District Judge John Lewis Smith Jr., for a preliminary injunction against the rules.

In addition to those who would be eliminated from the rolls, some 1.7 million families would have their benefits cut under the new rules. About half the remaining households would have improved benefits.

Generally, the regulations would limit stamps to those families with monthly incomes no more than $100 above the official poverty lines. That's $383 plus $100 for a three-person household.

That monthly income would be calculated by averaging the actual earnings of the previous three months. The present system is based on anticipated income for the month ahead.

Ronald Pollack, director of the Food Research and Action

Center (FRAC) and chief attorney for the coalition, told the court in asking for the injunction that the Agriculture Department has "arbitrarily assumed the function of the legislative branch."

The regulations, ordered by President Ford on Feb. 19, were to go into effect June 1. But on May 28, Judge Howard Corcoran granted the coalition's petition for a temporary restraining order against the new rules.

That order was granted because Corcoran was convinced that "irreparable harm" would be done to recipients if the rules were implemented before it was ruled whether the coalition's objections were valid.

To secure a preliminary injunction, the plaintiffs must persuade Smith that they have a high probability of winning when the legal and constitutional issues are fully argued at yet a third hearing.

Both sides are ready to appeal decisions they lose. So the status quo for the program, which now grants benefits to some 5.8 million families, is expected to be maintained for months.

The program now costs taxpayers about $5.7 billion a year.

The Gray County Bicentennial Committee booth at 'Panhandle Festival '76' with displays of handicraft items is staffed by costumed members of the Home Demonstration Council. Barbara Shaw, left, and Jane Barton worked the booth at the Tri State Fairgrounds in Amarillo Friday. The three day exposition, which closed at 6 p.m. Sunday, opened Friday and offers visitors dramatic reenactments of some Panhandle gunfights. ### Man captured in Austin

HOUSTON (AP) — The man who eluded a police special weapons squad more than six hours last week has been returned here following his arrest in Austin.

Two homicide detectives were sent Monday to Austin to get Horace Tolliver, 55, who is charged with attempted murder.

The Houston police special weapons unit surrounded Tolliver's northeast Houston home last Tuesday after a neighbor, John Harris, 55, was shot in the back while walking to a bus stop.

Loud speakers were used as relatives and police urged Tolliver to surrender. After four hours, tear gas canisters were lobbed into the small after structure.

Two hours later, members of the unit entered the house but found no one inside.

A warrant then was issued for Tolliver's arrest on an attempted murder charge and bond was set at $75,000.

Harris still is in serious condition following surgery. Harris said he had lived in the neighborhood only a short while and did not know Tolliver.

Relatives said Tolliver, a disabled veteran, lived alone and was suspicious of neighbors and some members of his family.

Austin police said a patrolman arrested Tolliver at a bus station after police had received a tip he might be in that area.

play major roles in the party's national convention next month.

Gordon R. Wynne Jr., the producer, says advance sales ranging from $25 to $250 a person have exhausted the 3,000 fried chicken dinners ordered.

He said $5 general admission tickets were placed on sale Monday and that he has hopes at least 7,000 will witness the dinner program.

Wynne said he hopes the dinner will raise enough money to eliminate all indebtedness of the Democratic Party of Texas.

"To do that, we have hopes the net proceeds will exceed $60,000," he said.

In addition to being a fund raiser, the dinner also is to honor Robert Strauss, the first Texan to become chairman of the National Democratic Committee.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., announced Monday he would fly to Houston to help honor Strauss.

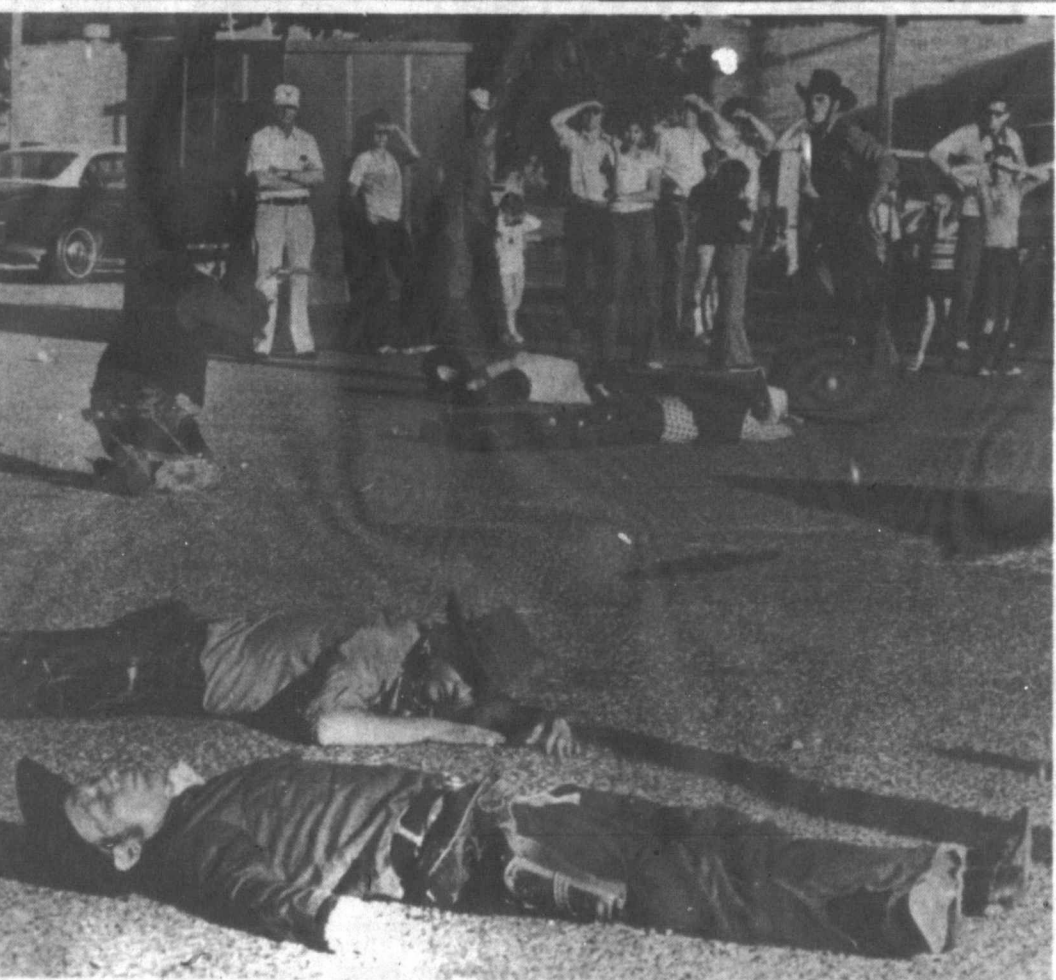

Already on board were Jimmy Carter, the front running candidate for the party's presidential nomination; Sen. Hubert

H. Humphrey, D-Minn., California Gov. Jerry Brown, U.S. Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho and U.S. Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz.

The dinner precedes the Friday-Saturday state convention at which 32 additional Texas delegates will be selected for the July 12-15 national Democratic convention in New York.

Carter won 92 of the 98 delegates selected in the May 1 presidential primary. The other six were pledged to the favorite son candidacy of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., but Bentsen later released them from their commitments.

The state convention's temporary credentials committee begins work Wednesday. A party official said Monday that 14 challenges have been filed with the committee. He said most interest probably will center on a challenge by Carter forces of an uncommitted delegation from state senatorial district 16 in Dallas County.

Drugs enter Marine case

By GREGORY GROSS
Associated Press Writer
SAN DIEGO (AP) — An attorney for a Marine drill sergeant on trial in the death of Lynn McClure says the recruit may have died from an overdose of life-saving drugs instead of a training camp beating.

Daniel Hunter said Monday at the opening of Sgt. Harold L. Bronson's court-martial that McClure received a 400 per cent overdose of two antibiotics, streptomycin and gentamycin, at the Veterans Hospital in Houston a few days before he died.

Hunter, a retired Marine major, said the two drugs should never have been given together. He said he would call two Navy doctors to testify that the drugs could have caused McClure's death.

Bronson, 30, is charged with assault and negligent homicide in the death of McClure, a 20-year-old enlistee from Lufkin, Tex. The drill instructor also is charged with violating general orders and maltreatment of a recruit.

Essentially, Bronson is accused of mishandling a close-combat drill in which McClure was knocked unconscious Dec. 5 by fellow recruits wielding padded pugil sticks.

McClure underwent brain surgery at Balboa Naval Hospital in San Diego but never emerged from his coma. He died in Houston March 13.

The 110-pound McClure was considered a problem recruit by the Marines and was a member of the motivation platoon, a special disciplinary unit. That unit was headed by Bronson, a decorated Vietnam veteran.

Capt. Robert Meredith, a Navy neurosurgeon from Balboa, testified at the court-martial at San Diego's Marine Corps Recruit Depot that McClure was near death when he was brought in for surgery. He also said that recruit could have been fatally struck despite wearing a protective football helmet.

"You can splinter a box without moving the brain inside, as in a skull fracture," said Meredith. "On the other hand, you can pick up that box and move it with such force that it can shatter the gelatin inside."

He said that the only way to prevent such injuries would be to eliminate pugil stick fighting altogether.

Two other drill sergeants from the motivation platoon also face courts-martial in McClure's death. Sgt. Henry E. Aguilar, 23, of Hanford, Calif., faces charges of negligent homicide, aggravated assault, maltreatment and dereliction of duty, as well as violating general orders. S.Sgt. Henry C. Wallraff, 27, of St. Croix, Minn., is charged with dereliction and violating general orders.

None of the men who now faces court-martial is accused of striking the fatal blows. But under military justice, they are held responsible for the alleged misdeeds of men in their commands.

FIRST EDITION

CHICAGO (AP) — A first edition book does not necessarily have special value.

The American Library Assn. says, "Indeed, for the majority of books, the first edition is the only edition. First printings of great works of literature, art, and science are usually sought by collectors, but scarcity and market demand determine the value."

Letters sent to Italy

ROME (AP) — More than 200,000 Americans have written relatives in Italy urging them to vote against the Communists in the national elections next week, the head of a second letter-writing campaign claims.

Paul P. Rao Jr., a New York lawyer who heads an organization called Americans for Democratic Italy, told a meeting Monday night about 500 Americans flew to Italy to try to persuade their kin in person.

He derided the similar letter-writing campaign organized by former Gov. John B. Connally and his Alliance for Mediterranean Freedom as a "publicity stunt" to further Connally's political ambitions. He claimed Connally's campaign has produced no results.

The Italian press has accused Rao's and Connally's groups of interfering in the election campaign. Roberto Faenza, author of the best seller "The Americans in Italy," claimed they are covers "for dangerous interference at a time of grave tension by the Central Intelligence Agency."

"This is no interference," Rao asserted. "If you see a little girl on the street with a bottle of milk in her hands which contains poison and she is about to drink it, you knock it out of her hand. If you didn't, it would be an act of omission. I have a right to be concerned if a country adopts atheistic totalitarianism."

Rao said his organization has been active in 37 American states and Puerto Rico. He mentioned fund-raising dinners and personal contributions and said the group was instrumental in securing the recent allocation of $25 million by the U.S. government for reconstruction in the earthquake-devastated area of northeast Italy.
