"In the past," said Carlson, the President has expressed grave reservations about this type of legislation and strongly believes the way to provide increased employment is through the private sector, and I certainly would not rule out the possibility of a veto.

Death wish in Sweden

Imagine yourself as the manager of a factory. Appointed to that position by its owners, yours is the responsibility for insuring the factory's efficient operation.

To carry out this responsibility, you must assess the mar-ket, decide what is in demand, and thus determine what you are going to produce. Having done this, you must procure the necessary raw materials, machinery and tools, and then hire the workers needed to get the job done.

This accomplisehed, you must then decide which of the hired personnel will make the best foremen and supervisors. Work rules must be established and production methods worked out. Pay scales must be decided.

Then, once in production, marketing procedures will have to be established and the asking (selling) price of whatever it is you are producing determined.

Almost needless to point out, in order to carry out these responsibilities falling upon management, you must also have the necessary authority; for, without that authority, the factory you have been appointed to manage would be an enterprise without direction, an impossible endeavor.

To see just how impossible such an endeavor would be without someone with authority at the helm, now imagine Having gotten the factory into production and serving the public in accordance with what that public has indicated it wants with its purchases in the market place, you are suddenly told the government that you no longer have the authority to make the decisions incumbent upon management. Henceforth, according to that bureaucratic edict, all such decisons must be approved by the workers before they go into effect; which would mean, of course, by majority vote.

In other words, now the factory is to be operated on the principle of the ballot. All important decisions - what is to be produced, and how; wages; promotions; assignment of work; changes in organization or production schedules; the selling prices of output, even the sale of the factory itself all must be voted on and approved by the workers before Putting yourself in such a manager's place, it takes little imagination to see the chaos that would ensue; little, if anything, would get done, and what did get done would, most assuredly, be botched. A booby hatch in charge of the inmates comes readily to mind.

The late Ambrose Bierce observed that a "Conservative" was "a statesman who is enamored of existing evils, as distinguished from the Liberal, who wishes to replace them with others." While it may be difficult to improve upon that statement, I should nevertheless like to sugges that, at least at the three - quarters mark of this century, "liberalism" is an intellectually - dead proposition; "conservatism" has never been position is a compromise between the two.

because it is so effortless. Being a compromise position, the 'moderate' operates on the premise of finding out what everyone else is thinking and splitting the difference. The success of the "moderate cause" (if, indeed, one can refer to a non - philosophical approach as a "cause") is dependent upon the popular acceptance of that most intellectually - absurd proposition: "the truth is always somewhere in between." It's "2 plus 2 equal 5" syndrome: there are some "extremists" who say that 2 plus 2 equal 4 while other "extremists" argue that 2 plus two equal 6. Ergo.

If the "moderate" suffers from philosophical neutrality, the "conservatives" and the "liberals" have an opposing malady. They each operate on the "either-or" approach to an issue: "You are either for us, or against us." On the 'conservative' side, this attitude has found expression in Senator Joseph McCarthy's assertions that anyone opposing his tyranny was a communist." while the Vietnam years gave us the view that anyone opposing the war was obviously a traitor. On the other hand, we find the "liberals" engaged in a similar undertaking: anyone who is opposed to any political program designed to benefit minority groups is clearly a "racist." This, if you are against compulsory school busing, or hiring quotas, or government subsidies for child care centers, or welfare programs, or preferential employment of college - admissions programs, you are more than likely a secret member of the Ku Klux Klan, or a neo-Nazi. The "liberal" will brook about as much opposition to his fantasies and delusions as will the conservative to his. H.L. Mencken did about the best job of dealing with this sort of mentality when he noted: "If you were against the new deal and its wholesale buying of pauper votes, then you were against Christian charity. If you were against the gross injustices and dishonesties of the Wagner labor Act, then you were against packing the Supreme Court. then you were in favor of letting Wall Street do it. If you are against using Dr. Quack's cancer salve, then you are in favor of letting Uncle Julius die. If you are against Holy Church, or Christian Science, then you are against God. It is an old, old argument.

If there is anyone who can share my sense of boredom with this system of "vacuum politics," then they can appreciate why I fail to get excited over the prospect of a Ford vs. Reagan, or Carter vs. Udall, or Humphrey vs. anybody confrontation.

Soviet strength rests on weak foundation

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON - (NEA) - The Soviet Union is dangerous precisely because it is a second-rate power in everything but military strength. And may be on the downhill road.

Soviet technological advances, the basis for significant economic-industrial growth except in the field of materials production and routine manufactures, cannot match those of the United States or other major Western countries.

The Russians are slipping further and further behind. Soviet agriculture is a shambles despite impressive inputs of capital and heavy thinking on the problem at the Kremlin level. Soviet management does not seem to do significantly better when complete modern high-technology factories are installed ready to operate down to the last push button, even when fitted with highly redundant backup systems to serve in case of breakdowns. We are not here talking of economic collapse, rather of Soviet ability to compete economically in an increasingly technological world, where efficiency is a crucial factor. This is not either to belittle Soviet theoretical scientists who can match their abilities with the world's finest. Or Soviet artists. Or writers. Or engineers. It's rather that the economic system is so tied in with Soviet ideology that it apparently cannot be changed without severely straining the power structure on which the men in the Kremlin depend

This same fumbling applies to Soviet relationships with other nations, particularly those whose actions the Russians would like to influence. Where there is no mammoth Soviet army on the border, the Soviets almost invariably lose their influence, even in fellow Communist nations. Exceptions, such as Cuba, are infrequent, and occur apparently only when the recipient is deeply in need of continued aid and sees no other open door. Or during limited periods when the objectives of the nation being helped and those of the Soviet Union run

Combine these failings then with the proven Soviet ability. though at great cost in technical manpower and in rubles, to mount a broad development of its armed forces, both nuclear and conventional.

What then happens as the Soviet Union begins to slip further behind the West in industry, as in agriculture? And when its immediate successes, as in India, Angola, Afghanistan, begin to sour — as has been the case with Egypt and a wide assortment of other nations where Soviet influence once seemed firmly in control? Here then will be the period of danger. Having a strong military force, knowing that no nation would likely intervene given the danger of nuclear war, and having confidence in its own highly developed civil evacuation system aimed at reducing nuclear casualties, some Soviet ruler could act either in overconfidence or in the belief that action was necessary before the balance of polito-economic power shifted too far against the USSR. There are, however, strong rays of hope. Historically, even in the midst of its aggressions, the Soviet leaders have been extremely cautious men, leaving themselves wide avenues for silent retort even in the midst of military operations. This was true in the undeclared war with Japan in the 1930s when whole divisions were destroyed - but the actions never publicized at home or abroad. This was true in Soviet excursions into Iran in the World War II era. And in the Cuban missile crisis. The Soviet leaders of this and past eras have been prone to copper their bets. And in all-out war there is no possible way to be smugly, secure.

There are also faint signs that some conservative U.S. government analysts interpret as an attempt by the Soviet. bureaucracy to bring its more militant members, civilian and military, under tighter control. If this attempt is real, and if it succeeds, the outlook will be improved. True bureaucrats are, by nature, extremely cautious. And caution, of course, makes war less likely.

Noting that an officer was required to supervise the closecombat drills, Ullman said that a captain had been transferred from the Special Training

"It became apparent there were going to be times when I was not going to be able to be present at these activities." he said. "It was not realistic to adhere to the standard operating procedure."

Bronson, on the witness stand, described McClure as an obstinate malingerer and a coward who resented authority and refused to join in close combat bouts with padded 12pound pugil sticks.

There's sure to be controversy over a new book, due out next month, which says Mexico's Gen. Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna may have been born in this country to an Anglo father and an Indian mother.

Written by a retired English professor, the volume further recites that the general from whom Texas gained independence possibly went from his native Kentucky to train at the U.S. Military Academy.

In strong contradiction, records in Mexico state that Santa Anna was born of Spanish parents Feb. 12, 1795 at Jalapa, Mexico, and his only military academy experience was as a cadet at age 15 in a Spanish military school in Mexico City. These records further show that his first experience outside Mexico was on exile to Jamaica in 1844.

Martha Anne Turner, author of the new book, acknowledges that the story is "hung on a slender thread" stemming from two sources-one an account left from a paternal grandmothér to Martha Reiner, a Fairfield, Ohio, schoolteacher. and another from the autobiography of American humorist Irvin S. Cobb which he heard from his paternal grand-

In similar vein a Texas historian who edited Santa Anna's memoirs for publication in 1967, Ann Fears Crawford, said legends about him "are as plentiful as Pancho Villa's saddles." She added. "Santa Anna was his own myth maker. Although the theory may very well be true. I would have to see historical documents that prove it." Miss Turner reports the Louisville Courier-Journal and other newspapers have carried parts of the legend. Her book is The Yellow Rose of Texas from Shoal Creek Publishers.

Santa Anna may have been the son of Nathaniel Saunders and an unnamed Indian girl. He became known as "Bull" because of his strength and a violent temper.

At West Point he starred in military strategy but failed on discipline. He fled to Mexico after being accused of killing the father of a girl who claimed 'Bull' had violated her History records that Santa Anna, who liked to call himself the 'Napoleon of the West. slaughtered a band of Texans at the Alamo but subsequently his army was put to flight and he was captured in 1836 at the Battle of San Jacinto.

Texas Gen. Sam Houston arranged for Santa Anna to visit President Jackson and the defeated general-Saunders-succumbed to traveling through his native Kentucky. Members of a mob who had lost relatives tried to lynch him, but Santa Anna placated them by shouting his Kentucky name and telling of his flight from that state.

DEAR ABBY: Today in your column I read a letter from Mrs. R. D. Watt of Bloomington, Ind., whose son, David, was killed in an auto accident. She said her son had carried a signed UNIFORM DONOR CARD issued by the Kidney Foundation stating his wishes to donate his kidneys at death, but because his wallet had not been thoroughly examined at the scene of the accident, and they (his parents) were too grief-stricken at the time to think of it, David's wishes were not carried out.

I want Mrs. Watt to know that after reading her letter I called the Kidney Foundation and requested a donor card so I could be like David Watt, who signed such a card in hopes of saving someone's life.

FEELING BETTER IN YORK, PA.

DEAR FEELING BETTER: Your thoughtful gesture will not only comfort David's parents; there is no telling how many others will be inspired to follow your generous example. Bless you.

DEAR ABBY: Last Christmas I became engaged to a fine young man from Los Angeles. We planned a summer wedding. I was born on a farm in Iowa. My parents sold the farm and are now living in a retirement village near L.A. My future in-laws are quite well-to-do and social. My fiance's mother announced our engagement in two newspapers. I couldn't believe my eyes when I read that I was "the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. So and So and a graduate of the University of Iowa!' When I asked my fiance's mother why she did such a thing she said, "I couldn't very well have said you were a former waitress whose father had been a farmer!' Abby, I'm not ashamed of being a former waitress OR a farmer's daughter. My parents saw the announcements and were humiliated. They think perhaps we should forego plans for a large wedding because his relatives and friends will be majored in in college. I've always wanted a lovely wedding, but I hate to subject my parents to further humiliation. How can we handle this mess?

DEAR SPEECHLESS: What mess? Why give up the kind of wedding you want because your fiance's mother is a liar and a snob? If questioned, tell the truth, and advise your parents to do the same. If there's any humiliation to be suffered, your future mother-in-law will be the one to suffer

DEAR ABBY: GRANDMA makes a good point when she criticizes young housewives for buying only TV dinners, frozen chicken pies and boxes of mixes.

My bride used to dish up similar junk foods along with plenty of canned goods. One day I finally said to her, 'Honey, why don't you make things from scratch like my mother used to?"

My dutiful wife high-tailed it down to the corner grocery store, walked up to the proprietor and asked, "Where do you keep the scratch?' HAPPILY EVER AFTER IN OMAHA

I was told years afterward that my stomach could not absorb vitamin B-12 and that I should have an injection once a month which I have been doing. Am I taking too much or too little in your opinion? I'm fairly active for my age, do not smoke and take alcoholic drinks

DEAR READER - Inability to absorb vitamin B-12 resulting in pernicious anemia is a common complication of removal of a major portion of the stomach. Why? Because the stomach forms a substance called intrinsic factor that combines with the B-12 to enable it to be absorbed. One cause of pernicious anemia is the loss of the stomach's ability to form intrinsic factor. This is frequently accompanied with a decrease or absence of the formation of normal stomach acid. After surgery the stomach may gradually increase in size again and there is a certain amount of regeneration. What happens depends a lot on how much of the stomach was actually removed. It is possible that you no longer need to take vitamin B-12 shots but the only way to find out is to let vour doctor test vou.

I would not recommend. stopping taking B-12 unless your doctor tells you it would be all right to do so. Absence of B-12 could lead to permanent damage to nerve tracts in your spinal cord and other complications. These changes could slip up on you without you being aware of any

Mammoth macrame

The macrame hanging basket towers above its maker, Fred Godwin, 1628 N. Sumner. The basket is 13 feet tall, the largest of Godwin's current collection of macrame crafts. Living in Pampa since his retirement, Godwin has been doing macrame for the past two years and has made approximately 100 baskets. He started the craft when he was a boy living on a ranch near Mobeetie, tying bridles and halters for the horses.

Fred Godwin's been married only once, but he's tied the knot many times

Knots are the key to Godwin's hobby - craft, macrame, which fills his spare time now that he

"It's just knot - tying," he explained, "but of course you have to know how to tie the knots. There are several different kinds. Godwin, of 1628 N. Sumner, uses everything

"I started as a young feller tying bridles and halters for horses." he said. He grew up on a ranch in the early 1900s near Mobeetie.

That was when I was about nine or 10 years old. I forgot about it until about two years ago. and I just started up again.

Mrs. Godwin is glad he did. "He's 73," she said. 'and has worked all his life. He's a guy that will just never sit still a minute. I crochet, do embroidery and knit, and he just has to have something to do. too.

White, non-white infant mortality rate narrows

BALTIMORE (AP) - Federally-subsidized family planning programs appear to narrow the gap between white and nonwhite infant mortality rates, according to a study by Johns Hopkins

The study showed that increases in the use of family planning services by poor women of the child bearing age were paralleled by decreases in non-white infant mortality rates between 1969 and Non-white infant mortality in nine Maryland counties fell by more than 26 per cent during this period, while the use of family planning services by needy non-white women rose by 26 per cent.

Drs, Melvyn Thorne and Lawrence Green, who conducted the study, said the lower infant mortality rate cannot be accounted for by general improvement in the living conditions in the counties since they did not experience a pattern of higher incomes or improved social services

The researchers said available data does not indicate that prenatal clinic visits, well-baby services, improved immunization or the availability of abortion accounted for the improvements in the non-white infant mortality

Instead. Thorne and Green reasoned that the use of birth control reduces the infant mortality rate by reducing the number of high risk infants

Doctors associate infant mortality with poverty, very young and very old maternal age, short birth intervals, and with large numbers of children born to one woman.

In the base years of 1969 and 1970, the study showed that only 18 per cent of the needy, nonwhite women in the counties studied were making use of birth control services supplied by state and

In 1973 and 1974. 41 per cent of the target population was using the services. The number of active non-white users of public birth control facilities increased from 2.488 to 5,508 during the

The study, which covered counties where there were more than 10 non-white infant deaths during 1969 and 1970, showed the greatest decreases in non-white infant mortality to be in the counties which also had the greatest increases in the porportion of needy women using public family planning services

In the two-year base period, Prince Georges County had 137 non-white infant deaths. In 1972 and 1973 after the expansion of federally funded family planning services, the county had 106 nonwhite infant deaths

Non-white infant deaths in the county declined from 27 per 1,000 live deaths to 19 per 1,000 live

The garden or sweet pepper is native to tropical America and was used by the Indians long before Columbus and other explorers set foot on our shores. However, this particular type of pepper got lost in the shuffle and was reintroduced to North America by European colonists. Now, sweet green peppers are favorites of home gardeners and chefs throughout the country. Stuffed peppers are extremely popular. Rice or sauerkraut are very familiar fillings but one cook swears by her mother's stuffing which combines beef, pork, potatoes and cheese while another exented and came up with combination of peanut butter, rice and kidney beans for a base.

Higher canning costs cut into food budgets

By Gaynor Maddox

In other times "home canning" was the economy cry of women throughout the country. But today women are realizing that home canning is not the money saver it once was.

'Times change, customs change and economic patterns change." states nutrition specialist. Anita Dean, at Michigan State University. "In the Middle West, where more canning is done than in any other part of the country. we have found that the cost of the food women put up is often the biggest factor in the total cost of preserving food at home. And the cost very often depends on the source of the food," she adds

"Gifts of produce from friends with overproducing gardens reduces the costs of preserving foods immensely. she says. "Growing your own produce - vegetables and small fruits - is probably the next most economical way to get food for processing. Buying from a pick-your-own operation, a farmer's market or a roadside produce stand is another fairly low-cost op-

Storage of your canned foods is important. They need a cool, dark place that does not get cold enough for food to freeze. Storage in an overly warm area lowers the quality of the food. And storage in a hard to get to spot may lead to waste because you have forgotten the food is there.

Because of the initial cost of a home freezer and the expense of operating it, home freezing is usually more expensive than home canning. Dr. Dean says. "Homemakers often prefer freezing to canning, however, because freezing is easier and it preserves more of the fresh-from-the garden taste.

Mineral wells gets two

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - Two new industries that moved to Mineral Wells in May will add more than $10 million to the economy and generate nearly 400 jobs, the Texas Industrial Commission said Tuesday.

Statewide there were 14 new industries that moved to Texas during May bringing with them an economic impact of $67.2

"Locations chosen by these companies are in the expected metro areas of the state," said Jim Harwell, executive director of the commission, "but also in smaller communities like Mineral Wells which is doing a fine

WASHINGTON - For the past 20 years, Texas Rep. John Young, has been one of the lesser known names in Congress.

l've not hardly heard anything about Young one way or another," said an aide to a Texas congressman He's somebody you don't hear

Until June 11. Young was merely one of four in Congress with the same last name. But on that date he rose from an obscure Corpus Christi prominence when the New York Times disclosed that the Justice Department had investigated charges that he paid a premium salary to a female staffer in return for sexual favors.

The Times also said the Justice Department decided not to pursue the case because of the difficulty in corroborating the charges, lodged by Colleen Gardner, now a student here. The allegations, coming in the wake of similar charges against Rep. Wayne Hays, D-O., caught those who worked with Young by complete surprise.

congressman," said Rep. Jack Hightower D-Vernon These revelations seem to be out of.

To his colleagues, Young appeared as a private man who regularly attended Texas related functions, such as congressional lunches, dinners and meetings, but did not frequently participate on the Capitol Hill cocktail circuit. As a congressman, several Republicans and Democrats interviewed by the News' Washington Bureau, described Young as an able if not exciting Physically, Young is one of the House's most unmistakable sights. A big paunchy man, his dark glasses the suffered an eye injury during World War II) and his bow - tie strikingly separates him from many of his colleagues. But his committee assignments and his state oriented legislative direction more than anything else seem to have contributed to a lack of visibility in the House.

The only Texan on the 16-member House Rules Committee, which must clear most major pieces of legislation. Young frequently goes to bat for bills pushed by his Texas colleagues. Late last year, for example, he helped steer through a favorable rule for a natural gas bill sponsored by Rep. Robert Krueger, D-New Braunfels. He also played a key role in getting Rep. Dale Milford's, D-Grand Priaire, resolution through the House this year calling for an ethics committee probe of how a secret CIA report became public.

Young is also in line next year for the chairmanship of the Joint Committee on Atomic, Energy. Both on this panel and in the Rules Committee, he has gained a reputation as a staunch supporter of the energy interests person," continued Anerson, one of the more highly regarded House members. "He's short tempered and has a very, very short fire.

Many of his colleagues consider Young a "fair - to middlin" coangressman, as he was described in a recent issue of Texas Monthly, a magazine published in Austin. While he

He made it very clear on members as having only passing interest in atomic energy, he has, according to one source. shown new interest in the panel.

When he realized he was in line to become chairman," said 'He's a very outspoken one member of the committee. "I think he took a great deal of new interest in it.

> Gardner has hired by Young as a legislative research assistant for both the Rules Committee and the atomic energy panel. One of the complaints of Gardner, who had no prior experience in nuclear affairs before taking the job. was that Young showed little interest in most energy matters

Young has asked the House ethics committee, formally known as the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct. to investigate Gardner's story. However, the panel is not required to conduct a probe unless it is formally requested by a member, and a committee spokesman said that as of June 14 it had received on such Generally, the sentiment on Capitol Hill is that the allegations against Young are at least somewhat different than the charges against Hays.

Wheat better than expected

County Extension Agent

Wheat yield reports have been above expectations. I really had thought our wheat could turn out above average this year due to weather conditions in April and Once it started to rain this spring most farmers received enough moisture to keep their wheat growing fairly well. Rain also helped keep temperatures below normal during the spring grain - making season. The temperature factor probably played a big part in helping to have good test weights and good yields. We just didn't have any real hot, dry, windy days back there when the wheat was blooming and making grain. STARS The recent cattle - on - feed report estimated that in the seven major cattle feeding states there were 7,254,000 head on feed, an increase of 24 per cent from last year's record low number for June 1, but still 8 per cent less than the same date in According to the Western

Livestock Roundup, feeder cattle prices probably will remain above slaughter cattle prices most of the time for the next three - four years. Renewed strength in the upcoming months may depend greatly on slaughter cattle prices. In this respect, owners of feeder cattle will be affected by marketing patterns of slaughter cattle. If feedlots return to a more current supply condition, feeder cattle prices probably will reach By fall, some weakness in willing or able to pay for replacement cattle. If favorable weather persists and a large feed grain crop is harvested. demand for feeder cattle may be sufficient to minimize a price decline from the expected summer peak. All of this serves to point out that there are many current unknowns related to the cattle situation. The weather and marketing patterns of both fats and feeders as well as pork will play a big part in determing the actual path of cattle prices. Having returned from the College Station area, I can report that Central Texas is going to make a good crop of sorghum. Most of it is in the heading to bloom stage and appears to have adequate soil moisture to make a crop if no further rain is received the grass condition had been excellent but was declining as pastures were beginning to dry out. There still was ample forage available and it still was green. Most cattle appeared to be in good condition.

I had several inquiries about the moths that invaded everyone's house a few weeks back. These were the adult, butterfly stage of cutworms. One reason we seemed to have a lot of them this year probably could be attributed to the mild winter we had. There wasn't the natural die - off that very cold weather can cause. There isn't much that can be done to prevent or control them because as adults they do not feed on slaughter cattle prices could be anything. They seem to be attracted from great distances

National crop outlook good

By DON KENDALL

AP Farm Writer WASHINGTON (AP) - Despite tornadoes, hail and other weather violence which often accompany them this time of year, recent thunderstorms have helped give Midwest corn and other crops needed moisture in many areas and have bolstered prospects for bumper harvests this fall.

By June 13, according to the Agriculture Department, the corn crop generally was "in good condition and growing ast as warmer temperatures caused plant growth to spurt...

However, officials said Tuesday in a weekly weather summary, soil moisture was still short in the north central states although rain brought temporary relief in northern Minnesota. But the height of corn by June 13 lagged in some areas because of earlier cool weather. In Illinois, the crop was report-

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. Richard Schweiker says his staff is pursuing a number of leads on the assassination of President Kennedy that could link the 1963 slaving to either a pro-or anti-Cuban conspiracy.

The leads were not disclosed in the Senate intelligence committee's report on the assassination. Schweiker said. The committee report was released Wednesday, revealing a pattern of noncooperation between key CIA and FBI officials and the Warren Commission, which concluded that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in killing Ken-

One lead mentioned in the Senate committee report. involving the "strange travel" of a Cuban-American with a possible tie to Oswald and Cuban intelligence, also is being pursued. Staffers are checking a reported sighting of the man in Dallas at the time of the Kennedy assassination in November 1963. Schweiker said.

The Pennsylvania Republican refused to disclose any details concerning one "very hot lead" that would link the assassination to an anti-Cuban group or another "very promising" lead involving pro-Cuban forces. saying to do so would jeopardize the investigation.

Schweiker commented following the release of a 106-page report Wednesday which said the CIA and FBI failed to follow up leads that "might have substantially affected the course of the investigation' into whether there was a conspiracy to kill Kennedy.

The committee stressed it did not uncover evidence justifying a conclusion that there was a conspiracy to assassinate Kennedy. But the panel said the failure of the CIA and FBI to pursue certain leads "impeaches the process" which led the Warren Commission to conclude that Oswald acted alone.

Noting the controversy that has surrounded the Kennedy assassination for more than 12 years, the committee said that regrettably, this report will not put the matter to rest." The month, recommended that the investigation be continued by the new permanent Senate Intelligence Committee.

Schweiker headed the panel's investigation into the Kennedy assassination but is not a member of the new committee

Daniel Inouve. D-Hawaii, chairman of the new committee, predicted in an interview Wednesday that it would take about six months before the panel will be ready to decide whether to continue the probe.

The report released Wednesday described in detail three leads which raised the possibility of Cuban involvement but which it said were never adequately investigated.

The report said "it is difficult to understand why the CIA did not investigate the possibility that Cuba's Fidel Castro knew about a 1963 CIA plot against his life and ordered Kennedy's death in retaliation

The plot, involving an undercover agent code-named AM-LASH, continued even though reports received by the CIA during the fall of 1963 contained information which should have raised questions about the operation's security." suggesting AM-LASH may have been a double agent working with Cuban intelligence.

Schweiker said he would be unable to pursue the possibility that the AM-LASH plot triggered Kennedy's assassination because members of his staff do not have needed clearances for access to CIA documents.

The report said that in December 1963 the CIA received information that the flight was delayed for five hours awaiting an unidentified passenger who arrived in a twin-engined aircraft at 10:30 p.m. and boarded the Cubana plane without passing through customs where he would have needed to identify

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - Jimmy Connors, looking to regain the Wimbledon title he lost to Arthur Ashe last year, will need every ounce of energy his 5-foot-10 frame can provide to reach the 1976 final.

Finley-Kuhn showdown to soon reach court

WASHINGTON (AP) - Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley will soon have their monumental hassle aired in the halls of Congress in addition to the courts and news media.

Finley shocked the sports world June 15 by holding a clearance sale of players who led the A's to three world championships He handed pitcher Rollie Fingers and outfielder Joe Rudi to the Boston Red Sox for $1 million apiece. then dealt pitcher Vida Blue to the New York Yankees for $1.5

Three days later, Kuhn pulled an even bigger shocker. He voided the deals, saying he was taking his lawsuit-producing action in the interest of preserving baseball's integrity. The new House Select Committee on Professional Sports want the two combatants, along with owners George Steinbrenner of the Yanks and Tom Yawkey of the Red Sox, to come to Washington to defend their positions before the panel. Some members want them here for a hearing next week. Chairman B.F. Sisk, D-Calif., said at the panel's first meeting Wednesday that an attempt will be made to schedule a hearing next week or, if that's not pos sible, the week of July 19.
