Twister flattens Arkansas community

CABOT, Ark. (UPI) — It took less than a minute Monday for a tornado to flatten the business district of this small central Arkansas town.

Five persons were killed and more than 100 injured. At least 60 buildings were destroyed.

State Police late Monday confirmed 10 persons were killed, then dropped the total to six and today said there were five victims. State Police said there were "scattered reports of people missing."

The dead were as J. L. Logston, 27, Robert Maul, 46, Sandra Eisenhower, 10, her mother, Linda Lee Eisenhower, 38, and Vanessa Kay Sory, 2.

A visibly shaken Gov. David Pryor viewed the disaster and said it was a "miracle" that more persons were not killed or injured.

"It's unbelievable the power of the tornado that hit here," Pryor said. "And I guess the amazing thing is, looking at all the damage — the whole town is literally wiped out — is that more people were not killed or injured. I think that is still one of the miracles."

"We don't know how many people were in the downtown business district (which took the brunt of the tornado), we hope we've pulled them all out, we hope we've got everybody," said Sgt. John Chambers of the State Police.

Another Arkansas tornado Monday killed a 67-year-old man at Drasaco in Cleburne County and injured five other persons.

Four of the Cabot victims were in the offices of the Winwood Realty Co. when the tornado crashed in the walls. The entire downtown section was destroyed, every one of the 60 or so buildings flattened. The number of injured in the town of 3,571 was virtually impossible to calculate.

"The ambulances just showed them out of here and took them to hospitals all over," Reinold said. The National Weather Service said 150 persons may have been injured. The American Red cross said 37 were treated at hospitals, 33 hospitalized and "countless" injuries treated in the field.

Grocery owner Jake Lowman heard the emergency sirens and was trying to get home to check on his family.

"I headed across town to see about my family but before I could get into the house I slid into a ditch and watched the whole thing," said Lowman.

"It took about 45 seconds for the entire downtown area to be wiped out," Loman said. "Cars were stacked two and three deep. It just made a great noise and I saw the trees and the debris flying while on my stomach in the ditch."

Linda Straugh who lived at the edge of town had just driven up to her house moments before the tornado struck at 3:20 p.m.

"We saw this white looking swirl coming up and we could see that it was a tornado only because of the papers and stuff going through the air," she said.

"And so we took four of the children and put 'em in the bathtub and took a mattress off the bed and put it over them and the tornado hit and we could hear stuff hitting the house and going over. Of course everything was torn up outside, but none of us got hurt."

A tornado cut a path two miles long and 200 yards wide in Canton, Miss. Civil Defense officials placed the toll there at five dead, with more than 150 persons injured, at least 15 in critical or serious condition.

Another twister crushed a 67-year-old man to death in the rubble of his home and injured five other persons at Drasko, Ark.

In all, the National Weather Service said at least 41 tornadoes were reported Wednesday in seven states — Arkansas, Mississippi, Tennessee, Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri and Illinois.

Tornadoes spun out of stormy skies in South Central Texas today, toppling trailer houses and knocking down powerlines.

Ten persons were injured in a twister that struck Garfield, 15 miles southeast of Austin, at 1 a.m., and five were injured at Center Point, 10 miles southeast of Kerrville, at 2:27 a.m. None of the injuries were serious.

The Garfield twister overturned several mobile homes and severed powerlines. The injured were all taken to Austin's Brackenridge Hospital.

The Center Point twister knocked down telephone lines and powerlines. The injured were taken to Sid Peterson Hospital in Kerrville. A weak cold front moving out of the state caused the wild weather. Behind the front there was snow in the Panhandle, while ahead of the front there were record high temperatures.

Alice, in South Texas, had a high of 100 Monday while Dalhart, in the Panhandle, had a high of only 43.

Travelers advisories were issued for the Panhandle and high wind warnings were in effect for the mountain passes in far West Texas. The storm, the remains of a front which left a half foot of snow in Denver Sunday, is expected to break up and leave the state today.

Ford will veto defense cut

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford has dared Congress to cut defense spending. He says he will veto any military bills that are less than he wants and vows to go to the people if Congress disagrees.

In a planned nonpolitical honors ceremony Monday at the Pentagon, the President also took on some of his critics, who say the United States lags behind the Soviet Union in military strength.

"We remain unsurpassed, and we intend to keep it that way," he said.

There may be a challenge to Ford's veto warning today from one powerful element of Congress.

The Senate Budget Committee has scheduled a debate on defense spending limits, and its figure is expected to be less than Ford's total request of $114.9 billion — the $112.4 Pentagon request plus nuclear weapons money in the Energy Research and Development Administration budget.

The House budget panel also wants to start debate today, but it's behind schedule and will probably get to it later in the week.

Pentagon lobbyists will watch these debates to get an idea of the fate of separate authorization bills, since there is no single one with the $112.7 billion figure. The budget committee resolutions cannot be vetoed and, in fact, they don't have the power of law, still, their limits can be used persuasively in floor debate.

"I want to serve notice today that if the Congress sends me a defense budget that shortchanges the future safety of the American people, I will veto that defense bill, unprecedented though that may be, and go directly to our fellow citizens, 215 million strong, on this life and death issue," Ford said Monday.

So far, the congressional leadership has given little indication of problems. On March 12, the Senate Appropriations and Armed Services Committees both recommended to the budget committee that the Pentagon requests be approved almost intact.

The House Armed Services

Committee recommended $33.4 billion for weapons purchases and research, including a $2 billion increase in shipbuilding, on March 18. It also approved $3.3 billion for military construction, a scant $39.5 million reduction. Funds for operation, maintenance, and pay of the troops do not need separate authorizations.

Rep. Brock Adams, D-Wash., chairman of the House budget panel, wants to cut $7 billion from the Pentagon request. He says Ford's figure would increase spending by 23 per cent.

West Germany aids Egypt

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — West Germany granted Egypt aid of $90 million today and promised it still more as a sign of solidarity with President Anwar Sadat.

The aid was provided in an agreement signed here today by West German Foreign Minister Hans Dietrich Genscher and Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismael Fahmi.

Diplomatic sources said that the aid would not include the arms shipments Sadat seeks to replace those he said the Russians refused to deliver. He abrogated the Egyptian friendship treaty with the Soviet Union last week because of the arms embargo.

Sadat, on the second day of his two-week trip to Europe in search of arms and aid, conferred for two and one-half hours at the Chancellery with Chancellor Helmut Schmidt.

"The meeting fulfilled all my expectations," he told reporters in a brief impromptu news conference he held with Schmidt. But in answer to a question, he added, "We did not discuss arms."

"We will continue our aid efforts to Egypt," Schmidt told newsmen.

After their first conference, Schmidt gave a luncheon for Sadat. Sadat said he had been looking forward to his meeting with Schmidt because he had heard so much about him from Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

Sadat was scheduled to confer with former West German Chancellor Willy Brandt, the chairman of the ruling Social Democratic party Wednesday.

Under the Genscher-Fahmi agreement West Germany will give Egypt capital aid of $40 million and a credit to buy goods of $50 million.

Genscher in a brief speech at the signing ceremony in the Foreign Ministry said the aid is an expression of Bonn's solidarity with the policies of Sadat designed to bring peace to the Middle East.

Genscher said West Germany is willing to do everything in its power to support Egypt's economic development.

He said he hoped the aid agreement and Sadat's five-day visit to West Germany would be milestones in cooperation and friendly relations between the two nations.

Sadat and Schmidt conferred at the chancellery at the same time as Genscher and Fahmi met at the foreign ministry. Sadat said he had been looking forward to seeing Schmidt because he had heard so much about him from Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Forces fire into crowd of Arabs in Israel

DEIR HANA, Israel (UPI) — Security forces opened fire on a crowd of rioting Arabs today, killing three demonstrators in the early hours of the first general strike by the nation's minority Arabs.

The renewed violence raised the death toll in northern Galilee to four in what may be the worst outbreak of Arab rioting in Israel since the birth of the Jewish nation.

A government spokesman said troops and police shot and killed three Arab youths in the village of Sakhin hours after killing another young Arab in nearby Deir Hana.

The spokesman said the security forces fired warning shots first in an attempt to break up a crowd of Arabs hurling stones, bottles and firebombs.

He said the troops fired into the crowd when the Arabs ignored the warning.

Nine policemen and soldiers were wounded in the confrontation. Seventy Arabs were arrested.

The spokesman said a group of rock-throwing Arabs stormed a police patrol car in the town of Tayiba, 22 miles north of Tel Aviv, and set the auto on fire. Five policemen were injured.

Unconfirmed reports said the Arabs opened fire on the car in the first instance of Arabs using firearms in two months of unrest.

Authorities reported sporadic disturbances all across Galilee this morning in the strike called to protest the seizure of thousands of acres of Arab land.

The predominantly Arab Israeli Communist party accused troops of beating up children without provocation during the morning in Nazareth, but the Israeli government reported the city quiet.

Arguments set on death penalty

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Conscious that their decisions mean life or death to 519 men and eight women, the nine Supreme Court justices donned their black robes today to hear arguments on whether capital punishment should be abolished.

A UPI survey taken Monday shows that 527 convicted prisoners on Death Rows in 30 states await the court's decision on whether they must die.

History will carry the names of only six men on the titles of five cases on which the court will rule. They are Jerry L. Jurek, Texas; James T. Woodson and Luby Waxton, North Carolina; Charles W. Proffitt, Florida; Troy L. Gregg, Georgia and Stanislaus Roberts, Louisiana.

The court selected their appeals out of nearly 50 that have reached the justices for a definitive capital punishment ruling.

Their lawyers — the NAACP's Legal Defense Fund in three cases — argue that "evolving standards of decency" make the death penalty cruel and unusual, in violation of the 8th Amendment.

In addition, the lawyers contend that minorities and the poor are more likely to be sentenced to death, partly because they can't afford an extensive defense, which might bring reduced charges.

Solicitor General Robert Bork, arguing for the United States, and lawyers from the attorneys general offices of the five states counter that the Constitution specifically provides for loss of life so long as "due process" standards of arrest and trial are met.

In addition, supporters argue that it is up to the legislatures, not the courts, to determine what is permissible punishment.

Bork told the court in one of many briefs submitted in the test challenges to the five state death laws that blacks and the poor are more often on Death Row because they commit a disproportionate number of violent crimes, not because the laws are inherently discriminatory.

The five laws are not the same. North Carolina, for example, makes death mandatory for first degree murder and forcible rape. In Georgia and Florida, elaborate post-conviction hearings are required to decide whether a crime was so aggravated by torture or the like that the death is justified.

The Supreme Court set aside six hours for argument, with two hours today and four more Wednesday. Its ruling is expected before the summer recess.

A key figure in the renewed assault on the death penalty will be the newest justice, John Paul Stevens. He was not present in 1972 when the other eight justices last registered opinions on the issue.

At that time, two justices, William J. Brennan Jr. and Thurgood Marshall, voted to outlaw the death penalty altogether. Byron R. White and Potter Stewart voted to strike it down as then applied on grounds juries and judges were given too much discretion.

A UPI survey taken Monday showed 519 men and eight women in 30 states waiting to learn whether they can be put to death.

Three more states — Missouri, Connecticut and New Hampshire — have death penalty laws but no one has been sentenced to die.

Recent state court rulings in Massachusetts and Illinois have struck down those death penalty laws but revisions are pending in both legislatures.

Former Pampans undergo heart surgery

Ralph Juillard, former publisher, and John Kinard, former advertising director of The Pampa News, both were in Houston hospitals today following open heart surgery within the past week.

Kinard, who retired recently as business manager of the McAllen Monitor, underwent surgery last Tuesday in Methodist Hospital at Houston.

Juillard, general manager of the McAllen Monitor, The Valley Morning Star in Harlingen, and The Brownsville Herald, underwent an operation Monday morning in St. Luke's Hospital in Houston.

Both Kinard and Juillard were reported in good condition today.

Jackson says he'll force the issues

United Press International — Henry Jackson, predicting victory in New York and a "real good showing" in Wisconsin's primary election next Tuesday, said today he would force Democratic opponent Jimmy Carter to talk about issues instead of relying on personality.

Jackson told a Milwaukee news conference that the campaign for the party's presidential nomination had degenerated into a discussion of personalities.

"You have a situation where a candidate — in this case Mr. Carter — will not provide the people with a bill of particulars," he charged.

"We finally forced him to remove his smile (in New York)," the senator from Washington state said.

Jackson predicted he will win the New York primary and only needs a "real good showing" in the Wisconsin primary the same day. On the other hand, he said Carter "will be in trouble" if he wins in Wisconsin and not New York.

Rep. Morris Udall, who is counting on Wisconsin to boost his campaign, conceded during an appearance in Pittsburgh today that lack of public recognition is a serious problem he faces. But Udall said he still may get his picture "on a couple of magazine covers" after next Tuesday's primaries.

"A good showing in New York and Wisconsin will make all the difference," the congressman from Arizona said.

He said "widespread media coverage" has boosted Carter's campaign.

Meanwhile, noncandidate Hubert Humphrey called it "premature" to say any Democrat has the presidential nomination locked up, and he scheduled speaking dates this week in both Wisconsin and New York.

Most of the declared candidates also were skip-stopping both states. President Ford dared Congress to cut his defense spending requests, and NBC agreed to sell Ronald Reagan a half hour for a speech Wednesday night.

Humphrey has picked up slates of uncommitted delegates on the New York ballot and could win up to about 30 of the delegates in next Tuesday's primary.

He insists he has not authorized that delegate drive, but he flies to New York City later this week to speak to a meeting of students, meet with labor leaders and address the state's mayors.

He was in Madison, Wis., Monday to speak to a medical convention and in talks with reporters renewed his criticism, which Jimmy Carter has taken personally, of candidates, who run against Washington.

Carter hopes to make the April 6 primary here his sixth win in seven contests. He will stump the state from west to east, ending in the Milwaukee area Wednesday night, and is expected to return for more Wisconsin campaigning during the weekend.

The man he is trying hardest to beat, Morris Udall, also scheduled a brief Milwaukee appearance today, but was giving most of this week to campaigning in New York.

George Wallace was the only active campaigner in Wisconsin Monday, appearing in La Crosse and Green Bay where he said he expected to "do well" in the primary but in any case is in the race to stay.

Udall, Carter, Henry Jackson, Fred Harris and the newest entry, Sen. Frank Church of Idaho, all flew to New York Monday night for a televised forum appearance sponsored by the League of Women Voters. They discussed, among other things, what they might do to solve the city's financial ailments.

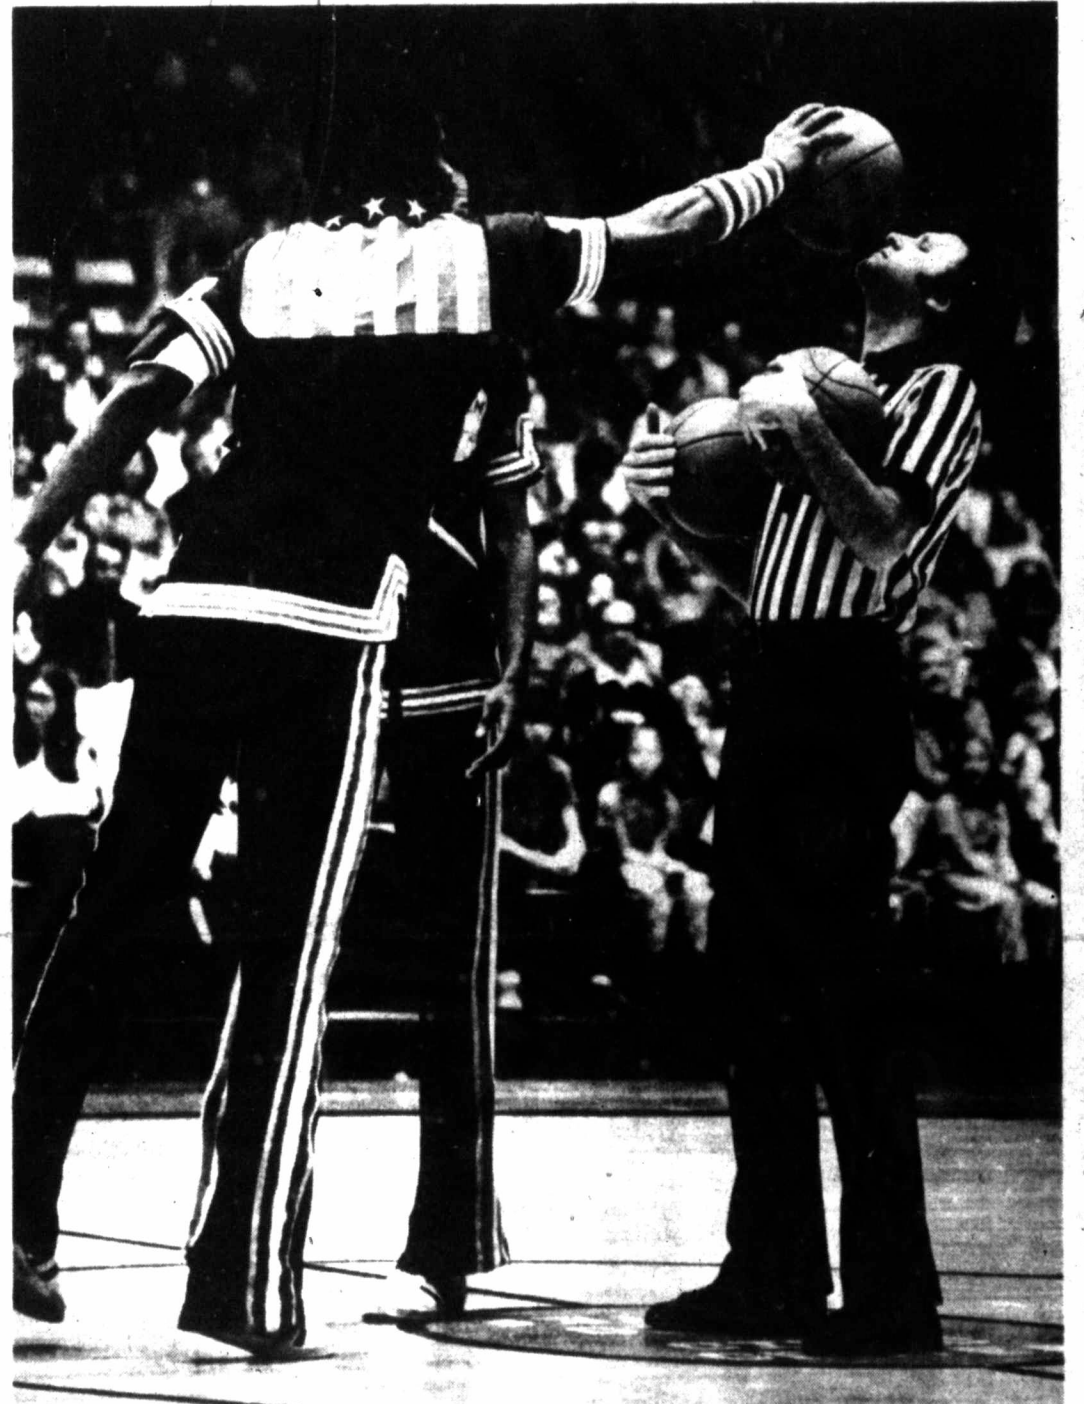

Ford converted an honors ceremony at the Pentagon Monday into an attack designed to blunt Reagan's charges that the United States is slipping behind the Soviet Union militarily.

Ford threatened to veto a military spending bill any less than the full $12.7 billion he has requested.

Reagan, meanwhile, succeeded in persuading NBC to sell him a half hour of time for a speech Wednesday night. It will be at 10:30 p.m. EST, a time period usually occupied by the second half of an hour-long program entitled McNaughton's Daughter, starring Susan Clark as a deputy district attorney.

And in the running saga of national tickets, Jackson said Monday that fellow Democratic hopeful Morris Udall would be "highly acceptable" as a vice presidential running mate.

'Part of the show'

"It's all part of the show" says Roy Kieval, the referee for the Harlem Globetrotters' international squad and a former Pampa High assistant basketball coach, concerning the abuse he must endure during every Trotter game. Kieval returned to the Panhandle Sunday as the Globetrotters performed in the Amarillo Civic Center Coliseum. See story, page 7.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

HUD's sad record Credit card companies tell on you

It is not an exaggeration to state that the federal government's experience in subsidizing housing for Americans has been very discouraging since it ventured into the programs in 1968, propelled by the race riots of the 1960s.

Initially, the emphasis was on providing housing for the very poor. However, seven years of effort have failed to meet this objective to any great degree. Additionally, the various programs encouraged lawlessness and other scandals, and entrenched another lethargic bureaucracy in the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

As of last month, HUD was the owner of 65,000 boarded-up single family houses, enough to provide the residential needs of a city of 260,000, and an additional 85,000 multifamily units valued at $2 billion.

In the meantime, the emphasis of the federal housing programs changed in the early 1970s when federal subsidies were used to assist middle income Americans and contractors in order to prop up a sagging industry and to create jobs.

Now the administration has taken things a step further by proposing to spend $264 million in the next two years to subsidize 250,000 mortgages and $6.5 billion to generate construction activity. The goal for the next fiscal year is to provide federal subsidies for 500,000 units — some 42 per cent of the number of houses built last year.

Philosophically, the thought of the federal government subsidizing Americans goes against the grain, even if the federal government is in large measure responsible for their plight.

Economically the program is even more frightening. As inflation makes more families eligible for HUD assistance, the federal budget, already in the red, simply will not be able to carry the burden without generating even more inflation. Federal subsidies to construction already were frozen once in 1973 because of insufficient funds.

It would be easier for the administration to turn back from the impending disaster now, before the program becomes more entrenched and before it gets a vaster constituency than it now has.

By JOSEPH NOCERA
News Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — Last year, American Express received 500 subpoenas for information about the credit records of customers and an uncounted number of requests for credit information from the FBI and local police.

In each case, American Express turned the information over. In no case did the company inform its customer that his or her records had been subpoenaed.

American Express is not unique in this practice, at least according to recent testimony before Congress' Privacy Protection Study Commission. The commission, established to investigate whether the Privacy Act of 1974 should be extended to the computer files of private business, found in recent hearings major credit card companies routinely give out information from customers' records, often without a subpoena, and rarely notify the customer of their action.

The Privacy Act covers only files controlled by the federal government; there is currently no law restricting dissemination of information by private industry. As an American Civil Liberties Union lawyer put it: "There is nothing illegal in my bank telling a friendly cop what my balance is, or a credit card company from telling a cop."

But even without a law, some companies, are saying that they are changing their policies. American Express says that in the future it will inform its customers of any subpoenas and delay handing over the information until card holders have had a chance to quash them. AT&T, which has been giving out records of personal phone calls routinely to police officers, has also agreed to toughen its policy.

However, Avis, Hertz, Carte Blanche, Diners Club and Exxon have said they have no intention of changing their present policy of not informing card holders. BankAmericard and Master Charge have no national policy, but a small survey of member banks by the National Observer found that most require information to be subpoenaed before turning it over, and most also inform their customers of that action.

The Food and Drug Administration will begin proceedings soon to ban chloroform from over-the-counter cough and cold medicines. The agency says the substance was found to cause a high rate of cancer in test animals.

Chloroform is widely used as a flavoring in cold medicines, but higher-priced substitutes are available.

"If mail service is good, why all the complaints?" asks the General Accounting Office, Congress' investigative arm.

"It's a fact that the mail is moving well," said GAO in a recent report on the Postal Service. But GAO also noted that "more mail is being delayed for longer periods than was the case a few years ago," primarily because of letter sorting machines introduced in the 1960's.

So, says GAO, even if the Service delivers 95 per cent of the mail on time, that still means 2.6 billion pieces per year are delivered late.

Which, as the GAO points out, and the Postal Service surely knows, means a lot of potential complaints.

Some actors think that if part of their costume is yellow, they will have bad luck.

Conservative advocate Lifestyles and taxes of sin

By WILLIAM RUSHER
The grand old presumption that a man and woman who are living together are married is pretty weatherbeaten these days, but it is still honored by the authors of the Internal Revenue Code. Add to this dubious presumption the tax relief that has (quite properly) been afforded to single taxpayers in recent years, and you come up with a result that Washington surely never intended: nowadays it is often much cheaper, taxwise, for two people to live together in sin than it is for them to get married.

Lifestyles are changing so fast that it is understandably hard for Congress to write tax laws that will treat all 210 million of us more or less fairly. But surely it should be possible to stop subsidizing the practice of shacking up.

Plenty of young women in America these days are earning as much, or almost as much, as their boyfriends, and in the atmosphere of this supposedly enlightened age lots of them are perfectly willing to play house without getting some person's permission first. What are the tax consequences of this?

Assume each member of the pair is earning $20,000. If they don't get married, each will pay a tax of $1,123, or a total of $2,246 (assuming the standard deduction, no dependents and a personal tax credit of $30 each). If they do, they must pay $10,238 — or $1992 more. A lot of them don't think the extra respectability is worth it.

This penalty on marriage appears repeatedly in the tax laws. The maximum standard deduction for our hypothetical couple is $2600 if they get married, but $2300 (or $4600 together) if they don't. (If the incomes were lower, the standard deduction for a married couple would be $1900, as compared with $1600 for each of two singles.)

Similarly, if one of the pair incurs medical expenses, these would have to rise above $1200 over the year before they could take any deduction — if they were married. Unmarried, they can each commence deductibility at $600. Likewise, a married couple's optional sales tax deduction is lower: If, for example, they live in New York City, they can deduct only $545. If they had avoided tying the knot, they could each deduct $392 — or $784 combined.

Nor can a married couple avoid a penalty by filing separately: Congress closed that loophole a few years back. They can, of course, file separate returns, but their married status will nonetheless haunt them, because they must pay according to a tax table different from that for single individuals.

The root of the anomaly lies in the unexpected consequences of recent tax reforms favoring singles, who had previously in effect been penalized for failing to marry. These reforms were long overdue, and nothing would be worse than to restore the old injustices in a spasm of anger over an accidental bonus for people choosing to "love common-law," as the saying used to go.

The person who is single and lives alone does have certain fixed overhead expenses just as large, or almost as large, as the corresponding combined expenses of two people living together. (Hence the old adage that "Two can live as cheaply as one.") The people who today are often getting away with murder, in tax terms, are neither married couples nor singles living alone, but singles — and in particular singles with roughly equal incomes — living together.

To be entirely fair and up-to-date, that probably ought to include not only the growing number of boy-girl combinations, but the whole range of boy-boy and girl-girl pairs who live under a common roof. It is undoubtedly not the business of IRS to inquire into the precise nature of such relationships, but if we are to allocate taxes fairly the law surely ought to distinguish between singles who are truly "going it alone" and singles who are earning independent incomes while enjoying the economic advantages of sharing living expenses with a partner. Circumstances will of course vary in each particular case, but whether the partnership is in technical terms a bona fide marriage is, or at least ought to be, irrelevant.

The United States might not have been born, were it not for the unwitting help of King George III and his Prime Minister, Lord North. Not only was Parliament dogmatic and unyielding to the political ferment in the colonies, but King George and Lord North, by their insults, threats and refusals to accept peace overtures, alienated passive colonists. As a result, the mood of rebellion spread and hardened in the colonies. The World Almanac recalls.

Tom Tiede What sort of man cheats the IRS?

By Tom Tiede
WASHINGTON — (NEA) — No arm of government is more detested than that of the Internal Revenue Service, and too often with good reason.

It's not that the agency just takes people's money, it's how it does it, or what it does if it can't. The press regularly and wearily report on the occasion of some poor devil somewhere who, after months or years of IRS harassment and abuse, sticks a rifle into his mouth and blows his fears away.

And then there are those who try to stick it out such as Karl Bray of Salt Lake City, Utah, lately of Terminal Island Federal Penitentiary in San Pedro, Cal. No guns for him. Just bars, self-rot and a future that is more of the same.

Bray was a radio commentator when, in the summer of 1971, the IRS came like Brown Shirts into his life. As part of a regular talk show program, he invited a militant "tax resister" named Marvin Cooley to air his views. Cooley did, saying that he was avoiding his own taxes and advising others to join him in what he called the IRS violations of First and Fifth Amendment Rights. Local federal authorities were greatly annoyed, thereafter targeting Bray for close watch and mischief. For starters, they had him fired from his job. Understandably, the intrusion irked Bray, a libertarian who, if he thought little of the IRS bureaucracy before it came down on him, thought less of it after. He began to organize similarly dissatisfied citizens in Salt Lake City, eventually urging tax protest rallies and tax revolt. His wife, who speaks for her hoodlum husband now that he's safely locked away, says that the more Bray protested, the angrier the IRS became: "The thing about Karl is that he went public, and the IRS just wouldn't stand for it."

In retaliation over the next two years, IRS agents allegedly tapped the Bray's phone, nosed about the neighbors asking poisoned questions, even tried to dissuade people from associating with him in business (after the radio job, Bray was self-employed as a dealer in precious metals). Once, says Mrs. Bray, he was hauled off to the police station for nonpayment of a simple parking ticket. Another time he was stopped on a freeway by 12 police cars and 25 officers who said they'd gotten word that he had stolen property in his car.

Finally, he was taken to court as a tax chisler. He received a six-month sentence for illegal possession of an IRS document (a harmless piece of paper which any citizen may obtain today through proper channels). He was then given a year each on two counts of tax evasion. He is serving his time (six months now) in a medium security prison where he has come to the attention of the warden for his attempts to interest other prisoners in the tax revolt movement.

Admittedly, it is impossible to write of Karl Bray without mixed feelings. Distasteful as it is, and perhaps it is even technically illegal, government tax collection is necessary, and the cooperation of citizens is vital. Yet there can be nothing but contempt for law enforcement when it becomes, as in Bray's case, enforcement excess. The government surely is big enough to establish order among individuals without vindictive harassment and absurdity.

Actually, it may even be argued that all things being equal Bray should not be in jail at all. Millions of Americans cheat on their tax payments annually, many of them known to the IRS, yet only a handful are ever prosecuted (about 1,500 a year). Many people even advise the government they are chisling, usually for antiwar or anti-arms purposes, and yet are not thrown in jail. Indeed, the IRS closes its eyes to most tax cheating because it does not have the ability to throw legions of Americans in the slams.

And then there is another, more important consideration here. We have learned from Watergate that our tax returns can be used against us, politically or otherwise. We have learned from experience that our tax money is routinely squandered. And we have learned from the founders that we must not be docile in the face of government abuse.

In this regard, activist Bray may not be so dastardly a fellow after all.

Babysitting Granddad Beats 6-year-old

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have two children ages 3 and 6. My husband doesn't like to hire sitters. He says it's too expensive, but I notice he has money for his boat and a storeroom filled with the latest in hunting and fishing equipment.

Anyway, the last time we went out for an evening we left our kids overnight with his parents. The next day, our 6-year-old had welts and bruises all over his little body. He told us that his Granddaddy had whipped him with a leather belt for telling a fib!

My husband didn't seem at all upset. He said whoever kids are left with has a right to punish them any way he sees fit.

Abby, we have never whipped our kids with a belt, and I say nobody else should, either. Please settle this.
MONTANA MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I agree with you 100 per cent. NEVER leave your children with those grandparents again and tell them why. "Granddaddy" sounds as though he needs a thorough checkup. (Physical and mental.) And where was "Grandma" when all this was going on?

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is a beautiful, bright young woman who has a mind of her own. For seven years I have been trying to train her not to overdraw on her checking account, but without success. Have you any suggestions?
GEORGE A. KELLOGG

DEAR GEORGE: If after seven years you haven't been able to train her, give up. At this stage of the game, it's obvious that she has YOU trained.

DEAR ABBY: About that woman who was embarrassed by her boyfriend's bad grammar. My glamorous mother was divorced 20 years ago. When she started dating again, she wouldn't even consider dating a man who said "We wasn't" or "He don't."

For the last six months, her constant companion has been a man who says, "We wasn't," and uses "youse" for the plural of "you." But he is the sweetest, kindest, most patient man she's ever known. He's a big success financially, too.

If Mom had stuck to her original standards, she would have cheated herself out of plenty. Also, this man in her life has made her a lot easier to live with.
HER DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Neither glamour nor grammar guarantees a good relationship.

Wasting energy

The crisis level of the Arab oil embargo has long since receded into history. But the Federal Energy Administration, created to cope with just that crisis, is bigger and more bureaucratic than ever. Like the Selective Service System, the FEA is still finding work for itself, the original premise for its creation having vanished. What's more, FEA chief Frank Zarb is asking Congress for a growth budget.

Czar Zarb (surely President Ford appointed him so that we journalists could call him that?) has disseminated coloring books, one of them created by his wife, to the nation's elementary schools. Energy Ant, the comic book's leading character, will make his way onto television commercials and cereal boxes. Zarb has hired 112 publicists who have cranked out nearly 1,000 press releases (all of them computer-mailed, thereby spending electricity).

Thirty-seven FEA officials are paid $37,800 or more a year, and the agency's salary mean is $19,026 — higher than any other federal agency. "One reason young agencies such as the FEA become entrenched," commented the Wall Street Journal, "... is that they tend to develop outside constituencies, in the industries they regulate and among companies they buy from." That explains why numerous contractors and independent oil companies are the bureau's biggest supporters. Amerada Hess Corp. one of the latter, received $28 million last year from major oil companies as FEA - required compensation for the difference between unregulated foreign oil independents must purchase and the regulated domestic oil the biggies sell to refineries. Constituent, indeed.

For all President Ford's talk about deregulation, he still plans to ask Congress for a three-year extension of the FEA's life and a tripling of its $142 million budget to about $440 million. Presumably the money will help pay the cost of hauling the two million pieces of paper now moving from one Washington building to another.

President Ford would do better to listen to his Treasury Secretary, William Simon, the very first FEA administrator: "You're looking at a potential monster. It's an outrage. I'd abolish the agency and close its doors tomorrow." Better advice could not have been proffered, for energy's sake.

Bullock demands clamp on corrupt politics

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Comptroller Bob Bullock believes the time has come to end corruption "from now on" in the rural South Texas area dominated for decades by one of the state's strongest political machines.

Poor record keeping, favoritism in taxing and spending, and outright thefts have cost Duval County millions of dollars in recent years and earned it the reputation as one of the most politically corrupt localities in the nation.

Its highest ranking county officials have been indicted, and one is in prison. A district judge was convicted on federal tax charges, removed from office by the first impeachment trial in the Texas Senate in 40 years, and is now awaiting trial on state charges.

"We're going to see to it they keep their books right down there from now on," said Bullock, who sent auditors to Duval County to try to trace state funds.

"We can make it a lot harder for anyone to steal public money, sort of like installing an alarm system. Periodic waves of criminal indictments never seem to wash the Duval County courthouse entirely clean. I want to treat the disease rather than the symptoms."

Bullock knew before he sent auditors to Duval County that public officials had looted the county treasury for years. It had been going on for years, and almost everyone in Texas knew about it. But what Bullock's auditors found astonished the comptroller.

"This is an audit report. But it does not look like a typical audit report," the comptroller said in presenting findings of his investigators.

"There are no columns of figures listed here, no pages of revenues, expenditures and balances with everything adding up correctly to the penny. To prepare that kind of audit report, there must be records — records of deposits, and records of withdrawals, records that show where the money went and for what purpose."

There are no such records in Duval, he said. The records which exist are inadequate.

"The auditors say that a lot of public money has just simply vanished," Bullock said. "There were no records, no system of accounting. People were just walking off with the money, leaving no record of whether it was intended for public or private use."

For years, Duval County was ruled by the late George Parr, known as the "Duke of Duval." Bullock's auditors found records showing Parr had 50 acres of land on county tax rolls in 1972 at a value of $2.20 an acre; in 1973, he had 2,808 acres valued at $1.92 an acre.

Archer Parr, former county judge now in prison for lying to a federal grand jury, had 690 acres of land valued at 49 cents an acre on county tax rolls.

Bullock said the county ignored millions of dollars in tax delinquencies, and never filed suit to collect them. Instead, the county hired M.K. Bercaw Jr., a local citizen, to collect delinquent taxes.

At the same time, Bercaw was on a $600 a month retainer from Duval County Ranch, Inc., — one of the major delinquents — as a tax consultant.

The county was not the only governmental agency involved in questionable transactions, Bullock said.

Duval County Conservation and Reclamation District collected about $11 million in taxes since it was organized, but has only $1.5 million in capital improvements and engineering fees to show for it. A man bankers could not identify deposited $456,000 in water district funds in the First State Bank of San Diego, and walked out with another $222,500. The check the man deposited had no endorsement, and officials are unable to account for the missing money, Bullock said.

On another occasion, George Parr sold the water district a helicopter for $45,000. Parr was paid the money, but the district never received the helicopter.

Bullock recommended strict accounting procedures for the county, stronger laws requiring the banks to keep closer account of government funds, reduction of the county payroll and an increase in tax collections in order to keep the county solvent beyond Aug. 1.

"Even if all of these recommendations are followed, there could be no guarantee that public dollars will not again be abused in Duval County," he said. "But such abuse will certainly be discouraged."

Seeks outstanding women

Jackie Stevens, right, of Shamrock is one of many West Texas State University returning women students who are active in WT Women's Office activities. The program is currently seeking nominations of outstanding women for the Texas Panhandle Distinguished Service Awards to be presented April 24. Nominations of women who have played a role in the development of the Panhandle are being sought from organizations and individuals in Gray and other counties. With Mrs. Stevens is Mrs. Florence Carey of Channing.

Two Pampa students are among those who graduated from Texas State Technical Institute, Amarillo, in February.

They are Tom L. Foran, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Foran of 617 N. Hazel, and Allen Paul Ebenkamp, son of Mr. and Mrs. L.D. Ebenkamp of 2108 Hamilton.

Both received associate degrees in commercial art in advertising — a two-year program.

The Music Department of Clarendon College will present its final program of the year May 4th. Entitled "Music and Mirth," the program will feature a wide variety of music and comedy popular during the Twentieth Century in the United States. In addition to the three performing groups of Clarendon College — College Choir, College Singers, and the Stage Band, the program will include various small ensembles and solo acts.

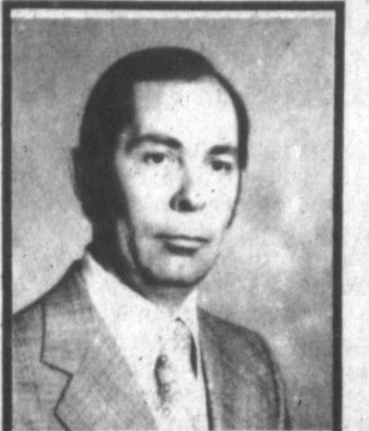

The program is by the students under the direction of Jim Barnard, director of music at Clarendon College. Tickets for the performance will be $1.50 for adults, $1.00 for children and students. Clarendon College students will be admitted on their I.D.

Current time is 7:30 p.m.

A National Baton Twirling Camp will be held on the campus of Panhandle State University at June 11. The school is open to a beginning and advanced individuals and lines.

Jean Tarbet and Renee Tarbert Brisley of Borger will direct the camp.

Poison danger to kids

CHICAGO (UPI) — Rat poison containing yellow phosphorus poses a danger to children and should be removed from the market, according to a report in the current edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The report, by Drs. Frank A. Simon and Karry K. Pickering, said rats have become resistant to warfarin, the traditional rat poison, and the public has turned increasingly to poisons containing yellow phosphorus.

These poisons, they said, are pastes to be spread on bread or crackers and left out for rodents.

"But children also are attracted to these baits," the report said.

"It would be safest to eliminate this product from the market," Simon and Pickering said.

Yellow phosphorus, once used in match tips, fireworks and in quack remedies, had been eliminated through legislation and international agreements because of its poisonous properties until its reappearance in rat poisons.

The poison can cause severe, sometimes fatal illness and there is no specific antidote. Treatment is aimed at removing the poison and supporting basic life functions, the doctors said.

Simon and Pickering are from the University of Texas Health Science Center at Houston Medical School.

Dr. Hugh H. Hussey, editor emeritus of the AMA Journal, said although yellow phosphorus is not among the top 10 potential toxic substances ingested by children, it is still dangerous.

W. Lee O'Daniel (1939-41) was the only Texas governor in this century who didn't take the oath of office at the capitol, choosing instead to be sworn in at the University of Texas' Memorial Stadium.

At Wit's End

By ERMA BOMBECK

"The high cost of postal service is not only prompting some of the biggest users to seek cheaper means of delivering the mail, it's creating a new status social class: letter writers.

During the last ten years as I've watched the price of a postage stamp more than double, I've seen letter writing go from a lower middle class form of communication to a rich man's sport.

It was the 13-cent stamp that really tipped the scale and separate the haves from the have-nots. The other day as I pushed my way through the parking lot of luxury cars, I stepped inside the post office and came face to face with polo players, philanthropists, heiresses and jet setters.

There wasn't one familiar face in the line. I casually mentioned this to the man in front of me who snuggled in his chinchilla coat and said, "they're probably all at home making phone calls. Oh, it's cheaper and faster to phone, but like I told my son, 'I know it's expensive to write, but a couple of times a week just pick up the pen and let us hear from you.' You can't imagine what our postage bill is. The other week, he wrote for 20 minutes."

"But I can't imagine..."

"Don't you just love the post office now?" he gushed. "Now that the rates have gone up, you meet such a better class of people. Hello Rocky!" he yelled to a man near the front of the line. "Oh, you get a few in here who buy the postcards — you know, the climbers — but generally you meet your own kind here.

"It's not official yet, but I heard the Nieman-Marcus Christmas gift catalogue is coming out next year with a three-ounce letter sent from Juneau, Alaska. Wouldn't you like to be able to afford that little baby?"

"Aren't you exaggerating just a bit?" I said. "I mean the postal rates can't mean that much of a class distinction."

"Are you kidding?" he asked. "See that man at the counter? He wrote letters and played tennis before it was fashionable. Not your Nouveau letter writer." (A first class stamp fell to the floor and the man didn't even stoop to pick it up.)

"Now that's class," said my companion. At the window, the man in the chinchilla ordered 50 first class stamps, sent an insured parcel to Chicago and registered a letter to Iowa. He whipped out his checkbook to await the bad news.

"Gosh," I said. "How much is all of that going to cost?"

He gave me a withering look. "If you have to ask, you can't afford it."

Callaway formally resigns

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Howard H. Callaway has submitted his formal resignation as President Ford's campaign manager, a White House aide said today. The White House planned to announce later today that Callaway, a former Georgia congressman and Secretary of the Army, has stepped aside and will be replaced by Ford's political counselor, Rogers C.B. Morton, the aide said.

Callaway submitted his resignation after discussing the matter with Ford at the White House for one hour Monday night. "Both agreed it would be best," the aide said.

He said Callaway is convinced his name will be "cleared" of any improper activity in connection with allegations he exerted influence on the U.S. Forest Service in order to expand his Colorado ski resort. But, the aide said, Callaway feels it "will take months to do so."

Callaway was relieved of his campaign managership aboard Air Force One March 13 that was the morning after Ford learned that Callaway was under investigation for allegedly using his influence as Army secretary under President Richard M. Nixon and as Ford's campaign chief to enhance his Colorado ski resort properties.

Aboard the plane, as Ford headed for campaigning in North Carolina's presidential primary, White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford had relieved Callaway temporarily pending outcome of the investigation. Almost immediately there was speculation in the White House that Callaway's departure would be made permanent.

Callaway told Miss Thomas he would see Ford "soon," but declined to be specific about the time and said, "I'm not at liberty to say."

Briscoe compliments band on performance

Jeff Doughten, director of the Pride of Pampa band, received a letter Monday from Dolph Briscoe, governor of Texas.

"Janey and I want you to know how much we enjoyed the fine presentation given by the Pride of Pampa Band at the St. Patrick's Day Celebration festivities in Shamrock on March 19," the governor wrote.

"We are certainly looking forward to having this great band visit Austin next year. With best wishes and congratulations to you and to each band member for this splendid performance."

The letter was signed, "Sincerely, Dolph Briscoe, Governor of Texas."

The same day's mail also brought Doughten a letter from M.L. Gierhart, general chairman of the St. Patrick's Day Celebration in Shamrock.

"Dear Mr. Doughten and band members," he wrote. "You were nothing short of magnificent at our 30th annual St. Patrick's banquet. Everyone is still talking about your performance and all that can be heard is, 'weren't they great?' and you certainly were."

"We thank you so very much for being with us and for adding the frosting to our bicentennial cake."

More mail is expected soon by Doughten — a letter bearing a copy of the formal invitation from the Irish government for the Pride of Pampa to perform in the 1977 St. Patrick's Day celebration in Dublin, Ireland.

A phone call came from Ireland last week asking the director where the invitation should be sent. He told the caller it should be addressed to Dr. Dan Long, superintendent of schools, and the caller said copies also would be sent Doughten, the high school principal and the president of the band boosters organization.

Car tag deadline nears

Motor vehicle registration lines in the Gray County tax assessor collector's office number from 30 to 100 throughout the day Monday — and lines continued this morning.

Jack Back, tax assessor collector, said he had no idea how many had registered vehicles this week.

However, the number was lagging before Monday. Deadline for 1976 registration is April 1 — with Wednesday the final day a vehicle can be operated without the new license tag.

Outside the courthouse cars were parked three - deep in a parking lot. Many waited with motors running thinking that someone could run in and out without any problem.

"It hasn't worked that way," said a local resident as he waited in the lines today. Another commented that she left her children with a baby sitter.

"I didn't dream I couldn't be home in 20 minutes," she added.

However, for those who work in the tax assessor collector's office the lines as deadline draws near are nothing new.

"It happens every year," Back said.

The last available figure on vehicle registrations was a week ago when only 9,019 registration stickers had been sold as compared with 10,177 sold by about the same time last year.

Back said an estimated 28,000 vehicles were registered here in 1975.

"We have a ways to go," he said. The majority had apparently waited until the last week in March to register vehicles.

One courthouse employe said last year she stood in a line for almost an hour. This year she registered the family cars right after Jan. 1, with no lines.

Petitioners seek exemption

Several petitions circulated today asking city commissioners to approve the $3,000 homestead tax exemption for Pampa property owners 65 years of age and over.

Mrs. Wanda Talley, director of the Senior Citizens Center, said this morning one petition at the center, West Francis and Gray Streets, had been signed by 80 persons since Monday.

She stated petitions were at other locations and still others were being circulated by individuals.

Reportedly the petitions were in answer to the commissioners' request for public opinion on the proposal made at a City Commission meeting one week ago today when action on the tax exemption was delayed.

City Manager Mack Wofford said approximately 18 letters and a score of telephone calls had been received at City Hall since the request for public reaction was made.

Mrs. Talley said anyone wishing to sign a petition could do so at the Senior Center any time between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. daily.

The petitions read: "We, the undersigned property owners request the City of Pampa to permit the $3,000 homestead tax exemption for all persons 65 or older."

City officials explained no attempt is being made to force an election on the homestead exemption provision authorized by state law.

Mayor Wilkerson said at the last City Commission meeting the matter would be on the agenda later if there is enough public interest to warrant action.

The city manager said today the City is seeking a ruling from the state attorney general's office on the report that unmarried property owners 65 and over would not be eligible for the exemption.

Gray County and Pampa Independent School District taxing units both already have granted the homestead exemption.

Police Report

Officers of the Pampa Police Department investigated an assault complaint, a reported criminal mischief and two non-injury accidents Monday.

Jo Ann Lamar, 56, a waitress in a local lounge, came to the police station and reported she had been struck in the nose and mouth. Picked up for driving with a suspended license was Donald Provence, 28, of 228 W. Craven. Assault charges are expected to be filed against Provence later today.

A mallet or lead pipe was used to break the rear glass from a vehicle belonging to Hub Homer of 2207 Chestnut. Homer told police the incident occurred sometime Saturday night.

Funeral services for Mrs. Onita Schuler, 49, a former Pampa resident, will be 2 p.m. today at the Schuler - Gordon Colonial Chapel with the Rev. Martin Thomas, pastor of Covenant Presbyterian Church, officiating. Burial will be in Llano Cemetery.

Mrs. Schuler died Sunday. She lived in Pampa 20 years before moving to Amarillo from Odessa 16 years ago. She was a member of the Tascosa chapter of Eastern Star and the Covenant Presbyterian Church. She is survived by the widower, one son, her mother, one sister, one brother and three grandchildren.

ELOISE VINCENT HISE

Graveside rites for Mrs. Eloise Vincent Hise, 67, of Dumas will be held at 2 p.m. Wednesday in Fairview Cemetery here under the direction of Morrison Funeral Directors of Dumas.

She died Sunday in Dumas Memorial Hospital. She was born in Mountain View, Okla., and had lived in Dumas since 1947. She was a member of the First United Methodist Church of Dumas.

Funeral services are set for 11 a.m. Wednesday in the First United Methodist Church, with the Rev. J. Frank Peery, pastor, officiating.

Survivors include the husband, Oscar, a son, Joe Wiley Vincent of Sherman, Okla., Calif.; Mrs. Nancy Havekost of El Paso, three brothers, one sister, four stepchildren and two granddaughters.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Joe Tyler Vincent in April 1960.

Lively recalls 50 years of progress

By TEX DEWESE
Pampa News Staff

Fifty years of nostalgia and community progress in Pampa were recalled Monday by Travis Lively Sr. at the Chamber of Commerce March luncheon to honor past presidents of the organization.

Lively, himself a president of the chamber in 1933 and a personal acquaintance of all the presidents from the beginning, took his listeners through the city's growth from a town of less than 1,000 population a half century ago to the present.

He took blocks of 10-year periods and pointed out accomplishments of each decade.

The Chamber of Commerce was born locally in 1925 during the oil boom period that came in the mid-1920s.

"The population climbed from less than 1,000 in 1925 to more than 10,000 in 1935," Lively said. "White Deer and Miami were close business competitors of Pampa, a cattle shipping point in 1925 — and then came the oil discovery."

In that 10-year period, he pointed out, Cabot Corp. came to Pampa, the Gray County Court House was moved to Pampa from Lefors, the City Hall was started in 1928, the Country Club was organized, bacon was selling for 6 cents a pound, coffee for 27 cents a pound and a 10-pound bag of potatoes cost 1 1/2 cents.

A couple ran an ad in The Pampa News in 1928 wanting to rent a two-bedroom apartment and willing to pay as much as $16 a month rent.

Also in that decade came the depression. Lively said when he was president in 1933 he got some of the blame for the bank closings across the United States.

In the 1935-45 period, the city and the nation began to move out of the depression years. Pampa joined in the Texas centennial celebration with a huge observance in Recreation Park. In 1936 the Pampa Daily News was sold to Freedom Newspapers Inc., organized baseball came to Pampa. The high school and post office were built. World War II came along and put a halt to many local activities. The Pampa Army Air Field brought students from all over the nation here for aviation training.

From 1945 to 1955 Highland General Hospital was built, Highway 70 north to Perryton was completed. The Hereford Breeders Association was formed, the Top O' Texas Livestock Show held its first exhibit and sale and the Top O' Texas Rodeo Association came into being. Celanese Chemical Co. came to Pampa in 1951 and the Hughes Bldg. was constructed.

The 1955-65 period, Lively stated, saw the organization of the Pampa Industrial Foundation, the coming of the Marie Foundations plant, the building of many new homes and apartments, and Price Road industrial development and the building of the Pampa Youth Center.

The 1965-75 period brought the Community Hotel Co. and building of the Coronado Inn, the M.K. Brown Civic Center and formation of the Senior Citizens movement, sponsored by the Pampa Altrusa Club. The Senior Citizens Center, recently opened on West Francis St.

Lively paid tribute to E.O. Wedgeworth who has been executive vice president and general manager of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce since 1945.

Lively said while he wasn't able to accomplish too much when he was president in 1933, he was privileged to serve as past president on a committee named in 1945 to pick a new chamber manager to succeed Garnet Reeves who had resigned to move to Lubbock.

"We interviewed several applicants," Lively said, "and finally decided to hire a young red-head who had impressed us. He was Red Wedgeworth and he is still with us as chamber manager today — 31 years later."

Lively said he believed Wedgeworth had the same recipe for success and getting the job done as did the late Cal Farley of Cal Farley's Boys Ranch.

"Farley always said," Lively stated, "if you want to be successful, work like hell and give somebody else the credit for it." Lively said a chapter could be written about the accomplishments made by the Chamber of Commerce under each of the past presidents.

"Time prohibits going into the labors, efforts and sacrifices they made to help make Pampa better place in which to live," he said.

Each of the past presidents attending the Monday luncheon was introduced and at the close of the luncheon Vice President J.C. Roberts, who presided in the absence of President Boyd Taylor, asked the audience to stand in memory of the 19 deceased past presidents. Thirty-four past presidents still are living.

Thirty past presidents were introduced. Oldest of the group was Roy McMillen who served as president in 1931.

Five from out of the city came back to Pampa to attend the luncheon. They were Frank D. Smith, Gene Fatheree and Farris Oden, all of Amarillo; Joe F. Key, Roswell, N.M., and Norman Henry, Midland.

Lively said in conclusion that he found "There is always a sort of special factor of altruism at work in Pampa — something that makes it such a beautiful place in which to live."

"While I was happy to be here and have the opportunity to express appreciation for the contributions each of the past presidents has made — there are hundreds of others who have worked hard to make our city a better place to live and scores of organizations of men and women who have joined together unselfishly to do the things that needed to be done."

Lively and Mrs. Lively were given a standing ovation by the crowd of more than 200 at the luncheon.

Mrs. Louise Richardson, soloist, entertained with what she termed an appropriate vocal number for the occasion, "Climb Every Mountain."

Dinner music was played by Mrs. Joyce Walberg and the invocation was by the Rev. Lloyd Hamilton, pastor of First United Methodist Church.

Travis Lively Sr. talks about past presidents of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce.

Hearst to avoid joint trial

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Patricia Hearst spent 22 months underground with Symbionese Liberation Army "soldiers" William and Emily Harris after her kidnapping — but the last thing she wants is to go on trial with her captors.

The newspaper heiress, already convicted of bank robbery, was flown from San Francisco to Los Angeles and back Monday, for an arraignment that lasted five minutes.

The 22-year-old Miss Hearst and the Harris couple were charged jointly with kidnaping and assault with a deadly weapon, carrying a maximum penalty of life imprisonment.

Miss Hearst did not enter a plea Monday. Her case was continued until April 14, two days after her scheduled sentencing in San Francisco.

After the session, defense attorney Albert Johnson said Miss Hearst would plead innocent to the charges growing out of an incident at a sporting goods store, in which she allegedly opened fire with machine guns to rescue the Harrises from arrest.

During the bank robbery trial she "fingered" the Harrises as her abductors. They in turn blasted her for snatching on her SLA comrades.

The Harrises want to go on trial with her — sink or swim. At the April 14 session lawyer F. Lee Bailey will argue for a severance of Miss Hearst's case on grounds there is a major conflict in how they will present their defenses.

Bailey was absent from Monday's hearing. He was at a lawyer's convention in Bermuda.

Johnson said he did not feel Miss Hearst could receive a fair trial in Los Angeles or any place else but that there had been no attempt to plea bargain with the prosecution.

Miss Hearst and the Harrises appeared in the same maximum security courtroom but their hearings were half an hour apart and they did not come face to face.

Presiding Criminal Division Court Judge Jack Goertzen denied a motion by Harris lawyer Leonard Weinglass that their trial be delayed a year because of publicity surrounding the case. Weinglass said, "If this case does not contain grounds for delay because of prejudicial publicity, then no case in the country would qualify." Deputy District Attorney Sam Mayerson said, "The people are entitled to a speedy trial as well as the defendants."

Single poll for election

The polls will open at 7 a.m. Saturday for election of trustees to the Pampa Independent School District Board of Trustees. They will close at 7 p.m. The only polling place will be the senior high school music building.

Bentsen backs border

By United Press International
Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen Jr., D-Tex., says the federal government should provide funds to a organization of states working on problems along the U.S.-Mexican border.

"The problems of illegal aliens, illicit drug trafficking, alien juvenile delinquency and other problems of special concern along the U.S.-Mexican border cannot be solved without a united effort by all levels of government," Bentsen said Monday while campaigning in El Paso.

Bentsen's chief opponent for the Democratic nomination, Texas A&M professor Phil Gramm, said Bentsen has overlooked the people of Texas in voting for a public health bill. Gramm said in Mount Pleasant that Bentsen was negligent in voting for the public health bill which could close many rural Texas hospitals.

"It is doubtful that Lloyd Bentsen realized the implications of this bill when he voted for it, and was clearly guilty of oversight and negligence for not representing the people of Texas," Gramm said.

Campaigning for the Republican Senate nomination Monday in Galveston, Houston sports promoter Hugh Sweeney said he has scheduled a U.S. Australia tennis match in Houston April 19 to raise campaign funds.

Sweeney, a former international tennis player, is opposing Rep. Alan Steelman, R-Tex., for the GOP nomination.

He criticized the Americans for Constitutional Action for endorsing Steelman in the race. "If Alan Steelman, on the basis of his overall voting record, resembles a conservative, then I am the reincarnation of George Washington," he said in a telegram to the ACA.

In the race for the State Railroad Commission, Jerry Sadler said in Austin he is the only person in the eight-candidate field with the nerve and experience to battle greedy oil companies to protect consumers. Sadler, a former land commissioner and one-term railroad commissioner in 1940-41, said the only time natural gas rates have ever been reduced by the commission was during his tenure.

Another railroad commission candidate, Terence O'Rourke, said gas banking deals by Lo-Vaca Gathering Co. have cost consumers $50 million, and said the railroad commission should require refunds to consumers.

"The railroad commission must be shown that the people of this state will not stand for such banking practices and will not allow them to continue," O'Rourke said.

'Zebras' given life

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Four Black Muslims, convicted of killing three of 14 whites who were victims of "Zebra" random street attacks, have been sentenced to life in prison.

"I hope to God these other victims are not forgotten," Superior Court Judge Joseph Karesh said Monday in sentencing the defendants to the maximum penalty.

Karesh called the crimes which terrorized the city in late 1973 and early 1974 "vicious and terrible."

Larry C. Green, 23, Jessie L.

Cooks, 30, Manuel Moore, 31, and J.C. Simon, 29, were convicted by a jury on three counts of murder on March 13 after a year-long trial. They were arrested May 1, 1974.

Their life sentences will run concurrently. They could not be sentenced to death because the crimes occurred before capital punishment was reinstated in California.

The case became known as "Zebra" because the special radio channel used by police seeking the killers used the name.

Cain sentences, fines 10

Ten persons were fined and sentenced Monday in Gray County Court on charges ranging from driving while license suspended to unlawfully carrying a weapon.

Gray County Judge Cain accepted the pleas and pronounced the sentences.

Willie James Wilson, 44, of Pampa, who pleaded no contest to two separate charges of driving while intoxicated, was fined $25 and court costs on each with 72 hours of jail time with the two jail sentences to run concurrently.

Farris Glen Reeves, 20, of Pampa pleaded no contest to charges of driving while license was suspended. He was fined $50 and ordered to spend three days in county jail. He pleaded no contest.

Michael Lynn Lee, 17, of Pampa, was fined $200 and granted six months probation on charges of driving while intoxicated.

Duane Lee Chapman, 26, of Pampa, who pleaded no contest to DWI charges, was fined $200 and granted six-month probation.

Lloyd Jackson Wolfe, 31, of Pampa, pleaded no contest to charges of unlawfully carrying a weapon — a handgun. He was fined $100 and sentenced to three days in jail.

Glenn Cordell Hall, 61, of Canadian, who entered a guilty plea to charges of driving while intoxicated, was fined $200 and granted six months probation.

James Marcus Randon, 23, of Pampa was fined $200 and granted 180-day probation, after he pleaded guilty to charges of possession of marijuana. Ellis W. Moore, 58, of Odessa pleaded no contest to charges of driving while intoxicated, and was fined $200 and granted six months probation.

James Truett Ledbetter, 33, of Pampa pleaded no contest to charges of driving while intoxicated. He was fined $250 and given six months probation.

Roy Arnold King, 24, of Pampa was fined $50 and placed on a six-month probation term for driving with license suspended.

Matson not quitting...for now

Randy Matson wants to be the first to dispel any rumors about his retirement from professional track. At least for the time being.

"It might seem like I'm quitting the way I'm throwing, but I'm still competing," said Matson, who, once the class of all shot putters, has been afflicted in recent years by a sore elbow and wrist.

"We've had three pro meets this year and I've competed in two of them. The first one (Salt Lake City, Utah on Feb. 20) canceled the shot put and that's why I wasn't in that one."

Matson, a 1963 Pampa High graduate, still the Texas A&M and Southwest Conference shot put and discus records, setting both in 1967. His distances were 71 feet, 5 1/2 inches in the shot and 213 feet, 9 1/2 inches in the discus.

After he failed to qualify for the 1972 Olympics ("I just threw badly," he said), Matson joined the new professional track circuit. He is still competing professionally, but most of his time is consumed by his job as associate executive director of former students (alumni) at Texas A&M.

His job, his aching wrist and elbow and his family—a rather large one—may soon spell the end of Matson's pro track career.

"As it looks right now, I'll compete in all the pro meets this year. I'm disappointed in the scheduling of the meets—they've done a lot of shuffling around and they keep changing the dates. I have to work the meets around my job," Matson said.

"For the first time in my career, in the last few years, I've had injury problems. I've been in about as good a shape as I've ever been—I had five throws over 70 feet in 1974. But last year I had an elbow problem. My elbow and wrist and chronic problems.

"I have a very large family—three children and one foster child (ages 7, 5, 2 and 16)." Then, he added, "This may be my last year. It's getting closer to the end."

For the time being, though, Matson, who is 31, will compete. He laughs at the rumors about his present "retirement" and adds that he might be around for another three or four years.

Paul Sims

And he hopes that professional track will escape from the financial pit in which the sport finds itself.

"The outlook for professional track is pretty questionable right now. It's going through tough times. The feeling by some is if we can make it through this year and sign some new athletes, some amateurs coming out of the Olympics, next year could be a good year." Though Matson says that pro track pays "not at all," he was able to win a little over $5,000 last year and $6,000 the season before. His biggest rival, shot putter Brian Oldfield, and miler Ben Jipcho earned somewhere around $18,000 last year.

Television contracts and more sponsors seem to be the only way for track to increase its prize money. As it stands now, an athlete earns $600 for first place in a meet, $250 for second, $100 for third and $50 for fourth—all far cries from—say—professional golf pays its four top finishers in a tournament.

Matson says he probably could earn more if it wasn't for his A&M job.

"If I could, like Oldfield, spend all my time training for the shot and work on my condition and concentration—that's the difficult part for me now because of my job—I'd do better."

"I'm a better shot putter than what I've thrown. I should be at 65 or 66 feet right now. I threw 63

8 1/2 at Dallas (last weekend), which is poor."

The Dallas throw was somewhat deceiving, Matson added.

"We had a very poor facility. The ring was bad—it was plywood and slippery. Oldfield threw 67 feet—we all had a lot of problems."

The subject of the ring caused Matson to remember Pampa High School.

"They spent a lot of time with me in high school. They had very poor facilities in those days, but they built the first cement ring they ever had at Pampa—for me."

"When I was a sophomore and in junior high school, Coach (Dwayne) Lyon was the high school coach. He'd make me stay after high school and junior high practice, and we'd stay until dark every day and work with shot and discus."

"I was very fortunate to have a good coach up there."

That was the beginning. Now he's facing the possibility of the end.

Sutton for Seaver? Maybe just a rumor

UPI Sports Writer

Don Sutton, one of baseball's leading practical jokers, doesn't appreciate one currently being played on him, but he won't let it affect his performance.

The 30-year-old Sutton, who has won 35 games in the last two seasons for the Los Angeles Dodgers, has been mentioned prominently in trade rumors that will send him to the New York Mets as part of a package deal for Tom Seaver, and he doesn't like it.

"About this story, I don't know," Sutton said Monday after pitching seven innings of one-run ball against the Montreal Expos in a 3-2 loss. "My preference would be to play in Los Angeles for what they say they are willing to pay me in New York, but the Dodgers would have to ask me because I'm a 5-and-10 man."

"Nobody has spoken to me, but if they can trade Willie Mays and Hank Aaron, anyone can be traded."

Anyone includes Seaver, alias "Tom Terrific," who won 22 games, fashioned a 2.38 ERA and struck out 243 batters last year en route to joining Sandy Koufax as the only three-time Cy Young Award winner.

On Monday, M. Donald Grant, board chairman of the Mets, confirmed the Dodgers were one of a half-dozen clubs contacted concerning a trade for Seaver but denied the deal was imminent.

"It is true we have been speaking with the Dodgers ever since we announced that we would talk to other clubs about a possible deal for Seaver," Grant said. "But we are no closer to completing any deals. What are his chances of remaining with us? It's entirely up to Tom. We have made him an offer and that's where the matter stands."

Seaver rejected an offer Monday night but will meet General Manager Joe McDonauld later today in an effort to patch things up.

Ben Oglivie's three-run double and Bob Molinaro's solo homer highlighted Detroit's 8-3 victory over the White Sox. Chris Arnold had a grand slam in San Francisco's 9-3 victory over Milwaukee. Billy North drove in four runs with a single, double and triple in Oakland's 8-6 victory over the Chicago Cubs. Phil Roof's two-run homer powered Minnesota to an 8-5 victory over Baltimore.

Kieval evil on Trotter court

By PAUL SIMS
Sports Editor

Roy Kieval grew bored with coaching. So he joined the Harlem Globetrotters.

Now he's traveling over 40,000 miles a year to such places as Australia and Europe, receiving a sizeable salary and doing his thing before crowds of more than 5,000.

Kieval's thing is refereeing. He is the resident, touring official for the Globetrotters' international squad. Quite a change for a man who was an assistant basketball coach at Pampa High School from 1960-64.

"A lot of people say it must be great—traveling with the Globetrotters and all—and they're right," said Kieval, who left Pampa to accept the head basketball job at Canyon, then was the Houston Spring Woods coach for eight years.

"I miss coaching, but I just got where I wanted to do something different."

How did a former Pampa High get mixed up—er, in—with the zany Globetrotters?

It started with the Washington Generals, the patsy opponents of the Globetrotters for years. Kieval left college at North Texas State in 1959 to play with the Generals, who have lost thousands of times to the Globetrotters and only own a couple of wins (everybody lost count, especially the Generals).

After a one-year stint, Kieval quit the team and went back to school. After graduation, "I came to Pampa. I had heard of Pampa's great basketball program."

Following stints at Pampa and Canyon, Kieval became head coach at Houston Spring Woods.

"Off and on, I was still affiliated with the Trotters. I made three European tours with them in the summertime while I was coaching in Houston. My players used to think it was a big thing," said Kieval, who was born in New York City and still has a stiff Brooklyn accent.

When it came time to find a replacement for the regular Globetrotters' referee, who retired, Kieval applied for the job. And got it. Then, the first thing he did was to change an image.

"I do a lot of straight refereeing. Before, they had a fellow who was short and fat and squatly looking. It was kind of a joke. I'm trying to create a new image."

Kieval, in spite of his straightness, must take a good deal of abuse as part of the Globetrotters' routine. He has lines to follow and, occasionally, must take a dive when a player pushes him.

He has even called technical fouls.

"I sure do. I've called a few on the other team (usually the California Chiefs, another patsy). Mainly for obscenities. I haven't called any on the Globetrotters. They would probably get rid of me."

The Globetrotters have just returned from a tour of Australia, New Zealand and Hawaii. They played Sunday in Amarillo. They left Monday for Wyoming. They have played approximately 120 games in the 3 1/2 months that Kieval has been associated with the squad.

That's a lot of spills, shoves, verbal abuse and—particularly—running for Kieval.

"It's all part of the show. You just learn to live with it."

At least, as a coach, he was able to sit. But, isn't that the reason he quit?

For the Globetrotters, that's a lot of clowning on the courts. For Kieval, it's a lot of spills and shoves and running.

Says Kieval: "It's all part of the show."

Hoosiers earn NCAA crown

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—Last year's Indiana Hoosiers may have had a more versatile offense, but this year's have a national championship—thanks to Kent Benson and Scott May.

Benson and May, responsible for getting Indiana through the regular season undefeated and into the NCAA title game, carried the Hoosiers through the rough spots against Michigan Monday night to the 1976 NCAA national basketball championship with an 86-68 victory.

two years.

Although they had to scramble sometimes, the Hoosiers put together a perfect 32-0 record this season by relying on Benson and May.

Key contributions also came from other members of the team, though. Senior guard Quinn Buckner, benched at one point during the season for poor play, scored 16 points and kept Michigan's leading scorer, Ricky Green, from doing too much damage.

Buckner's burden was increased early in the game when Indiana's other starting guard, Bobby Wilkerson, who had grabbed 19 rebounds in the Hoosiers' semifinal victory over 1975 champion UCLA, was carried off the court with a moderate concussion.

After Wayne Radford and Jim Crews had been given opportunities at replacing Wilkerson in the first half, Knight turned to sophomore Jim Wisman. Ironically, Knight had yanked Wisman out—by the jersey—of an earlier overtime victory over the Wolverines for sloppy play. A picture of the incident had caused a national furor.

"But Wisman was responsible for Indiana's success in getting the ball inside to Benson and May Monday night."

"Wisman did an outstanding job in the second half," said Knight. "He moved the ball where he had to move it."

And Tom Abernethy, the forgotten man on Indiana's front line, scored 13 points despite a

The victory made Knight the first man to win national championships as both a coach and a player. He was a member of Ohio State's 1960 national champions.

Michigan, which finished with a 25-7 record, was led by Green with 18 points.

In the earlier third-place consolation game at the Spectrum, Marques Johnson scored 30 points and Andre McCarter 26 to lead UCLA to an 106-92 victory over Rutgers.

Pampa golfers slip another shot off pace

AMARILLO — Amarillo High gained another stroke on third place Pampa Monday, but it was Borger who stole the show in the fourth District 3 - AAAA boys golf round at the Southwest Golf Course.

In the third district girls round, Amarillo High widened its lead Monday at Ross Rogers Golf Course here.

Amarillo High shot 319 in the boys round, while Pampa shot 220. The Sandies have a 1,248 total, and Pampa is 26 shots back at 1,274. Borger was Monday's low team with a 316, giving the Bulldogs a 1,255 total, seven shots behind the leading Sandies.

Other teams are Amarillo High B - team, 101 - 329 - 1,290; Amarillo Tascosa, 980 - 329 - 1,309; Borger B - team, 1,003 - 345 - 1,348; Pampa B - team, 1,022 - 353 - 1,375; Amarillo Caprock, 1,057 - 359 - 1,416; Amarillo Palo Duro, 1,063 - 364 - 1,427, and Tascosa B - team, 1,060 - 362 - 1,442.

Curt Beck shot 76 Monday and was Pampa's lowest player. Other Harvesters were Wiley McIntire, 79; Scott Barrett, 82; Scott White, 83, and Doug McFatrige, 96.

Pampa B - team scores were Doug Eubanks, 87; Danny Kohler, 88; Bill Browning, 89; Dusty Hudson, 89, and Danny Williams, 95.

McIntire and Borger's Tony Salinas, for the third straight round, remained tied for the district medalist lead. They have 301 totals.

Girls' district teams are Amarillo High, 789 - 362 - 1,151; Tascosa, 791 - 368 - 1,160; Borger, 801 - 396 - 1,199;

Amarillo B - team, 816 - 388 - 1,204; Palo Duro, 832 - 406 - 1,238; Caprock, 844 - 406 - 1,249; Pampa, 919 - 466 - 1,385, and Caprock B - team, 938 - 451 - 1,389.

Borger's Joyceann Hooper, with a 266 total, is the leader in the running for medalist honors.

Pampa scores Monday were Teresa McCabe, 111; Renee Wright, 115; Janet Keagy, 118; Karen Weigel, 120, and Aleice Kirby, 120.

Harvester singles players Monday were Scott Nichols (91), Kevin Kirby (85) and Rory Hill (104).

Pampa hosts the boys' fifth round Friday. The district girls are entered in the Amarillo Relays Friday and Saturday.

The Hoosiers were struggling to stay even with the Wolverines before the game was turned over to Benson and May. Then, the two All Americas attacked the Michigan defense with a vengeance.

In addition to providing Indiana with most of its scoring in the second half, Benson and May caused Michigan's Phil Hubbard and Wayman Britt to foul out, enabling the Hoosiers to break open the game near the end.

Benson was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player after scoring 25 points against the Wolverines and Michigan Coach Johnny Orr said, "In the second half, he (Benson) really came on and when he shot he made it. And he got us into foul trouble."

May, UPI's Player of the Year, finished with a game-high 26.

Last season the Hoosiers breezed through their regular season schedule undefeated, but were upset by Kentucky in the Midwest regional for their only loss in 64 games during the past

In baseball clash Harvesters entertain surprising Tascosa

Amarillo Tascosa, maybe the surprise team in District 3 - AAAA, will go after its third straight win, as it meets Pampa at 4 p.m. today in Optimist Park.

Tascosa used 12 hits to clout Amarillo Palo Duro, 16-3, in the opening district game for those schools Saturday. The Rebels are 7-8 for the season.

Ricky Baker, the sophomore of the year in 3 - AAAA two years ago, will start for Tascosa on the mound. Pampa, 8-6 overall and 0-1 in district, will counter with either Dave Edwards (2-1) or Joe Davis (2-1).

Pampa lost its district opener, 10-4, to Amarillo Caprock Saturday.

In a crucial district game, Caprock hosts Amarillo High. The Longhorns are 10-3 for the season and have won seven games in a row, while the Sandies (12-1) drubbed Borger, 12-0, Monday for their 10th straight win.

In another district game today, Borger visits Palo Duro.

Five big ones landed in 'Cuckoo Nest'

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" made motion history Monday night, becoming the first film in 42 years to win the five top Oscars — Best Picture, Best Actor, Best Actress, Best Director and Best Screenplay. Jack Nicholson and Louise Fletcher won the major acting awards for their roles as a rebellious asylum lunatic and an unsympathetic nurse. Czechoslovakian-born Milos Forman won the directing honor, and the award for a screenplay adapted from other material went to writers Lawrence Hauben and Bo Goldman. Not since 1934, when "It Happened One Night" was named Best Picture and its stars Clark Gable and Claudette Colbert won the best acting awards, has a movie swept the major Oscars. Sentimental favorite George Burns, 80, was named Best Supporting Actor for his role as the combative old vaudevillian in "The Sunshine Boys." Lee Grant was voted Best Supporting Actress for her characterization of a disenchanted and adulterous wife in "Shampoo." This was the first show in recent memory with all four winning performers on hand to accept their awards. The winners from "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" clearly were the most popular with the audience at the Music Center, from which the 48th annual ceremonies were telecast nationally and to 42 countries. The movie, adapted from the novel by Ken Kesey and produced by Saul Zaentz and Michael Douglas for United Artists, deals with the humor, pathos and tragedy of inmates in a mental institution. "Barry Lyndon," a Stanley Kubrick film set in 18th century England and France, won five awards in less spectacular categories — Best Achievement in Scoring Adaptation, Art Direction, Set Design, Cinematography and Costume Design. "Jaws," the biggest box office hit in motion picture annals, collected three Oscars — Best Film Editing, Best Original Score and Best Achievement in Sound. "Dog Day Afternoon" won the Oscar for Best Original Screenplay, by Frank Pierson. "I'm Easy," Keith Carradine's song from "Nashville," won the award for Best Original Song in a 1975 film. Russia's Mosfilms Studios production "Dersu Uzala" won the Oscar for Best Foreign Language Film of the year. The crazy gang from "Cuckoo's Nest" provided the greatest excitement and most of the joy of the evening. A grinning Nicholson, pelted with roses by fans as he arrived, said after the show, "I was surprised to win because I was a favorite four times before." As he accepted the Oscar Nicholson said, "I guess this proves there are many nuts in the academy as anywhere else." Miss Fletcher provided the evening's most emotional moment when she thanked her deaf parents in sign language for the television cameras. "They were watching at home in Birmingham (Ala.)," she said later. Miss Grant, who accepted the supporting actress award in an old wedding gown, explained: "I've never had a proper wedding until now." Holding up the Oscar, she added, "And this is it — with him." After accepting the supporting actor honor Burns said, "It just goes to show if you can stay in this business long enough and cutting service and at the same time increase rates." Filbey blamed deteriorating postal service on mismanagement, using as an example installation of machines to handle bulk mail that he said were ineffective and untested. "There was a billion dollars wasted in the bulk mail system and in our opinion the system will have to be scrapped," he said. "We now have 21 monstrosities tearing up our bulk mail."

Warner Brothers won the competition among major studios for the most awards with six, followed by United Artists with five, Universal with three, and Columbia, MGM and Paramount with one each.

The 2 1/2-hour telecast featured five hosts — Walter Matthau, Robert Shaw, George Segal, Goldie Hawn and Gene Kelly. A highlight was a filmed appearance by Mary Pickford, who tearfully accepted an honorary Oscar at her "Pickfair" estate in Beverly Hills. The show ended with a short tribute to the American Bicentennial by Elizabeth Taylor, who then asked the audience to join her and the University of Southern California marching band in "America the Beautiful."

They're glad they don't use dial—the old cranks

MOUTH OF SENECA, W. Va. (UPI) — When a fire breaks out in this pastoral valley, no one bothers to call the fire department. Folks crank up the telephone and call switchboard operator Gladys Richards instead. She is ready to handle all emergencies — fires, impassable roads, the death of a neighbor's relative. "They just say, 'We've got a fire' and I do the rest," says

Mrs. Richards. "When someone dies, it's my responsibility to find out when and where the funeral is and inform everyone. That's how citizens here — 260 by last count — have been handling crises since 1902, when they formed the North Fork Mutual Telephone Co. Everyone shares party lines — 20 families to a line — and Mrs. Richards is the telephone company's only employee. Now, some are suggesting a drastic change: dial telephones. "I don't know how much longer we can hold out," sighs Mrs. Bessie Kisamore. She and her neighbors have battled the Public Service Commission for four years to keep dial service from replacing the old-fashioned system. If it does, Mrs. Richards will lose her job. Mrs. Richards says residents who have resided in cities are the only ones who want the change. "The people who have lived in this valley all their lives couldn't get by without the crank system. But someone's always trying to ram city things down our throats," she said. Telephone customers here pay only an annual tax of 75 cents, plus charges for long distance calls. There is no monthly fee. The anti-dial faction suffered a setback two years ago when the Rural Electrification Administration approved a $1.15 million loan to a Spruce Knob group who wanted to bring dial service throughout the county. "Most of the people up here are farmers or senior citizens," said Mary Alt, whose mother ran the switchboard before Mrs. Richards. By the time they pay their grocery, gas and electric bills, they can't afford $150 a year for dial phones.

PO workers blame management

HOUSTON (UPI) — The American Postal Workers Union has started a half million dollar publicity campaign to show it's management's fault that a letter takes a week to arrive instead of two days. Holding a stogie in one hand and a full page newspaper advertisement claiming "Grown men are playing 'Post Office' in Washington. And they're kissing off the American Public!" in the other, union president Francis Filbey told the union will spend its entire strike fund to get its point across. The advertisement continued: "If your letters are late and you feel like screaming at your friendly postal worker, please don't. It's Management that's messing up the mail." "This ad is kind of hard, it's kind of tough, but so is our situation," Filbey said. "The American public must be told what's wrong." Filbey criticized proposals to turn delivery of first class mail over to the private sector, saying such a system would hurt most home and rural deliveries. "There's apparently a conspiracy on the part of the Ford Administration, certain members of Congress and people in the private sector to take over the U.S. Postal Service and turn it over to private entrepreneurs," he said. "Private industry does not serve where it cannot make a profit. This would be true of first class mail. They would skim off the cream," he said. "The private sector wouldn't serve a little town at the foot of the Grand Canyon. We serve it everyday."

Filbey also urged support of a bill proposed by Sen. Gale McGee, D-Wyo., to increase the postal operating budget 10 percent during the next three years and establish a committee to study postal operations. "The answer to the problem is to give the Postal Service money to operate the next three years and establish the committee to find out what the hell is going on," Filbey said. "If this is not done, the Postal Service will have to continue cutting service and at the same time increase rates." Filbey blamed deteriorating postal service on mismanagement, using as an example installation of machines to handle bulk mail that he said were ineffective and untested. "There was a billion dollars wasted in the bulk mail system and in our opinion the system will have to be scrapped," he said. "We now have 21 monstrosities tearing up our bulk mail."

Warner Brothers won the competition among major studios for the most awards with six, followed by United Artists with five, Universal with three, and Columbia, MGM and Paramount with one each.

Depression, not senility may be problem of old

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — Depression, not senility, is often the reason old persons lose their memory or act abnormally, a Stanford University study reports. "Unrecognized depression may be a more important problem in old age than organic brain conditions," Dr. Leo E. Hollister of Stanford's School of Medicine wrote in the current Journal of the American Medical Association. Age alone does not necessarily mean that a person's emotional disorder is caused by organic brain disease, said Hollister, a professor of medicine and psychiatry. "Life has plenty of psychosocial vicissitudes to make the elderly depressed," he said. Among these, said Hollister, are loss of prestige, decreased earning power, isolation, illness or death of one's spouse. In addition, a stroke or heart attack is a depressing experience for many patients, he said. CHICAGO (UPI) — A portable garden cover that looks like a small tent of transparent polyvinyl plastic is said to extend the growing season to as much as 218 frost-free days. The manufacturer suggests using the new product to cover seedlings in early spring and full grown plants in the fall. It should be removed during the normal summer growing season. Garden Domes are made by Fabrico Mfg. Corp of Chicago. They retail for $1 per square foot and are available in sizes from 18 to 24 feet in diameter at garden supply stores.

HOME BAKED ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — Gardeners who use their own compost for seed starting are advised to sterilize it before sowing to prevent damping-off. A seedsman here recommends baking it until all the soil reaches 180 degrees and remains that temperature for 30 minutes. Instead of using a thermometer, he suggests burying a potato in the soil. The compost will be sterilized by the time the spud is thoroughly cooked.

FDA says no more laetrile

CONWAY SPRINGS, Kan. (UPI) — Glen Rutherford says the illegal drug laetrile saved his life. But the Food and Drug Administration is trying to stop him from importing more of the substance. The FDA said there is no evidence to support claims that drug aids cancer patients. Rutherford said, "It's my life that is at stake." He said that four years ago he had a malignant tumor the size of a small orange in his colon. Today, the tumor is gone. "I continue to be on laetrile and I owe my life to it," Rutherford said. Rutherford has been taking daily doses of laetrile, which has been banned in the United States since 1963 but is legal in 24 other countries including Mexico, Canada, Germany and Japan. He and Oklahoman Ernest

Ray are believed the only persons in the United States allowed to take the drug legally. U.S. District Court Judge Luther Bohannon ruled both men could import a six-month supply for their personal use. The FDA is appealing Rutherford's case to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver. "We feel it sets a very dangerous precedent," said

Jerry Henderson, FDA program manager for consumer affairs in Dallas. "If a drug for which there is no demonstrated safety or effectiveness is allowed to be sold, then where is it to end?" Rutherford says he cannot understand the government's position. He said that 12 days after he began taking laetrile and enzymes, the tumor shrank to the size of a grape and was cauterized at a hospital in Tijuana, Mexico. He said he has resumed a normal life, works 10 to 12 hours a day and has not been sick or suffered ill effects from the drug. "Laetrile is not a cure," he said. "There is no use of saying that it is a cure. It's a control." "I can name just offhand 50 people in south-central Kansas (who have benefited from laetrile)," Rutherford said. He said a special diet is 99 percent of the treatment. "If you don't follow that diet you might as well forget about going to Tijuana and save your money for the mortician," he said.

The Gulf Intracoastal Waterway, extending from Apalachee Bay, Fla., to the Mexican border, is 1,137 miles long. Schneiderman said cigarette smoking, alone and in combination with other cancer causes, accounts for an estimated 112,000 deaths annually, of which 80,000 could be avoided if people stopped smoking.

Government sets up clearinghouse

By AL ROSSITER Jr. UPI Science Editor ST. PETERSBURG BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — With four of five cancers blamed on items we eat, drink or breathe, the government is setting up a cancer clearinghouse to sound an early alert on suspicious substances. There already are hundreds of known cancer-causing agents. A new one was reported Monday — dimethylcarbamoyl chloride, or DMCC. It was labeled particularly dangerous. It has been used in the manufacture of two insecticides and one drug but is not contained in the finished product. The Occupational Safety and Health Administration is trying to determine when and where DMCC was produced and how many workers were exposed to its toxic fumes. Another report just released by the National Cancer Institute said a much more common chemical — trichloroethylene, or TCE — is capable of causing cancer in mice. TCE is used as an industrial solvent, as an ingredient in inks, paints and has been used to help remove caffeine from coffee.

These are the types of substances the new National Clearinghouse on Environmental Carcinogens will watch for. The organization is being set up by the cancer institute and will include institute scientists and representatives of regulatory agencies, industry, labor and consumers. Dr. Frank Rauscher, institute director, told an American Cancer Society seminar Monday the clearinghouse will assess data as it comes out, decide what substances to test and issue alerts on materials that preliminary tests indicate might be harmful. "I'd rather have the public scared than uninformed," he said. From what already is known about the causes of cancer, Dr. Marvin Schneiderman of the institute estimated as many as 100,000 American cancer deaths could be prevented each year. A total of 370,000 cancer deaths are expected this year. Schneiderman said cigarette smoking, alone and in combination with other cancer causes, accounts for an estimated 112,000 deaths annually, of which 80,000 could be avoided if people stopped smoking.
