Court upholds freedom of press

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled unanimously today that a Nebraska judge's order restricting news coverage of a sensational mass murder case last October was an unconstitutional restraint on freedom of the press.

In an opinion by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, the court did not rule out the possibility that such orders could be issued in other circumstances to protect the right of a defendant to a fair trial.

But the court said "the barriers to prior restraint remain high" and that those barriers had not been overcome in the Nebraska case.

The decision marked the first time in the court's history that it gave full-scale review to a direct prior restraint on news coverage of a criminal case.

Burger's opinion was confined closely to the facts in the Nebraska case, but he said the decision also "results in part from the problems inherent in meeting the heavy burden of demonstrating, in advance of trial, that without prior restraint a fair trial will be denied."

In another case involving the news media, the court declined to review an order jailing a Los Angeles newsman for refusing to reveal his sources for a story about the Manson murders.

The U.S. Circuit Court in San Francisco had upheld the contempt conviction of William T. Farr, then a reporter for the Los Angeles

Herald-Examiner. Farr had written a story about a written statement by a cellmate of Susan Atkins, a follower of Charles Manson, convicted in the slaying of actress Sharon Tate.

In its Nebraska decision, the court focused on a longstanding debate over whether the constitutional guarantee of a fair trial requires restrictions on news coverage to keep publicity from influencing jurors.

At the heart of the debate is what balance should be struck between the Sixth Amendment, guaranteeing a person facing criminal charges "a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury," and the First Amendment, prohibiting any abridgement of the freedom of the press.

The fair trial-free press debate has been building since 1966, when the Supreme Court reversed the conviction of Dr. Sam Sheppard for the murder of his wife. The court said the Cleveland osteopath had not been adequately protected from "the inherently prejudicial publicity which saturated the community."

The debate has been sharpened since by several so-called gag orders in which judges have restricted news coverage before and during trials. Five orders containing such restrictions were issued the year after the Sheppard decision.

Last year, there were 62 Attorney E. Barrett Prettyman, representing news organizations in arguments before the Supreme Court in April, said he knew of 11 such orders in the previous six months alone.

Since then, news restrictions have been ordered and subsequently lifted in singer Connie Francis' lawsuit against a New York motel in which she was raped and entertainer Claudine Longet's manslaughter trial in the Aspen, Colo., killing of her lover, skier Vladimir "Spider" Sabich.

Today's decision marks the Supreme Court's first full-scale review of a direct prior restraint on news coverage of a criminal case.

At issue was a Nebraska order prohibiting the news media from making public, in advance of a criminal trial, accounts of the defendant's confession or any information strongly indicating his guilt.

His mother bought 4-year-old John a helium-filled balloon.

John held the balloon all the way home, but when he got out of car it escaped.

The little tow-headed boy watched it climb upward before he turned to his mother and said, "Don't be sad, mom. The clouds are going to like it."

Gray County should be terribly proud of its people who have worked so diligently to make the American Bicentennial an event to remember here.

It will be a real happening, one that should easily wipe away the cynical remarks and tired sighs brought on by those who would make the nation's birthday so commercial and superficial.

The real bicentennial celebration is one which comes from the heart and the soul... a feeling stirred by a waving flag or a thoughtful reflection upon the real meaning to such words as "the land of the free and the home of the brave" or "this land was made for you and me."

This weekend's celebration in Pampa, sponsored by the Gray County Bicentennial Committee, is one which comes from many hearts and souls.

Nearly 100 men and women are on the committee. Weekend activities have involved many others in the planning and preparation. There are more than 50 in the cast and crew of "Windmill County," the Gray County historical pageant. Dozens more are working on the museum dedication, barbecue, church service, and heritage fair. More than 100 residents who have lived in the county since 1930 have registered and will be honored at a pioneers' reception Saturday before the pageant in M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Other projects have involved entire organizations: Chamber of Commerce, Boy and Girl Scouts, McLean Pioneer Study Club, Ministerial Alliance.

The new exhibits at the museum which will be dedicated Saturday have been the target of years of work.

The fact that the county has something to boast about in presenting its history and the fact that so many have given willingly with little reward to celebrate it illustrates that Gray County's founding fathers did indeed lay a firm foundation.

It seems fitting that several of the weekend events will take place in a hall named for one of the area's most supportive founding fathers, M.K. Brown.

A copy of "Pampa," the official publication of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce carried this message about Mr. Brown in its October 1964 issue:

"M.K. Brown is dead. On September 10th we lost the man who has been called 'Pampa's First Citizen.' A Founder of Pampa. A Gracious and Generous Mr. Pampa."

"Someone has said that Mr. Brown's passing marks the end of an era. When some men die, an era passes; when others die, because they have been good stewards of God's gifts and have used their abilities and treasures to prepare for the future, we think rather of a new era that is beginning. Mr. Brown gave much to this city, and took great joy in his giving; and for this we are all thankful, but he did more than simply give of his money. He gave of himself, and his gracious spirit lives on in the causes that he supported and the lives that he has touched.

"Never will we say, 'Pampa WAS a better place because of him.' Rather we will always say, 'Pampa IS a better place because of him' — and even more to the point, 'Pampa WILL BE a better place because of him.'"

The tribute was written by Mr. Brown's attorney and trustee of the M.K. Brown Foundation, the late William Jarrel Smith who died in 1975.

What greater words could be written about someone than that they left their home a better place.

It is to men like this and the great men and women who preceded and follow him that this July 4 weekend is dedicated.

Few hostages released

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — Palestinian hijackers of a French jetliner today released 47 elderly women, sick persons and children among the more than 250 hostages they were holding for the third day at Entebbe Airport, the Ugandan government announced. Two Americans were among them.

The West German Embassy, which handles American affairs in Uganda, identified the Americans as Carol Taylor, 33, and her son Eric, 6. No home town was given.

The Israeli cabinet was meeting in emergency session to decide what it would do about demands to free 40 prisoners to ransom the rest of the captives and the plane. At least 70 Israelis are among the hostages.

Official Uganda radio said those freed were handed over to French Ambassador Pierre Renard, with Ugandan President Idi Amin and Somali Ambassador Hashi Abdullah acting as intermediaries.

Besides the two Americans, the 47 included 33 French, one Canadian and various other nationalities, the announcement said.

The Ugandan government said an Air France Boeing 707 plane had left neighboring Kenya for Entebbe to fly the freed hostages out. French Embassy officials said they believed the plane would go directly to Paris, but an airport spokesman in Nairobi said it might return there.

Amin had asked Tuesday for the release of captives in distress. The handover took place at the new Entebbe civilian terminal, about a mile from the old terminal where the captives had been held.

France said it would not accede to the demands. But French officials said the "prisoner" wanted from them was released last December and they did not know where she was.

The West German and Swiss governments were waiting to see what the Israeli government would do. The Kenyan government denied that it had any Palestinian prisoners.

The hostages, who include at least nine Americans, spent their second night on the benches and floor of a transit lounge at the Entebbe airport. The armed hijackers kept a close watch on them and on the hijacked plane nearby.

risors and submission to their demands do not in the long run save human lives at all," said the Jerusalem Post.

The five or six hijackers who took over the plane Sunday on a flight from Tel Aviv and Athens to Paris also demanded the release of 13 prisoners held elsewhere — six from West Germany, five from Kenya and one each from France and Switzerland.

Goldwater backs Ford

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater, an influential voice among conservative Republicans, has endorsed President Ford for the GOP nomination for the White House.

The 1964 Republican presidential nominee issued his endorsement in a letter sent Tuesday to national convention delegates.

The Arizona senator, who had long signaled his preference for the President over Ronald Reagan, said it was a difficult call, and added that he greatly admires the former California governor.

"Although, frankly, the philosophy presented by the two candidates is almost identical and the solutions offered to the problems in most cases coincide, my decision rests solely on the fact that at this time in our history I do not believe that our government can suffer through the months and months of reorganization that would be necessary if we had a change in the office," Goldwater wrote.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said in Jerusalem his government "considers itself responsible for the safety of every Israeli... and Israel will act according to this principle." But he said France was responsible for the safety of the passengers who were aboard the hijacked plane.

Every Israeli morning newspaper urged the government to adhere to its previous policy of refusing to give in to terrorist demands. "Bargaining with terrorists and submission to their demands do not in the long run save human lives at all," said the Jerusalem Post.

The five or six hijackers who took over the plane Sunday on a flight from Tel Aviv and Athens to Paris also demanded the release of 13 prisoners held elsewhere — six from West Germany, five from Kenya and one each from France and Switzerland.

Meet for music, friendship Pioneer reception set

The winding cattle trails, now well traveled highways, will be among the conversation topics at the bicentennial reception Saturday from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. at the M.K. Brown Auditorium, will honor Gray County pioneers.

Georgia Mack, coordinator said the response has been overwhelming with more than 100 persons already registered.

"We especially want everyone to attend who has lived here since 1930," she said. "And they can arrive at the reception by 5:30 p.m. Saturday since we will have the tables set up by that time."

Plans were completed Tuesday when a few of the pioneers met in the home of Mrs. Laura Hobart Fatheree, 915 Christine.

DeLea Vicars, Mrs. Fred A. Hobart and Mrs. Clinton Henry were among those present for the Tuesday gathering.

Vicars has lived here since 1908. His family bought eight acres of land in Pampa when he was a boy. Mrs. Hobart came in 1913 and she still lives in the home place at 215 N. Hobart. Mrs. Henry is a native of this county.

The Saturday program will feature music by the youth choir of the Central Baptist Church. Tommy Bowers will play and sing a number of the old cowboy ballads, "along with spiritual selections dear to the hearts of everyone," Mrs. Mack said.

Name tags will portray a bicentennial theme with red, white and blue ribbon streamers.

Guests will be registered by Mr. Tommy Bowers. Pampa. Official greeters will include Mrs. Jake Osborne, Pampa; Mrs. Vera Back, Mrs. Ruth McGee, Mrs. Mary Emma Woods, Mrs. Margaret Coleman and Mrs. Mary Dwyer, all of McLean.

Others from McLean Pioneer Study Club will be Mollie McDowell, Shirley Stokes, Irene Pakan, Alice Short Smith, Mary Hess Dwyer, Bonnie McBee Fabian and Fayette Bell Copeland Barton.

Mrs. Mack said the evening is designed to be one where memories of the past "come alive once again."

She added that the Pampa Altruism Club members will assist in welcoming the pioneers.

"And we want everyone in the entire area to feel welcome to come."

Mrs. Mack requested that the pioneers arrive in time for a visit prior to the 8 p.m. pageant, "Windmill County — 100 Years in Gray County," also scheduled in M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Gray County 1776-1976
Evelyn Pierce Nace wrote it, Richard Thompson design and coordinated it, the Chamber of Commerce and Gray County Bicentennial Committee printed it. Now the Pride of Pampa Band will sell it. It is the Gray County bicentennial souvenir program commemorating the 200th birthday of the nation. The program, which will sell for $2 each with 50 cents going to the band and other profits helping to defray costs of the weekend bicentennial celebration in Pampa, include pages of old photographs from the White Deer Land Museum and private collections. The story of Gray County is told by G.C.T. (Gray County Texas) who includes funny stories and lots of names and facts in the booklet. Five thousand of the brochures were printed. They are available from any band member, the museum, the Chamber of Commerce, several businesses in Pampa and Jeff Doughten, band director. Among those working on sales are Donald White, band president at left; April Walkup, sales chairman, and Tim Koenig, finance chairman of Band Boosters. (Pampa News photo)

Special session decision due

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—Gov. Dolph Briscoe's response was awaited today to a claim by House leaders that a special legislative session could save consumers more than 10 per cent on their utility costs.

Speaker Bill Clayton laid out a package of bills that have been readied by three committees for a special session in case the governor calls one. He said he had given the proposals to Briscoe.

Clayton held a joint news conference Tuesday with the chairmen of the House Committees on Ways and Means, Energy Resources and State Affairs. They had been instructed by Clayton to seek ways a special session could reduce Texans' utility bills.

The Ways and Means Committee came up with the most dramatic proposals, and chairman Joe Wyatt, D-Bloomington, predicted savings of 10 to 12 per cent.

Ways and means recommendations would:

- Eliminate the 4 per cent state and 1 per cent city sales taxes on utility bills. This would cost the state—and save consumers—about $104 million and cities about $26 million in the coming fiscal year.
- Set a minimum natural gas severance tax of four cents per 1,000 cubic feet (mcf) on gas selling for less than 53.3 cents per mcf. This would add an estimated $58.7 million to the treasury next year by boosting revenue from gas sold out-of-state. It would not, however, reduce the 7 1/2 per cent tax paid on the price of more expensive gas and passed on to consumers by producers.

—Provide special credits for privately owned utility companies that do not pass on to consumers their gross receipts, sales and corporate franchise taxes. Cost to the state: $7.4 million next year. Wyatt said this in itself could reduce utility bills by 10 per cent in areas served by such companies.

Wyatt said the treasury could afford the tax cuts because of a projected $3 billion state surplus over the next three years.

"We are saying, take away $500 million immediately. The best way to hold down spending is to cut taxes," Wyatt said.

Young pioneers
A painting of Laura Hobart Fatheree's grandfather was the topic of conversation when Gray County pioneers met briefly Tuesday to discuss plans for a reception honoring pioneers from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. Saturday. From left are Mrs. Fred A. Hobart, DeLea Vicars, Mrs. Clinton Henry and Laura Hobart Fatheree. The painting of Mrs. Fatheree's grandfather, Abel Knapp Warren, was done in 1862. Her parents came to Gray County from Vermont. (Pampa News photo)

Chance for third choices next November

By WILLIAM RUSHER
NEW YORK

Now that the Democratic nominee is going to be, and the Republican race has settled down to a very evenly-matched contest between Ford and Reagan, you might suppose that guessing the November winner would be simply a matter of polling voters on their preference as between Carter and Ford or Carter and Reagan. Unfortunately (or perhaps fortunately), it isn't quite that easy. For the woods are full of Democrats deeply suspicious of Carter, and equally thronged with Republicans who are determined to bolt if Reagan (or Ford, as the case may be) isn't nominated.

This would matter less if the actual choice on Election Day boiled down to only two: one Democrat and one Republican.

Few people, assuming they are interested in the electoral process at all, will refuse to cast a ballot for somebody, if the lesser of two evils. But while the Republicans and Democrats have been garnering all the headlines, at least three other groups have been working hard and successfully to get on the ballot in as many states as possible. As a result, it can now be reported that most Democrats and Republicans outraged enough at the choice of their party to bolt it will, on Election Day, have someplace else to go. What's more, the outcome of the election itself will very probably hinge on this little-noted fact.

Take the Democrats first. Jimmy Carter now appears the inevitable winner of his party's nomination, but large numbers of northern liberal Democrats fear and resent the capture of their longtime bastion by a "twice-born" Georgia Baptist, whom they perceive as conservative on many issues. If Gerald Ford manages to beat back the Reagan challenge and win the GOP nomination, it is conceivable that even he might win some votes as a result of this mood. But it now appears that former Minnesota Senator Eugene McCarthy's name (or those of independent electors pledged to him) will be on the ballot in a good many states, and his presence there will prove a mighty temptation to liberals who want to send their fellow Democrats a message. At McCarthy headquarters in Washington, the brave talk is of ballot position in over 40 states; but this appears to depend on the success of lawsuits, now pending or soon to be filed in as many as 15 states, to overturn local laws requiring independent candidates for president to organize a political party for the purpose — something McCarthy has declined to do. Still, his name on the ballot in even 25 strategically important states would be enough to insure insomnia among Democratic campaign managers this summer and fall. (McCarthy may also pick up a number of grouchy Republicans liberals, if Reagan defeats Ford.)

Over in the conservative camp, the major threat to a Ford candidacy (it would not oppose Reagan) is unquestionably the combined operation being mounted by the newly formed American Independence party and its near-twin, William Shearer's American Independent party. These two organizations, which between them may well attain ballot position in over 40 states, even without benefit of lawsuits, have rescheduled their joint convention to take place August 26-28 in Chicago. They plainly intend to recruit a candidate from the right wing of the GOP if

Ford has meanwhile defeated Reagan at Kansas City earlier that month, and nobody familiar with the grim mood of much of the American right doubts for a moment that such a candidate would receive millions of votes.

In addition, for those who like their doctrine pure, there is the Liberation party and its presidential candidate, Roger MacBride. This organization, whose fundamental plank is strenuous opposition to all forms of government interference with personal freedom, is in the happy position of being able to appeal to both crusty laissez-faire conservatives and college students who want to decriminalize marijuana. Largely by circulating the necessary petitions on college campuses, it will probably continue to be on the ballot in 30 to 40 states.

So don't let anybody tell you that the November result is a foregone conclusion. A birds-eye view of America's voters on Election Day this year may look like rush hour in Grand Central Station.

Rot on Capitol Hill

Bosomy "secretaries" on the public payroll and sex scandals on Capitol Hill make for titillating headlines but these, according to an article on the front page of a recent issue of the Wall Street Journal, are minor when compared to the real rot in the nation's capital where use of the machinery of the law to line the lawmakers' pockets financially is widespread.

Sexual hanky-panky, such as alleged in the cases of Congressman Wayne Hays of Ohio and John Young of Texas, is probably the exception, while congressional benefits at taxpayer expense are increasingly the rule, the Journal said, and are consequently, vastly more serious. The former, lurid to be sure, serves merely as a blinking "red light" warning of the more prevalent and deep-seated canker inherent in the latter.

While we are quick to allege, investigate and seek to root out misconduct elsewhere, Rep. William Brodhead of Michigan was quoted by the Journal as telling his colleagues in a House speech the other day, "we have closed our eyes to wrongdoing in our own ranks."

In the case of Hays, the way he became a Capitol Hill powerhouse is a revelation in itself. This, according to the Journal, was "partly because his colleagues eagerly delegated to his Administration Committee the power to pass out goodies they didn't dare vote for themselves. For four years the Hays panel has quietly, without public hearings or rollcall votes, added layers of new benefits, without requiring the sort of accounting that would prevent abuses."

A sampling of the goodies congressmen have acquired, either via their own votes or via the Hays Committee, includes the following:

—A pay raise last year from $42,400 to $44,600

—Automatic annual pay increases to offset inflation, with the next boost scheduled in October.

—Increase of the "stationery allowance," which a member can collect in cash, from $4,250 to $6,500 a year. Intended for office supplies, the money need not be accounted for, in fact, becomes a cash bonus for those who go easy on the paper and pencils.

—An allowance for airmail and special delivery stamps was increased to $1,140 from $910 a year, even though the Postal Service is trying to phase out the use of airmail stamps. Since congressmen get free regular mailing for official business, this "allowance" amounts to a slush fund, too, which members can dip into for personal use.

—A new $5,000 a year

"constituent-Communication allowance" was created last year which members, ostensibly, use for the publication of newsletters. Paralleling this, Members of Congress are also permitted to have private office-expense accounts, which are supported by outside contributors.

These over and above travel allowances, frequently double-billed, special income tax exemptions, free or cut-rate haircuts, meals, commissary privileges, taxpayer-provided swimming pools, gymnasiums, floral services, and all the other "goodies" from time to time reported in the news.

In addition:

—Although paid by the taxpayers for supposedly fulltime service, many members have lucrative outside interests which, one way or another, could benefit by legislation they support. For instance, the Journal pointed out, four members of the House Banking Committee which drafts banking laws are stockholders of banks, and two members of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee are bank directors. More than 30 House members earn incomes from law practices, and over 50 are involved in such enterprises as lumber companies, funeral homes, real estate and insurance.

There was more, but we run out of space.

"All of this," the Journal article observed, "is producing a worried self-consciousness on Capitol Hill. Lawmakers fear that they are projecting an image of greed and ethical laxity that could be politically fatal to incumbents facing an electorate already fed up with the ways of Washington."

"We're in trouble," House Republican Leader John Rhodes of Arizona admitted. "We have some long-range repair work to do in the way we run our affairs, ranging from payroll practices to supervision by the ethics committees."

Taxpayers, straining to make ends meet, will agree, no doubt.

and against 'em

I had an English teacher once tell me that "just because you hear others saying 'ain't' all the time don't make it correct."

Obviously, she wasn't one of your top quality instructors in the English language. She also liked to emphasize, "It is important to, whenever possible, not split your infinitives."

While on the subjects of schools and of bad examples, a recent action by the Pampa Independent School District board of trustees comes to mind. They okayed the paying of due bills and invoices next month before they will have an opportunity to look over and vote formal approval of the expenditures.

"For just this one time," was the phrase used by Paul Simmons, board president, in discussing the situation. The other members concurred unanimously.

Someone said that other boards tend to bill payments in a similar fashion — the checks are all sent out and the taxpayers' money is spent. THEN the board sees, merely as a review item, the list of bills and invoices that was paid.

That don't make it right. The reason the local PISD board is okaying payment before approval next month is that July meeting nights have been altered from the normal first and third Mondays to the second and fourth Mondays ... something about accommodating the incoming superintendent's schedule. I believe it was.

That still don't make it right. Obviously, if they have questions or something is adjudged to be amiss on the list, a vote of disapproval could have little effect if the bills already are paid. Say someone doing business with the school is thought to be gouging a bit and overcharging for some goods or services. If payment has not been tendered, the board can table that action and look into the situation in more detail, possibly obtaining an adjustment in the overcharge, and thus showing proper respect for the hard-earned dollars that are taxed away from the populace.

I have complete confidence in the abilities of James Trusty, assistant superintendent, and Dwain Walker, schools' business manager. I don't expect they ever would let a crooked figure make its way into or out of the list of bills and invoices.

But as I understand the situation, the trustees are elected by the people to accept final responsibility for spending taxpayers' money. When they vote to treat that responsibility lightly, or delegate it to paid employees of the system, they are betraying a trust and putting unfair and undue pressures and responsibilities on the salaried school officials.

Well, what's to be done about it in July? The list of due bills and invoices won't be ready for perusal and approval by the second Monday meeting — it normally is presented at the third Monday session. And if it isn't tended to before the fourth Monday, Walker said — and the trustees obviously concur — those awaiting payment will be disgruntled at the delay.

If the week's delay is unwarranted, it would seem logical that another answer must be found. It's disappointing that the board came up with the solution they did — for just this one time."

A more acceptable answer might have been a quick special session with a one-item agenda to consider the due bills and invoices. And then, if all is in order as it almost always is, they could approve payment.

The PISD board of trustees is made up of some very sincere, dedicated men who put in a lot of time at the non-paying job that often results in more criticism than thanks. They are good at working out problems and always before have seemed most conscientious.

That's why their attitude and action on the payment of June bills is so surprising; it just ain't like them.

Capitol Comedy

Both GOP candidates appeared together at a campaign dinner. Reagan ordered the right wing, but Ford got the bird.

The Democrats are trying to decide whether to give Jerry Brown amnesty or the nomination.

Carter is protecting his strongest asset. He's having his teeth insured with Lloyds of London.

The House ethics committee studied the sex scandals and agreed to close down the accused men's offices for two weeks.

Those sex reports have actually helped the House. No one can now accuse it of being a "do-nothing" congress.

If Carter is elected, all the bureaucrats will be expected to take square dance lessons.

Hometown greets Ida and her new face

By ROBERT BAUM
Associated Press Writer

LA GRANDE, Ore. (AP) — Ida Hays' plane was an hour and a half late, but 200 people still were waiting when she arrived in her hometown wearing a tired smile on her new face.

The 15-year-old girl, whose badly deformed features were repaired by 10 hours of complicated surgery last month in New York, seemed not quite believe the greeting she received in this town of some 10,400 people Tuesday. A police car met her at the city limits and, lights flashing, escorted her to the middle of town. Families stood on the sidewalks and hollered "Hello."

One young, long-haired boy shouted, "Hi, Ida. What's happening?"

"I liked it," Ida said of her welcome, but she added, "I was kind of embarrassed."

Her grandmother, Alia Bellus, marveled at her granddaughter's lack of bitterness despite years of cruelty and taunting.

"She'd say, 'They don't understand. Grandma, they don't understand,'" Mrs. Bellus recalled. And her other grandmother, Mary Wilcox, remembered, "She used to be alone a lot, but I'll bet she'll never be alone again."

Ida had surgery May 19 at New York University Hospital. Surgeons moved her eyes more than an inch closer together, removed the deformed bone and used bone taken from her hip to mold her face into shape. Her brain had to be lifted to make room for the surgeons to work. She lost 16 pounds while in New York.

Scars left by the operation were already fading as Ida returned to the welcome attended by many who had contributed money to help pay for the young girl's surgery.

La Grande Mayor Roesch Fitzgerald greeted her, and local beauty queens presented her with flowers. Warren Curry, an announcer for radio station KLBH here, arranged the greeting on a few hours notice.

Ida and her mother, Jacquie, who had stayed in New York with her only child throughout the operation and recovery period, stepped off the plane in Pendleton after a 10½-hour trip delayed by engine trouble and several changes of planes.

Still, Ida's exuberance exploded when she saw her grandparents there to greet her. She said over the roar of the jet engines that she was very tired. "I haven't slept for two nights," Ida said. "I couldn't."

Mrs. Wilcox and Mrs. Bellus and grandfather Leslie Bellus were at the airport to meet her before their 52-mile car trip home.

Just before she climbed into the car, Ida grabbed her mother for one more hug.

"We did it," she cried.

The love affair between the people of La Grande and the girl has blossomed since word got out of her decision to undergo the risky surgery.

Ida's orthodontist, Dr. Dennis Turner of La Grande, said about $10,000 has been collected from residents around La Grande and from people who heard of Ida's story in news accounts.

Ida says she plans to answer "every one" of the more than 500 letters she received here and in New York.

Turncoat POW returns to US

HAWTHORNE, Calif. (AP) — Mrs. George Veneris never lost faith that her son, James, a prisoner of war who chose to remain with his Communist captors after the Korean War, would someday return to see her.

"It's the biggest thrill in 25 years," she said after learning Tuesday that her son will be allowed to visit his native country.

Veneris, who now lives in China, was one of 23 American prisoners of war who stayed with the Communists after the war. He asked to return to the United States for a visit and will be issued a passport, State Department officials said Tuesday.

The State Department said the 53-year-old Veneris is still an American citizen and needs only a passport to return to the United States.

All the other Americans but one, Howard G. Adams, have returned home since the Korean war. Adams also lives in China.

Mrs. Veneris, 78, last saw her son 25 years ago when he left for Korea. But her daughter, Nesta Greth, said her mother never doubted she would see James again.

"She always had this faith that he would come back and see her," Mrs. Greth said. "She has been waiting for this for 25 years."

Although her husband died in 1954, Mrs. Veneris still lives in the same house here that she did when her son went to Korea.

Mrs. Greth said that the family has corresponded regularly with Veneris despite the lengthy separation.

"My sister received a letter Friday and he mentioned he had been thinking of coming to America," she said. "But he didn't say when. He has been saying this through the years."

She said that her brother was very happy living in China, that he was married and had two children of his own and four from his wife's first marriage. He has worked in a paper mill in Taiwan for the past 25 years, she said, and will return to his home there after visiting the United States. No date for Veneris' visit has been set. State Department sources said Veneris will not be charged with any crime and will be allowed to move around the country like any other citizen.

Born in Vandergrift, Pa., Veneris entered the Army in 1940 and took part in the World War II New Guinea campaign in the Pacific. He was honorably discharged in 1945 but re-enlisted five years later. Three months after that, he was listed as missing in action in Korea.

Veneris and 22 others refused repatriation in 1953 during the prisoner-of-war exchange after the Korean armistice. Two of the 23 changed their minds immediately and were imprisoned in the United States after they were convicted of collaborating with the enemy.

The Defense Department ordered dishonorable discharges for all 21 men in June 1954 and said it had no further jurisdiction over them.

Men fight in hospital

Three units from the Pampa Police Department were dispatched shortly after noon on Tuesday to Highland General Hospital.

A family fight had broken out in the room of a 91-year-old patient involving two men, ages 60 and 68, according to the police report.

An officer at the hospital reported that a length of chain and a pair of pliers were used in the ruction and said "There was blood all over."

Injuries later were reported to be superficial, however, and no charges were filed by the police, by either of the pugilists, or by Highland General.

Hospital personnel assigned different visiting times to be observed in the future by the two men.

Black, white mayors gather

MULWAUKEE (AH) — They gathered here to celebrate — North and South, black and white. It was Ken Gibson's and Jimmy Carter's day at the mayors' conference.

Gibson, the Newark, N.J., mayor honored as the first black president of the 44-year-old U.S. Conference of Mayors, stood Tuesday night with Tom Bradley from Los Angeles, Detroit's Coleman Young, and Maynard Jackson of Atlanta.

The four officials represent the nucleus of a growing group of elected black officials who are gaining influence in Democratic party politics. In 1975, the number of black mayors in the United States was 135, up from 108 in 1974 and 83 in 1973.

Together with longtime urban politicians such as New York's Mayor Abraham Beame and Chicago's Richard Daley, they look to Carter as the man who they believe will make the White House more responsive to big city problems.

Ken Gibson and Jimmy Carter, North and South, black and white. It is Carter's self-proclaimed new coalition.

"He'll provide the leadership we need," Daley said of the former Georgia governor.

Six hours earlier, Carter offered 300 mayors, mostly Democrats, the promise of a White House ally who would help put American cities back on the road to Athenian greatness.

In his speech Tuesday to the conference, Carter called for a comprehensive national urban policy. He endorsed direct distribution of federal revenue-sharing funds to local governments, thus bypassing the states. He also endorsed a jobs program which would provide incentives to private industry as well as public employment in hard hit areas.

Carter also said he would like to consolidate the unwieldy number of federal programs geared for the cities and reiterated the need for sweeping welfare reform.

He said the mayors should demand better federal government from a Carter administration and that he would demand more efficiency and better management from city governments.

"I think it was a good speech. He's on our side," said Daley.

Woman drowned in lake

Graveside services were to be at 3 p.m. today for a 29-year-old Amarillo woman who drowned shortly after 9 p.m. Monday at Greenbelt Lake.

Sherry Lee Cobb of 111 Siesta Lane reportedly drowned a short distance from the south shore of the lake near the Kelly Creek area when she attempted to untangle a fishing line.

The drowning victim had lived in Amarillo for the past four years. She was a musician at the Avalon Ballroom. She was an Army veteran.

Surviving Miss Cobb are her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Cobb of St. Louis, 11 brothers and 8 sisters.

City works over budget

The budget for the City of Pampa's 1976-77 fiscal year currently is occupying a major portion of the staff at City Hall. City Manager Mack Wofford said today.

Salary consideration for the nearly 200 city employees is the "big thing," according to Wofford.

Since salaries account for 56 per cent of the current year's budget of $3.5 million operating budget, he stated, they are up for major consideration.

Wofford said the City Hall staff currently is studying a just-released Texas Municipal League survey on salaries of city officials and employees in Texas.

"We haven't had a chance to get into the report very far," he said. "The TML study shows what other cities of comparable size around the state are paying their employees."

The city's budget schedule calls for an in depth review of the requests of various department heads concerning their needs for the coming fiscal year.

The city manager said he plans to take a look at these requests following the July 4 holiday.

"We plan to begin a review with the department heads starting Tuesday, July 6," he said.

The city budget for the current year totaled $3,031,954 for operating expenses only and does not include debt services of $385,000 on general obligation bonds, $136,000 on water and sewer revenue bonds and Canadian River dam payments of $136,000. Total budget for the current fiscal year is $3,552,000.

After study by the city manager, the 1976-77 budget requests are expected to go to the City Commission for further consideration during the week of July 19.

This will be followed by a public hearing and final action by city commissioners at two successive meetings when the budget and city tax rate ordinances are submitted for approval.

Woman files civil suit against poodle salon

A Pampa woman has filed a $78,000 civil suit in 31st District Court here against Carroll Jones, DBA (doing business as) Le Poodle Salon as a result of a fall on May 31, 1971 which she alleges caused complete loss of her earning power.

Mary Olive Matthew filed the suit through her attorney David Holt.

She alleges the fall took place at a point of the salon on the porch where there was an abrupt drop in the level due to a slanted or crooked board.

Holt says his client endured "agonizing pain and suffering" as a result of the fall, which he contends was caused by the defendant's negligence.

Ms. Matthew was employed as a bookkeeper at Moody Farms earning $535 monthly at the time of the accident, according to the petition.

Her employment, according to Holt, was permanently terminated on April 9, 1976, due to her inability to go up certain steps which led to the teletype room where she worked.

Her attorney contends she is no longer able to earn her own living.

He said his client went to the Poodle Salon at 406 E. Kingsmill as an invitee of defendant in the usual course of business for the purpose of obtaining the professional services offered by the defendant.

Ms. Matthew gave her poodle to the defendant or his wife and was leaving when she fell according to allegations.

"It was the duty of the defendant to keep his store house in such a condition that plaintiff would have a safe place to transact business with the defendant," Holt said.

Ms. Matthew seeks $25,000 for loss of earning power, $35,000 for past pain and mental anguish as well as future pain.

Past medical expenses total $3,000, and future medical expenses are estimated at $5,000.

Teens charged with stoning child

CLEVELAND (AP) — Four suspects face a variety of charges in connection with the slaying of 8-year-old Karen Kollar, who was battered to death with stones after surviving two attempts to throw her from a building.

Dallas Stuckey, 19, and Guy Frehmeyer, 18, have been charged with aggravated murder. David Zytowiecki, 21, has been charged with obstructing justice. He was accused of helping to hide the child's killers and making plans to get them out of town.

His wife, Susan, 16, has been charged with delinquency by reason of aggravated murder and kidnapping.

Officers said Karen's death stemmed from an attempt to scare her as punishment for having told Zytowiecki that his wife had skipped a probation appointment. Mrs. Zytowiecki was on probation for driving a car bearing a stolen license plate.

The victim's mother, Georgetta, 31, said Mrs. Zytowiecki and Stuckey came to the Kollar home Friday evening to invite Karen for a walk. The Zytowieckis live a few houses away on the same street, and Stuckey stayed there with them.

When the girl didn't return in a couple of hours Mrs. Kollar began looking for her. She found Mrs. Zytowiecki on the street and the younger woman directed her to a residence, then to a tavern. When the girl wasn't located, police were called.

Meanwhile, the youngster had been tied and gagged on an upper floor of a nearby brewery. Police said she worked off the gag and began screaming. Neighbors said later they heard the screams but didn't investigate and weren't able to notify police because of lack of access to a telephone.

The girl's attackers returned after about three hours, police said. She was ordered to look over the edge of the building and she was pushed off as she did, officers said.

She fell to a metal canopy and lay there, injured and yelling, police said. Officers said one of her tormentors then crawled out and threw her off a second time, and she plunged to the ground. Again she survived the fall. She then was beaten about her head with rock slabs and bricks until she was dead, the county coroner reported.

A telephone tip to police led to discovery of the body early Saturday morning and the subsequent arrests.

US blocks UN blueprint

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Ringing up another in a quickening succession of American vetoes in the United Nations Security Council, the United States has blocked approval of what it called a misguided blueprint for setting up a Palestinian state.

The veto cast Tuesday by deputy U.S. representative Albert W. Sherrer Jr. ended a council debate held sporadically since June 9 on a report by the special U.N. Palestinian committee.

The report called for Israel to withdraw from occupied Arab lands, the phased construction of a Palestinian "entity" in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, and "further arrangements for the full implementation of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people."

The Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) was trying to get the Security Council at least to "take note" of the report. The report itself will go to the General Assembly when it meets in September. It is guaranteed overwhelming approval there by the Third World and Communist majority.

PLO representative Shafiq al-Hout said that regardless of U.S. vetoes, "the Palestinian people will return to their lands in Palestine.

"The question is simply this: Will we return home in an orderly and relatively peaceful fashion? Or must we struggle by all means at our disposal and with the support of friendly powers at a tremendous cost of human lives in order to return?"

Only the United States voted against the resolution. Britain, France, Italy and Sweden abstained on the ground that the report concentrated on only one aspect of the Arab-Israeli problem.

Explaining his veto, Sherrer said the resolution was "totally devoid of balance." He added that the "political interests" of the Palestinians must remain a question for Arab-Israeli negotiations.

Israel boycotted the debate as a protest against both the content of the report and the composition of the 20-member committee, which is dominated by pro-Arab countries.

In a statement to reporters, Israeli Ambassador Chaim Herzog said calls for the "full implementation" of Palestinian rights are a clear reference to the PLO's stated goal of replacing Israel with a secular, Arab-dominated state.

The United States has now cast 16 Security Council vetoes, all since 1970. Ten were cast in the past 13 months. There have been four this year, including one last week to block Angola's application for U.N. membership.

The Soviet Union cast 110 vetoes during the years that the United States dominated the United Nations. The Russians have not had to use the veto since 1974.

Teamster pension fund change 'devastating'

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN

AP Labor Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The loss of tax-exempt status for the Teamsters union's biggest pension fund could have a devastating impact on the fund itself, the employers who finance it and the pensioners who benefit from it, says a key trucking industry official.

"The ramifications are really far-reaching," said William G. McIntyre, president of Trucking Employers, Inc., the industry's bargaining arm.

McIntyre said the disclosure Tuesday that the Internal Revenue Service has revoked the tax-exempt status of the $1.4-billion Teamsters' Central States Pension Fund for alleged mismanagement and imprudent loans came as a surprise.

IRS officials, in keeping with policy, declined direct comment on the agency's action, contending that the affairs of taxpayers are confidential. But the officials did discuss generally the impact of an IRS decision revoking a fund's tax-exempt status, and their assessment of the potential impact agreed with McIntyre's.

If the action survives expected appeals by the fund's trustees — IRS officials say the process could take years — the Central States fund would be liable for taxes on its earnings back to 1965. The revocation was retroactive to Jan. 31, 1965.

This could involve millions of dollars in both past and future earnings and substantially reduce the amount of money available for paying out benefits. That would mean employes who contribute to the fund in behalf of their workers either would have to pay taxes on more money or the benefits would be lower than they would have been otherwise. The workers do not contribute to the fund.

For employers who contribute to the fund, the government's action could mean they will have to pay taxes on contributions deducted since 1965, as well as on future contributions.

In the year ended Jan. 31, 1975, records filed with the Labor Department show the trucking industry contributed $283 million to the Central States fund. If forced to pay taxes on that amount, the bill might run as high as $135 million.

The fund is administered by 16 trustees, eight from the trucking industry and eight from the union, including its president, Frank E. Fitzsimmons. The trustees declined comment.

Fitzsimmons confirmed Tuesday night that the IRS had revoked the fund's tax-exempt status. The Oklahoma City newspaper, The Oklahoman, said.

The newspaper said the Teamsters boss said in a telephone interview that the action extends back to Jan. 1, 1966. Fitzsimmons criticized the action and suggested that IRS Commissioner Donald C. Alexander did not know the status had been revoked by subordinates in Las Vegas gambling and hotel interests, making the fund the biggest investor in that city.

Over the years, the fund has been accused repeatedly of investing its members' money unwisely, making loans to people connected with organized crime and failing to provide proper pensions. An estimated $200 million has been invested in Las Vegas gambling and hotel interests, making the fund the biggest investor in that city.

The departments of Labor and Justice began an investigation last fall into allegations of improper and illegal loans by the fund to persons with underworld ties. But the IRS action was not directly related to either that inquiry or a separate congressional probe.

Sources said the IRS decision resulted from an investigation of the fund that started before the other government agencies began looking into Central States affairs.

Leftists lose ground

By FAROUK NASSAR

Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Lebanese Christians and their Syrian backers were reported waging a three-front offensive today against the Palestinian guerrillas and their leftist Lebanese Moslem allies.

The leftists claimed they were putting up a hard fight, but they were losing ground on at least one of the fronts.

The Christians announced they have completed their conquest of the Palestinians' Jisr el-Basha refugee camp on the east side of Beirut and launched a "final offensive" against the adjacent and much larger Tal Zaatar camp.

The Palestinians in effect admitted the fall of Jisr el-Basha in a statement paying homage to "those who stood firm and fought." The statement vowed a "defense until death" of Tal Zaatar.

The Palestinians also charged that Syrian troops and tanks made a sudden attack today on the Moslem part of Sidon, 25 miles south of Beirut, after a nightlong barrage of heavy artillery and rocket fire set several sections of the biblical port city afire.

Telephone communications between Beirut and Sidon were cut, and no confirmation of the report was available. The Palestinians said their guerrillas and their leftist Lebanese Moslem allies were locked in "savagely combat on Sidon's hilly outskirts to repel the surprise Syrian assault."

The Palestinians and Christians both reported the fighting on the third front. They said Syrian troops, tanks and planes were attacking leftist positions in the string of ski resorts northeast of Beirut that threaten the Christian enclave between Beirut and Tripoli. The Christian command said the wounded between our forces and the attacking Syrians on the east" and were fleeing. A joint communique from the six Christian militias taking part in the nine-day-old assault on the two refugee camps said Jisr el-Basha was put under a dusk-to-dawn curfew, and that its guerrilla commander asked for asylum in Christian territory.

The two camps form a leftist wedge in Christian East Beirut and overlook the main roads between the city and the Christian heartland to the north. Jisr el-Basha housed an estimated 6,000 Palestinian refugees, most of them Christians, before the siege. Tal Zaatar had a population of 20,000 Moslem Palestinians and 30,000 Lebanese driven from South Lebanon by Israeli reprisals to Palestinian raids across the border.

In an attempt to ease the Christian pressure, the Moslems said they attacked the Christian suburbs of Ein Rummaneh, two miles north of Tal Zaatar, and Hadath, to the south.

"If Tal Zaatar falls," Lebanese Moslem leader Kamal Jumblatt warned, "we shall never accept a cease-fire or negotiations but shall carry on the war to its end no matter how long it takes."

Security and hospital sources estimated that more than 240 persons were killed and at least that many wounded during the night in Beirut, its suburbs, Sidon and eastern Lebanon. The continuing high toll raised the total number of dead in the 14-month-old civil war close to 30,000 by conservative but admittedly uncertain estimates.

Georgia, 58,876 square miles in area, is the largest state east of the Mississippi.

No obstacles bar Senate's action

WASHINGTON (AP) — A compromise exempting the smallest farms from provisions of the Occupational Safety and Health Act has removed the last obstacle to completing Senate action on a $57-billion appropriation bill.

An agreement to vote on the OSHA compromise was reached Tuesday and ended the threat of a filibuster.

The compromise would exempt farms with an average of five or fewer employes and no more than 12 on any single day from OSHA regulations designed to protect the health and safety of workers.

It also would drop fines in cases of first instances of non-serious violations of the act.

The compromise was put forth after a long debate in which farm state senators voiced bitter criticism of OSHA inspectors, accusing them of abusing their authority. "We're trying to protect citizens from their own government," said Sen. Bill Brock, R-Tenn.

Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., said he was seeking "some relief from the tyranny the country has been facing."

Brock, Curtis and Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., were among the coalition trying to preserve a provision included in the bill by the House that exempted farms with 10 or fewer employes from coverage by OSHA.

But Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., one of the floor managers of the bill, noted that the House provision would exempt more than 85 per cent of the nation's farms.

Brooke pointed out that farming was the third most hazardous occupation, with thousands of serious injuries or deaths annually.

AMA against violence

By ROB WOOD

Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) — The American Medical Association's House of Delegates today approved a resolution encouraging all physicians to oppose television programs containing violence "as well as products and services sponsoring such programs."

The resolution, a milder version of the original proposal, said "television violence" is a risk factor threatening the health and welfare of young Americans, indeed, our future society.

The original resolution had called on doctors, their families and their patients to boycott the products of any company that sponsored a television show containing violence.

During debate on the issue, the physicians scratched the word "boycott" and inserted "actively to oppose." Leading the move to slap the wrist of producers of violent television shows was Dr. Thomas Elmendorf of Willow, Calif.

Elmendorf said, "The house of delegates should take a positive step in this area. The average child, by the time he is 18, has spent more hours watching television than in school."

The House of Delegates, policy-making arm of the AMA, voted Tuesday to take a hands-off approach to the 10,000 to 12,000 unlicensed physicians in the United States, letting them continue to operate as doctors' assistants or aides while handling diagnosis and treatment of patients.

Many of the unlicensed doctors are graduates of foreign universities.

Several of the 264 members of the House of Delegates said a proposal to study the utilization of these unlicensed physicians would be too costly, too difficult, too time-consuming, and should be left to each state to decide.

Unlicensed physicians now are used in many mental institutions, Veterans Administration Hospitals, or practice underground.

The delegates did adopt a couple of resolutions that said, in effect, the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals should let doctors treat patients without outside interference.

One resolution stated that the AMA would resist "the imposition of mandatory review within 24 hours of the admission of a patient" to a nursing home.

Several of the pending resolutions center on the theme of this convention — less government interference in the practice of medicine.

Funding gets House OK

By TOM RAUM

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The House is ready to send to President Ford a bill establishing a $1.5-billion program of financial aid to help coastal states deal with large energy projects. The Senate approved the measure by voice vote Tuesday, and the House was expected to pass it today.

Included in the compromise measure is $1.2 billion in loans and grants to help communities whose populations expand because of major energy projects, such as offshore oil and gas wells.

Both houses had previously approved different versions of the legislation, but it was bottled up in a conference committee for four months.

Enactment seemed assured after the conferees last week bowed to Ford administration suggestions that the outright grants be awarded only as a last resort.

Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., protested that such language would discriminate against states like Louisiana that have an immediate need for the grants. But backers said that without the administration-sought restriction, the measure would have faced a near-certain veto.

The bill sets up a federal fund containing $800 million for loans and other indirect assistance and $400 million for outright grants.

The federal assistance would be used to help states build roads, schools, hospitals and water and sewer projects in areas affected by energy projects.

The aid would be available to states with a shore on either ocean, the Gulf of Mexico or the Great Lakes.

Under the restriction sought by the White House, the federal grants could not be awarded until communities involved had first applied for alternate means of financing, including the loans.

However, in some cases grants could be issued to help states or communities pay off the loans.

Meanwhile, the House and Senate passed a number of other appropriations bills Tuesday, including $12.58 billion for the Agriculture Department.

Senate passage of Agriculture Department funding measure sent the bill to the White House. Most of the money

Police report

Pampa police received two complaints of criminal trespass and investigated a theft, a burglary, a disorderly conduct report and one non-injury accident Tuesday.

Three men were found in the Pampa Municipal Pool after closing and were charged with criminal trespass. Mark Lee Polk, of 332 Comanche; Bryon Campbell, 19, and Steve Boyd, 19, both of 408 W. Browning, each posted a $52.50 cash bond in Municipal Court. The bonds were forfeited to cover fines when the three failed to appear in court today, according to Municipal Judge Don Lane.

Criminal trespass was also reported at 522 N. Frost. The resident told police that someone either used a key or picks the lock to enter the house. In the past clothing has been taken, but Tuesday items in the house had been moved around.

Culbertson-Stowers Chevrolet reported that four Turbin Beauty Rings hubcaps were taken from a car parked north of the service building. Colbert's Distributing Company at 500 S. Somerville told police that someone broke into the building and took one case of malt liquor, one case of beer, three six-packs of beer and other items. Value of all missing merchandise was $200.

Police were called to a local lounge to break up a disturbance.

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune & News Synd Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were so looking forward to having our first child. He was born a perfect little boy, but he died mysteriously when he was 16 days old. They said it was a "crib death."

We are heartbroken and want to have another as soon as possible. We hope it will be another boy, and if it is, we want to call him "Robert Roy II" because our first son was named Robert Roy.

Please tell us what you think of this idea.

STILL GRIEVING

DEAR STILL: I know how desperately you want to "replace" the child you recently lost in death, but please don't give him the same name. The new baby shouldn't be thought of as a "replacement." He is another child in his own right, and he should be treated as one.

DEAR ABBY: Last week I got the shock of my life. My husband of 24 years announced that he doesn't want to be married anymore.

He is 51 and I am 49. We built a wonderful business together, and we're still in it. We have children and grandchildren.

He insists there is no other woman, and I believe it because he is hardly man enough for me. (I never complained. Why start trouble?)

He says he wants his own apartment, but he doesn't want a divorce; he just wants to be "free." He says if we get a divorce, it will cost us a fortune dividing up the assets, so we should stay married, remain business partners, but live apart.

I am still in shock. I don't want to stay married to a man who doesn't want to live with me, but what have I to gain by that kind of arrangement? I'd be married in name only, but not really free to look around. Help me.

IN SHOCK IN ORLANDO

DEAR IN: Tell your husband that you don't want an "in-name-only" marriage. But go slowly. Before you throw 24 years of marriage away, both of you should decide whether it's what you really want to do.

Men also go through a kind of menopause in their middle years, which could account for your husband's sudden decision.

DEAR ABBY: Last week on the way home from work, my husband and I saw a little girl on the side of the road who had just been hit by a truck. That was bad enough, but when the ambulance arrived they found no identification on the girl, and no one knew who or where her parents were, so all they could do was take her to the hospital. At the hospital they couldn't do anything without parental consent because she was a minor.

If that child had been wearing an I.D. bracelet or necklace her parents could have been easily located and treatment could have been started sooner.

We make sure our pets have tags because they can't tell people where they live, but a child who is unconscious can't talk either. Please print this.

J.L.E.

DEAR J.L.E.: Pets are tagged because it's required by law, but you make a good point. An I.D. bracelet or necklace would make an ideal gift for a child's birthday or Christmas. And include the child's blood type. It could be a life-saver. Think about it.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: Should diabetics drink alcoholic beverages?

DEAR READER: I don't think so. Diabetes may cause liver damage anyway because the liver can't use glucose normally and tends to become a fatty liver. Also, alcohol can cause low blood sugar by literally using all the enzyme in the liver that would normally be used to convert proteins to glucose. This can make it difficult or impossible to regulate insulin dosage. Finally, for those diabetics who have a mild disease that can be controlled by weight control, alcohol makes it difficult to diet and eliminate or prevent obesity. I can't think of a single good thing alcohol does for a diabetic.

To give you more information on how alcohol affects the body, I'm sending you The Health Letter number 1-4, Alcohol, Whiskey, Gin, Vodka, Rum, Wine, Beer. Others who want this information can forward 50 cents for it along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB: Will you please tell me what can be done for a person who falls asleep as soon as she sits down. This person is in her late 50s. It makes no difference how many people are sitting around visiting, in no time she is asleep. Is this called narcolepsy? Will it get worse as she gets older? Can anything be done for it and is it serious? She can work all day and appears well. One time she just passed out and fell. We are very worried about this. She has been this way for several years now.

One doctor prescribed pep pills but her eyes looked terrible so she quit taking them. I think it was Benzedrine.

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY: How can I restore the inside of a white enamel kettle to its original color, after it has turned dark from use? — VIOLET.

DEAR VIOLET: Care must be taken not to chip the surface on enamelware, so remember steel wool could darken or scratch the surface of such a white pan. You might scour with a tough stain household cleaner with chlorine in it. I have let a strong solution of bleach and water stand in such a pan until stains disappeared and noted no bad effects. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY: Ruth wanted to know how to remove sticky glue left after labels are removed from many household items. For years I have taped adhesive tape, gummed plastic tape or masking tape directly on top of such a sticky mess and find it peels off with the tape. I have used this on scarves, dishes, appliances, plastic, etc. The stickier the better and if it does not feel sticky rub your finger over it until it does and then the tape will pull it off. Old smears might have to be treated several times but it has always worked like a miracle for me. Good luck! — DELORES.

From New Zealand to Texas Visitors find Pampa 'happy'

By TIM PALMER
Pampa News Staff

Former American Field Service student Evelyn Roberts Johnson and her family are in town, and Pampans have that rare chance to see themselves as New Zealanders see them.

Mrs. Johnson, her husband, Tyler, and their two children are in the city for three weeks, staying with her AFS host family, Dr. and Mrs. Joe Donaldson, 2530 Aspen.

Pampa has changed a little since Mrs. Johnson was a student at the high school in 1963-64. "Things are expanded a lot," she said. "And the high school is quite different."

Mrs. Johnson attended PHS in the pre-Title IX days. "I played tennis here and was the only girl on the team. Now I see all the new facilities and girls are playing tennis."

Since her one-year tenure in Pampa, Mrs. Johnson has become a qualified radiographer after two years at Massey University in New Zealand. She married Tyler Johnson in 1969, and their two children are Christine, 4, and Melinda, 1. Johnson is an administrative manager in the wine-making industry. This is his first trip to the United States.

Looking in from the outside, he judges Pampa to be a "happy community. Anywhere you meet people, in the shops, at social gatherings, even people on the streets, they say hello and want to know something about you. They can tell we're foreign by the way we talk."

Speaking in what Americans would call British accents, the Johnsons said they had visited Palo Duro Canyon and the Panhandle — Plains Historical Museum, and had done a little shopping.

Impressed by the friendly attitude of the sales clerks, the Johnsons reasoned that Pampans "take a pride in their jobs. In New Zealand we have relatively no unemployment. But here, unemployment is all over the place. People are more concerned about their jobs."

Unemployment is not the only difference between the two countries, and the couple talked at length on a few others they had noticed.

"This area is very cosmopolitan," Mrs. Johnson observed. "You're close to Mexico, and a variety of people have come to live in this area. You have lots of different foods to eat. Black-eyed peas are a good example. That's very Texan. In New Zealand, because of our British heritage, we tend to eat only bland foods."

Mexican food, therefore, "was not hot by New Zealand standards," Johnson said, "but it was enjoyable. I'm going to get Evelyn to try to make some for our friends."

That won't be an expensive undertaking — by American standards. Cattle are a major industry in New Zealand; beef comes cheaply. "I can buy steak to feed my family and it will only cost $1.50," Mrs. Johnson said. "Steak is not very dear."

"Dear" is a New Zealand term for "expensive." Gasoline, for example, is dear in New Zealand. "We've adjusted to paying $1.25 a gallon for petrol," Johnson said.

The Johnsons will probably not encounter any petrol problems during their six-week stay in the United States, since most of their travel is by plane.

They flew from New Zealand to Los Angeles, and spent some sightseeing days in California, Arizona and Las Vegas. They will celebrate the bicentennial in Pampa before leaving here July 7 for a short stay in Chicago and their return flight home.

"We've got an extra family," Johnson said. "Our main reason for coming here is to see the Donaldsons." But his wife added that "we're trying to see as much of the country as we can without wearing us or the children out."

When Johnson arrived in Pampa for the first time, he found it to be just as his wife had described it to him. His impressions are favorable.

"You have an attractive community here," he said. "The people are very friendly. This is something that sticks in your mind."

Return to Pampa

Evelyn Roberts Johnson, right, returned this week to visit the Pampa family with which she stayed as an American Field Service student in 1963. But this time she brought her family, Melinda, 1, Tyler, and Christine, 4, to see the Joe Donaldsons. (Pampa News photo)

Premature infants beats the odds

By ROSEMARY SINGLETON

Kitchener-Waterloo Record TORONTO (AP) — Kelly Anne Cahill weighed one pound 15 ounces May 2, 1975, when she was born at K-W Hospital in Kitchener, Ontario.

She was three months premature and her chances of living were less than one in 10. Today, a healthy 16 pounds, Kelly Anne has passed her first birthday and keeps up a lively stream of chatter. The 18½-inch-tall dimpled charmer stands sturdily on chubby legs and crawls as speedily as the next baby into mischief.

The horoscope forecast for the day of her birth was appropriate for her. It read:

"You may have somewhat of a weight problem. You also have a fine sense of humor, you're artistic and more than mildly fond of travel. May should be one of your most important months this year. You are making valuable contacts, especially through friends and social-charity events."

The day following the newborn baby's birth she was traveling by ambulance to McMaster University Medical Center in Hamilton. Following her by car were her parents, Terrence and Marilyn Cahill of Waterloo.

Noting some problems relevant to prematurity and immaturity, her pediatrician, Dr. J.W. Graham of Kitchener, had recommended her transfer to the center's neonatal intensive care unit.

"We never paid much attention to horoscopes, but weight-watching and traveling have been very much a part of our baby's first year," said Mrs. Cahill.

It amused the couple to find the names they had chosen for their daughter "just because we liked them" meant. Kelly — fighter; Anne — graceful. "She has been a graceful fighter. She fought valiantly to live," said her father.

Kelly Anne's surprise arrival canceled her parents' plan to attend prenatal classes. Instead the couple, who were living in the married students quarters in Waterloo, rented a room in Hamilton. The father, a graduate student in social work in Wilfrid Laurier University, commuted to his summer job with the Children's Aid in Cambridge.

The tiny girl responded to the center's loving care and daily visits from her parents and thrived. In 2½ months she steadily gained weight and progressed from intravenous feedings, to being fed mother's milk by tube, to formula.

With delight the young parents saw their daughter graduate from a washcloth diaper to a regular one. Her arms "became too chubby for my wedding ring," said her father.

Then came July 13, the day the Cahills took their 4½ pound baby home. "She wore a doll dress made by a friend. She was just too tiny for a regular dress," Mrs. Cahill recalled.

The blonde, blue-eyed baby has traveled a long way since then. "She is a happy, good-natured baby, very outgoing and a miniature dynamo," said her mother.

And she proved herself, as the horoscope predicted, "more than mildly fond of travel" when she visited her maternal grandparents in New Jersey, her paternal grandparents in Chicago and friends in Montreal.

She also went apartment hunting with her parents in Toronto, where Cahill has joined the staff of the Toronto Catholic Children's Aid Society.

Kingman slugs Mets past St. Louis Cards

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer
When Dave Kingman speaks, everyone listens. When he hits, everyone watches.
The New York Mets' strongman commands attention and gets respect everywhere he goes these days, especially from National League pitchers.
"I think I'm back in the groove," says the tall, powerful outfielder. "I'm just picking up the ball good. I think I have a nice, fluid motion now."
That awe-inspiring motion has muscled out the most home runs in the major leagues so far this season, including Tuesday night's two-run blast that carried the streaking Mets to a 2-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals. It was Kingman's 27th homer, putting him on a collision course with Hack Wilson's National League record of 56.

In the other National League games, the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Montreal Expos 2-1; the Pittsburgh Pirates whipped the Chicago Cubs 10-1; the Los Angeles Dodgers nipped the Atlanta Braves 2-1; the Houston Astros outscored the San Francisco Giants 4-3 and the Cincinnati Reds routed the San Diego Padres 12-5 in 14 innings.
While Kingman was doing the hitting, Mickey Lolich was doing the pitching as the Mets won their sixth straight game. Lolich pitched a three-hitter to gain his first National League shutout after 39 with the Detroit Tigers in the American League.

Kingman lined the first pitch thrown in the first inning over the left field fence after Joe Torre had doubled. The ball landed at the 442-foot marker beyond the fence.
Phillies 2, Expos 1
Dick Allen scored from third on a squeeze bunt in the ninth to give Philadelphia its victory over Montreal. Allen led off the ninth with a single and went to third on Jay Johnstone's base hit. After Garry Maddox's field out, Bob Boone laid down a bunt on the first base side and Allen raced home with the winning run.
Pirates 10, Cubs 1
John Candelaria pitched a three-hitter and contributed a two-run triple to an eight-run first inning as Pittsburgh defeated Chicago. Candelaria, 7-4, stopped the Cubs without a hit until Jose Cardenal singled to center with two outs in the sixth inning. The only Chicago run came on Bill Madlock's ninth home run, in the ninth inning.
Dodgers 2, Braves 1
Winning pitcher Tommy John, 5-4, squeezed home the decisive run in the second inning and Elias Sosa provided instant relief in the ninth as Los Angeles edged Atlanta.
Reds 12, Padres 5
Pinch-hitter Mike Lum's lead-off homer in the 14th inning ignited a seven-run rally that gave Cincinnati its victory over San Diego. Following Lum's blast and a two-run triple by Cesar Geronimo, a solo homer by Dave Concepcion finally put the four-hour game out of reach for the Padres.

NBA to pick ABA personnel

By HANK LOWENKRON
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The Chicago Bulls' coachless and without a general manager, must now decide if they want to spend $1.1 million to obtain the contract of former American Basketball Association star Artis Gilmore.

That's the price tag that went on Gilmore Tuesday when the National Basketball Association announced procedures to handle the drafting of former ABA players whose teams did not join in the NBA as part of the recent merger agreement.
NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien announced the value of Gilmore and 19 other players declared eligible for the draft, which will be held in July after expansion agreements are signed and a district court gives preliminary approval to the proposed settlement with the ABA and the ABA Players Association.

Gilmore's price represents more than one-third of the $3.08 million value placed on the 20 players. The Bulls can make the decision on whether they want to spend the money for the 7-foot-2 Gilmore since they have the first pick as a reward for compiling the best record in the NBA last season.
Other draft prices include $500,000 for center-forward Marvin Barnes of the Utah Rockies, $350,000 for center-forward Moses Malone of Utah and $300,000 for center-forward Maurice Lucas of Kentucky. Kentucky's Louis Dampier, whose 13,726 points made him the league's all-time scoring leader, is available for $20,000.

Fred Lewis, an original member of the league as was Dampier, also is available for $20,000.

Each of the 22 teams in the expanded NBA will have a chance to pick, and if every player isn't selected in the first round the drafting will continue for up to three rounds. The value of each player will be reduced by a specified percentage if he isn't picked in the first round.

There is no doubt the Bulls, who have lacked a strong center for some time, could use Gilmore. He averaged 24.6 points per game and led the ABA in rebounding for a fourth consecutive year with a 15.5 average last season.
However, after agreeing to pay the price for Gilmore, the Bulls would be responsible for his contract under the merger agreement. In Gilmore's case it is in six figures for one year. And although there is time remaining before his ABA contract runs out, his agent has let the Bulls know some renegotiating is desired.

In addition, the Bulls have drafted All-American Scott May, the Associated Press' College Player of the Year last season, and they will have to pay a big sum for his services.

Pharmacy, Moose to meet in finals

Moose dropped the first game to Glo Valve, 14-6, but came back in the nightcap to eliminate the National League regular season champions, 6-5, in these semifinals of the Pampa Youth League Baseball Tournament Tuesday.

In the American League Park, Family Pharmacy swept a pair from 100.000 Auto Parts, 7-4, 5-4, to advance into the championship game against Moose.

The finals will start at 7 p.m. today in the American League Park. Moose is 13-6 for the season, while Family Pharmacy is 11-8.

Sponsors for the regular season champions and the best sportsmanship teams will be honored tonight, while players from both Moose and Family Pharmacy will receive individual trophies.

Boston's Wise 1-hits Baltimore

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer
Rick Wise sat at his locker and listed the factors involved in pitching perfect baseball: "Good stuff... good control... good defense... good concentration," he said.

Pitch by pitch, it became clear to the 30-year-old right-hander that the factors were dropping into place. Inning by inning, with Baltimore batters falling in order, it became clear to the Boston ace the plateau of perfection was within reach.
"I knew I had good stuff from the outset," he said after his one-hit, 2-0 triumph over the Orioles Tuesday night. "I was hitting spots and had them hacking at the ball. I was jamming guys, making them hit the ball up. I just felt I really had it."

Well, he almost did. Paul Blair marred the masterpiece with a sharp, clean single leading off the sixth inning. Only walks to Reggie Jackson and Al Bumbry in the seventh and ninth innings, respectively, proved the faulty brush strokes in what still was a pitching work of art.

"He had it all tonight," said Red Sox Manager Darrell Johnson, who picked up the list where Wise had left off. "Good fastball, breaking pitches, and — just as important — good location."

But the hit was no disappointment to Wise, who pitched a no-hitter for the Philadelphia Phillies in 1971, and hurled one-hitters in 1968 and 1972 and another two weeks ago.

"It was no disappointment losing the no-hitter tonight. If it happens in the eighth or ninth it is a different story. It's great to just throw a one-hit shutout. That's not easy, either."

Rick Wise just makes it seem that way.

In the other American League games Tuesday night, California clipped Chicago 4-1; Oakland blasted Texas 8-3; Kansas City defeated Minnesota 1-0. Detroit downed New York 7-5 and Cleveland beat Milwaukee 4-1.

Run-scoring hits by rookie Steve Dillard and Fred Lynn in the eighth inning supported Wise's third shutout of the campaign. The hurler faced just 28 batters, one over the minimum, and needed just 98 pitches to beat Baltimore.

Angels 4, White Sox 1

Dave Collins hit a two-run homer in the ninth to support "one of the most satisfying wins I ever had," according to Angels left-hander Frank Tanana, who had missed the last two weeks with an arm injury. A run-scoring single by Ron Jackson and a sacrifice fly by Jerry Remy plated the other California runs.
Jim Essian's sacrifice fly scored the Chicago run in the eighth.

A's 8, Rangers 3

Third baseman Sal Bando had a two-run homer and two-run double to lead Oakland's victory over the Rangers. Texas tallies came in the second on run-scoring singles by Jim Sundberg, Gene Clines and Mike Hargrove.

Royals 1, Twins 0

Fred Patek's 10th-inning sacrifice fly scored Hal McRae from third base with an unearned run to give Kansas City pitcher Al Fitzmorris his ninth victory in 13 decisions. McRae had singled and taken second on a throwing error by Minnesota shortstop Roy Smalley. An infield out moved him to third.

The rally ruined a three-hitter by the Twins' Dave Goltz.

Indians 4, Brewers 1

Two-run homers by Larvell Blanks and George Hendrick helped Cleveland hand Milwaukee its sixth consecutive loss.

Evert, Navratilova play

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Billie Jean King, a Wimbledon champion of champions, has definite ideas about who is going to succeed her as the women's singles champion.

She doesn't actually come out with a prediction, but Evonne Goolagong Cawley is the first name that Billie Jean mentions.

"Evonne is the one to beat. I've always said that."

Mrs. King won her sixth

Wimbledon singles title last year by beating Evonne, then announced she was retiring from singles play.

"Chris Evert is the most totally professional," she says. "Virginia Wade thinks she can win. Martina Navratilova, I don't know. She's fourth on my list."

Miss Evert, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., the 1974 Wimbledon champion and 1973 runner-up to Mrs. King, meets Miss Navratilova, a Czechoslovakian exile now based in Beverly Hills, Calif., in the semifinals Wednesday. Mrs. Cawley faces Virginia Wade of Britain.

Billie Jean, who has won 19 Wimbledon titles in singles, doubles and mixed doubles, is still alive in the women's doubles that could make a 20th

Marinero now a Jet

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — It is a simple axiom of football that for a running back to be effective, he must be allowed to run. Ed Marinero never quite understood why the rule didn't apply to him.

"I got to the National Football League as a running back," said Marinero, "but then, I didn't get the opportunity to run."

Marinero spent his first four NFL seasons in Minnesota, where the offense is spelled Chuck Foreman running and Fran Tarkenton passing. He left that routine behind Tuesday when, after playing out his option with the Vikings last season, he signed a one-year contract with the New York Jets.

He comes to the Jets after his most productive NFL season. Given a regular starting job for the first time, he caught 54 passes for 462 yards as Foreman's backfield partner. But he had only 101 carries for 358 yards. That is about seven attempts per game, not nearly enough for a running back to prove anything.

"To be effective, a running back has to be given the ball," he said. "Unless you establish yourself as a runner, your position in the starting lineup is always threatened. You never have the opportunity to relax as a football player."

Don Reynolds sent two-for four at the plate and drove in five runs and teammate Tucker Ashford went three-for-five and scored twice for Amarillo in the opener. Winning pitcher Bob Shirley, 7-5, went the route and San Antonio committed five errors.

In the seven-inning after-piece, San Antonio's John Poloni tossed a three-hitter. Keith Chauncey led the winners at bat with two RBI.

Refiners set records

By MAX B. SKELTON AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Domestic refiners now are processing more crude oil and gasoline than ever before in history.

The crude runs to refinery stills include a record level of imported oil.

Since the last week in May, domestic refiners have been running more than 5,000,000 barrels of foreign crude a day.

This means about 40 per cent of U.S. refinery runs now involve foreign crude. Just a year ago, imports accounted for 31 per cent of such operations.

In mid-1971, foreign oil claimed only 14.5 per cent of domestic runs.

The latest American Petroleum Institute weekly statistical report had crude runs averaging a record 13,789,000 barrels a day compared with 12,034,000 a year ago.

Gasoline production averaged a record 7,367,000 barrels a day compared with 6,600,000 a year earlier.

Gasoline inventories exceeded 221.9 million barrels, compared with 205.1 million a year ago.

The Institute's weekly reports include no demand estimates.

A new report by the energy economics division of Chase Manhattan Bank, however, says January-April demand for all petroleum products was 2.2 per cent above that of the comparable year earlier period but that gasoline demand was 5.9 per cent higher.

Total demand was estimated at 17.4 million barrels a day, compared with 17 million a year earlier. Gasoline demand averaged 6,756,000 barrels a day, up from 6,377,000 the same 1975 period.

Continuation of the trend for total demand would lead to a new record and reverse a two-year downward swing ignited by the Arab embargo.

The embargo cut 1973 demand a bit short but it still averaged a record 17.3 million barrels a day, with foreign crude and products claiming 36.1 per cent. Total demand dropped to 16.6 million in 1974 and to 16.2 million barrels a day in 1975, with foreign sources of supply contributing 36.6 per cent and 36.7 per cent, respectively.

Chase Manhattan estimates January-April crude oil imports at 4,855,000 barrels a day or 29.9 per cent above the year earlier average of 3,723,000 barrels.

April's total demand of 16.3 million barrels a day was less than one per cent above the year earlier month but Chase Manhattan said gasoline requirements averaging 7,176,000 barrels daily represented a 6.2 per cent increase.

April weather was said to have been 14 per cent warmer than normal and 33 per cent warmer than April a year ago.

Prior to embargo, foreign crude had never contributed more than 4,145,000 barrels a day to crude runs by domestic refiners.

The embargo dropped such input to a low of 2,275,000 barrels a day in mid-March 1974 but the comeback was quite rapid. In less than five months, a new record of 4,200,000 barrels daily had been established.

After exceeding 4,000,000 barrels a day for 47 consecutive weeks, foreign oil's share of the domestic crude runs jumped to 5,173,000 barrels daily the week ending May 20. Since then the weekly averages have been 5,073,000, 5,515,000, and 5,293,000.

The Institute reported that total crude imports averaged a record 6,230,000 barrels daily the week ending June 11.

Products imports added another 1,171,000 barrels for a combined 7,401,000-barrel average, a figure exceeded only three times previously.

Combined crude and products imports averaged a record 8,126,000 barrels a day the week ending March 12. At that time, the Institute reported that imports, for the first time, had exceeded domestic crude oil production that then averaged 8,049,100 barrels a day.

Since then, the Institute has changed its method of reporting domestic crude oil and condensate production, listing a current average of 8,274,300 barrels a day.

Hightower opposes divestiture

In recent correspondence, U.S. Congressman Jack Hightower said the Senate soon will consider a divestiture bill that would constitute this Congress' foolishly consistent record of making the petroleum industry the scapegoat for many of the nation's economic problems if enacted.

The congressman said that the bill, S. 2387, is the so-called Petroleum Industry Competition Act, better known as the divestiture act or the bill "to bust up big oil."

"The measure would force the 18 largest oil companies to limit their activities to only one function of the petroleum industry," he said, "producing crude oil, transporting it, or refining and marketing. It could not do all three."

According to Hightower, the alleged intent of the legislation is to create greater competition in an industry that already is one of the more competitive in the world.

"Supposedly it is in response to the public's irritation with higher fuel prices," he said. "I believe it is an irrational response."

The congressman said that the international cartel, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) jacked up oil prices with the successful oil embargo in 1973 which created "economic panic in the United States."

"The U.S. now depends upon OPEC for more than 40 per cent of its crude oil supplies, literally placing us at their mercy," Hightower said.

He fears that "one likely result" of the divestiture bill would be to strengthen OPEC's hand: "A fragmented industry would be weakened against the proven strength of a unified OPEC."

Hightower added that "forced divestiture would force the industry into an uproar of reorganization and restructuring that would demand its attention for at least the next several years, perhaps the next few decades. The New Deal's Holding Company Act, the last divestiture act of similar

Eckhardt alters slurry bill

By BILL CHOYKE Pampa's Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Reacting to criticism from the railroad industry, Rep. Robert Eckhardt has significantly altered his bill aimed at clearing the way to construct several coal slurry pipelines, including one to serve East Texas.

The new provision offered by the Houston Democrat at a recent House Interior Committee meeting, would require the Interstate Commerce Commission to weigh the effect of pipeline rates on existing modes of transportation, such as railroads.

Eckhardt contends that this provision should "eliminate the concern" railroads have that they would be financially weakened if the controversial pipelines are built.

However, the railroads are still finding the coal slurry bill "unacceptable," although a little less objectionable, according to a spokeswoman for the Association of American Railroads.

While Eckhardt, a five-term lawmaker representing the petrochemical area surrounding Houston, optimistically hopes that the coal slurry bill could be considered by both the House and Senate by Congress' Oct. 2 adjournment date, most observers disagree.

Environmentalists generally oppose the slurry bill because of its potential ecological damage in uprooting terrain to construct the pipeline. Additionally, they maintain that the water needed to be mixed with the coal in the pipeline could create water shortages in the somewhat arid northern Rockies.

Also at stake in the controversy are billions of dollars in construction contracts, new energy-delivery systems and thousands of jobs nationwide.

Eckhardt's Houston area, for instance, stands to benefit from a pipeline both from an energy and jobs standpoint.

One of the proposed pipelines begins in Colorado and stretches to the Houston area. The coal transported by the pipeline is expected to replace more expensive and scarcer natural gas as a leading fuel in East Texas.

Additionally, U.S. Steel announced in Late May plans to build a new mill to produce 48-inch diameter steel pipe for both Alaskan and coal slurry pipelines. The new plant will be built next to the company's existing facility near Baytown, which lies in Eckhardt's 8th District. The new plant will generate more than 700 new jobs and will be the only 48-inch pipe producer in the country.

scope, took some 40 years to consummate."

Urging that the industry launch an "all-out effort" to increase exploration, production and development of energy resources, Hightower said that Congress "should recognize reality and do everything possible to create an economic environment in which the industry could pursue these objectives."

Contrarily, the legislative divestiture would critically diminish access to capital necessary for such an effort, Hightower said, basing his opinion on "the best guessing, not only of the industry itself, but also of the Departments of Commerce and Treasury."

While there appears to be some doubt the bill will pass the Senate — the judiciary committee of that body passed the bill June 16 by a margin of only 8 to 7 — he has pledged "to continue my efforts to do whatever I can to help kill it" if it should survive the Senate test and reach the House.

Plan proposes energy islands

By GEOFFREY O'GARA Pampa's Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Those who dream of escaping to a desert island had better check with a nuclear physicist first if a plan proposed recently by the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis, Belgium, really is.

The Austria-based institute, established with Soviet-American support to study long-range problems for industrialized nations, has suggested converting atolls in the Pacific near the equator into giant nuclear plants to supply the world with energy.

The Institute, which is nearing the midway point on a five-year world energy study, represents 12 national academies of science, and will be adding more next year. "The proposal to create 'energy islands' was included in the second 'status' report on a five-year energy study," Dr. Cesare Marchetti, an Italian physicist, came up with the idea of floating nuclear plants on concrete barges in atoll lagoons, in which shelter they would produce 200 billion watts of energy, 100 times more than the largest plants operating today.

The plants would separate hydrogen from water molecules, and hydrogen would then be shipped by tanker throughout the world for use as a fuel.

Ten of these energy islands, which could be built at the turn of the century, would be necessary to serve the needs of the entire world, according to Marchetti.

A dozen or so oil companies are flocking to set up rigs in the waters off Ireland and Spain.

The developments in the Irish Sea and off the southeast coast of Ireland are a natural follow-up to the North Sea development by the United Kingdom. About $300 million has been earmarked by companies like Exxon, British Petroleum and Amoco for drilling 53 Hibernian wells over the next two years.

Spain became the subject of oil interest because of the apparent success of wells drilled by Standard Oil of California (SOCAL) in the Iberian Mediterranean and a Royal Dutch and or Shell well in the Bay of Biscay. Companies are now bidding for a chance to look beneath the Spanish waters for crude.

The Senate passed this week by a wide margin a bill authored by Sen. Frank Moss, D-Utah, to provide funds for intensive research into electric vehicles.

The bill, which passed by a convincing 72-16 margin, would provide for research into what Moss called "second car and short-haul commercial vehicles," like milk vans, post office delivery trucks and so on.

The bill would provide the Energy Research and Development Administration with $160 million from 1977 to 1981 for such research.

In arguing for the bill, Moss said, "Electric vehicles can provide the public with an adaptable, quiet, and nonpolluting vehicle which is not

Plan proposes energy islands

By GEOFFREY O'GARA Pampa's Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Those who dream of escaping to a desert island had better check with a nuclear physicist first if a plan proposed recently by the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis, Belgium, really is.

The Austria-based institute, established with Soviet-American support to study long-range problems for industrialized nations, has suggested converting atolls in the Pacific near the equator into giant nuclear plants to supply the world with energy.

The Institute, which is nearing the midway point on a five-year world energy study, represents 12 national academies of science, and will be adding more next year. "The proposal to create 'energy islands' was included in the second 'status' report on a five-year energy study," Dr. Cesare Marchetti, an Italian physicist, came up with the idea of floating nuclear plants on concrete barges in atoll lagoons, in which shelter they would produce 200 billion watts of energy, 100 times more than the largest plants operating today.

The plants would separate hydrogen from water molecules, and hydrogen would then be shipped by tanker throughout the world for use as a fuel.

Ten of these energy islands, which could be built at the turn of the century, would be necessary to serve the needs of the entire world, according to Marchetti.

The Senate passed this week by a wide margin a bill authored by Sen. Frank Moss, D-Utah, to provide funds for intensive research into electric vehicles.

The bill, which passed by a convincing 72-16 margin, would provide for research into what Moss called "second car and short-haul commercial vehicles," like milk vans, post office delivery trucks and so on.

The bill would provide the Energy Research and Development Administration with $160 million from 1977 to 1981 for such research.

In arguing for the bill, Moss said, "Electric vehicles can provide the public with an adaptable, quiet, and nonpolluting vehicle which is not

THE TALL SHIPS

NEW YORK (AP) — For lovers of sailing ships, as well as landlubbers who wouldn't know a mizzenmast from a marlin spike, there's a gallery in Manhattan that has all the answers.

The Kodak Gallery's summer exhibit traces the voyage of American sailing ships from 1776 up to the present. Entitled "Tall Ships", the show offers more than 175 photographs, air slide shows, and three movies, along with ship models, actual bow figureheads, and other artifacts.

Among the displays in the exhibit are a cutaway model of the 90-year-old merchant ship Balclutha, which is permanently anchored in San Francisco Bay. The show runs through August 7.

RAILROAD BUFF

HATBORO, Pa. (AP) — Bob McFadden is a railroad tycoon in the dream world.

He has a collection of 5,000 rolling stock models which range from an inch-long antique toy to an 8-foot, real die-cast car. The value of his collection is estimated at $65,000.

"It may not be the largest collection around, but I have 95 per cent of a major manufacturer's regular production in the 20-year post-World War II period."

Eager to work around trains, McFadden, a 29-year-old school teacher, has worked as an engineer for a railroad and once served as a ticket clerk at a terminal.

Comics--America's gift to the world

By Frank Stille
(Third of Five Parts)

Of all the forms of humor which have provided merriment for fun-loving Americans, none has proved more popular — or powerful — than the cartoonist's art.

Not only has it furnished rib-tickling relief from daily cares for generations, some of it has changed the course of history.

Americans didn't invent cartoon humor and satire, but they refined both into a high art for political and social commentary, as well as just plain fun. One thing Americans did invent, though, quickly became the most popular of all. That is the daily newspaper comic strip.

"The success of the comic strip in America has been so great that it's even a major export item," says John (Flash) Fairfield, director of comic art for Newspaper Enterprise Assn., (NEA) a leader in newspaper comics for more than 60 years. "People all over the world want to keep up with the antics of America's comic strip characters," Fairfield adds.

Through the centuries of American history, the man sitting at the drawing board has employed many forms of pen-and-ink creativity to put over a point aside from mere entertainment: through satirical drawings, caricatures and other illustrations sharply depicting outrageous deeds or situations in public matters. Even simple drawings have borne powerful messages.

Probably the first cartoon to be printed in an American newspaper was by Ben Franklin. In 1754 his drawing of a snake broken into nine segments, each labeled with the name of an American colony. Underneath were the words, "Unite or Die."

Perhaps the foremost example of a cartoonist's political power came from the deft hand of Thomas Nast. Shortly after the Civil War a gang of crooks headed by "Boss" William M. Tweed muscled into control of New York City and began to plunder its treasury.

That prompted Nast to launch a program of his own—a continuing drumfire of humorously styled, but devastating editorial cartoons lambasting the Tweed ring.

Nast's vitriol soon had Tweed in a frenzy. Desperately but unsuccessfully, Tweed tried to bribe the artist with an offer of a huge sum to "study art abroad."

Tweed said that he wasn't bothered much by what newspapers wrote about him because most of his "constituents" couldn't read anyway...but "them damn pictures."

Nast's campaign was given major credit for the eventual jailing of Tweed. However, Tweed escaped and fled to Spain, only to be arrested in the little town of Vigo and shipped back to the United States. In Vigo, it seems, authorities had recognized Tweed from one of Nast's cartoons!

What we enjoy today as newspaper comic strips didn't originate in newspapers as an art form, but became round-the-world delights after they appeared there, according to research by the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration.

The first newspaper strip is credited by some to James Swinnerton, whose "Little Bears and Tigers" began appearing sporadically in the San Francisco Examiner in 1892.

However, it wasn't until 1896 that this form of art became an overnight sensation. The real granddaddy of all today's funnies was the "Yellow Kid," created by Richard F. Outcault and starring the "kid" with a bunch of rascalion pals.

Outcault had previously used the same idea and characters in New York World drawings but with only moderate success. But development and use of a new and brilliant yellow printing ink apparently caused his work to win fantastic new reader attention.

From then until the "Peanuts" phenomenon of modern times, the comic strip has been a veritable American institution. Hundreds have been created, and some show signs of being eternal.

The "Katzjammer Kids" and the "Captain and the Kids," inspired by the success of the "Yellow Kid" and began not long afterward, are still going strong today. The venerable ("Kaff, Kaff.") Major Amos Hoople has been presiding over "Our Boarding House" since 1922.

Others such as "Peanuts," created much more recently, also zoomed to immense popularity — among them "The Born Loser," "Doodles," "Beetle Bailey" and "B.C."

And there's gold in them thar funnies. Hundreds of millions of dollars are generated annually by the newspaper comics and various subsidiary rights.

Part of the success of America's "funnies" is that they are constantly changing. "Today," says NEA's Fairfield, "the comic pages are practically all humor. The continuity strips have been falling behind because they appeal mainly to one segment, women."

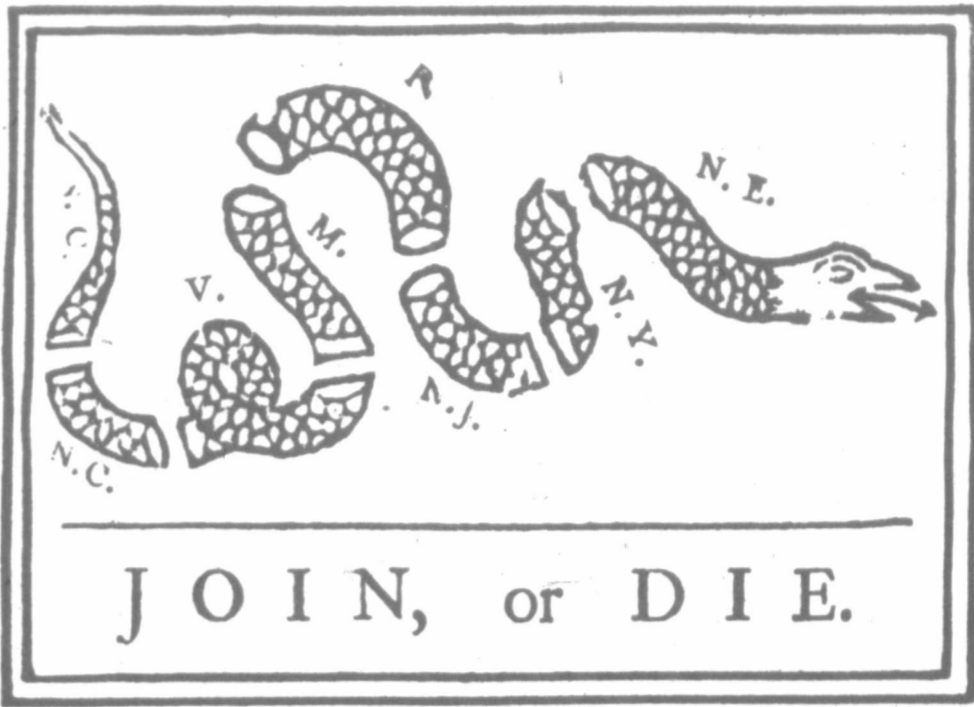

"Many of the top comic artists today," Fairfield adds, "create several strips. Thus the comic page of a newspaper may be filled by the work of only a handful of people." Fairfield predicts the return of "continuity" strips which are aimed at adventure and excitement — similar to the early strips of this type such as "Captain Easy," and "Terry and the Pirates."

"If we bring back in an adventure strip with action and movement," Fairfield says, "we're going to bring back the younger readers, many of whom have temporarily forsaken the comic pages for the comic books."

County court fines four

Four persons entered pleas this week to misdemeanor offenses and were assessed, fines, jail terms and probation.

The pleas were made before Gray County Judge Don Cain who assessed the penalties.

Ronald Joe Horn, 34, of Pampa was fined $50, court costs and ordered to serve three days in jail on a driving while intoxicated charge. He entered a no contest plea.

Thomas Walter Brookshire, 35, of Pampa pleaded no contest to a DWI charge and received a $100 fine and three days in jail.

Jackie Lee Evans, 24, of Skellytown, pleaded guilty to charges of possession of marijuana under two ounces. He was fined $200, given a six-month jail which he will not be required to serve if he lives up to a six-month probation rules.

Alfred Lee Willis Jr., 25, of Pampa was fined for unlawfully carrying a weapon — a handgun and for possession of marijuana. He was fined $100 and granted a six-month probation term on the weapon charge.

Judge Cain imposed a $250 fine on the marijuana charge and 60 days in jail, which was probated to a six-month term. The probation terms will run concurrently.

Patrolmen get training

Pampa Patrolmen David Hodges and Ken Minatrea have received their basic certification from the Texas Commission on Law Officer Standards and Education, according to Pampa Police Chief Richard Mills.

The certification is awarded officers who have completed one year of police work and who have completed basic police training school.
