

Wheat crop estimated at $7 million

By THOM MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff

The 1976 Gray County wheat crop is in and was estimated at a total value of near $7 million by Joe Van Zandt, Gray County Extension Service agricultural agent.

He said there were about 70,000 acres of dryland wheat in the county which he figured averaged about 16 bushels an acre. He also figured 17,000 acres of irrigated wheat at a 45 bushel per acre average.

The total yields he came up with were 1,120,000 bushels from dryland and 765,000 bushels from irrigated with a total of 1,885,000 bushels.

Wheat was going for $3.71 a bushel this morning, Van Zandt said, and using that figure, he estimated the total value of Gray County's 1976 spring harvest of winter wheat at $6,993,350.

"We had better than expected yields all the way across," the agent said.

He said irrigated fields yielded from 40 to 60 bushels an acre and dryland ranged from 12 to 20 bushels.

There were exceptions either direction," he added, "but that range will take in pretty near all of them."

Van Zandt said that test weights were heavy.

A lot of it was going 62 pounds and better," he said. The standard weight for wheat is 60 pounds per bushel.

Local bankers agree that years when crops are good, the entire area economy is stimulated.

"I think a good crop — whether it's a wheat crop or a call crop that brings good prices — results in people trading cars and buying clothes that they don't when crops are bad," said Benny Kirksey of Citizens Bank and Trust Co.

He said that dollars produced by a good crop turn over many times before leaving the community.

The amount of impact a wheat crop has on the finances of the community depends a lot on the cost of production and the price the farmer gets when he sells, said Floyd Watson, president of the First National Bank.

It's definitely going to have an impact," Watson said of this year's crop. "The thing that is favorable about this year is that they just weren't expecting much. We feel like it was a pleasant surprise," Watson said.

He added that a good crop like this one coming after an exceptional year like the 1975 yields makes the prospects for local economy stimulation even greater.

"The money turns over good," Watson said. "The farmers are pretty good about spending it and good about spending it locally."

He said that full impact of the harvest has not yet been felt at the First National — "Many of our customers haven't sold yet," he said.

Van Zandt said the official estimate for the 1975 Gray County winter wheat harvest was for 120,000 acres — combining dryland and irrigated — with an average yield per acre of 21.2 bushels and a total production of 2,539,000.

Figured at an average price of $3.75 per bushel, the 1975 crop was worth about $9.5 million, Van Zandt estimated.

Black Texas woman keynotes convention

NEW YORK (AP) — When Barbara Jordan speaks, her words flow in precise, measured tones far closer to the Queen's English than to the dialect of the dilapidated section of Houston where she was raised.

Miss Jordan, the first black woman elected to Congress from the South, says her speaking voice comes naturally to her and she can remember using no other. In fact, her two sisters who are school teachers in Houston speak with the same accent.

The 40-year-old, second-term congresswoman from Houston is one of two keynote speakers tonight at the Democratic National Convention, sharing the duty with Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, the former astronaut.

Miss Jordan gained national attention two years ago with a speech during the House Judiciary Committee's debate on whether to impeach Richard Nixon.

In her deep, quiet but powerful tones, she discussed the meaning that the Constitution of the United States had for her and said, "I am not going to sit here and be an idle spectator to the diminution, the perversion and the subversion of the Constitution."

She recited a list of presidential actions she said represented "a course of conduct the Constitution cannot tolerate," and stated: "If these offenses are beyond the reach of the Constitution, then perhaps that 18th century document should be abandoned to a 20th century paper shredder."

Asked Sunday about whether she feels pressured to produce as memorable a keynote, she said, "Let it be understood that Barbara Jordan has no illusions that her keynote speech will be remembered any more than anyone else's."

Congresswoman Jordan has a reputation of maintaining a certain independence from the other black members in the House and the group of women in Congress, although she is considered strong on women's issues.

When the National Women's Political Caucus held a national convention in Houston several years ago, Miss Jordan had to be persuaded to talk even briefly to the group.

She also is known for her ability to gravitate toward the centers of power in Congress, and until recently she frequently sat in the House chamber near Rep. Wayne Hays, the Ohio Democrat who chaired the House Administration Committee.

One former Texas reporter who covered Miss Jordan when she was a member of the Texas Senate said that the congresswoman's occasional support for issues unpopular with fellow liberals shows she is effective at getting elected to office.

If she didn't support those things, she would be citizen Barbara Jordan, not Rep. Barbara Jordan.

Miss Jordan was graduated magna cum laude from all-black Texas Southern University in Houston. She received a law degree from Boston University.

After finishing law school, she worked for a judge in Houston, where her father was a Baptist minister and a warehouse clerk. She was the first black elected to the Texas Senate.

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Carter, his hand freed by political strength that an incumbent president might envy, is wrapping up his vice presidential interviews as he waits triumphantly in the wings for tonight's opening of the Democratic National Convention.

The 37th Democratic national convention, staged at Madison Square Garden, is expected to nominate Carter for the presidency Wednesday night by an overwhelming vote amid a harmony that contrasts to divisive party fights in 1968 over the Vietnam war and 1972 over party reform.

Sens. Frank Church of Idaho and Adlai Stevenson III of Illinois, meeting Carter today, are the last of seven finalists for the vice presidential nomination, all from Capitol Hill, to be interviewed.

Carter said Sunday he has three names at the top of his list but said he is keeping an open mind until the interviews are over.

The peanut farmer and former Georgia governor who dazzled the political establishment with his long-shot run to the nomination said he would wait until after his own nomination before revealing his choice of a running mate.

With 19 primary victories to his credit and The Associated Press delegate poll showing him with 1,653 votes, well over the 1,505 needed for nomination, Carter is wrapping up a campaign that is a sharp contrast to the close and bitter Republican nomination battle. A month ahead of the GOP convention, President Ford leads conservative challenger Ronald Reagan by only a handful of votes.

The vice presidential selection has emerged as the major unresolved issue at the convention in the absence of a race for the top of the ticket and the calm of a party platform so secure that it's already printed and bound and in the hands of each delegate.

Carter's personal public opinion pollster, Patrick Caddell, has concluded that no particular vice presidential prospect would appreciably help or hurt Carter's own chances of winning the fall election, campaign aides said.

The Carter staff said Caddell's polls show that the strength and diversity of Carter's own appeal make the No. 2 spot virtually irrelevant. The only possible trouble spot they say is that he not make an especially bad choice which might develop into a major scandal or embarrassment.

Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota, the party's 1972 nominee, suffered a setback when it was discovered that his running mate, Sen. Thomas A. Eagleton of Missouri, had undergone electric shock treatment for depression. Eagleton was dropped from the ticket after that disclosure.

Carter revealed Sunday that he is taking unprecedented steps to keep that sort of thing from happening to him. He said he has requested financial and medical information from everyone on his list of possible running mates.

The accounting firm of Arthur Andersen & Co. was engaged to go over the financial data, including tax returns, Carter said, and they have found nothing to cause concern.

Carter said Sen. Walter F. Mondale of Minnesota, one of the finalists, reported he suffers from a mild case of high blood pressure and takes medication for it.

Carter said this is a factor but not an over-riding factor in his decision. Later, after meeting with Rep. Peter Rodino of New Jersey, Carter said Rodino's age, 67, also would be a factor but not an over-riding one.

Carter also has interviewed Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington, Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine and Sen. John Glenn of Ohio in his search for a ticket-mate. Church and Stevenson round out the seven finalists.

"So far as I know, the vice president will come from one of those seven people," Carter said.

Only two or three other names are expected to be placed in nomination for the presidency, Rep. Morris K. Udall of Arizona and Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California.

Second attempt for beer permit fails

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

A second attempt to obtain a wine and beer retailer's permit for an establishment at 729 N. Hobart failed today when Gray County Judge Don Cain vacated the setting on grounds that the original case is on appeal in district court.

Guy Hardin, attorney for Francis Lynn Stafford who is seeking the permit, said the judge "put us off saying he had not notified certain people to be there — the Sheriff and the chief of police."

The phones were working and the sheriff was in the building," Hardin said. "But if he (the judge) wants a fight he will damn sure get one."

Hardin, district attorney for the 31st District, is representing Stafford in his private practice. He said he will file a motion with the county clerk this week requesting the county judge disqualify himself for special and personal interests which were evident at the first hearing. "The judge's attorney in the suit, Ross Buzzard, requested that District Judge Grainger McIlhenny dismiss the appeal. Buzzard's request said that Stafford's petition is "insufficient to effect an appeal and to confer jurisdiction in this court."

Buzzard added that another reason for the request is that the suit was brought against Judge Cain instead of the State Liquor Control Board.

Judge Cain said when the case in district court is dismissed he will consider hearing the application in county court.

"I want to be fair to the petitioner and those interested. I want to be fair to everyone," Cain said.

Hardin said he will request that the district court dismiss the appeal he filed on behalf of his client, naming Judge Cain as a defendant.

Cain said he denied the original petition after receiving some 500 signatures protesting the establishment along with testimony from Police Chief Richard Mills who said the proposed business would create a traffic problem in that area.

I have not been notified that the appeal case has been dismissed," Judge Cain said.

Hardin said this morning that to his knowledge there has been no case in this county or district where a liquor license has been postponed so that certain people not required by law could be there.

My client is as much entitled to livelihood as any big corporation," Hardin said following Cain's refusal to allow the hearing this morning.

Armed with petitions containing 180 names of persons stating they do not oppose the business, Hardin appeared in the courtroom where about 20 witnesses were ready to testify on Stafford's behalf.

Judge Cain called Hardin to the bench to inform him the setting would be vacated. Hardin in turn asked his client to step outside the courtroom to tell him of the judge's decision.

All notices required by law had been published. There was no necessity for this," Hardin told The News.

Bullock wants to collect delinquent taxes

By TEX DEWESE
Pampa News Staff

State Comptroller Bob Bullock has asked the City of Pampa for permission to file suit to collect both state and city delinquent sales taxes at the same time.

The City Commission at its regular meeting at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday in City Hall will consider Bullock's request.

The state comptroller stated in a letter to City Atty. Bob Gordon.

Although a city may file suit on its own behalf to collect delinquent sales taxes, the comptroller of public accounts and the attorney general are in an excellent position to file suit for both city and state taxes at the same time.

Bullock pointed out in the letter that joint legal action against delinquent taxpayers would avoid repetitious suits and conserve legal expense while maximizing the collection of delinquent sales taxes.

City Manager Mack Wofford said today he was not aware of any serious or major infractions of the sales tax law locally.

So far as we know," the city manager said, "there are very few delinquency complaints in Pampa."

Sheriff Rufe Jordan said today Bill Teague, field manager for the state comptroller's office in Amarillo will be in Pampa from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Thursday to provide information and answer questions from businessmen and other taxpayers concerning state taxes.

Jordan said Teague will set up his office in the grand jury room of the Gray County Courthouse for the day-long session.

In addition to consideration of Bullock's request to file joint sales tax collection suits with the city, Pampa commissioners will have these other items on the agenda Tuesday:

First reading of an ordinance amending the Pampa Cable TV franchise.

Appointment of two representatives to the District IV Committee of the Amarillo Mental Health and Mental Retardation Board.

Payment of Estimate No. 7 to the Wes-Tex Construction Co. for Waste Treatment Plant construction.

A public hearing on proposed removal of 27 abandoned buildings in various city locations.

Joint hearing with the Planning and Zoning Commission in regard to issuance of a special use permit on a tract of land described as part of Block 9, Buckler Addition, just south of the N. Hobart and Somerville intersection.

Angola wants widow to pay

By DAVE RILEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Daniel Gearhart signed up to fight as a mercenary in Africa because his family was deeply in debt. Now, says his widow, the Angolan government that executed him wants her to pay $5,000 to get his body back.

Angry and close to tears Sunday, Sheila Gearhart said her husband died on their 11th wedding anniversary. "I'm beginning to wonder if they didn't even know that," she said. "I wouldn't be surprised."

The 34-year-old Vietnam veteran was executed Saturday by an Angolan firing squad, although he claimed he never had a chance to fight in the African country before his capture by Cuban troops. He had advertised his services as a mercenary in Soldier of Fortune magazine.

Mrs. Gearhart said her husband fought for pay because of $30,000 in debts plaguing the family. Now, facing life as a widow on welfare with four children, she said the Angolan government has told her it will cost her $5,000 to get her husband's body back.

"I can't pay it," she said from her home in suburban Kensington, Md. "There's no way I can pay it. I have four children to support."

But she said she would do "everything I can to get his body back, to give him a decent funeral."

She said she never received $1,000 that her husband said he sent her. The money was three weeks' advance pay received when he arrived in Angola, Gearhart said at his trial. He believed it came from the CIA.

The pastor of the Gearhart's church said neighbors and church members had contributed "several thousand dollars" for the family.

Earlier, Sen. Charles McC-

Mathias, R-Md., said from Las Vegas on Sunday that the U.S. Embassy was trying to arrange release of Gearhart's body. Mathias, who was trying to get into Angola to argue against the execution of Gearhart, was quoted as saying he was certain the body would be returned "within a few days."

But Mathias said his own effort to get Gearhart's body out of Angola had stalled.

Neighbors of the Gearhart family were shocked by the execution.

"I think it was nothing short of murder considering he was only in the country three days and never fired a shot," said Elaine Holmes. "I think he drew the death sentence because he was an American."

A neighbor of Gearhart's mother was quoted as saying Gearhart "just wanted what everybody else had — to live a good life."

Food stamp corruption

The Food Administration has submitted to Congress a plan to cut the costs of the food stamp program by $1.6 billion.

There is widespread agreement that the program is a mess, but that is no assurance that Congress will approve the proposed cuts.

The welfare rights groups are mustering their forces to fight it. Their basic philosophy is: We have a right to whatever is yours that we want provided there's enough of us demanding it.

Food stamps have lost their original identity. In 1964, when Congress appropriated $375 million to begin the program, stamps were to be distributed to persons and families with what the government defined as poverty incomes. The stamps were to be used to supplement their diets.

Today food stamps represent a $5.6 billion annual outlay that is part of the socialist program of income redistribution. It is rampant with fraud and chiseling, because the stamps have acquired a cash value.

For example, in recent testimony before Congress, Treasury Secretary William Simon and others said that stamps have been used for such diverse things as posting bond for traffic tickets and paying fines for speeding — even to settle gasoline charge accounts. There is, to be sure, a restriction on the supermarket items for which the stamps may be used. They aren't supposed to be proffered for booze, for instance, but policing of the restrictions is negligible. In some instances market operators have been threatened with vandalism and worse if they do not accept the stamps for whatever the recipients demand.

Even in the reform bills in Congress senators are talking about furnishing stamps to families of four earning from $7,000 to $9,000.

Genuine reform would be to stop the whole mess dead in its tracks. Of course, that isn't being considered.

Confederate States of America

Forty-two delegates from South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Florida met at Montgomery, Ala., Feb. 4, 1861, to establish the Confederate States of America. The convention adopted a provisional constitution on Feb. 8 and the next day elected Jefferson Davis of Mississippi president and Alexander H. Stephens of Georgia vice president. A permanent constitution was adopted March 11 and on July 20, the seat of government was moved to Richmond, Va., where it remained throughout the Civil War.

CONSERVATIVE ADVOCATE

Uganda in cahoots with Arabs

By WILLIAM RUSHER

NEW YORK — I must say, nothing has done my morale so much good in years as Israel's recent dramatic rescue of 103 hostages from Uganda's Entebbe airport.

Onde does not have to be convinced — certainly I am not — of the perfect justice of Israel's position on all questions concerning the Middle East to rejoice in the success of this brilliant and daring operation.

In the first place, there was its sheer bravura quality. A hijacked Air Force jetliner being held in Entebbe at gunpoint, over a hundred innocent Israeli passengers being threatened with death if Israel and certain other nations did not promptly free some 50 imprisoned Palestinian terrorists. What on earth was there to do in such a situation? The dictator of Uganda, Idi Amin, was in at least informal cahoots with the Arab terrorists who had hijacked the plane and were holding the hostages, no help could be expected from that quarter. The major free nations of the world were paralyzed with fright and indecision (as usual). Taking the matter up with the U.N., which is dominated by Israel's enemies, would be — even if there were time, which there wasn't — like a goldfish pleading with a family of barracuda. Knuckling under seemed the only solution.

Instead, Israel coolly loaded three Lockheed C-130 Hercules transports with paratroopers and specially trained infantry, flew them 2500 miles over hostile land and waters to Entebbe, diverted the Ugandans with a few bombs in a distant corner of the airport, landed, overpowered the remaining guards, scooped up the hostages and were gone again in less than an hour — en route home to Israel. Total casualties: four Israelis, seven of the ten Arab hijackers, and about 20 Ugandan soldiers dead. As Red Barber used to yell after a home run, "HOW ABOUT THAT!"

In addition, however, the ugly phenomenon of terrorism has been dealt a severe blow. Nobody supposes that this stunning coup will stop or even seriously slow terrorist activity — whether by the PLO, the IRA or the Japanese Red Army. But the swift and successful Israeli response in a seemingly hopeless situation has illuminated the problem like a star — shell exploding over a battlefield. It has demonstrated what can — at least sometimes — be done by counter-force briskly deployed. These terrorists, after all, are not ten feet tall, and their international protectors (like the posturing Idi Amin) are as clumsy and overrated as bullies usually are. Terrorism will continue, but hereafter the terrorists will be forced to plan more carefully, may fail in a larger percentage of their enterprises, and may die in larger numbers for their crimes.

Finally, this episode tells us something about the frequent sheer emptiness of the familiar contention that this or that is "inevitable" in Israel itself, the leading independent daily paper "Haaretz" had acquiesced in the Israeli government's announced decision to negotiate with the terrorists, saying "There was no choice."

Happily, however, there was indeed another choice — being silently prepared, even then. Similarly with much else that we are forever being told is "inevitable." My friend and colleague James Burnham, writing in the July 23 issue of "National Review," concludes with clerical detachment that "the West is ready to abandon" Rhodesia and South Africa, thereby implicitly permitting "the decolonizing wave to complete its surge through to the Cape." The whites of southern Africa, he remarks, have been written off as "expendables."

Perhaps so — in those cool chambers on the eighth floor of the State Department. But it would take a Soviet-equipped force of very considerable size to overpower South Africa. "Inevitable" collapse? Phooey!

Employers in many nations are required by law to pay severance allowances to employees. The Conference Board reports. In Switzerland, workers who leave must justify their actions before they are granted severance pay. In other countries, employees who quit are eligible only if they have worked for a company for a given period of time: six months in Pakistan, two years in Egypt and, if over age 40, 15 years in Mexico. Severance allowances in the United States vary from state to state, industry to industry, and even company to company.

BUTLER D. SHAFFER

Anybody Can Become President

Since it now appears that Jimmy Carter will be the next President, I have a few observations to make on the man.

In the first place, the overwhelming success experienced by Carter at the polls, and the relatively poor showing by the "liberal" candidates, demonstrates the amalgamation that has taken place between the Democrats and the Republicans in the formation of a right-of-center consensus. In future years, we can expect pragmatically-motivated politicians (and that takes in roughly 100 percent of the field) to assume the same philosophically non-partisan posture taken not only by Carter and Ford this year, but by Nixon, Humphrey, Johnson, McGovern and others, in prior years. American politics has long occupied the middle-of-the-road, but Carter has added a new dimension of the mediocrity of moderation: he has shown that one can successfully pursue elected office on personality alone, and by avoiding anything that smacks of ideological partisanship. In this sense, Jimmy Carter and Richard Nixon are very much alike. As the cliché has it, "anybody can grow up to become President," a condition that serves to reinforce the belief in the meaninglessness of politics.

This is not to offer the naive suggestion that politics has never been a matter involving philosophic principles. Perhaps the Watergate-CIA-FBI-Wilbur Mills-Wayne Hays revelations have so numbed the minds of the public that most people are no longer willing to endure the effort of thinking and making value judgments regarding politico-social questions. In any event, the Carter success at the polls indicates that deference to such political rhetoric is no longer a requirement — and, in fact, may be a detriment — for getting elected to office.

Jimmy Carter has certainly taken advantage of the popular sentiment to want to blank out the sordid realities of the political process. Mindful of the dishonesty and corruption that characterizes government, and yet unwilling to give up their faith in that institution, most people turn their attentions to finding a "Mr. Clean" to straighten things out. Dwight Eisenhower took advantage of this same "new face in Washington" mood in 1952, following public dissatisfaction with the Truman administration. Jimmy Carter — in real life a mild-mannered, God-fearin' peanut farmer and family man from the hills of Georgia, but who, when trouble threatens society, steps into a collective polling booth and becomes "Super-Prez," a man of steel dedicated to the pursuit of freedom, justice, and the American way!

Frankly, I have my doubts about any person who tells us, over and over, about how honest he is: it all reminds me of Richard Nixon's famous "Checkers speech" in 1952, as well as his Watergate protestations that "I am not a crook." I have further doubts about the collective-wisdom of an electorate that can accept such assurances at face value. There is a circularity of reasoning in the proposition that "Jimmy Carter is an honest man who never tells lies, and we know that because he tells us it's so, and since he is an honest man, we can believe him."

I must also express reservations about the religious aura surrounding Carter's campaign. I have always favored a complete separation of church and state (and, I might add, a separation of economy and state as well) and tend to regard one's religious views — or lack thereof — as a personal matter and not a proper subject for political debates. I have always had a distrust of people who wrap their personal ambitions in an institution for which there exists a highly-emotional attachment. This included the flag, the Constitution, "law-n-order," and the Bible, among others. I know of few presidential aspirants who ever preached "law-n-order" or who so identified himself with the Constitution as did Richard Nixon. This is not to suggest that a Jimmy Carter administration would go the same route as followed by the Nixon crowd, but only to raise a warning flag about any nonideological candidate who runs a campaign by seeking to attract voters to his personality and emotional commitments, all the while assuring us that he is really not a politician, but just an honest, down-to-earth, God-fearin' man who is willing to give up his private pursuits in order to save the country.

On the other hand, there may be something to be said on behalf of Carter's religious evangelism. Thanks to the economic planners and interventionists, the economy is in such a state of disrepair that, perhaps, Jimmy Carter's sister might be brought forth to perform a "faith-healing." She could, I would imagine, take the pulse of the economy, ask the members of the audience to shout "I believe," and then pass the hat. It's not so preposterous: the Keynesians have been doing just that for years!

Couple saw reconstruction in Vietnam

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A Canadian-American couple just back from a motor trip in Vietnam says vast destruction and poverty are still evident in northern Vietnam, while people in the southern cities of Da Nang and Hue still cling to a life style learned from Americans.

But Canadian Murray Hiebert and his American wife, Linda, said they saw "a fantastic amount of reconstruction" of roads, railroads, churches, hospitals and schools as they drove about 500 miles from Hanoi to the central province of Quang Ngai, formerly part of South Vietnam. The Hieberts are members of the Mennonite Central Committee, an American religious and humanitarian organization that gave aid to both sides in the Indochina war. Since the Communist victory in April 1975, the committee has been allowed to work and travel in Vietnam.

The Hieberts told the Foreign Correspondents' Club of Thailand that women were doing much of the heavy reconstruction work, carrying pails of mud on bamboo poles and filling in road and railway beds with simple tools.

Other work crews often were unarmed soldiers, the couple said.

The Hieberts said they were struck by the poverty of northern Vietnam, the frayed clothes of Hanoi's residents, the lines of women waiting to buy cloth at stores, the shacks in the countryside that "looked like refugee housing that was built in the South

(during the war) but even poorer. They said there were also indications of serious food shortages, but that the Vietnamese were reluctant to discuss this. Northern Vietnam suffered heavily from floods and poor weather during the last growing season and still has not recovered from the war damage to its agricultural system.

"Most of the people we talked to in North Vietnam said their country wanted normal relations with the United States, wanted friendship with the American people," Hiebert said. But both private citizens and officials stressed that they think the United States is obligated to help rebuild the country.

The Hieberts said they found the southern Communists tougher, more dogmatic and sometimes more anti-American than those in the North.

They reported little change in Hue, imperial capital, and Da Nang, South Vietnam's second largest city. Young men still had long hair; women wore Western-style clothing, and prostitutes were in evidence — all things condemned by the Communist regime.

"People seemed like they were still clinging to the old life style," said Hiebert.

But he added that there were signs of change — propaganda banners in the streets; bicycle rather than motorcycle repair shops and rubber sandals in place of Western-style shoes.

Prepaid legal insurance State bar says it works

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The State Bar of Texas is practicing what it preaches about pre-paid legal insurance, and two bar employees testify that it works.

Gloria Garcia got her car fixed after a month in the shop, and Sandy Maxwell got an increase in child support by using lawyers through the pre-paid system at no cost to themselves.

The state bar said payment of their lawyers through the pre-paid program was the first time it has been used in Texas since the legislature set it up in 1975.

The bar bought the group legal coverage for its employees in April and gives this version of what happened to Miss Garcia and Ms. Maxwell.

"The body shop had refused to fix my car until the insurance company sent them a check, and the insurance company wouldn't send the check," said Miss Garcia. "The insurance company called and told me they were coming to take back the rent car they had provided, because 30 days were up. I called my insurance agent, and he said he couldn't help me because the claim was being handled by the other driver's company, since the accident was his fault."

She called a special number to get the name of a lawyer in the pre-paid program and was at his office within four hours.

"I had my car back two days later," she said. "It was great."

Although Ms. Maxwell's lawyer had not registered for the program, he agreed to help her obtain an increase in child support payments to offset prolonged medical expenses incurred by her three-year-old daughter. He said he would rely on the pre-paid program to pay his fee.

Both lawyers were paid by Texas Legal Protection Plan, (TLPP) Inc., a non-profit corporation created by the State Bar.

"I would have needed to borrow the money to hire an attorney if this program hadn't helped pay the legal fees for me," said Ms. Maxwell.

Hundreds of persons have inquired about such coverage, the bar says.

Franklin Jones Jr. of Marshall, chairman of the board that administers the TLPP plan, said employers are becoming aware that such protection—just like group medical insurance—can give their employees "legal peace of mind."

"You take an employee who operates a $40,000 piece of heavy equipment whose son is in jail and you've got problems because there is no way he can keep his mind on operating that equipment safely and efficiently," Jones said.

"This program," he said, "goes straight to the heart of that problem by allowing—in fact, encouraging—employees to practice preventative law, thereby catching legal problems in their early stages when they can be easily and inexpensively solved before they become a legal 'toothache' produced by neglect."

Carter army equipped for war

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Carter is equipped for a small political war on the floor of the Democratic National Convention even though no one else has the votes to mount more than a skirmish.

The Carter campaign has spent a total of $350,000 on its convention operations, including those at Madison Square Garden where the votes are taken and at the Americana Hotel where Carter is staying, spokesman Peter Emerson said Sunday.

At the convention hall, Carter's forces have four trailers manned by 25 persons, 50 telephones and 44 floor workers, including 30 VIP floor leaders. These VIPs, empowered to speak for the Carter campaign and spotted around the convention floor, include Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana, whom Carter bested in the presidential primaries, and Frank Mankiewicz, who was Sen. George McGovern's press secretary during the 1972 presidential campaign.

But the big artillery in the Carter arsenal is a private telephone system at the Garden.

There are 20 green telephones in a network throughout the hall. Each is connected directly to a telephone in one of the Carter trailers a dozen yards off the convention floor.

At each state delegation there are red telephones to link the delegation chairman with the podium, and a white telephone which is part of a system set up by the Democratic National Committee to link all parts of the floor, key party officials, and candidate and ex-candidate headquarters inside Madison Square Garden.

The Carter people also have their own internal telephone system between their rooms at the Americana and their trailers at the Garden. And they have the ability to join their system to others for conference calls.

No other candidate has his own telephone system on the floor.

Carter's spokesmen admit there appears to be little need for all this paraphernalia, but they point out that it was designed in February, the month of the first primary when there were more Democratic presidential candidates and potential candidates than there are but identify their homeland as "The Great State of Home of." With these introductions, roll call votes have taken an average of one hour in the past.

The convention chairman has discretionary power to order the votes taken over the telephone, and while they hope to avoid that, Democratic officials vow they will if the convention falls behind schedule.

They also hope to resolve the voluminous parliamentary inquiries in private on these telephone lines.

But on Sunday, as reporters waited for Democratic party chairman Robert Strauss who

Found innocent in slaying

GRETNNA, La. (AP) — Wilbur J. LeLeux Jr. has been found innocent of the slaying of Joe A. Hooper, the young construction worker gunned down in a mob assault on an independent union's job site Jan. 15.

The jury deliberated four and one-half hours Saturday night before voting 10-2 for acquittal.

LeLeux's lawyers called only two defense witnesses, who delivered their testimony Saturday in about 15 minutes. In contrast, prosecutors put 37 witnesses on the stand and introduced 78 items into evidence during more than 40 hours of the trial.

Private detective Richard Redd, the first defense witness, testified that he talked to the hospital attendant who allegedly heard the fatal bullet fall to the floor as he was undressing Hooper's corpse. Redd said the attendant told him he didn't remember the alleged incident.

Earlier this year Redd was quoted as saying he had been told by James Crader that a machine gun opened up on the assault force as it stormed the gates of the Jupiter Chemical Co. construction site.

In opening statements and in cross-examination defense lawyers tried to prove that there was firing from both sides.

Crader said he was drunk when he talked to Redd.

"I told them a bunch of things that weren't true," he said. "I was drunk."

The defense had a ballistics expert waiting in the hall, ready to testify. The defense rested its case without calling him to the stand.

Student named Miss Texas

FORT WORTH (AP) — The title of Miss Texas came as a complete surprise to Carmen McCollum, a 19-year-old Abilene Christian University student.

"I had hoped for it, and I knew I had a chance, but it was a complete surprise," said the 5-foot-8 brunette who competed as Miss West Texas in the Saturday night pageant.

Miss McCollum will represent Texas in the Miss America pageant at Atlantic City, N.J., in September.

She said that as Miss West Texas she learned something. "Some people think of you as a title rather than a person. I established myself as a person first then told a few special friends about my title."

But she says she is not bothered by those who criticize the whole idea of beauty pageants. "They have their opinion and I have mine. I think it's fine for them, but I like having doors held open for me."

She added, "I'm not an object the pageant requires intelligence, personality, poise and a lot of character. I firmly believe you have to have all of these to win."

Miss McCollum calls herself "a thinker and a meditator" and says she plans to further her studies in psychology and work with juvenile delinquents.

During her year as Miss Texas, Miss McCollum will maintain two homes, one in Odessa with her parents, Mr

UAW strike settled

TRENTON, Mich. (AP) — Striking United Auto Workers members have ratified a new labor contract with the Chrysler Corp., ending a five-day walkout that curtailed production at three car assembly plants.

The strikers, members of UAW Local 373 voted by better than a 2-1 margin Sunday to return to work at Chrysler's key engine plant at Trenton.

A UAW spokesman said the vote was 316-146 in favor of ending the strike. Chrysler officials said the workers would be called back immediately, and the company hoped to resume normal production today.

Negotiators for the local and Chrysler reached a tentative agreement over safety and health conditions at the Trenton plant shortly after midnight Saturday.

Some 4,400 workers struck the plant Wednesday after negotiations failed.

Third World condemns Israel

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The Security Council today begins hearing a parade of Third World countries calling for condemnation of Israel for its commando rescue of more than 100 hostages from Uganda a week ago.

Mauritius, Benin, Guinea and Guyana were to speak in the council debate in support of Uganda's charges that Israel committed "barbaric, unprovoked and naked aggression."

The United States, trying to use the debate to focus attention on the hijacking and terrorism that caused the Israeli raid, was consulting with Israel and other allies about a resolution condemning international terrorism and establishing some sort of mechanism to deal with it.

"We have not yet reached a consensus," Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger told a news conference in Washington Saturday. He said if agreement was not reached, "we will put it forth ourselves."

The Americans were reported to have drafted a general condemnation of international terrorism and a suggestion that Israel compensate Uganda for its losses in the raid. But council sources said the United States could not get the nine votes necessary for adoption of such a resolution.

African and other Third World nations circulated a resolution condemning Israel and demanding compensation for Uganda. The Soviet Union and China were backing it, but the United States was certain to veto it if it came to a vote.

Israel at the opening of the debate Friday declared that its commando action was justified because Ugandan President Idi Amin collaborated fully with the Palestinian and West German hijackers holding the hostages. But nobody was preparing a resolution to censure Amin.

A dispatch from Tel Aviv said the former Israeli military attache in Uganda, Col. Baruch Bar-Lev, reported Amin told him in a telephone conversation Friday that he has severed relations with Arab guerrilla groups because they have caused him "nothing but trouble."

Bar-Lev said Amin also told him that speaking "not as a politician but as a professional soldier, I must tell you the (commando) operation was very good. Your commandos are very good."

FTC says car rentals agree on price fixing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The three largest passenger car rental companies in the nation have signed consent orders prohibiting them from trying to squeeze out competitors and fix prices among themselves, the Federal Trade Commission says.

The FTC said today that Hertz Corp., Avis Rent-A-Car System, Inc., and National Car Rental System, Inc., have agreed to the idea.

The FTC has unanimously accepted the agreements signed by the rental firms, but could withdraw its approval later.

The consent order is the result of an FTC complaint filed more than a year ago, alleging that Hertz, Avis and National had conspired since at least 1968 to monopolize airport car rentals, forcing customers to pay inflated rates.

In its complaint, the FTC said the three companies held 96 per cent of the airport auto rental market in 1973.

Officials noted the consent order does not signify admission by the companies to any of the allegations.

Under the order, the FTC said all three companies will be prohibited from conspiring to monopolize any portion of the passenger automobile rental business or conspiring to fix or stabilize prices.

The firms also will be prohibited from obtaining agreements from airports that would hinder would-be competitors from locating on airport property and will be barred from providing false information to airport authorities in an effort to adversely affect competitors.

In its complaint, the FTC had accused the three firms of submitting common bid specifications and contracts for airport concessions, fixing prices, entering into anticompetitive agreements with auto makers for advertising subsidies and harassing small competitors.

Such action, the FTC complaint alleged, meant that customers were forced to pay "substantially higher prices," the supply of rental cars at airports was reduced, profits for the three firms were excessive and smaller companies were blocked from entering the airport rental car business.

Nixons more optimistic

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The Nixon family's optimism is rising with reports that Pat Nixon is out of the critical stage in her recovery from a stroke that could leave her partially paralyzed. Former President Richard M. Nixon said late Sunday as he left Long Beach Memorial Hospital that he was encouraged by his wife's progress.

Nixon and daughters Tricia Cox and Julie Eisenhower spent more than four hours with Mrs. Nixon. It was the longest visit since she was hospitalized Thursday, the day after she was stricken.

Earlier Sunday, doctors said Mrs. Nixon was responding to treatment and remains within normal limits.

Dr. Jack M. Mosier, a neurologist treating the 64-year-old former first lady, said Sunday it would be two to three months before doctors know if she has suffered any permanent damage.

Mrs. Nixon was moved Sunday from her windowless hospital room to one with a distant ocean view. The room was the same one in which her husband was treated for plebitis in 1974.

Nixon said, "I think she is passing through the crisis, maybe has passed through it — time will tell — but most important now comes the long haul and that is a difficult time."

Nixon said his wife may require therapy for several months.

Mrs. Nixon has been listed in serious but stable condition since her arrival at the hospital Thursday.

Brown to stay in race

NEW YORK (AP) — California Gov. Edmund G. Brown, the last remaining challenger to Jimmy Carter's claim on the Democratic presidential nomination, says he's staying in the race even though his defeat is virtually certain.

Arriving in New York with his home state delegation Sunday, Brown said his name will be entered for consideration when balloting for a nominee begins Wednesday night. But there were indications he would withdraw it before the roll call ends. And he left no doubt he would work to put Carter in the White House.

Some of Brown's supporters in the California delegation said they were ready to help nominate Carter and then work for his election.

"My name will be in nomination," Brown told reporters at John F. Kennedy Airport. "I don't think it's appropriate just to walk away because the process is rather inevitable."

Brown, who now has 302 delegates according to The Associated Press tally, did not say if he would leave his name in contention after the balloting begins. Carter now holds 1,653 delegate votes, more than the 1,505 he needs for the nomination.

But Brown supporters indicated he would withdraw his name at some point during the balloting.

Sen. John Tunney, D-Calif., said before Brown arrived that the California governor would allow his name to be placed in nomination.

Despite the continuation of his late-starting presidential bid, Brown repeated his assurance that he will work for Carter when he becomes the nominee. In response to a reporter's question, Brown said:

"Sure — wherever I can help the Democratic party win in November is exactly what I'm prepared to do."

Supports Glenn

NEW YORK (AP) — Former astronaut John Glenn, now a senator from Ohio, is the vice presidential choice of Texas' three top Democratic leaders.

Dolph Briscoe and State Democratic Chairman Calvin Guest, here for the Democratic national convention, said Glenn is a moderate and would appeal to a broad section of Texans.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., had already voiced his support for Glenn. Although not a delegate, Bentsen has access to the convention floor.

Although Glenn is the favorite of Bentsen, Guest and Briscoe, there are indications that others in the Texas delegation would not line up behind them.

Delegate Ogden Bass of Brazoria County said he felt someone like Sen. Adlai Stevenson III of Illinois may be of more help to Carter nationally than Glenn.

Commissioners to consider new tax rate

The Gray County Commissioners Court will consider the purchase of two new radar units for the Texas Highway Patrol during its Wednesday meeting.

The court will meet at 10 a.m. in the county courtroom. The 13th item on the agenda was posted this morning.

Among other business will be consideration of the 1976 tax rate for Gray County. The rate is now $1.25 per $100 valuation.

Truckers die in crash

By The Associated Press

Three truckers died in a collision of two heavy rigs and another accident involving five cars claimed four lives in Texas during the weekend.

Altogether the state counted

17 violent deaths, including 12 in traffic, between 6 p.m. Friday and midnight Sunday.

The three truck drivers were killed near Conlen in the Panhandle Sunday when two tractor-trailer rigs collided on U.S.

54. They were identified as Harvey Hamilton, 47, of Wichita, Kan.; John Gray, 49, of Axtavasse, Mo.; and James Hake, 50, of Montgomery City, Mo.

J. Eddie Weems, 79, a former track coach at Texas Christian University and Abilene Christian University, and his wife Anna, 75, were killed Sunday morning when their car and another collided three miles south of Temple. Weems, a Church of Christ minister, was en route to deliver a sermon in South Central Texas. He founded the ACU track program and while at Texas Christian had four Southwest Conference championships.

A crash at Lewisville was set off Saturday when a pickup truck skidded across rain-slicked Texas 121 into the opposite lane. Police said it was struck broadside by another vehicle, a third car behind the pickup trying to avoid the crash-sided swiped a fourth car and was struck broadside by a fifth.

The dead were identified as Gerald Meek, 36, of Bonham; his wife Frankie, 33; Wendell Richardson, 20, and his wife Joanna, also 20. Police said the Richardsons, driving different cars, were stationed in Norfolk, Va., with the Navy and were home on leave to visit parents in Arlington.

Fire which broke out before midnight Sunday claimed the life of Vicki Lynn Askew, 22, in her second floor apartment at Haltom City, a Fort Worth suburb. Firemen found the body in a bathroom.

Harmon to be speaker

"Act or React" will be the topic tonight for David M. Harmon of Lubbock, guest speaker at the Top O' Texas Association of Life Underwriters Ladies Night meeting at 7:30 p.m. at the Coronado Inn.

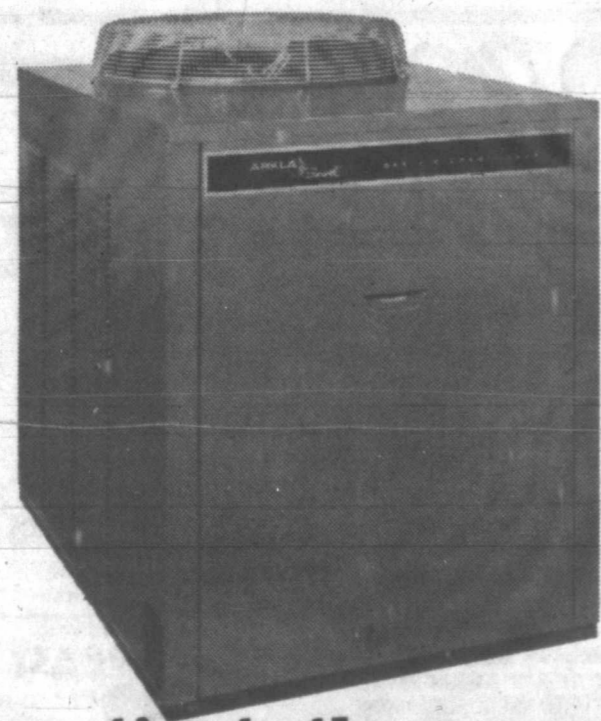

A former Pampaan, Harmon is director of the Community Planning Council of Lubbock and associate director of Lubbock's United Way. He is president of the Kiwanis Club in Lubbock and a member of Toastmasters International.

The son of Mr. and Mrs.

Your alternative to the nonsense and expense of replacing compressors. Arkla/Servel Gas air conditioners don't even have compressors.

Quality air conditioning is your best bargain.

In fact, there are only 3 moving parts in the entire cooling cycle. Less to wear out means less to replace. Greater dependability. Lower maintenance costs. ## Advice

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to BORED ON MY HONEYMOON did nothing but perpetuate the male-performance-oriented approach to sex. You said people might think there is something wrong with the husband if his wife spent all her time writing thank-you notes on their honeymoon. Why put all the pressure on the male in sexual relations, while the woman sits back and waits for his move? I get the same thing from the girls I take out. They all call themselves "liberated," but do you think they'd ever initiate anything? No! I've got to kiss them first and make all the first moves. Then they're supposed to say, "No," when I go too far. (At least, the first time.)
Who made up the rules for this game anyway?
SINGLE MALE

DEAR SINGLE: You're either playing with an old set of rules or some very old players. The truly liberated woman doesn't wait for the man to make the first move or say, "No," when he goes for far—if he's appealing. The honeymoon scene is another matter. If the bride spends most of her time writing thank-you notes, it's assumed she has no choice.

DEAR ABBY: A reader submitted "Lectori Salutem" as a practical, non-sexist salutation for a business letter, explaining that it meant, "Hail to the reader!"
You replied "Hail no! Most Americans have enough trouble with English!"
Abby, if in your view Americans are that incompetent, why not open all correspondence with, "Hi, Dummies!"?
CORY'S DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: I don't consider myself a "dummy," but since I've never studied Latin, "Lectori Salutem" would be Greek to me.

DEAR ABBY: I was a widow and he was a widower. We were both lonely and decided that marriage would be a better way of living for both of us.

I have my own income and Herbert has his, but we do share living expenses, so there's no problem there.
On my birthday Herbert bought me a bicycle. I was thrilled with it because it was the first gift he ever gave me.
I ride the bicycle occasionally, but apparently I don't ride it enough to suit Herbert, because he keeps threatening to sell it if I don't ride it more.
Please comment on this, Abby. I am 67 and Herbert is 77.
HURT IN FLORIDA

DEAR HURT: Perhaps it's Herbert's way of trying to get you to exercise more—for your own good. However, regardless of his motivations, when he gave you the bicycle it became your property, and he has no right to sell anything that is yours.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WANTING A BABY: MONEY NO OBJECT": What you are suggesting is clearly illegal. I recommend that you deal only with an authorized adoption agency.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. DR. LAMB: I would like some information on a nervous stomach. I have a bitter taste almost every morning when I first get up.

I went for a gall bladder X ray and my doctor gave me eight dye tablets to take 14 hours before the X ray. Around 4:30 the next morning my head started spinning and I almost passed out. Then I had diarrhea. I asked the nurse about this and she said the dye pills sometimes did this.

My gall bladder had swollen to the size of a hen's egg. Then I was given an egg yolk mix to drink, waited 40 minutes and had two more X rays. My gall bladder had returned to normal.

The doctor said my gall bladder was OK but I had a nervous stomach. Could this be true? Is it serious? When I was X-rayed could they tell if I had ulcers or a tumor too?

DEAR READER: Your experience with the gall bladder test was not too unusual. The nurse was right—the pills do act as a laxative to some people.

Your gall bladder did not swell up in an abnormal fashion. The gall bladder is designed to collect bile formed by the liver. When it fills it swells normally. The pills you took contain a dye that is excreted by the liver in the bile. The dye shows up on X rays and in this way the gall bladder, full of dye stained bile, can be seen. Your description is of a normally filled gall bladder.

If your gall bladder had contained stones they would have been outlined in the dye-stained bile. Then the drink you had contained fat. Fat stimulates the gall bladder to contract, expelling the stored bile. The X rays showed that your gall bladder responded normally and emptied when you drank or ate fat. The very reason why you are not

Polly's pointers

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY: By my kitchen sink I keep a glass bottle with a shaker top, such as garlic salt or coarse ground pepper comes in, full of washing detergent. Whenever I have just a couple of glasses or a plate or two to wash, I shake a bit of this soap on them and wash, rather than filling the whole sink with water and soap.—MARCIA

DEAR POLLY: Often I buy a bunch of celery that is too long to fit in my vegetable keeper. I cut off the ends and freeze in small containers to use later in soup or stuffing. I always dry the leaves and crumble them to use in many things.—RUTH D.

DEAR POLLY: My trick is for emergencies. When you make up your hair looks as if it should have been shampooed the night before, try using powder on it. Lightly powder the hair and then brush it THOROUGHLY to remove all the powder (and the oil with it). Your hair will look good enough to make it through the day but be sure to wash it that night. This is somewhat the same as using dry shampoo but much less expensive.—DONNA

Women do more down on the farm

Editor's note—In the view of some crusty old farmers it just ain't right. But it's a fact. More and more women are sharing the farm work, and the farm management, with their menfolk. But women's lib, it seems, has less to do with the development than power steering.

By DAVE BARTEL
Associated Press Writer
WICHITA, Kan. (AP)—Emerging from the cattle pen, Jonny Scott kicked the dirt from her boots and brushed off her blue slacks.

"The fields are too muddy to work in, so I'm just helping my husband get things cleaned up a little," she said, the bright Kansas sunshine glinting from her sunglasses.

Cleaning cattle pens may seem a most unglamorous task, but Jonny Scott's labors on this spring day are a small indicator of the expanding roles women are playing down on the farm.

Mrs. Scott, a petite woman in her mid-30s, is a farmer's daughter and a farmer's wife. She also considers herself a farmer and a partner with her husband Norman, better known as Butch, in the family enterprise—1,000 acres of wheat, milo and a small cattle herd.

In her three decades from childhood to wife and mother of two teen-age girls, Mrs. Scott has been part of a slow revolution in which many farm women have moved from tending a garden and feeding the chickens to driving a tractor and sharing in the daily decisions of modern agriculture.

"I was one of five girls and we never went near the machinery," she says. "My mother never did field work. She had a big garden and some chickens, but her activities were centered around the home."

It's a different story for Jonny Scott, one of about 500,000 women helping produce the nation's food. She also is an emerging female farmer who is at home in the seat of a tractor as in her kitchen.

"I do some of the plowing and cultivating, help spread fertilizer and run a combine or truck during harvest," she says. "Planting, I don't do. Butch likes the rows straight as an arrow and the way I drive a tractor just doesn't do it."

She also is bookkeeper, cook, homemaker, seamstress and a seat on the board of Great Plains Wheat Inc., a farmer's cooperative that develops foreign markets for American grain.

Women are becoming more involved in all parts of agriculture, Mrs. Dumler said. "We've been active in agriculture for years but we haven't taken a leadership role. That's changing a little now and I think we'll see more of it in the future."

She concedes some resistance from both male and female colleagues, but nothing major. "I am a farmer. I own a farm, just like many men and like many other women. If you pay the taxes and buy the machinery, you're a farmer automatically. Whether you're a man or a woman has nothing to do with it."

Jonny Scott has similar sentiments. "It's not a competitive thing for me. I don't feel I have to compete with Butch or prove something," Jonny Scott said. "I don't run things and I don't want to. Butch tells me what needs to be done and I do it."

Mrs. Dumler and Mrs. Scott say women's liberation isn't a force in the farm wife's expanding role. They say increased mechanization and a deepening shortage of skilled farm labor is the main reason.

"Twenty years ago it was physically impossible for most women to do field work because they didn't have the muscle to handle the machinery," Butch Scott said. "Now everything has power steering. The machinery is as easy to handle as the family car."

excellent job in places normally thought to be reserved for men.

In recent years, Kansas State has sent its women graduates to such jobs as hybrid hog research, agricultural chemical and fertilizer sales, riding fence for a large feedlot, and meat marketing specialist for the Kansas State Board of Agriculture.

Florence Dumler of Russell, Kans., assumed control of the family farm after the death of a husband.

A 54-year-old grandmother, she decided to continue farming with the help of her son, Carl, after her husband died in 1973. She farms 1,200 acres of wheat. "I had always helped my husband," she says. "He always wanted me to work with him and be a full partner."

Mrs. Dumler is one of 100,000 women who own or manage a farm. Women farm managers remain a 6 per cent minority in the multibillion dollar business of agriculture, but Department of Labor statistics show their ranks have grown more than 30,000 in the past five years.

Mrs. Dumler was the first woman ever named to the Kansas Wheat Commission, an agency that supervises wheat research and promotion; and also the first woman to take a Bigger and more powerful machines also have displaced the full-time hired hand, but farmers like the Scotts still need help in the busy planting and harvesting seasons, and have trouble finding it.

"It's almost impossible to find good help anymore," he said. "But my wife is here all the time to run for a machinery part or help during the busy times. Without her, I'd have to find a hired hand to do it. She makes a big difference."

French women shift emphasis to careers

By Rosette Hargrove

PARIS — (NEA) — "Women at Work" versus "Women at Home" was the subject of a 60-minute dialogue on French TV recently following a poll conducted by IFOP (French Institute of Public Opinion).

It had submitted a questionnaire to 1,978 women aged 16 years and older. The answers to some 12 questions revealed that 42 per cent were in favor of women being at home. The pollsters had pointed out that the exercise concerned only women who were not absolutely obliged to work away from home to increase the family budget.

The interviewees, Madame Claude Le Roux, an attractive, poised woman in her mid-forties, was well able to discuss the pros and cons of both issues. Mother of four children (8 to 18 years old), she was definitely a career woman who had spent the last 15 years of active life as editor of the popular woman's weekly ELLE. Torn between family and job, she had experienced the advantages and disadvantages of working. She declared vehemently she had never regretted her decision to quit her career. What she set out to do via TV was to show her compatriots that often bringing up a family, plus following a career, was at best a pseudo-liberation, often resolving in paying too great a price for the money involved.

"I realized," she explained "that my career, job, call it what you will, was absorbing all my energy. So then I decided it was high time I started living."

In passing, she brushed off the stereotyped rosy picture of the liberated woman at work versus the dismal, monotonous, thankless role of homemaker.

Anyway, she pointed out to millions of viewers that economically the woman who goes out to work—outside, of course, those who occupy top jobs—is very often not that much better off. When she has deducted her expenses—clothes, hairdresser, lunches, transportation and the loss of various social security allowances, making it difficult to achieve a balanced budget—the net result proved it was hardly worth it.

On the other hand, Claude Le Roux dismissed women who were house proud, went around with a duster, needed husband and children, complained of the monotony of their lives.

"All their own fault," she asserted. "Women at home enjoy a certain freedom, do not have to punch a clock, can plan their day as they like. They must not, however, content themselves with trips to the supermarket or coffee klatches but direct whatever free time they can dispose of to outside activities." They are not necessarily unintelligent or unattractive, she added.

She mentioned the group of young housewives in Toulouse who last year had promoted an association "To Help and Advise Women at Home" which now numbers 5,000. Already over 400 mothers have signed on for the classes in yoga, dancing, history, the arts and courses in simple economics and management.

UT regents give votes to students

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—University of Texas regents approved on Friday new rules giving students and faculty members an advisory voice in choosing presidents of campuses in the UT system.

Lack of student and faculty consultation was a prime complaint of those who took part in demonstrations at UT-Austin last year following appointment of Dr. Lorene Rogers as president.

The new rules establish an advisory committee consisting of the chancellor, deputy chancellor, three administrators, three regents, five faculty members of the school involved, a dean, two students of the institution and the president of the campus ex-students association.

The committee will set up criteria for evaluating candidates. It will submit names of three to five candidates to the regents, with no preferences indicated.

Regents also approved a plan for including medical students in the UT system's group malpractice policy for a premium of $25 a year.

Hartford Insurance Group will provide coverage of $25,000 to $75,000 per student, the university said.

In other actions, the regents: Approved several construction projects, including $10.7 million to expand the San Antonio Health Science Center to accommodate an entering class of 200 new medical students and $12 million for remodeling the M. D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute at Houston.

Sold $16 million in Permanent University Fund bonds to Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Co. of Chicago for an effective interest rate of 5.0776 per cent per year.

Democrat delegates profiled

By EVANS WITT and DICK BARNES
Associated Press Writers
WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite four years of effort to encourage greater representation for women and minorities, the three thousand Democrats who will choose a presidential nominee this week are predominantly male, overwhelmingly white.

They also are far better educated and generally wealthier than Americans generally.

An Associated Press survey based on individual interviews with 93 per cent of the delegates shows a distinct falloff from 1972 in the number of female, under-30 and minority delegates.

These groups, however, are far better represented this year than they were at the party's 1968 national convention.

The AP survey pinpoints some states where these groups have fared extremely well — and others where to be a woman or of a racial minority seems to be an invitation not to go to the convention.

Participation of the under-represented groups soared in 1972 due to the imposition of a quota system. This year, affirmative action plans without quotas were used.

One of the few genuine contests of this convention is expected Thursday night when rules governing the selection of delegates to the 1980 convention will be considered, possibly including whether or not to return to a quota system.

These are the key findings from the AP study:

—Women hold 33 per cent of the delegate seats, off from the 40 per cent they won four years ago but 2½ times the 1968 figure. Census figures show women make up 51.2 per cent of the nation's population.

—Just under 11 per cent of delegates are black, double the amount in 1968 but off nearly one-third from 1972. About 11.5 per cent of the nation is black, but the proportion of blacks among Democratic voters is higher since blacks traditionally overwhelmingly identify themselves as Democrats. Another 4.5 of this year's delegates are Spanish-surnamed.

—Less than 14 per cent of this year's delegates are under 30 years of age. Four years ago, 22 per cent were in their teens or twenties, but in 1968, only 4 per cent were in that category. The average age of all delegates is 42.9 years.

—More than two of every five delegates have done post-graduate work and another two of that five attended or graduated from an undergraduate college. Only 2 per cent of the delegates have less than a high school education — but about one-third of all Americans didn't finish high school.

—The high educational level is reflected in income. Almost exactly half the delegates live in a household with earnings of more than $25,000 a year, an income reached by only 11.5 per cent of the public. Only 7 per cent of the delegates earn less than $10,000.

—More than one in six of every delegates is an elected public official, the largest occupational group. Lawyers and educators each comprise more than 10 per cent of the convention membership. Next come self-employed businesspersons and homemakers. The only other group with more than 200 members is union officials.

—These union officers help swell the proportion of delegates who are members of a labor union to 21 per cent, or almost 600 delegates.

Hidden among these over-all figures are sharp variances among some states.

In Michigan and Nevada, women are a majority of the delegation. Ten of the 16 Nevadans are female, and in the much larger Michigan group, women hold the edge 67 to 66. In Mississippi and Oregon, delegations are evenly divided between men and women.

Men, however, hold more than 80 per cent of the seats in five states: South Carolina, West Virginia, Alabama, Louisiana and Hawaii.

Delegations are all-white in five smaller states: Montana, New Hampshire, South Dakota, Utah and Vermont. Among the ten largest states Massachusetts is the whitest in composition at 95 per cent.

Several southern states have sizable black representation, led by Mississippi at 33 per cent, with South Carolina at 26 per cent and Tennessee at 21.

Michigan has the highest black representation among the northern industrial states with 22 per cent.

The District of Columbia delegation is 50 per cent black, although this is proportionally lower than the D.C. population, which is more than three-quarters black.

Spanish-surnamed delegates hold 61 per cent of the seats in the New Mexico delegation. Their proportions in California, Arizona and Texas range from 13 to 17 per cent.

Michigan, high in female and black participation, tops the list in union members, with 52 per cent of its delegation members of a labor organization. Indiana and Alaska are 45 and 44 per cent union respectively.

The youngest delegation is from South Dakota, whose members average 36 years of age. The Wisconsin group averages 38, and those from Vermont, Massachusetts, Ohio and Arizona are 39.

At the other end of the age spectrum are Hawaii and West Virginia, averaging 50.

Although the average delegate age is about the same as for the U.S. voting-age population taken as a whole, the ages of delegates cluster far more heavily in the 35-50 range.

This results in decided under-representation for persons 18 to 24, and persons over 65. Each of those groups has less than one-third as many delegates as it would if the convention roster accurately represented U.S. age groupings.

The differences between the convention delegates and the general U.S. population are even more pronounced when it comes to household income. Just under 50 per cent of the delegates earning more than $25,000, more than four times as high as in the general population.

And while more than one-third of U.S. households earn less than $10,000, only 7 per cent of the delegation falls into that category.

Peace Corps started worldwide move

Editor's note — America's Peace Corps is today half the size it once was. But it has been the inspiration of a small army of similar aid groups in Western European nations whose volunteers are serving in underdeveloped lands from Algeria to Zambia.

By DAVID MINTHORN
Associated Press Writer
BONN, West Germany (AP) — "The Peace Corps," says Hedwig Maurach of West Germany's Volunteer Service, "is our ancestral mother. It's a shame American volunteers have been made scapegoats for the Vietnam War and the CIA."

Inspired by the U.S. Peace Corps, West Germany and other western European countries have sent thousands of skilled volunteers overseas for grassroots aid projects in former colonies and emerging nations of Asia, Africa and South America.

The European aid workers keep low profiles and try to avoid the type of political controversies that forced the Peace Corps to leave eight countries in recent years.

West German volunteers must sign pledges that they won't involve themselves in host country politics while overseas. "We've never been asked to leave a host country. That's one of the advantages of not being a world power," said Miss Maurach.

France, Britain, Holland, Denmark, Sweden and Austria also sponsor volunteer services like the U.S. Peace Corps, but they put more stress on experts — doctors and nurses, agronomists, engineers and craftsmen — rather than America-style generalists and classroom teachers.

At its peak in the mid-1960s, the U.S. agency had over 15,000 volunteers in 48 countries and a budget of $114 million. Now it has 6,690 volunteers in 68 countries and $67.1 million for fiscal 1977.

Michael P. Balzano Jr., director of Action, overseer of the American program, says the Peace Corps can only meet 70 per cent of host country requests for highly skilled volunteers.

"We think the Peace Corps has reached its optimum size given international and domestic problems," he said, last month.

West Germany's government-sponsored service now has 850 volunteers overseas—mostly in Tanzania, Ecuador, Peru, Zambia and Cameroon — down from more than 1,000 at its peak in 1969.

Bonn has had a decline in acceptable candidates but tries to keep standards high. "Fewer than 1 per cent of our volunteers fail to complete their two-year contracts, and about one-third extend for an extra year," Miss Maurach said.

German volunteers, whose average age is 26, must have expertise in a specialized vocation and fluency in at least one foreign language. About half of them are university or technical college graduates.

Unlike the Peace Corps, the German aid group even accepts married couples with children. Volunteers receive tax-free allowances of up to $360 a month, free housing and medical care, 30 days of annual vacation and $3,300 readjustment pay at the end of their two-year term.

Ernst Roensch, a 30-year-old Bavarian engineer, is building a pipeline to bring 2,000 Nepalese villagers their first running water.

The pipeline is desperately needed in the village of Malling where he works. In Nepal, up to 80 per cent of the population suffers from debilitating intestinal disorders caused by impure drinking water.

Before starting, Roensch spent weeks haggling with Nepalese bureaucrats over cement, pipe and other supplies. Then he led 100 native bearers through malarial jungle to deliver the materials.

Met with indifference, Roensch adopted the villagers' way of life and learned their dialect. He has trained two villagers to maintain the water line after he completes the project.

The New York Islanders picked six players in the National Hockey league's 1976 amateur spring draft.

Softball -- hit among misses

Hard ball or soft, it's hitting that counts. Whim Wham Julie Turner, above, is miffed over striking out, but Gay Hendricks, below, waggles her bat with confidence over another point for the Red Machine.

Tonight marks the first tournament for team competition between the two girls' softball leagues, sponsored by the Pampa Opti-Mrs. Club. Previously an all-star team was chosen from both the six-team American and National leagues for one championship game. "We felt this will give more teams an opportunity to win," explained Carol Cofer, president of the club. The Opti-Mrs. Club has worked since 1960 to develop girls' softball into an enthusiastic program involving more than 200 girls ages 10 to 14. Girls' softball has moved from Saturday mornings at Hobart Street Park to week-night games played at Optimist Park. Four years ago a permanent team roster system was set up and the present twelve teams formed. "We had trouble getting coaches every year," recalled Mim Secrest, one of the original organizers of the softball program, "so we decided if the coaches knew they were going to get their girls back from year to year, maybe it would interest them to keep on coaching. "One of the reasons for moving the games to evenings was so that we could get more coaches who worked during the day," she added, "and as a result we've gotten daddies interested."

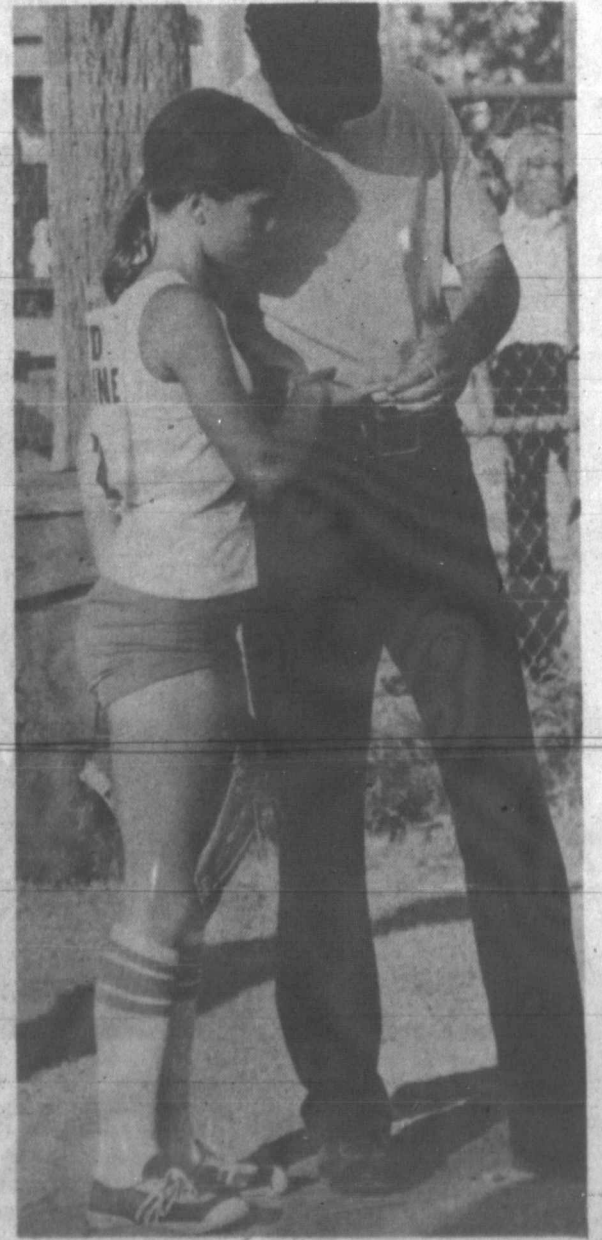

Nearly half the girls' softball coaches now are men. Games tonight in National League Park are Teasers vs. Super Stars at 6 p.m. and Ding-a-Lings vs. Red Machine at 8:15 p.m. In American League Park the Go Getters vs. Hobos will be at 6 p.m. and Whim Whams will play Tweety Birds at 8:15 p.m.

Pampa News photos by Michal Thompson

Coaching philosophies may differ but the aim is the same for any team sport: get the most out of each player and play to win. Whim Wham coach Joyce Gray displays an aggressive style coaching her base runners and calling the shots on defense for Deanna and Jeanna Porter and daughter Dorinda Gray, while Bob Muncy, Red Machine coach for the past four years, gives some gentle attention to a possible injured pinkie on his catcher, Whitney Kidwell.

Liechtenstein

The Principality of Liechtenstein, on the Upper Rhine River between Switzerland and Austria, is slightly smaller than the District of Columbia with a population of less than 25,000. It became independent in 1866 with the dissolution of the German Confederation. By treaty, Switzerland administers communications, customs and foreign affairs. There is no army and a police force of only 40 officers plus 25 auxiliaries.

Executive Dish

Calvin Coolidge, who invited members of Congress to breakfast meetings at the White House, startled his guests one morning by pouring coffee and cream into his saucer. In confusion, several others at the table did the same. Without a word, the President placed his saucer on the floor for his dog.
