

Viking lands on dusty Mars plain

By PETER J. BOYER
Associated Press Writer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — America's Viking 1 spacecraft landed today on a dusty plain of Mars to search for life on the red planet. In a spectacular space achievement, Viking began sending back razor-sharp photos of the planet's surface. The pictures arrived dramatically, appearing line-by-line on television monitors after traveling 213 million miles at the speed of light. The failure of two earlier Soviet Mars landing crafts had heightened the tension in the project laboratory.

"The details are just incredible," said Dr. Thomas Mutch, head of the lander imaging team.

"It just couldn't be better," he said as the first picture, a portion of the surface directly under one leg of the lander appeared on television monitors at Jet Propulsion Laboratory. It was of the Chryse Planitia, the Gold Plain of Mars — the smoothest place on a planet marked by volcanic peaks and deep valleys and craters.

Later, the unmanned threelegged lander will make life-detection and soil sampling tests. For more than 100 years scientists have thought Mars might harbor some form of life.

Scientists cheered and hugged each other as the 1,300 pound craft radioed that it touched down on Mars at 4:53 a.m. PDT. The signal took 19 minutes to reach earth. For many, the achievement was a childhood dream come true — a Mars landing.

President Ford telephoned his congratulations to the project headquarters, calling the mission a "wonderful and most remarkable success."

He said, "I think it's amazing that in the span of a single lifetime, the exploration of space has grown from the dreams of very, very few individuals to such a massive cooperative reality."

Science fiction writer Ray Bradbury was at JPL for the touchdown, his dreams racing ahead of the Viking mission.

"I know in the next 20 years we'll have a manned landing on Mars — eventually we'll have colonized and taken over the planet," Bradbury said.

The first picture showed an area of soil strewn with what seemed to be chunks of rock of varying sizes. Mutch said it looked as though some of the rocks had tails of dirt formed by the rushing of strong Martian winds across the surface.

Scientists had expected the landing site a low plain where streams may once have run, would be covered by a blanket of material deposited by the water. Although the pictures showed a rocky surface, the lander apparently avoided any geologic hazards that project officials had feared might imperil the touchdown.

In the corner of the first picture could be seen one of Viking's round metal landing footpads. The rivets on the footpad were visible and the footpad cast an oval shadow in the late afternoon sun as it rested on the soil among the rocks, which Mutch described as "a beautiful collection of boulders."

The second picture was to be a panoramic view of the Martian landscape, made by a camera on the lander with the ability to sweep a long path across the horizon.

As the lander's panoramic picture came through, oohs and aahs reverberated through the center.

"I think it's great," said Mission Director Thomas Young, viewing the Martian horizon. "It has exceeded all our expectations. The landing was O.K., there were no problems, and it's as scientifically interesting as we had hoped."

Asked if the panorama shots of the Martian surface revealed the desert scientists had expected, project chief Jim Martin said, "It's certainly very close. We don't see a lot of big rocks. It looks like there might be some hills out there."

The Soviet news agency Tass reported the Viking landing in one paragraph.

Viking 1, the first of two unmanned American spacecraft scheduled to land on Mars this summer, was launched last August 20. It arrived near Mars and went into orbit around the planet — which is about half the size of earth — a month ago.

Viking 2 is an identical lander and is soaring through space and is due to enter Martian orbit August 7.

Coincidentally, the touchdown schedule of the Viking 1 lander was on the seventh anniversary of man's first walk on the moon, Neil Armstrong's and Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin's monumental achievement on July 20, 1969.

President Ford took note of the coincidence of the two events Monday, and proclaimed today as Space Exploration Day.

A landing site several hundred kilometers to the southeast of today's landing site — along with a planned July Fourth Bicentennial landing — was rejected by the Viking team as being too hazardous.

GNP drops sharply

By G. DAVID WALLACE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Gross National Product, the broadest measure of the nation's economic well-being, registered a sharp drop in the growth rate during the spring quarter, the government reported today. The drop was attributed primarily to a stabilization of business inventory accumulation.

The Commerce Department said the GNP grew at an annual rate of 4.4 per cent in volume for April through June, compared to a 9.2 per cent annual rate of growth in the year's first quarter.

Despite the decline in the rate of growth, most economists say they feel the drop will be temporary.

The GNP represents the nation's total output of goods and services and is a key determinant of how many new jobs the economy generates as well as the economic status of all Americans.

The Commerce Department said the slower growth rate was accompanied by a quickening of inflation. Prices as measured in the GNP accounts, which include the prices of all goods and services in the economy rather than just consumer prices, were up 5 per cent at an annual rate in the second quarter. The inflation rate in the first quarter was 3 per cent.

A sharp drop in the growth rate had been expected by Ford administration economists for at least a month.

Despite the slower growth rate, the GNP figures contained some encouraging signals. Demand in the economy, or the level of final sales, actually grew at a faster pace — 4.7 per cent at an annual rate. Final sales had climbed at a 3.7 per cent rate in the first quarter.

The reason that final sales managed to climb faster while the economy as a whole was growing more slowly is that the sharp boost in inventory accumulation of the first quarter was absent.

Businessmen satisfied demand in 1975 from inventories because they were overstocked with goods and raw materials in their storehouses. Then in the first three months of this year they suddenly began building inventories again.

Businessmen satisfied demand in 1975 from inventories because they were overstocked with goods and raw materials in their storehouses. Then in the first three months of this year they suddenly began building inventories again.

in the first quarter, the government said.

The total value of GNP at an annual rate in the second quarter was placed at $1.673 billion.

Simultaneous with release of the GNP figures, the Commerce Department reported that total personal income of Americans grew by the smallest margin in 11 months during June. Personal income for the month was at annual rate of $1.368.9 billion, an increase of $6 billion, or four-tenths of 1 per cent, over May.

That compared with a $10.4 billion advance in May and was the smallest monthly gain since personal income dipped last July.

The GNP accounts showed that disposable personal income, which is total income after deduction of taxes, amounted to $5.452 per person in the second quarter. That compared to per capita disposable personal income of $5.347 in the first quarter.

The latest GNP figures included revisions of earlier estimates for recent years. The 9.2 per cent growth in GNP for the first quarter represented an upward revision from the 8.7 per cent estimated last month as the growth rate of GNP. The estimates provided for the latest quarter are also subject to later revision as additional data becomes available.

In another economic report Monday, the Federal Reserve Board had estimated that manufacturers in the nation were operating at 73 per cent of capacity in the second quarter of the year. That compared to a 72.1 per cent rate of capacity utilization in the previous quarter and was the highest since 75.7 per cent in the last three months of 1974.

Capacity utilization is an indicator of the inflationary pressures in the economy, because as manufacturers operate close to their limits of capacity, the strong demand usually enables them to get better prices for their products. The general rate is still well below, however, the 83 per cent in 1973 when inflation was strongest and shortages were cropping up in the economy.

The trend has been particularly striking in the unemployment picture. The unemployment rate currently stands at 7.5 per cent, or precisely where it was at the end of the first quarter. But because of growth in the number of people looking for work and holding jobs, that unemployment rate represents a 116,000 growth in the number of people out of work, leaving the number unemployed in June at 7.1 million.

Budget cut $100,000

By TEX DEWESE
Pampa News Staff

It was back to the planning table and calculator at City Hall today in an effort to pare Pampa's proposed city budget and make it fit available revenue in fiscal 1976-77.

That was the decision reached Monday night when city commissioners met for two hours at City Hall and took their first look at budget requests of department heads.

City Manager Mack Wofford told commissioners the city will have approximately $110,000 more operating fund revenue in fiscal 1976-77 than in the current year which ends next Sept. 30.

This year's operating budget was set at $3,031,954. The proposed budget for the coming year is $3,241,441 after $100,000 was removed last night for seal-coating city streets. Commissioners figured the street repair program could be handled by the City.

With anticipated revenue set at $3,141,441 that left $100,000 still to be cut from the budget if the goal is met to hold the line and make the budget balance with available revenue.

This year's departmental budget requests included 11 additional personnel. The likelihood after Monday night's meeting seemed to be that only one would be left in the budget — an $8,320 a year plant operator required by the federal government under its grant for construction of the city's new sewage treatment plant.

Elimination of the 10 additional employees requested would cut off about $60,000 of the needed $100,000 budget slash.

The city manager and his administrative assistant, Personnel Director Milton Saltzman, were busy today working on the other $40,000 reduction.

Wofford said they hope to come up with figures to present when the City Commission meets again in open meeting at 7 p.m. today in the City Commission Room at City Hall.

Requests of each of the city's 24 department heads were outlined in detail by the city manager at last night's session.

He explained that no capital outlay items were included in the operating budget. The city has been buying capital items only with federal revenue sharing funds only.

Wofford said requests for capital outlay items in the budget totaled $307,911. He added that the city has a current balance of only $107,000 in revenue sharing funds and that Congress has yet taken no action on the extension of revenue sharing funds beyond Dec. 31 of this year.

Commissioners agreed with the city manager that final action on capital expenditures should be delayed until it is learned what happens to the federal revenue sharing program.

"If Congress cuts off federal revenue sharing," Wofford said, "it should follow that the capital expenditures back and then work them into our regular operating budget, as we can in the future. Pampa receives approximately $200,000 a year in revenue sharing money.

Commissioners are considering a 6 per cent increase in gross salaries. If adopted that would increase the budget approximately $90,000 over this year. Salaries and wages amount to 54.4 per cent of Pampa's total operating expenses.

The city's current tax rate is $1.95 on each $100 of assessed property valuation. Wofford pointed out that only $1.18 of the tax rate is available for operating expenses. The other 77 cents goes to pay off money the city already owes.

Attending last night's public meeting on the budget were the city manager, Mayor R.D. Wilkerson, Commissioners Ray Thompson, Joe Curtis, Leo Braswell and Linden Shepherd, Saltzman and City Secretary S.M. Chittenden.

Hospital district probed

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

There reportedly has been some investigation underway in Gray County into the subject of a vote to organize a hospital district for the management of Highland General and McLean General Hospitals.

The last such election was soundly defeated in 1969 by a vote of 278 for a hospital district to 1,003 against.

Creation of a hospital district would result in another taxing body for residents of the county. The hospitals currently are under the jurisdiction of the Gray County Commissioners Court which appoints a board of six managers to oversee hospital business.

If a district is approved by the voters, the board of managers would be elected by popular vote rather than appointed by the county commissioners court.

Contacted this morning by The Pampa News, Robert Finney, a local attorney who reportedly has been looking into the previous election, said he "could not divulge any information."

Asked if he knew who was spearheading a drive for a new election, Finney repeated that he "could not divulge any information."

In order to call an election, petitions containing signatures of 10 per cent of the county's estimated 13,000 registered voters would be necessary.

Bob Monogue, administrator of the hospitals said today he had heard a "few rumors" in regard to a proposed hospital district — but commented no further.

The October 1, 1969 proposal called for the creation of a Gray County Hospital district providing for the levy of annual taxes not to exceed 75 cents on the $100 valuation on all taxable property within the district.

Frank Cheevers, administrator of the 80-bed Dumas Memorial Hospital in Moore County, said that facility was voter approved for operation as a hospital district in 1967.

The tax rate is now 13 cents per $100 valuation based on 40 per cent of the appraised value.

Cheevers said a hospital district board may be appointed by a governmental body or its members may be elected.

"And the board has complete jurisdiction. It is a functional board — not an advisory one," he added.

Marie work interrupts

An official with Marie Foundations said today that the plants in Pampa and McLean will interrupt production operations for one week, Aug. 2-6, and will reopen on Aug. 9.

Ms. Maomi McCarty, personnel director, said the shutdown of the sewing and cutting operations in the plants is "due to our inventory. We are overproduced."

She said that the closing practice is not unusual.

"It isn't a policy every year," she said, "but we have done it before."

Some work will continue in the shipping room and plant offices, she said.

While some employees may choose to count the week as vacation time, "We will not be paying regular pay that week," Ms. McCarty said.

She said that the plants pay all vacation pay on the first of May. "People who have been at Marie up to three years get 2 per cent of their gross annual wages and more than three years service results in 4 per cent if the employee chooses to take the extra pay rather than the time

In any event a hospital district would remove the powers of the commissioners court in operating the hospital.

Asked who would receive the petitions to form a hospital district, Finney said, "It is my understanding they would be presented to the county judge for certification."

She said that "all of our suppliers close down two weeks the last of July," but the local plants do not always follow suit, although "McLean closed last year for a week."

The personnel director said that "there will be no personnel changes... It will be a good time for the ladies to have an extra week off."

She emphasized that plans are to re-open the plant Aug. 9, after only a one-week shutdown.

"We don't know if it could go longer than that."

Dale Greenhouse, general manager, was out of town today due to a death in his family and could not be reached for comment.

There are about 200 employees in the Pampa plant and about 90 in McLean that will be affected by the work interruption.

The employees will not be eligible for state unemployment benefits unless they are out of work longer than one week, unless a claim is in effect, according to local Texas Employment Commission officials.

Ford claims 16

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's campaign claimed 16 more Republican National Convention delegates today, including two plucked from Ronald Reagan's total in Virginia and seven from Suffolk County, N.Y.

The latest announcement from Ford headquarters came less than 24 hours after the Reagan camp named three new converts from the uncommitted ranks and contended the former California governor would have 1,140 votes on the first ballot.

James Baker, Ford's chief delegate hunter, said the president now has 1,119 of the 1,130 delegates necessary to secure the GOP nomination at Kansas City Aug. 18.

The Associated Press count of legally bound and publicly declared candidates now stands at 1,081 for Ford, 1,023 for Reagan, 154 uncommitted and 1 for Sen. Howard H. Baker of Tennessee.

In addition to the seven New Yorkers, the new Ford claims list five delegates from Virginia and one each from Illinois, Delaware, Louisiana and South Carolina.

Edwin M. Schwenk, Suffolk County GOP chairman, said his group of seven decided to switch to the President last Friday. Earlier, said Schwenk, he had met for about 10 minutes with Ford to discuss the county's need for federal help on a major sewer project.

Ford, at a news conference Monday, said he expected good news from his delegate hunters later in the week. Ford claimed he already has 1,103 of the 1,130 delegates — needed to assure nomination on the first ballot at the Aug. 16-19 convention.

The Associated Press delegate count, which does not count those considered to be only leaning toward one candidate or the other, currently gives Ford 1,066 and Reagan 1,023, with 169 uncommitted and one expressing a preference for Sen. Howard Baker Jr. of Tennessee.

State surplus could pay for schools

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—The chairman of a special House committee on school finance says he favors using a large part of the projected treasury surplus to increase the state's share of essential—or minimum—school costs.

"I think we are going to recommend spending an additional, substantial chunk of state funds," said Rep. Tom Massey, D-San Angelo, chairman of the House Committee on Alternatives to Public School Financing.

Massey also is chairman of the House Committee on Education.

With Gov. Dolph Briscoe's new taxes policy, the place to get more money is the surplus and windfall revenue from rising oil prices and inflation, he said.

Massey said the committee probably would propose some new taxes to finance education.

looking ahead to the day when state revenue sources no longer are frozen.

"The record would show that the one recommended most by the people who have testified before us was a one per cent increase in the sales tax, with a narrowing of exemptions," Massey told reporters following a meeting of his committee Monday.

Massey said a $500 million increase would raise the state's share of the Minimum Foundation School program from 80 per cent to 90 per cent. He made it clear the figures were produced just for discussion and did not necessarily reflect what the committee might recommend.

He said he also had concluded reluctantly that the state should put a limit, by law, on the amounts local school districts can spend for enrichment of their educational programs.

"My position has changed drastically in the last 18 months," Massey said.

"I think if you are ever going to do two things, you are going to have to limit local enrichment. One is equalization of educational opportunity. The other is relief for the local taxpayer."

Massey acknowledged that feeling in the legislature has run against limiting local enrichment.

But he challenged the assumption that added local expenditures for education reflect the desires of local taxpayers.

With some school board members having terms as long as six years, they do not have to seek frequent voter approval of their policies, he observed.

"I don't think it is a result of a mandate from the people," Massey said.

In answer to a question, he said he believed his committee shared his attitude toward enrichment.

A school district's share of the foundation program, as well as local enrichment, comes entirely from property taxes. Massey said the committee was trying to find alternatives to that funding method, which has produced sizeable local tax increases in many districts while the state pursued its no new taxes policy.

During the committee's meeting Monday, Massey observed that while the state had won the famous Rodriguez case, the issue it raised of educational inequality among rich and poor districts still exists.

"It shows that the ad valorem (property) tax is a hell of a way to finance your schools," Massey said.

Tax bill may help one

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee is taking a second look at dozens of amendments that were written into a big tax bill last month, including several that benefit only one or two firms.

Sen. Russell Long, D-La., arranged today's meeting of his committee in response to criticism of the amendments as the Senate neared a vote on extending last year's individual tax cuts at least through next June.

proved by the panel without hearings and with no public announcement of who would benefit.

But all were subject to scrutiny, before or after approval, by congressional and Treasury Department experts.

In a statement prepared for the hearing, Long said the committee, because of time pressures, had to make numerous decisions with the clear understanding they would be more thoroughly considered at a later date.

One of the most expensive amendments being questioned would cost the Treasury an estimated $40 million a year for the benefit of the major oil companies. The amendment would make certain that firms belonging to the Iranian oil consortium continue to receive a U.S. tax credit for foreign taxes paid on their Iranian oil.

It is easy to determine who would benefit from some of the amendments. For example, Sen. Walter Mondale, D-Minn., was looking out for a home-state industry when he won approval of an amendment providing a tax credit for homeowners who install energy-saving thermostats.

One of the biggest manufacturers of such equipment is Honeywell, Inc., of Minnesota.

Other beneficiaries of the amendments, identified by Proxmire or Kennedy, include: Investor Diversified Services, United Airlines, Chrysler Corp., large shipbuilders, Boise Cascade, General Electric, Westinghouse, Eaton Corp., Encyclopedia Britannica, major life-insurance companies and Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co.

He canoed into Alaska

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Don Watson survived encounters with an angry alligator on a Louisiana bayou and mountainous waves on the Mississippi River in his "adventure of a lifetime" — a 13,500-mile, meandering trip across the country and into Alaska in a 15-foot canoe.

"People tell me that I'm either the most courageous man they've ever met or the most insane," Watson, 43, said Sunday after chugging into port here one year and eight days after his journey began. "After all this time and all that has happened to me, I'm not so sure which is the right answer myself."

A wealthy, retired publishing executive from Mountain View, Calif., Watson said he set out on the cross-country trip in a custom-made, outboard-motor powered canoe because of "a primordial urge to test myself."

"I've been a success in the business world," Watson said. "I've got a $150,000 home mortgage-free. But was I really the man I thought I was? I wanted to find out."

To discover the answer, Watson purchased a canoe, equipped it with "everything but a 5-foot-2 brunette," and launched it into the Tennessee River at Chattanooga.

In a circuitous route, Watson traveled up the Tennessee to the Cumberland River, connected with the Mississippi via the Ohio, up the Mississippi to Minneapolis, Minn., back down the Mississippi to the White River and took the White west to Tulsa.

Then he moved back along the White to the Mississippi again, down the Mississippi to the Gulf coast to Key West, Fla., up the Atlantic Coast to Savannah, Ga., and up the Savannah River to Augusta.

From Augusta, Watson trucked his canoe to the Snake River in Idaho, chugged down the Snake to the Columbia River and on to Portland, Ore. After another portage to Olympia, Wash., Watson and his canoe went up the Puget Sound and the Inside Passage to Alaska.

What's Watson going to do for an encore to his adventure? Why, do it again in reverse, he says.

Mobile home insurance increase being sought

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—The owner of a $10,000 mobile home in a coastal county would have to pay $500 a year for windstorm insurance if the State Insurance Board approves rates proposed by the Texas hurricane pool.

The pool also wants to require a 10 per cent deductible when a loss occurs.

If an owner also wanted coverage against fires, explosions, vandalism or other hazards, that would take another policy, with an additional premium.

Agents immediately opposed the request of the Texas Catastrophe Property Insurance Association—partly because it also would cut their commissions on all pool business from 20 per cent to 15 per cent of standard (and lower) rates.

The State Insurance Board, which heard the testimony Monday, cannot legally make its decision until August—dangerously near the start of the hurricane season.

Atty. Gen. John Hill held in a recent opinion that the pool must cover mobile homes in coastal counties. The two companies that provided most of their coverage became insolvent and went out of business last year. Since then, windstorm coverage on mobile homes has been virtually unobtainable along the coast.

The $5 per $100 rate proposed by the pool applies on the inland side of the Intracoastal Canal. Mobile home owners living east of the canal would have a $10 rate.

Coverage would be limited to $15,000 on a mobile home and $5,000 on its contents—subject to the 10 per cent deductible.

The pool's written proposal called the proposed rates "eminently fair."

Baxter Jackson, representing the Independent Insurance Agents of Corpus Christi, said the pool's proposal compares unfavorably with the $1.60 per $100 rate now prescribed by the board for mobile home policies—if an owner can find one.

"A 10 per cent deductible on a $10,000 home is $1,000, and I don't think people living in a $10,000 home can stand a $1,000 deductible," Jackson told the board.

He also objected because the pool's proposal would not provide money to repair a home after a hurricane or hailstorm.

"Paint is taken off the homes (by a hurricane). That is one reason the homeowner is buying windstorm insurance. It would be most difficult to explain to a customer that the paint on his house is not covered," Jackson said.

Joseph C. Boggins of Austin, executive director of the Independent Insurance Agents of Texas, predicted that the cut in commissions would not be passed on to policyholders but would be "a hidden rate increase."

Charges 'taint' judiciary

HOUSTON (AP) — Several judges here say bribery charges against State Dist. Judge Garth Bates will taint the public's respect of the judiciary.

Bates, a state judge since 1972, and insurance salesman Edwin Riklin were arrested and charged Friday with allegedly setting up a payoff to insure that a defendant in Bates' court did not go to jail.

"There's no question about it," State Dist. Judge Wallace Moore said. "Any time anything happens to one of us, we are all painted with the same brush."

State Dist. Judge William Hatten said "With everything lately, from Watergate until now, people are so prone to jump to conclusions when they don't know all the facts. They should reserve judgement."

Bates and Riklin are free on $118,000 bond each.

Bates waived a preliminary hearing Saturday and asked to appear before the grand jury here that will hear evidence in his case Tuesday.

"Any public official, when charged with this type of corruption, makes it bad for all public officials," Judge Miron Love said. "It is discouraging and disheartening that this feeling could exist."

Judge Max M. Rogers of Huntsville, presiding judge of the state judicial district that includes Harris County, said Bates can continue as judge because he is considered innocent until proven guilty.

Asst. Dist. Atty. John Holmes said there is no plan to remove Bates' judgeship.

Gerald Payte, an attorney and friend of Bates, said the judge has not decided if he will leave the bench while his case is being decided.

Bates and Riklin are accused in the case of Nukie Fontenot, charged with receiving and concealing stolen property in the 1975 robbery of a jewelry salesman.

Michael Gregory Todd, 30, was sentenced to 60 years in prison by a jury in Bates' court which convicted him of aggravated robbery in the case of the jewelry salesman, Charles Mize.

A judicial performance poll, conducted by the Houston Bar Association in 1975, found Bates last among the 12 criminal district judges in categories of integrity and character.

Of bar association members responding to the poll, 65 per cent said he was a man of honesty and integrity. On the question of "Is he a man of good character and reputation?" 64 per cent answered affirmatively.

Bates was endorsed by a 1976 bar poll of judicial candidates for re-election over his opponent.

Johannesburg police alerted

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Reinforced police patrols were on the alert for a new outbreak of rioting today in the Soweto township eight miles south of Johannesburg. But the birthplace of the black uprising last month remained calm.

The government postponed the reopening of black schools, scheduled for today, following widespread rumors of antigovernment demonstrations in Soweto to coincide with the resumption of classes.

The schools have been closed since the rioting last month in which 176 blacks and two whites were killed, and there were fears that the postponement would touch off new disturbances in the sprawling ghetto where the trouble last month began.

Soweto residents reported militants were trying to organize a strike and threatening black workers with violence if they went to their jobs in Johannesburg. But commuting workers flooded into the city, and trains and buses were operating normally.

Armed police in battle dress barred white civilians from Soweto and patrolled the township in Hippo armored personnel carriers. Police were also on the alert in other black townships in the Johannesburg area and those around Pretoria, the capital 30 miles to the north-east.

Public meetings were banned, and the government arrested an undisclosed number of black militants under new preventive detention laws.

There have been no disturbances in Soweto since the June riots, but acts of racial violence in other areas have fueled tension.

The biggest outbreak occurred Saturday night at the black University of Fort Hare, in eastern Cape province 450 miles south of Johannesburg. University authorities canceled a student prayer meeting for the people of Soweto, and many of the 1,700 students rioted, smashing windows, stoning cars and throwing gasoline bombs into the main building.

Police used tear gas to break up the riot, and the university was closed.

At Kempton Park, on the outskirts of Johannesburg, an attempt was made Monday to burn down a courthouse where 11 blacks were to be tried on charges arising from the rioting last month.

The blacks' anger over their inferior status and the ruling white minority's apartheid policy of racial segregation and repression has been intensified by several new grievances.

These include the jailing of schoolchildren during the riots

(the children were released later), the paupers' burials given at least 20 unidentified blacks killed in the riots and the widespread arrest of black militants, including leading members of the Black People's Convention, the South African Students Organization and the South African Students Movement.

Police Commissioner Gert Prinsloo refused Monday to say how many blacks had been arrested. The government can keep a person arrested under the Internal Security Act in detention indefinitely without revealing the arrest or allowing him access to an attorney or his family.

Congressmen deny leaking secret report to Schorr

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressmen who served on the House intelligence committee are telling investigators they did not leak the panel's secret report to CBS newsman Daniel Schorr and don't know who did.

House ethics committee investigators said Monday that after more than 400 interviews and $150,000 spent, they have not been able to determine who gave Schorr a copy of the intelligence committee report.

Chief investigator David Bowers said the source of the leak has been narrowed to five intelligence committee members, three of four staff aides and a number of federal officials. Members of the now-disbanded committee are saying they don't know how Schorr got the report.

That was the testimony of former committee chairman Otis Pike, D-N.Y., to the ethics committee Monday. Reps. Dale Milford, D-Tex., and Les Aspin, D-Wis., were ready to testify to the same thing today.

Schorr has acknowledged that last February he arranged publication of the report in New York City's weekly Village Voice. Excerpts printed by the newspaper included classified information on several U.S. intelligence operations that the Ford administration wanted to keep secret.

The five committee members and the staff aides, who were not named, had the final report at home on Sunday, Jan. 25, the day Schorr said he obtained it, Bowers testified.

Ethics committee investigators determined that 40 copies of the report were in six federal bureaus, including the White House, the CIA and the State Department that weekend, Bowers testified.

He disclosed that 40 photo copies were made by the CIA from a copy loaned by a committee member. Aspin confirmed he was the member who loaned the copy to the CIA after committee aides refused to do so.

Aspin said he loaned the copy as part of negotiations with the CIA to get as much information as possible declassified so that it could be put into the report and made public.

Bowers told the ethics committee that his investigators had not even found an exact version of the report leaked to Schorr.

He said the copy Aspin loaned to the CIA was close but that it had one page missing from the report published by the Village Voice and did not have two pages that were published there.

The closest copy of all belonged to an unnamed intelligence committee member. There were only four differences between that copy and the one that appeared in the Village Voice, he said.

Meany backs Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Divided in 1972, the House of Labor stands united in this year's presidential election. Jimmy Carter has won the AFL-CIO endorsement, with federation President George Meany declaring, "I think he wants to change things — change the whole economic picture."

Meany's announcement Monday of the AFL-CIO endorsement gives the Democratic nominee support from virtually the entire labor movement.

The big independent labor groups — among them, the auto and mine workers and the National Education Association — have either endorsed or are expected to soon back the former Georgia governor.

Police report

Police investigated a rash of criminal mischief complaints, a theft, a burglary, arrested one man for evading arrest and made inquiries into the ownership of a CB radio Monday.

A catalpa tree at 1205 Kiowa was cut down and a mailbox at 818 S. 24th was destroyed by explosives.

Rock throwers broke the window in a vehicle parked outside 1112 E. Francis and tore a screen and broke a window at 532 N. Faulkner.

The lock on a trailer house door at 925 S. Banks was broken and an eight-track stereo and two speakers were taken. Two men put $5.40 worth of gasoline in their car at the Minit Mart pump at 1106 Alcock and left without paying.

Police arrested one man following a disturbance call at a local lounge.

A CB radio found in the yard at 120 W. 24th, was checked through the National Crime Information Center but it was not listed as stolen.

There were two non-injury accidents investigated.

Bates will leave bench

HOUSTON (AP) — State Dist. Court Judge Garth Bates, charged with bribery, apparently will step down from the bench until his case is resolved.

Gerald Payte, personal attorney for the judge, said Monday Bates had told him he would leave the judicial post. A former state legislator and Houston city councilman, Bates is unopposed for a second four-year term to the state court.

Bates, 61, and Ed Riklin, a 46-year-old salesman, were charged Friday with accepting and agreeing to accept money from Nukie Fontenot, 38, a pawnbroker, with an understanding the judge would not send Fontenot to prison.

Fontenot is scheduled to go on trial in Bates' court on a charge of receiving and concealing items taken in a $90,000 jewelry robbery.

Dist. Atty. Carol Vance said the case was presented to a grand jury Monday and the panel probably will end its investigation Wednesday.

Vance said he understood that "Bates' attorney, Joe Reynolds, has told the foreman of the grand jury he doesn't want the judge to appear. But the jurors want to be certain Bates has a chance to appear before the group if he chooses."

Vance said a registered letter has been sent to Bates stating that he has until Wednesday to meet with the grand jury.

Bates and Riklin are free on $118,000 bond each.

Accompanying Vance before the grand jury were three assistants—Bob Bennett, head of the special crimes bureau, John Holmes, an assistant to Bennett, and Henry Oncken, chief prosecutor in Bates' court.

Prior to the announcement by Payte, Vance said he and his assistants would refuse to present any cases before Bates while the bribery charge is pending.

District Judge Perry Pickett of Midland will preside over Bates' court this week, at the request of State Dist. Court Judge Max Rogers of Huntsville, the presiding officer for the judicial district that includes Harris County.

Prosecutors have declined to discuss the details of the Bates case.

War buffer zone created

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanon's warring Christians and Moslems announced an agreement today to establish a buffer zone between their sectors of Beirut.

Palestinian chief Yasir Arafat also announced he was sending a peace emissary to Damascus "because the Syrian-Palestinian crisis as well as the Lebanese civil war must come to an end."

Christian leaders offered to halt their attack on the Palestinian refugee camp Tal Zaatar in southeast Beirut for five hours Wednesday to allow the Red Cross to evacuate an estimated 1,000 wounded.

The Palestinians said privately they did not object to the truce offer but one spokesman said the final decision depends on what happens at a meeting scheduled for later today between leftist chief Kamal Jumblatt and Christian leaders.

A previous attempt to get the wounded out of the camp, which has been under attack for a month, failed when both sides began shooting again before the evacuation could begin.

Arafat held a night-long emergency conference with his allies, the leftist Lebanese Moslems. He also held his second secret meeting in three days with a delegation from the right-wing Christian Phalange party, which has the largest Christian militia fighting in the 15-month-old war.

Both the joint Palestinian-Moslem command and the Phalange party announced that the meeting resulted in agreement to restore electricity to Beirut and to establish a "free zone" to restore communication between the Moslem and Christian sectors of the city.

The announcement said both sides would withdraw their fighters from the 100-yard-wide no man's land in which U.S. Ambassador Francis E. Meloy Jr., his economic counselor and their Lebanese chauffeur were captured last month prior to their murder.

The zone will be manned within 48 hours of the withdrawal by 1,300 Saudi Arabian and Sudanese troops of the Arab League peacekeeping force who have been standing by at Beirut airport, the announcement said.

Observers believed Arafat's decision indicated he was ready to bow to Syrian President Hafez Assad's demand that he and his leftist Lebanese Moslem allies stop shooting and negotiate a peace settlement satisfactory to Syria.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Embassy postponed indefinitely the evacuation of Americans and other foreigners scheduled for today because of fighting along the route to Damascus.

Authorities probe kidnaping, flooded with tips, names

CHOWCHILLA, Calif. (AP) — Authorities investigating the mass kidnaping of a busload of 26 school children say they are being flooded with tips and hope to have names and photographs of the three abductors by today.

"We've got so many leads, I can't say which one will lead to the breaking of this case," Alameda County Sheriff Tom Huchins said Monday.

Asked if the investigation was progressing satisfactorily, Madera County Sheriff Ed Bates said, "You'd better believe it."

Authorities said they were using computers to check many of the leads, including the descriptions of possible suspects and vehicles.

"There's a lot of brainstorming going on," said Alameda County Sheriff's Lt. Clayton Paxton. "Most of the work is being done over the telephones and with computers."

Two fresh leads came to investigators Monday.

Authorities also reported they had located some clothing taken from the victims by the kidnapers beside a highway near Saratoga, 150 miles northwest of this small farming community, where the 27 were abducted.

The masked trio hijacked the bus Thursday, left the 26 school children and the bus driver in an underground bunker in a gravel quarry at Livermore, 95 miles north of Chowchilla. The victims dug their way out and escaped Friday evening.

One new lead came from an unidentified former inmate at San Quentin prison who told Tulumne County Sheriff Jack Littoral "that while he was in the joint he knew of three or four guys who talked incessantly about a kidnap operation they intended to pull when they got out, in which they would use a group of children for hostages."

Investigators also checked on a report that a man tried to get an unlicensed van painted in Oakland on Monday, but "took off" when a suspicious shop

Reporter knew killer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona Republic reporter Don Bolles told detectives from his death bed the telephone call that sent the newspaper reporter back to his car moments before a bomb exploded under it was made by John Harvey Adamson, police said.

Detective Capt. Don Lozier said Monday the confirmation was obtained from Bolles the day after the June 2 blast. Bolles died 10 days later. Adamson was arrested on an open charge of murder about two hours after Bolles died.

Lozier said Bolles was able only to answer the questions by nodding or shaking his head.

"He nodded to identify a photograph of Adamson and when asked if he had gone to the Clarendon Hotel to meet Adamson," Lozier said.

Lozier said Bolles nodded when asked if Adamson was the man who called the hotel to postpone the interview.

Bolles had told colleagues he was going to the hotel to meet a man named Adamson who allegedly had information concerning a land deal involving prominent Arizonians. The man never appeared.

While Bolles was in the hotel, he received a telephone call and then returned to his car. A bomb exploded under the floorboards as he was backing from the parking space.

Advice

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: You once printed a letter telling girls who were in love with married men what to expect. You titled it "Never On Sunday." Please try to find it and run it again. I want to send it to my daughter. Thank you.

TEARING MY HAIR IN TULSA

DEAR TEARING: Here's the letter. I hope it helps:
DEAR ABBY: May I give your readers the benefit of my very valuable experience? I address this to any woman who is in love with a married man:

Never expect to see him on Sundays or holidays. Never call him at home. Don't ever expect him to take you out in public, but be prepared to entertain him at your place. He may bring a bottle or the steaks occasionally, but in actual dollars and cents, you will spend more on him than he'll spend on you.

Never depend on him in times of personal crisis. Don't believe him when he tells you that his wife is a shrew, cold, homely, too fat (or too thin), and she hasn't slept with him in 10 years.

Don't expect his wife to divorce him if she catches him. She knows that you aren't his first affair and won't be his last. Also, she's not about to give up her social status, financial security and retirement income because of you. However, her discovery will probably terminate his affair with you, so be prepared to get some new clothes, circulate and find another man whose wife is a shrew, cold, homely, too fat (or too thin), and hasn't slept with him for 10 years. Sign me...

HIS WIFE

DEAR ABBY: This may be the most unusual letter you've ever received. You may even toss it into the wastebasket thinking it's a put-on, but I assure you it is not.

I am a 42-year-old man who is marrying a 38-year-old woman. It's my first marriage and her second.

Please don't faint, Abby, but I am a virgin—if one refers to a man who has never had any sexual relations in his life as a virgin.

I know absolutely nothing about sex, and I'm scared to death that I will mess up on my honeymoon.

I am too ashamed to ask any of my close friends what to do. One day I tried to get some information from a casual acquaintance at work and he looked at me like I was nuts and said, "Just do what comes natural, man, do what comes natural." Then he walked away.

If I knew what was going to come natural I wouldn't be so worried.

Can you help me?

NERVOUS IN LOUISIANA

DEAR NERVOUS: Your family doctor, or any physician, will instruct you in the basics. Don't be ashamed and don't worry. Your bride has been married before, so if you forget your instructions, she'll be able to cue you.

DEAR ABBY: Please explain in easy pool-hall language just what people mean when they say they are "born again" or "twice-born." Thank you.

B.H.: CLAY CITY, ILLINOIS

DEAR B.H.: They mean that they have accepted Jesus Christ as their personal savior, and have put their faith and trust in Him.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband is 45 years old, 6 foot 3 and weighs 190 pounds. He runs about eight miles a week in four periods, swims a mile three times a week, plays tennis at least once a week, often two or three hours on Saturday and Sunday in summer.

I am very conscious of nutrition and he has a good diet. Even so, for a number of years he has been taking vitamin supplements, including extra vitamin C (500 milligrams per day) which I don't feel necessary in view of his balanced diet.

Recently he had a company physical and has received $35 worth of pills with no explanation except to take daily. He gets Cyclospasmol for his Raynaud's disease which I assume he will take only in coldest weather. The disease does not really bother him except that his fingers turn white when it is cold. He is to take Sterazolidin for his occasional complaints of tennis elbow, which has never been severe enough to prevent him from accepting any invitation to play. He also gets Colbenemid because on three separate occasions during a three week period his uric acid count has been high. He had been complaining about a sore second toe during the jogging and tennis.

The doctor who prescribed all these pills is a board-certified internist and undoubtedly capable. But I feel that he may be catering to mild hypochondria and I am somewhat concerned about the interaction of all these pills, since at the moment my husband is taking all three in addition to his vitamins. Have you any comment?

DEAR READER — Yes, I have a comment. I appreciate your concern but it is misplaced. It is easy for you to say your husband's white fingers in cold weather don't bother him but he may be a better judge of how his fingers feel. It so happens that Cyclospasmol is not effective if used sporadically as you suggest only in coldest weather.

Anyone, particularly a man, since men are more susceptible to its complications, with abnormally high uric acid levels should be taking medicine to control it. This goes double if the man has symptoms. Untreated high uric acid levels often lead to gradual changes that could be prevented by the good treatment your husband is receiving.

Your husband would not be the first person with some elbow problems who persists in playing tennis and that is no argument against him having medicines for it.

You needn't worry about the interaction of the various medicines and vitamins that your husband is taking. You are probably right that he doesn't need the extra vitamin C but in that amount it is not likely to hurt him either. I would be more concerned about the eggs you feed him regularly that you mentioned in the rest of your letter describing your healthy diet for him.

It sounds to me as if your husband is fortunate to have a good doctor who is doing his best to not only help your husband with his present problems but help keep him in good health for the future. You should be pleased, not concerned.

Polly's pointers

DEAR POLLY — When I need only a slice or two of onion, I slice off what is needed without peeling it and put the rest upside down in a saucer, cover with foil or plastic wrap and put in the refrigerator for future use. I do cucumbers and tomatoes the same way. They keep for days. — MRS. G.S.

DEAR POLLY — Lazy gardeners will find nothing works better than cardboard laid between the rows and around the plants. This is especially good for tomatoes. The cardboard has a four fold benefit — a clean place for the tomatoes to ripen, complete weed control, it lets moisture through but also keeps it in and lessens the times one must water the plants. Perhaps you are wondering where to get so much cardboard. Furniture stores or television shops are usually pleased to give it away. — MRS. D.N.P.

Polly will send you one of her "peachy" thank-you cards, ideal for framing or placing in your family scrapbook, if she uses your favorite Pointer, Peeve or Problem in her column. Write Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

War time fervor takes its toll

Hollywood's greatest love stories

By Dick Kleiner

Clark Gable and Carole Lombard's life together during the few short years they shared was more like the parts they played than the life of the usual Hollywood star couples. It was an endless round of romance. They were literally never apart for more than a few hours.

Pearl Harbor came. Like everyone else that Sunday they listened to the grim news on their radio. They could not know it then, but the war would spell the end to their idyllic love affair.

A month after the Japanese attack, Gable began another film, "Somewhere I'll Find You", a World War II adventure-romance with Lana Turner. He was restless and felt unpatriotic about being on a movie set while other men were fighting.

But it seemed as though he had no choice. He had written to President Franklin D. Roosevelt the day after Pearl Harbor volunteering his services.

The President had replied that he could serve his country best by staying right where he was. The morale of the people at home was important, too, and Gable's films were a tremendous factor in keeping up that morale.

So Gable had stayed and begun the film. Still he wasn't satisfied. Carole was torn, she wanted her man with her, safe and secure. But she also recognized the forces gnawing at him, the desire to do something more immediate and concrete than making love to Lana Turner in front of a motion picture camera.

"I've got to do something," Clark said, one evening. "Goddamn it, I feel so useless."

"All right," Carole said. "If you go to Washington and explain things, I'm sure they'll take you."

"Do you think they will, honestly?"

"Why wouldn't they? You'll look dreamy in a uniform."

She hated saying it, hated encouraging him, but she knew those were the words he wanted to hear. And she knew he would never be happy unless he was in uniform.

He flew to Washington the next day and volunteered. Again, they told him that he would be more valuable at home. But they did give him a mission and a promise. They requested that he spearhead a bond-selling drive and they promised that if he was needed later, they would call on him for active service.

So he came back home to Carole and the picture and he threw himself into the bond-selling campaign. He became chairman of Hollywood's Victory Committee, meaning that he arranged for stars to go on bond-selling tours.

"Let me go," Carole said. "Send me back to Indiana. I'll sell a million."

This would mean another separation, but he felt if his own wife was one of the first to go on tour, that would be an example for the other, less anxious members of Hollywood's star colony. So, one of the first tours arranged by Chairman Gable of the Victory Committee was to send the glamorous Carole Lombard to her home state, Indiana.

As predicted, she was a smash. She had said that she would sell a million dollars worth of war bonds, but she had underestimated her own sales ability. She sold more than two million.

She telegraphed Clark the happy news and added the words she knew he wanted to hear:

"Pappy, you'd better join this man's army."

Then, her job done, she was anxious to get back to Hollywood and her husband. The original plans for her tour included a return trip by train, but at the last moment she cancelled the train reservation and took a plane.

Gable was at the Los Angeles airport to meet her an hour before the plane was due. When the plane didn't arrive on time he started glancing anxiously at the big clock.

"Mr. Gable?" It was an airline official. "I'm sorry about this, but they told me to find you. There's been a slight delay with your wife's plane."

"How long a delay?"

"I honestly don't know. That's all they told me."

Eventually they came and told him that the plane had crashed near Las Vegas. That was all they could tell him.

He called his home, where a group had been waiting for a welcome home dinner party for Carole.

CLARK AND CAROLE: His greatest romance.

"Jean," Clark said to Jean Garceau, Carole's secretary who answered the phone.

"Ma's plane is down, but they won't tell me anything else."

Miss Garceau turned on the radio. The details were already being broadcast. She knew that Carole Lombard was probably dead long before Gable did.

He was frantic with worry. Then a studio representative appeared.

"Come with me, Clark," the studio man said. "I've chartered a plane. We'll go up to Las Vegas so you'll be closer to the scene. We'll find out the true story in Las Vegas."

But when Gable and the MGM people landed at the Las Vegas airport, they could learn nothing. They took him to a hotel. They waited hours. Then a message was brought from the scene and handed to Don McElwaine. His grim expression told the whole story.

"Bad news, Don?" Gable said.

"I'm afraid it's hopeless," McElwaine said.

"Oh God," Gable moaned, and collapsed.

When he recovered from his initial grief, Gable had to be sedated. Afterward, they flew back to Hollywood with her body.

During the funeral at Forest Lawn, Gable held up well. It was only later, back in the house they both loved so well, that he went to pieces.

What triggered the collapse was a note from Carole. She had left notes for him with Jean Garceau, whose instructions had been to give him one of the notes each day. At the time of the crash, there were two notes left.

After the funeral, when they had a moment together, she gave him the two final notes. He sat in the chair, opened them, read them, and then burst into tears.

Aside from that, he maintained a strong appearance. He did more comforting than being comforted. But when people tried to comfort him, he withdrew. He didn't want their sympathy. Alone, he could cope.

He didn't work for a long time. Production stopped on "Somewhere I'll Find You" until the day when he decided he had to do something, and reported back to the studio.

He was 41 when she died. After "Somewhere I'll Find You" was completed, he enlisted in the Air Force. His Air Force career was marked, some have reported, by displays of "suicidal courage."

After the war he moved on to many fine films, and to two other marriages. Many profess to see a resemblance between Carole and his last two wives. But if there was any resemblance it was only superficial. All three women were blonde, slender and attractive. But there were more differences than there were similarities.

There was only one Carole Lombard. She was, without a doubt, the greatest romance in the life of the screen's greatest romantic leading man.

The Stamp Act, which was one of the most disliked taxes forced on the colonists, was passed by the British Parliament in 1765, under it all legal papers, such as wills, deeds and contracts, licenses to sell certain goods, mortgages, college diplomas, almanacs and newspapers had to carry a government stamp on each sheet of paper.

Pets--for better health

By ROB WOOD

Associated Press Writer
COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) — A dog, a cat, perhaps a horse, may be the answer for some child with a deep psychological problem or an older person who lives in a world of loneliness.

Dr. William F. McCulloch, a professor of veterinary public health at Texas A&M University, said in a recent interview that a companion pet "may often prove to be the method that opens the door for those who are troubled and find difficulty in communicating."

The aid that animals can provide to the mentally troubled is only one of many research projects either underway or planned by the new Institute of Comparative Medicine, a joint project of the Texas A&M College of Veterinary Medicine and physicians at the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston.

McCulloch, recently named director of the institute, said a child who has problems "can often find something positive in a pet, which is friendly and wanting to be loved."

"And," he said, "a pet can teach a child responsibility, how to care for something that needs attention, that will listen without criticism, that will react to a touch or the sound of a voice."

The same will apply to those who are alone and seek companionship.

The Institute of Comparative Medicine also is probing into many of the diseases of man which are similar to those of animals.

McCulloch said the program "offers a unique biomedical research and educational approach to improve the health of humans of the animal kingdom. By studying animals suffering with disease problems similar to man is one of the most efficient and justifiable ways to develop methods for prevention and treatment for man's illness."

The medical college physicians and the veterinarians also will probe into such diseases as hypertension, heart disease, reproductive biology and genetics.

Amy would go to public school

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the Jimmy Carter family moves to Washington after the November elections, 8-year-old Amy Carter may be sent to the oldest public school in the District of Columbia.

In his speech accepting the Democratic presidential nomination, Carter was critical of "exclusive private schools" that allow children of the "political and economic elite" to avoid public schools that are considered dangerous or inferior.

And Rex Granum, the nominee's press director, says if Carter is elected, he will send Amy to public schools "as a statement of principle."

The White House is in the school district served by Stevens Elementary, a 108-year-old, three-story brick building in downtown Washington.

Built the year Ulysses S. Grant was elected president, the school is now in the shadow of modern glass and steel office buildings in downtown Washington. It has a tiny asphalt-paved playground and fronts on busy 21st Street about 1 1/2 blocks off Pennsylvania Avenue.

Standing about six blocks from the White House, the school is named for Thaddeus Stevens, an abolitionist congressman who proposed the impeachment of President Andrew Johnson.

Although Stevens is the oldest school building in operation in the District of Columbia, its brick front is brightly painted, its rooms have been refurbished, and are large and carpeted, and school officials say its student body is among the most diverse in the city.

During the last school year Stevens had 134 pupils, fewer than half of them black. Most of the remainder of Stevens' pupils came from Asia or Latin America, and only 10 were American-born whites.

"I just don't see where there's a better school," said Jane Harley, a counselor at Stevens. "I think we have as much to offer as any other school she might go to."

If Carter is elected, and if he does follow through on his plan to send his daughter to public schools, Amy will be the first child of a president to attend a public school since 1906. That was when one of Theodore Roosevelt's sons attended District schools.

The final say on which District of Columbia school Amy Carter would attend would be up to the Secret Service, which would make its decision on grounds of security.

School board member William Treanor, who represents the Stevens zone, doesn't see a security problem.

"I know the building pretty well and I don't think it would be very hard to satisfy the Secret Service," said Treanor. "It's easy to control people going in and out."

At wit's end

So many people have been asking me if I am playing better tennis this year.

Mainly, they have been the people who played me last year.

I am happy to report that although my form is much the same, I have picked up a few tricks of the court that I have seen professionals use, which is bound to improve my game.

I have finally mastered what to do with the second tennis ball. Having small hands, I was becoming terribly self-conscious about keeping it in a can in the car while I served the first one. I noted some women tucked the second ball just inside the elastic leg of their tennis panties. I tried, but found the space already occupied by a leg. Now I simply drop the second ball down my cleavage, giving me a chest that often stuns my opponent throughout an entire set.

Next, I have learned how to stall, thus throwing my entire opponent's game off. It's called the old tie - the shoe - trick. When your opponent is ready to serve, simply drop to your knees, untie your shoe, rearrange its tongue, and tie it again. Baseball players use the old stall all the time. (Cincinnati Reds pitcher, Pat Zachry recently swallowed his chewing tobacco and threw up against a dugout wall. I haven't mastered at what hour I can throw up. Sometimes, it is during a return.)

Another play is the rearrange - the - the strings number. Never take the rap for a bad return or no return. Whenever you hit a ball into the net or miss it entirely, bring the game to a grinding halt by checking the strings of your racket, spending sometimes as much as five minutes separating them and testing their strength. This absolves you of any of the responsibility for a bad shot.

Forget all you have been told about concentration. It is overrated. Often, when there is time during one of my lobs, I yell across the net, "Your zipper is open," and have not only been ignored, but soundly punished for my good deed.

Probably my greatest accomplishment this year has been my skill at learning to play the game called, "Run Around the Backhand."

Early in my tennis career, I used to think when a ball landed to the left of me I had to use my backhand to return it. I have since learned that anything is better, including straddling a 15-foot cyclone fence.

No doubt about it — every day in every way, my game grows stronger. I saw one enthusiast the other day playing with his racket out of the press. I'll have to try that.

14-year-Romanian gets 2nd perfect score

By BOB GREEN
AP Sports Writer

MONTREAL (AP) — The very imperfect Olympics — with all its troubles and strife, fears and police forces, threats and boycotts — suddenly has been graced by perfection.

It's a tiny package, this little bit of perfection, standing only 4-foot-11 and weighing in at 88 pounds of pure grace and rhythm, topped by a pony-tail and occasionally spiced by a saucy gesture.

It's magnificent little Nadia Comaneci, a 14-year-old Romanian girl, who has captured the imagination of the world, one billion of whose people have watched on television her performances that are truly unbelievable.

She opened the Games with a perfect score of 10 — the first ever achieved in the Olympics — on the uneven parallel bars Sunday. And she followed that with a mind-boggling, second perfect score on the hazardous balance beam yesterday. And still she wasn't done. There was more to come — more of that which is supposed to be unattainable by mortals.

She recorded still another perfect score last night in optional performances on the uneven parallel bars.

"I was very glad," she said. "But it wasn't the first time. I've done it 19 times."

But no one had ever done it in the Olympics. Her spectacular performances brought to their feet a wildly-cheering crowd of 18,000, some of them almost fearful in their adoration of this flying, twisting little girl who usually wears a poker face devoid of expression.

But she can, and does on perfect occasions, flash that appealing, beguiling smile of youth.

Her fantastic displays overshadowed another 1-2-3 sweep by the American men's swimming team, this in the 200-meter freestyle.

She was more impressive than the powerful East Germans who have won every event on the women's swimming program so far.

She made secondary a cheating incident that resulted in the disqualification of a Russian star in the Modern Pentathlon.

World records fell in profusion. But what are world records when perfection is offered?

The Russians won the team gold in the women's gymnastics, but it was almost overlooked in the outpouring of praise and affection for Nadia, who is now the overwhelming favorite to take the individual all-around title Wednesday night.

Long John Naber was the star of the American swim team that collected two more gold medals and helped push the United States' accumulation for the Games to three gold, four silver and two bronze. East Germany leads with four gold, three silver, three bronze. Russia has three gold and one bronze.

The 6-foot-6 Naber, a senior at Southern California, won the 100 backstroke in world record time of 55.49, then just missed in his bid for a double-gold evening. He was out-touched by Bruce Furniss, Santa Ana, Calif., an hour later in the men's 200 freestyle.

Furniss won in world record time of 1:50.29. Naber was timed in 1:50:50 and Jim Montgomery, Madison, Wis., made it the second American sweep of the Games with his 1:50:58 for third.

"I'm very glad," said the gregarious Naber. "I couldn't have swum a better backstroke race."

No one ever has. He was the first to crack 56 seconds in the event and foiled East Germany's Roland Matthes' hopes of winning a gold in three consecutive Olympics. Matthes, the world record holder until these Games started, finished third behind Peter Rocca, Orinda, Calif., and said he wouldn't compete at the event again.

John Hencken, Santa Clara, Calif., also set a world record with a clocking of 1:03.02 in leading the qualifying for the men's 100 breaststroke and prompted a happy coach Doc Counsilman to observe: "We'll just have to wait till it's over and count the medals."

The East German women, like the American men, remained unbeaten with two more swimming triumphs. Andrea Pollack led an East German sweep of the women's 200 butterfly in Olympic record time of 2:11.41. Korneli Ender, Matthes' fiancée, won the 100 freestyle in 55.65, a world record. Petra Primer of East Germany was second and Enith Brigitha of Holland third.

Bulgarian Norair Nurikian won the bantamweight weightlifting gold with a world record combined lift of 577.5 pounds. Grzegorz Czuma of Poland was second and Kenkichi Ando of Japan third.

In the only other gold medal event, Romania finished second to Russia in the women's gymnastics and East Germany took the bronze. It was Romania's highest finish ever and Russia's seventh consecutive team title.

Russia's hopes for a repeat team title in the Modern Pentathlon took a severe jolt, however, when Boris Onischenko was disqualified by a jury of opinion for using an epee that had double wiring in it and could register a touch even though he had not touched his opponent.

A look at Olympics past

Olga Fikotova Connolly won her gold medal in the 1966 games in Melbourne as a Czechoslovak citizen. She met and married an American Olympian there and has since participated in four Games. In 1964, the Olympics were in Tokyo and the competition began to change rapidly. Human emotions ran high at the Mexico City 1968 games. The 1972 Olympics in Munich were marred with the murder of athletes.

Zimmer replaces Johnson

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — Don Zimmer, replacing fired 1975 American League Manager of the year Darrell Johnson, says he would be "the happiest man in the world" if the Boston Red Sox continue to show the same fighting spirit they displayed Monday night in a 4-3 loss to the Texas Rangers.

"This was the first time in my life I've been on a losing team that I liked what I saw," said Zimmer, who will serve as interim Red Sox manager until the end of the season. "The players acted in the dugout tonight like a team that is fighting for a pennant. That's what I want to see and that's what I saw."

The fact that Boston is not fighting for a pennant is precisely why Johnson is no longer with the team.

The Red Sox, who took the Cincinnati Reds down to the ninth inning of the seventh game of the World Series, were solid favorites to win the American League East again. Instead, they are languishing in fifth place, 14 games behind the New York Yankees.

"The way the team has been going lately, I don't blame (General Manager) Dick O'Connell or the Red Sox one bit," Johnson said of his firing. "In my opinion it was time for a change."

He attributed his downfall to the Red Sox "not scoring runs the way they are capable of and the way they did last year."

Johnson said he would not change the way he handled the team if he played the season over, but Zimmer implemented some immediate changes in the starting lineup.

He said he plans to keep Steve Dillard at third base on a regular basis and play Carl Yastrzemski at first base on the road and in left field at Fenway Park.

The Red Sox fought back from a 3-0 deficit to tie Monday's game on a two-run homer by Cecil Cooper and a solo shot

Astros win in Montreal

MONTREAL (AP) — Houston Manager Bill Virdon figures his Astros have all the ingredients to be winners, which is what they were once again Monday night against the Montreal Expos.

"We're getting good pitching, our clutch hitting is better and our defense has improved a lot since the start of the season," Virdon said after the Astros defeated the Expos 3-1.

"You need all of those things in order to be a winning club," said Virdon. "Without it, you don't stand a chance of going very far. Mind you, we've still got a long way to go. We don't know exactly how good our hitting and pitching is yet because we've still got a lot of good ball clubs left to play. But, we're a helluva lot better than we were."

The Astros pushed across two runs in the top of the seventh inning to break a 1-1 tie and move two games above the 500 mark in the NL's West Division.

J.R. Richard, the 6-foot-8 hard-throwing Houston right-hander pitched a five-hitter for the victory to even his record at 10-10. He walked five and struck out seven. The Montreal

Red Sox "not scoring runs the way they are capable of and the way they did last year."

Johnson said he would not change the way he handled the team if he played the season over, but Zimmer implemented some immediate changes in the starting lineup.

He said he plans to keep Steve Dillard at third base on a regular basis and play Carl Yastrzemski at first base on the road and in left field at Fenway Park.

Pampa all-stars fall in early state play

SEMINOLE — Uvalde scored all three of its runs in the first inning and fought off a Pampa rally in the seventh to take a 3-2 decision in the first-round game at the State Babe Ruth Junior Division Tournament Monday afternoon at the Seminole High School baseball field.

The Pampa all-stars will face Graham, a 5-2 loser to defending champion Plainview Monday, at 8 p.m. today in the double-elimination tournament.

In Monday's only other game, host Tri-City (Seminole, Denver City and Seagraves) crushed Lubbock West 10-0. Tri-City will tackle Plainview at 5:30 p.m. today, while Uvalde will meet Post (which drew a first-round bye) at 3 p.m.

Jess Scott doubled with two outs for Uvalde in the bottom of the first and scored when Jesse Garcia reached on an error by shortstop Joe Jeffers. Garcia went to second on the play and then scored on a single by Blake Underwood.

Pitcher Ray Flores doubled to knock in Underwood. Pampa pitcher Steve Stout got out of the inning by throwing out Flores at third base after Richard Olivay pushed a soft dribbler down the third-base line.

Pampa scored once in the fourth as Richard Wuest drove in Bobby Taylor with a double and once in the sixth as Rick Dougherty singled in Taylor with the bases loaded.

Greg Koch tried to reach from first on Dougherty's single and was tagged out in a rundown. On the play, second baseman David Salinas threw out Wuest at the plate for a double play.

Uvalde thwarted another Pampa scoring threat in the top of the seventh after Kerry Adair led off with a single and was safe at second on a bunt by Kennan Henderson, who reached first.

Flores got Jeffers to pop out to centerfield and Stout to ground into a double play.

"We had opportunities to win it. I was disappointed in our baserunning," Pampa coach Melvin Davis said. "Our defense played real good... Stout pitched a good game after the first inning."

Uvalde managed four hits off Stout in the first and only one other hit in the game off 6-4 Pampa righthander. Stout walked two and struck out two.

Flores also yielded five hits and walked four while striking out seven.

Pampa lost to Dumas 7-4 in the first round of the District 1 Tournament two weeks ago at Pampa and then came back in the losers' bracket to clip Dumas twice in the finals for the title.

"It's going to be tough to do that again," said Davis, whose all-stars must duplicate that feat to qualify for the regional tournament in two weeks at Santa Fe.

"I think we can, though. We've got a better team than what we showed today," Davis said.

The finals are slated for 5:30 p.m. Friday.

Olympic's shooting stars

MONTREAL (AP) — Where's Nadia? Anybody seen Olga? What's the chance of a picture of Teofilo? Let us know if you run into Iouliaka. You'll recognize her easily — she's 7-2.

They're the shooting stars of the XXI Olympics. Everybody's straining for a look at them. You may get a quick look. Then, wish. They're gone.

Nadia Comaneci, the 14-year-old Romanian wonder child of gymnastic long horse and bars, in three days has established herself as the undisputed queen of the Games.

She has spectators and untold millions of television fans gushing just as the Soviet Union's whirling watch fob, Olga Korbut, did at Munich four years ago. Olga remains one of the Games' premier attractions.

To these gymnastic tykes have been added the names of Teofilo Stevenson, Cuba's Olympic heavyweight boxing champion, and Iouliaka Serenova, Russia's 7-foot-2 Amazon of the basketball boards, as the athletes people most want to see and talk to — but can't.

Of the 3,000 newsmen gathered here from throughout the world, probably 2,900 have been scurrying around, knocking on official doors and seeking an audience.

It's been the most frustrating chase of great spectacle.

Through the early days, Stevenson has been the most elusive.

Harrah gets three

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — Toby Harrah says he still doesn't feel right at the plate, but his three hits Monday night — including a game winner — served notice that the groove is somewhere close by for the Texas Rangers' shortstop.

"I got three hits but I'm still not swinging the bat right," said Harrah, the American League's all-star shortstop, after Texas beat the Boston Red Sox 4-3 on his run-scoring single in the 11th inning.

The loss ruined the debut of Don Zimmer as interim manager of the Red Sox. He replaces Darrell Johnson.

Batting over 300 with more than 40 runs batted in two weeks before the All-Star break, Harrah has been almost totally unproductive since then. His RBI total is still under 50 and his average has fallen into the .270s.

But after a one-day rest, Harrah was back in the lineup Monday night. His first two hits caused no damage, but his two-out single to left field in the bottom of the 11th scored Gene Clines from second base to end the game.

The hit was the first off Red Sox reliever Jim Willoughby, 2-6, who entered the game in the ninth. But the Rangers, who left 15 runners on base, had squandered several chances as Willoughby walked six batters.

Despite Harrah's late heroics that gave Mike Bacsik, 1-1, the victory with one inning of relief, the talk of the Texas clubhouse after the game was starter Tommy Boggs, who made his major league debut.

Boggs, 20, Texas' No. 1 draft choice in 1974 from Austin, Tex., shut out Boston on five hits for the first five innings before giving up homers in the sixth and seventh frames, respectively, to Cecil Cooper and Dwight Evans, tying the score 3-3.

"I got tired," said Boggs. "Normally I pitch a five-day rotation and this was just the fourth day. The humidity here was a lot higher than it is in California and it was sapping my strength."

Texas called up Boggs Sunday from its farm team in Sacramento.

Juniors start match play

Match play in the Pampa Junior High Tennis Tournament will begin at 9 a.m. Friday on the Pampa High School tennis courts, according to Kent King, Pampa High School tennis coach.

King said the tournament, which will include divisions for players 12- and -under and 14- and -under, is open to both boys and girls. Entry fees are $2.50 per person per event, he added.

The tournament will feature both singles and doubles competitions.

Youth wishing to enter should contact King at 665-2890 before the noon Thursday entry deadline.

Awards will be presented to winning players. The tournament will end Saturday.

Viking I on Mars

Viking I, the most ambitious unmanned space probe yet launched, landed this morning on Mars, 200 million miles away. The spacecraft was launched last summer and traveled a curved path 600 million miles, following the planet as it moved in its orbit. Mars received, at its greater distance from the sun, less solar energy than the earth, and is almost one-half the size of this planet. Viking I was expected to send pictures of the Martian terrain back to earth today as scientists probe for signs of life and other features of the planet. A second spacecraft, Viking II, is en route to Mars and is scheduled to arrive in early August.

Lo-Vaca may be reconstructed

HOUSTON (AP) — Coastal States Gas Corp. has proposed to restructure its troubled subsidiary, Lo-Vaca Gathering Co. into a totally independent company and to carry out a gas search program costing as much as $230 million during a 15-year period.

The plan, aimed at settling more than $1.4 billion in lawsuits involving Lo-Vaca, also called for Oscar S. Wyatt Jr., Coastal States chairman, to dispose of the new company stock to which he would be entitled.

The company announcement Monday said the proposal is conditioned on satisfactory rates being established by the Texas Railroad Commission so Lo-Vaca and Rio Grande Valley Gas Co. could continue to sell gas at a price that assured their continuing viability.

Don Newquist, a Lo-Vaca vice president, said a satisfactory rate would be equal to or more than is now paid by customers.

The Railroad Commission has scheduled a July 22 public hearing on the proposal.

Harry L. Blomquist Jr., Coastal States president, said some significant problems still must be resolved and many other customers to be included before a final agreement is reached.

Blomquist said if the plan is approved in principle it will be followed by further negotiations in an effort to reach definitive final agreements. These would be submitted to all parties, including certain Coastal States security holders, for a final yes or no.

The restructuring plan calls for Coastal States to assume existing debts of about $108 million and to insure unsecured promissory notes of an estimated $120 million during the next 15 years.

The new company would issue $1.15 million in preferred stock to be placed in trust for the benefit of Lo-Vaca customers.

This stock would have a dividend rate of 8 1/2 per cent and initially, have 20 per cent of the voting rights in the new company.

Ultimately, the preferred stock would be sold or redeemed with the proceeds, together with the dividends paid on the stock, distributed to Lo-Vaca customers.

All of the common stock of the new company would be spun off to Coastal States shareholders.

Wyatt, a major stockholder of Coastal States, has agreed to place his interest in the new company either in a trust to be given to charities, primarily in Lo-Vaca's area of operation, or distribute it to Coastal States shareholders.

Company spokesmen said it would be premature to predict whether the proposal will be approved in principle by the many parties or that a final settlement will be consummated.

The Coastal States announcement made no mention of those parties involved in the negotiations, but Lo-Vaca's major customers include San Antonio and its Public Service Board, Corpus Christi and Central Power & Light Co., the Lower Colorado River Authority, Austin, and Brownsville.

The Austin City Council will meet in executive session Wednesday to discuss the Coastal States proposal and also Thursday's meeting of the railroad commission.

Don Butler, the city's utility attorney, said Monday he was "not in a position to say" whether he will recommend city council approval.

"I think we need to do some careful examination of it," he said.

Railroad Commission members Mack Wallace and Ben Ramsey declined comment on the proposal.

Charles Herring, general manager of the LCRA, said he had not seen the plan and that the LCRA board has no plans to meet to discuss it.

Blomquist pointed out that the proposed settlement cannot become effective without favorable rulings by the Internal Revenue Service and other regulatory agencies.

"Among other things, the securities of the newly-created company have to be formally registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission," he said.

The proposed settlement included these other major provisions:

—All lawsuits by the Lo-Vaca customers would be stayed until the plan is implemented, at which time all claims and lawsuits will be released or dismissed.

—Coastal States Producing Co. and certain of its subsidiaries, including Lo-Vaca, would be restructured into a totally independent new company which would own all the Texas gas pipeline assets now held by the producing companies and its own subsidiaries. It also would own Coastal States Gas Corp.'s Rio Grande Valley Gas Co. division and certain Texas lignite leases.

—Non-utility assets now owned by Coastal States Gas Producing Co. would be transferred to Coastal States Gas Corp. at fair market value, including the refinery at Corpus Christi, related crude oil and products pipelines, underground storage and fractionation facilities, marketing activities and oil and gas producing properties.

Argentine guerrilla dies

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Army troops killed Argentina's most-wanted guerrilla, Roberto Santucho, and his second in command, police sources reported.

Intelligence officials said the slaying Monday night of Santucho and Enrique Gorriaran Merlo might be a death blow to their Marxist People's Revolutionary Army (ERP), considered the more important of the two leftist guerrilla organizations at war with the government.

Security forces killed Juan N. Carrizo, the fourth man in the ERP high command, earlier this month and captured a number of records and documents of the organization. The ERP's third in command, Domingo Mena, is still at large.

The other leftist guerrilla army is the Montoneros, a radical offshoot of the Peronist movement. Right-wing terrorists are also extremely active, but the leftists are their targets, and the government does nothing to curb them.

Santucho, a 42-year-old former accountant, was the founder of the ERP and was also reputed to head a center for international terrorism in Paris.

He and Gorriaran Merlo, 34, were reported killed when troops stormed an ERP hideout just north of Buenos Aires. Other guerrillas and two army officers reportedly died in the attack.

Army spokesmen would neither confirm nor deny the report. They said a communique was being prepared and released an interim statement saying an army captain was killed Monday night. It gave no details.

The ERP first surfaced in 1970 with an attack on a police post in the industrial city of Rosario. In recent years, the organization has collected millions of dollars in ransom for kidnaped foreign executives and has harassed the army and police with daring frontal assaults and sabotage.

Estimates of the ERP's strength range from 500 to more than 2,000 well-trained guerrillas, with thousands more sympathizers to provide aid and cover.

The latest major attack attributed to it was the assassination June 18 of Police Chief Cesar Cardozo, who was blown up by a bomb reportedly placed under his bed by his daughter's best friend.

More than 70 suspected leftist guerrillas have been killed this month, and well over 700 persons have died in political violence this year.

New ABC head

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The Alcoholic Beverage Commission has its fourth administrator in less than two years—Sherman McBeath, chief of law enforcement.

McBeath, a 19-year veteran of the agency, succeeds Luke Robinson, who resigned under fire June 28.

Commission Chairman Tom Gordon of Abilene and Commissioner Ed Harrelle of San Antonio announced the appointment Monday. Commissioner R. L. Thornton of Dallas missed the meeting, reportedly because of a long-planned fishing trip.

Robinson quit after Harrelle, appointed this year by Gov. Dolph Briscoe, said he would vote to fire the controversial administrator if the question arose.

The commission also received from industry spokesmen proposed guidelines on enforcement of the law prohibiting control by an out-of-state corporation of a business with an ABC permit.

Wrote off millions in questionable loans

FBI unravels record of defunct bank

By RICK SCOTT
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The FBI is unraveling records of a now defunct Carrizo Springs bank which investigators say wrote off a fortune in questionable loans.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) began paying off anxious bank customers last week after closure of the Citizens State Bank in Carrizo Springs, an isolated ranching town about 100 miles southwest of San Antonio.

But, meanwhile, puzzled examiners worked behind closed doors to determine why the bank had operated as government probers say it had.

Examiners found evidence of more than $2 million in loans to the bank's principal owner, his family and associates. Big loans also were made to borrowers hundreds of miles away who were not bank depositors.

Officials wrote off, for example, $262,000 in loans to an Eagle Pass gift shop operated by the bank owner's wife. They wrote off more than $100,000 in loans to the secretary of the bank owner's brother.

Also written off were $77,314 in loans to a man identified as a U.S. Customs agent. Collateral for this loan was a private airplane which lacked a title search or federal registration, and a 1974 automobile.

The bank, with assets of about $14 million, was declared insolvent and closed June 28 by State Banking Commissioner Robert Stewart. The assets were turned over to the FDIC for liquidation.

Stewart moved to close the bank, larger of two in Carrizo Springs, after a two-week probe by state and federal examiners.

Those examiners, according to documents filed in state court at Laredo, found more than $3 million loans which they "classified"—meaning examiners believed they were shaky, dangerous or uncollectable.

The examiners also reported the bank's account books were out of balance by more than half a million dollars.

Controlling stock in the bank was purchased late last year by Enrique Salinas, an Eagle Pass businessman, from a San Antonio control group.

Little is known about Salinas. His financial statements indicate he has large land holdings in Mexico. He has been unavailable for comment since the bank closed.

In April this year, Salinas also gained control of Carrizo Spring's only other bank, Union State Bank. It was purchased from a Dallas control group and is in good financial shape, examiners report.

At the time Salinas took over the now-closed Citizens State Bank, examiners already had expressed concern about the institution.

An examination report in October 1975 said the number of classified loans was "extremely excessive." These loans accounted for nearly 28 per cent of the bank's portfolio and had shown "a large increase" since the previous examination.

The examination report added:

"Most of the classified loans were to out-of-territory borrowers and members of the bank's official family or control group. These type of loans have caused the bank extensive problems and losses and indicates an abuse by some of the directors of their position with the bank."

Most of these loans to bank officials were unsecured, meaning the bank had no collateral to back them up in case of default, the report showed.

The practice of making these so-called "insider loans" to bank officials apparently continued and grew after Salinas took control of the bank.

Examiners, in their report just before the bank closed last month, believed as much as $2.1 million in Citizens State loans had been made to Salinas, his family and associates, records indicate.

Among those receiving loans from Citizens State Bank was former Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes, now in the construction business at Brownwood.

Bank examiners said an unsecured $9,500 loan to Barnes last year was an example of lending to out-of-territory borrowers who were not bank depositors. Examiners said this was contrary to the bank's stated policy.

Barnes, who said the loan has been repaid, told the Associated Press the money was used for in-territory purposes.

"The money was used for cattle. I have some cattle in the feedlots of South Texas in that immediate area (near Carrizo Springs)," said Barnes. He said he also is working on several construction projects in the Eagle Pass area, including a shopping center and a planned apartment complex.

The bank officers in that bank should have explained to the examiners that I'm doing business in that part of the state," Barnes added in a telephone interview.

Part of the probe now under way at the bank is to determine whether legal loan limits were violated. Under state law, the bank was limited to $300,000 in loans to any one person or company.

Reports entered into court testimony show that examiners classified more than $1 million in loans to Salinas, his wife, his two brothers and their businesses. Of that amount, examiners classified more than $800,000 as loss.

Examiners said they were unable to separate the money going to the Salinas group. Their report said in part that "most of their (Salinas family) assets are held in Mexico and are mingled together."

The examiners also said they believed some of the family's listed assets were overvalued or nonexistent.

In determining Salinas' financial strength, examiners relied on a financial statement dated last February, according to the examination records. The statement listed Salinas' net worth at $8.8 million.

Bank examiners reported finding references to a $40,000-acre ranch in Mexico for Salinas and another reference to a 50,000-acre ranch. Locations of the ranches were not known.

As examples of the types of loans recently ruled shaky or uncollectable by examiners:

—A $77,314 loan on April 26, 1976, to a Jesus R. Davis, address not listed. "It was determined that a portion of the proceeds of the loan went to a brother of Salinas," the examination report said. "The bank has no credit information on the maker (borrower)," the report added.

—$162,000 in loans to Bensal Co., owned by Salinas. Examiners said the collateral once held for these loans had been released.

—$262,000 in loans to Galeria, Inc., an Eagle Pass gift shop owned by Salinas' wife. These loans were classified as loss.

—$35,000 in loans to Salinas' wife, classified as substandard.

—$127,500 in loans to Salinas, classified as a loss.

Additionally loans were written off to both of Salinas' brothers and to the secretary of one brother.

Arthur Mitchell of Austin, lawyer for Salinas, says that Salinas offered to pay off the loans but state officials would not give him time to do this.

Mitchell has battled to keep the bank's assets from liquidation but so far has lost each court fight.

He argued that state banking commissioner Stewart illegally turned over the bank's assets to the FDIC while the closing of the bank is under court appeal. Mitchell has indicated he may sue the FDIC to halt liquidation pending final outcome of the case.

Salinas also is involved in legal disputes which concern the agreements made to purchase the Union State Bank.

The FBI is investigating the bank for possible banking law violations and fraud, according to FBI Special-Agent-in-Charge Lee Colwell of San Antonio.

Ford says pardon right

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford says he was right to pardon Richard Nixon in the wake of the Watergate scandals and that the voters will decide if the pardon should be a campaign issue.

Ford was jovial, talking like he had the nomination of his party sewed up, as he held a news conference on the White House lawn Monday.

But Nixon's name and the word Watergate kept popping up, both at the news conference and at the nearby offices of the AFL-CIO, which cited the pardon as one reason in explaining why the labor federation will support Democratic nominee Jimmy Carter over Ford.

Pressed by reporters, Ford said his decision to pardon Nixon was best for the nation. And he added, "I would do it again."

Democrats have raised the pardon and the memory of the Watergate scandals in launching their campaign to take the White House.

Ronald Reagan last week condemned the Watergate comments made at the Democratic National Convention as "brutal." He also said, however, that the pardon could hurt Republicans in the fall if Ford is the party's nominee.

But Ford indicated it would be the voters who would ultimately pass judgment on his pardon of Nixon.

"I think the American people will make the decision, not me, myself, whether it will be an issue or not," Ford said.

"I decided to grant the pardon in the national interest. At that time, the United States was faced with serious economic problems and we were still involved in a long and difficult war in Southeast Asia. We could not be involved in the Nixon matter and concentrate fully on the more important matters. I decided in the national interest, I would do it again."

Ford said he didn't like a Senate Watergate reform bill because it would allow federal judges to appoint special prosecutors to investigate wrongdoing by government officials without the president's approval. Ford's plan calls for a permanent special prosecutor, to be appointed by the president. He said such a prosecutor could not be fired except "for extraordinary improprieties."

Aliens returned home

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first of more than 15,000 Mexican illegal aliens were to be returned to their home today by commercial airlines in the Immigration Service's $2 million program.

Immigration Commissioner Leonard F. Chapman announced the plan Monday and said the program is designed to discourage Mexicans from making repeated efforts to enter the United States illegally.

Chapman said more than 15,000 illegal aliens will be returned to the interior of Mexico within the next few months on the scheduled flights with non-stop destinations.

As part of the program, the aliens returned to the interior will be fingerprinted to help authorities determine whether they make their way back into the United States.

Immigration authorities also will begin fingerprinting about 5 per cent of all illegal aliens apprehended at major illegal entry points along the U.S.-Mexican border.

Balance checkbook, complete tax forms

Schools teach survival skills for life

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — In five years, Pennsylvania high school graduates may be showing employers and colleges a list of skills they've accomplished instead of letter grades.

The list would be part of their school records. It could show ability to read and write at 12th grade levels and proficiency in balancing a checkbook, computing interest, purchasing insurance and completing tax forms.

It's all part of a state government program to prepare pupils for the outside world. Some call it competency-based education and it's catching on to one degree or another, across the country.

Educators want schools to teach skills rather than just subjects because too many high school graduates lack the skills needed for life's daily decisions, they say.

"Students need to know that if you can't read a newspaper you aren't going to make it in this society," says Pennsylvania's Education Secretary John C. Pittenger. "If you can't fill out a job application you are headed for disaster. If you don't have the computational skills to take out a mortgage, handle a checking account or buy insurance, life is going to be one long headache."

About a dozen districts will be selected this fall to include in their curriculums the survival skills needed in the outside world. The districts also would upgrade teaching of basic reading, writing and math.

Within five years the state will require every school district to incorporate new course material into teaching programs. Eventually, the decision to award diplomas may depend on pupils' abilities to read and write at acceptable levels, and to competently handle survival skills.

A proposed new school code leaves open the question of making pupil competency in specified areas a graduation requirement.

Rep. Samuel E. Hayes Jr., a member of the House Education Committee, said those who drafted the legislation never intended the section on survival skills to prevent graduation.

State government educators say they favor promoting, evaluating and graduating pupils based on their demonstrated competencies. They feel it's meaningless to continue awarding diplomas just because pupils complete a specified number of English, math and social studies courses.

There's no debate among the drafters and the educators over the need to teach survival skills.

Among the principal boosters of the concept are Pennsylvania school children.

A pupil advisory board that offers the pupil viewpoint to Pittenger said in a committee report:

"There is a growing skepticism over the value of the traditional system. Educators, taxpayers and employers are questioning the value of the high school diploma. It is imperative that we re-evaluate our system and establish new outcomes for education."

The pupils chose a dozen areas where pupils must demonstrate competency to graduate. They added seven life experiences that pupils must participate in before earning a diploma.

The competency areas ranged from traditional reading, writing and mathematics to shopping, swimming, simple electrical repair, politics and the law.

The experiences would involve care of children, participation in sports, exposure to art, speaking to a group, working with a group on a common task, job training and working with foreign languages.

Some competencies would be taught in the traditional classroom. Others would be learned in the community.

The proposed school code asks the state to devise ways of measuring pupil competency. A record would be kept of skills attained by each pupil, thus telling the state, the district and the individual how the new concept was working.

Charles Lohin, principal of McCaskey High School in Lancaster, said the skills list could be an advantage to the pupil.

"I think it's more meaningful for a student to leave the school at a certain level and to an employer or a college and be able to say: 'Here is actually what I can do. Here's evidence that I can do it,' as opposed to 'Here is my A or B and you decide what that means.'"

Frank Manchester, state commissioner of basic education, said once school districts meet the minimum requirements, they could tailor competency-based education to their own community needs.

In districts with a strong family and church environment, pupils can learn to balance checkbooks and do comparison shopping from their parents, he said. Where strong family ties are lacking, a teacher might have to take pupils to the supermarket.

The Lancaster School District is already into a competency program.

For example, Maria Morales, a junior at McCaskey High, filled out this year's income tax form for her mother, who only speaks Spanish. She learned how to do it in class.

Patti Leonard, another McCaskey junior, was hired to run rides at an amusement park. She won out over several friends, she said, because she learned in school how to conduct herself during job interviews.

"A lot of kids graduating are just sliding by," Maria said.

Pupils are learning to complete tax forms, balance checkbooks, read insurance policies and fill out job applications, among other skills.

New course material is under development, using a survey of employers and parents who told the district what they expected of graduates.

One of McCaskey's most popular electives is "Practical English." In that class Maria Morales learned to handle her mother's income tax and Patti Leonard discovered what to expect at job interviews.

The teacher, Nancy Shackford, also taught her pupils to plan a family budget. She issues them "paychecks," and has the pupils allocate realistic amounts for rent, utilities, food, spending money, bus fare and savings.

Chaplain finds questions difficult on death row

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — During the 12-year hibernation of the death penalty in the United States, many persons have forgotten the trauma of an execution but not the Rev. Clyde Johnston.

One of Johnston's first duties as prison chaplain at the Texas Department of Corrections here in 1961 was to visit a homosexual scheduled to die in the electric chair for killing his lover.

"The first day I walked down on the row, he looked at me with all the confidence in the world," Johnston said. "He said, 'You're the new chaplain. Tell me, what chance does a homosexual have with God?'"

Johnston said he never had even pondered the question. He said he found that men on Death Row have a way of asking questions for which he had no ready answers.

"All I could do was answer him honestly," Johnston said. "I told him that I believed homosexuality to be an inadequate expression of sex but God can forgive it just like any other wrong."

"He responded well and we had a good rapport until he walked through that green door to the chair."

Johnston, who chose prison work to help salvage lives, counseled with 13 other men who died in the electric chair during the next three years.

Johnston has not had to counsel prisoners headed for the electric chair since 1964 but a recent Supreme Court ruling has once again opened that green door.

The chaplain hasn't forgotten the trauma. Some were strong to the end. Others were basket cases.

"I learned that I really did not have to get them ready to die," Johnston said. "The chair was doing that for me. They prepared themselves as though they were making a boat trip to Europe, getting all business concluded here."

"For the strong ones, I would help with last minute arrangements—mailing letters. For the weak ones it was a matter of dealing with their anxieties and unresolved guilt by letting them talk out their fears."

He recalled one condemned man who was so scared officials feared he might actually die of fright in his cell before he could be executed.

Despite such fear, Johnston said, he never saw one struggle down his last mile or faint into the chair. "They got to the chair on their own steam," he said.

Of the 14 men Johnston has counseled on Death Row, 13 have admitted their guilt. Johnston says he still wonders about the one but refuses to reveal who he was.

"I'll just say that he could have made it rough for us, but he handled it well," Johnston said. "He sat in the chair and prayed for the state before it put him to death," Johnston said.

Although not forgetting the victims of crimes that led prisoners to Death Row, there often is sympathy for a prisoner who must walk that last mile.

One of the most poignant execution memories involves the death of J.B. Patterson, executed for killing a woman for whom he deserted his wife and eight children.

Hays back in Washington

BELMONT, Ohio (AP) — Rep. Wayne Hays returned to Washington Monday for the first time since he was hospitalized for an overdose of sleeping pills taken at his farm here.

The 65-year-old Democrat, the central figure in the congressional payroll sex scandal, returns stripped of his chairmanship of the House Administration Committee.

Hays' physician, Dr. Richard Phillips, said the congressman "is looking and feeling good and is pretty much back to normal. He's just doing fine. He's all ready to go to work."

Hays has said that the overdose on June 10 was accidental, resulting from his inability to sleep and nervousness.

X-rays nixed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of cancer experts strongly recommended ending routine X-ray screening for breast cancer in women under 50 years of age.

The scientists emphasized that there is no direct evidence, but strong theoretical suggestions, that routine X-raying of symptom-free women under the age of 50 increases their risk of developing breast cancer.

Their recommendation was made at a meeting called by the National Cancer Institute and attended by scientists from several government agencies and outside organizations.
