Other cities have them signs at the city limits which boast of being home of athletes. Miss Americas, garden clubs or just plain friendly folks.

Why doesn't Pampa do a bit of bragging... a bit of Public relations on the highways?

Pampa could boast about its fine musical groups - both vocal and instrumental; it could tout being the home of super athlete Randy Matson, or singer Ginny Sims or magazine publisher Russell Barnard. It could mention balladeer Woody Guthrie, or cattle growing and oil flowing

It could announce that Pampa is a town that takes care of its own. And this should be a tremendous source of pride. especially in this day of free handouts

Example: 75 per cent of the $50,000 Genesis. House budget comes from local pocketbooks when most halfway houses are financed through state and federal grants.

Example: more than $8,000 in scholarships going to Pampa students from organizations which raised the money locally.

Example: funds for the Pride of Pampa Band's trip to Ireland in March, which will cost an estimated $100,000, will be possible because of local people working hard and giving generously. No tax money will be used for the journey.

Reagan wins three out of three

United Press International

Ronald Reagan stopped President Ford's bandwagon Tuesday with solid primary victories in Indiana, Georgia and Alabama, and forged ahead for the first time in the race for GOP convention delegates. But Ford told Republican leaders today he will win the nomination and the November election.

Jimmy Carter continued his unimpeded drive toward the Democratic presidential nomination with wins in Georgia and Indiana, and led in the District of Columbia.

Reagan, speaking in Lincoln, Neb., said he believed his tripleheader win had given him the momentum to deny Ford a first ballot

Reagan won big in Georgia and Alabama and by more than 15.000 votes in Indiana-his first victory in a northern state and a prize he sorely needed to proclaim a widening appeal for his conservative candidacy.

Combined with his clean sweep in Texas Saturday, the triple win Tuesday gave Reagan more committed delegates than Ford-359 to 318. It takes 1,130 votes for House Republican Leader John Rhodes emerged from a morning meeting between Ford and GOP leaders in the White House Cabinet Room today to report that Ford dic not seem outwardly disappointed by the set backs.

Asked if Ford displayed disappointment or discouragement over his Tuesday primary losses. Rhodes said "No, not at all his attitude was very positive.

'He made the statement that he was going to be in the contest to the very end, that he was going to be nominated and that he was going to win in November," sad Rhodes.

The President had large blocs of uncommitted delegates in New York and Pennsylvania that apparently are his for the asking in Kansas City. But Ford was unlikely to stem Reagan's momentum in next Tuesday's primaries—the border state of West Virginia and the farm belt state of Carter won landslides in Indiana and his home state of Georgia. He led in the District of Columbia but was trailing in Gov. George Wallace's home state of Alabama

Tuesday's voting gave Carter 10 victories in 15 primaries and made him a near runaway leader in the Democratic delegate count.

With 99 per cent of the Indiana vote counted. the GOP race showed:

REAGAN: 319,434 - 51 percent; FORD: 302.593 - 49 On the Democratic side it was: CARTER: 412,540 - 68 percent; WALLACE: 92.436 - 15; JACKSON: 71,006-12; McCORMACK: 31,859 - 5.

In Indiana, Georgia and Alabama, Ford won or was leading for only 9 delegates for a total of 318. Reagan was ahead for 124 for a total of 359.

In the Democratic primaries, Carter won or was leading for 109 for a total of 556. Wallace was ahead for 29 for 144. Morris Udall led for 5, for a total of 180. Fred Harris led in 1 for a total of 16. There were 20 uncommitted, for a

Four residents voted two times

The names of four Gray County residents who apparently voted twice in Saturday elections will be forwarded to the Secretary of State for whatever action he deems necessary, according to a joint statement released today by Gray County Democratic and Republican chairmen.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO SE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Our favorite judge

We have never met Judge James C. Hill but have the idea. if we did, that we'd like him. Certainly, we liked a decision rendered by that gentleman as reported in the Wall Street Journal recently.

Judge Hill got into the act when Harvey Mason, who runs a grocery store, took the Internal Revenue Service to court as a means of recovering his business books and papers. The storekeeper had voluntarily given the IRS the records but, upon second thought, had demanded them back. The IRS refused to give them up. insisting that it needed time to make copies.

The fact that Mason had initially given the tax agency the records voluntarily, and the IRS's need for time to copy, not withstanding, it was a simple matter of a citizen's right to peaceful possession of his property, Judge Hill ruled, and orthwith ordered the IRS to return the records, along with any copies made after Mason had demanded return of his Britons, according to the inconspicuous filler item, are drinking more booze. A lot more booze: up more than 19 million gallons since 1969. According to the government sponsored Health Education Council, citizens of Great Britain drink 70.6 million gallons of hard liquor a vear.

These are roughly the years the middle class's consciousness of its own demise, owing to government confiscation of its wealth, became more glaringly conspicuous. There seem to be two major choices available to the dying middle class: politicizations through the Conservative party's Margaret Thatcher, who promises, though, alas, probably cannot deliver, lower taxes; and alcoholic escapism, which, given the alternative, explains itself. and against 'em

Not long ago, after we'd run a news story about the civil case involving Dr. M.C. Overton, I took a call from someone who sounded like an older woman. Normally, I don't talk to anyone who refuses to identify himself or herself. It seems that folks often say things a bit differently if their comments follow their name — something to do with self respect, perhaps. But sometimes, especially in the case of older ladies' voices, I forget my rule until the conversation is well along and the caller has made the comments she wanted to make and by then, if I ask for a name, I can't get one.

The lady who called about the coverage of the civil action involving Dr. Overton made it clear that she felt such news should not be reported in the paper or should at least be buried on an inside page someplace where everyone might not see it.

Fortunately for most subscribers of most newspapers, most journalists do not follow the caller's philosophy of news reporting Because a man is a physician in a town where there is a shortage of them ... because he has devoted many, many years to seeing after the health needs of ... because he is loved and respected by many ... these are not reasons for ignoring a news story. Or for playing one down. In fact, the more well-known a person is, obviously, the more newsworthy events in his life become. That's life. That's the news business, and if we in it are going to do our jobs we must be prepared to stand behind stories which are not universally popular.

The caller indicated that she thought because of our news coverage on hospital board meetings, our reporting of doctors' legal involvements, and my comments in this column about the way hospital business is conducted, we must be

"trying to run all the doctors out of Pampa Nothing could be a greater distance from what is factual. We would like to see plenty of doctors in Pampa but we don't think the way to get them is by ignoring news stories when a doctor is involved. Or by ignoring problems in the hospital's administration and finances. Or by entertaining prospective doctors in an administrator's office full of expensive furniture paid for with Gray County taxpayers' money. Or by any kind of bootlicking or cheap pandering tactics.

If there is a doctor who could be attracted by such things. I think Pampa is better off without him

Many doctors - most doctors, apparently - prefer to live and practice in larger cities where they often can make more money and keep a more reasonable schedule of work hours than is the case in most rural locations such as Pampa.

I don't know what the answer is to the doctor shortage problem. But I do know that the hospital is a place that provides health care. It is not some kind of holy sancturary above criticism or immune to examination by the taxpayers who own it. And doctors are not deities. They may be talented or gifted and they may be dedicated to the high calling of the profession. They may have personally sacrificed to acquire the long years of education necessary to enter the field. But physicians are people, not gods. People make mistakes. People make the news.

Our vague, suspicious Secretary of State

WASHINGTON - (NEA) - Secretary of State Henry Kissinger strides into the press conference dramatically late, flanked by two sturdily built young men with black faces.

They station themselves to his left and right, and through the session ply their eyes from front to back across the sea of reporters, who have already passed through two security checks before being allowed into, the room. No photographer - or reporter - is allowed to the rear of an imaginary line running directly through Kissinger's speaking stand.

The security is tighter than that at any Presidential press conference I've attended.

Kissinger is obviously nervous, though surely not in fear of the reporters. His jokes, for the most part, do not come off well, certainly not with the ease of earlier days in the White House. He repeats himself. Even when responding to questions from reporters he knows well, he stares blankly, unlike his casualness of months back.

But he clearly relishes being Secretary of State. It is difficult to believe he will give up the post willingly, even under today's pressures and political attacks.

Criticism has always bothered Kissinger deeply and he has been known to go to pieces when under sharp attack. He has had a tendency, for years, which shows up now in his private conversations, to be deeply suspicious of the motives of those who differ with him. Disagreement is taken as personal af-

The danger here is that this man who continually looks inward at his own emotions and logic and refuses to understand the emotions and the reasoning of those who believe the United States would be better off following different policies could, in his eagerness to show himself right and his critics wrong, carry this nation into stands and agreements reached for their dramatic effect rather than for the longtime good of this nation.

I would feel happier with a man with less ego, less insecurity and more at peace with himself, and with those who work for him if they are honest men who differ.

It must be noted in this regard that Kissinger steps in to get staff men removed, or transferred, over in the Pentagon, if they disagree with his proposals and word of their disagreement gets back to him.

It must be noted, too, that Kissinger has taken pride in his ability to manipulate men, whether men under him at the White House and the State Department, or those he deals with in interdepartmental conferences or in meetings with officials from other nations. Kissinger has a way of moving from generality to generality so rapidly, taking full advantage of his fluency with English and the ambiguities of his deliberately Germanic grammar, that he frequently approves something those present find in retrospect that they do not understand at

Some become angry beyond words when they learn that he has used their names and approval for programs or deals they are dead set against. Since Kissinger uses the same techniques in international deals, leaving each side to believe its own interpretation of the arrangements made, and since, as time goes on, the parties then learn the Kissinger arrangement is not what they thought, each side then tends to accuse the other of treachery. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Appliance producer's concrete argument

By Don Oakley

A rather inconsequential but curious side effect of the nation's effort to combat pollution:

Because the federal government's pollution control requirements have driven many of the country's foundries out of business and the cost of iron castings has gone sky high, one major appliance manufacturer (White-Westinghouse) has found it necessary to develop a different type of weight to balance the tumblers in its washing machines. Concrete was the logical choice because of its inexpensiveness. But the density of concrete is lower than that of cast iron, thus the same weight of concrete ballast - 65 pounds took up more room in the machines than cast iron. This necessitated other minor design changes to locate the concrete weights so as to create as few service problems as possi-

Consumer loans have become a troublesome economic problem, The Conference Board reports. The number of consumer loans which are delinquent for 30 days or more rose steadily between 1972 and 1975. Delinquency rates jumped from 1.7 per cent in early 1972 to 2.7 percent in 1975. While the rates declined slightly in the second half of last year, they are expected to remain a problem until the country's unemployment rate falls

Nueces County man who helped starve his 3-month-old daughter to death has been ordered to serve his 10-year sentence without hope of a retrial.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals Tuesday said evidence in the initial trial of James W. Wilkenson of Corpus Christi was sufficient to prove he intentionally let Sharolyn Wray Wilkenson die because of lack of food. The child's mother also was found guilty in the case and was sentenced to three years in prison.

Evidence in the case showed the child had been malnourished since birth and at death weighed two pounds less than when she was born. In the trial doctors testified there was no trace of food in the infant's intestinal tract when she died.

Wilkenson, then an unemployed laborer, appealed the conviction on the grounds there was not sufficient evidence to implicate him in the child's death

In a separate decision Tuesday, the court said a Palo Pinto County man should be retried for the 1963 rape of a Mineral Wells girl because the lower court failed to estabish if the CASPER, Wyo. (UPI) -Cattle prods were used to "get the attention" of and control a few unruly mentally retarded children who bothered fellow students, an official said today, but use of the electric shock devices was stopped when discovered.

Claimants to Hughes fortune continue to appear.

Three cousins from Hughes father's side of the family-Jeff Milton Hughes, Elizabeth Hughes McDugald and Felix Turner Hughes-entered the legal arena Tuesday. Attorney C. Alex Meacham of Smyrna, Tenn., filed a petition of interest for them in Los Angeles Superior Court.

In another action, Richard Gano, a cousin already named temporary administrator of Hughes' privately owed California properties, filed a petition to be named permanent administrator - fighting off counterclaims by the county Dietrich, named executor in the purported will found last week in Salt Lake City.

Another claim was expected to be filed in Las Vegas, Nev., on behalf of 11 more claimed relatives by a Nashville, Tenn., geneologist and probate investigator, W.A. Jones, who said he would try to prove the hand written "will" is a fake.

AMARILLO - The board of directors of Pioneer Corp. at their meeting Tuesday in Amarillo declared a regular quarterly divident of 30 cents per share, payable June 3, 1976, to stockholders of record on May Consolidated net income and earnings for Pioneer amounted to $11,007,947 compared to $6,586,914 during the same period of 1975. In making the announcement of the income, K.B. Watson, company president, said first quarter income was up notably over the previous year due to several factors. He pointed out that Pioneer Nuclear made a sale of stockpiled uranium concentrate to Philadelphia Electire Co. from the company's inventory and generated revenues in excess of $4.6 million. He said that there was a significant increase in the net income of the production companies in the first quarter of 1976, due to marketing of increased production including the increase in the Jennings Townsite Field, in Louisiana.

Watson went on to say, "The acquisition of International Tool and Supply Company, Inc. (ITS) was finalized April 1, 1976, with an effective date of Jan. 1. ITS is included in the consolidated figures for the first time."

Watson said, "Sale of gas for pumping irrigation engines was up because of an unusually dry period. Additionally, a change in meter reading and billing dates for a large number of irrigation accounts resulted in accelerating more than a million dollars of gas sales from the second quarter of the year into the first quarter with the related gas purchase costs being already recorded. This will benefit both the customer and Pioneer as volumes will be more closely related to the fiscal month.

The quarterly report for Pioneer Corp. will be mailed to stockholders about May 17.

U.S. Special Envoy Dean Brown met separately with all the factions Tuesday and appealed for an end to the use of heavy weapons - including 155mm artillery and 120mm mortars - in city areas.

The joint Syrian-Palestinian-Lebanese truce commission endorsed his proposal and by this morning fighting had subsided to sporadic gunfire. The Syrian-backed PLA troops moved in after another day of booming mortar and artillery fire devastated the harbor complex and left more than 100 persons dead or injured

Leftist forces advancing along the seafront Tuesday failed to dislodge right-wing Phalangists from the port area, which has served as a Christian stronghold since the civil war erupted more than a year ago.
The Phalangists said they remained in control of the Fattal Building, last remaining strategic center at the port entrance, which commands a firing zone of several hundred yards

A Phalangist spokesman said Syrian officers would move into the building to supervise the latest cease-fire.

The Phalangist spokesman said the right-wing was "still working on the presumption that. Saturday's presidential election will take place ... the cease-fire and other security measures are all aimed at facilitating the session being held."

The presidential issue has turned into an open struggle over Syria's role in attempting to end the war - with the main opposition coming from Social-ist party leader Kamal Jumblatt, who heads the leftist alliance.

Former Premier Amin Hafez, a leading member of the independent bloc of parliamentary deputies, returned to Beirut from Damascus after a day of talks with Syrian Preside Hafez Assad.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am the bookkeeper for a business that maintains a small office staff.

Our office manager (let's call him "Marvin") is a middle-aged family man. The boss's secretary (let's call her "Sissy") is a shapely young single woman.

Since Sissy came to work here, she and Marvin have been spending a lot of time together in the file room-with the

When we go the parties where there is dancing and I am asked to dance, I always accept because I love to dance. However, my husband, who is a wonderful dancer and a very handsome man, just sits there.

I am embarrassed to see the wife of the man who has asked me to dance sitting while my husband sits. He says he doesn't enjoy dancing with anyone but me.

What do you think, Abby? As a matter of etiquette, should I refuse dances with other men if my husband doesn't dance with their wives? Or should my husband dance even if he doesn't enjoy it?

DEAR ABBY: This is for that woman who was "going crazy" because her house was always a mess no matter how hard she worked to keep it tidy.

I have a husband, three children and two grandchildren. I always believed that a house should be lived in. My husband and sons work on motors and they get pretty greasy, but I don't care. My daughter loves to paint with oils and you can't tell the color of any towel I have between the grease and oil paint.

When my grandchildren are here, I give them the run of the place. My sister-in-law said I was crazy because last winter I put the sandbox right in the middle of my kitchen. It made sort of a mess, but the baby was quiet, and I didn't mind sweeping up the sand.

We like pets and treat them like members of the family They can roam around the house and sleep anywhere they want to. We keep the door to the parakeet cage open and if the place gets to smelling like a barnyard, I spray a little pine around.

Some days I don't get my beds made, and I'm not bothered with dishes because we use paper plates. I'll never take a prize for my housekeeping, but we're sure a happy

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB - I am a newspaper, P. O. Box 1551, 64 year-old woman, 5 feet 4 and weigh 125 pounds. In the last year I lost 35 pounds as my doctor wanted. I feel wonderful. Now what I want to know is can I take one water pill every day or every other day for there is no end to my worrying about putting the weight back on that I have already lost? Please tell me what to do. DEAR READER - The weight you have lost was not water, it was fat. There seems to be a widespread lack of understanding that what doctors usually want you to lose is fat not just pounds on the scales. Pounds can be anything from an over-distended digestive tract to an accumulation of water. Your body is normally half water and dehydrating yourself to get a favorable reading on the scales is

Those water pills don't eliminate fat. They help to flush out the water that accumulates as the fat is used. That means taking water pills won't prevent you from putting your fat back on. There are only two things that will help you prevent regaining your fat; maintaining a suitable level of physical activity to use all of the calories you eat and restricting your calories in a well-balanced

Remember, the amount of fat you accumulate is like the balance in your checking account. If you take in more calories than you spend the balance is going to increase and that balance is your fat deposit. NY 10019. DEAR DR. LAMB - I am 58 years old and have high blood pressure. I have been going to the doctor for four or five years but my blood pressure is always too high. I am on a no salt, low-fat diet, plus Lasix and Inderal. I also drink several beers a day plus some liquor. Do you think that is what is causing it? I feel fine and work every day except I am awfully highstrung. seem to get mad easily

Please let me know. DEAR READER - The truth is we do not know the cause of high blood pressure in most cases. Limiting salt intake does seem to help some individuals. If there is any evidence of excess fat underneath your skin around the middle portion of your body, elimination of such fat deposits often helps lower blood pressure.

Alcoholic beverages in themselves do not cause high blood pressure. However, to the extent that they contribute to obesity or excess body fat, they then become part of the

Every person who has high blood pressure should have a complete medical examination, including study of the functions of the kidneys to ascertain insofar as possible the causes of high blood pressure. Then treatment usually consists of using various medicines that help to lower the pressure by relaxing the small arteries in the body The amount of these medicines, if any, that a person needs often depends on how successful they are in eliminating excess body fat.

Because you note that you are highstrung, I would recommend eliminating all stimulants. Specifically

Polly's pointers

DEAR POLLY - I can tell Kim how to make a doll bed or cradle out of a milk carton. Open the end of the carton and lay out lengthwise. Cut out the top, being careful to keep edges straight. Leave five-eighths inch on each side of each corner and cut a one inch deep piece lengthwise from each side but do not cut ends out. Take the piece first cut from the top of the box and fold it in half evenly. Fold in one-half to five-eighths inch on sides and bottom of open end. Paste one half of the cut top on inside, the other half on the outside to make a double headboard. Cut headboard and footboard to desired shapes perhaps rounded at the top. Use four empty thread spools of the same size or corks for legs. Glue to bed and weight down after gluing as the wax on the carton makes it more difficult for the glue to adhere. I use that all-purpose white glue. To finish, cover with a cotton material pasted on. Do use cotton as rayon and silk sometimes get spotted with glue. I like to fill in the posts with a fold of cardboard and top them with plastic tops from dishwashing liquid bottles. Add bedding and make some little girl really happy. —R.E.D.

DEAR POLLY - We all know that manufacturers seem to use as little material as possible in all their creations, but my Pet Peeve is with pajamas that have no pockets. To correct this I make my own by cutting a piece of cloth about four and a half by six inches and stitch this to the under side corner of the right front of my pajamas. I then have a neat pocket for a hanky or facial tissue that is out of sight. —MARY A.

By DAVID L. LANGFORD NEW YORK (UPI) - Sue Richards insists she once drove a dump truck in her hometown of Narrowsburg, N.Y. before she attended an all-girl art school, rebelled, and styled herself as a sexual freedom fighter. If it's hard to picture this petite and pretty brunette behind the wheel of one of her father's F600 trucks, it's just as hard to imagine her as publisher of the newest - and one of the rawest - of the nationally-circulated men's magazines.

And from a town called Narrowsburg, population 550, more or less.

But here she is, articulate and soft-spoken, sitting in a Manhattan restaurant and talking about how her "baby," a girlie magazine called High Society, is out to show more "honest sexuality" than Playboy. Penthouse or even Hustler.

A magazine like this should be explicit and shouldn't attempt to do anything except turn people on," says the 25year-old former script writer, tourist guide, nude model and seller of men's pipes. "There is not enough true, honest sexuality. The Big Three come close, but to appease their advertisers they won't go far enough.

Playboy publisher Hugh Hefner, she says, "is dated." Bob Guccione of Penthouse "sees life through a soft-focus filter."

The women on our pages look like they're having fun," gray carpeted stairs facing a large stage. Hard on the back, but impressive.

While taped disco music pounds the hearing into gruel, one of Capraro's partners seats the more important spectators. Tall and maitre d'ish in a black suit, he says in passing, "No, the White House couldn't come, but they sent flowers."

And there you have the reason for the hoopla.

A year ago, Betty Ford saw feature on Albert Capraro in a local Washington paper and called him to design for her. Up he flew to a royal box on Olympus.

His summer showing, fittingly, verges on a Gower Champion production. Lights down, lights up, music blaring, models cavorting. Group after group in his line is greeted with rolls of applause: yellow and white striped beachwear; sophisticated white, pencilskirted suits; flowing black designer to talk to. But. There's no rapid transit system to Olympus.

Three times the interview is canceled and rescheduled. Albert, poor dear, has the flu Albert is rushing off for an out-of-town showing and must rest. Albert is going on vacation, but, perhaps, this week.

Finally, late one afternoon, his gray, plump secretary makes welcome sounds in his busy showroom on Seventh Avenue. Nevertheless 'We'll have to cut it to half an hour, dear, because Albert has the flu, you know. And he has another interview with a Japanese reporter and Polly Bergen is in with him now. But you can get what you need. Albert is very fast."

Capraro bounces into the showroom, a short, round man with black curly hair, mustache and goatee. His flu, evidently, is an exotic and uncharted strain. He's a bit breathless, but his brown eyes are unglazed, his step unwavering.

He does speak rabidly, but amiably. "I'm thirty-two," he says with a woeful smile, "and I've had my own business for two years. Before that I worked for Oscar de la Renta for eight years, and show you my workroom." Lily Dache before that.

When Mrs. Ford's assistant called, I could hardly speak on the phone. Mrs. Ford loved my philosophy of very romantic and feminine clothes at a price. My clothes are under $200. I didn't understand at first that they wanted me to come to the

"What happens to me when Mrs. Ford leaves the White House? I don't think it will affect me. I'm building a reputation as a designer and the Fords brought me into the light. So sorry to have to stop now. So nice meeting you. Capraro shakes hands and leads the silent, smiling Japanese off. "I'm building to be one of

By SHARON RUTENBERG

CHICAGO (UPI) - A biosynthetic eardrum will be available soon to replace eardrums that have been ruptured through infection or an accident, according to a California

Dr. Rodney Perkins, of Palo Alto, Calif., recently announced the development at an international meeting of ear specialists at Northwestern University Medical School.

We have been working for the last four years on what I consider to be the next generation of eardrum grafts," Perkins said

The eardrum is made of bovine collagen, the protein giving strength to bones and cartilage in animals and man. The collagen is broken down in the laboratory and reconstituted into biosynthetic membrane material. The new biochemical method was worked out by Edward Luck, a biochemist at the bioimplant laboratory at Project HEAR in Palo Alto, a nonprofit medical foundation for ear research where Perkins is research director.

'The biosynthetic membrane is shaped anatomically to the same configuration of the normal eardrum. It provides the scaffolding for growth and infiltration of new tissue by the patient," Perkins said.

The biosynthetic membrane material has undergone animal testing and now is ready to be clinically tested in the surgical reconstruction of human eardrums in patients.

The eardrum, which plays a key role in hearing, receives airborne sound waves collected by the outer ear and vibrates in response. The impulses are transmitted to the inner bones, on to the auditory nerves, to the cochlea and then to the hearing center in the brain.

The drumhead sometimes ruptures as a result of disease, infections, a sudden-explosive change in air pressure, a skull fracture, or an industrial accident in which hot water.

Minor perforations of the membrane may go unnoticed. but larger perforations may cause hearing difficulties, ear noises and drainage from the ear. Replacement of the drum is necessary if major damage

Many ruptures heal spontaneously, but others must be repaired with tissue from the patient for transplant tissue.

In recent years, substitute drums were taken from cadavers. Many such transplant eardrums have been provided by Project HEAR and the ear bank of the American Hearing Research Foundation-Northwestern University in Chicago. Advantages of the biosynthet-

Andersen said that while the media, which has been the target of criticism for abuse of its power, has always been able to retreat under the cloak of the 1st Amendment:

"The 1st Amendment would prove too thin a garment if we ever had to try to wrap ourselves in it to withstand the cold of a majority opinion convinced that the news media cannot be fair as well as free.'

Threatens welfare cut-off

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government has renewed a three-year-old threat, never imposed, to withhold federal welfare funds from states for failing to reduce payment errors.

The threatened cutoff of $123,423,000 beginning in October would include a loss of more than $31.9 million for New York; $16.4 million for Illinois; $11.8 million for Pennsylvania, and $11.5 million for Michigan.

But HEW's William A. Morrill, assistant secretary for planning, gave no indication that any state will lose welfare aid, and a government spokesman said it won't happen "right

Morrill and Donald Wortman, HEW's acting welfare administrator, testified in a House Ways and Means subcommittee Monday and insisted the threat is valid even though it has never Asked by Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Tex., whether HEW was committed to cutoffs of welfare aid, Morrill replied: "We will need to be persuaded that a sanction-free system will been invoked.

"The department still has a stewardship to assure that federal dollars are not spent erroneously," said Wortman. Former HEW Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger on April 4, 1973, announced in a statement that under new regulations "states which fail to reduce errors in welfare payments by specific deadlines will lose part of their federal funding."

The deadlines have been postponed and extended and no federal aid has been withheld.

than 12,000, it will be a misnomer to call Central State College in Edmond, Okla., a small college in the NCAA.

But that's the status Central will receive next season as it joins the NCAA small - school division, actually a step up for the Oklahoma college. Central is leaving the Oklahoma Collegiate Conference and NAIA following the current school year.

The move will provide Central with the opportunity to sign more players for football and other sports - an opportunity the college capitalized on last week when it signed Pampans Garland McPherson and Dub Taylor to national letters of

Taylor, a defensive end, and McPherson, a quarterback, join Ross Dodson, Stinnett linebacker, and Sylvester Moore, Amarillo Palo Duro split

"We think they're real fine athletes obviously or we wouldn't have signed them," said Phil Ball, who has been Central's head coach for 12

"I'm impressed with the type of young men they are. Garland has the ability to run the veer attack, which we run. He has quick feet and the reactions that are so essential. We think Dub is a competitor. We'll move him from a defensive down position

McPherson, who agrees that his speciality is the veer offense, is already optimistic about the Central, located just 15 miles from Oklahoma City, has shown a steady growth in the last 12 years. From 1965-71, the school grew at a 12 to 15 percent clip every year; since 1971, Central has experienced a slow but steady growth. Scholarship limitations in the

NAIA caused the move to independence and the NCAA. "The schools in the Oklahoma

Collegiate Conference are much smaller than we are. We felt we couldn't properly represent ourselves with schools that size. The reason we're not representing ourselves is we have scholarship limitations. Ball said.

"Even though we didn't win the conference last year, we didn't represent ourselves. We're under the same limitations as these smaller schools."

Which simply means that, though the overall enrollment is larger, the size of Central's football team is the same as the other schools squads in the conference

Ball added that the move may be a step towards conference member in the NCAA.

"That's the direction we're taking. In our immediate plans, there's nothing but that's the route we're desiring.

"We're optimistic about the season. We think we've got a lot of key returning players and we think we're in the process of getting a real good crop of

Kansas City clips lowly Boston

By KEN ROSENBERG

UPI Sports Writer It seems the Boston Red Sox, defending American League champions, have been having their share of bad luck and Tuesday night was no exception they lost their fifth straight game and are mired in last place in the East Division with a 6-10 record.

Kansas City became the latest team to benefit from Boston misfortunes when a bloop hit kicked up some chalk and a routine fly ball took off in a jetstream. The bloop hit was Buck Martinez' two-out double off Red Sox' hurler Bill Lee that landed on the right field foul line and drove home the first two runs of a five-run second inning. Two batters later, Amos Otis lofted a fly ball to left field that the wind carried into the screen for a three-run homer

Lee, who lost for the third straight time and rarely is at a loss to explain anything, was dumbfounded.

"I just can't put my finger on what's wrong," he said. "Mar- tinez hit a checked swing popup and knocks in two runs and Otis' homer was a fly ball. But even a blind squirrel finds an acorn sometime.

In the fifth inning, however, Otis hit a second homer, without the aid of the wind, to help Al Fitzmorris gain his third

The first source is at the mine site where the coal is being loaded into the unit train. The purpose of the tests of this sample is to assure SPS that it is getting the kind and quality of coal for which it is paying. The lab analyzes the moisture content, the percent ash, the percent volatile, and most important, the heat value or the BTU content of the coal. Coal generally is priced in terms of dollars per ton, but Southwestern buys the coal on a of energy in the coal that determines its value.

The second source of samples is from the conveyor belt at the power plant where the coal is being moved from the crusher house to the bunker or storage silo. This sample is primarily for operational control.

Testing and analysis of coal in the SPS system lab starts with the preparation of the coal sample. The coal is poured into a pulverizer and ground to a very fine powder - like consistency.

The next test determines the per cent of volatile elements in the coal. A weighed sample is put in a crucible and placed in a 555 degree C. electric furnace for six minutes to remove the moisture. The sample is then, placed in a second oven for an additional six minutes at 950 degrees C. Then the sample is weighed and the weight loss represents the amount or per cent of volatile materials.

The per cent of ash in the coal must be determined. To make this test, the sample is placed in a 750 degree C. furnace equipped with forced air. Complete combustion is attained in this analysis and all that remains is the ash - oxides of iron,

The coal that SPS is receiving for use at Harrington Station has approximately five per cent ash in every 100 ton car of coal, there will be about five tons of ash. The 350,000 kilowatt unit at the new plant will use about 1 million tons of coal per year, leaving about 50,000 tons of fly

Southwestern Public Service Company engineers are now looking at markets and uses for the fly ash. It may be used as a roadbed material, as an additive for concrete mixes and for landfill uses.

When coal is burned in a boiler, it is necessary to know the fusibility, or melting point of the ash. At certain temperatures, the ash begins to form slag inside the boiler and on the outside of the boiler tubes. This can cause major probelms in the boiler and lead to a complete shut - down for cleaning and repairs.

To determine the fusibility of ash, the sample is shaped into a cone and heated in an ash fusion furnace. By viewing the sample through an optical pyrometer, a device for measuring the temperature of glowing objects, the melting point can be determined.

Temperature in the boiler is kept just below this melting point to prevent the formation of slag and damage to the boiler. Since the fly ash will be sold for other uses, it is important that an analysis be made to determine the per cent of trace materials it contains. Trace materials include such metals as lead and arsenic that have a potential of being harmful to the environment. These tests make nearby lakes and streams when used for commercial purposes.

The per cent of trace metals in the coal sample are determined by the use of an atomic absorption spectrophotometer. The sample is burned in a graphite furnace and a spectroscopic light beam analyzes the sample.

Finally, the coal sample is given a sieve analysis to make aluminum, silica, calcium and sure that the fly ash will not sure it is not too large for the contaminate the water strata or crusher equipment at the power plant. On the other hand, if the coal is too fine, it will be hard to control and creat dust problems.

> The introduction of coal as a boiler fuel marks a milestone in the energy picture for the 45,000 square miles served by Southwestern Public Service Company. No more power plants will be built by SPS that use natural gas as the primary

Coal tester

Diana Price, production chemist, determines what per-centage of a coal sample is volatile in her job at Southwestern Public Service Company's new plant near Amarillo. The SPS system laboratory renders a complete analysis of coal samples.

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) - A medical officer of the USDA's Agricultural Research Service says diets low in copper may be intensifying the risk of heart disease. In a speech at the annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology, Dr. Leslie M. Klevay said the copper content of many foods may be lower than it was in the 1940s. He said this and other studies raise the possibility that Americans now may be consuming less than the optimal dietary copper.

The doctor said findings from epidemiologic and clinical studies show that a dietary inbalance of copper and zinc may affect cholesterol level in human's blood serum.

A report in the "School Foodservice Journal" in Denver says the ACFS project originated with Kay Glynn, a South African who serves as its organizing secretary.

Governmental programs to feed children vary from province to province in the nation. The ACFS program is funded partly by the Bantu Administration, roughly comparable to the United States Bureau of Indian Affairs. Donations make up the remainder of its support.

Baby bottle could cause dental problems

BOSTON (UPI) - A bottle of warm milk or juice may help a baby to fall asleep, but it can cause serious tooth decay and a lifetime of dental problems, a specialist in child denistry says.

"If a baby must have something to drink before bed, let it be water," Dr. Manouch Darvish told a meeting of the Massachusetts Dental Society Monday. Darvish said milk, juice and will remain in a baby's mouth, causing serious harm to newly formed teeth. "I've had to extract teeth

other carbohydrate-rich liquids from 14-month-old babies and, occasionally, do extractions on five-year olds," said Darvish, a member of the staff at Worcester Memorial Hospital. He said baby food is less hazardous than most liquids because it usually contains less Darvish said extensive decay to primary teeth can cause problems in swallowing and speech which can affect a youngster's personality. The same child is also more likely to experience decay and recur-ring dental problems as an adult, he said.

He said the onset of decay i infants is signaled by yellowish patches on the front teeth near the gumline and urged parents to take their child to a dentist to have the cavities filled as soon

House overrides veto on child day care

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The nents of the override vote said, centers across the nation now serving thousands of children would be forced to close. Working mothers would have to quit their jobs, they said, and

> Ford said he vetoed the bill because it added still more federal control over matters that should be decided by states and cities. Ford favored federal aid to the centers but said it should be given in a bloc grant without federal regulations on how it is used.

The measure would suspend until July 1, 1976, the staffing standards Congress voted last year and which were to go into effect on Oct. 1, 1975, Unless centers met those standards they would lose federal aid and could be fined by the government if they operated in violation of the standards.

"In three years the net take was maybe 100,000 tons, which over that period very probably would be just normal loss anyhow," a customs spokesman

"However, the indictments were brought because they purposely kept the practice going so they wouldn't be harassed by local officials," he said "But the way they went about doing it, with automatic setting of the scales, was willful malfeasance."

A Continental spokesman said the charges arose because of the practice of adjusting scales to take partial advantage of a tolerance allowed by law. The firm said the practice led to the filing of inaccurate export declarations.

Navy wants five ships for $1.2 billion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld today asked Congress for an additional $1.2 billion so the Navy can build five new ships it says are needed to control the seas.

Rumsfeld's testimony before the Senate Armed Services Committee was secret, but Pentagon officials released an unclassified summary. It reflected President Ford's decision last Saturday to increase his $112.7-billion defense budget request for 1977 by adding four frigates and an oiler. He also asked for $350 million in research funds for a new nuclear aircraft carrier, and $200 million in research money to speed up quick-takeoff V-STOL aircraft.

The President originally had asked for a $6.3-billion, 16-ship budget, which already included eight frigates. The House voted to spend $1.1 billion more on shipbuilding, cut four frigates out of the budget, add the aircraft carrier and eight more expensive, mostly nuclear-powered ships which the Navy did not request.

The House had replaced four frigates with antisubmarine destroyers. Rumsfeld told the Senate panel today that the 12 frigates were more necessary. "This." the statement said, will provide the needed additional surface combatants with improved air defense. antisubmarine warfare and improved antisurface warfare capabilities for support of task forces, convoys and defense of replenishment ships." Rumsfeld was not specific about the five-year shipbuilding program now under National Security Council review.

VERDI STUDIES

NEW YORK (UPI) - An American Institute for Verdi Studies has been established in the music department of New York University, organized by scholars, performers, producing companies and Verdi enthusiasts. The only such institute in the U.S. devoted to Verdi. it is under the direction of Martin Chusid, a professor of music at NYU and a distinguished Verdi scholar. The institute maintains an archive at NYU's Bobst Library and will foster research and sponsor lectures and seminars.
