

FBI sharpshooters kills hijacker

DENVER (UPI) — FBI sharpshooters hiding in a jet airliner today killed a heavily armed hijacker holding two hostages while he attempted to switch from a light aircraft to a jet at Stapleton International Airport.

The hijacker, Roger Lentz, was shot repeatedly by agents as he stepped inside the passenger cabin of a Convair 990 which he hoped would fly him to Mexico City.

Neither hostage, identified as pilot Robert Blair of Grand Island's Anderson Flying Service and mechanic Harlan Hillers, were injured. They preceded Lentz into the Convair and stepped out of the line of fire, authorities said.

Two captains also were aboard the jet owned by a travel club called Ports of Call.

FBI spokesman Ted Rosack said Lentz was a native of Marquette, Neb., and had a criminal record of flight to avoid prosecution for vehicular homicide in Nebraska.

Rosack would not say how many times Lentz, 31, was shot but said "there were quite a few gunshot wounds." Ports of Call director Larry Turrill who offered use of the plane for the flight said he was told by agents Lentz "was shot about six times. The body ended up in the center aisle."

Lentz hijacked the private plane about 6 p.m. (EST) Fifteen minutes before its arrival at Stapleton International Airport, the hijacker radioed his demand for a jet. After the plane landed, Lentz sat inside the craft and talked by radio with Rosack for two hours demanding a United Air Lines jet for the Mexico flight.

United refused, however, and Lentz ordered the plane to take off a circle the airport for hours. The FBI said Colorado Gov. Richard Lamm helped in negotiations with Lentz and with United which finally offered a DC-8 trainer but Lentz said he preferred the travel club jet which has a range of 3,200 miles.

At one point while he circled with Lentz aboard, the pilot radioed, "You've got to get that plane here. You've just got to get that plane here." A short time later, Lentz took the microphone and threatened to crash the plane if his demands for a jet weren't met.

"I've waited all day for the plane and I'm not waiting any longer," he said. "I might as well nose thing into the ground."

During the transfer to the Convair, Lentz pointed his pistol at one of the hostages walking ahead of him and said:

"You see this, you see this. It's a gun and it's right at the back of his head. It anyone budges, it is going to go off."

The hijacker's brother, Larry Lentz was flown from Grand Island to Denver by authorities to try and talk the hijacker into surrendering but Lentz refused to speak with him. The brother told authorities Lentz had threatened suicide for several weeks and was despondent about marital problems.

Two skyjackers were killed by FBI agents on July 5, 1972, in $800,000 ransom attempt to hijack a Pacific Southwest Airlines jetliner at San Francisco International Airport. One passenger was killed and two wounded.

Robert Stapp, an airport spokesman, said Lentz took over the twin-engine plane at Grand Island's Hall County Airport "after he apparently had some trouble with his wife. He took a shot at her." Stapp said Lentz originally demanded United "make available a 737 or a 747 with three stewardesses aboard."

Lentz was armed with a .22 caliber pistol and a 410 shotgun. Rosack, who negotiated with the hijacker by radio from a car parked near the plane on the north-south runway, said the hijacker fired five times "including once at me."

Lentz also shot out three windows in the plane while negotiating with Rosack and once while attempting to transfer to the travel club jet. Rosack said the shot fired at him missed.

At one point on Lentz's orders, the airplane was flown north for about 50 miles and was given clearance to Casper, Wyo., but the hijacker changed his mind and ordered the plane back to Denver where it continued circling.

200 'eyesores' removed in Pampa

By TEX DEWESE
Pampa News Staff

More than 200 abandoned buildings in various sections of Pampa have been removed or demolished and the debris hauled away since Pampa began an intensive campaign three or four years ago to rid the city of unsightly structures, according to R.B. Cooke, public works director.

Cooke said a small percentage of abandoned buildings have been repaired and refurbished after demolition notices were sent to the property owners.

But for the most part, Cooke said, "the buildings are beyond repair and owners either clear them off or give the city permission to handle the demolition and removal."

The public works director explained that buildings go on the demolition list when appraisers from the city tax office determine there is no value and they are removed from the city tax roll.

Notices to owners of abandoned structures are issued under provisions of a city ordinance which require removal of unoccupied buildings declared to be in a state of disrepair.

Cooke said there never is any intent upon the part of the city to tear down a structure the owner promises to repair so it can again be occupied.

City Manager Mack Wofford explained recently no action would be taken against buildings in which persons are residing.

"We do not use the law to put people out of their homes," he said.

Cooke said so far in 1976 there have been 45 abandoned buildings added to the list.

Fourteen were on the public hearing list at the April 13 meeting of the City Commission. Several of these were continued on the statement of property owners that they needed a time extension to make repairs.

Forty-four more are scheduled for a public hearing April 27 to show cause why they should not be removed.

Cooke explained the city will cooperate in every way with property owners who show intent to repair the abandoned buildings or remove them.

"When the city removes them," Cooke said, "the buildings are leveled and the lots cleaned of all debris."

He added that the program will be continued until Pampa is cleared of all abandoned structures that are eyesores in their neighborhood.

7.5 per cent increase in GNP above predictions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Gross National Product soared 7.5 per cent after adjustment for inflation in the first quarter of 1976 for its broadest show of strength since the recession ended last April, the Commerce Department reported today.

The increase was well above most predictions, which had anticipated only minor improvement from the revised 5 per cent rise in the last three months of 1975.

The Commerce Department said the real GNP, which is adjusted to reduce the impact of inflation, was estimated at an annual rate of $1,238 trillion in the first three months of 1976, up from $1,216 trillion in the final quarter of 1975.

For the first time, the value of the GNP exceeded the level it had attained before the recession began with the Arab oil embargo in the winter of 1974. GNP was estimated at $1,233 trillion at the end of 1975.

There were two primary factors for the surprisingly large gain: a swell in inventories — sale-ready goods held in reserve by merchants, wholesalers and manufacturers — and the lowest inflation rate in 3½ years.

"Half of the growth came from inventory investment, which increased sharply after holding steady in the fourth quarter," Commerce said.

The GNP inflation rate, which measures prices paid at all levels of trading from wholesale to final consumption, was estimated at 3.7 per cent. It was 6.8 per cent in the previous quarter.

GNP before adjustment for inflation was estimated at $1,616 trillion, up 11.5 per cent from the $1,573 trillion rate in the previous quarter.

For the first time since the recession ended last April, all categories of the GNP both before and after adjustment for inflation increased.

Flood sweeps up two infants

By United Press International

Heavy thunderstorms, dropping rain onto already soaked ground, spread throughout the eastern half of Texas late Sunday and today. Two infants were swept away by flash floods in Goliad Sunday and high water today surrounded Terrell in Kaufman County.

"Terrell is nearly blocked off," said Kaufman County Sheriff Roy Brockway. "All farm to market roads are closed ... and it's still raining."

Brockway said high water spread throughout the county, but no major damage was reported. One family was evacuated from their mobile home at Maybank, located in the southeast part of the county.

On Sunday a father attempting to save his infant, twin sons from a flash flood on U.S. 59 near Goliad put them into an ice chest, but then lost his grip on it and watched helplessly as it was swept away and overturned.

The children were Francisco and Juan Saucedo, the 10-month-old sons of Richard Saucedo. A spokesman said a search for the bodies would begin today.

Kaufman County Deputy Sheriff Ronnie Nelson said the streets in Kaufman looked alike rivers.

"You couldn't see the streets for the water," he said. "It's just really something. We look like a big 'county of water.'"

A tornado was reported on the ground near Waxahatchie at mid-morning today, but it pulled back into the clouds before causing any damage.

The National Weather Service issued a flash flood warning throughout the morning for the Dallas metropolitan area. It said radar detected heavy rain from near Waxahatchie to Greenville with rainfall reported over five inches in portions of the area.

The NWS said severe thunderstorms were considered most likely over the Edwards Plateau, the central Texas Hill Country, the eastern portion of the plains east of the Cap Rock, the Grand Prairie and the western portion of the East Texas Piney Woods.

Runoff of the heavy rain was expected to severely inflate central and east Texas rivers.

The DPS said the incident involving the Saucedo children occurred in an area which was under flash flood and tornado warnings much of the afternoon and evening.

Saucedo's car, containing his wife and their two sons, was swept off a small bridge by the rapidly rising water. The man put the children into the ice chest and tried to push the chest to safety. However, it was swept downstream by the current.

Police said several other cars were swept off the road or stalled in the floods but no other injuries were reported. The highway was closed between Goliad and Victoria, 25 miles to the north.

Hard rains generally sweep the state Sunday, dumping up to two inches in the Dallas and Fort Worth areas in the north central part of the state and more than 4.8 inches of rain in Maybank, Tex., south of Fort Worth.

Victoria, Tex., at the southern end of the state, was under flash flood warnings most of the night early today from locally heavy rainfall but no damage was reported.

A weather service spokesman said the showers would decrease early today across some parts of the state but that by nightfall hard rains and lightning storms would spread from one end of the state to the other with the heaviest concentration in East Texas.

Several parts of the state were also under tornado watches and warnings during the late evening Sunday and early hours of today.

The Department of Public Safety said a tornado was seen a mile west of Fannin, Tex., but returned to the clouds without causing damage. Another tornado was seen near Victoria but caused no damage.

Hail up to golfball size was also reported in scattered parts of the state during the late evening hours of Sunday and early hours of today.

Two police officers treated after assault

Two Pampa police officers were treated and released at Highland General Hospital after they were assaulted while investigating a domestic disturbance Saturday night.

Pampa Police Chief Richard Mills said Patrolman Bruce Denham and Sgt. Roy Denman answered a call to 2117 N. Duncan where Wayne Leslie Howard and Fonda Avery Howard were involved in a quarrel.

The couple turned on the police officers, attacking them verbally, Mills said. Then Howard reportedly began striking the officers with his fists while Mrs. Howard reportedly "wielded a flashlight" against the pair, Mills added.

At one point during the fight, Howard reportedly tried to take Sgt. Denman's weapon from the holster before Denman could pull away to radio for assistance.

The fight continued until Lt. Robert Scott arrived and the couple were finally subdued.

Mills said that Denham, the first to be struck, was treated for bruises and bumps to the back and front of the head, a pulled muscle, split lip and bruised chin. He had been wearing one of the new protective helmets which were distributed to Pampa patrolmen last week, but it had been knocked off during the fracas.

Denman, who had just returned to duty following a recent surgery was examined for possible injuries to the incision. He sustained bruises during the fight.

The third officer, Lt. Scott, was kicked in the leg but did not require treatment.

Mills said Denman was back on duty after being released from the emergency room and added that Denham returned to work Sunday.

Aggravated assault charges were filed against the Howards. Mills said, and they were transferred to county jail. Howard was released on $3,000 bond and Mrs. Howard on $1,000 bond.

Jurors being questioned

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

Racial prejudices and homosexuality were discussed this morning in an attempt to qualify jurors for the trial of Leo Samuels Jr., 18, charged with aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

Oscar W. Nelson, 33, allegedly was blinded as a result of a shot fired Nov. 14, 1975, near the Peppermint Lounge, according to an opening statement by Guy Hardin, district attorney.

"The defendant took from his purse a gun, walked out and fired two shots," Hardin said.

Samuels is free under $10,000 bond. His attorney is James Bowers.

Hardin said punishment upon conviction can range from 2 to 10 years in prison and a fine up to $5,000. The district attorney said the defendant is "commonly known as Bo Peep."

One member of the estimated 100 persons called for jury duty was excused after he told the court that he "frowned" on homosexuality and did not think he could be a fair juror.

Several members of the panel said they felt that homosexuality is an illness.

In questioning prospective jurors as to how they feel about blacks, one woman said "We're all people ... no place does it say that Christ hung on the cross for whites only."

Bowers informed members of the panel that if chosen as jurors they would probably hear some vulgar language in the testimony.

Court resumed at 9 a.m. in 31st District Court with Judge Grainger McIlhenny presiding. Only 12 persons had been questioned at 11:30 a.m. Judge McIlhenny said 32 would be qualified for jury duty prior to jury selection by the attorneys.

One woman who said she has a son, and if he were a homosexual, "I'd be concerned ... I would not stop in my efforts for help. He would still be my son and I'd love him."

A total of 48 criminal cases is scheduled during this term of court in addition to eight civil cases.

Rains too late for much winter wheat

By JAMES F. WIECK
United Press International

Much of the drought-stricken winter wheat crop already was gone, but weekend rains over the nation's dry Southwest elevated hopes of farmers for recovery of some of their losses by planting other crops.

The drought began last summer and has been spreading in recent weeks. More rain is needed and farmers hope with additional showers they can plant grain sorghum for feeding cattle.

Merle Stoops, 70, a retired farmer near Hugoton, Kan., said the weekend rain was of some benefit. "It was pretty nice."

Stoops said. "It will salvage some of the wheat, but most of it is already gone."

He said he knew of only one farmer in his area whose wheat might be saved. "I can't think of anyone else around here that has any wheat left."

An area centered in the southwest corner of Kansas and extending into Colorado, Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico still was plagued by the drought. Dry conditions also continue in the Dakotas and Nebraska and portions of western Missouri.

The National Weather Service reports the period from August, 1975 through February, 1976 was the driest seven consecutive months on record in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

The Cimarron River, which begins in Northern New Mexico and meanders across the Oklahoma Panhandle, southwest Kansas and back down into Central Oklahoma, has been dry so long the riverbed has developed huge cracks in some areas.

A recent Agriculture Department special report estimated 1976 production in Kansas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Texas and Colorado at $21.7 million bushels, 181.6 million fewer than last year.

The National Association of Wheat Growers said production could be 250 million bushels below the "unusually good" 1975 crop and 73 million bushels below average. However, it added that the 1976 harvest, coupled with reserves from last year, will be large enough to meet all domestic and export needs and grocery prices should not increase.

Agriculture official Erwin Witte said the Colorado drought is spreading northward. "We've gotten reports of some fields in jeopardy as far north as Sterling," about 20 miles from the Nebraska border, he said.

About one-third of the potential wheat crop in Colorado has been lost. He said farmers without irrigation systems are hoping for additional moisture in the next couple of months so they can plant grain sorghum.

In Oklahoma, Beaver County farmers received three times as much rain in two nights as they had all year. It won't save the wheat, but many farmers hope the moisture will provide green pastures for cattle and the possibility of planting grain and forage sorghum.

"We're going to need more moisture," said Beaver County agent Aubra L. Wilson. "We don't have any grass at all. This should start it."

But Wilson also reported warm southerly winds followed the rain. "I talked to one fellow, and he said the dust was already beginning to blow."

He estimated what yield in his area would be about five bushels per acre compared to a normal of 20 to 21 bushels. "You can figure a loss of probably $20 million," he said.

South Dakota officials said crop prospects are gloomy with topsoil moisture still short except in the extreme southwest corner. Forecasters said the state will continue to suffer below average rainfall for a couple more years.

In Nebraska, recent rains have slowed the potential for severe wind erosion. W. J. Parker, state conservationist for the U.S. Soil Conservation Service, said a report released earlier this month showed about 317,000 acres damaged by wind erosion. Another 643,000 acres were in condition to blow before the rains came.

New look at an old Mideast incident

By Don Oakley

One does not usually associate serious purpose with a "skin" publication. That may explain a virtual absence of reaction so far among investigative journalists to a press release widely distributed by Penthouse magazine concerning a startling article in its current May issue. Or perhaps the allegations in the article are simply too startling for credence.

Penthouse charges that the Israeli air and sea assault on the U.S. spy ship Liberty off the Sinai coast on June 8, 1967, during the six-day Arab-Israeli war, was not a case of mistaken identity as Israel claimed. The clearly marked ship had already been under Israeli aerial surveillance for six hours that day.

The attack was deliberately launched, writes British war correspondent Anthony Pearson, to prevent the Liberty from reporting that Israeli armed forces had advanced beyond the limits of a secret prewar agreement with officials in the Johnson administration.

That agreement, he says, was for Israel to wage a contained war with Egypt in order to humiliate its blustering President Nasser in the eyes of his fellow Arabs and to undercut Soviet influence in the Middle East.

In the June issue of the magazine, Pearson proposes to tell how the United States and Israel covered up the truth about the Liberty incident.

These are grave charges, and appear to be well documented ones. Involving as they do the honor of an ally of America and implicating various former State Department and Pentagon officials, they deserve equally as well-documented reply by Washington and Israel.

Was the USS Liberty Israel's My Lai? This question must be answered.

Many in Congress retiring

There is a saying peculiar to the Washington, D.C., area that once you visit there, you are very likely to contract "Potomac fever" and will never want to leave. The exodus of retirees from Capitol Hill this year, however, indicates the cure for the fever may be at hand.

In 1974, the voluntary mass exodus of Members of Congress was regarded as a major political development. While more noiselessly being carried out this year, the flow is just as great as it was two years ago, reports the authoritative "Congressional Quarterly" magazine.

"As of mid-February, there were 34 announced departures from the House and seven from the Senate," says "Congressional Quarterly" in its February 21 issue. Although the total includes some who are leaving the House of Representatives to seek other political offices — chiefly the Senate — the number who are giving up the political gig at a relatively young age is striking.

Why would a man turn his back on an exciting career that long has been the stuff of dreams — one that pays nearly $45,000 a year and has fringe benefits to make kings of old envious? Obviously there are various reasons. Some of the most interesting — and perhaps most telling — were revealed recently by one of the retirees, Rep. James F. Hastings, a New York Republican.

Hastings, 49, is voluntarily retiring after four two-year terms in the House to go into business. Hastings, $19,000 in debt and deeply frustrated over the inability of Congress to solve major national problems, told the "Washington Post" that "I keep hearing that all politicians are crooks and I'm trying to figure out where I missed out."

He is also bitter over the lack of appreciation among his constituents for his legislative accomplishments. "In the minds of many people, those things don't count," he said the interview. "Number one, they are not aware of them. And number two, what's important is what I can do for them on a personal basis."

There should be a lesson in Hastings' lament — which no doubt could be echoed by many among the other retirees. One lesson is that we, the American people, have indeed subjected our representatives to unrelenting criticism. Much of it has been justified, but some of it undoubtedly hasn't been. Unfortunately, such low esteem for politicians generally has driven from office some genuinely good men — along with others we won't miss.

"Frankly, I don't like the way he seems so at home on the range."

It's your money Senate hikes budget for U.N.

By ROBERT S. ALLEN
WASHINGTON, April 19 — Although the bloc - manipulated United Nations is in pronounced disrepute throughout the U.S., you would never know it from the way Senate internationalists are carrying on.

With vigorous State Department support, they put through a $186 million U.S. budget for the UN — $44 million more than last year.

This 30 per cent hike over last year's $44 million UN allocation is in direct contradiction to President Ford's stern strictures for holding down federal spending. Apparently the State Department and Senate internationalists feel the UN should be exempt from such economizing.

It's all right to curb cost-of-living payments to millions of civilian and military retirees, to shut down military bases and installations disjoining the lives of thousands of wage earners and their families, and abolishing hundreds of village post offices — but the bloc - ruled UN is not only sacrosanct from such stark axing, it gets a $44 million boost in U.S. funding.

Indignantly protested Sen. Harry Byrd, Ind. - Va., "How can we justify a 30 per cent increase for the United Nations in one year? I submit it is not reasonable to go blindly along with a budget handed to us by the UN that says, 'This is your share and pay up.'"

Citing the far - reaching changes in UN membership and actions, the Oklahoman contended cutting this country's assessment is in keeping with the "reality of the world of 1976."

Votes in the UN today are not only irresponsible," declared Bartlett, "but these decisions also are in part the result of changing the rules of the game and the changing economic status of the players. I can't accept the argument that the U.S. has a commitment to continue pouring taxpayers' money into the UN without regard for the changed atmosphere there."

Bartlett's proposed fiscal crackdown drew shocked outcry from internationalist ranks.

Sen. Dick Clark, D. - Iowa, censoriously argued the 25 per cent figure is no excessive and a "very real measure of our ability to pay." He contended, "If we were paying according to our ability to pay, it would be in excess of that."

Pursuing that line of reasoning, the Iowa held: "For us to reduce the assessment all the way from 25 per cent to 15 per cent over a period of five years would not be the right course to take."

On that, he was heartily supported by Sen. John Sparkman, D. - Ala., chairman of the prestigious Foreign Relations Committee, who prides himself on being close to State Department leaders. He maintained slashing the U.S. assessment by legislation is unnecessary because the same result could be brought about by the U.S. Ambassador to the UN negotiating a reduction.

Retorted Sen. Byrd, "He should be doing it anyway. Why should we have to prod him by voting a resolution?"

Two sets of irrefutable statistics were thrown into the discussion by Sen. Richard Stone, D. - Fla., that the UN partisans never did get around to mentioning.

One is that UN salaries are 15 per cent above equivalent positions in the U.S. civil service; also that last year the UN professional staff got a 6 per cent pay hike, and that 70 per cent of the UN budget (upwards of $212 million) goes for salaries.

Noted Stone sardonically, "That's where our assessment money goes. Our taxpayers put it up and they pocket it."

The other figures show the startling disproportion of assessments of the oil - rich countries, as follows:

Iran, $738,006 (0.20 per cent); Libya, $405,938 (0.11 per cent); Kuwait, $332,102 (0.09 per cent); Nigeria, $369,003 (0.10 per cent); Saudi Arabia, $201,401 (0.06 per cent); Algeria, $236,202 (0.06 per cent); Iraq, $184,501 (0.05 per cent).

Crackdown
To forestall more of that, Sen. Dewey Bartlett, R. - Okla., proposed reducing the U.S. share of UN assessments to 15 per cent — over a period of five years.

Current U.S. assessment is 25 per cent, as fixed by Congress a few years ago. Until then, the U.S. put up as much as 39.8 per cent of UN funds. Under Bartlett's provision, the present 25 per cent allocation would be pruned 2 per cent a year over the next five years.

No election hoopla at the Blue Bird

By Tom Tiede

PHILADELPHIA — (NEA) — The Blue Bird Lounge is what passes for night life on the 5500 block of Baltimore avenue in this city's southwest side. It stays open until the last guy on his stool falls off. Across the way from the Beulah Tabernacle, next door to the abandoned Safe Streets Community Center, the bar is the only after-dark action around, except for a nearby variety store which doesn't count because it hasn't got a liquor license.

The Blue Bird is a corner building, which in the ghetto means it has more outside wall on which to scratch graffiti. It is three steps up from the pavement, so sidewalk service is available on the stoop. Whenever the temperature rises above 60 degrees, the door is left open for Sierra Club air conditioning and people passing by can get light on their feet from the scent of wine and Four Roses.

In times past, places like this were more than dives. For politicians active in the last decade they were paydirt to dig, or at least to stand in front of, while bemoaning the decay to news scribes who wrote for the evening editions.

Hubert Humphrey would come and talk of his "black brothers." George McGovern would stop by to talk-ask through his nose. And Martin Luther King, of course, a politico of another kind, was forever in these streets telling the nation that "the slum dweller is only a temporary resident."

But that was then. This time around the temporary residents of America's slums are observing the political process without benefit of particular attention. Jerry Ford could not find Southwest Philadelphia on the city trolley. Ronald Reagan figures, as did author Kin Hubbard, that it's no disgrace to be poor but it might as well be. Henry Jackson? One patron at the Blue Bird figures Henry Jackson's idea of justice for ghetto residents is equal apathy under the law.

There is some tangential concern, perhaps. Jimmy Carter passes around photos of himself with Martin Luther King's father. Morris Udall has enlisted the aid of Julian Bond, and Fred Harris had black Rep. John Conyers on his faint side. Yet there isn't an activist bleeding heart in the bunch. If Hubert Humphrey has been in a slum recently, he is keeping it secret, which isn't like him. This ain't where it's at now, says a guy in the Blue Bird, so that talk here is not of primaries but whether Joe Louis was better than M.-Ali.

A kid on a yellow bicycle comes to the door. He is sitting on a tennis shoe because his racer seat was stolen. The barkeep tells him to move on, before he is asphyxiated. The kid has a comb in his hair and the lettering on his t-shirt refers to good times in bed. He is about 11. Tall for his age, though. He rides up to the variety store, where he takes his bicycle inside for safety, and pockets a candy bar while buying a bottle of cherry colored soda.

The street is otherwise deserted. There is not much unnecessary human activity here after sunset. The street lights do not work well, if at all, and as a lady at Ruth's grocery put it earlier in the day: "If you don't get raped or ripped off, you still in danger of stepping on a broken bottle you can't see." Broken glass is indeed everywhere, as are clogged gutters, throwaway mattresses and boarded up store fronts. In this neighborhood, the wrong side won the war on poverty.

A police car hurries past, its red and blue lights blinking angrily. Two officers enter one of the doors in a two story row house adjacent to Baltimore Avenue. They come out with a woman in a robe comes to the door and leans against it. She falls down. Then, she crawls back inside. Neighbors watch through cracks in their window shades.

Two hundred years ago a Philadelphian named Benjamin Franklin wrote that poverty often deprives people of spirit and virtue; because "it's hard for an empty bag to stand upright." That's why nobody at the Blue Bird is going to bother much with politics this year. After a few drinks, a few gags and a few sobs, the concern at the bar is whether there'll be money left to pay for the nightcaps.

Capitol Comedy

Since computers failed in the Wisconsin primary, TV networks will restore their ouija boards.

The primaries are like a horse race where nobody loses. Just Win, Place and Show.

When the final Wisconsin vote was tabulated, both Udall and the computers said, "Say it ain't so."

After the Wisconsin projection, Carter proved that computers were only human.

Ford is against expanding cable TV. He doesn't want to approve anything that's under cover.

Carter is so confident of the Democratic nomination, he ordered victory balloons in the shape of peanuts.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP 'O TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Weekend news summary

By United Press International
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration plans to provide special help for American footwear firms and employees, but will not restrict shoe imports as the industry had asked.

"A remedy involving import restraints would have lessened competition in the shoe industry and resulted in higher shoe prices for American consumers at a time when lowering the rate of inflation is essential," said Ambassador Frederick Dent, Ford's special representative for trade negotiations.

Dent said idled domestic workers will be given job retraining, and meanwhile the employees will be eligible for 12 months of benefits amounting up to 70 per cent of their average weekly pay.

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Former U.S. Gen. David Elazar, blamed for Israeli setbacks at the beginning of the 1973 Middle East war, was buried Sunday with full military honors.

Elazar, who resigned as commander of Israel's armed forces because of accusations that he was unprepared for the war, died Thursday of a heart attack while swimming in a pool near his suburban Tel Aviv home. He was 51.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Postal Service believes that private mail delivery firms might ignore rural residents and ghetto dwellers and serve only high profit areas if Congress allows private delivery of first class mail.

In an unpublished position paper obtained by UPI, the service questioned whether private mail firms would ensure protection of the mails from theft and tampering.

William Bolger, deputy to Postmaster General Benjamin Bailar, drafted the agency's response to those who claim competition from private mail firms would improve efficiency and reduce mail costs.

The paper also questioned who would protect mail boxes from tampering and mail from theft, since federal law safeguards only U.S. mail handled by the Postal Service.

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — A group of 31 Vietnamese fleeing their homeland in a fishing boat almost blundered into Cambodia, but escaped Cambodian navy gunfire and made it to Thailand.

Police sources said the 10 men, 13 women, seven girls and a boy left Saigon on April 10 and arrived at Perit Island, about 190 miles southeast of Bangkok, near the Cambodian border Sunday.

The refugees told Thai authorities they had made a navigating error and tried to land in Cambodia. When they spotted approaching Cambodian navy vessels, they realized their mistake and ran for the open sea and escaped.

The Vietnamese said they hoped to go to the United States. Authorities have forced them to remain on their boat pending permission from Bangkok allowing them to land.

MIAMI (UPI) — Bay of Pigs veterans marked the 13th anniversary of their ill-fated landing in Cuba to overthrow Fidel Castro, but their battle flag was still absent, sitting in a bank vault for safe keeping.

Attorney Ellis Rubin, representing the Bay of Pigs Veterans Association, went to Boston last week to get the flag from the John F. Kennedy Library.

It had been presented to Kennedy in 1962, but the veterans sued to get it back last year after Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., recommended resuming diplomatic relations with the Castro government.

The veterans had planned to display the flag at the Monument to the Martyrs in Miami's Little Havana at Saturday's ceremony, but Rubin said he put the flag in a bank vault for safekeeping.

LANDMARK
RHODES, Greece (UPI) — The Hotel des Roses, one of the landmarks of the tourist island of Rhodes and its oldest luxury hotel, will be torn down and rebuilt in the same architectural style, the Greek tourist organization said.

The hotel, built in the early 1930s by direct order of Italian dictator Benito Mussolini, who wanted to promote tourism in the Italian-occupied island, was sold to the Bank of Greece for $6 million.

Ford claims underdog role

DALLAS (UPI) — President Ford believes quality education can be achieved through some method other than busing — but says as the nation's chief executive he has no alternative but to enforce the law.

Ford, in a Dallas interview aired during the weekend, said he was bound by the constitution to aid court-ordered busing and hoped desegregation of Dallas schools could be brought about without violence.

"I have sworn to uphold the Constitution and I have no choice but to carry out whatever the federal responsibility is," Ford said in an interview taped by KDFW radio during the president's campaign tour earlier this month.

"The method is where I disagree with some of the court orders."

"I have consistently said that court ordered forced busing is not the right way, the best way, to achieve quality education."

Dallas, the nation's eighth largest school district, has been ordered to desegregate schools by next year and Ford said he hoped integration could be brought about without violence.

"Some court decisions have been very radical in how they tried to apply court ordered busing," Ford said. "Others have been more moderate. Others have tried to work with the community."

"And as I understand it, here in Dallas there's been a major community effort undertaken... in order to avoid the kind of violence that has taken place in Boston and Louisville."

Commenting on his chances in the May 1 Texas presidential primary, Ford conceded he was behind but said he still might have more votes than predicted.

"We started out as an underdog," Ford said. "But we have some wonderful leadership in John Tower, we have excellent volunteers in the state of Texas, so we expect to make considerable headway and we may surprise some people."

He said the primary between himself and former California Gov. Ronald Reagan was basically good for the Republican party, calling it "healthy" and "wholesome."

"I hope we can conduct ourselves so that the party is not divided," he said.

Ford also reiterated his position on a possible, and much desired endorsement by former Texas Gov. John Connally.

"Based on what I know, it's been my impression that Gov. Connally will not endorse either my opponent or myself," Ford said. "Naturally, his endorsement I would appreciate, but I certainly understand his view point and I leave it up to his good political judgment as to what he ought to do."

Connally has sworn to stay neutral in the primary, even though Ford believed the Connally to sway a large number of votes.

"It certainly would be significant," he said. "He was an outstanding governor in Texas for six years. He has a fine record in Washington and he's respected by Democrats as well as Republicans in this state."

TOWER SAYS REAGAN NO LONGER CHALLENGE

WASHINGTON — Sen. John Tower has indicated that he believed that the challenge of former California Gov. Ronald Reagan to President Ford's reelection bid is about over.

Although he said Reagan still had "strength" in Texas and elsewhere, Tower said the Ford campaign would now direct more effort on winning next fall's election than defeating Reagan in remaining primary fights.

Following a meeting with Rogers C.B. Horton, Ford's top political aide, Tower said the two agreed that the President's strategists should now place "increasing emphasis" on Ford winning in November.

However, the Wichita Falls Republican refused to discuss details of how Ford would alter his campaign approach.

Tower also refuted reports that he was asked to act as an intermediary on behalf of the Ford campaign in hopes of persuading the former California Governor to drop his presidential challenge.

According to press reports, Horton asked Tower and other key Republicans leaders on Capitol Hill to help convince the Reagan camp to abandon the challenge to Ford. However, a spokesman for Tower said the senator was not asked to contact "anybody and he will not."

Although he once predicted Ford would have his problems in the May 1 Texas primary, Tower said the President has improved his "position substantially." He now predicts that Ford will win the state's primary.

In beating Reagan in Illinois, the President scored his fourth straight victory in a primary in which both candidates campaigned.

'Chorus Line' wins best musical award

NEW YORK (UPI) — "A Chorus Line," the story of what makes a dancer dance, won nine Tony Awards Sunday night, including best musical of the year. Tom Stoppard's "Travesties" won the 1976 award for best play.

The top award for best actor in a play went to John Wood for Travesties, performed by Britain's Royal Shakespeare Company and closed after a relatively short run. Irene Worth won the Tony for best actress for her performance in "Sweet Bird of Youth."

Richard Burton won a special "Welcome Back to Broadway" medallion for his starring role in "Equus," by playwright Peter Shaffer.

Donna McKechnie of "A Chorus Line" won the award for best actress in a musical and George Rose won the actor's award for his role in the revival of "My Fair Lady."

Produced by Joseph Papp, "A Chorus Line" also won Tonys for best book, score, director in a musical, choreography, featured actor and actress in a musical, and lighting.

Ellis Rabb was named best director for "The Royal Family."

The best actor award had been a close race between Wood and George C. Scott for "Death of a Salesman." Other nominations were Moses Gunn ("The Poison Tree") and Donald Sinden ("Habeas Corpus").

Miss Worth was the favorite over Rosemary Harris ("The Royal Family") for best actress; dramatic performances usually have an edge over comedies. Others nominated were Tovah Feldshuh ("Yentl") and Lynn Redgrave ("Mrs. Warren's Profession").

Also nominated for best play were "First Breese of Summer" by Leslie Lee, "Knock Knock" by Jules Feiffer, "Lamproost Reunion" by Louis LaRusso II, and "Travesties" by Tom Stoppard.

The 30th annual presentation of the Tony Awards — given by the American Theatre Wing for excellence in the Broadway theater and named after the late Antoinette Perry — was shown on ABC Television for the 10th straight year.

Producer Alexander H. Cohen and writer Hildy Parks (Mrs. Cohen) once again concentrated on the entertainment side of the two-hour show, including Richard Burton and Trish Van Devere in excerpts from "Hamlet," live numbers from "A Chorus Line," "Bubbling Brown Sugar," "Chicago" and "Pacific Overtures."

Special awards were given to producer-director-playwright George Abbott, 88, in recognition of his 63 years in the American theater, the Circle in the Square for its 25 years of non-profit efforts, and Washington's Arena Stage for excellence in regional theater.

New Jersey has the greatest population density in the U.S., with 953.1 persons per square mile.

Lebanon's civil war slows

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Lebanese, Syrian and Palestinian representatives agreed today on practical steps to halt the year-old Lebanese civil war.

On the battlefield, the heavy fighting that marred the first session of the Lebanese-Syrian-Palestinian Supreme Military Committee subsided Monday and only sporadic exchanges were reported across the Christian-Muslim confrontation lines.

Casualties in the year-long conflict topped 17,500 dead and 36,700 wounded.

The Supreme Military Committee, which met under the chairmanship of Prime Minister Rashid Karami, said today's session was devoted to "practical measures designed to consolidate the cease-fire."

A statement after the meeting gave no specific details, but said "the practical measures include the formation of supervisory bodies consisting of Syrian and Lebanese army officers."

The committee also decided to form a "deterrent force which would see through the implementation of the cease-fire on all Lebanese territory."

Agreement also was reached to use the Lebanese health ministry building — along the green-line separating the Christian and Muslim section of Beirut — as the committee's permanent headquarters.

Muslim leftists traded mortar, rocket and machine gun fire in heavy fighting Sunday night. The sound of exploding bombs and shells echoed across all sectors of Beirut, giving citizens another night of only fitful sleep in basement shelters.

In the east, artillery exchanges boomed between leftist-controlled Aintoura and Mtein and the town of Bolonia and Mrouj, under control of the right-wing Phalangist party.

The heavy fighting marred the first meeting of the Syrian-Lebanese-Palestinian supreme military committee at the home of Premier Rashid Karami. The committee scheduled another meeting this morning to pursue efforts to consolidate a permanent truce.

Two Syrian army officers, Col. Ali Madani and Col. Mohammed Kholi, were joined at the talks by representatives of leftist and rightist militias and top Palestinian guerrilla leaders Salah Khalaf of Al Fatah and Zuheir Mohsen of the Saqqa organization.

Syrian troops, who entered Lebanon more than a week ago to impose an arms blockade, remained in position along the frontier. More than 40 Syrian tanks were dug in at the main strongpoint near the Masnaa checkpoint, about three miles inside Lebanese territory.

Both left and right-wing factions issued statements Sunday cautiously welcoming the latest Syrian peace accord, worked out in Damascus Friday by Syrian President Hafez Assad and Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat.

The main point of the agreement is for the joint committee to stop the fighting and take a "unified stand" against any faction attempting to resume military operations.

The agreement also rejected any attempts to involve the United Nations or the Arab League in the crisis and opposed all American "schemes and solutions."

Elsewhere on the political front, there was confusion over whether President Suleiman Franjeh had actually signed a constitutional amendment paving the way for his resignation — a key leftist demand.

Some newspapers and radio stations said Franjeh had signed the document, which allows the immediate election of his successor. Others said he had signed it but not attached a date.

Franjeh, who stubbornly clung to the presidency throughout the war, said nothing.

The Pampa News reported Tuesday that the Pampa Junior High School Choir had appeared last year at the Texas Music Educators Association convention. The choir received an invitation to perform at the group's 1976 meeting, but did not receive permission to attend.

Pakistan considering relations with India

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — India has offered to resume diplomatic relations with Pakistan, broken during the bloody two-week war of 1971 that cost Pakistan its eastern wing, a foreign office spokesman said today.

The offer was made in a letter Prime Minister Indira Gandhi wrote to Pakistani Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto April 11, the spokesman said.

Mrs. Gandhi's letter was a response to a communication from Bhutto earlier this month in which he expressed willingness to withdraw Pakistan's five-year-old complaint before the International Civil Aviation Organization against India's cancellation of Pakistani overflights from Karachi to Dacca, capital of what was then East Pakistan, now Bangladesh.

India's offer to normalize relations with Pakistan was announced four days after Mrs. Gandhi's government announced it had decided to exchange ambassadors with China.

The two countries withdrew their ambassadors shortly before their 1962 border war. The spokesman said the Indian Prime Minister had also agreed to discuss with Pakistan "pending matters" between the two countries such as air links, overflights and the resumption of rail and road communications.

The two countries broke relations during their 14-day war in December, 1971, that ended in the emergence of Pakistan's eastern province as the nation of Bangladesh.

India and Pakistan have already restored trade, postal and telecommunications services.

India barred Pakistani commercial flights from Karachi to Dacca in the summer of 1971.

India's action was a retaliation for the hijacking of an Indian commercial plane to Lahore by two Kashmiri Muslims who later blew up the aircraft after allowing all passengers and members of the crew to disembark. Pakistan followed up by refusing Indian overflights from Delhi to Kabul, capital of Afghanistan.

Pakistan complained to the International Civil Aviation Organization, charging India with violation of international air traffic regulations. The matter still rests with the ICAO.

India asked Pakistan to compensate it for the loss of its plane, which Pakistan refused.

Irish Easter passes quietly

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Easter Sunday passed quietly on the 60th anniversary of the bloody Easter Rebellion despite threats of new violence against British rule. Security forces remained on alert for Protestant marches today.

The militant provisional wing and the official wing of the Irish Republican Army staged scores of demonstrations throughout the province Sunday and vowed to press their terrorist campaign unless Britain withdrew its troops from the province and freed IRA prisoners.

Large contingents of troops and police kept a low profile, but precautions were intensive. All holiday leave for security forces was canceled.

The Orange Order, a long-established organization pledged to uphold the Protestant tradition in Northern Ireland, planned several marches today, a public holiday in Northern Ireland and the rest of Britain. The procession route in Belfast passes close by Catholic districts.

Killed pipers led hundreds of marchers through the streets of Belfast Sunday.

Security forces said the only disturbance was an attack by about 100 stone-throwing youths on the police station in the Roman Catholic Andersonstown district of Belfast.

An armored car smashed through the gates of a cemetery where about 20 youths had sought refuge. Four were later arrested but there were no casualties.

Authorities had feared a violent memorial to the 1916 Easter uprising in Dublin against British rule. Britain crushed the rebellion and executed its leaders.

But the revolt stiffened Irish resistance to British rule and the southern 26 counties subsequently won independence while the remaining six in Ulster stayed part of Great Britain.

The day passed without incident in London, despite fears of renewed IRA bombing attacks there. The discovery of 200 pounds of explosives in a north London garage Thursday may have thwarted plans for a new offensive, police said.

In another incident early Sunday a 32-year-old Protestant was kidnapped in Belfast by two masked men and shot in the thigh.

Officers find missing child

Pampa police officers located a missing child, investigated two burglaries, a criminal mischief complaint, two reports of malicious mischief, a theft, one non-injury accident, one hit-and-run accident and made one arrest for possession of marijuana over the weekend.

An eight-year-old boy was reported missing at 6 p.m. Sunday by his parents who told police they had last seen the child when he left for church at 9 a.m.

Police Chief Richard Mills said the entire shift was involved in the search for the boy, as well as several volunteers. The boy was located shortly after 9 p.m. at a friend's house.

Terry Lynn Newberry of 847 S. Lyndel Ray Laycock of 1925 N. Banks called to report that the air had been let out of two tires on his car.

Floyd Frank Smith of 2016 Williston said his wife had parked her car at Gibson's on Duncan and when she returned and eight-track stereo and the ash tray were missing.

Police stopped a car in the 700 block of W. Wilks and arrested the driver, Vernon Howard Paulson of 708 N. Wells, for possession of marijuana.

Alsup's at 1901 N. Hobart reported that a car stopped for gasoline and left without paying.

Cleve Brantley of 411 N. Ward told police that during the night someone had switched all the trash cans in the neighborhood and David Turcotte reported that he had seen two males dump the contents of two trash cans in the middle of the street in the 300 block of Harvester.

A car belonging to Curtis M. Broadus of Miami was struck by an unknown vehicle in the 1100 block of Charles.

Udall loses ballot try

United Press International Morris Udall, who has broken off his campaign for next week's Pennsylvania primary to seek votes in his home territory, today lost his battle to get on the May 4 Indiana primary ballot.

The Supreme Court refused to rule quickly on his appeal to the Indiana elections officials' decision to keep him off the ballot because of a mixup over the filing of the required number of petition signatures.

Even though the high court might eventually hear the Arizona congressman's arguments against the state election law, any decision would come too late to do him any good.

A Washington spokesman for Udall said, "We're disappointed, obviously. We're not sure what legal means are open to us now."

Udall, although facing what could be a make-or-break situation in the Pennsylvania voting next Tuesday, spent Easter Sunday in Phoenix and scheduled two more days of appearances in Arizona and New Mexico and Colorado. "It is not time wasted," the spokesman said.

Democratic front-runner

Jimmy Carter is doing better than his opponents in Maryland, which has a primary May 18, according to a poll taken for the Baltimore Sun and released today.

The sample of 639 registered Maryland Democrats polled by phone by Sidney Hollander Associates between April 8 and 11 showed Carter with 24 per cent, George Wallace with 13 per cent, Henry Jackson with 13 per cent, and Marvin Mandel with 8 per cent and California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., with 7 per cent.

Supreme Court throws obscene film case back

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court today sent back to federal district court a challenge to San Antonio, Tex. police who charged an adult movie theater owner with use of a criminal instrument — a movie projector used to show the film "Deep Throat."

A three-judge federal court in Houston barred use of the state law to create a felony out of showing an allegedly obscene film, which is only a misdemeanor.

Texas brought a direct appeal to the Supreme Court, which today ruled in a five-page unsigned opinion that no constitutional issue was presented, only an interpretation of state law, and therefore no three-judge court should have been convened.

The justices sent the case back to the district court for a new, single-judge ruling which can then be appealed to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans rather than directly to the Supreme Court.

The law forbids possession of a "criminal instrument" with intent to commit an offense. Violations are punishable by 2 to 10 years in prison and a fine up to $5,000.

On four successive occasions in the summer of 1974 a magistrate found cause to seize the film "Deep Throat" while it was being exhibited by Richard C. Dexter at the Fiesta Theater. On three occasions Dexter was arrested and charged with possession of a criminal instrument: a portable film projector.

He also was charged with a misdemeanor under the commercial obscenity law.

On complaint by Dexter, the federal panel described the law enforcement activity as "a blatant use of an inappropriate statute, which bootstrapped the misdemeanor offense into a felony."

The law was not aimed at instruments which have lawful uses, it ruled, but at possession of articles specially designed for commission of a crime.

Man dies in shooting

HOUSTON (UPI) — Police officers shot and killed one man and critically wounded another today during a five-mile chase through downtown.

Police said the chase began when officers tried to stop the men for running a red light. They were in a stolen car, according to police.

Schaffer, 40, suffered multiple gunshot wounds.

Lt. B.G. Leonard said 10 to 15 police cars chased the pair through downtown after Vance fired at police. The car was stopped after a police bullet hit a tire and it crashed into a guardrail.

At least 20 bullets hit the car. Both windows on the driver's side and the back windows were broken.

Curfew imposed in Jericho

JERICHO, Israeli-occupied Jordan (UPI) — Authorities imposed a curfew on the center of this Biblical city today to head off a possible confrontation between local Arabs and thousands of Israelis completing a two-day march across the occupied West Bank of Jordan.

Even before the vanguard of marchers, with knapsacks, baby carriages, guns and guitars, reached the outskirts of the city, baton-swinging troops broke up a sit-in demonstration by hundreds of Arabs in the city's main square, protesting the 10-mile hike.

Troops hauled dozens of demonstrators into custody, but made no move to detain members of the newly elected municipal council, including incumbent mayor Shafiq Bali, who took part in the protest.

Authorities also placed the Arab city of Jenin under curfew after breaking up a crowd of some 100 demonstrators who protested the march, shouting pro-Palestinian slogans.

One of the demonstrators was wounded in the shoulder from warning shots fired by troops quelling the disturbance, Arab informants said.

The fifth largest town on the West Bank, Jenin lies 39 miles north of Jericho.

Tens of thousands of Israelis marched across the West Bank today to show that, all of the occupied region "belongs to the Jewish people."

The two-day march, organized by the right-wing Gush Emunim movement, set out Sunday morning on the 20-mile trek from the wind-swept plains of Beit El to the town of Jericho.

The march came after 2 1/2 months of Arab unrest on the West Bank and sweeping gains by Palestinian nationalists in last week's municipal elections in the region. Israel seized the West Bank from Jordan in the 1967 Middle East War.

A spokesman for the fervent nationalist Gush Emunim, which means Band of Believers in Hebrew, said more than 45,000 persons joined in the march. Israel's semi-official national radio put the figure at about 20,000.

Right-wing Rabbi Moshe Levinger of Kiryat Arba, an Israeli settlement on the West Bank near Hebron, said the marchers "have nothing against the Arabs" but want all the biblical land of Israel, including the West Bank, to remain under Jewish control.

"The whole land of Israel belongs to the Jewish people," he told reporters as marchers from all over Israel poured out of hundreds of chartered buses at the start of the march.

The marchers — youths with backpacks, sleeping bags and canteens, families pushing baby carriages and young women in shorts and sandals — spent the night in Kachav Hashahar halfway along the road to Jericho.

Many of the marchers carried Uzi submachine guns, pistols and guitars in response to Gush Emunim newspaper advertisements saying, "Owners of firearms and musical instruments are asked to bring them."

The organizers picked Beit El for the start of the march because of the Old Testament's reference to it as the place where God told Abraham, "Rise up and walk throughout the length of the land because I have given it to you."

Jeeps of Israeli troops armed with automatic rifles lined the route to guard against guerrilla attacks or hostility from local Arabs opposed to Jewish settlement in the region.

Arab sources said hundreds of youths demonstrated against the march in Nablus, Ramallah and Jenin. They said the troops generally stayed on a school in Nablus. There were no reported arrests.

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Something bothers me, and I would like your opinion and the opinion of others who have dealt with this problem.

Is it considered proper to smell food that is served to you before eating it?

I am seriously considering marrying a man who does this, and I find it extremely irritating and embarrassing: He smells the food in the finest restaurants, at the homes of friends and even at my home. It's not just a quick sniff—he puts his nose right down near the food and smells it thoroughly!

We are both in our late 50s and have been married before. Outside of this one fault, he is intelligent, charming and delightful company. But I'm not sure I could sit down for three meals a day with a man who has this disgusting habit. Or am I too picky?

PICKY ME

DEAR PICKY: Diplomatically tell the gentleman that his habit bothers you and suggest that he be less obvious about it. Don't insist that he drop the habit unless you want to drop HIM. Old habits die hard.

DEAR ABBY: Dad and us kids want to get Mom a "mother's bracelet" for Mother's Day. It will have a charm with each of her children's name and birth date engraved on it.

Last year my oldest brother died, and I wonder if we should include his name and birth date. He was a very important part of our family, even though he was mentally retarded.

Do you think it would make Mom sad to have his charm on her bracelet? We don't want to make her unhappy, but we don't want her to think we have forgotten him. Thank you.

MOM'S KIDS

DEAR KIDS: Include a charm for your oldest brother. I think your mom would appreciate it. You are very loving and thoughtful children to consider it.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I disagree on something and hope you can settle it.

Is it all right to tell a hostess to please put the dogs and cats out of sight during dinner?

The situation is as follows: My wife's mother has two dogs and three cats who have the run of the house. I don't mind pets if they are clean-looking and don't stay under my feet all the time. My mother-in-law's pets are always on her lap. She feeds them while she eats and serves others, which spoils my appetite.

Also, one dog is part St. Bernard, and he drools and slobbers all the time, which also isn't very appetizing. Plus the cats seem to have chronic eczema, and their visible sores turn my stomach.

My wife says Mom's pets are like her "children," and as guests, we should look the other way and not say anything. I say, I should politely ask Mom to please put the pets in another room while we're eating.

What do you say?

WEAK STOMACH

DEAR WEAK: If your description of the pets is accurate, I'm with you all the way!

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB—I consider myself a healthy, happy woman of 43 with a wonderful husband and family. I don't pay much attention to my aches and pains. I can put up with the occasional arthritic aches in hands and shoulders. Recently I have had some symptoms that have frightened me. Once I fainted, apparently for no reason, and once my right hand ceased to function at all for about two hours. I couldn't make it move or anything. I found out yesterday when a routine blood pressure was taken in the dentist's chair that my blood pressure was a little high, 150 over 98.

This is probably the case of a little knowledge being a bad thing because I fear a brain tumor. A year ago I had my annual checkup, but I hesitated to mention my fears to my doctor, no doubt it would have sounded silly. Also I understand the tests for brain tumor are quite painful. Am I over reacting?

DEAR READER—I am always amazed at how many patients avoid telling the doctor the thing that they are worried most about. Obviously the best way to get an answer is to ask a question. There are lots of things a doctor can do and usually does routinely on a good physical examination that would help him ascertain whether there was any real likelihood of your having a brain tumor or not. When he checks all your reflexes and notes even how you walk and stand he'll have some ideas of how your brain and nervous system is functioning.

When he looks in the back of the eyes he can see whether there is any evidence of increased pressure inside the brain. Since you didn't ask him and you probably had no signs to indicate such a thing he probably felt it totally unnecessary to suddenly tell you that you don't have any evidence of a brain tumor.

I can't say why you fainted. There are many reasons why people faint, from over breathing (hyperventilation) to emotional reactions, recent illnesses, prolonged standing or any number of things. Nor could I possibly tell you why you had some trouble moving your right hand. That too could have been a complication from hyperventilation, if you happened to have been anxious about something.

Your blood pressure reading was a little high, but I'd like to point out that one blood pressure reading does not give a true indication of what one's real blood pressure is. The worst time to get an accurate blood pressure reading is during a period of stress. That would certainly include the dentist's chair for most people. For more information on what controls your blood pressure send 50 cents for The Health Letter, number 1-8, Blood Pressure. Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

If you really want to find out what your blood pressure is under normal circumstances have it taken under normal circumstances. Most people's pressure is often a little higher in the doctor's office than it is at home. Because of your concern and the inability to really pin down what the symptoms you have mentioned mean I think you ought to go to your family doctor and tell him what you're worried about and let him give you a proper examination and a good answer.

A stripe to fit every mood

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Step right up, little lady, tell ya what I'm gonna do. You say you want stripes for summer? You got 'em. Every kind your little heart desires: Pinwheel, railroad, candy, awning, chevron, ribbon, ombre, men's shirting...

And every way you could want: on tee shirts and long tank tops to pull over skirts or pants; on cotton sundresses; short and long jumpsuits; in chiffon, paper-thin cotton or silk for evening; on bandeau tops, bikini bottoms and terry covers for the beach.

If you can't find a stripe you like, and the matter is quite subjective, don't blame Seventh Avenue. They've certainly tried.

"Summer clothes and solid colors can be very dull," says designer John Anthony, "that's why stripes are big. I used five different men's shirting stripes for summer. I worked my collection on color, subtle, soft colors and men's shirting stripes keep it soft."

Sidney Cohen, vice president of loungewear for Kayser-Roth, says, "The Parisian and Italian markets went absolutely crazy about stripes this year. I'd say it's the Moroccan influence. For instance, we're showing a blue and white striped bur-noose in terrycloth."

Stripes are mindful of the sea, designers say, clean and fresh for summer.

"They're less busy than a plaid," remarks Don Sayres who designs for Gambit. "They offer a classic look, a linear delineation of color."

And Gil Aimbez of Genre, says, "Workmen's stripes are like textured solids. They add another dimension to the garment. I like them muted and women find them slimming."

Yes, slimming, you agree. Always wear vertical stripes if your figure is portly, the fashion magazines intone. Steer clear of horizontal lines that race around trumpeting attention to your Falstaffian girth.

Rubbish, says Prof. Faith Keane who teaches fashion history and merchandising at New York University.

"Imagine," she says, "that you are five feet tall with a big bottom and a big bosom. Now, you put vertical stripes over those curves and what do you get? Waves. An accentuation of those curves. On the other hand, if that figure has a narrow, horizontal stripe that's not too contrasty superimposed on it, your eye is carried up and down the figure instead of around. It's a ladder effect."

"Vertical stripes will lengthen a thin body, yes," she says, "but not a bulbous one. Remember, any broad, contrasting stripe no matter which way it runs will enlarge a figure."

And stripes, she says, no matter what you may think, are not simply straight lines.

"Sometimes, they zigzag," she explains, "or wave as in an open C design or a figure eight. A stripe can even be shaped like a Greek key which is a repetition of an oblong."

"Nobody wants endless repetition of the same thing, so stripes are diversified. They've been a favorite pattern since time immemorial. The Egyptians lovwhether it's a dress or a bowl to cook in, the simplest design to occur to you is a stripe. It's an easy opportunity to get color contrast.

The newest fashion stripes, she says, have been borrowed from the world of fine arts, specifically from an artist named Frank Stella.

"We used to call them Roman stripes," she says, "the kind used in hair ribbons years ago."

"These simply are multicolor stripes, one after another, that form a pattern in themselves without a white background."

There is one more sphere of influence the professor didn't mention that could account for a subliminal interest in stripes.

No one has stressed true prison stripes yet, but considering the shenanigans involving a certain apartment complex in Washington, D.C., who's to say cell wear hasn't worked its way into the nation's psyche.

On the agenda

Allison call fry

The Allison Junior and Senior Classes are sponsoring a calf fry and chili supper at 7 p.m. Saturday in the Allison High School Cafeteria in Allison.

The gate price is $3 for ages 12 and up and $1.75 for age 12 and under.

The project is planned to raise money for the class trips.

County SWC District

The Gray County Soil and Water Conservation District will meet at 7 a.m. Wednesday in the Black Gold Restaurant here.

The agenda calls for a review for approval of plans on Pat Helton, a review of the Great Plains application on Burt Stubbs, and discussion of easements and subordinate agreements on McClellan Creek Watershed Project.

A discussion on road sign replacement and an educational workshop in June is also scheduled.

Soil Stewardship Week is set for May 23-30.

Miss US Teen

Girls from 13 through 19 years of age from all parts of Texas are invited to enter the 1976 Texas State Miss U.S. Teen finals July 9-11 in the Sheraton-Houston Hotel in Houston.

Entry information may be obtained by writing to Miss U.S. Pageants, Box 1150 in Pasadena.

Winner of the statewide event will receive a trophy, sash, tiara and will represent Texas in the national finals at Lake Charles, La., in mid August. Runnersup will also be eligible to attend national finals.

VFW Auxiliary

Mrs. May Hatcher is the new president of the Ladies Auxiliary for Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 1657.

The election was held Tuesday in the Senior Citizens Center.

Other officers are Mrs. Don

Emmons, senior vice president; Mrs. Tony Smith Jr., junior vice president; Mrs. Bunah Walling, conductress; Mrs. Vernon Stuckey, treasurer; Mrs. Alice Armstrong, chaplain; and Mrs. Marie Boyd, secretary.

Color bearers are Mrs. Clyde Gray, Nora Heuston, Hazel Smiley and Mrs. R.E. Tyre.

Mrs. Boyd said Mrs. Anna Holder was still hospitalized at St. Anthony's in Amarillo. Members were reminded of the state convention in Amarillo in June.

The next social meeting will be Tuesday at the center.

Pampa Realtors

Members of the Pampa Board of Realtors will join the national observance of Private Property Week in 1976 with special activities today through Saturday.

"We're glad to have this opportunity to tell the public a little bit about our activities," Marcie Wise, Pampa board president said.

The board will host a coffee in the Citizen's Bank Tuesday morning honoring the outstanding business people in our community.

The annual tree planting, sponsored by the board, is scheduled Thursday in Red Deer Park.

A film, "Uncle Sam," will be shown in the elementary schools and for many civic groups in Pampa this week.

"In these activities and others throughout the year, we can work together for a better community. It must be one with a sound economic future based upon locally controlled, carefully planned land use.

There are 500,000 Realtors and Realtor Associates who will be working along with us," Wise said.

Episcopalians ask man to worship elsewhere

By DAVID E. ANDERSON

UPI Religion Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI)—With its "kindest personal regards," the vestry of an Episcopal church has asked Dr. Louis Crew to worship elsewhere.

He is active in the homosexual movement and "married" to another man.

"We would all be pleased if you would find some other place of worship that may be more in sympathy to your thinking and efforts toward gay people," the vestry of St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Fort Valley, Ga., told Crew in a letter which he made available to UPI.

Despite the request, Crew said, "I will continue to worship at St. Luke's in peace and love for my enemies at every communion when I am in town."

He also said he hoped there was no truth to "rumors" the vestry's action "was a prelude to... excommunication of me."

In its March 8 letter, the vestry referred to Crew's

"ambition to promote the gay movement" in Fort Valley and to his work as a founder of "Integrity," a national organization of homosexual Episcopalians. He is editor of the group's newsletter.

"We respect your rights to be a gay liberator, but as a body would prefer not to take part in its promotion," the six members of the vestry told Crew, also an associate professor of English at Fort Valley State College.

The vestry said it found after checking the church registry that Crew was not an official member of St. Luke's parish.

"We welcome all Episcopalians to our church and other visitors but do not believe that the business of this parish should be dictated and/or directed by persons outside its official membership," it said.

"For you and yours, continued success with or without our blessings, please accept our kindest personal regards."

Old Time Fiddlers meet on farm

UNION GROVE, N.C. (UPI)—A record crowd of more than 120,000 people packed J. Pierce Van Hoy's farm Saturday for the 52nd annual Old Time Fiddlers Convention with numerous cases of sunburn the only reported problem.

"We think we done (sic) went over 120,000 and there'll be a few more," predicted Iredell County deputy Bill Stamey. He said the crowd might grow by 10,000.

Stuart, Va., postman Buddy Pendleton, 40, was favored to take the title of World Champion Fiddler for the fourth year in a row.

"They are not giving us any problems at all," said Stamey. About 175 arrests had been made since the event began Thursday night, most on misdemeanor drug charges.

"It's a bigger crowd and it's better behaved than what we've been having," said Stamey. "It's kind of got me puzzled. This is the fifth one I've worked and it's been the quietest one."

"We had one guy in here late last night saying this is the third time he's been here and the third time he's been arrested" on drug charges, said Stamey. About 250 state and local officers worked 12-hour shifts to police the crowd.

Four cow pastures were jammed by early Saturday, and traffic in the area tucked into the Appalachian foothills was rerouted.

"When that other 10,000 get here I on't know where we're going to put them," said Stamey. "They're completely packed in."

Questions and answers

Swine virus—dramatic change in strain

ATLANTA (UPI) — This summer, a massive nationwide program will begin to inoculate most of the American population against a new and potentially dangerous strain of influenza caused by the A-swine virus.

The following questions and answers about influenza were prepared by some of the top medical scientists at the national Center for Disease Control. They include Dr. David Sencer, director of the CDC, Dr. Michael Gregg, director of the CDC's viral disease division, and Dr. Walter Dowdle, director of the virology division.

Q—What is the significance of the swine flu virus?

A—The virus which causes influenza in man is constantly changing. Most of these changes are minor. Once every 10 years or so the change is more dramatic, and this is when we have extensive outbreaks such as the pandemic of Asian flu of 1957 and the Hong Kong flu of 1968. The newly identified swine-like virus represents a major change from viruses which are currently circulating in the human population. Since it has the capacity to spread from person-to-person, it could develop into a pandemic strain and cause extensive illness and death.

Q—When was it first identified?

A—In February 1976, a new strain of human influenza virus, designated A-New Jersey-76, was isolated during an outbreak of respiratory disease among recruits at Ft. Dix, N.J. Although an influenza virus of swine has been known as the cause of illness in swine for many years, the Ft. Dix outbreak is the first known example in the United States since about 1930 of person-to-person transmission of a human influenza virus related to that of swine.

Q—What relationship does this swine-like virus have to the 1918 influenza pandemic?

A—Influenza viruses were first isolated from man in the early 1930's. We can only speculate about the characteristics of the viruses prevalent before that time. Testing of blood of individuals who were living in 1918 shows almost all have antibodies to swine-like virus. This suggests that a virus of this sort may have caused the 1918 pandemic. Such antibodies are also found in many persons over the age of 50, suggesting that a swine-like virus was widespread in human populations, perhaps up to 1930. There is, however, no evidence to indicate that the virus recently identified at Ft. Dix has the same characteristics of virulence as the 1918 virus.

Q—How was the 1918 influenza pandemic different from other influenza pandemics?

A—It was unique because of its high mortality, and the fact that so many of the fatalities occurred among apparently healthy young men and women. It is estimated that the 1918-19 pandemic resulted in a worldwide death toll of more than 20 million, with half a million of the fatalities in this country. By comparison the Asian flu of 1957 — the most severe influenza pandemic since — caused an estimated 70,000 deaths, primarily among the elderly or individuals with chronic illness.

Q—What has been found in the investigation of the extent of human influenza caused by the swine-like virus?

A—It has been demonstrated that the initial outbreak of swine influenza at Ft. Dix was fairly extensive. Although only 12 cases have been confirmed, blood testing has indicated that several hundred recruits were probably infected during this outbreak. No spread to the nearby civilian New Jersey population has been demonstrated.

Q—Is there a treatment for swine influenza?

A—As with other strains of influenza, there is no specific treatment. Science has, however, given us the ability to significantly blunt the impact of this disease. Vaccines — not available in 1918 — are now an effective way to prevent the disease. Antibiotics, also unavailable in 1918, are important in treating the complications of influenza and thus reducing fatalities.

Q—How effective would a vaccine be against influenza caused by the swine-like virus?

A—Flu vaccines in the past have been variably effective, depending primarily on how closely they match the strain of influenza. Significant progress has been made in recent years. Today's vaccines are more potent, purer, and produce a higher degree of protection with fewer reactions. It is generally believed that effectiveness ranges somewhere between 70-90 per cent.

Q—How would you go about immunizing more than 200 million Americans?

A—The goal would be to immunize the population in a three-month period — September through November 1976. The nation has never attempted an immunization program of such scope and intensity. It would require a major effort by both the public and private sectors. Essentially, the plan would rely on the federal government for its purchasing power, technical leadership, and coordination through the Center for Disease Control; on state health agencies for their experience in conducting systematic immunization programs; and on the private health care sector for its extensive medical and other health-related resources. The strategy would be to tailor the approach to the opportunity and need — using mass immunization techniques where appropriate, but also using delivery points already in place, such as physicians' offices, health department clinics, and community health centers.

Q—What is influenza and how is it spread?

A—Influenza is a respiratory disease caused by a virus. When a person has influenza, or is just coming down with it, the fluids in his nose and mouth contain viruses. They are expelled into the air when he sneezes, coughs, or talks. Then they get into the noses and mouths of other people and cause disease.

Q—How serious a disease is influenza?

A—For most people, influenza is a moderately severe illness but not a serious health threat. Complete recovery can be expected within a week. For certain high risk groups it is a serious problem, and the disease or its complications may be life threatening.

Q—What are the symptoms of influenza?

A—Symptoms of influenza often come on suddenly and may include some or all of the following: fever, chills, headache, dry cough, and soreness and aching in the back and the limbs. Fever seldom lasts more than several days, although the patient may continue to feel weakened for several days to a week or more.

Q—How rapidly did the 1957-58 pandemic of Asian flu spread, and how many people were afflicted with the disease?

A — Beginning in central China in February 1957, the Asian strain of influenza virus rapidly spread to Hong Kong, Taiwan, Singapore, and neighboring countries. By June, reports of influenza-like illness came from Czechoslovakia, The Netherlands, England, the United States, and the Mideast. In the United States, the West Coast was involved first with an outbreak beginning in June. The epidemic reached its peak in late October. A second wave of deaths peaked in late February 1958 but epidemics had greatly decreased in frequency by then.

In the U.S., the fall and winter waves are thought to have caused nearly 70,000 deaths. It is estimated that about 45 million cases of influenza occurred in this country during the fall of 1957.

Q—What about the spread of the Hong Kong strain?

A—The first recorded epidemic of this pandemic strain occurred in Hong Kong in July 1968. It spread rapidly to the Far East, India, and northern Australia by early fall. Despite documented introductions of this strain into many parts of the world, only the United States reported major nationwide epidemics for the fall and winter of 1968-69. It was a year before Europe, Northern Asia, and many other parts of the world were to feel the full effect of pandemic Hong Kong influenza. In the United States, the first outbreaks in the civilian population developed in Puerto Rico and Alaska in late September and early October. By December 28 influenza outbreaks had involved all 50 states. An estimated 27,900 deaths were caused by the 1968-69 Hong Kong epidemic in the United States. Approximately 50 million persons in this country were affected by this disease.

The cost to the nation for this one epidemic year has been estimated at $3.8 billion dollars.

BOAT RENDEZVOUS

MYSTIC, Conn. (UPI) — About 100 of the eastern seaboard's finest antique and classic boats will participate in an Antique and Classic Boat Rendezvous July 31 and Aug. 1 at Mystic Seaport. Sail and power vessels built prior to 1940 are invited to participate in the Bicentennial event at the maritime museum, jointly sponsored by the Port Elico Association and the four-town Bicentennial Committee of Stonington, North Stonington, Groton and Ledyard.

TRADE SURPLUS

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — The United States will have an agricultural trade surplus of almost $13 billion this year, an economist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service predicts. Dr. W.E. Black said the surplus will be an increase of about $1 billion over 1975 totals. He predicted the U.S. will import about $10 billion in agricultural goods, and will export about $23 billion.

Celaneose promoted Ensign

Donald L. Ensign has been appointed an assistant product sales manager by Celaneose Chemical Company. He had been a sales representative in the Houston and, most recently, New York sales districts. Ensign would be responsible for coordination of the sales, distribution, quality assurance and technical service on these products.

Ensign, who has a B.S. degree in chemistry, from Texas Christian University, joined Celaneose Chemical Company in 1968 as a chemist at the company's Pampa plant.

At wit's end

By ERMA BOMBECK

Ever since I read a newspaper article about myself stating I was the mother of four, I've gone crazy trying to find the other kid. Newspapers don't lie. If they said I have four children, then it stands to reason I've misplaced one.

You know something? I think I just found the missing Bombeck. His name is I. Dunno. Everyone sees him but me. All I know is he's rotten.

Who left the front door open?
I. Dunno.
Who left the soap melt down the drain?
I. Dunno.
Who ate the banana I was saving for the cake?
I. Dunno.
Frankly, I. Dunno is driving me nuts. He's lost two umbrellas, four pairs of boots and a bicycle. He has 13 books overdue from the library, hasn't brought home a paper from school in three years, and once left a thermos of milk in the car for three weeks.

The other day the phone rang. I ran from the mail box, cut my leg, tore off a fingernail in the door, and got to the phone in time to see my son hanging up.

"Who was it?" I asked breathlessly.
"I. Dunno. He hung up."
"The little jerk could have let it ring a few more times," I grumbled.
When I told my neighbor about it, she said "Cheer up. I've had an invisible child for years."
"What's his name?" I asked miserably.
"Nobody."
"Is he rotten?" I asked.
"He makes Dennis the Menace look like a statue. He cracked the top of an heirloom candy dish, tears up the paper before anyone gets to read it, and once when I was driving the car pool he nearly knocked me senseless with a ball bat."
"Hah," I said bitterly. "You should have seen I. Dunno. He left 13 lights burning the other night when he went out. I don't know how much longer I can stand it."
This morning at breakfast I said to my husband, "Who wants liver for dinner this evening?"
My husband looked up and said, "I. Dunno care."
I. Dunno has a brother.

A tempting offer on a gas grill.

SAVE $30

Right now, we're making you a tempting offer on gas grills with twin burners! Independently controlled twin burners never use more gas than you need. For big meals, use both burners. For smaller meals, save gas and money by using one burner and half the grill. A gas grill adds a new dimension to family meals and entertaining. It eliminates the fuss and bother of cooking outside while it keeps the flavor and the fun. And, because you take cooking heat out of the house and the burden off your air conditioning, you save energy, too.

Prof finds 'reasoning gap' in schools

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Education Editor

Millions make it through the most expensive public education in the nation's history but they can't understand the Constitution or the Declaration of Independence.

They can read words okay. But, according to Prof. Edwin Fenton of Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh, they don't have enough reasoning ability to understand the documents.

Fenton, director of the Education Center at the university, brings up the "reasoning gap" in a report in "Social Education," journal of the National Council for the Social Studies.

He couples the complaint with recommendations aimed at improving students' cognitive moral development — helping them to think critically about ethically complex situations.

"As a minimal goal of civic education, we should aim to raise the level of thinking of all children to the stage that will enable them to understand the principles behind the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution," he says.

Most high school graduates cannot understand the implications for human rights and citizen responsibilities inherent in the documents, according to Fenton.

To form citizens who can function intelligently in society, he argues, secondary schools must pay special attention to helping students develop and redefine reasoning abilities.

Fenton's solution: Integrate discussions of moral or civic dilemmas into existing social studies and English courses.

Only then, as he sees it, will students have an opportunity to constructively question their own views and those of their peers and examine the underlying ethical principles. This will improve their ability to analyze and discuss complex civic issues.

Research shows that schools can incorporate contemporary, literary and historical, moral and civic dilemmas into classroom exercises.

A typical contemporary moral dilemma was cited as follows:

Suppose Jill lifts a sweater from a store and the security officer tells her best friend and companion, Sharon, that she will get in trouble unless she reveals her friend's name. What should Sharon do?

In the discussion, students may suggest that Sharon just keep her mouth shut or even give a false name. After all, goes one line of reasoning, the store has lots of sweaters and won't go bankrupt if one is stolen.

Another student may suggest that Sharon protect her friend, but for a different reason. This reason might be: Jill lifted the sweater for a friend who needed a new one but didn't have money. This is Robin Hood reasoning: Steal from the rich to supply the poor.

Eventually, up comes the point that stealing is wrong. This may lead to the point that well — lots of people steal and get away with it. Why not steal?

Fenton says the conflicts Sharon faces in reaching a decision will help focus students' attention on basic ethical and civic principles.

In the process of a teacher-directed class discussion of personal trust and citizen responsibilities, students are exposed to different levels of reasoning.

Through the various opinions expressed and the cognitive conflict they represent, students eventually will advance to higher stages of reasoning.

Fenton, an architect of the new social studies movement in the sixties, has authored and written a series of texts used in high schools nationwide.

Under his direction, Carnegie-Mellon University's Education Center currently is preparing supplementary materials to help secondary school teachers use moral and civic dilemmas as regular classroom exercises.

John Marshall was the second chief justice of the United States.

Braves, Pistons grab series

By United Press International
"That was a super basketball game" and "I'm very happy with the season" were two phrases uttered by National Basketball Association coaches Sunday — yet both came from the mouths of losers.

Philadelphia Coach Gene Shue and Milwaukee's Larry Costello, respectively, spoke those words after their teams were given a bitter early summer vacation. Both nationally televised games were extremely close — Buffalo edged the 76ers 124-123 in overtime and Detroit nipped the Bucks 107-104 as each won their best-of-three series 2-1 — but that couldn't atone for the fact that, for the coaches and their teams, their season was over.

"The biggest thing you can say about today is that we never gave up," Doug Collins said in the somber 76er dressing room. The 76ers led most of the way in the fast-paced contest and had forged ahead 111-109 with six seconds left on Fred Carter's jumper. An earlier jumper by Carter, who led the 76ers with 32 points, had given Philadelphia a 62-49 lead in the third quarter. Buffalo opens its quarterfinal series with Boston Wednesday night.

Although Shue shouldn't have to worry about his job next season, Costello's position might be in jeopardy. Although the Bucks won the Midwest Division title, they failed to surpass the .500 mark and Costello and General Manager Wayne Embry clashed recently, though the Bucks' management supported Costello.

George Trapp contributed heavily to the Pistons' cause, scoring 11 of his 13 points in the final quarter, including seven in a nine-point run that rallied the Pistons from a 96-92 deficit into a three-point lead. Bob Lanier led Detroit with 28 points while Curtis Rowe had 20. Brian Winters topped the losers with 32 points.

Detroit opens its quarterfinal series against Golden State Tuesday.

In the other NBA playoff game, Phoenix defeated Seattle

103-91. In the lone American Basketball Association playoff, New York edged San Antonio 110-108.

Suns 163, SuperSonics 91
Gar Heard and Paul Westphal each scored 16 points as Phoenix took a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven Western Conference semifinal series.

Schmidt hits another as Phillies clout Cubs

By RICK GOSSELIN
UPI Sports Writer

It's beginning to heat up in the valley of the giants. Mike Schmidt, the 6-foot-2 Philadelphia third baseman who led the National League in home runs last year with 38, and Dave Kingman, the 6-foot-6 New York outfielder who finished as runner-up with 36, combined for eight homers during the weekend to warm up for another two-man battle for the long ball crown.

Schmidt, who set a league record with four consecutive home runs in a game against Chicago Saturday, continued his rampage against Cub pitching Sunday with a two-run shot after they built up a 6-0 lead in the game's first two innings.

Kingman, who unloaded a three-run homer against Pittsburgh Saturday, belted two more Sunday but they weren't enough to prevent the Mets from falling to the Pirates, 7-5. The three homers against the Pirates gave Kingman a major league high of seven while Schmidt has six.

"Most home run hitters hit them in sprees or bunches and this is one of the bunches coming along," said Kingman, who was purchased by New York from San Francisco prior to last season.

Schmidt, whose 38 homers last year gave him the major league lead for the second consecutive season, picked up 10 RBI against the Cubs with the five homers this weekend in continuing his mastery of Chicago pitching.

In other games, St. Louis defeated Montreal 2-1, Atlanta defeated Los Angeles 7-6, San Francisco beat Cincinnati 5-1 and Houston split with San Diego, winning the opener 4-2 and losing the nightcap 11-5.

Cardinals 2, Expos 1
John Denny pitched 8 2-3 innings of shutout ball before yielding a home run to Mike Jorgensen, then gave way to Mike Wallace who got the final out to pick up the save.

Braves 7, Dodgers 6
Andy Messersmith made his Atlanta debut against his former team mates and pitched four effective innings, leaving the game with a 3-1 lead. The Braves built the margin to 7-1 in the sixth, using a three-run home run by another ex-Dodger, Jim Wynn, before the Dodgers staged a five-run rally in the seventh.

Giants 5, Reds 1
John Montefusco and Gary Lavelle teamed up to limit Cincinnati to five hits and Montefusco also knocked in what proved to be the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the second.

Harvesters have 8 batters over .300 mark

Eight Harvesters, led by David Edwards at .390, are hitting over the .300 mark going into Tuesday's district second-half opener against Amarillo Caprock.

Pampa hosts Caprock at 4 p.m. Tuesday at Optimist Park. Amarillo High, the first half champion in 3-AAAA, and Caprock were selected district co-favorites in a pre-season poll of league coaches.

Edwards leads Pampa, 9-9 for the season and 1-4 in district play, with a .390 average. The senior outfielder-pitcher has 12 runs batted in, three doubles, a triple and a homerun.

Outfielder-pitcher Mike

Knutson, just a junior, is hitting .361 with 11 RBI's and three doubles. He is Harvester leader in stolen bases with 15.

Others over .300 are first baseman Doug Burns (.340), catcher Mark Adair (.333), third baseman John Agan (.313), outfielder-pitcher Tom Washington (.306), shortstop Brian Bailey (.304) and second baseman Bobby Chance (.302).

Edwards, Burns, Adair, and outfielder Mike Martin have been the only Pampans to hit homers this season. Burns is the team leader in doubles with five. Bailey and Chance each lead with two triples.

As a team the Harvesters are batting .299, compared to .311 at

Young Koch snares Tallahassee Open win

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Tour rookie Gary Koch may reshuffle his career goals now that he has won a tournament ahead of his plans.

"When I joined the tour, my long-range plans were to play in 30 tournaments and try to make the top 60 money winners list."

He said Koch, who captured the $16,000 top prize Sunday in the Tallahassee Open. "I may change my plans now. With this win, I can play less than 30, play five or six weeks in a row and then take off for a few weeks."

Koch fired a two-under-par 70 in Sunday's final round to finish with an 11-under-par 277, one stroke ahead of veteran John Mahaffey. It was the young Floridian's first PGA win and he went into a victory dance when his winning putt went in the cup.

the start of district play. Knutson and Edwards lead Pampa's pitchers with 3-1 records.

In 29 2-3 innings, Knutson has allowed 19 hits and six earned runs (1.42 earned-run average), while striking out 28 and walking 11. He has pitched three complete games.

Edwards, who has hurled four complete games, as a 4.09 earned-run average. He has walked 11 and struck out 32 in 25 2-3 innings.

Other pitchers (with records in parentheses) for Pampa are Joe Davis (2-3), Washington (0-3), Martin (0-1) and Larry Petty (1-0).

Canadiens sweep Hawks

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago Black Hawks' best was far from enough, so the Montreal Canadiens won 4-1 Sunday night to sweep the Hawks out of the Stanley Cup playoffs in four games.

4 dots aid in shooting spares

By GIL WUEST
Manager, Harvester Lanes

The most important part of any bowler's game is converting spares.

When attempting to convert spares, the key is to use as much of the lane as possible — shoot across the lane to convert them.

There are five areas from which you shoot your spares. Each dot has a number, and each dot corresponds to a pin.

The dots are located on the approach. Dot No. 1 corresponds with the 10 pin leave, No. 2 with the 3 or 9 pins, No. 3 with the 2 or 8 pins and No. 4 with the 7 pin. The larger middle dot is where you stand to shoot for strikes, plus the position to shoot for any spare that consists of the No. 1 or No. 5 pins.

If you leave the 1, 2, 4 or 1, 2, 8 pins, locate your strike position and move your feet slightly right one or two boards. Remember to use the second arrow as your target. You want your ball to cross left of the No. 1 pin to convert that spare.

Dot No. 1 — the 10 pin. 1) Place your foot on dot No. 1. 2) Use the third arrow as your target. 3) Angle your feet toward your target. 4) Face your target. 5) Walk toward your target. 6) Follow through and hit your target.

Dot No. 2 — the 3 and/or 9 pins. 1) Place your right foot on dot No. 2. 2) Use the third arrow as your target, then follow steps three through six above. If you leave the 3-6-10 or 3-10 splits, place your right foot between No. 1 and No. 2 dots and use the third arrow as your target.

Dot No. 3 — the 2 and/or 8 pins. 1) Place your left foot on dot No. 3. 2) Use the second arrow as your target, then follow steps three through six above.

Dot No. 4 — the 7 pin. 1) Place your left foot on dot No. 4. 2) Use the second arrow as your target, then follow steps three through six above. If you leave the 2-4-7 or 2-7 splits, place your left foot between No. 3 and No. 4 dots and use the second arrow as your target.

Some of you may have to use the third arrow when shooting for the 8 pin or 7 pin, depending on how much hook you roll. If your ball goes relatively straight, you should probably use the third arrow.

Remember to always count the arrows from the right side of the lane if you are right-handed.

Broker pretended death

CLEARWATER, Fla. (UPI) — Missing stockbroker Estel Blevins, sought in connection with a scheme to collect a $250,000 life insurance policy, claims he pretended to be dead to avoid underworld figures he fears more than the law.

Blevins, who indicated he planned to remain a fugitive, asked the Clearwater Sun to "make some sort of effort to protect my wife and family from the pressure of these people."

The Sun received an undated special delivery letter from Blevins Saturday, postmarked Fort Mill, S.C. On that same day, the Chicago Tribune reported receiving a phone call from the Clearwater stockbroker.

In the letter, Blevins said, "I've done wrong and I know it, but answering to the law is not nearly as frightening to me as what will happen if I am found by the people I know."

"Please contact my wife and assist her. I've told her I would go to the police for help and she's more concerned for me than for herself."

"I don't know what to say or ask, but would you please make some sort of effort to protect my wife and family from the pressure of these people."

Mrs. Blevins, hospitalized for traffic injuries complicated by a virus infection, identified the handwriting in the letter as that of her 32-year-old husband. She wept when she read the contents but declined comment.

Blevins, a broker for Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith, left Clearwater March 22 and has not been seen since he vanished from Chicago's Palmer House hotel.

The Tribune said Blevins told its reporters in two telephone conversations he had posed as his brother-in-law and identified the body of a former Navy diver as his own to avoid facing a Tampa underworld figure.

The Tribune said Blevins claimed he had gone to Chicago with $25,000 of his own money and an equal sum belonging to the gangster — whom he identified only as "The Man" — to buy $350,000 worth of negotiable stolen securities. But Blevins said the two sellers took the $50,000 and refused to turn over the securities.

"I got scared then of the people in Florida," the Tribune quoted him as saying. "It took me two days to think up something to do and then I came up with the body idea."

Blevins, posing as his brother-in-law, reportedly identified the body of Joseph R. Tallarico, an apparent drowning victim, as his own. But a fingerprint check revealed Tallarico's identity and a toxicological report showed he had died of a combination of alcohol and morphine. The Tribune said Blevins denied killing Tallarico.

Pollster opines on Carter

By ELIZABETH WHARTON
United Press International
 National pollster Louis Harris suspects Jimmy Carter's success so far is due more to his opponents' weaknesses than his own appeal — but he might be able to "go all the way and get the nomination on this."

Hubert Humphrey, he said, seems to be everybody's alternative choice.

Harris was interviewed on national radio (ABC's Issues and Answers) Sunday, while all the candidates marked Easter with what may be their last week-end off before the conventions this summer.

There is no primary Tuesday, and there is not another vacant Tuesday until June 15 when bargaining for uncommitted delegate support will be at its height.

All the presidential candidates spent Easter away from the campaign trail and formal public appearances.

But everyone had a full week of appearances planned. President Ford will spend two days in Indiana and Georgia, with Ronald Reagan taking a swing through Georgia, Alabama and Indiana.

The Democrats are concentrating on the April 27 Pennsylvania primary, with Carter, Henry Jackson, Wallace and possibly Morris Udall making appearances this week in the Keystone State. Udall spends two days in his home state of Arizona and in New Mexico before returning East.

Jackson picked up support from his home state, Washington, over the weekend. The state Democratic organization reported he won 60 per cent of the delegates to the state convention, and his backers predict his final total of delegates in the state will be close to that figure.

Carter won the endorsement Sunday of a Connecticut labor coalition representing about 250,000 workers. The coalition praised Carter for a "progressive" labor record.

But pollster Lou Harris said voters perceive Carter as "a man who avoids taking a position on issues — a man who seems to talk out of four or five or six corners of his mouth at the same time."

He said Carter's attributes are that he seems to "promise less" than other candidates, is a "new face," doesn't come from Washington, and "is reasonably a man of integrity."

"I suspect what has happened is that Jimmy Carter has run on his opponents' weaknesses more than he has on the positive appeal for Jimmy Carter," he said.

Carter could "go all the way and get the nomination on this," he continued.

However, when Carter "gets to ... the kind of witching hour before he really gets nominated, I think he is going to have to show more spark than he has."

Record heat doesn't stop NY Easter parade

By United Press International
 New Yorkers paraded in their Easter finery Sunday, pilgrims worshipped under guard in the Holy Land and Pope Paul VI warned Christians in Vatican City that a "blind craving" for material wealth obscures Easter's social and spiritual significance.

Thousands of New Yorkers turned out in record-breaking 96-degree heat for the traditional Easter parade along Fifth Avenue. Many who braved the hottest April day in New York history admitted they were a bit disappointed because they had expected bands and marchers instead of the unorganized crowd of strollers who mill up and down the street flaunting their finery.

But unlike the usual Easter Day finery displayed in the past and in movies, the crowd that jammed the fashionable avenue was mostly clad in denim jeans.

Hawkers did a brisk business in flowers, balloons and pretzels.

At Vatican City, Pope Paul celebrated mass on the sun-washed steps of St. Peter's Square before more than 150,000 persons, then reemerged on the basilica's main balcony to deliver an Easter message lamenting "an army of deniers and critics" who deprive Easter of its essential meaning — salvation through Christ's resurrection.

Pilgrims released dozens of colored balloons over the square as the 78-year-old pontiff spoke.

Resurrection, the Pope said, also means "favoring the effort and obtaining the result of a resurrection, that is, of an economic, cultural and social betterment for the comfort and remedy of every human suffering."

He said it would be "an illusion" to hope for resurrection if it were not taught that "the blind craving exclusively for temporal prosperity could bring man a greater unhappiness generated by the very expansion of his capacity to desire more and of his possibility to enjoy more."

Christian pilgrims from around the world attended a sunrise high mass Easter Sunday at Jerusalem's Church of the Holy Sepulchre.

Msgr. Joseph Beltritti, Roman Catholic patriarch of Jerusalem, led a procession of monks through the narrow cobblestone streets to the fortress-like church, built on the hill known as Calvary, where Jesus was crucified nearly 2,000 years ago.

The church rotunda is believed to contain the tomb from which Jesus rose on the third day following his crucifixion.

The church bells pealed and two ushers banged wooden staves on the cobblestones fronting the holy site to call an estimated 1,000 pilgrims to the israeli army troops with automatic rifles and green-bereted border police with Uzi submachine guns guarded against Arab guerrilla attacks. There were no disturbances.

Christians across the United States celebrated Christendom's highest holy day in special services across the country.

Near Alto Pass, Ill., about 2,000 persons from eight states clustered beneath the Cross of Peace on Bald Knob Mountain for the 40th annual Easter service atop the mountain. The Rev. Robert Gastings told the gathering that though they were of many religions, they shared their faith in the crucified-but-risen savior.

In Missouri, an overflow gathering of between 3,500 and 4,000 persons squeezed between the stalactites and stalagmites of Meramec Cavern for an Easter sunrise service.

River continues threat

MINOT, N.D. (UPI) — The flooding Souris River fell slowly today from its record Easter crest but continued to threaten dikes protecting the evacuated central area of Minot.

Mayor Chester Reiten said Minot's 13,000 evacuees probably can't return to their homes until next weekend.

"The urge is to move back in now," Reiten said, "but a dike failure could flood them with 10 or 12 feet of water."

The river crested early Sunday at 15.56 feet — about seven feet above flood stage. The crest came about a half-day earlier than expected and was about a foot less than anticipated.

The city of 32,000, flooded almost annually since the spring of 1969, kept up the round-the-clock patrols on its 10-to-20-foot clay dikes, looking for weak spots.

The mayor said the evacuated third of the city along the river — 4,200 empty homes, two shopping centers, 100 stores, six schools and 10 churches — probably will come back to life Friday and Saturday.

Several hundred persons still were flooded out of their homes just east of Minot and 22 miles downstream at Velva, 1,200 of 3,600 residents were evacuated, waiting for a crest today.

County agents estimated that flood waters covered more than 400,000 acres of farm land in the Souris Valley in Ward, McHenry, Renville and Bottineau counties.

The river isn't expected to fall below flood level until early May.

Hundreds of workers — truck and bulldozer drivers, sandbaggers aged 10 years and up, and others — got some rest after the week-long battle.

But Mayor Reiten said a big job remains.

He estimated the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has spent more than $3 million putting up dikes this spring — on top of $6 million spent building dikes in 1969 — and the city has spent about $1 million this year.

"It probably will take another $2 million to fix things," he said.

"We'll have to take down the dikes around schools and other backup dikes. We'll need to repair the storm sewers. Some of them blew up from water pressure. And the streets were beaten up something awful by the 300 dump trucks."

Primary dikes along the river will stay, even those cutting across backyards, the mayor said.

He said the Army engineers will do about $6 million worth of channel widening upstream so future flood waters can flow through easier.

Weapons, devices guard Miss Hearst

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Patricia Hearst's hospital guards are using sophisticated weapons and devices to protect her because of death threats.

Her attorney says the newspaper heiress "has a constant fear of being assassinated."

"The threats are coming in every day," said Albert Johnson, one of Miss Hearst's lawyers.

Miss Hearst, 22, daughter of San Francisco newspaper publisher Randolph A. Hearst, was reported in satisfactory condition today at Sequoia Hospital in nearby Redwood City where she is under treatment for a collapsed right lung.

Miss Hearst is also suffering from malnutrition and being kept on a high-protein diet. Doctors have been administering tests to determine whether she has a liver ailment because an earlier examination indicated this is a possibility.

She was convicted of robbery charges which resulted from a Symbionese Liberation Army bank holdup two months after the small terrorist group kidnaped her from her Berkeley, Calif., apartment in 1974.

Miss Hearst is awaiting transfer to the Federal Metropolitan Correctional Center in San Diego where she will undergo a 90-day psychiatric evaluation. U.S. District Judge Oliver J. Carter, who sentenced her to 35 years in prison, said he would reduce the penalty after the evaluation.

Johnson said there have been "specific threats" to Miss Hearst in the hospital. "Police are aware of them," he said. "There is a massive security to protect her."

The lawyer added that his client "has a constant fear of being assassinated."

He said, "The U.S. marshal has provided massive security around the area where Patty is hospitalized, and this includes sophisticated weapons and other devices."

Johnson said there were "anti-intrusion" mechanisms on all doors and windows of her second-story floor at the hospital.

Among Miss Hearst's Easter weekend visitors were family members and an Episcopal minister who is a long-time friend.

TIT FOR TAT
MANILA (UPI) — The Philippine government has ordered the imposition of "retaliatory or compensating fees" on airlines of countries allegedly discriminating against Philippine Air Lines.

President Ferdinand Marcos, in an order to the Philippine Civil Aeronautics Administration, said PCAA should determine which foreign airlines will be affected.

Marcos said PAL's capability to compete with foreign airlines was being weakened by "a variety of discriminatory and unfair competitive practices," including exorbitant fees, rentals and charges.

Shots tested on prisoners

HOUSTON (UPI) — Vaccine to prevent a swine influenza may be first tested on a volunteer group of 260 Texas prisoners.

Dr. Robert Couch, director of Baylor College of Medicine's Influenza Research Center, said he expected to receive the vaccines Wednesday from the Federal Drug Administration.

He said inmates at the Ramsey Unit of the Texas Department of Corrections near Angleton would test the vaccines beginning April 25. He said he anticipated no unusual physical reactions.

Couch said some inmates may experience "sore arms or a mild case of the flu."

President Ford has signed a $135 million funding bill for a nationwide immunization against swine influenza.
