Supporters say Humphrey won't enter

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., will not enter the June 8 New Jersey Democratic presidential primary, his supporters in New Jersey said today.

Dugan said he is ready to support Humphrey at the convention. Dugan said he would be one of the delegates. "At this moment in Washington, Sen. Humphrey is announcing that he will not enter any primaries," Dugan said. Humphrey called a mid-day news conference today amid reports that he will enter the New Jersey primary and launch a drive for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Close associates of the veteran Minnesota senator said they believed that Humphrey would announce his candidacy. The news conference—arranged at 1:30 p.m. EDT in the Senate caucus room where a number of presidential candidates have announced—was called after Humphrey held a morning meeting with some of his closest political advisers. One of his advisers, Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., said earlier in the day that Humphrey was "very seriously considering" becoming an active candidate for the Democratic nomination. New Jersey is the only primary Humphrey can enter. The deadlines for entering the others has passed and the deadline for getting into the New Jersey primary, June 8, ends at 4 p.m. today. But Humphrey will also be on the ballot in the Nebraska primary, May 11, and the Oregon primary, May 25. Humphrey, who won the nomination in 1968 but lost the election to President Richard M. Nixon, was forced into a decision after Jimmy Carter swept the Pennsylvania primary and virtually ended the campaigns of his active challengers. Asked on the CBS Morning News whether Humphrey had reached a decision, Mondale replied: "I don't know. I think he is very seriously considering announcing his candidacy, but when I left him early last evening he had not yet decided." Today is the deadline for filing for New Jersey's primary election June 8 where, if he enters, he would oppose former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter. Humphrey is regarded by some party leaders as the only Democrat left who could derail Carter.

'I don't care' — Carter

United Press International President Ford said today he felt the public would not accept a Democratic refusal to give the presidential nomination to Jimmy Carter.

Hubert Humphrey, meanwhile, called an afternoon Washington news conference to announce whether he would join the Democratic White House race for the fourth time in his career.

Ford, at a news conference in Houston, was asked about Carter's victory in the Pennsylvania primary and attempts by some Democrats to slow the former Georgia governor's campaign.

"The only way I see they can stop him now is to have a smoke-filled room, brokered type of convention" in New York, said Ford. "I don't think the public would stand for that."

Both Ford and Ronald Reagan stepped up their attacks on each other today and Ford said Texas voters must choose between "policies (Ford's) and personality (Reagan's)" in Saturday's Lone Star State presidential primary.

In Huntsville, Ala., Reagan said it is time to discuss the facts about the nation's military position rather than talking in "generalities and evasions."

"Saying there are no retakes in the oval office is not an answer to why we're second militarily behind the Soviet Union," Reagan retorted to an earlier presidential reference to his acting background. "When is Mr. Ford going to reply with facts about our defense?"

Democrats Morris Udall and Henry Jackson, soundly defeated by Carter in Pennsylvania, meanwhile looked for ways to stop Carter's momentum. And Carter, moving his campaign to Texas today, said he didn't care what Humphrey did.

Jackson had counted heavily on a Pennsylvania victory Wednesday he canceled a campaign trip set for today in Indiana, and his wife Helen said he would try to change the "tenor" of his campaign and put more emphasis on issues.

Udall, who finished third behind Jackson, goes on network TV tonight to appeal for campaign funds. "We've got a tough uphill fight," Udall told a Washington news conference Wednesday, but "there is no going to be any withdrawal."

Carter told a Philadelphia news conference he expects to win the Democratic nomination on the first ballot.

"I'm very at ease about the other candidates, including Senator Humphrey," Carter said. Asked whether he thought Humphrey should declare, Carter replied: "I don't care."

President Ford, who had been predicting Humphrey as the Democratic nominee, said "the momentum for Carter has certainly accelerated."

Ford mixed kisses from more than 50 Texas coeds — the Apache Belles at Tyler Junior College and the Kilgore Junior College Rangerettes at Longview — with attacks on Ronald Reagan, who also mines Texas for votes today after a swing Wednesday through Alabama.

Questioning the competence and experience of the former movie star, Ford said: "There are no retakes in the Oval Office. Glibness is not good enough. Superficiality is not good enough."

The President claimed Reagan has shown an "unfair and illogical way to look at defense issues," but Reagan stuck to his claims the nation's defense is slipping.

He doubted that "just 20 months in his own appointed position makes him an expert on the country's defense position."

Later, in a nationwide TV address, Reagan painted a picture of Soviet military superiority with quotes from NATO commander Alexander Haig and former Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger.

Reagan said the President is not discussing issues that are on the minds of the American people. He also retorted to a remark about his acting background by the President this week.

"Saying there are no retakes in the Oval Office is not an answer to why we're second militarily behind the Soviet Union," Reagan told a meeting of his campaign workers. "All he's doing is making cracks about my former profession."

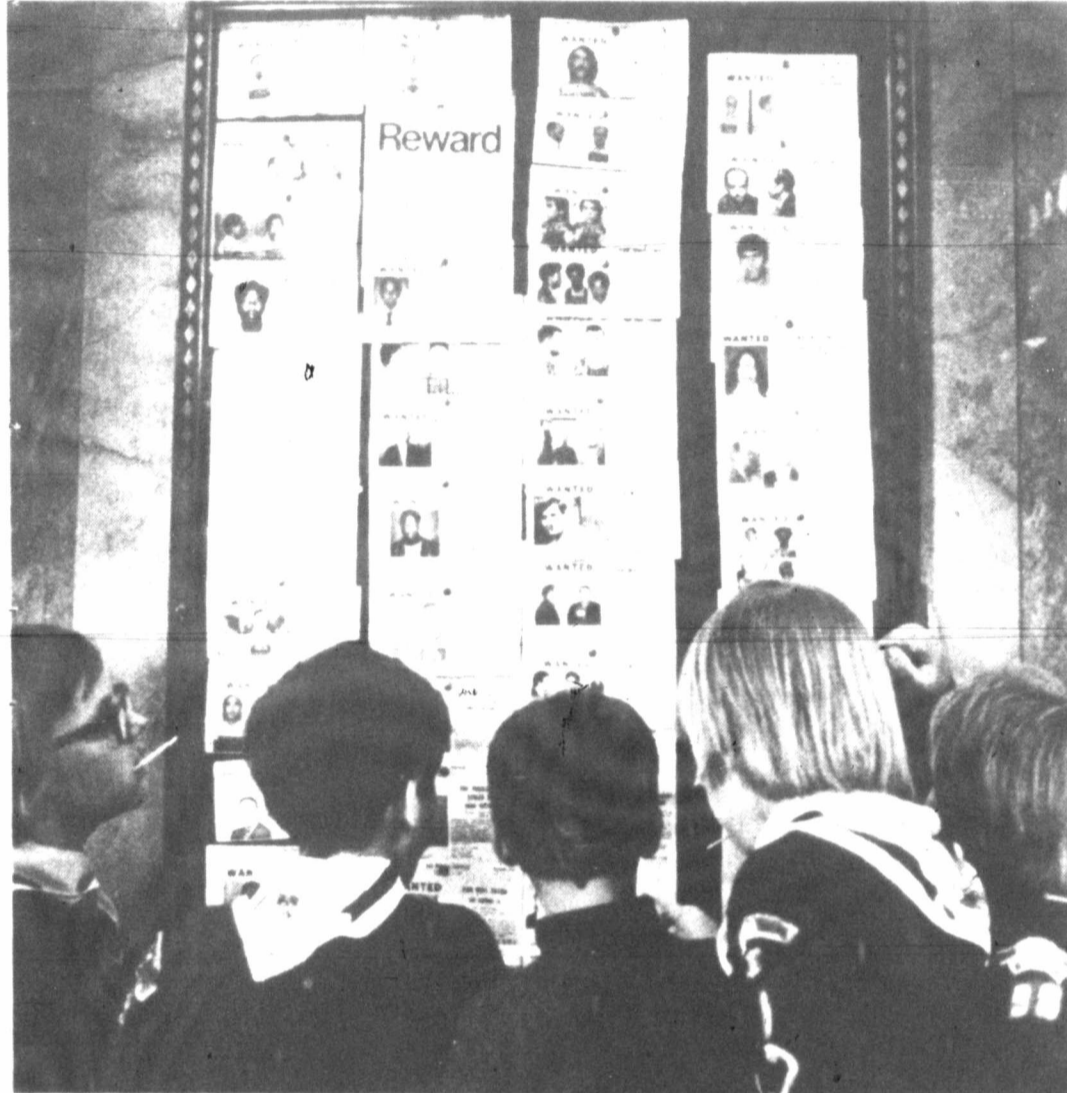

"When is Mr. Ford going to reply with facts about our defense?"

He said the President is using "generalities and evasions and outright changes of mind" in his campaign.

Reagan also attacked Ford on his use of Air Force One and other government services in the campaign.

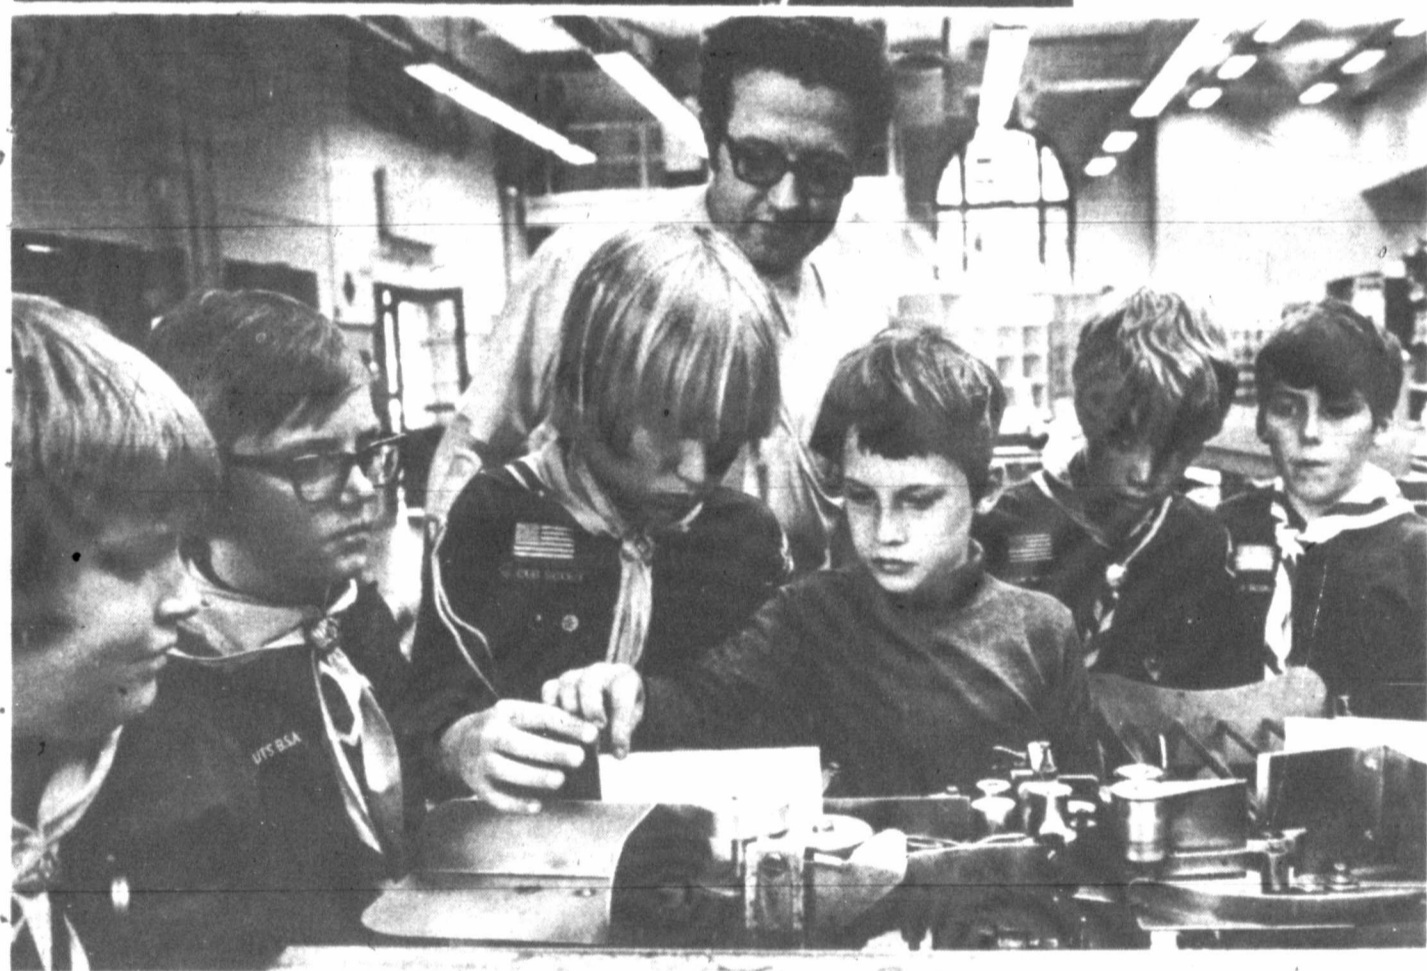

"For the President to say we should manage our funds better — well, if he'd lend each of us an Air Force One we could manage our funds better," Reagan said. He referred there to a statement by Ford on the poor financial conditions of other presidential candidates.

Reagan said he had to pay $66,000 in advance to charter the jet airplane he is using on this 10-day campaign swing while President Ford does not have to pay for Air Force One in advance and only pays token charges to the government for the use of the plane on political trips.

Learning their community

Hopefuls want fed funds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House and Senate conferees have cleared the way for final congressional action next week on a bill that will reopen the federal purse to presidential candidates. But financially strapped campaigners say that may not be soon enough.

An attorney representing seven presidential candidates said Wednesday the group would return to the Supreme Court today or Friday with their bid to win release of millions of dollars in frozen campaign money ahead of congressional action.

The U.S. Court of Appeals said Wednesday it lacks authority, although the attorneys said they were "literally begging" for release of the $2.4 million in federal matching campaign funds approved for the candidates.

The Federal Election Commission has been unable to disburse the funds since March 22, when a Supreme Court deadline for congressional reorganization of the FEC expired.

A House vote on the compromise bill is set for Monday. The Senate can act soon after that and the bill could be on President Ford's desk at midweek. Even if he signed it promptly the funds would remain frozen until Ford appointed new commissioners. The Senate confirmed them and they were sworn in.

Ford, whose healthy war chest is unique among the candidates and who is not a party to the court suit, has not said whether he will sign or veto the bill.

He has threatened a veto in the past, but Rep. Charles Wiggins, R-Calif., said after the conferees finished Wednesday: "I think he is (going to sign it). I'm going to tell him to."

House Republican Leader John J. Rhodes told a GOP caucus Wednesday that a veto now would place Ford in a political bind since it would delay disbursement of the funds even further, doing little financial damage to Ford while possibly killing off all opposition.

A veto could also kill the FEC. Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, who went along with the new bill, has despised the FEC since it was created and said, "If the President vetoes this bill, I'm just going to walk away and leave it. I'm not going through this again."

But Ronald Reagan, one of the candidates participating in the Appeals Court suit, urged Ford in a television speech Wednesday night to veto the bill because it "would give the hierarchy of organized labor increased power to influence elections while limiting the rights of all others."

Among many other changes, the measure rewrites the law on corporate and union political action committee solicitations, a change interpreted to be favorable to politically active labor organizations.

Iris Hardy's condition good after accident

Iris Lee Hardy of 103 E. Harvester, passenger on a motorcycle driven by Tommy Dale Gercken of 1314 E. Kingsmill, was listed in good condition at Highland General Hospital this morning.

The motorcycle collided with a car driven by Karen S. Sober of 1113 Darby in the 1100 block of E. Browning late Tuesday afternoon.

Ms. Hardy sustained a broken pelvis, ankle and wrist in the accident. Gercken was also listed in good condition at Highland General Hospital.

Ms. Sober was cited for failure to yield right-of-way.

Officers face charges on marine's death

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The Marines who gave Pvt. Lynn McClure the beating that killed him say he was on his knees screaming "God make them stop," while relays of bigger recruits bashed him with pugil sticks for about 45 minutes to prove to their drill sergeants they were "motivated."

The Marine Corps Wednesday ordered three sergeants and a captain to face courts martial on charges ranging up to negligent homicide and manslaughter in the death of McClure, 20, of Lufkin, Tex.

The colonel commanding McClure's regiment was disciplined by unspecified punishment, announced Maj. Gen. Kenneth Houghton, commander of the Marine Corps Recruit Depot.

McClure, described as mentally retarded, died March 13, three months after he suffered massive brain damage in a beating during training at the depot. He never regained consciousness.

Months after he lapsed into a coma from massive brain damage suffered in training, McClure was allegedly beaten in pugil stick combats by several other recruits on orders of drill sergeants as a disciplinary measure.

Col. R.A. Seymour, commander of McClure's regiment, and Capt. John B. Ullmann, 28, were given the choice — traditional under military procedure for minor offenses — of a court martial or accepting "non-judicial punishment" ordered by his superior.

Seymour accepted the non-judicial punishment, Houghton said. The discipline was not revealed. (The Los Angeles Times reported he received a letter of reprimand.) Ullman's case was postponed.

Sgt. H.E. Aguilar, 23, Hanford, Calif., and Staff Sgt. Harold L. Bronson, 30, Freeport, Fla., faced the most serious charges. They were the drill instructors in charge of the pugil stick bouts in which McClure was fatally beaten.

Aguilar was charged with negligent homicide and Bronson with involuntary manslaughter for allegedly failing to follow orders to stop such bouts when a recruit could not defend himself.

Both were also charged with aggravated assault, maltreatment of a recruit, dereliction of duty and violation of orders.

They face general courts martial which could impose sentences up to seven years in prison.

Capt. Cecil V. Taylor, 34, Orlando, Fla., commander of the special training branch that included the motivation platoon, was charged with dereliction of duty and violation of a general order for allegedly allowing an inexperienced sergeant to oversee pugil stick bouts, breaking a regulation requiring that a commissioned officer be in charge.

In interviews published today by the Los Angeles Times, four former recruits said drill sergeants ordered them to beat McClure, one after another, in bouts with pugil sticks, padding tipped poles used in bayonet training.

According to the article, they said McClure repeatedly complained that he was injured and 'refused to fight, threw down his stick and helmet and ran screaming from the ring. But they said the sergeants dragged him back, ordering the others to beat him as he lay on the ground.

They were like animals," said Robert Evans, now discharged, who said he struck the final blow and has been troubled by nightmares ever since.

Recruits could get out of the undesirable platoon by showing motivation, he said, and with the sergeants egging them on reported, but no arrests were made, school spokesmen said.

About a half-hour later blacks reluctantly boarded buses and the school was closed for the day by Leo Howard, a regional school supervisor. The blacks were bused to Lena Park in the Mattapan section, where classes were to continue, said school department spokesman Thomas Loftus.

That's the normal routine. They were sending lunches and teachers over (to the park) to continue classes," said Loftus.

Some of the blacks entered the park, but many did not, and spread out along a two-mile stretch of Blue Hill Avenue which runs through the city's Mattapan and Roxbury sections, he said.

"They're throwing at police, police cruisers, cars, anything," said a police spokesman. All available police were sent into the area.

The outbreak was the latest in a new series of racially motivated incidents which began with the beating of a black attorney by teen-age white anti-busing demonstrators at City Hall Plaza more than three weeks ago.

That incident touched off a series of stonings and beatings by both whites and blacks in a city uneasy over the past two years because of a desegregation program ordered by U.S.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP OF TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

The 'sin' in medicine

We frequently fuss at the doctors for things they do which we think they shouldn't do and for things they don't do which we think they should do.

But, except for what is financed by the taxpayers, doctors represent one of the last, and best examples of private enterprise? That part financed by tax money is one of the things we fuss about.

It would be far better for all if the politicians would get out of the way and let the medical profession take care of indigent patients on a "pay when you can" basis.

Doctors do a lot of this as it is, but it would not be "government required" if left to voluntary action. Doctors would not feel compelled, the patient would know he was receiving care out of love and would not be misled by the suggestion that he is entitled to something for nothing. And there would be one less lie for politicians to build a career upon.

The patient who is persuaded that he has a "right" to medical care at the expense of others can frequently imagine all sorts of ailments which require attention — attention merely for attention's sake and which reduces the amount of time the doctor has for those who might really need his services.

Government-financed medical programs cause all sorts of other problems. The door is opened for fraud situations in which fictitious patients are treated, kickbacks abound and thousands of "red tape" jobs are added to the tax payroll.

Medicine under this procedure seems more concerned with statistics than with the patient's health.

Better it could be eliminated and return medicine to a private matter between doctor and patient.

That, of course, is far from possible today since so many people are convinced that to be regulated by the state is to insure proper service, and that only thus would the desolate be cared for.

Helping feed the myth was California Gov. Brown's recent insulting suggestion that the doctors would get help on their malpractice insurance problem if they donated service to the poor.

The insult is that such a suggestion carried the implication that doctors do not donate service to poor people. Truth is that doctors probably give more of their professional services free to needy people than is given free by any other profession.

What disappointed us was that the medical profession did not raise its voice sounding out its outstanding benevolent record.

and at the same time challenging the parasites in public office to show what they have done in the way of "free service."

But that brings up one of the major problems for individuals trying to fight off the all devouring state. When the politicians seek to restrict the freedom of doctors to do their jobs, the doctors may be the only ones to protest.

When the politicians take aim on the building industry, the builders are likely the only ones to protest.

And so it goes. The politicians can brush such protests aside suggesting the complainers and selfish and not interested in the welfare of the people.

It is the "divide and conquer" approach that has worked so well for politicians that they have a hand in just about every individual decision Americans face today.

What would be helpful in the effort to turn things more toward private enterprise would be to have builders coming to the defense of doctors, doctors coming to the defense of builders, and people in general coming to the defense of any individual or group who is being targeted for the next thrust of political control.

The key is to examine issues on principle.

Letter to the editor

Editor:
If the Supreme Court Abortion Decision of Jan. 22, 1973, were nullified, President Ford would prefer nullification by a States Rights Amendment. Of all Human Life Amendments, the States Rights Amendment is the least desirable. Candidates Udall, Bayh, and Shapp favor abortion and want nothing done to nullify the Supreme Court Decision.

Carter, Jackson and others try to straddle the issue, not wanting to offend the National Organization of Women (NOW), or to antagonize the Right-To-Life (RTL) Organizations. This they do by saying: "I personally oppose abortion but... What their "but" means is classified information, a deep, deep secret, known only by the politician unwilling to commit himself on an explosive issue.

The only RTL candidates are Democrats Ellen McCormack and George Wallace, and Republican Ronald Reagan. Votes for McCormack, Wallace, and Reagan are pro-life votes, votes to let live. Votes for the others are abortion votes, votes to kill. "How a candidate feels about abortion isn't everything, it's the only thing."

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Although you're extra sharp businesswise today, you'll work harder for others, especially the family, than you will for yourself.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This is a day you must tell it like it is and avoid self-sounding phrases. Set an example. Stand behind your word.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Go after what is owed you, and no more. You'll only defeat your purpose by looking for a free ride.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) While you view things realistically today, dare to hope for a brighter tomorrow. Anticipate the obstacles to your dreams.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Time is on your side, so while you have the reserve strength don't think of quitting. Push, push, push!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) There is nothing really new under the sun, so profit by experience. Once you get a foothold today, you can climb that ladder of success.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You can see things today that another can't and can help her sort out her affairs. However, don't let her believe she can get more than she's entitled to.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You won't shirk tough decisions today, but what you'll decide is not for yourself. It's for the good of someone else.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This is the day they tally the score. If you were industrious, the returns will favor you. If not, expect payment relative to your efforts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) People you know socially may be in a position to help you in other areas today. Don't be afraid to speak about serious subjects.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Work on projects today that you've previously set aside. Nothing is too tough if you've set your mind to it.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Take over quickly and manage situations today if you see others floundering. You have the strength of character and body others may lack.

Another prophet fated to be right?

The United States is not the only democracy to have been admonished by Alexander Solzhenitsyn, that latter-day Jeremiah passionately warning against the snares of détente. The exiled Russian writer, who now lives in Switzerland, took the British to task in a recent lecture over BBC radio, and many were the sins and shortcomings he detailed.

Not only did Britain, and all of Western Europe, countenance the enslavement of millions of their fellow Europeans by Soviet communism after World War II, "whenever a new tyranny came into existence, however far away — in China, say, or Laos — Britain was always the first to recognize it, eagerly pushing aside all competitors for the honor."

"Tank columns rolled in East Berlin, Budapest and Prague, but not once did the British government recall its ambassadors in protest from any of these places."

"But when five terrorists — who had actually committed murder — were executed in Madrid, then the British ambassador was recalled and the din reverberated throughout the world. What a hurricane burst forth from the British Isles!"

And what of Europe today? asked Solzhenitsyn. "It is nothing more than a collection of cardboard stage sets, all bargaining with each other to see how little can be spent on defense so as to leave more for the comforts of life."

Europe, he says, has of its own accord abandoned not only its strength and influence in world affairs but its intellectual influence as well. "Modern society is hypnotized by socialism. It is prevented by socialism from seeing the mortal dangers it is in."

"And one of the greatest dangers of all is that you have lost all sense of danger, you cannot even see where it's coming from as it moves swiftly towards you."

"But the greatest danger of all is that you have lost the will to defend yourselves."

Solzhenitsyn expressed little hope that the West would heed the warning voices of the oppressed peoples of Eastern Europe. "Experience," he acknowledged sadly, "cannot be transmitted. Everyone must experience everything for himself."

In that respect, Solzhenitsyn may be less akin to the Biblical Jeremiah than to the Greek prophetess Cassandra, who carried the curse of never being believed.

But Cassandra, we tend to forget, was also fated always to be right.

Wrong horses, bad races, weak issues

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Politically, a lot of us have been looking at the wrong horses.

We've been analyzing each presidential candidate — warts and all — and each of their promises. We should be looking more seriously at who we're going to elect to the Senate and House of Representatives.

Most presidential candidates are promising change. But most presidents who have attempted change have been hamstrung by Congress, except in times of war or the Great Depression.

Jimmy Carter makes much ado about how many duplicating and overlying layers of bureaucracy he would eliminate. George Wallace makes equally "cutting" statements about the bureaucrats who run the federal government, often with little control from the White House.

President Nixon, whatever his other weaknesses, developed and presented to Congress some of the most revolutionary proposals for cutting the size of the federal government we'd seen in many years.

Mr. Nixon's program for shifting and combining departments and bureaus made anything Carter and other presidential candidates proposed, seem lame in comparison. The Nixon proposals are filed away in the cabinets of Congressional committees. The Senate and House neither adopted the Nixon concepts nor came up with agreed-on counter-legislation.

Even when Congress has voted decentralization programs, the end result seems to be a heavier concentration of federal bureaucracy, not a reduction.

There was talk a while back of the new federalism. Revenue sharing was intended to shift a hefty portion of what's funded in Washington back to the states. A chunk of money was voted. But the federal bureaucracy proceeded to expand, in major areas, the decentralization it was supposed to affect. This federal expansion, of course, was approved by Congress.

Carter and some fellow candidates have also talked of zero budgeting, looking at every federal program and agency from scratch each year.

It is well in this respect to remember that a number of presidents, including Mr. Ford and Mr. Nixon, have sent the Senate and House long lists of programs and agencies that no longer serve a useful purpose. Mr. Nixon and Mr. Ford might have saved everyone a lot of bother by forgetting the exercise before it was started.

The number of agencies, programs and functions cut was so small it's hard to track.

One agency head testified that he had nothing to do for years except amuse himself. His staff members were busy only when they could find personal errands to occupy themselves. He was successful, as I recall, in getting his agency abolished; but it took a great deal of personal effort on his part.

We've seen what's happened to energy. The President has a program. Numerous senators and representatives have theirs; but not Congress.

Having failed in welfare, domestic economics and assorted programs, Congress is now moving energetically into foreign affairs. In a negative way, Congress has come up with obstacles on a series of presidential proposals — on Angola, on actions in Southeast Asia and on trade agreements with the Soviet Union. Checks on a president are a good thing but negative blocks with no positive set of similar programs leave a president rulerless.

In times of great depression, as in the Franklin Roosevelt era, a charismatic president can carry Congress along for awhile — but study sometimes the number of Roosevelt vetoes.

Invisible victims need some consideration, too

By MADSEN PIRIE
R.C. Hoiles Fellow
Hillsdale (Mich.) College

I was speaking to Ralph Nader after a speech he gave a few nights ago. It was a fascinating experience to watch him in argument. When someone questioned automobile safety requirements, Nader asked him if he had ever seen a child decapitated in an automobile accident. When someone else cast doubts on the details of current standards of emission control, Nader asked him if he had ever seen anyone dying of emphysema. Every time anyone ventured to challenge the details of regulation by government, Nader instantly presented the vision of some hapless victim.

The experience was illuminating because it shows something about Nader which I had not known before. It shows that Nader thinks that anyone who disagrees with his methods must also disagree with his intentions. This means that if you question the Environmental Protection Agency, you must be in favor of polluted air and dirty water. If you cast doubt upon auto safety standards, you must want people to be horribly mangled in car smashes. If you criticize the Federal Drug Administration, then you must be in favor of people dying from cancer as a result of the reckless introduction of dangerous drugs.

Now when I was brought up, I was always taught that there was more than one way of killing a cat; meaning that you could support a man's intentions without necessarily endorsing his particular methods. I was also taught that it is always safer to assume that your opponents are well-meaning but mistaken. If you suppose that they are simply wicked and wilful, then what is needed to correct them will not be argument; it will be punishment.

Assuming that Nader does believe his opponents are really wicked and wilful, and that this is not merely a clever front he puts on for the purpose of discrediting them, we find ourselves in a situation where Nader takes any criticism of the regulatory agencies to be an attack on the whole idea of protecting life, health and property. He presents us with the two alternatives, Naderism or nothing. This unfortunately precludes him from any discussion of alternative ways of achieving the same goals, ways which might have less unpleasant consequences and be more compatible with free choice and individual liberty for ordinary Americans. The point is that there are unpleasant consequences of regulation. There are victims of government action, just as there are those who benefit. Whenever a new drug is delayed or banned because it might cause one man in a million to have an increased risk of cancer, then we have to count the hundreds or thousands of those whose life would have been saved by it. The trouble is that we can identify the one in a million who might develop cancer. We can see him in his hospital bed and interview his widow. We do not see the ones who would have been saved because they are the unknown "might-have-beens."

We count those few who are adversely affected by an artificial sweetener; but we never see those who died because they had to use sugar when the artificial sweetener was outlawed. The principle is the same with other aspects of regulation. We count those who gain, but we never notice the "invisible victims" who suffer because of the regulation.

It does not seem very much to ask that those who support regulation should count those who stand to lose, as well as those who will benefit. That they should count the invisible victims as well as the visible ones. This is only tantamount to asking for a balanced assessment of the pros and cons. There might be a lot less government regulation if the full costs of it were known, the costs measured in terms of human suffering. It seems such a small thing to ask, but it seems to be asking too much of Mr. Nader.

Sen. Jackson doesn't have time to run for president. He's too busy writing his State of the Union message.

Countdown includes caravan

RONALD REAGAN is being given the edge in the May 1 Texas primary by many of the state's key politicians. The first presidential primary in the state's history has assumed national importance. The former California governor is campaigning strenuously in Texas, where a win would be important in keeping his campaign going until the Republican convention.

The Gray County bicentennial schedule stands at nine weeks and counting, yet no one is concerned at jumping the gun slightly when the Armed Forces Bicentennial Caravan pulls into Pampa Monday.

The six-vehicle caravan, which the military calls "mobile museums," will offer "The History of the Armed Services and Their Contributions to the Nation" in a joint patriotic program with the Pampa schools.

The public may tour the free military exhibits from 1:30-7:30 p.m. outside the M.K. Brown Auditorium as well as view exhibits of student art work inside.

At 7:30 p.m., Pampa students will take over the day-long program with a Patriotic Parade.

The presentation of colors will be followed by the Pledge of Allegiance and the national anthem. Following the welcome address, the Houston Middle School band will perform "American Patrol," "Chester and "God Bless America." They will be directed by Sam Watson.

The choir from Houston Middle School will sing "Music Scene U.S.A." before turning the spotlight over to fifth and sixth grade choirs from Pampa elementary schools.

They have a six-song repertoire planned, including "Here Comes the Parade," "A Better World," "Under the Umbrella," "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "This is My Country" and a medley of Armed Forces songs.

The combined choirs and band musicians will appear in a finale, "America the Beautiful" directed by Hester Branham.

Program chairman for the Pampa schools' participation is Joe Page, Austin Elementary School principal, assisted by Cameron Marsh, Travis School principal.

The military caravan is one of four identical caravans touring the United States for the bicentennial.

Army Capt. Ken Colucci, commanding officer of the caravan which will visit Pampa, said. "This is a concerted effort, by the Armed Forces, to bring the American Revolution Bicentennial closer to the people."

Visitors to the Air Force van will see a 17-minute slide presentation which utilizes 15 projectors and over 700 slides to highlight that service's role in aviation — from Kitty Hawk, through two world wars, to space research.

Festival in New York. Army, Navy and Marine Corps vans are designed on a walk-through format of exhibits.

Army contributions to the nation and history are recounted in six areas including Wartime Role, Civil Actions, Community Assistance, Technology and Medicine, Exploration and Contributions to the Nation.

"Heritage of the Corps" is the theme of the Marine Corps van which includes artwork by active, retired and reserve Marines. The exhibit is divided into five categories including Revolutionary War, 1798-1898, the Marine Corps Band, the Twentieth Century and Marines Today.

The Navy's role in the nation's first two hundred years is portrayed by selected historical events illustrating that service's participation. Exhibits display Navy contributions to knowledge and Navy-developed items and processes which have improved the quality of life for the average American.

The four vans are identical in outward appearance, Capt. Colucci said, except for individual service names and seals. Each van measures 40 feet long by 14 feet wide when in display configuration and they have been designed to handle up to 100 visitors per hour per van.

This caravan, which operates out of Tinker Air Force Base in Oklahoma is responsible for visiting towns in Colorado, Kansas, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Dakota, South Dakota, Oklahoma, Wyoming and Texas by Dec. 31. It has been on the road since July 4, 1975 and will cover over 1.5 million square miles by the end of the bicentennial year.

The caravan will be in front of the Carson County Court House in Panhandle from 1-7 p.m. Sunday.

'US misled on nuclear power'

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — A Harvard economics professor who has studied the costs involved in nuclear energy says the nation has been misled by those promoting the nuclear generation of electricity.

Professor Irvin Bupp told the Austin City Council Tuesday nuclear plants probably would never be a cheap source of power.

"It's as uncertain today as in the early days after the Second World War that the existence in Society of commercial reactor systems can be the source of savings to consumers, to industrial users, indeed to anyone," Bupp said.

"Unless the cost of building these huge generators is gotten under control there is no way nuclear energy can make the kind of contribution that many important people want it to."

"It costs too much to build them."

Bupp was one of four nuclear power experts testifying at the council meeting. The council reportedly held the hearings because it was having second thoughts about its continued participation in the controversial South Texas Nuclear Project.

The cities of Houston, San Antonio and Corpus Christi also are helping build the nuclear plant near Bay City.

Another witness, former U.S. Nuclear Regulator Commission inspector Robert Pollard, testified the government and industry officials were covering up serious problems and potential hazards in nuclear plants.

"When I raised safety concerns I was told it was not my responsibility," said Pollard, who resigned in February.

Daniel Ford, an economist with the Union of Concerned

Scientists, said the U.S. could achieve energy independence without massive development of nuclear power if it increased efficient use of present energy supplies.

Marines abolish unit

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The Marine Corps has abolished the "motivation platoon," a special unit for troublesome recruits which was involved in the beating death of Pvt. Lynn McClure.

McClure, 20, a mentally retarded recruit from Lufkin, Tex., died of massive brain injuries suffered in a "pugil stick" fight while he was assigned to the platoon.

Brig. Gen. David Twomey, deputy commander of the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, said Tuesday that the special platoons had been disbanded. The move had been under consideration for several months anyway, he said, but the death of McClure was a factor in the decision.

Recruits who were troublesome or did not keep up with regular training were assigned to the platoons in the past for special training and disciplinary attention Twomey said such recruits now will be given "intensive counseling" within their regular units.

McClure was knocked unconscious Dec. 6 while fighting several other recruits in a disciplinary match with pugil sticks, padding tipped poles used to practice bayonet fighting and instill an aggressive spirit for hand-to-hand fighting.

He never regained consciousness, sinking into a deep coma until he died in a Houston Veterans Administration hospital three months later.

His parents have filed a $3.5 million wrongful death claim against the corps.

Police put clamp on violators

Pampa police clamped down on traffic violators in the first quarter of 1976, according to figures in the quarterly report of Mrs. Faye Miller, municipal court clerk.

The report shows that in January, February and March of this year 1266 cases were filed compared to 851 cases in the same period last year.

Most of the alleged violations were for speeding, failure to stop at stop signs, running red lights or failure to yield right-of-way.

On the other hand, fewer tickets were issued during 1976 quarter for parking violations.

This year 499 tickets were issued for overtime parking compared to 707 in the first quarter of 1975. The non-moving parking tickets showed 129 last year and only 44 for the first three months of this year.

Police Chief Richard Mills attributed the increase in traffic cases to the Selective Traffic Enforcement Program which the city initiated last November under state funding.

The court clerk's report shows assessed traffic fines in the first quarter of 1976 totaled $16,498.50. That compares with $12,757 in the same three-month period last year.

First quarter fines this year for parking violations totaled $433 against $665 last year.

Judge Don Cain's municipal court handled 54 criminal cases during the first three months of this year. Last year there were 29 criminal cases.

Fines assessed in criminal cases amounted to $3,715 this year, compared to $3,555 in the first quarter of 1975.

The clerk's report lists $16,951 in fines collected in municipal court during January, February and March of 1976. In the same quarter last year the total was $14,217.

Stomach ache slows Henry

KINSHASA, Zaire (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry Kissinger developed a stomach ailment today and canceled plans for a sightseeing tour, American officials reported.

The secretary met with President Mobutu Sese Seko Wednesday, then later attended a news conference where he said the United States has offered its help in negotiating an end to white rule in Rhodesia.

Kissinger, who attended a late banquet in his honor showed no signs Wednesday of the ailment, which is common to visitors to west Africa.

"Dr. Kissinger is suffering from a slight case of gastroenteritis," an official told reporters. Gastroenteritis is inflammation of the lining of the stomach and the intestines.

Kissinger was not confined to bed, but canceled plans to visit the city museum and the central market and also to attend a luncheon at an agroindustrial showplace at N'sele, on the banks of the Zaire (former Congo) River 36 miles from Kinshasa.

Kissinger, in the news conference, said none of the parties involved in the Rhodesian dispute have asked for a more active American role, although all the heads of state he has talked with on his two-week African tour want some kind of U.S. participation.

"Negotiations are still possible, even though the fighting has already begun," Kissinger said. "If the parties ask us to be helpful, we would certainly take that very seriously."

U.S. officials said Mobutu expressed approval of Kissinger's speech Tuesday in Zambia in which he pledged Washington's "unrelenting opposition" to the white minority regime in Rhodesia, a breakaway British colony.

Kenya, Tanzania and Zambia, the first stops on the Kissinger tour, also have shown support for the U.S. position.

The statement increased pressure on the white-ruled Rhodesian government to end its political domination of blacks, who outnumber whites 23 to 1. Black guerrillas, pushing to overthrow the government of Prime Minister Ian Smith, have stepped up their attacks on the landlocked country from neighboring Mozambique.

Talks between Smith and moderate black leaders on the question of majority rule broke off in February.

(In Salisbury, Rhodesia, Smith took seven blacks into his white cabinet Wednesday for the first time. Nationalist leaders, however, called the move "a waste of time.")

At the news conference Wednesday, Kissinger also said the United States would give Zaire $5 million in aid to buy cotton and was considering the possibility of supplying $20 million in import-export credits to enable Zaire to buy copper mining equipment.

Zaire is suffering from a drop in copper prices — its main export — and the rise in the price of oil, which is almost totally imported.

Kissinger extended his stay in Kinshasa through today after the Ghana stop was cancelled, officially due to the health of Ghanaian head of state Col. Ignatius Acheampong. But U.S. officials said it was because of threatened student demonstrations they said were promoted by the Soviet Union.

Kissinger leaves Friday for Monrovia, Liberia and will visit Senegal before returning to Nairobi, Kenya, the starting point of his African tour, for the fourth U.N. conference on trade and development.

Soviets want two-stage Geneva peace meetings

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union today called for the setting up of a two-stage Geneva peace conference to head off what it says is the increasing danger of war in the Middle East.

But Western diplomats said that since the Soviets still insisted on the participation of the Palestine Liberation Organization, there seemed little chance of success in setting up the conference. Israel has stated it will not sit down at a negotiating table with the PLO.

The Soviet proposal came in a government statement published by the Tass news agency. Dismissing last year's U.S.-sponsored partial peace settlements between Egypt and Israel as illusory, the Soviets directly blamed Washington as well as Israel for allegedly blocking the reconvening of the Geneva conference.

It said that given the will, a conference could lead to agreement on all aspects of a settlement. Directly citing the United States and Israel, it said, "some are unwilling to put this mechanism into operation ... if some governments continue to obstruct the resumption of the Geneva conference, they will naturally assume a serious responsibility for the consequences of such a policy."

It said the step-by-step peace agreements between Israel and Egypt gave some persons the illusion of a calming down, but "now everybody sees that these deals, which sidestepped cardinal questions of a Middle East settlement, not only failed to defuse the situation but aggravated it."

"The situation," it said, "is fraught with the danger of a new military explosion."

The statement said the conference should consist of a short procedural stage followed by negotiations on the substance of a settlement.

"It goes without saying that representatives of the Palestine Liberation Organization should take part in the work of both stages of the conference," it said.

The statement reiterated the Soviet Union's three conditions for a settlement:

— Withdrawal of Israel behind pre-1967 borders.

— A homeland for the Palestinians.

— Guaranteed frontiers and security for all Middle East countries.

representatives of the Palestine Liberation Organization should take part in the work of both stages of the conference," it said.

The first time he got away with a $400 ring, but then his troubles began. Johnson and his wife Mary tell the story this way.

Last Thursday, Mrs. Johnson returned home from a shopping trip and heard a noise upstairs. A man came running down stairs and escaped out the back door with a diamond ring worth $400.

Friday morning Mrs. Johnson was home reading and she heard a noise at the back door. She went to investigate and saw someone trying to open the door. She plugged in an iron near the back door, and waited. After a while the man tired of trying to open the door, broke a windowpane over the doorknob and reached in.

Mrs. Johnson was ready and tagged him with the searing iron. She then added a touch of tear gas. The man, the same burglar as the day before, ran away screaming and cursing.

Act three came Tuesday. Mrs. Johnson was unloading groceries and the same man walked in the house. He pulled a switchblade knife and threatened her. The family mongrel dog jumped on the intruder. While the burglar was dealing with the dog, Mrs. Johnson opened a drawer, took out a pistol her husband had bought her during the weekend and fired.

The burglar left a trail of blood before he ran out the back door and climbed over the fence. "We think she probably hit him in the right shoulder," Johnson said. "She was tremendously afraid — just numb and very upset."

Johnson said he had taught his wife how to fire the pistol the day before the burglar returned the third time and he was surprised his wife actually used the pistol when the time came. Johnson said although the burglar had received a hot reception at the house, he expected the man to return.

Ford steps up attack

HOUSTON (UPI) — President Ford stepped up his personal attack on Ronald Reagan today, hoping for an upset victory over his "irresponsible" challenger in the Texas-Republican presidential primary Saturday.

"The President came out swinging against Reagan Wednesday. There's more of the same today. That's the name of the game," a presidential aide said. In Houston, Conroe, Waco and Dallas, Ford was unleashing a repeat of what he said about Reagan Wednesday in Tyler, Ford Worth and Houston — that his foe "quotes statistics without any in depth understanding of them" makes "superficial arguments based on incomplete knowledge" "has failed to level with the American people."

Ford has become so "offended" by what he regards as

Reagan's "irresponsible" campaign rhetoric that he has dropped his earlier practice of proclaiming his own record and largely ignoring his competition. Typical of the new Ford voice is the oft repeated jibe about former movie actor Reagan: "There are no retakes in the Oval Office."

The President was holding a news conference (at 10:30 a.m. ed) in Houston, climaxing his overnight foray into the city that is Texas' largest and Reagan's political fortress in the state.

Later he was driving 45 miles north to the mushrooming suburb of Conroe for a parade, then flying to Waco for a public forum at Baylor University, the citadel of Texas Baptists.

Ford was spending Thursday night Dallas before completing on Friday in Lubbock and Abilene his primary campaign's longest tour, hoping a victory could end Reagan's challenge.

Ford's public position, stated on his Houston arrival Wednesday: "We have been an underdog. We are closing the gap. We are going to make it a very close race."

A spokesman for Ford, who has beaten Reagan in six of seven previous primaries, said, "if we get over half the 96 Republican convention delegates at stake Saturday it will be fantastic." Neither publicly nor privately did the President's men and women predict a popular vote victory over Reagan Saturday.

They said they expect Reagan to score in such traditionally Republican strong hold cities as Houston and Dallas. But Ford's folk stressed the race for delegates is by congressional district and that while Reagan may pile up votes in some areas, Ford will score in others.

Such was the reason for the smaller city stops on the Ford itinerary.

The personal nature of the Ford-Reagan battle caused an audience of some 6,000 persons in Houston's Spring Branch Coliseum to laugh Wednesday night when a man asked Ford in a public forum if he still considered Reagan competent enough to be a possible vice-presidential running mate.

Ford smiled. First he said, anyone holding Reagan's position on the Panama Canal is "irresponsible."

Then he said, "I understand that in the heat of a campaign, people get overly excited and make sometimes overstated charges."

"We'll take a look at it after get the nomination in Kansas City" at the Republican convention, he said.

Frio ballots limited

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — Frio County voters will not be allowed to mark ballots Saturday for anything but federal, state and countywide offices because the county's apportionment has been questioned by the Justice Department.

U.S. District Judge D.W. Suttle ruled Wednesday residents could not cast primary votes in subcounty district elections for offices such as county commissioner, justice of the peace or constable.

Suttle's action came at the request of the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund in a class action suit. The Justice Department already had said the county apportionment of 1973 was wrong and the MALDEF suit said any election held on the basis of that incorrect apportionment should be nullified.

"Plaintiffs will suffer irreparable harm if the election of county commissioners, constables and justices of the peace of Frio County is allowed to proceed in the May 1, 1976 primaries, since such election would be held under an apportionment plan without force or effect, and plaintiffs are likely to prevail on the merits of their prayer for injunction under the Voting Rights Act of 1965, as amended," Suttle's order said.

MALDEF filed the suit against the Democratic and Raza Unida parties following the Justice Department's challenge of the apportionment.

Suttle's action was believed to be the first federal court ruling under the Voting Rights Act since it became applicable in Texas, although the Justice Department has used the same law to challenge massive annexations made by the City of San Antonio during 1972-73 on grounds the voting strength of Mexican-Americans was diluted.

Congress in 1975 extended the act to protect the voting rights of Mexican-Americans throughout Texas and it requires any governmental action affecting the voting strength of the ethnic minority to come under Justice Department review.

Suttle said any election practice or procedure, standard of qualification for voting different from that in force on Nov. 1, 1972, was covered by the Voting Rights Act.

Patty rests before tests

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Patricia Hearst waited today in the most relaxed surroundings she has had since her arrest last fall for the psychiatric studies that may determine how long she will be a federal prisoner.

Miss Hearst underwent a routine physical examination Wednesday at the Metropolitan Correctional Center, the comparatively plush federal jail where she was transferred Tuesday.

Warden J.D. Williams said the formal psychiatric tests probably would not begin until next week.

A staff of four—a psychiatrist, psychologist and two social workers—will oversee the examination, along with the regular educational and medical staff, the warden said.

U.S. District Court Judge Oliver Carter sentenced the 22-year-old newspaper heiress to 35 years after she was convicted in San Francisco on bank robbery charges, but said he would reduce the sentence following a 90-day psychiatric observation.

The 22-story correctional facility has been called the most luxurious jail in the nation, more like a motel, with color coordinated rooms, a view of San Diego Bay and day rooms equipped with color television sets, pay telephones, pool tables and microwave ovens to warm snacks.

County heart division picks slate of officers

Officers and board members for the Gray County Heart Division of the American Heart Association were elected to serve during the July 1, 1976 to June 30, 1977 term during a recent meeting.

Named to the board were Homer Thomas, Bill Owen, Mab Calloway, Marjorie Penn, the Rev. Ralph Palmer, the Rev. T.J. Wilson, Michael Danigan, Joyce Walberg, Bessie Franklin, Phyllis King, Jean Johnson, Jessie Newberry, Bill Slaughter, Susie Wilkinson and Katherine Gibby.

Newly elected officers are Horace Williams, president; Melvin Kunkel, vice president; Clara Quary, secretary; Betty Casey, treasurer, and Rev. Palmer, parliamentarian.

Included on the April meeting's agenda was delegate selection for the regional and state meetings May 20 and June 19-20.

Primary contenders pushing

By United Press International
The major contenders in Saturday's Texas presidential preference primary have gathered in the state to make their final allegations, denials and appeals for support.

President Ford, who has consistently said he was behind in Texas, campaigned in Houston, Conroe and Waco today before flying to Dallas. Ford's four day tour of the state ends Friday.

"We have been an underdog," Ford reiterated in Houston Wednesday. "We are closing the gap. We are going to make it a very close race."

Ford's challenger Ronald Reagan arrives in the state today to protect the lead Ford says Reagan has in the delegate race.

Campaigning in Atlanta Wednesday, Reagan continued his attacks on the Ford defense policy and said the President's own advisors had conceded the U.S. was second to the Soviet Union among world powers. Reagan said Ford had asked Congress for $300 million to build the Minuteman missile system.

"I think it shows the things I'm saying are beginning to bear fruit," Reagan said. "I think he would have requested cuts of billions of dollars in the defense budget if I hadn't raised the issues."

Reagan's schedule of Texas appearances shadows the President's schedule. Reagan arrived in Tyler today, where Ford arrived Tuesday, and then headed for Houston.

Friday Reagan's scheduled called for him to start in Beaumont, go to San Antonio, Waco, Dallas and Texarkana.

Reagan was represented in the state Wednesday by New Hampshire Gov. Meldrim Thomson, who echoed Reagan's feeling Secretary of State Henry Kissinger should be fired and Ford defeated.

"What monstrous hypocrisy we have tolerated when Kissinger is awarded the Nobel Peace Prize for surrendering Vietnam to the Communists," Thomson said in Dallas. "It is like awarding the same prize to Benedict Arnold posthumously."

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am a black woman married to a black man who has very light skin. Nearly everyone in his family is light-skinned, and their hair is thin, like Caucasians. Some of my husband's relatives are trying to pass as Indians. They go around with their hair parted in the middle wearing headbands. They look ridiculous because the Indians around here don't wear headbands. They even put "Indian" on their drivers' licenses where it says "race." When one of them gets married, they have a Catholic ceremony, and then at the reception they all sit around and smoke the "peace pipe."

My poor husband is so humiliated because everyone who knows about his relatives looks at him funny. At first I thought that these people did not want to be considered black because of the hard times minorities have in some places. But, Abby, Indians are more of a minority than blacks are!

I am not prejudiced against any minority. I just hate phony people. What is your opinion?

UPSET IN MARYLAND

DEAR UPSET: You can't pick your relatives, but you can pick your friends, and there is no law that forces you to be friendly with relatives you don't care for. And as for their "passing," if people want to pass, IT'S THEIR BUSINESS.

DEAR ABBY: I have two big, good-looking sons. One is 16 and the other one is 18, and they've been fighting each other since they were old enough to swing their arms. The 18-year-old just bought a car and drove past his brother walking down the road, and he wouldn't even stop to give him a ride. The 16-year-old, who's as big as his brother, keeps his clothes in better shape, so the older one helps himself to his kid brother's clothes without asking. These boys fight and cuss each other out like a couple of mule skinkers. What can't they act like brothers?

WEST VA. MOM

DEAR MOM: They do. Cain and Abel.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend (21) and I (19) have a very beautiful love relationship, but he says he doesn't "like" me. He says he "loves" me very often, but that is only when we are in a love situation.

He very seldom takes me places in the company of other people, and he doesn't talk to me very much, but he is a wonderful lover when he is in the mood. I really love him, and it is very depressing to know that he doesn't "like" me. Or should I be satisfied that he loves me?

CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: What your boyfriend is trying to tell you, dear, is that you are a very good "love partner," but that's all. If you're looking for a totally satisfying relationship, I suggest that you lose this "lover" and find someone who can "like" you in broad daylight in a vertical position.

DEAR ABBY: What is your opinion of a man who comes into someone's home and sits the entire evening in the company of men and women without removing his hat?

MAUDE

DEAR MAUDE: He has no manners, no hair or a new hat.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: Can you give me any information about aplastic anemia? I would like to know what, if any, is the treatment for this disease. Also do you know of any cases that have been cured and how they were cured? My sister has this disease and everyone at this end, including the doctors, is in the dark about how to treat it. I would appreciate any information you can give or who to talk to about this.

DEAR READER: I am sure that your doctors understand this problem very well. It's the difficulty in treating it that is bothering them.

Aplastic anemia refers to the inability of the bone marrow to form blood cells. This may affect all of the different types of blood cells, including the red cells, white cells and the little platelets involved in blood clotting mechanisms. In other instances it may involve only one type of cell, specifically the red blood cell formation. What causes it? In a number of instances the real cause is never identified. There are rare cases in which it appears to be a birth defect. In other instances it may be related to exposure to some toxic agent, that includes benzene solvents or it can follow the use of an infinite variety of medicines that people commonly use. Some antibiotics have been identified as particularly likely to depress the bone marrow and produce this type of an anemia. Excessive radiation can sometimes damage the bone marrow. A good example here would be the numerous patients who had aplastic anemia after the two atom bombs were dropped in Japan. Other patients develop bone marrow problems secondary to infections, including viral hepatitis. The failure of bone marrow can also precede the development of other disorders including leukemia and

Polly's pointers

DEAR POLLY: My Pointer concerns any time Mother is going to be away at mealtime and wishes to make things as easy as possible for Father and the children. Plan an easy meal that will not be difficult for them to prepare. Write out the menu. Gather together all the materials needed, along with the cooking directions and even the required utensils and leave where they can be easily found. Make sure that each one knows about the plan before they start groping around and the result will be a successful time for all. —ELLEN.

DEAR POLLY: When buying a set of matched towels I always buy two extra hand towels. They are used more than the others, so they wear out sooner. —GERI.

DEAR POLLY: With Little League season just around the corner you may need some extra bases. Use the bottoms of gallon size plastic bottles with a one inch rim all around. Cut sawtooth edges on the rims and insert into the ground. Such bases are clearly visible. —TINA.

Sex clinics: 1 in 50 legitimate

By Joanne and Lew Koch

(Fourth in a series)
It is the best of times and the worst of times for people with sexual problems. Never before have there been so many places where a man who has never achieved an erection or a woman who has never experienced an orgasm can be helped. Never before have there been so many quacks and charlatans vying for sexual therapy business, with little more than a leer to recommend them.

Now that we are finally able to recognize sex as a natural birthright of every man and woman, we have to guard that birthright from those who would exploit us. The healthy openness about sexuality which allows a husband and wife to admit, at least to their therapist, that they are not able to please each other, the growing equality which tells a wife she doesn't have to fake an orgasm any more—all this has led to a boon and a blight called the sex clinic.

Sex therapy is not just a course in intercourse, but a program of learning to respond to a separate adult human being, someone who has ceased to be a live partner, a lover, and is now entangled with you in a debilitating dependency.

In a relatively short, concentrated period of therapy (12 to 15 sessions is a typical course), husband and wife can learn to flourish; they can experience an amazing, accelerated growth. They can establish a new relationship which doesn't require one of the partners to be sick or guilty or hurt all the time.

But just as sexual therapy may hold the key to a new relationship, it can also be bungled so badly that men and women become convinced they are sexual and emotional failures.

The dangers have been exposed recently by the first and foremost sex therapist, Dr. William Masters.

"The current field of sexual therapy is dominated by an astounding assortment of incompetents, cultists, mystics, well-meaning dabblers and outright charlatans."

His professional and marital partner, Virginia Johnson, in a rare moment of anger, told us there's so-much exploitation in the field now that it disgusts her.

Dr. Masters claims that in the five years since they published "Human Sexual Inadequacy," approximately 3,500 to 5,000 new treatment centers devoted to sex problems have been established in the United States. Of these, says Dr. Masters, "the most charitable estimate is that perhaps 100 are legitimate. Our instinct says that 50 would be a better guess."

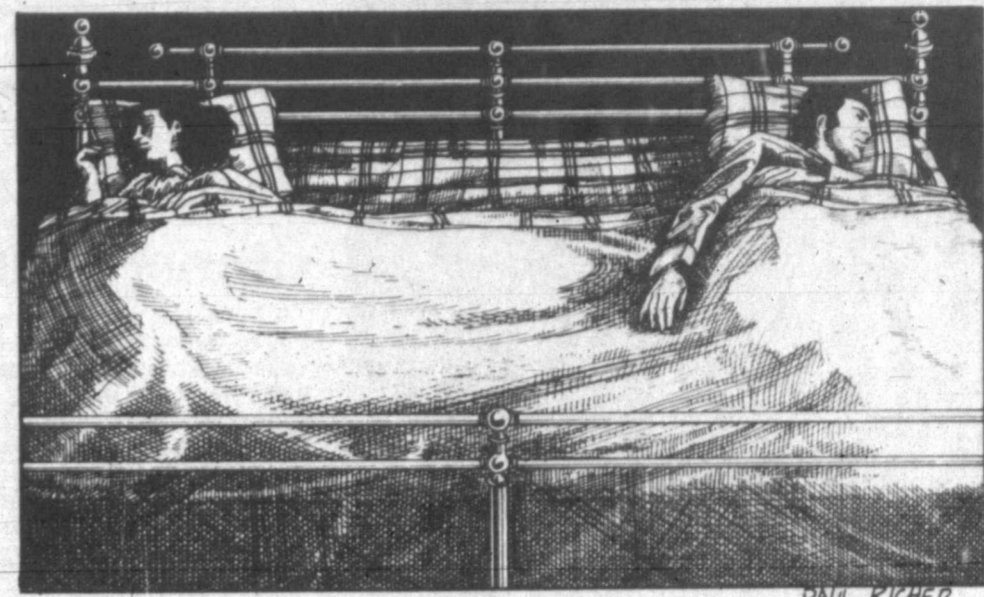

Quackery in sex therapy is nearly impossible to prosecute because there is no legal definition of what is a legitimate sex clinic.

The problem is compounded by the fact that most people have no idea what they should expect from a sexual therapist.

Dr. Masters will be the first to admit that there is no such thing as the Masters-Johnson technique. "We preach no dogma. We treat each couple as a unique relationship, and we don't know what approach will be followed until we know what the particular problems are."

Most sex clinics do use an approach based on the program which Masters and Johnson set forth in their book, "Human Sexual Inadequacy." Some of the elements are: male and female co-therapists who provide interpretation and moral support for the spouses; treatment of the couple and the relationship rather than the so-called dysfunctioning individual; an initial period of interview and education, during which the couple refrains from intercourse; following by sensate focus exercises—massaging, stroking, caressing (not of the genitals); an emphasis on pleasure rather than performance.

(But be wary of sex clinics which advertise the use of the "Masters and Johnson technique" or ones which incorporate the names of Masters and Johnson into their title—such as the "Willowbrook Masters and Johnson Sex Clinic." Some people who call themselves Masters and Johnson disciples have done no more than read their books.)

PAUL RICHER

One potential benefit of legitimate sex therapy is the process of individualization. All the couples we interviewed who went through what they judged to be successful experiences in sex therapy attribute part of the success to the process of becoming separate persons.

There is no uninvolved partner in a sexual relationship, but neither is one partner responsible for the other's sexuality. There is no way she can ejaculate for him, or he be orgasmic for her.

This process of taking responsibility for one's sexuality and one's behavior is absolutely key to improving a marriage. The two partners are more likely to emerge from sex therapy feeling this greater independence and self-esteem when the therapists deal with some of the psychological causes of the dysfunction.

Finally, while you can never be certain in advance that a certain sexual therapist is right for you, there are a few ways in which you can make sure that he or she is not a fraud.

Find out the psychiatric or medical training of your prospective therapist.

Check whether the sex therapist is accountable to an established hospital, university or social agency. Clinics which are so affiliated are more likely to offer a wide range of psychiatric services. Even if a therapist has satisfactory training and accountability, unethical procedures can and do occur. There are two practices in use by a number of sex therapists which contain a great potential for doing damage. One is coaching, demonstrating, participating in or observing sexual experiences between the couple.

Foot and facial massages are commonly observed by reputable therapists as part of a program of sensate exercises. But therapists need not demonstrate how to manipulate the genitals or how to have intercourse the "right" way.

A second potentially damaging technique is the use of a sexual surrogate, or substitute sex partner.

Some individuals may gain satisfaction from sexual experiences with a surrogate which they had not previously been able to achieve. But if your aim is the enjoyment of sex within marriage, or within a particular relationship, then it's you and your partner, not you and a paid sexual surrogate.

Salt water may help white clothes

LUBBOCK, Tex. (UPI)—The practical housewife soon may be washing her whites in salt water.

Officials at Texas Tech University's Textile Research Center say the magnesium in salt stabilizes the bleach in cotton to keep it from immediately decomposing, making cotton fabrics whiter.

J.E. Loughlin, head of the chemical processing laboratories at the center, said the discovery was made during research on the problem of industrial dyes polluting fresh water.

"A small amount of dye in water can very easily excite ecologists simply because of the high visibility," Loughlin said. "It doesn't normally do much harm, but it is readily noticed."

Loughlin cited fluorescein, a yellowish-green dye used in aviation sea rescue operations, as an example. He said fluorescein is visible at one part in twenty million parts of water. "There isn't much dye present, but it shows up."

At wit's end

By ERMA BOMBECK

Advertisers have known for years what I am just starting to suspect. Americans will buy anything if the pitchperson has a foreign accent.

I'll buy a camera from Sir Laurence Olivier that I don't need, a car from Ricardo Montalban that I can't afford, and a headache from Joan Fontaine that I already have.

It's more than just the authoritative way in which a product is presented to us. I think Americans are just plain impressed with people who speak another language—even if it is their own.

It's dumb when you think about it. Take coffee. The housewife's authority on good coffee has to be Mrs. Olson. Old "spout mouth" whips in and out of houses like a revolving door spreading the richest kind of whole-bodied goodness wherever she goes.

Think about it. Sweden exports about two cups of coffee a year—not exactly their gross national product. So why should I believe Mrs. Olson?

Or ballpoint pens. I watched skier Jean-Claude Killy sit before a roaring fire penning a bit of prose to someone with his new pen and went out and bought a couple of dozen. Since when is France the ballpoint pen capital of the world?

In our minds we have built up myths about different countries. We believe that all European women are beauties and have flawless skin. (Would it shock you to know that I once saw a contessa with a cold sore?)

We know that all Italians are good cooks, the Irish smell like soap, and the Japanese are fanatically neat and would never throw a candy wrapper on the floor.

And when it comes to men, we all know it's Frenchmen like Louis Jordan who would send us flowers or Englishmen like Peter Sellers who would fly us first class anywhere in the world.

I even bought the bit from the Spanish beauty who said, "I am a shy person. Please go out and buy my wine so I won't have to make any more commercials."

Face it, we're still under the influence of the old world. I expect any day now on the bicentennial minute to hear: "The voyage from Southampton to the Colonies was a rough one and would have been rougher without Mother Hill's Seasick Pills. They soothed upset tummies, brought down fever, and took care of irregularities. The Pilgrims arrived in their new country, feeling refreshed and ready to revolt. This is Queen Elizabeth and that's the way it was."

Tri-state rodeo set this week

High school rodeo contestants will compete Friday-Sunday in the four-performance Stinnett High School Tri-State Rodeo.

Eleven rodeo events will be featured including bareback bronc riding, calf roping, barrel racing, ribbon roping, pole bending, team roping, bull riding, steer wrestling, goat tying, steer riding and girls' breakaway roping.

Rodeo stock will be provided by the Halliday Rodeo Company and performance times are 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 2 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

All-around Cowboy and Cowgirl winners will receive Bill Oliver trophy saddles and belt buckles will be awarded through third place. High point team trophies will also be presented.

The rodeo, sponsored by the Stinnett High School senior class, will be followed by dances in the city barn Friday and Saturday. A barbecue is planned Sunday from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Cost of the meal is $2.50.

Crabmeat popularity grows

The American taste for and use of fish and seafoods for years could have been diagrammed as an upside down funnel — with the spout of the funnel generally in mid-America. A certain amount of fresh water fish caught locally and some seasonal use of fresh shrimp and oysters were the norm. Those living on the coastal waters grew up with a wider, year-round availability to seafoods. However, better techniques for shipping the highly fragile crab, lobster, oysters or shrimps and a wider variety of salt water fish mean more sampling of these appealing, high protein items in daily dishes.

CRAB CORN CRUNCH
1 (10 ounces) package frozen peas
1 (7-1/2 ounces) can Alaska King crab or 1 (8 ounces) package frozen Alaska King crab
1 (10-1/2 ounces) can mushroom soup
1/2 cup milk
3 cups corn chips
1/2 lemon, sliced very thin

2 tablespoons chopped pimiento

Drain and slice crab, saving some larger pieces for garnish. Soften gelatin in water. Heat until dissolved. Add grapefruit juice concentrate. Chill until syrupy. Fold in remaining ingredients along with crab. Pour into oiled, 5-6 cup mold. Chill until firm. Unmold. Garnish with additional crab, lemon slices, tomato wedges and parsley. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

FESTIVE KING CRAB MOUSSE
2 (7-1/2 ounces) cans Alaska King crab or 1 pound frozen Alaska King crab
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
1 1/2 cups water
1 (8 ounces) can frozen grapefruit juice concentrate
1/2 cup dairy sour cream
1 cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon horseradish
1 teaspoon onion salt
1/2 cup chopped green pepper

1 tablespoon chopped parsley
1/4 teaspoon sweet basil
Grated Parmesan cheese

Defrost, drain and slice frozen crab. Or, drain and slice canned crab. Slice zucchini and cut slices in half. Heat oil in large skillet. Add onion and saute 3 minutes. Add zucchini and saute 5 minutes longer. Add crab and heat through. Beat eggs. Season with salt and pepper. Pour eggs over crab mixture. Sprinkle with parsley and sweet basil. Cook over low heat, lifting the edges to brown the top. Serve at once, cut into wedges. Sprinkle each serving with grated Parmesan cheese. Makes 3 to 4 servings.

The first foreign action by U.S. Marines occurred in March, 1776, when a contingent sailed to Nassau, Bahamas, and captured the then-British colonial city without a shot being fired by either side. The Marines occupied Nassau two weeks before sailing back to America.

One-dish meal tasty favorite

Church socials and family outings begin to increase as better weather lures persons of all ages outdoors. One-dish specialties are a source of pride and your fellow cooks will enjoy a kraut-sausage bake, just the right dish to offset an over-abundance of pies and cakes at pitch-ins.

KRAUT-SAUSAGE
1 pound sausage meat
1 medium onion, sliced
2 large red apples, cored
2 cups undrained sauerkraut (about 16 ounces)
1 teaspoon dry mustard

Shape sausage meat into 4 patties. In large skillet, cook over low heat until browned on both sides. Drain on paper towel. Reserve drippings. In sausage drippings, cook onion about 5 minutes. Drain. Chop one apple and slice the other apple. Combine chopped apple, undrained kraut, mustard and onion; mix well. Spoon into shallow baking dish. Top with apple slices and sausage patties. Bake in 350-degree oven for 30 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

Mandarin Shrimp Salad

Cook 1 pound peeled and deveined shrimp according to package directions; drain and set aside. Add enough water to 24 ounces apricot nectar to measure 4 cups. Put apricot nectar and 2-3 cup chutney in blender and blend until combined. In saucepan stir together 2 packages (3 ounces each) lemon gelatin and apricot mixture. Heat to simmering, stirring constantly until gelatin is dissolved. Pour into six 2-3 cup molds (one 4-cup mold may be used). Chill until gelatin is set. Split shrimp in half lengthwise. Toss together shrimp, 1 cup chopped celery, 2 cups fresh cut-up fruit and 1/2 cup chopped peanuts. Combine 1/2 cup mayonnaise, 1 teaspoon curry powder and 1/4 teaspoon salt; fold into shrimp mixture. Makes approximately 3 cups salad. Chill until serving time. On large serving platter arrange individual molds around shrimp salad. Serve with wedges of pita bread or sesame crackers for a complete meal.

Pizza makes low-cost dinner entree, snack

A homemade pizza makes a supper entree or snack that costs little and goes a long way. One made with a thin double crust enclosing the filling top and bottom gives a yummy flavor without that heavy dough feeling. As an added flavor switch make the crust with enriched corn meal. It is perfect with a cheesy beef pizza filling and spicy tomato sauce.

DOUBLE CRUST PIZZA PIE
1 pound ground beef
1/4 cup chopped onion
1/4 cup chopped green pepper
1 2-1/2-ounce jar mushrooms, drained
1 cup grated Cheddar cheese
1 egg, beaten
1 cup enriched corn meal
1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup shortening, soft
9 to 10 tablespoons cold water
ITALIAN SAUCE:
1 15-ounce can tomato

Heat oven to 375 degrees. For filling, pan-fry beef, onion and green pepper until beef is browned. Pour off excess fat. Add mushrooms, cheese, salt and egg. Mix well. For pastry, sift together corn meal, flour and salt. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Add water, 1 tablespoon at a time, mixing lightly only until dampened. Form into a ball. Divide dough in half with one half slightly larger than the other.

Roll out larger half to a 14-inch circle. Fit loosely into a 12-inch pizza pan or place on a cookie sheet. Spread with filling. Roll out remaining dough to a 13-inch circle and place over filling. Moisten edges of pastry and seal.

Bake in preheated 375-degree oven about 35 minutes or until lightly browned.

Mexicali beef patties

Cut 3 center slices, 1/4 inch thick, from each of 2 onions and 2 green peppers; reserve. Finely chop remaining onion and pepper. Combine the vegetables, 2 teaspoons salt, 1 1/2 teaspoons chili powder, 1/2 cup crushed corn flakes, one egg and 1/2 teaspoon leaf oregano with 2 pounds ground beef. And 1 8-ounce can tomatoes which have been cut into pieces. Divide mixture into six equal portions and shape into patties. Bake in 325 degree oven for 30 minutes. Top each patty with pepper ring, onion slice and triangle of Cheddar cheese. Continue baking for 15 minutes. Serve with fluffy rice, buttered carrot and an avocado-lettuce salad. For dessert try a flan or sweetened fresh fruit over custard.

Drying another option to canning fresh foods

By Gaynor Maddox

For thousands of years, men have been drying many foods to preserve them for eating in leaner times. Drying regional foods is still useful and convenient, according to many experts. If you are interested in drying, rather than freezing or canning foods, your success may depend on climate, quality or estimated cost of local produce. And, to a certain degree, your patience. Basically, in drying, sufficient moisture is removed from a food to prevent its decay. Bulk and energy are not affected. There is, however, some vitamin and mineral loss in the drying process.

Dried foods should be packaged in dry, scalded, insect and rodent-proof containers as soon as they are cool.

This information is based on work at the University of California at Davis. To obtain a copy of the 20-page illustrated booklet they prepared, write to Cooperative Extension, U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, University of California, Berkeley, Cal. 94720. Ask for Drying Foods at Home Leaflet 2785. This pamphlet contains instructions and several tested recipes for dried foods.

What foods can be dried? In California the choice is vast. That state regularly produces a large part of the fresh fruits and vegetables used in the United States. In general, however, most regional fruits and vegetables can be dried, as well as some meats and fish.

How to dry foods: In hot, dry climates, foods to be sun dried can be reduced in a few days to a moisture level that preserves them. In any climate, however, satisfactory drying conditions can be created at a moderate cost by using artificial heat and circulating air over the food.

Methods for drying foods and some necessary equipment include:

A kitchen oven (you need drying trays, an oven thermometer and a small fan).
A portable food dehydrator (such as a natural-draft vegetable dehydrator or an electric food dehydrator).

The sun (you need drying trays, cheesecloth, temperatures over 98 degrees and low relative humidity).
Some tips to keep in mind: Drying does not improve quality. Therefore, use only fresh, top quality foods.

Vegetables in prime condition should be selected and prepared for drying on the day they are harvested.
Only fully-ripened fruits should be used. If the fruit is not suitable for eating fresh, it is not suitable for drying.

All foods need some preparation or pre-treatment before drying.

Vegetables may be blanched with hot water or steam.

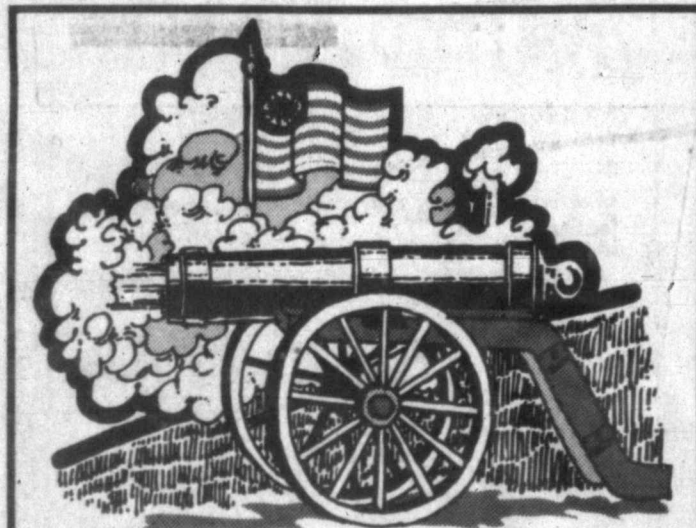

Brownie recipe delights palate

Those who like ice cream and brownies will be in seventh heaven with a brownie Alaska. This features ice cream and brownie cake layers covered with meringue. It is a make-ahead recipe; prepare the ice cream-maraschino cherry mixture at least one day before use so it will freeze thoroughly. You may also bake your brownie cake in advance. When ready to serve, layer ice cream and cake; cover with meringue and bake seven minutes.

BROWNIE ALASKA
1 jar (8 ounces) red maraschino cherries, drained and chopped
1 quart vanilla ice cream, softened
6 egg whites
1/8 teaspoon cream of tartar
3/4 cup sugar
Brownie cake, see recipe
Combine cherries and ice cream; mix well. Line a one to one and one-half quart bowl with foil. Add cherry ice cream. Cover and freeze 1 day. In large bowl, beat egg whites with cream of tartar until soft peaks form. Slowly add sugar, 2 tablespoons at a time, beating constantly. Beat until stiff peaks form. Place foil on baking sheet; place cake in center. Invert bowl of ice cream onto cake. Peel off foil. Quickly cover cake and ice cream with meringue, making sure it is well sealed. Freeze 2 to 3 hours. Bake in 425 degree oven 7 minutes or until browned. Cut foil from around dessert and slice onto chilled plate. Makes 12 servings.

BROWNIE CAKE
3/4 cup sifted all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/3 cup butter or margarine
2 squares (2 ounces) unsweetened chocolate
2 eggs
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 cup toasted filberts, chopped
Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. In small saucepan, melt butter and chocolate over very low heat. Beat eggs with sugar and vanilla. Gradually blend in chocolate mixture. Add sifted ingredients and mix well. Stir in filberts. Pour into greased 9-inch round layer cake pan. Bake in 350-degree oven 25 minutes or until cake tests done. Cool on rack. Makes 9-inch layer.
*Spread filberts in shallow pan and bake in 400-degree oven 10 to 15 minutes, stirring occasionally.)

Bunker Hill Carrot Pudding

1 egg, separated
1 tablespoon Imperial Granulated Sugar
1 teaspoon cornstarch
1/2 cup milk
1 cup mashed cooked carrots (fresh or canned)
1/2 cup fine bread crumbs
1 tablespoon butter
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup light cream or evaporated milk
1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg, if desired

Beat egg yolk and Imperial Granulated Sugar together well. Mix cornstarch with a little milk. Heat remaining milk, add cornstarch; stir until smooth and slightly thickened over medium heat. Blend a little of the hot milk mixture into egg yolk and sugar; mix well and add back into saucepan of hot milk and cornstarch mixture. Cook and stir until smooth and thick. Add carrots, bread crumbs, butter, salt, cream and nutmeg; blend well. Beat egg white until stiff and fold into carrot mixture. Pour into greased 1-quart baking dish; place baking dish in pan of hot water and bake at 300°F. about 30 minutes, or until pudding is set and lightly golden on top. Serves 4.

Rockwall may hold key to mystery

ROCKWALL, Tex. (UPI) — The smallest county in Texas is hoping to unlock the mystery of its 63 million-year-old name-sake walls as a Bicentennial project.

"Whether they were carved by ancient man or formed naturally depends on who you ask," Judge Derwood Wimpee, Bicentennial chairman explains.

"I personally believe people built them, but I don't have any real evidence of that," the judge said. "I have a lot of questions about the walls. We're working to learn more about them."

The curious underground geological formations are found in several Texas counties from Bastrop, Caldwell, Gonzales and Wilson counties in the Hill Country to Dallas and Collin Counties, but nowhere do they appear in such number as in Rockwall County.

The 63 dikes discovered since 1851 vary in width from two inches to nearly two feet thick and some of the limestone rocks weigh more than a ton. One wall stretches along a ravine for more than a mile while others stop abruptly after a few hundred feet.

The Bicentennial excavation presently runs only a few hundred feet, but both ends of the two exposed walls dive beneath the rolling countryside and their length is not known.

Ollie Cornelius, 73, discovered the present site while clearing a field behind his house in 1936. He used four horses to free a few rocks then charged a dime for people to see the county namesake.

The rocks appear fitted together. Some have neatly beveled edges and the spaces between the edges are filled with crushed rock or mortar.

Wimpee and W. W. Stodghill, the landowner at the current excavation, said they would prefer expert geologists partake in the project, but they have begun the dig with a few county workers and some volunteers.

"We had hoped someone at one of the universities might be interested enough to contact us," Wimpee said. "We're being careful to keep from damaging anything historical, but we're just laymen."

The way they're laid out, one on top of another, and the way they fit together, I don't see how they could have just popped up."

Experts disagree as to the origin of the walls. Some have been unable to decide whether they were natural or man-made and two university studies have provided separate arguments for natural formation. The new dig may disprove them both.

The University of Texas geological bulletin reported in 1932 on a study by Martin Kelsey and Harold Denton, both of SMU, calling the hard, fine quartz sandstone dikes natural formations pushed up from deep underground sand. They said the walls lie along the Balcones Fault zone which bisects the state.

The modern dig shows two walls, just five or six feet apart and at the same elevation, with 12-inch thick slabs on one side of the dig and tiny stones on one quarter that size on the other.

A 1947 study by John Napier Monroe, also of SMU, said Kelsey and Denton had been correct about some of the walls, but others were formed by marine deposits in underwater cracks or fissures. The earlier study said the walls were too deep to support such a theory.

On four large stones, as hard as flint, scratched marks appear in such a way as to prompt supporters of the ancient man theory to call them picture writing.

An almost perfect square opening, called a window, was found 35 feet below the surface in an 1887 dig. The shaft was then 42 feet below the surface, but the bottom was never found.

Attitude changes help sex attack problems

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — A federal researcher says changing attitudes about sex are helping society concentrate on solving the problems of child molestation and rape.

In the United States, there are about 23 treatment programs working exclusively with the sex offender, and the vast majority of these were created within the past five or six years, according to Edward M. Brecher of West Cornwall, Conn.

Brecher, 64, an author of magazine articles and books on medical and psychiatric subjects, said in a recent interview his assignment is to study these treatment centers. The research, funded by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, is administered by the American Correctional Association.

use violence and the threat of violence and keep away from the kids," Brecher says. "Those are two things society can't tolerate."

Brecher says the New Mexico effort, directed by Wally Crowe at Alternative House in Albuquerque, is a "model" among programs dealing with the treatment of offenders who have served their time in prison and are returning to the community.

Brecher said the programs, primarily using a group therapy approach, are "learning by trial and error." Their overall success cannot be quantified, he says, but "preliminary indications are exceedingly hopeful."

In a number of the programs Brecher has visited, he says, offenders are staff members "and doing a good job." He says one program is run by a woman who had been a rape victim and a man who was a former sex offender, both now with Ph.D.'s in psychology.

Brecher says the group therapy approach helps alleviate the "prohibitive" costs of using psychiatrists and clinical psychologists.

"One of the exciting discoveries of the new programs is the relatively very low costs, even as compared with warehousing prisoners without rehabilitation services," he says.

"When you hit street programs like Alternative House," he says, "the cost is down to about $500-$600 per man per year, a net saving."

RETAIL ADS
NEW YORK (UPI) — Retail advertising was first in bringing in newspaper advertising revenue during last year's fourth quarter, according to the Newspaper Advertising Bureau. Revenues from retail ads were at a $5.3 billion annual rate during the period, a gain of 11.4 per cent from the final quarter of 1974. Classified ads, second, rose 10.5 per cent to a $2.6 billion annual rate.

Candidates spend bundle seeking US senate seat

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — More than three-quarters of a million dollars has been spent by candidates seeking Texas' U.S. Senate seat — including about half a million spent by incumbent Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex.

Reports filed Tuesday in the secretary of state's office showed Bentsen had spent $452,175 in his bid for reelection, while Democratic challenger Phil Gramm had spent $248,331. Leon Dugi had spent about $1,000 and Hugh Alexander Wilson had spent about $500.

Republicans going after Bentsen's post were led in the financial column by Rep. Alan Steelman, R-Tex., who reported spending $95,450. Steelman was followed by Republicans Louis Leman, who had spent $8,794, and Hugh W. Sweeney, who reported expenditures of $2,399.

Even though the Texas primary is Saturday, Bentsen's committee reported it had not spent all it could have. The committee reported total donations of $537,807 — about $85,000 more than they spent.

Gramm's report said his campaign was almost broke, having collected $250,358 — only $2,000 more than was spent.

Both Wilson and Dugi indicated their campaigns were dry of funds.

The Republican primary also has almost broken the Steelman campaign. Steelman supporters said he had collected $99,409 for the race — about $4,000 more than was spent. Steelman opponents Leman and Sweeney, however, said they were both in debt from the race. Leman said he had collected about $200 more than he spent, but included in the receipts were loans totaling $6,271. Although Sweeney only spent $2,399 in his campaign, his report said he had received $2,431 in contributions but owed $7,023.

Another expensive Texas race has turned out to be the contest for retiring Texas Railroad commissioner Ben Ramsey's post.

Rep. Jon Newton, D-Beverly, reported spending $225,996 in the primary to defeat seven other Democrats. The next biggest spender was Houston attorney Terence O'Rourke who reported expenditures of $91,660.

Newton said he had collected $280,550, including a $30,000 loan, to make the race compared to O'Rourke's total donations of $90,654, including a $10,000 loan.

Jerry Sadler, former Texas land and railroad commissioner, recorded contributions of $250 and expenditures of $1,899. Rep. David Finney, D-Fort Worth, reported expenditures of $39,156 and receipts of $43,662, including a $15,000 loan. R.R. Williams of Del Rio listed no contributions to offset his $1,124 expenses.

Brecher said the programs, primarily using a group therapy approach, are "learning by trial and error." Their overall success cannot be quantified, he says, but "preliminary indications are exceedingly hopeful."

In a number of the programs Brecher has visited, he says, offenders are staff members "and doing a good job." He says one program is run by a woman who had been a rape victim and a man who was a former sex offender, both now with Ph.D.'s in psychology.

Brecher says the group therapy approach helps alleviate the "prohibitive" costs of using psychiatrists and clinical psychologists.

SPS man selected here

A Pampa employee of the Southwestern Public Service Company has been selected to attend a conference for supervisors of the electric company. Melvin Kunkel, SPS district manager in Pampa, said today.

Harl Moore, working foreman, will attend a 5-day seminar, May 3-7, at the Ramada Inn in Amarillo.

The conference will be attended by 31 SPS employees from over the entire area served by the electric company and will acquaint the SPS supervisory personnel with the operation and management of the company. The conferees will hear discussions on 30 subjects, including management and supervision, company policy and financing, rates and budgetary control, and supervisory responsibility.

Ed Love, manager of training for Southwestern, will be in charge of the conference, and SPS executives and supervisors will serve as instructors. In addition, Dr. Zeke Marchant, C.L.U. and department head, Business Administration, West Texas State University, will speak on "Personality and Improvement," and Dan Fleming, partner, Ordway Saunders Company, will discuss insurance.

Pampa banker named to list of '76 winners

Jim Olsen, vice president with Citizens Bank & Trust Co. of Pampa, was recipient of an award recently naming him as one of the 1976 "Outstanding Young Men of America."

He was formerly employed with the First National Bank in Clovis. He received his masters degree in commercial banking last year.

Pampa banker named to list of '76 winners

Olsen has been involved in community activities in Clovis, including the Chamber of Commerce, the YMCA, Rotary Club United Fund campaign.

He has also served as a Deacon at the First Baptist Church in Clovis.

He and his wife, Sherry, have two children, Dina, 7, and Steven, 4. The family will be moving to Pampa soon, Olsen said.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Olsen of Clovis. His wife is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W.A. Nofsker, also of Clovis.

Judge Truman Roberts

TRUMAN ROBERTS has established an outstanding record over the past five years as judge of the state's highest court in criminal matters. Before election to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals he served 11 years as County Attorney and District Attorney, then 10 years as Presiding Judge of the 52nd Judicial District.

Judge Roberts has been endorsed in his race (over a Dallas opponent) by 76.4 percent of more than 11,000 attorneys voting in the State Bar of Texas poll.

Vote to keep a man with this excellent experience and recognized ability. Vote in the Democratic Primary on May 1 to re-elect Judge Truman Roberts to a second term on the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Retired Teachers
The Rev. John Hansard, pastor of the Barrett Baptist Church, offered his interpretation of Patrick Henry's liberty speech during a meeting of the Pampa Retired Teachers Association April 19. The group met in the Pampa Senior Citizens Center.

A medley of patriotic songs, performed by Mrs. Rena Johnson, accompanied Rev. Hansard's address. Program chairman was Mrs. Edna Doughettee.

Thirty-seven members and guests attended the meeting which also included "A Dash of Spice" by Anna Pierce.

Assembly of God
The youth of the First Assembly of God Church, 500 S. Cuyler, met at 7 a.m. Easter for a prayer breakfast at Steedum's Restaurant.

The group then went to Central Park for singing and devotion. The special services were led by Ron Witt, minister of education at First Assembly of God.

20th Century Forum
Alistair Cooke's film, "Inventing a Nation," was viewed by 18 members of the Twentieth Century Forum during a recent meeting. The program was directed by Mrs. M. McDaniel who also gave a brief biography of James Madison.

Culture Club
The life and works of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, once considered America's greatest poet, were presented to an April 13 meeting of the Twentieth Century Culture Club by Mrs. Doyle Osborne. The club met in the E.E. Sheelhamer home at 2101 Charles.

Seventeen members were told that Longfellow had published over 40 poems in magazines and newspapers before he was 18 years old. When the poet was 18, he accepted a professorship at Bowdoin College, where he remained for six years. He also spent 18 years as a professor at Harvard. Following his death in 1862 at the age of 75, a bust of Longfellow was placed in the Poet's Corner of Westminster Abbey. He is the only American poet so honored.

Among his works were "Tales of a Wayside Inn," "Paul Revere's Ride," "The Courtship of Miles Standish," "Evangeline" and "Hiawatha." The club's next meeting will be in Mrs. Osborne's home at 2107 N. Russell.

Lefors art and civic club
A program entitled, "A Devotional for Today's America," was presented during the recent meeting of the Lefors Art & Civic Club.

Mrs. Leonard Cain presented the program. She also read a poem, "The United States." The speaker said that the percentage of those now attending church is below that of the founders of this nation.

During the business session, the club collect was led by Mrs. Bill Mullins, and Mrs. Jerrel Julian led the pledge to the flag. The next meeting will be installation of new officers during a meeting at the Country Kitchen.

A report on the club-sponsored Easter egg was given by Mrs. Roy Alderson.

Mrs. Harry Youngblood will serve as a delegate to the state convention in Lubbock. Mrs. Leonard Cain is alternate.

A recent blooded drive was held in Lefors, and will be used for Lefors residents.

Those in need of blood may contact Mrs. Pittman, Wayne Moxon or Mrs. Joe Watson. Hostesses were Mrs. Earl Tarbet and Mrs. James Gatlin.

The hospital volunteers of the American Red Cross, Gray County Chapter, met recently in the home of Mrs. Jim Powers in White Deer for an annual spring coffee. Assistant hostess was Mrs. Mildred Shuman.

Mrs. Powers presided over the serving table. Mrs. A.D. McNamara, hospital chairman, expressed appreciation for those who worked at the hospital during the past year. She said over 200 volunteer hours were contributed by Red Cross workers.

Volunteers decided they would wear white slacks with blue jackets instead of skirts if they wished. Libby Shotwell, executive secretary, presented each volunteer with a Red Cross pin and drops denoting years they had worked.

Mrs. Lora Dunn was elected hospital volunteer chairman for 1976-77.

Upsilon has social
Upsilon chapter of Beta Sigma Phi held an informal social on April 23 at the home of Jan and Bill Ott. The husbands of the members and new pledges were guests.

Highlights of the evening included division of the group to play charades, with the ladies winning by a ten-second margin. Afterwards the group had musical entertainment with Betsy Hoiles (piano), Bill Ott (trombone), Wanetta Bayless (guitar), and Rochelle Lacy, Tim Hoiles, Wanetta and Richard Hills as vocalists leading group singing.

Jehovah's Witnesses
Jehovah's Witnesses from the Pampa area were among the 1436 in attendance at the "Become Doers of the Word," semi annual circuit assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses in Canyon. Bill Fetter of 530 1/2 N. Gray, spokesman, said "D. Bennett, traveling district governor, originally from London, discussed "Are You Doing What God Requires of You?" Following Bennett's address, additional discussions concerning "The First Evidence of Wisdom From Above" and "Doers of the Word are Happy" ended the two-day assembly.

Civic Culture Club
Speaker for the recent meeting of the Civic Culture Club was Howard Weatherly, branch manager of the Pampa Social Security Office.

He discussed "Social Security's Plight" and suggested if members have suggestions for changes they should write their congressman. The meeting was held in the home of Mrs. A.B. Cross, Mrs. D.A. Rife presided. The next meeting will be with Mrs. A. C. Houchin in Amarillo. Mrs. Ray McDonald was a guest.

Corneal diseases have blinded 21,000 Americans, accounting for six per cent of all blindness in the United States.

AMA Contributing Heavily to Texans' Campaigns
By BILL CHOYKE
Pampa News
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — State and national committees associated with the American Medical Association have funneled substantial contributions to a dozen Texas congressional candidates, apparently gearing up for next year's expected fight on national health insurance legislation.

Having two of the more active special interest campaign committees operating in the state, the Texas Medical Association (TEXPAC) and the American Medical Association (AMA) have contributed a total of $63,250 to Texas lawmakers and congressional candidates since last fall.

The leading money recipient was Rep. Ron Paul, the Houston conservative who won a special election earlier this month. A physician, Paul received $10,000 from AMPAC and $5,000 from TEXPAC. Federal Election Commission (FEC) records show.

The medical groups are pushing for a minimal national health insurance plan which would primarily cover catastrophic health problems and low-income people.

Liberal Democrats in Congress are supporting a more comprehensive measure giving national health insurance coverage to nearly all Americans.

Currently, there are 12 different bills before the House Ways and Means Committee, which is not expected to report out a bill this year. However, a spokeswoman for the committee said national health insurance is not a "top priority" and action might occur next Congress.

The only Texan on the House

Ways and Means Committee who received funds from the medical groups this year was Rep. Omar Burleson. The Anson Democrat got $2,000 from TEXPAC and $2,000 from AMPAC despite being unopposed in his reelection bid.

In 1974, Burleson received $4,000 from the groups as did Rep. Jake Pickle, D - Austin, also a member of the House Ways and Means Committee. A third committee member, Rep. William Archer, R - Houston, was offered a like contribution, but declined it because of his self-imposed restrictions dealing with special interest funds.

FEC records show that TEXPAC, based in Austin, has given Texas congressional and Senate candidates $27,250 while Chicago-based AMPAC has donated $36,000. By comparison, the two campaign apparatuses contributed a total of $56,500 to Texas congressional candidates during the 1974 campaign.

TEXPAC also reported to the FEC that it is supporting at least 63 candidates in Texas state House and Senate races.

Both medical groups appear to be favoring Sen. Lloyd Bentsen in his reelection drive. The Houston Democrat received $5,000 from both while none of his challengers have received money.

Others who received money from either TEXPAC or AMPAC for this campaign, according to FEC reports, are:

- Rep. Richard White, D - El Paso, who is in a tough 16th District Primary, $10,000.
- Rep. Dale Milford, D - Grand Prairie, $4,000.

Officers, honors at Jaycee meeting

During an April 24 meeting of the Pampa Jaycees, members were recognized for several awards and officers for 1976-77 were installed.

The new officers are Bobby Jeffers, president; Roger Whitaker, vice president; Monty Gordon, secretary, and Cary Gilpatrick, treasurer.

Outstanding Jaycee of the Month honors went to Robert Schaub, August 1975; John L. Triplehorn, October 1975; Charles Milam, November 1975; Bobby Walker, December 1975; Bobby Jeffers, Bill Turner, Cary Gilpatrick and Monty Gordon, February 1976; Benny Horton, March 1976, and Vic Snyder, April 1976.

Other special recognition went to Roger Whitaker, Speak Up Award; John L. Triplehorn, Outstanding Project Chairman; Edd Rowntree, Outstanding Project; Bobby Jeffers, Outstanding First Year Jaycee and Personal Individual Development; Monty Gordon, Director of the Year and Officer of the Year, and Benny Horton, Key Man of the Year.

Edd Rowntree also received a plaque for 14 years of "conscientious service to the Jaycees and his community." The Outstanding Young Law Enforcement Officer Award for 1975 was presented to Sgt. Charles Morris of the Pampa Police Department.

Four Jaycees received certificates for completing the annual Jaycee Public Speaking Course. They were Roger Whitaker, John L. Triplehorn, Don Snel and Bobby Jeffers.

Cerebral Palsy drive in Pampa Saturday

Residents of Pampa will have an opportunity May 1 to do their part in the fight against cerebral palsy — a condition caused by damage to the brain, usually at birth, when United Cerebral Palsy (UCP) of Texas launches its campaign, here during the month of May according to Mrs. Wilber Hapeman, UCP residential chairman.

Approximately 40,000 cerebral palsied children and adults live in Texas and are served by UCP affiliates and county service committees throughout the state by programs that enable each cerebral palsied individual to develop his capabilities to the fullest.

Mrs. Jolene Hapman reported that 25 per cent of funds raised during the campaign will support State and National UCP programs, which include research into the causes of cerebral palsy, specialized medical training, and guarding the interests of the cerebral palsied and other handicapped individuals in governmental programs.

United Cerebral Palsy of Texas provides wheelchairs, braces, corrective shoes, crutches, and a summer camping experience.

"Hello?" "Hi Marge, this is Suzie." "Suzie, Suzie, Suzie! What a pleasant surprise!" "How are ya?" "I'm doing just fine. How are things with you?" "Oh, things are terrific around here since you left." "I'll bet. You know I miss you guys." "How do you like your new house?" "Oh, Suzie, it's terrific." "Did you get what you wanted?" "That and more." "Well?" "Well what?" "Tell me about your stupid new house." "Suzie, it's fabulous." "Did you get the big back yard you wanted?" "Three acres with a pond." "Do you have a garden?" "We have a greenhouse!" "Do you have a nice kitchen?" "A huge kitchen with all new appliances!" "Do you have some aspirin?" "Aspirin?" "Yeah, you're making me sick." "You should complain. You're not exactly living in a dump." "How does Fred like his new job?" "Suzie, he's a new man." "He likes it?" "He loves it. Absolutely loves it." "That's good." "How is Jack?" "Fine. He's going through a do-it-yourself phase right now." "Oh, good." "Everytime I ask him to do something, he yells 'Do it yourself!'" "Oh, not good." "When are you coming to visit us?" "When are you going to invite us?" "You know you have a standing invitation." "Yeah, but we'd rather sit." "I'm serious. When are you coming?" "Name a date." "How about in a few weeks... say the week of the 29th?" "Wait a minute, let me get my calendar... the 29th?" "That's a Saturday." "Yeah. Sounds good." "Okay, it's a deal. We'll be expecting you." "What do you want us to bring?" "Just your sense of humor." "No." "No?" "Just joking." "Funny." "You missed a great party at the Smiths' last night." "They had a party? They never have parties." "They've been waiting for you to move away." "What happened?" "Well, for starters, Jackie's dog ate the main course before any of the guests arrived." "You're kidding." "No. Then the air conditioning went on the blink." "No wonder they never had any parties. What did everyone do?" "We starved and perspired a lot." "Sounds awful." "Speaking of starving, how's the old diet?" "I'll tell you if you tell me." "125." "Oh, Susan! You've been cheating!" "No I haven't." "Well how can you lose weight if you've been eating?" "How about you?" "I'm not telling." "Come on." "One fivie five." "What?" "One fivie five." "Marge, you're mumbling." "One fivie five." "One forty five?" "Less." "One thirty five?" "See, that's not so bad." "That's terrible." "I know." "What's your excuse?" "A perfectly understandable insecurity resulting from having to adapt to new surroundings." "New surroundings. The only new surroundings you're gonna have to adapt to is the hard surrounding your midsection." "Hey, look. Go easy kid. I don't have you to nag me any more." "Well, it hasn't been easy for me either." "You wouldn't believe the food prices here." "Oh?" "Low." "Low?" "Low." "No wonder you're eating so much." "I'm not kidding..." "Neither am I." "...I'm saving about 15 dollars a week over what I used to pay." "You're kidding!" "I'm not kidding." "Sounds like you got a raise, too." "Right. 15 dollars to blow on anything I like... toilet paper, floor wax and soap." "Don't forget laundry detergent." "Right." "Hey, you took something of mine when you left." "Your yellow sweater?" "Did you take my sweater?" "Sorry, I wasn't going to tell you." "That's okay. You keep my sweater and I'll keep your skirt." "Skirt?" "You know, the one with all the animals on it?" "Oh, yeah. I'd forgotten about that." "Is it a deal?" "We'll trade when you come to visit." "Sour puss. I'm sorry I even brought the subject up." "What were you going to say?" "I was going to say that you took my Suzie Fu Yung recipe." "Did I?" "Yes." "I'll give you that too when you come." "Good." "See? Just think of all the nice things awaiting you when you come." "I can't wait. Hey, I have something for you." "What?" "A riddle." "Shoot." "What has four holder-uppers, four puller-downers, a pair of lookers, and a swishy-wishy?" "I don't know, what?" GAO wants regional jails; sheriff doesn't

By BILL CHOYKE
Pampa News

WASHINGTON — Signaling a possible departure from current policy, Congress' chief investigative agency has suggested that federal funds now going to upgrade city and county jails be diverted instead to regional or state facilities.

In an April report based on its findings in Texas and five other states, the General Accounting Office, Congress' watchdog agency, said that despite increased federal spending "local jails have not provided adequate services to inmates." In a recommendation to

Attorney General Edward Levi, the GAO said the Justice Department, which administers programs to improve community jails, should halt funding on a local level if "it appears that regional jails might be more efficient and effective."

In Texas, GAO investigators reviewed jails in Bastrop, Atascosa, Gillespie, McLennan and Childress County. All five jails received federal funds to either rebuild or renovate their jails since 1969.

The Law Enforcement Assistance Administration

(LEAA), the Justice agency which directly administers federal grants, doled out $347.7 million in a five-year period ending in Fiscal Year 1974 for correctional facilities and programs.

The GAO criticized the LEAA for not developing minimum standards to be met by the local jails in order to receive federal funds. In a letter to the congressional agency, a top Justice official acknowledged a shortcoming in this area and said the LEAA would be working to establish national jail standards.

The GAO report follows a study by the National Advisory Commission on Criminal Justice Standards and Goals in 1973 which also suggested that states undertake regional planning programs to incarcerate prisoners and upgrade standards.

"There was a question of whether or not local jails should be continued," said Carolyn Jackson, a GAO specialist who supervised the project. She said current LEAA funding programs are aimed at helping the jails cope in the short run, while not solving long term problems.

Jackson said the jails in Texas studied by the GAO were "about average of the ones we looked at." The federal funds spent on the five Texas jails generally were aimed at upgrading physical facilities.

While the study found that in Texas jails the length of stay was less than seven days for nine of ten prisoners, the GAO said proper recreation, and other services are not being provided for inmates who stay longer.

"The locally operated jails, even those with a larger capacity, offered practically no services," the report stated. "Work release and religious services were the most commonly available, but even the existence of those varied among the states. In almost every instance, local jail administrators attributed the lack of services to inmates' short length of stay."

The five jails in Texas received a total of $608,574 in LEAA funds. They were located in Bastrop County, east of Austin; Atascosa County, south of San Antonio; Gillespie County, west of Austin in Central Texas; McLennan County, which includes Waco; and Childress County in the eastern part of the Panhandle.

No federal funds 'in our jail'

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

"I'm not for regional jails. I think each county should have its own jail if at all possible," Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan said Wednesday when contacted in regard to the possibility that regional jails may be recommended by the federal government.

"I can't see the necessity of having regional jails," the sheriff said, adding he has no doubts that Gray County cannot comply with regulations laid down by the Texas Commission of Jail Standards.

The sheriff said he now has about $85,000 in his budget for renovation of the Gray County jail.

He added that so far as he knows now this will come pretty close to being a sufficient amount. He termed security, safety and sanitation as the main things necessary in providing a good jail.

"We do not have any federal funds in our jail," the sheriff said. "We don't have a nickel of federal money in this jail."

He added that he thinks this is a good jail. However, present day specifications will not allow the Gray County jail to house the 58 inmates it was designed for in 1930.

Requirements now call for 10-foot square for a single cell and 18-foot square in maximum security cells.

Thirty per cent of the jail space must be in single cells, the sheriff said.

"We can now handle only 25 inmates," the sheriff said.

While the sheriff feels that the county jail can be renovated for at least $100,000, he says he cannot be sure.

"Our elevator is 46 years old. I don't foresee a new one," he said. However, an inspector was here recently looking at it.

"It is marvelous the way it has lasted," he said. But if the elevator should have to be replaced the sheriff feels that it could be done for $25,000 to $28,000.

"I don't see the necessity of state and federal governments taking over our county jails," he emphasized once again. "I think the jail is the sheriff's responsibility and the expense of that jail should be from local monies if possible."

The sheriff says he sees nothing wrong with the Law Enforcement Administration assisting in the renovation and remodeling of jails.

"But I believe the sheriffs of Texas are capable of operating jails under permissible circumstances that will be good."

Earlier this month Judge Don Cain said if it costs more than $100,000 to satisfy the state and federal authorities in regard to jail renovation, it could require a bond election here.

The Gray County jail is located on the top floor of the Gray County courthouse.

Gray County recently received $14,000 jail planning grant from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, but Judge Cain said it was returned to the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission for use by Potter County to build a juvenile facility.

Sheik says 'oil for technology'

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — A former Saudi Arabian oil minister today said the Mideastern countries must trade oil for technology with the United States to survive during the "post-oil era."

Sheik Aballah Tariqi told the International Ex-Students Conference on Energy at the University of Texas that strong ties based on mutual interest must be established between the oil-consuming countries and the members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

"OPEC is in need for the cooperation of the industrialized countries to develop their other natural resources and the developed countries need OPEC oil — especially the USA," Tariqi said.

He said the oil revenues so far have not been successfully used in the producing countries of the Mideast, possibly because of lack of good planning. He said it is essential the industrialized countries provide practical and technical assistance to Mideastern countries to develop existing natural resources.

"This will establish the good foundations for these countries to survive in the post-oil era," Tariqi said.

He said when oil prices suddenly were increased at the end of 1973, western nations feared the emerging Arab world was trying to ruin the western economy.

"This is far from the truth," he said. "All OPEC did was to equalize the energy production costs by using different possible sources, to unfreeze the oil prices which lasted over 10 years and to evenly share in the benefits with the consuming countries."

He said it became apparent that increased oil prices did not endanger the capitalistic economic system because the increase was compensated by similar increases in the prices of goods imported into the Mideast.

In a speech Tuesday, Dr. William L. Fisher, assistant secretary of the interior for energy and minerals, said there is plenty of energy, but technology, economics and politics have created shortages.

"The limiting factor is not geology but technology, economics, and above-all, politics — all instrumentalities of human creation and subject to human management and control," Fisher said.

"There are no insoluble problems. We can do whatever we have to do. And it's time we got on with the job."

Also at the meeting was Dr. Herbert Woodson, director of the university's Center for Energy Studies. Woodson said U.S. citizens would not have to give up their comforts and conveniences if they learned to conserve fuel resources.

"I don't think the U.S. populace is going to give up its comforts and conveniences — I don't think we'll have to do that if we use energy wisely," he said.

He said driving battery-powered suburban vans similar to the gasoline-driven vehicles used by the Postal Service and using electrically powered heat pumps instead of space heaters in buildings would save energy.

"To stay even with worldwide energy consumption we must find new energy," he said. "If a country would find a 100 billion barrel oilfield, would they sell at less than the OPEC world price?"

"I know of only one country that would do that."

South Vietnam-a year without Americans

Veteran Indochina correspondent Alan Dawson was UPI bureau chief in Saigon at the time of the Communist takeover. He remained in Vietnam until he was ordered to leave and was the last American news agency correspondent to depart the country.

By ALAN DAWSON
BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — One year after Communist troops marched victorious into Saigon, there is good news and bad news from South Vietnam. The good news is that there has been no bloodbath despite 30 years of fratricidal war. The bad news is the loss of many basic freedoms. Since the Communist takeover last April 30, reports both from Vietnamese and foreigners indicate most South Vietnamese are satisfied at the turn of events — the majority simply because no one is trying to kill them anymore.

This was illustrated at a town meeting last July in Phu Cuong, 10 miles north of Saigon, by a little old lady who showed an embarrassing lack of political awareness.

She was, she told several thousand persons at a gathering called by the local political committee, grateful to the new government.

"Now those nasty Viet Cong don't rocket around my house anymore," she said to a horrified silence.

The government has adopted a go-slow policy to cut down resistance and the need for bloody purges.

In place of a bloodbath have come education and reeducation courses, dubbed "charm schools" by black humorists among the Vietnamese.

Everyone attends them, and most of 100,000 military officers who left last June 15 for schooling in the countryside have not yet returned. A large segment of the population has lost freedoms — through a lack of government patronage rather than direct retribution.

Communist supporters are rewarded with jobs and freedom of residence. Those who supported pro-American governments now find they are the future rice farmers and fishermen of Vietnam.

Freedom of the press has disappeared. A showcase "independent" newspaper, edited by three former congressmen, is by far the best in Saigon. But it has the same stories, only better written, than the three government dailies.

Last week's elections had only candidates approved by the government and the party, and many congressional seats were uncontested. In Da Nang, for example, 15 persons ran for the 15 seats.

"Within one definition of the word, we have real freedom," said a pro-American Vietnamese shortly after "liberation" last year. "If we stay within the general

Dying woman supposed to get grant

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. (UPI) — A county welfare official says a mother with terminal cancer who has been denied state aid should soon receive her first $155 monthly grant.

Brad Robinson of the Arapahoe County Department of Social Services said Wednesday the $155 would be paid as aid to the needy disabled. He said the money "should start arriving within the next day or two."

The money goes to Mabel Laster, 43, mother of four children including a mentally retarded girl. Mrs. Laster began hemorrhaging last week despite three major operations and doctors told her husband she would die soon.

A spokesman for the Colorado Department of Social Services said Mrs. Laster was not old enough to qualify for Medicare. He said the state would review her eligibility for Medicaid when copies of new program rules were received.

Jerry Laster said he and his wife were mistreated by the state which refused to help pay $18,000 in medical bills. He said his request for aid was denied by officials who said his $500 monthly paycheck as a plumber's helper was too high.

Mrs. Laster said she was "hanging on to my faith. I've prayed and prayed for help."

framework of what the Communists define as the law, we are free to do what we want."

Even on the fringes of the law, much freedom remains. Capitalism has been retained in huge sections of the economy. The black market, in everything from money to stolen PX articles, continues to thrive. Prostitution is dying of its own accord, rather than from official harassment.

There is no written code of law, and no regular courts. Justice often is capricious. Purse snatchers have been shot publicly, while some murderers have gone free.

A former Vietnamese marine jailed at Bien Hoa, 14 miles northeast of Saigon, told fellow prisoners he had killed 13 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese soldiers after "liberation day."

He said authorities had forgiven him the killings because he was doing the job he was trained to do.

He was made caretaker of the jail, and officials promised that after six months he would be freed to return to his family of farmers.

Citizens of the capital have resisted attempts to cajole them out of Saigon to rice farms and shrimp boats in the countryside.

The government faces the old problem once asked in an American song: "How you going to keep them down on the farm?"

Officials want to move 2 million persons from the swollen and non-productive city. But exchanging lights and running water for virgin land and sweaty work has so far appealed to few, even the unemployed.

The Saigonese have turned to family coffee stands, reselling rationed items and other parttime trades to make enough money to live and thus avoid moving out of the city.

Visitors to Saigon a year after the end of the war see little change, except for the numerous flags and pictures of Ho Chi Minh.

The real changes are subtler. Streets now empty at dusk. "Volunteer" work teams have cleaned and brightened the city but most of the vibrancy has gone out of Saigon.

Armed resistance to the new government is still, at best, unorganized. Little is known about the opposition groups but there is no evidence they pose any threat to the central government.

A THAI-EYE VIEW OF THE UNITED STATES, is the subject of a sign erected in Bangkok by students protesting the presence of U.S. forces. The Thai government has ordered American installations shut down and all but a handful of American advisers must be withdrawn from the Southeast Asian country.

The Bahamas will celebrate its 250th anniversary of parliamentary democracy in 1979. A British colony for nearly three centuries, the Bahamas gained its independence in 1973.

A large wildlife refuge on Magua, southernmost island of the Bahamas, is sanctuary for the largest remaining colony of flamingos in the Caribbean area.

Deserters still bitter over war

By EMIL SVEILIS
STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UPI) — At the height of the Vietnam war, as many as 700 American deserters and draft resisters took refuge in Sweden, whose government shared their opposition to the U.S. role in the war.

Today, the number has dropped to just over 200, U.S. officials estimate.

Among those who remain, there is widespread bitterness about U.S. policy and little hope that they soon will get what they most long for — unconditional amnesty from the U.S. government.

Most of these young Americans are pessimistic about chances the next man in the White House will grant them amnesty — no matter which of the current candidates is elected in November.

"It's the same old faces and the same old speeches," said Robert Janson, 28, a deserter who has lived in Sweden for four years.

"I don't know too much about U.S. politics right now," said William Schiller, 33, a draft resister from Chicago. "I am much more suspicious about politicians now than I was before."

"I have no faith in either the Democratic or Republican party to run my life," said Joseph Stewart, a draft resister who settled here six years ago.

Stewart, 29 on May 1 and a Stockholm bus driver, said he believes eventually there will be an amnesty because the U.S. government will want to get "the affair off the books, but it will be on a case-by-case basis."

Would he go back?

"There is 8 per cent unemployment in the United States," said Stewart. "Why go back? I am not hurting here. I have an apartment and I am not busting my back."

"Before I go back to the United States, they better cough up some bread as compensation and then pay for my ticket home."

"Those bastards caused a lot of inconvenience to my life," he said, speaking of American politicians in general and officials at the Pentagon in particular.

Most of the resisters are not in the high-income bracket and hold service industry jobs — selling subway tickets, working in hospitals or waiting on tables.

Still, most have adapted to the Swedish way of life and find it pleasant.

Almost all speak enough Swedish to get by because Sweden has a free language instruction program for all immigrants. Most either have married or are living with Swedish girls.

Some feel that going back to the United States would mean starting life over again and fear they are too old to do it.

"Most people I know have stopped thinking about going back and are concentrating on living here," said Janson, a student at Stockholm University and a part-time English teacher.

Janson said he did not foresee an unconditional amnesty soon.

"First there has to be recognition that our political leaders were responsible for the war," he said. "You just can't shut the book on history."

"The main issue on amnesty is not the human argument, but rather a political argument. We want our rights re-established. It was an atrocious war with atrocious methods. That is the whole issue. Stop finding scapegoats like us."

Schiller is better off than most of his colleagues. He works as a journalist for the Swedish Broadcasting Corporation's foreign service.

Schiller said he was "pretty much realistically pessimistic" about the chances for a general amnesty in the near future.

Schiller said he would go back to the United States to visit if there were "no strings attached, and if I got a good job there. I would most likely stay."

Col. William L. Prout, military attache at the U.S. Embassy, has talked with many of the war resisters and said, "Some of them are quite intelligent."

However, he believes that for some the Vietnam War was just an excuse to get out of military service.

"A lot came from broken and unhappy homes and this was a way to revolt," he said.

"We had one man who had spent 19 years in the Air Force and then deserted to Sweden after his wife left him. He had run up huge gambling debts and came to Sweden because he was afraid for his life."

Prout said many of the original resisters who fled here left on their own. More than 50 took advantage of President Ford's clemency program and about 170 were deported, "mostly for narcotics offenses (or) other crimes, including murder and armed robbery."

We Hold These Truths...
A Chronicle of America

April 24, 1776:

In today's edition of the Pennsylvania Journal, an anonymous correspondent calling himself "The Forrester" writes: "There is no such thing [as reconciliation]. 'Tis gone! 'Tis past! The grave hath parted us — and death, in the persons of the slain, hath cut the thread of life between Britain and America. Conquest, and not reconciliation, is the plan of Britain. . . . What is to be done?" Propose to Britain: "We will make peace with you as with enemies, but we will never reunite with you as friends. This affected, and ye secure to yourselves the pleasing prospect of an eternal peace. America, remote from all the wrangling world, may live at ease. Bounded by the ocean, and backed by the wilderness, who hath she to fear but her God?"

Many Gray 4-H'ers win shot at state

High Plains 4-H'ers from 19 of the 20 counties in Extension District I qualified recently to compete June 1-2 in the State 4-H Roundup at College Station when they took top honors in district competition.

About 400 boys and girls competed in the one-day event in Canyon which included 30 contests. Winners received their awards in ceremonies at West Texas State University's activity center.

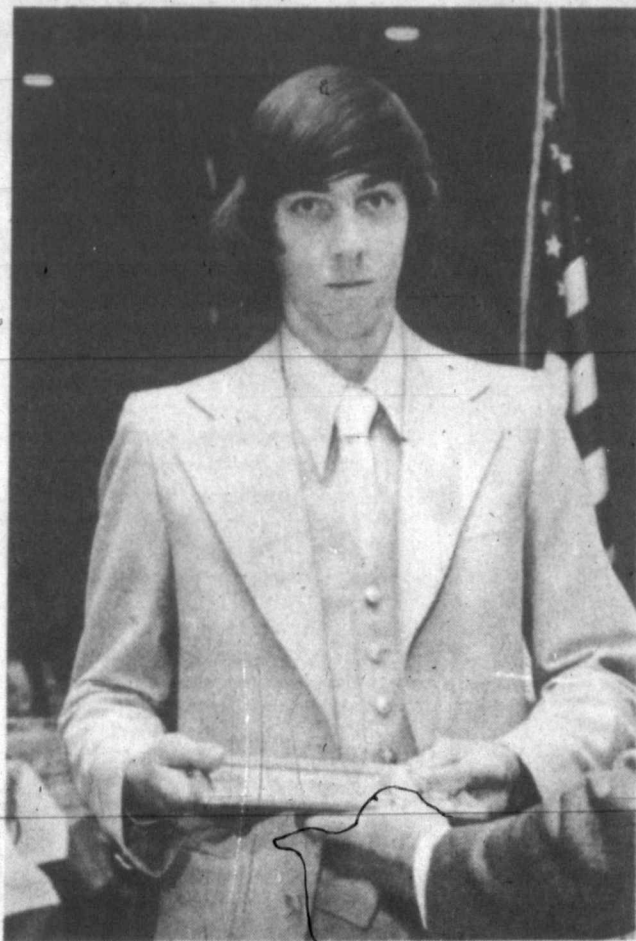

To qualify for the state contest, a team or individual must have a first or second place win in the senior division - 14 year-olds and older. Juniors do not compete beyond the district level.

Ribbons were presented at an awards assembly which followed the contests. The Pioneer Natural Gas Company donated the ribbons for the winners.

First and second place contest winners in both the senior and junior division from Gray County included: Cooperative Demonstration: Senior winner - first, Chris Skaggs and Hank Jordan, Pampa. Horse demonstration: Second in the senior division, Frank Morrison, Pampa. Horticulture Production and Marketing: Junior, fourth, Robbie and Shelly Cochran, Pampa. Farm and Ranch Management - Team: Junior, second, Beth Smitherman and Greg Gabel, McLean. Clothing Educational Activity: Senior, second, Diane VanZandt, Pampa. Public Speaking - Junior Boys: Third, Swasey Brainard, Pampa. Home Environment Educational Activity: Senior, first, Elaine Webb from Pampa. Hand Skills: Junior, first, Bryan Smitherman, McLean. Natural Resources - Team: Junior, second, Amy Brainard and Mike Wilkinson, Pampa. Horticulture Preparation and Use: Junior, first, Penny Miller and Becky McCann, Pampa.

The five top winning Senior demonstrations are available to present programs at club meetings before they go to State 4-H Roundup the first week of June.

Vo-Ag recognition

Kenneth Gage, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rex Gage, accepts the DeKalb Agricultural Accomplishment Award during a vocational awards banquet Monday night. The award, sponsored by the DeKalb Company, is presented to the top senior vocational agriculture student in each school for outstanding scholarship, leadership in supervised programs in agriculture. Selection of Gage, one of 18 agriculture seniors at Pampa High School, for the honor was by Bob Skaggs and Randall Williams, vocational agriculture teachers. Gage, a cooperative agriculture student, has worked for the Gray County Veterinary Clinic during his senior year.

Butz wants 'natural trade'

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — U.S. Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz said Wednesday that signs of progress toward freer world food trade in international talks here are dim so far but he believes a compromise is possible before negotiations wind up next year.

"We're not ready to throw in the towel," Butz told a news conference after appealing to delegates from some 90 nations to work toward eliminating barriers to trade in farm products.

The cabinet officer, here for a day during a global trade tour, told the delegates in a speech that they will lose a chance to promote world prosperity and peace if they fail to recognize that food production can be expanded best by allowing natural trade incentives to step up output in efficient growing areas.

"If we fail to recognize that fact, if we fail to accommodate to it here in Geneva, we will be missing one of the great opportunities of our generation," Butz said.

Butz, who flew to Madrid after the news conference, told reporters it was too early to tell whether the trade negotiations would break down over the reluctance of European leaders to dismantle protectionist farm policies.

"There is that possibility," he conceded. But he said he hopes and believes compromise is possible. He said negotiators have been "jockeying for position" so far.

Butz said the U.S. will be willing to negotiate away its own current restrictions on dairy imports, but he warned it will be politically difficult to ease those barriers unless America receives substantial concessions in return.

May schedule

Iris queen of garden

By LOIS BOUNTON

Moon signs for May:
1-2 — Cultivate and destroy weeds.

3-5 — Plant annuals and vegetables; irrigate; trim to increase growth.

6-7 — Destroy weeds; cultivate.

10-13 — Plant annuals, perennials and vegetables.

14-15 — Cultivate; fertilize.

16-17 — Transplant; prune.

18-19 — Cultivate; destroy weeds.

21-22 — Plant root crops.

23-25 — Destroy weeds; cultivate.

26-27 — Plant root crops; transplant.

28-29 — Trim to retard growth.

30-31 — Plant annuals and late corn; prune to stimulate growth.

May brings warm days and nights and the garden becomes alive with color. Spring flowers attain the height of their glory in May. The bearded iris is the queen of the garden, despite our Panhandle winds. No other flower gives so much for so little. There're many forms and species. The tall bearded varieties are perhaps the most desirable of all. It is possible to have them blooming in your garden from February to September. We have in our garden blooming in February the reticulatas, a bulbous type; in March the little pumilus or miniature dwarfs; in April the intermediates; in May the tall bearded; in June Siberian and spurias, which are beardless types, and the late Dutch bulbous types; July, vespers; and in August and September the re-blooming bearded types.

Keep your notebook active, making notations of improvements and changes you wish to make. When you visit other gardens and nurseries, make careful note of plants and combination of plants that interest you. The spring rush is on, and it becomes apparent that there should have been more earlier planning and planting, so make note of your mistakes and errors. — Make sure you have entered in the notebook your evaluation of the garden results attained this spring.

Bring out the poinsettia plants that have been stored since they finished blooming, cut them back to a height of 6-12 inches, shake away most of the old soil and repot in new soil in pots as small as will comfortably contain the roots. Bury the pots in a protected spot in the garden. They do not mind the sun. Keep them moderately moist and they may bloom for you after you bring them in in the fall.

Now that tulips are through blooming, you need to remove them from the flower beds to make room for summer flowers before the leaves have died. Dig them carefully with as much soil attached to the roots as possible. Then in a trend five to six inches deep heel them in, covering the beds as they were growing. Do not cut off the tops. This should be in a place where they will be shaded from the strong sun. Water well. There let them completely ripen. When the tops are dead they may be dug, cleaned and stored for fall planting. This will insure blooms next year. If left in the beds where they are covered with other plants that need plenty of water, the bulbs may rot.

Pinch the tips of the chrysanthemums when the plants are six inches high. Pull out unwanted sucker growth so they do not take more space than you have planned for them.

Plant all annual seed May 3 and 5. As they come up thin them out. We hate to pull up those little seedlings, but it is important to thin them out so they can grow properly. It is time to plant dahlia bulbs, caladiums, gladioli, tuberoses and other summer flowering bulbs.

Prune spring-flowering shrubs after blooming, remove old canes to the ground. When trimming any branch deep in mind the shape you want the shrub to be. In pruning lilacs, remove the flower stalks and cut out suckers as they appear above ground; in old bushes cut out tall, old wood. We have developed a very pretty lilac tree by pruning and keeping the suckers all cut off. It bloomed beautifully this year. Prune evergreens.

Water frequently newly-planted evergreens should be sprayed with water often.

After poppies have finished blooming, as soon as the leaves start to brown, cut them to the ground. Annuals can be planted over them. Try Canterbury bells.

Do not allow tulips to form seed pods. It will weaken the bulb. They should be fertilized and the tops allowed to die naturally if they are not dug. This is important for next year's bloom.

Pinch out the lateral flower buds on peonies, if you wish to have large blooms, and give them a side dressing of wood ashes. Keep spent blooms pinched out of the pansies and vilas.

Your vegetable garden should be planted by the end of this month. We make succession plantings of sweet corn. We made the first planting in April. The next planting will be May 3 or 4. Other plantings will be on May 23 or 24 and 31. We always plant two rows which is better for pollination than one long row.

A friend shared this with us which we intend to try. To prevent squash bugs, spread baking powder on the ground around the stems when the new plants are first up.

When setting out new plants give each a generous drink of manure water. They will get off to a fast start.

If you need an edging for your bed, try parsley, it will stay in its place and not only be pretty and green all summer but will also be tasty in your salads.

There is nothing quite equal to the first asparagus in the spring. If you have a new bed it should not be cut before the second year. It will be well to fertilize the bed with about two inches of well-rotted manure.

Plant out sweet potato plants the 21st and 22nd.

Every year the garden should have something different, something new. You may like to start with the old-fashioned salpiglossis. The seeds are fine and do require care in germination. Plant them in the bed where you wish them to grow, pat them well into the soil, cover with vermiculate. They will reward you with their velvety texture and colors. They were popular in the Victorian era and are therefore appropriate for growing in our bicentennial year. Another flower of that same era you may like to try is Schizanthus.

County agent comments —

Cattle market outlooks vary

By JOE VANZANDT
County Extension Agent
On the subject of beef cattle outlook, I recently received some price forecast information from Dr. Ed Uvacek, Extension livestock marketing specialist. Dr. Uvacek bases his forecasts on the belief that big increases in red meat production and broilers will be forthcoming in the second half of the year. He thinks these will cause price pressure in the fed cattle market.

He predicts that by July and maybe even by June the heavy movement of calves, yearlings and cull cows will begin. The result will be high increases in slaughter of this "other" beef. Although feedlot marketings should be down somewhat from the highs of the first quarter, this other beef, together with larger supplies of pork and broilers, should force prices downward on fed cattle by the summer months.

Dr. Uvacek says feeder cattle prices should follow about the same basic pattern—a rise this spring and weakness into summer and fall. Feed grain prices are not expected to drop much this year, the price pressure on feeders this fall should increase, forcing prices below the fed cattle levels again.

For a more bullish cattle outlook, USDA is providing one. They are looking for a price high to come in the summer and only moderate weakness in the fourth quarter. Personally, I tend to think more like the USDA predictions which are as follows for choice steers weighing 900 to 1100 pounds at Omaha: The April-June period price range, $43 to $45; July-September period price range, $46 to $48; October-December quarter price range, $44 to $46.

Dr. Uvacek made his predictions on choice steers in Amarillo weighing 900 to 1100 pounds. For the April-June period a price range of $42.25 to $44.25; July-September quarter price range of $38 to $40; October-December quarter price range of $38 to $42.

Time will tell which set of predictions come closest to the actual market. This week it appears that the chain stores are trying to turn fat cattle prices to the downside. It may be a standoff with cattle feeders however, as most are current with their marketings and could hold cattle a few days without any adverse effect.

Sorghum Disease Ratings
I have available in the office copies of a booklet, "Disease Ratings for Sorghums." I understand that there wasn't a lot of maize dwarf mosaic virus (MDMV) around Gray County last year. However, it can adversely affect sorghum yields. MDMV is spread by aphids which have fed on infested Johnson grass as it emerges in the spring. The disease overwinters on the rhizomes of Johnson grass. Through research and sorghum breeding, hybrids have been developed which have varying degrees of tolerance to MDMV. This booklet has most hybrids rated on their ability to resist MDMV. The disease seems to be more pronounced when temperatures drop to 55 degrees during the growing season, such as last summer.

I would suggest you call or come by the office for a copy of this booklet if you are interested in planting hybrids that are tolerant to the disease.

Crop Demonstrations
I will work with farmers who plan to try something new or different on part of their farmland. Demonstrations can be planned so that a lot of extra time and trouble are not required.

Most farmers do things over a complete field. However, I believe if farmers checked themselves more often on the value of a practice, they possibly could save money. Sometimes the practice or chemical applied may not give a return over the cost.

All it takes in many cases is to leave it off of a strip through a field, whether it be phosphorus fertilizer, a herbicide, an insecticide, an extra irrigation or varying the rate of nitrogen fertilizer.

Interested farmers can contact me.

Plants that don't get enough water are more susceptible to insect damage and disease than plants given the proper amount of water. Potted plants are especially susceptible.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY DUTIES, QUALIFICATIONS LISTED FOR VITAL POST

John W. Warner, Democratic candidate for 31st District Attorney, was interviewed recently about the duties and responsibilities of District Attorney.

"The District Attorney is the prosecuting officer in the District Court on felony criminal cases," Warner said. Warner has been the prosecutor in the County Court of Gray County for the past seven years. During the last two years he has handled more than 900 criminal cases in the County and District Courts. About 50 of these cases were felony matters. Prior to becoming County Attorney he served as Municipal Judge for Pampa where he presided over more than 300 contested misdemeanor trials. He is a graduate of Texas A&M and of the University of Texas Law School. He is a law science instructor for Frank Phillips College. He is also a national award winning speaker having been named among the six top Jaycee speakers in the nation out of 300,000 U.S. Jaycees in 1968.

"I believe the most challenging aspect of the District Attorney's job is working with young people," Warner said. As Municipal Judge Warner personally investigated the backgrounds and supervised the probation of more than 200 minors placed on probation in the Municipal Court. Less than a dozen of these ever got in trouble again. He originated the Teen-Age Traffic Court in Pampa requiring teen-agers to appear with their parents when they were charged with traffic offenses. His unique idea of permitting teen-agers to write themes on their first traffic offense was credited with a 22 percent reduction in the percentage of teen-agers involved in accidents while he served as judge.

Warner has served as general chairman for the Blue Star Home project, a project designed to have the community lend any needed assistance to youngsters walking to or from school. He was the general chairman for Model Congress I and II and for Model Legislature I and II where high school students learned about the federal and state law making processes. He has actually served as chairman for more than 100 civic projects. He has been a high school Sunday School teacher for the First United Methodist Church for 14 years. He is in his third year as a Little League coach. He is on the Board of Directors for the Pampa Kiwanis Club and is a member of the Optimist Club.

The Pampa High School Key Club named him "Adult Leader of the Year" in 1966. He was named Pampa's Outstanding Young Man by the Pampa Jaycees in 1969. He was given the "Service to Youth Award" by the Trustees Service Club in 1972. He is listed in Who's Who in America.

"I have always believed that a man must earn the right to seek public office, must earn the right to remain in public office and must earn the right to be promoted in public office," Warner said. "The voters will judge whether or not I have earned promotion. If I am elected, I will continue to work hard in public office just as I have done in the past."

the TEXAS ticket

vote for BENTSEN delegates voice of TEXAS Democrats

TEXAS has always had a powerful voice at the Democratic National Convention. It will be heard . . . loud and clear . . . again this year, if we send delegates pledged to LLOYD M. BENTSEN.

Max Sherman delegate for LLOYD M. BENTSEN

Jeanelle (Mrs. Travis) Spears delegate for LLOYD M. BENTSEN

Jim Lovell delegate for LLOYD M. BENTSEN

Elect these outstanding delegates for Bentsen on May 1 . . . to be sure YOUR thinking is there for the showdown in July.

It has an opportunity to show some strength in selection of the Democratic ticket, writing the Democratic platform . . . IF WE BACK THE BENTSEN DELEGATES.

TEXAS can't afford to send a splintered delegation to the convention in New York . . . with votes so divided that none demands the attention this great state deserves.

A great group led by our own U.S. Senator will speak up for Texas . . . understanding and understanding its needs . . . fighting for issues which are vitally important to this state.

Early commitments to national candidates entered in the Texas Primary would lock us to a limited choice . . . seats in the back . . . making "me, too" moves dictated by people from other states.

The Bentsen delegates—THE TEXAS TICKET—will carry our state's banner more effectively and more forthrightly than the delegates of anyone else.

TEXAS doesn't have to play second fiddle this year.

Vote the Texas ticket . . . delegates for Bentsen . . . for Texas.

Spy study results released

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate investigators now have published the full results of their 15-month study of abuses by U.S. intelligence agencies at home and abroad and made 183 separate recommendations on what to do about them.

The report supplemented a Monday report that offered 86 suggestions on U.S. foreign and military intelligence. The 96 recommendations in the later one are designed to control or restrain domestic intelligence operations.

There is no inherent constitutional authority for the president or any intelligence agency to violate the law," the report said.

The committee's recommendations "are either unreported by the factual record or unduly restrict attainment of valid intelligence objectives."

The CIA, it said, had a computerized index of nearly 1.5 million names of Americans.

House rejects proposed defense spending cuts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After a debate ranging from the military balance to election year politics, the House has voted to reject a proposed $300 million cut in defense spending next year.

A second proposal, by Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., to shift $2.5 billion from defense spending to jobs, welfare, health, education and law enforcement was being debated today.

Rep. Delbert L. Latta, R-Calif., said the United States is behind Russia in virtually all weapons except helicopters.

Trial judge in trouble

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — A Houston judge has been told to explain why he allowed a confession to be used in the murder trial of a woman who says police offered her immunity in exchange for testimony against others involved in the crime.

ton District Judge Frank Price had to justify admitting the confession of Marcia McKittrick into evidence.

The woman's confession said she and two others were paid $7,000 to shoot Hill. At the time he was killed, Hill was scheduled to go to trial on charges of murdering his wife, Joann Robinson Hill.

and said she wanted to "get her business straight." Detectives said they drove to Dallas to pick her up and she gave a written confession early the next day.

Soliah may be charged with harboring Hearst

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Steven Soliah, acquitted of participating in a fatal Symbionese Liberation Army bank robbery, may find himself facing charges of harboring his underground lover Patricia Hearst.

Arrested by FBI agents Sept. 18, less than an hour after Miss Hearst was taken into custody, he was charged with harboring a fugitive.

Miss Toback, a San Francisco masseuse, testified that she spent the night before the bank robbery with Soliah at her San Francisco house but had "no specific recollection" of seeing him at 11 a.m. the next morning when she left for a college physics class.

The House voted Wednesday to add $1.8 billion to the 1977 budget for veterans, most of it to continue cost of living increases in disability benefits, pensions and in GI bill education benefits.

Court upholds narrower State Open Records Act

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The Texas Supreme Court has upheld a lower court decision which narrows the scope of the state's Open Records Act in regard to news media access to police reports and criminal arrest records.

Houston Civil Appeals Court. In handing down its ruling Wednesday, the Supreme Court agreed with the lower court in saying the new open records act actually closed records.

Ms. McKittrick testified Hill's former father-in-law, Houston oilman Ash Robinson, paid for the murder because he wanted custody of the couple's son.

— a 20-year manslaughter sentence against Armon Allen for the Aug. 12, 1974, shooting death of his wife in Rusk County.

— a life sentence against Jerry Nelson Wiegand for the Aug. 16, 1974, murder of Lisa Ayers in Carrollton, Tex.

— a life sentence against Wilmer Lane Easter for murdering his 10-month-old daughter in Houston on May 22, 1974.

It was disclosed Tuesday, however, that a woman identifying herself as Miss Toback was at Folsom Prison visiting a prisoner named Alfred Ingram at 9 a.m. the day of the robbery.

Syrian efforts opposed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Both left and right-wing leaders have openly challenged Syria's peace efforts in Lebanon by calling for the postponement of this weekend's parliamentary election of a new president.

Socialist leader Kamal Jumblatt, accused Syria of trying to rush through the election of a new president who would continue the policies of the current president, Suleiman Franjeh.

FEA considered ad campaign

By ANN GHERLEIN
Pampa's Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — The Washington Star reported this week that in late 1974, after the Arab oil embargo had ended, the Federal Energy Administration (FEA) attempted to get a series of ads on the air that were so controversial that even its ad agency objected to them. The ads were part of a "vulnerability campaign" being launched by the FEA to alert the public to what the agency saw as the dangers of an oil monopoly by the OPEC nations. One of the proposed television ads, for example, showed a Statue of Liberty at one end. As described by the Star: "A sinister looking hand, wearing multiple rings and sparkling cufflinks, enters the picture and begins putting pieces shaped like oil rigs around the statue. A voice says: 'America is a weakened giant caught in a global game of power... and you are paying for it with your dollars.' Other ads were similar in theme. The Advertising Council, a volunteer arm of the advertising industry, which was working for the agency, was aghast at what the government agency was proposing. "What we object to," said a spokesman for the council, "was the anti-Arab theme. We felt that it was a very political, ill chosen and a very dumb thing for the federal government to do..."

The Ad Council felt the FEA should have been promoting ways of energy conservation rather than the cause of the problem. It felt the anti-Arab ads would be too controversial for television networks, particularly because at that time FEA administrator Frank Zarb was pressing Congress for more powers to deal with the energy crisis.

"What scared us was that what they were trying to get us to do was influence Congress and that's something we will not get into," said an Ad Council executive.

So the FEA rejected the services of the Ad Council and hired its own agency to work on the "vulnerability" theme. But for reasons that are not yet clear the FEA decided last fall to switch to the promotion of energy conservation which the Ad Council had advocated all along. The original ads were never aired because of the constant squabbling between the FEA and the Ad Council.

Recent articles in the Wall Street Journal and other newspapers have focused attention on the FEA's public relations campaign. Some members of Congress have been critical of the agency for its campaign, saying that it is political in nature, promoting the policies of the administration with taxpayers' money.

A House committee has recently approved a comprehensive off-shore oil bill to monitor development of energy resources on the outer continental shelf.

The House Select Committee on the Outer Continental Shelf — which was established in the House last year to avoid quarrels among the six regular House committees that have some jurisdiction over offshore oil development — approved the 97-page bill, which incorporates environmental guidelines, offshore oil-leasing rule, an oil-spill cleanup fund and other elements of a policy for offshore oil development.

The bill is designed to help accelerate development of the nation's offshore oil reserves "in an environmentally sound manner," according to the panel chairman, Rep. John M. Murphy, D-N.Y.

Among its provisions is revision of federal law governing bidding procedures and leasing of offshore oil banks, one aim being to make it easier for smaller concerns to compete with the big oil companies.

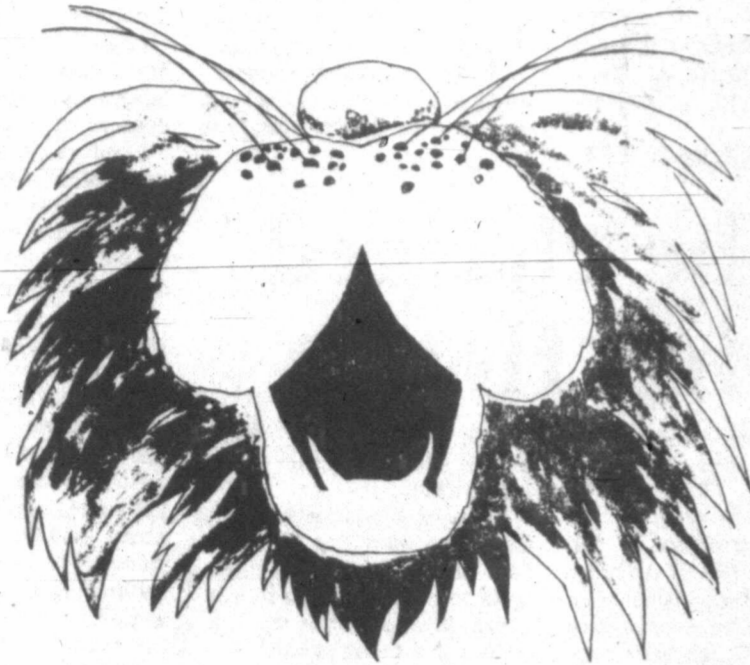

The bill, which next goes to the House floor, also provides environmental safeguards for protecting coastal areas near offshore oil wells, sets guidelines for state and local participation in planning of offshore oil development, and calls for establishment of safety regulations for offshore operations.

Seventeen U.S. petroleum companies have been approved to participate in the International Energy Program (IEP) to help consuming countries if a world oil shortage emergency developed, the Federal Energy Administration has reported.

In an emergency, oil would be pooled under the control of the participating IEP countries. If one or more participating IEP countries sustained a seven per cent oil supply reduction, the IEP emergency allocation plan would go into operation.

Under the IEP Emergency Sharing Plan, in which major international oil companies will participate, each IEP country would be assured a proportional supply of oil, which would continue to be distributed through normal channels.

Wyoming coal potential vital energy source

By MARY ELLEN HASKETT
CHEYENNE (UPI) — With the largest coal potential in the country, Wyoming is vital to America's energy self-sufficiency hopes but a federal official says funds have been cut for an agency that reviews and issues coal mining leases.

Funds for the Bureau of Land Management's Wyoming administration were slashed by a half million dollars last fall, said Dan Baker, state BLM director. The loss eliminated 10 positions which would have been used to establish a BLM field office in Casper.

"Many activities we thought would occur didn't materialize, so the bureau withdrew the capabilities and gave them to other state offices," Baker explained.

"If we become inundated with applications for mining permits, we can't respond."

Baker said the Wyoming BLM overestimated the number of applications to mine federally-owned coal which they expected to receive by this time. However, he expects the situation to alter critically during the summer as federal mining standards are given final approval.

"I'm sure industry is concerned about the present uncertainties in reclamation standards and other rules," he said. "The next few months are critical. The final rules will be published and the Supreme Court will hear the Sierra Club suit."

The Supreme Court agreed to hear arguments in the environmental group's lawsuit against former Interior Secretary Rogers Morton. The suit halted coal development in the Western Plains until the court lifted an injunction in January.

Baker, head of the Wyoming BLM since 1969, said the industry probably feels that since it has waited several years to begin mining a few more months will make little difference before there is a final decision affecting mining standards.

The sudden influx of applications when rules are firmly established will be a "significant workload" that will affect the speed with which permits are issued and extraction of coal can begin, he said. Other programs will be stopped or completed over a longer period of time.

Baker said energy development and range management programs will receive highest priorities in manpower allotments.

Despite the funding cut, Baker claims BLM and Interior Department officials have been supportive of the Wyoming BLM and its problems.

"There is an inherent realization of Wyoming's importance," he said. "They know we're in the center of the energy picture."

The state BLM's capability to hasten coal permit issuance depends on the money and manpower allotted by the BLM national heads, the strictness of environmental standards to be met and the number of environmental analyses that must be done, according to Baker.

Certain principles have been set forth in proposed rules and regulations that will require industry to work federal coal leases, rather than simply hold them for future development as coal prices rise. Baker said the policy was formulated because a large amount of BLM land already is leased, but a relatively small amount of coal is produced from it.

"Companies will be obliged to pursue mining activity with some diligence," he said. "It will be very expensive to simply hold a lease."

Offshore drilling rigs stand idle

HOUSTON (UPI) — A slowdown in oil and gas exploration because of uncertainties about possible government regulations has forced drilling companies to park four giant offshore drilling rigs worth $115 million at Sabine Pass.

A spokesman for the owners of one of the rigs, Marlin Drilling Co., said its rig, the Marlin 7, has been idled at the pass southeast of Houston for 49 days at a cost to the company of $12,000 a day for mortgage, maintenance and insurance.

Spokesmen for several oil companies said a lack of work is idling offshore rigs worldwide.

Marlin company spokesman Les Gibbons said industry figures show of 70 semisubmersible rigs around the world, 23 are not working. He predicted the slowdown is going to get worse.

"It's just a sad story industry-wide," a spokesman for another oil company said.

Asked what was causing the slowdown, he replied: "The energy bill, the controls on prices, lack of incentive and worrying what government is going to do tomorrow."

The spokesman said the four rigs represent a construction investment of $115 million and the yearly rental of the four rigs would total about $42 million.

He said if the four rigs were working, they would provide jobs for between 800 and 1,000 workers, including onshore support personnel.

Oil industry sources in Singapore said there is a feeling of gloom in the industry because of numerous factors, including a move by the Indonesian government to shave $1 per barrel off foreign company profits and a recent ruling by the U.S. Internal Revenue Service that reduces the amount of tax credit that can be claimed for production sharing payments to the Indonesian government.

The Prize-winning Pampa News Delivers It All To Your Doorstep

President Ford, his opponent and you.

On May 1st, you, the voter, are going to make a decision that's vital to not only Texas but also the nation.

The decision is whether to vote for President Ford, on the basis of what he's been doing.

Or his opponent, on the basis of what he's been saying.

President Ford has started to turn the economy around, resulting in 2.5 million more Americans working today than one year ago. He has also cut inflation nearly in half, and, to guard against future inflation, has vetoed big spending bills passed by the Congress, saving the taxpayers over $13 billion.

His opponent has offered nothing in the way of a comprehensive, workable economic plan for America. He has, however, proposed his now-famous scheme to transfer $90 billion from the federal government to the states — which would mean higher taxes for Texas.

President Ford has maintained the peace by maintaining America as a military power unsurpassed by any other nation in the world. Senator John Tower, second-ranking Republican member of the Senate Armed Services Committee and a strong defense advocate, calls President Ford the best informed President on defense matters since Dwight Eisenhower. And he welcomes the fact that President Ford, determined to keep America unsurpassed militarily, has sent Congress the largest defense budget in history... with the warning that he will veto any budget that is returned to him with substantially lower appropriations than he requested.

His opponent, inexperienced in national and international affairs, has shown himself to be misinformed on America's military needs in today's world. He has preferred to compare the U.S. to the Soviet Union on an old-fashioned who-has-more-of-what basis, rather than recognize that the U.S. has all it needs to do what counts: deter aggression, maintain the peace and protect its national security. He has simplistically criticized the President instead of the Congress, which has slashed $38 billion from Presidential defense budget requests over the last seven years.

President Ford this year included in his program a cost-of-living increase in Social Security benefits, as well as catastrophic health insurance coverage, for older Americans — and has had the courage to request the payroll tax increase needed to pay for it.

His opponent has not offered a solid, constructive, alternative program, and the most revealing item to come out of his campaign remains the incredible suggestion that Social Security funds be invested in the stock market—a suggestion that, if implemented, would jeopardize the benefits of not only today's older Americans but also tomorrow's.

President Ford has 25 years of experience—as a Congressman, Vice President and President—dealing with the national and international issues that are a President's responsibility. He has been making the hard decisions that have to be made.

His opponent has no experience with such issues, having never held a public office which dealt with them. And unable to develop any bona fide issues of his own, he has conducted a campaign with lots of heat but little light, criticizing much and proposing little.

President Ford.

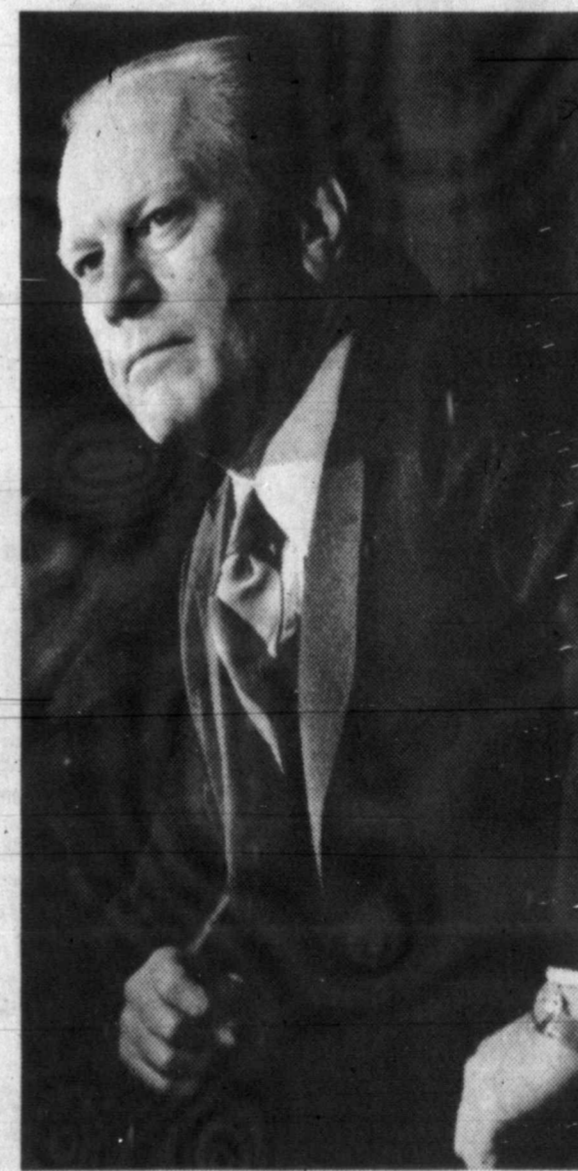

His opponent.

Now it's time to hear from you.

If you want to vote for the man who has experience, proven leadership and responsibility on his side... the man who can win next November... that man is President Ford.

In the May 1 Republican Primary, vote for all four delegates pledged to President Ford.

President Ford is your President. Keep him.

Homer race shaping up

By FRED DOWN
UPI Sports Writer

The young lions are Dave Kingman and Mike Schmidt and it appears they're going to stage the most exciting home run race the National League has seen in more than a quarter of a century.

Kingman known as "Kong" by his New York Met teammates, has hit nine homers this season while Schmidt, who, his Philadelphia Phillies teammates say, has "no limitations," has hit 11.

Schmidt went homerless in the Phillies' 7-6 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Wednesday night, but "Kong" hit his ninth, a three-run blast into the clouds overhanging New York's Shea Stadium as the Mets downed the Atlanta Braves, 3-0.

Kingman hit his "rainmaker" off Andy Messersmith with two on in the first inning and that was all Craig Swan needed to breeze to the victory, the Mets' fifth in a row. Swan allowed five hits, struck out 11 and walked one as he evened his record at 1-1. Messersmith has now made four appearances for Atlanta without winning a game. He allowed six hits and the Mets' three runs in seven innings and now stands at 0-1.

"Now that I think of it, it was the only bad pitch I made," said Messersmith, referring to Kingman's homer. "It was a hanging slider and that was the game. But it still comes down to throwing the ball past the sticks and I'm not doing that."

Bob Boone's three-run homer in the fifth inning was the big blow for the Phillies, who dealt the Reds' Pat Darcy his second loss against one victory. Jim Lonborg went five innings, yielding four runs and eight hits, to receive credit for his second straight win. Pete Rose, Joe Morgan and Doug Flynn had two hits each for the Reds.

St. Louis defeated San Francisco, 4-2, in 16 innings. Montreal beat Houston, 8-7, after a 6-4 loss, the Chicago Cubs topped San Diego, 8-5, and Los Angeles downed Pittsburgh, 2-1, in other National League games.

In the American League, it was Baltimore 4 California 2, Cleveland 9 Minnesota 0, Milwaukee 4 Chicago 1 and Detroit 8 Oakland 1. Boston at Kansas City and New York at Texas were postponed because of inclement weather.

Cardinals 4, Giants 2: Doug Clary, batting for the second time in the majors, hit a two-run homer in the 10th inning, giving the Cardinals their triumph over the Giants. Clary's homer off Mike Caldwell came after Willie Crawford opened the inning with his fifth single of the game. Mike Proly, the fifth of six St. Louis pitchers, was the winner while Caldwell suffered his third straight defeat.

Astros 6-7, Expos 4-8: Leon Roberts' three-run homer was the big blow of a four-run first-inning outburst that sent Houston on its way to victory in the opener. Pinch-hitter Jose Morales singled home Nate Colbert with one out in the ninth to climax a two-run rally which enabled Montreal to gain a split. J.R. Richard won his third game for the Astros in the opener.

Cubs 8, Padres 5: Rick Monday drove in four runs, two with his fifth homer, and Bill Bonham went 8 1-3 innings for the Cubs, who handed 1975 20-game winner Randy Jones his first 1976 loss after four straight victories. Bonham, staked to an early 7-0 lead, allowed four San Diego runs, including a three-run homer by Willie Davis.

Dodgers 2, Pirates 1: Ron Cey homered off Jerry Reuss with one out in the ninth inning to lift the Dodgers over the Pirates and stretch their winning streak to five games. Burt Hooton pitched a six-hitter to raise his record to 1-2 for Los Angeles while Reuss' record dropped to 2-2. Richie Hebner homered for Pittsburgh.

One, Two, Three

The first three places in a class of 70 riders were snared by Pampans Sunday at the Fort Worth Trailriders Ghost Town Endura held just outside Ford Worth at Thurber. Loren Johnston, left, placed third riding his Yamaha. Mike Crippen snagged first place and also was the best overall Kawasaki rider in the meet. Greg Odom was the second place biker. Odom and Crippen were sponsored by Brister's Kawasaki where the trophies now are on display. (Pampa News photo by Michal Thompson)

Brooks not just average

By BILL MADDEN
UPI Sports Writer

For any other player on any other team, a .153 batting average might easily be looked upon as a one-way ticket to Sheboygan this time of year.

Brooks Robinson, however, is no other player. And neither, at this point in time, are the Baltimore Orioles. Just ask their manager, Earl Weaver.

"Brooks is going as good as most guys on the team, maybe better," said Weaver Wednesday night after Robinson, batting just .153 entering the game, smashed a run-scoring double that climaxed a three-run fifth inning in the Orioles' 4-2 victory over the California Angels.

As a team, the Orioles were hitting .183 before the game—an ominous figure that obviously gave Weaver reason to relax somewhat after Baltimore erupted for a season-high 12 hits, including four doubles.

The Orioles put the game away in the fifth when Paul Blair singled, moved up on a walk to Bobby Grich and scored on a throwing error by ex-Oriole catcher Andy Etchebarren. Rookie Andreas Mora then scored Grich with a sacrifice fly and after Tony Muser singled, Robinson doubled off the leftfield wall for the final run of the inning.

"It's nice to get four runs," said southpaw Ken Holtzman, who was the beneficiary of the Orioles' bat revival. He scattered eight hits, including three by Rusty Torres.

Elsewhere in the American League, Cleveland routed Minnesota, 9-0, Milwaukee put away Chicago, 4-1, and Detroit romped over Oakland, 8-1. Boston-Kansas City and Texas-New York were rained out.

In the National League, it was Houston over Montreal, 5-4, in the first game of a doubleheader with the Expos winning the nightcap, 8-7; New York 3 Atlanta 0; Philadelphia 7 Cincinnati 6; St. Louis 4 San Francisco 2; Chicago 8 San Diego 5; and Los Angeles 2 Pittsburgh 1.

Brewers 4, White Sox 1: Don Money smacked a two-run single to highlight a three-run Brewers' third inning that did in White Sox starter Wilbur Wood, now 2-3. Robin Yount and Gorman Thomas drove home the other Brewer runs. The game was played before only 1,144 fans.

Twins 9, Indians 0: Rick Manning sparked a 14-hit Cleveland attack by driving home three runs with a homer and a double. Dennis Eckersley (2-2) worked the first six innings to gain the victory for the Indians, striking out six, walking none and yielding two infield singles. Don Hood finished up.

Tigers 8, A's 1: Dave Roberts (3-0) hurled his second two-hitter of the season since being acquired by Detroit in a winter deal with Houston. The Tigers backed Roberts' with six runs in the third. Alex Johnson drove home two runs with a triple and a single.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Honest Pleasure and Bold Forbes are expected to leave a small Kentucky Derby field in their wake coming out of the gate Saturday, but trainer LeRoy Jolley said post positions could be extremely important to the two favorites.

"I think the horse who draws an outside post position always have a little edge because the rider can look over and see what's happening, whereas the inside rider has to commit."

Usually post position is not that critical in the Derby because there is a quarter of a mile down the stretch to the first turn. The winner of nine straight races and holder of career earnings of more than $600,000, Bert Firestone's Honest Pleasure will go off as an odds-on favorite in the 1¼-mile American classic with Braulio Baeza aboard.

His chief rival appears to be E. Rodriguez Tizol's Bold Forbes, who will be ridden by Angel Cordero.

Scrimmage to cap Buffs' spring sked

CANYON — West Texas State will add the finishing touches to its split backfield offense this week in final preparations for Saturday night's Varsity Alumni spring football finale in Kimbrough Memorial Stadium.

"We'll be ready for a football game by Saturday," said head coach Gene Mayfield. "We'll primarily polish our offense this week, slacking off in the amount of contact work before Saturday."

The '76 edition will have plenty of contact Saturday night, though. This year's alumni squad features five players who have been named to All-Missouri Valley Conference teams the past two years, and Mayfield feels that individually the Buffs have made enough progress this spring to welcome the competition.

The question marks before spring ball coffered two positions on the offensive interior line, tight end, and more receivers on offense, and a big problem on the line on defense. Most of the problems have at least been reduced in their degree of severity, said Mayfield.

"I think Greg Whetstone has done a real good job at center, and the other two at that position — Chip Van Pelt and Glen Keller — haven't done that bad either," Mayfield added. "Angelo McClair and Frank Dudley have progressed at tight end, and Mark Stewart has looked good at right tackle."

"We have only one fellow — Scott Wiley — who has had a lot of experience in catching the ball, but we have made some progress there, too."

Defensive coordinator Jim Elam, whose biggest job was finding replacements for three of four down linemen, may be two-thirds toward his goal.

"Mike Roberts have improved greatly at one end, and Randy Cook was really making some progress until he was injured last week," Elam said. "It hurt Randy but he will be able to practice last week."

The scrimmage will start at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are being sold through Amarillo-Canyon area Boy Scouts for $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for students. WT students will be admitted free with activity cards.

Record birdies expected in Houston Open

WOODLANDS, Tex. (UPI) — For a number of reasons, the 156 starters in the four-day, $200,000 Houston Open golf tournament expected birdies to fall in record numbers today.

Bruce Crampton's 15-under-par was good enough last year to win at the new Woodlands Country Club course. That number probably will not cut it this year, the defending champion said, if for no other reason than this is the second straight year of play there.

The course itself was in excellent condition. "The fairways are firm, and the course is set up just fine," said young Texan Ben Crenshaw, the second leading money winner on the tour and a favorite to win his third title this year.

Scores may go lower because the list of golfers is considered the toughest in seven years. Besides Crenshaw entries include top money winner Hubert Green, Masters champion Ray Floyd, Johnny Miller and Lee Trevino.

Arnold Palmer was there also, looking for another charge. And although he did not set any records during the pro-am event Wednesday, he did shoot a two-under 70.

"The greens are slick, and I'm assuming they'll put some water on them if they want to keep them from going totally out," he said. "I ran it by the hole a lot, so the greens will determine it."

If the pro-am was any indication, a host of very low scores can be expected.

Dallas resident John Schlee fired a seven-under 65. Green and Allen Miller shot 67, while Trevino, Tom Kite and Jim Colbert came in with 68s.

Despite 48 golfers beating par last year, an official of the sponsoring Houston Golf Association said the PGA asked them to make the course a little easier.

"I expect to see some rounds in the low 60s," said PGA Executive Secretary John Davis. "The PGA ordered us to widen the fairways on some holes, and that's sure to help the scoring."

Celtics miss Havlicek

By CHRIS TURKEL
UPI Sports Writer

The Boston Celtics just aren't the same without John Havlicek.

Since losing the services of their perennial All-Star forward with a foot injury after the second game of their NBA Eastern Conference semifinal playoff series, Boston has lost both of its games to Buffalo, tying the series 2-2.

Since losing the services of their perennial All-Star forward with a foot injury after the first game of their NBA Eastern Conference semifinal playoff series, Boston has lost two of its next three games to Buffalo, tying the series, 2-2.

Don Nelson, Havlicek's replacement, made a valiant attempt Wednesday night to fill his teammate's sneakers, scoring 27 points, but when it came to the clutch, Nelson failed. Rookie John Shumate tipped Nelson's shot at the buzzer and it fell short of the basket, sealing Buffalo's 124-122 victory.

Randy Smith was the Braves hero as he hit a 25-foot jump shot with three seconds left to win the game at Buffalo. The fifth game will be played in Boston Friday night.

Smith, who scored 28 points, said of the low percentage shot: "I found myself in a one-on-one situation and tried to penetrate but couldn't. So I went up with the shot."

Buffalo's Bob McAdoo led all scorers with 30 points but fouled out with 1:11 left. Ernie DiGregorio scored 21 points, Shumate 20 and Jim McMillian 18 for the Braves while Dave Cowens had 29 points, Jo Jo White 28 and Charlie Scott 16 for the Celtics.

In the other NBA semifinal,

All-Star forward Rick Barry had 25 points, 11 assists and seven steals to power the Golden State Warriors to a 128-109 rout of the Detroit Pistons and go up 3-2 in their Western Conference series.

The sixth game will be played in Detroit Friday night and a seventh game, if necessary, is scheduled for Oakland Sunday.

The Warriors never trailed after breaking a 15-15 tie with a 13-7 spree at the end of the first quarter. Phil Smith scored eight of his game-high 28 points in that spurt as Golden State took a 28-22 lead into the second period.

Detroit's only threat came at the end of the third quarter when Al Eberhard and Bob Lanier teamed for 10 points in an 18-5 spurt that cut the lead to 93-80 entering the final period.

Warriors center Clifford Ray, known better for his defense, came through with 18 points and a game-high 15 rebounds while helping hold Lanier to 15 points.

In the ABA, rookie forward

David Thompson scored a game-high 40 points and paced a third-quarter offensive explosion that led the Denver Nuggets to a 133-110 victory over Kentucky and a spot in the playoff finals.

The victory gave the Nuggets, the league's regular season champion, a 4-3 triumph over the defending league champions in the semifinal. The finals against the second place New York Nets will begin Saturday in Denver.

The Nuggets, playing before a standing-room-only crowd of 18,821, the largest ever to see an ABA game, had a see-saw battle with the Colonels before unleashing a 37-point third-quarter attack.

"I just want to enjoy this," said Nugget Coach Larry Brown. "This is the first time in Denver's history that we've gotten into the finals. I'm looking forward to New York, but right now I want to savor this win for a while."

FAST SHOT
NEW YORK (UPI) — J.P. Parise of the New York Islanders scored the fastest overtime goal in Stanley Cup playoff history — 11 seconds into the extra session — in a preliminary round victory over the New York Rangers in April, 1975.

First woman tunes up for Indy

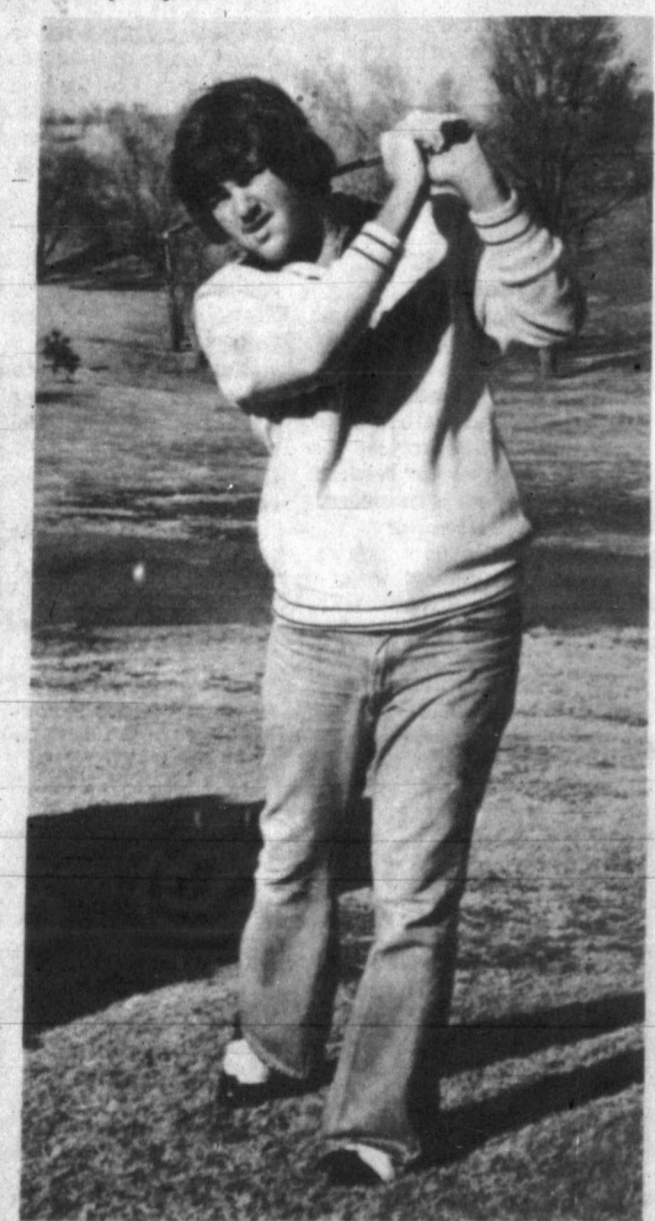

By MURRAY OLDERMAN
SAN FRANCISCO—(NEA)—The frustration was too much for Janet Guthrie. One moment she was in the pits, practically tasting the champagne and whiffing the bouquet of victory. She was just waiting to get behind the wheel of the car which was whirring around the track at Sebring, an airfield in Florida that once a year is turned into a race course. She purred over that machine like a collector of objets d'art caressing a Ming dynasty vase. Her partner, Stan Behr, had it running smoothly in seventh place, but Janet knew there was no way they could lose.

The next moment, she heard the bad news. The car had broken down and was out of the race. Ruined differential. So Janet went back to her motel room and did what any emotional female would do. She ingested the sour taste of defeat. She sipped beer and she ate chocolate bars, crunched on corn chips and chewed pork rinds. Janet Guthrie is a racing driver, a relatively rare species in her gender but one due to get increasing attention in a world where women pilot temperamental thoroughbred horses, cuff each other with padded mitts inside a square ring and even put on the warlike raiment of football players. In May she will seek to break another barrier, by becoming the first woman to sit behind the wheel of a tuned-up horsepower monster in the Indianapolis 500 classic, the big daddy of all engine events. She is already part of the Bryant Heating & Cooling team, which has sponsored her entry, and she will be there early in the month when the practice runs start on the 2.5 mile oval. The prospect does not awe her. "What's so hard," she asks "about making four left turns?"

If that sounds cynical, it doesn't really convey the tone of Ms. Guthrie, who is tall, slender and quite intelligent in her attitudes about driving a car for thrills and glory. She has been racing for almost 13 years, winning the North Atlantic Road Racing championship and trophies at such disparate sites as Sebring, Daytona and Watkins Glen, all revered by the motor set. She is regarded as perhaps the best of the woman drivers, though Janet herself thought that Lella Lombardi, who has achieved some success on the Grand Prix circuit, might beat her to the accelerator pedal at Indy. Janet knows that unless she can hit it big in Indianapolis, there is not much money in the sport for her. She barely makes enough from it directly to keep her own car—a '68 Plymouth with 128,000 miles on the speedometer and the original automatic transmission—operational. But there are other ways to make a living. Right now she is editing a book on genetics for a major New York publisher. She has a degree in physics from the University of Michigan and worked as an aeronautical engineer on Long Island before she drifted into racing

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI)—The 1976 Ohio State football team had 13 players picked in the National Football League draft. Four Buckeyes were taken on the first round, including running back John Brockington who went on to become Rookie of the Year with the Green Bay Packers.

WTSU in Denton field

CANYON—West Texas State will try to improve on its five individual championships of a year ago in the third annual Carl Babcock Memorial track and field meet today at Denton. The four-team meet, hosted by North Texas State, will also include teams from Texas Christian and Southern Methodist. The meet starts at 5 p.m. today with the field events and at 6 o'clock with the running events on the cinder track at Fouts Field.

Joseph Kemei and Marvin Self will be the only Buffs back to defend their titles. Kemei won the half-mile last year in a record 1:52.5, and Self hurled the discus 151-1 to win that event. Also last year, Charles Haddad won the shot in 53-8 1/4. Robert Dennis won the 100 in 9.6, and Gary Six high jumped 6-4 for WTSU. Kemei and Kenyan countryman John Cheinaringo are the Buffs' top hopes Thursday night. Kemei was a double winner last weekend in the Wayland Baptist All-College meet, capturing the mile (4:10.7) and three-mile (14:28.9). Chemaringo has the team's best clockings in the 800 (1:50.8) and the mile (4:09.5). In the sprints, usually a West Texas strength, the Buffs will be pressed by TCU. They are just loaded with quality sprinters. WT Coach Bob Kitchens explains. "They have already been timed in 39.9 in the sprint relay. North Texas has a 40.6 time, and SMU has a 41.5

"We'll really have to hunt it to do any good in the sprints or the 400-yard relay." Nonetheless, Kitchens expects the team battle to be between his Buffs and North Texas State. The Eagles won the overall crown a year ago by 75-64 score with SMU or TCU have the depth to challenge. Thursday's meet will be the last outing for the Buffs prior to the 66th Missouri Valley Conference championships May 21-22 at Canyon.

Sundown, Amherst named favorites

LEVELLAND—Sundown and Amherst are co-favorites in the battle for the Region I-B boys track and field meet, which begins a two-day stint Friday at South Plains College here. "Several other teams have the potential to challenge Sundown and Amherst," said Clint Ramsey, director of the regional meet, "including Lefors, Buena Vista, New Home, Sudan, Jayton and Sanderson." The meet begins at 2:30 p.m. Friday with finals in the pole vault, long jump and shot put. Preliminaries in the running events start at 4 p.m. Saturday, finals in the high jump and discus begin at 10 a.m. Running event finals commence at 12:30 p.m. Sundown, last year's regional champion, has the best 440-yard relay time of all entrants, while its mile-relay team has the second best time among district winners. "The Roughnecks also should score in the 440-yard dash with Jimmy McLeroy and Randy Wood and in the pole vault with Steven Smith," Ramsey added.

Runner-up for the team title last year was Jayton with 42 points, 12 behind Sundown. Smyer was third with 42 points, followed by Marathon and Grandfalls with 29 apiece. "Amherst's power is in sprinter Terry Sterling," Ramsey said. Sterling has the best times in the 220 (22.1) and 440 (51.1), while Amherst's mile-relay team which has the best time among entrants (3:34.4). Lefors will be relying on Bobby Crain, Phil White and Larry Franks. Crain has been clocked at 10.3 in the 100 and has a 20-10 1/4 effort in the long jump. White has gone 20-2 1/4 in the long jump and has a discus toss of 133 1/4. Franks is expected to score well in the shot put if he can equal his season best throw of 49-6 1/4. Sprinter Rodney Powell and pole vaulter Tommy Daniel will lead the Buena Vista charge, along with the 440-yard relay team. Powell has a 9.9 in the 100 and a 23.2 in the 220. The Buena Vista relay team has a best of 45.3 seconds. "Among the top individuals in the meet," Ramsey added, "will be weight man Devin Burrus of Follett." Burrus comes into the meet with 50-10 1/4 best in the shot put and 158-2 1/4 in the discus. Burrus' discus mark betters the existing regional record by seven feet. In addition to Amherst's Sterling and Buena Vista's Powell, one of the top runners should be Ken Jenkins of Miami. Ramsey said. Jenkins "has good qualifying marks in the 100, 120 high hurdles and 220," he noted. Also, Dennis Andrews of Grandfalls has tied the existing 120-yard high hurdle mark of 14.6 seconds. "Sundown, Sudan, Sanderson and Lefors all have the potential to score in five events," Ramsey concluded, "while Buena Vista and Jayton have probably point winner in four events."

Here is a rundown of the Region I-B track records: 440 relay — 43.6 by Wall in 1972; 880 — 1:58.2 by Doug Robinson of Booker in 1969; 120-high hurdles — 14.6 by both Charles Lee of Lazbuddie in 1971 and Ricky Seaton of Lazbuddie in 1973; 100 — 9.7 by Mike Jones of Loraine in 1973; 440 — 48.9 by George Trenfield of Follett in 1966; 330 intermediate hurdles — 38.8 by Benny Holik of Wall in 1972; 220 — 21.6 by Mike Jones of Loraine in 1974; mile run — 4:27.9 by Ricky Marquez of Sanderson in 1975; mile relay — 3:25.0 by Wall in 1972; pole vault — 13-3 3/4 by Hoyt Wauhob of Booker in 1971; high jump — 6-9 by Woody Lyons of Smyer in 1975; long jump — 22-9 by Leslie Lee of Booker in 1962; shot put — 53-7 by Ronnie Pinckard of Follett in 1966; and discus — 151-5 by Danny Wright of Meadow in 1969.

Staus, others to speak

Harmon Staus of Pampa, a junior offensive tackle at Texas Tech, will be one of four speakers at the Pampa Optimist Club Opening Day ceremonies May 8. The ceremonies will kick off the club's sports seasons for this year. Staus and Tech teammates Dan Irons, Mark Julian and Kerry Wood will speak during the festivities, which will also include a barbecue and the honoring of the Pampa Babe Ruth baseball queens. Tickets are available from most Optimist Club members and from Babe Ruth players. Staus, selected on the Churchman's All-America

Football Team in 1975, is an active member of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and has spoken for the FCA at sports banquets and team meetings throughout the area. The tech junior, is the son of Jim and Ramona Staus of Pampa. Irons, also a junior, is a starting offensive tackle for the Red Raiders. He attended Lubbock Monterey High School, where he received all-state honors in football. Also a junior, Julian is a running back at Tech. Wood, a senior, is the student trainer for the Red Raider football team. He will be working in several youth revivals across the state following graduation next month. Irons, Julian and Wood are, like Staus, active members of the FCA.
