Mayor calls Wednesday high school choir day

Members of the Pampa High School Choir were scheduled to receive the red carpet welcome home treatment when they arrived back in town late this afternoon from their trip to Tempe, Ariz., where they took top honors Saturday in the Mountain States Music Festival at Arizona State University.

The two bus loads of choristers, who received first division ratings and praise of the music festival judges, were to be met at Kingsmill around 4 p.m. and escorted by a police patrol car with flashing lights and sounding siren into town and north on Highway 70 to Harvester St. and Pampa High School.

Mayor R.D. Wilkerson this morning issued a proclamation declaring Wednesday Pampa High School Concert Choir Day.

The proclamation reads in part: "Whereas, the Pampa High School Concert Choir has brought signal honor to the City of Pampa and all its citizens by taking top honors at the Music Festival at Arizona State University;

"And, whereas, the City of Pampa wishes to recognize the tremendous effort required by each and every member of this remarkable group of dedicated young people to achieve this place of honor;

"Now, therefore, I, R.D. Wilkerson, mayor of the City of Pampa, do hereby designate Wednesday, May 5, as Pampa High School Concert Choir Day, and encourage each citizen to recognize these young people who have represented each of us and our community in such an exemplary manner."

Parents of the choir members were expected to be on hand when the buses were scheduled to arrive at the High School around 4 p.m. today.

School authorities said no special ceremonies had been planned for the choir's arrival.

Voter votes twice Saturday; ballot-checking continues

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

At least one Pampa voter apparently cast ballots in both the Democrat and Republican primaries Saturday.

The violation was discovered Monday during a spot check of 300 ballots as ordered by Secretary of State Mark White. Upon learning of the incident today, the secretary of state's office recommended that a complete check be made and action taken against anyone who violated any Texas election laws.

Penalty upon conviction for voting twice in the same election calls for a maximum of 60 days in jail and a $500 fine.

Local officials were checking today to determine what legal procedure to follow in filing charges connected with alleged voter violations.

The Pampa resident who apparently voted in both primaries showed his voter registration in the Democratic primary and signed an affidavit that he had lost his voter registration card in order to vote in the Republican primary.

The checking began shortly after 2 p.m. Monday in the Gray County Courtroom with Wanda Carter, county clerk; Peg Baker, secretary to the Gray County Democratic executive committee; and Mrs. Ruth Osborne, 31st District Democratic committeewoman, checking voter records.

It took three hours to check 300 names.

Ruth Osborne, 31st District Democratic committeewoman, said plans call for the check to be complete by 7 p.m. today when votes are scheduled to be canvassed by executive committees for both parties.

Mrs. Carter said today that the Saturday turnout was a record here for a primary election — with more than half the registered voters casting ballots.

Records this morning showed that 4,296 Democrats and 2,102 Republicans cast ballots. The county has 12,553 registered voters.

Mrs. Carter added that Dr. Julian Key, Gray County Republican chairman, had offered his services in double checking the records to determine how many more, if any, voted in both primaries.

Local officials had indicated there was a possibility a recount would be ordered in the 31st District Attorney's race where Harold Comer won without a runoff.

However, John W. Warner, county attorney, told The News today he has no plans to challenge the election results.

Comer polled 4,441 over Warner's 2,616. Guy Hardin of Shamrock, incumbent, received 1,765. In order to win without a runoff, a candidate must receive at least one more vote than the combined total of votes cast for his opponents.

Gray County Democrats and Republicans will meet at 7 p.m. today to officially canvass the votes.

Ms. Osborne said that those who voted in the Republican primaries are not legally allowed to vote in the Democratic runoffs which include constables races in Pampa and Lefors.

The runoff election is set for June 5.

Gray County Republican and Democratic conventions are scheduled at 2 p.m. Saturday. The Republicans will meet at Lovett Memorial Library and the Democrats at the Gray County Courthouse.

Former Congressman Bob Price of Pampa, a Republican candidate who is attempting to unseat Vernon Democrat Jack Hightower, will be the speaker for the Republican convention.

Pickets recalled in SF

United Press International

Most pickets in San Francisco's 35-day strike of city workers were recalled today in a good faith gesture aimed at speeding a settlement. Thousands of New York residents crossed picket lines of apartment house service workers to get to their jobs.

The laborers' union, which represents most of the 1,740 craft workers on strike in San Francisco, announced a 24-hour moratorium on picketing as negotiators set to resume talks Tuesday. Other unions were still picketing and tying up many city services.

In New York City, the chairman of the building owners' negotiating committee said the owners were prepared for a long strike rather than to give in to wage demands by doormen and other workers who walked off the job Monday at 3,000 apartment buildings.

The strike could result in serious garbage pileups, hot water shortages and a shutdown of manually operated elevators.

Off-the-record talks between the United Rubber Workers and Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. Monday failed to change either side's positions in the 15-day old strike by URW members against four major tiremakers. Pickets Monday kept nonunion workers out of some rubber plants.

Other labor disputes idled Continental Trailways buses in nine southern states and United Parcel Service trucks in 13 midwestern states. Talks between UPS and its striking 14,000 Teamster Union employees were resuming Tuesday but no talks were scheduled in the bus strike.

Carter running along

United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ronald Reagan, back in the saddle after his Texas triumph, hoped to beat President Ford in three GOP primaries today. Democrat Jimmy Carter said he already feels sure of winning his party's presidential nomination.

Carter told supporters at a fund-raising breakfast in Cincinnati he foresaw an "overwhelming victory in Georgia" today, expected to "do very well in Alabama," and had a "good prospect of doing well in Indiana."

Carter hoped to add these primaries and one in the District of Columbia today to his string of eight victories in 11 states since the last week in February.

"I intend to be president," he declared. "I feel sure I shall get the nomination."

Carter arranged to fly home to Plains, Ga., to vote in his state's primary.

While Ford stayed at the White House today, GOP challenger Reagan was on the campaign trail in West Virginia preparing for that state's May 11 primary.

Reagan replied to Ford's charges that his criticisms of the administration's military policies were alarmist.

"If I am alarmed over our defense policies and the fact that the U.S. is not sound defensively, he's right," Reagan told a news conference at Parkersburg airport. "We are no longer a defense leader in the world."

Both Ford and Reagan concentrated final efforts on Indiana and its 54 GOP delegates. Ford all but conceded Alabama and Georgia to Reagan, and said while he expects to win in Indiana, "we think the situation is critical and we're making a maximum effort" there.

In the early hours of voting in Indiana, the turnout appeared to be running at a pace close to the 38 per cent of the 1972 presidential primary.

Some areas reported light early voting, but officials said lines at polling places were expected to increase.

Cleanup off to giant start

Pampa's annual cleanup campaign got off to a record start Monday in Ward 1 where pickups will continue through Friday.

R.B. Cooke, public works director, said 22 loads were hauled to the city landfill. The usual first day average has been around 14 loads, he stated.

"This is the best first day ever," Cooke said, "and we hope it continues that way."

The clean-up trucks will be in Ward 1 the rest of this week and then move into Ward 2, east of Mary Ellen and north of Foster streets, next Monday morning.

Joe Gordon Sr.

Gordon to head Cowboy Hall board

Joe W. Gordon Jr. of Pampa has been elected president of the Board of Directors for the National Cowboy Hall of Fame and Western Heritage Center.

Gordon succeeds Joe Watt of Sheridan, Wyo., who was elected chairman of the Board of Directors.

The board serves the Cowboy Hall as the operating body and officially meet every other month to help guide the business and program decisions of the 17 state-owned nationally known shrines.

Five vice presidents also were named for a one year term. Those chosen include Gene Autry of Los Angeles; William G. Kerr of Norman, Okla.; Robert Norris of Colorado Springs; Harold Schaffer of Bismarck, N.D.; and H.A. "Dave" True of Casper, Wyo.

W.B. Ludwig of Laramie, Wyo., was elected secretary. C.A. Vose Sr. of Oklahoma City will be treasurer and J.D. Ackerman of Colorado Springs was selected as assistant treasurer.

Fed funds missing for sewage plant

By TEX DEWESE
Pampa News Staff

Mayor R.D. Wilkerson and City Manager Mack Wofford will go to Dallas Wednesday to see if they can find out when Uncle Sam is going to start paying his share of the construction cost for Pampa's new sewage treatment plant.

City Manager Wofford said today they will meet with representatives of the regional office of the Environmental Protection Agency at a 10 a.m. meeting to hear EPA's presentation of plans for making grant payments.

Total cost of the plant construction and modification is estimated at $145 million. The federal government is committed to pay 75 per cent of the cost under the grant allocated to the city.

Pampa had $400,000 available from a $300,000 bond issue and $100,000 left over from a sewage project in the 1960s.

The city manager said Pampa has already spent approximately $345,000 of that $400,000. The EPA requires that the city must spend its money first and the project must be 25 per cent completed before the federal government begins paying grant money.

Wofford said the plant now is better than 20 per cent completed and will be more than 25 per cent finished within the next 60 days.

"We have enough money in our fund to carry us on the project until July 1," he said, "but we are going to need money from the federal grant by that time."

The city manager said a June 1975 estimate called for the federal government to pay the grant in four payments of $233,000 each.

Wofford said the cost of the project to be borne by the federal government is $1,045 million. The city's share of the $145 million total is $400,000. "We hope they don't tell us

Where will money come from?

Locals respond to teacher salary survey

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

Homemakers, a waitress, farmers, ranchers, beauticians, a politician, and a career woman expressed concern in a Pampa News survey last week over a Texas State Teachers Association resolution calling for higher salaries.

"Where are we going to get the money?" was the most frequently answer.

The proposal by the TSTA, scheduled to go before the Texas Legislature, "at its earliest convenience" calls for escalating annual salaries from $14,000 to $28,000 for teachers with a bachelor's degree over the next 10 years; and from $15,000 to $30,000 for those with a master's degree.

The resolution asked from those with a doctorate to go from $16,000 to $32,000 with provisions for cost of living increases in every category.

Another concern voiced by 75 per cent of the Pampans interviewed was "Does Pampa need teachers with doctorates?"

"I certainly hope we don't get another superintendent with a doctorate," three women, who declined to be named, emphasized.

E.E. Simmons of 433 Yeager doesn't think there is a connection between teacher salaries and the quality of education in the schools.

He also said, in answering the question "Should teacher salaries remain what they are now?" that teachers must follow the inflationary trends.

He does not think Pampa teachers should receive more than the national average, and he favors cost of living raises for all teachers.

Only one of those interviewed said $8,500 was not enough for a beginning teacher.

Simmons said that $12,280 for a Pampa teacher with a bachelor's degree and over 13 years experience is "a minimum salary rather than a fair salary."

Unlike many others, he said the bulk of education costs should be paid locally rather than by the state.

As for the resolution itself Simmons said he hesitated to give an opinion.

"Again, it would be a matter of talking too much," he added.

Bill Tidwell, a Pampa businessman and a member of the Gray County hospital board, said:

"I definitely do not think teacher salaries should go higher for the time being. Neither should Pampa salaries be above the national level," she added.

She was not in favor of a cost of living raise for teachers "as long as they are clearing more than the average business man."

"I certainly think that the $8,500 Pampa minimum for a beginning teacher is adequate," she added.

She feels that $12,280 is "close" to a fair salary for a teacher with a bachelor's degree and over 13 years experience.

The bulk of education costs must be paid by the state, she commented.

"And that resolution is foolish," she emphasized.

She, too, said there should not be any employees in the Pampa Independent School District with a doctorate. "That's where you get over-educated professors," she said.

She said that the locals should pay their part of the education costs.

Mrs. Ray Wells of 1307 Charles, a waitress, says she is in favor of anything to help the teachers.

"Anytime they can get a raise I'm for it," she said adding that she has a daughter who teaches at Sabine near Gladewater.

"Teachers have to babysit with children," she said.

She, too, said $8,500 for a beginning teacher in Pampa is a fair salary.

When asked if teachers should get cost of living increases, she replied: "Yes, mam."

As for who should pay the bulk of education costs, she added that it should be the state.

Stan Friend, a wheat grower whose wife teaches, said teachers need to be paid "commencing with the training they have."

He doesn't think there is any connection between teacher salaries and the quality of education.

"To me they all want what they can get. Dedication of duty is out — it is not what it once was," he said.

As for teacher salaries, he feels that they are paid "plenty" here.

When asked if Pampa teachers should be paid more than the national average, he replied: "Why should they? It doesn't cost as much to live here as in many places."

"We all run around trying to make so much money we don't have time to spend it," he said.

He is in favor of cost of living increases for teachers, and feels that Pampa's beginning salary is sufficient. He defined the $12,280 annual salary for teachers with bachelor degrees and 13 years experience as "fair."

The state should pay for most of the education costs, he said.

"If teacher salaries go to $28,000 how are we going to pay it?" he asked. "Let's all stop and start teaching. Look, we're getting too many chiefs," he said.

He said he is concerned that the price of wheat is down and salaries are up.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Threat to freedom

The Twentieth Century Fund, an independent research organization engaged in policy studies, has been concerned about the balances between America's free press and the rights of individuals and institutions.

In 1967 a fund study, "Crime and Publicity," found reason to believe that the press was losing ground in its efforts to cover the courts. Another study issued recently, "Rights in Conflict," concluded that the restraints courts are imposing on the media area "a growing threat to freedom of the press."

Four major problems concerned authors of the study. More and more judges are forbidding the publication of news gathered outside the courthouse, excluding the press from court proceedings or forbidding reporting of trials and imposing gag orders on participants in trials. They also believe that the press lacks a method to appeal judicial arbitrariness quickly, which often means that a constitutionally invalid order continues past the point when news value of trials passes.

Appropos the last point, it is significant that nearly all gag orders are usually modified or rescinded by appeals courts — and the U.S. Supreme Court never has sustained one. The closest it came was when publication of the Pentagon Papers was restrained temporarily while the court considered the government's suit. However,

Justice Henry Blackmun currently is prohibiting the publication of evidence given in open court in a murder trial until the Supreme Court adjudicates the matter later this year.

Most conflicts between the constitutional guarantees of a free press and fair trial are not as dramatic, usually involving lesser murder cases, secrecy, court harassment of reporters and contempt citations. No matter how obscure they are, each involves a major right — freedom of speech and communications. Each also encourages more of the same.

Quite apart from the American citizens' right to know, the First Amendment also strives to assure that the adversary American system of justice is fair to both sides of a dispute and that no official is arbitrary and vindictive — in other words, a fair trial.

The Twentieth Century Fund concludes its most recent study of the press and courts with the contention that "courts can maintain the Sixth Amendment's promise of a fair trial as well as the First Amendment's promise of free speech and press by a general tightening up of procedures that stop short of forbidding publication or taking judicial proceedings underground."

That is a point worth further consideration.

Good news and bad

The nation's immediate hope for eased energy pressures has for the last few years centered on the untapped oil fields on Alaska's North Slope.

And now, according to an article in U.S. News and World Report, new rich strikes indicate potential production of double the proved reserves of 10 billion barrels of North Slope oil. In addition, there are staggering amounts of natural gas.

But the flow of oil began in mid-1977 and increase to two million barrels a day within a decade will carry a price tag in the same range as that of the imported oil on which we increasingly are dependent.

Alaska's vast energy resources will go far toward freeing America from the clutches of oil-rich nations abroad — but not all the way. And there is little indication of relief from spiraling energy costs.

The benefits of Alaskan oil should exceed even the bright promise of the North Slope fields and the pipeline project, but the search for other sources and energy alternatives cannot be abandoned.

Technological tith

The head of one of the nation's largest manufacturers of footwear has a sound idea to help the industry meet the challenge of foreign competition.

Herbert H. Schiff, chairman and president of SCOA Industrial of Columbus, has called upon members of the American Footwear Industries Association to pay one-half of one percent of their sales to be used for the development of "entirely new methods and machinery for the production of footwear."

The association represents more than 350 domestic manufacturers.

Failure to keep up with the technological movement in American industry has contributed to the problems faced by footwear manufacturers in recent years, says Schiff.

While the footwear industry has improved existing methods and machinery, "we haven't developed new and exciting machinery. We have reduced the number of operations to make a pair of shoes, but not enough to have impact on the price of the finished product," he says.

It still takes from 100 to 120 hand operations to produce a cement construction worker's shoe. Thus the import market has grown because foreign manufacturers tend to have an advantage of lower cost in a high labor content product.

Schiff's "technological tith" is a refreshing departure from the calls for import quotas or protective tariffs, which too often have been the immediate reaction of manufacturers facing tough foreign competition.

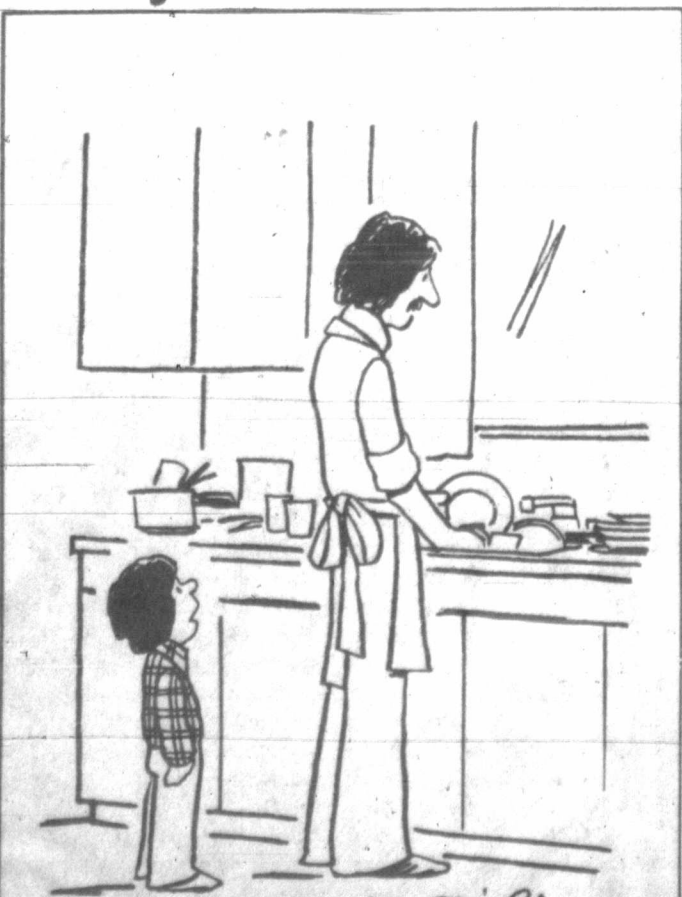

It was once thought that redheads were particularly good at making poisons.

In the English language, there are about 1,000 synonyms for intoxicated.

FUNDS FOR ISRAEL:

Issue that didn't have to be

By ROBERT S. ALLEN
WASHINGTON, April 28 — President Ford is in a dynamite-laden jam over funds for Israel, and he can thank Budget Director James Lynn for that.

Curious aspect is it was an unnecessary as potentially dangerous.

Even if the President wins, the political risk isn't worth the chance he's taking.

Winning could turn out to be a pyrrhic victory — with the President scoring on Congress but winding up with a rash of resentments and animosities that could deeply scar his personal credibility and political future.

Mystery is how and why Lynn became involved.

Background of the 49-year-old former Cleveland lawyer is not conducive to his playing key role in an issue as volatile and politically explosive as funds for Israel.

Prior to coming to Washington in March 1969 as general counsel of the Commerce Department, Lynn had never run for public office or held one. Since then, he has been Undersecretary of Commerce, Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, and last year President Ford switched him to head the Office of Management and Budget.

Throughout, his public career has been that of a high-placed bureaucrat, with a top salary, chauffeured limousine and sundry other perquisites.

Snort his irate bipartisan congressional critics. "Lynn has no constituency, never had, and doesn't know what that means. Yet he's throwing his weight around in the President's inner councils, and we have to take the rap."

Under the circumstances, their anger is understandable.

Baffling Reversal

The rap they are facing is wholly the result of a legislative snarl brought about by Lynn's backstage meddling.

With clearcut assurances from Secretary Kissinger that the administration would not oppose a $550 million grant for Israel, to cover the July 1-Sept. 30 transition quarter between the old and new fiscal years, the House and Senate decisively voted the money.

Then abruptly out of the clear blue, the President notified Speaker Carl Albert, D.-Okla., that unless this fund was eliminated, he would "be forced to exercise my veto" of the entire multi-billion-dollar foreign aid bill.

Not only is that unprecedented, but in cracking down on Congress, the President was also overruling his own august Secretary of State.

When asked about that, Kissinger hemmed and hawed and finally came up with a characteristic irrelevant explanation. "This is essentially a controversy between the Budget Bureau and the Israeli government."

Snapped Sen. Daniel Inouye, D.-Hawaii, Appropriations Subcommittee chairman. "Who are you kidding? This is a controversy between Congress and the administration — in the person of Budget Director Lynn, who somehow persuaded the President to reverse himself."

Despite the tough veto talk, significantly White House sources are hinting a compromise "is likely."

Jimmy Carter and big government

By Tom Tiede

PITTSBURGH — (NEA) — About this time a year ago, before Jimmy Carter became Jimmy Carter!, I visited the peanut farmer at his home in southwest Georgia.

He was then trying to convince the earless nation he was a presidential candidate, and I arranged to listen to the argument in between a morning date at a cockfight and an evening meeting with two Atlanta prostitutes who said they had information (they didn't) on the morals of some Watergate figures.

Carter was at the rear of his home — a nice but not sumptuous place of the suburban gentleman category. He had been clearing growth from a small woods, "holding back the jungle" as he put it. He was dressed in tan jeans and sneakers. And sweating. We retired to a kind of recreation room study — books on the walls and do-it-yourself vinyl tiles on the floor. At his wife's asking, he requested a Coke and I a Pepsi; it being Georgia we both got Coke.

It was a time when the image of Richard Nixon was still that of a dangerous man rather than a sexless vegetable. Only a few days earlier I had been told by another White House hopeful, North Carolina's Terry Sanford, that the power of the "imperial president" must be harnessed. But Carter would have none of the popular notion; in our form of government, he said, one man has to have ultimate responsibility, thus in effect ultimate control.

"If people want a softie for president," he added, "they shouldn't vote for me."

I suggested that his position might be abrasive to many, that people were increasingly worried about the government's muscle. He would not be swayed. Removing his sneakers to let the steam escape, he said people are not so much worried about strong government as inefficient government. "We used to see the government as our friend, something there to help us when necessary. Now many people find that it has become an impediment of sorts. I don't think they are angry at government's strength; they are angry at its weaknesses, its failures."

For instance, Carter said, one paramount government failure — or inefficiency — is its lack of vision. "We simply do not plan well." And then he told a story of meeting a high West German official at a cocktail party.

"He told me that in his country every possible eventuality is thought out and preparations made for it. If the price of oil goes up 5 per cent and the supply goes down 10 per cent, they have already mapped strategy as to what they can do. And they have it down in writing. We could do the same in America."

He said he did the same, actually, when he was Georgia's governor. He took office envisioning eight general goals and nearly 100 specifics. He said he democratized the government objectives, by bringing in citizens for advice and criticism, but the purpose remained: to expand governmental effectiveness. He said that even while he orchestrated his famed bureaucratic condensation (he reduced 300 state agencies to 22), he allowed the government to grow "considerably."

So it is that when I left J. Carter to his backyard jungle last spring, he had made it clear that he was not against big government, he was in fact for big government; it was worthless and weak government he condemned. He had talked of "planning" of "programs," of "reorganization of priorities," the latter especially synonymous with government strength. And I came away feeling he was an FDR with an accent, a new Dealer, a man like JFK who wanted to move the planets.

Now, one year later, as Carter has at last convinced the nation of his presidential chances, it is clear that he has yet to convince it of his philosophic fundamentals. He is projected as a Washington outsider, a conservative running against the government, and we take this falsely to mean he is aiming his lance at centralized power.

It's not that he's tried to deceive us. He's been consistent from the beginning: big government is necessary, good government is the argument. The only change I see in Carter in a year's time is a quaint one; I have in my notes of my early visit with him that he "seems too serious," and I remember in our long talk he did not smile much at all.

Capitol Comedy

The new $2 bill may cause problems with college graduates. They never learned to multiply by two.

Humphrey has his foot in the presidential door while Carter put his foot in his mouth.

Jackson found a way to keep his audiences awake. He hands out chocolate-covered No Doz pills.

Things are so quiet in Washington, you can hear some of the candidates' popularity polls drop.

The best things Ford has going for him are Betty and the Democratic spending programs.

Ford thought he had the right man to head the CIA but couldn't convince Sinatra to take the job.

The Pentagon is so confident its record budget will be approved, it's recalling the private chauffeurs for the brass.

Getting the House and Senate to agree on a bill is as uncertain as a mafia election result.

Since he did such a great acting job in Watergate, Nixon is dicker for the lead in "The Final Days."

Kissinger refused to let his aides testify before a House panel. They also speak with an accent.

Carter is trying to assure democrats there's no difference between liberals and moderates. He's been both.

Ford won't use the word "detente" anymore. It sounds too much like "de want."

Voters support Parr machine

SAN DIEGO, Tex. (UPI) — Duval County voters still showed support for the old George Parr machine in some Democratic primary races, according to delayed figures released Sunday night.

Indicative was the vote given Rep. Terry Canales, D-Premont, who introduced the impeachment resolution in the legislature that led to the removal of O.P. Carrillo as district judge after Carrillo split with the Parr faction.

Duval County voters gave Canales 1,744 ballots to 1,182 for Ernestive Glosbrenner of Alice and 1,129 for Jose Luis Ramoz of Hebronville. However, the late returns from Duval still had to be added to those from Jim Wells, Jim Hogg and Starr Counties to determine the eventual winner.

Glosbrenner was leading in Jim Wells while Ramoz and Canales were running close in Jim Hogg and Starr.

In another key race, Duval voters chose County Attorney Ricardo Garcia over Arnulfo Guerra, the crusading district attorney from Rio Grande City, by a vote of 3,356 to 1,385 in the district judge's race. Again, the Duval vote must be added to totals from Jim Hogg and Starr to determine the victor.

Guerra began the grand jury investigation that led to numerous indictments, convictions and removals of officials on allegations the corrupt Duval machine had looted millions of dollars from the public treasury.

In other major races, incumbent County Commissioner Ramiro Carrillo gained a runoff with F.H. Canales, although Carrillo is appealing a federal prison term for falsifying income tax returns.

Carrillo led Canales 514 to 388 in a four-man race.

Many observers believe the Carrillo-Canales runoff next month could be the real test of which faction will take control in the sifting of alliances since the late "Duke-of-Duval" George Parr committed suicide on April 1, 1975, while facing a federal prison sentence for income tax evasion.

It will be a major showdown between a leader of the Carrillo faction and Canales, who was regarded as a stalking horse to preserve a place for ousted Duval County Judge Archer Parr when Parr completes a seven-year federal perjury sentence.

Gilberto Uresti, appointed county judge by District Judge Darrell Hester after Parr man Dan Tobin was removed from office, also was forced into a runoff in a seven-man race.

Uresti received 2,101 votes to 1,122 for Pedro Trevino.

Incumbent Sheriff Raul Serna with 2,429 votes gained a runoff with J.F. Stockwell, who had 1,288 votes in a five-man race. It was such a late count that resulted in the famous Box 13 episode that gave the late Lyndon B. Johnson a narrow victory in a contested Senate election over former Gov. Coke Stevenson and won Johnson the epithet, "Landslide Lyndon."

Pampa final stop on state air tour

Pampa will be the final stop and climax city for the week-long All-Texas Air Tour next Oct. 9, it was announced today by Marvin Bidwell, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Aviation Committee.

Bidwell said he had been advised by Jerry Keith of Sunray, director of tour arrangements, that approximately 120 persons and 55 planes will arrive in Pampa for the tour's annual awards banquet.

The affair will mark the first time Pampa has been chosen for the final stop of the air tour which has included the city as one of its stops for a number of years.

Bidwell stated the committee will meet within the next few days to work out details of the banquet program.

Each year aviation enthusiasts from over the nation come to Texas for the all-state tour which starts in a downstate city and covers all major sections of the state.

Marijuana for side-effects?

ROCHESTER, Minn. (UPI) — The Mayo Clinic has begun a study to determine if marijuana can ease the bad side-effects of potent cancer-treating drugs.

Some 150 patients suffering from various gastrointestinal cancers will be involved in the study, which will not produce results for about a year.

Fifty of the patients will receive pills containing tetrahydrocannabinol, the main active ingredient in marijuana. Another 50 will receive conventional anti-nausea drugs and the other 50 will receive sugar pills.

The coded pills will be red and neither the doctors nor patients will know immediately who is getting the marijuana.

Nixon takes case to Supreme Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon took his case for the return of his papers and tapes to the Supreme Court Monday. He said a law that permitted seizure of the materials was "an unprecedented invasion" by Congress of presidential independence.

Nixon, while still president, had fought before the Supreme Court to keep his tapes private. He lost that fight and this is his first return to the high court.

The new battle is a challenge to the constitutionality of a law, passed after Nixon resigned, by which control and custody of the 42 million documents and 5,000 hours of tape of the Nixon presidency went to the government.

"It is difficult to conceive of a more intrusive form of control by one branch of government than dominance of the confidential, internal communications and files of a co-equal branch," Nixon said in asking the court to take jurisdiction.

The former president is contesting an order of a special three-judge court that said Nixon would suffer only minimal intrusion of his rights to privacy by having archivists decide which papers can be made public and which can't.

The law, named the Presidential Recordings and Materials Preservation Act, never went fully into effect because of legal actions initiated by Nixon and others. Congress has rejected two sets of proposed regulations for access to the materials and will await the decision of the Supreme Court.

Nixon's appeal argues mainly for those materials "most intimately connected with (Nixon's) personal and political activities while in office — including tape recordings of his conversations and some 200,000 other items personally prepared or reviewed" by him.

No one except representatives of the special Watergate prosecutor has had access to the voluminous file, recently moved to a federal storage facility near Washington.

Bentsen releases his six delegates

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen Jr., D-Tex., calling Jimmy Carter the obvious presidential choice of Texas Democrats, today released the six delegates pledged to his favorite son candidacy.

Carter Saturday rolled by Bentsen's bid for a favorite son candidacy in Texas primary. Of the 98 delegates available in the primary Carter won 92.

"I am releasing all delegates pledged to my favorite son candidacy, to make their own choice at the Democratic National Convention this summer," Bentsen said in a statement.

Bentsen said he hoped the six delegates support Gov. Dolph Briscoe as chairman of the Texas delegation and as leader of the Democratic party in Texas.

"It is my understanding that we did well in the precinct conventions, but it is obvious that Gov. Carter is the choice of the Democrats of Texas," Bentsen said.

Forest fire rages in Siberia

MOSCOW (UPI) — A freak early-May snowfall has helped fire fighters control raging forest fires in Siberia that were threatening numerous villages and the city of Chita, Soviet officials said today.

The May 2 blizzard "was greeted with great joy" by thousands of fire fighters brought in from various parts of Siberia to battle the blaze, one official told the newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda.

For three weeks fires, fanned by high winds, destroyed thousands of acres of forest and brush, officials said. The fire fighters were hampered by a lack of water, since most rivers and lakes in the region still are frozen.

Komsomolskaya Pravda said water was being flown in by helicopter.

No evacuations of local population had been carried out in Chita, a city of 175,000. But the newspaper said the pall of smoke hanging over the city was so thick that street lights were turned on at midday and pedestrians on the streets could barely see other persons 10 steps away.

The forest land is especially dry this spring, the newspaper said, because of lack of precipitation during the autumn and winter.

The Soviet government rushed thousands of workers from widely distant regions of Siberia to the Lake Baikal area to fight the fires raging through the Taiga forest around the world's largest inland sea.

Eritrean rebels release kidnapped Americans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Americans and a Briton were released by Eritrean rebels who kidnapped them in Ethiopia last year, the State Department announced Monday.

Steven Campbell of San Leandro, Calif., and James Harrell of Milwaukee were released in good condition in neighboring Sudan, said department spokesman John Trattner.

They were kidnapped last July 14 by an insurgent group known as the Popular Liberation Forces.

V.H. Burwood Taylor, the honorary British consul in Asmara, Ethiopia, seized last October by the rebel group, also was released, Trattner said.

Campbell and Harrell were working as civilian technicians at the U.S. naval communications facility in Asmara at the time of their kidnapping. They were employees of the Collins International Service Organization of Dallas.

Trattner said the release of the Americans follows many months of U.S. government intervention on their behalf.

he said he does not know whether any ransom had been paid.

Trattner said the release of the Americans follows many months of U.S. government intervention on their behalf.

Under questioning, he indicated the government had paid no ransom but that he could not rule out the possibility of a private transaction with the abductors.

"To the best of our knowledge, they were released unconditionally," Trattner said.

U.S. policy in such cases has been to refuse demands for payment of ransom.

A second Eritrean insurgent group kidnapped another American civilian technician, Ronald Michalke, last December.

Trattner said he hopes the release of Campbell and Harrell will be followed soon by Michalke's release.

In Dallas, Collins President Donald R. Beall said:

"I am very happy and relieved to hear of the release today of the Collins employees who were abducted by members of the Popular Liberation

Forces — PLF — in Ethiopia on July 14, 1975.

Our preliminary understanding is that... (they) were well treated by their captors and are in basically good health," he said.

"I want to thank the members of the U.S. State Department and the many others who worked so long and hard to secure the safe release of our employees."

"We hope that Ronald B. Michalke, another Collins employee who was abducted on Dec. 21, 1975, and now being held by the Eritrean Liberation Front, will also be released soon and in good health," Beall said.

Campbell's father, Len, left for Africa last month in an effort to obtain the release of his son.

Campbell had been seeking to negotiate with the rebels, who reportedly had been demanding $3 million.

Police report

Pampa police were called to investigate a hit and run, a deceased person, a theft and a criminal mischief complaint Monday.

Earl Berry Taylor of 400 S. Starkweather told police he walked into his house and found his wife, Letha Lula Taylor, laying across the bed dead. Nat Lunsford, acting coroner, was called and he tentatively ruled the death due to natural causes.

Mrs. Taylor had been under a doctor's care for high blood pressure.

A late model Buick was reported by Larry Beck of 701 Powell as the vehicle which backed into a stack of light fixtures near the First Baptist Church alley. The car then left. There was no estimate of damage as the lights are still in crates until they are installed.

Frank Skidmore of the Pampa Auto Center at 126 S. Houston reported that on Saturday a battery and a gas cap were taken from cars parked at the center.

A window at Baker

Elementary School was broken when a rock was thrown through it, according to Floyd Sackett, principal.

Four boys were reportedly seen running from Al's Surplus at 1900 Alcock, but entry into the building had not been gained.

Farris Glen Reeves of Pampa was stopped in the 200 block of W. Browning and a license check revealed he was driving while his license was suspended.

Terry Chumbley of 2418 Navajo found his car had been damaged on the right fender, right rear wheel and right front door. He said the car had been parked at Furr's Family Center, the Barret Baptist Church and the Central Park tennis courts before he noticed the damage.

Mrs. J.P. Turner of 108 Sunset reported to police that she had not given a tenant permission to switch beds in rental property which her husband owns. Turner had called police Thursday to report that a tenant had switched the beds before leaving the property and the tenant told officers that Mrs. Turner had approved the exchange.

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is having an affair with a widow who lives right across the street. When he passes her house, he blinks his lights and she flips her venetian blinds. They signal back and forth, and then he makes up excuses to get out of the house to meet her.

He says they're only good friends, but I know that she is man-hungry and not at all fussy who she goes with. I also know that she likes my husband. How should I put a stop to this?

JEALOUS

DEAR JEALOUS: You can't stop a man from blinking his lights or a woman from flipping her venetian blinds. If you think he is "blinking" for her and she is "flipping" for him, get them both together and have a truth-or-consequence session.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my in-laws: When I married their son (three years ago) I had a beautiful, 2-year-old daughter who had been born out of wedlock. Debbie never saw her "real" father, so the only relatives she has are mine.

My in-laws let me know from the beginning that they would never accept Debbie as their grandchild. (They even asked her to call them "Mr. and Mrs. Brown.")

This never bothered me much until I gave birth to Johnny, who is nearly 2 now.

Last Christmas my in-laws showered Johnny with expensive gifts signed, "With love from Grandma and Grandpa." Little Debbie got a cheap toy with a card, "From the Browns."

Abby, don't you think it's utterly ridiculous for one of my children to call my in-laws "Grandma and Grandpa," and the other "Mr. and Mrs. Brown"?

This situation is tearing me apart. What do you advise?

HURT IN BATON ROUGE

DEAR HURT: Where is your husband while all this is going on? If he puts up with it, shame on him. You have every right to avoid your in-laws and prevent them from seeing Johnny until they can treat both children equally. They are wrong, wrong, wrong!

DEAR ABBY: This is for OREGON MOTHER who complained because her adopted Oriental children attract so much attention wherever they go.

Human nature is the same all over the world, Abby. We are Americans living in Taiwan temporarily for business reasons. We have two children, 3 and 4 years old, and they have had about all they can take of having their cheeks pinched and their blond hair touched.

Crowds of giggling salesgirls and curious shoppers stare and point at them, and native youngsters peer around corners just to get a look at them.

At first my children sensed my annoyance, and they became upset, wondering what was "wrong" with them. But when I realized that their curiosity was natural and they didn't mean to be rude, I reacted good-humoredly and so did the children.

We enjoy Dear Abby in the Stars and Stripes. It's like a daily letter from home.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am very anxious to get started on an exercise program that will help protect me from a heart attack. I am 29 years old and consider myself out of shape, although I am not exceptionally fat or anything like that.

I need to know what kind of exercise I should do for my heart and lungs. What I really want are some specifics as to what I can expect from an exercise program, how I should start it and how fast I should increase my level of exercise. Should I start right out jogging, or what do you recommend? How should I judge how much exercise I am doing so that I won't overdo it and get into trouble? If you have any information on this area I would appreciate having it.

DEAR READER: You are wise to find out what to do before you start. Many a good exercise program has gone down the drain because the individual didn't have a clear idea as to what he could achieve with the program or how to go about doing it.

To give you a thumbnail sketch, the important principle can be put in two words, gradual and consistent. Start your exercise program by walking at a comfortable speed. Perhaps you can start off at 15 minutes a day unless you have been exercising quite a bit in the past. From there gradually build up until you are able to walk three miles in an hour comfortably and are able to do this day after day without undue fatigue. From this point on you can start introducing short periods of jogging steps followed by walking, being careful never to get yourself fatigued, until you are able to jog at a fairly steady pace. You can use your heart rate during exercise as a guide to how you are doing. I would certainly recommend staying under a heart rate of 140 beats per minute even at your young age. People in their middle 40s to 60 should probably stay at heart rates below 120 beats per minute during exertion.

These levels are considerably below the maximum heart rate that can be achieved and that's the whole purpose. The idea is to stay sufficiently below the level of your maximum capacity so that you don't really strain your heart and cause trouble.

One word of caution: do not race the clock. Remember it's not time that's important. You can jog comfortably at a rate that increases your heart and lung function to about 60 per cent of its maximum capacity and do an adequate job of improving your heart and lung function. The people who push the clock or race when they are not in good physical condition are the ones who get into trouble with exercise programs for their heart and lungs. Almost all known heart attacks and deaths associated with jogging are related to unusual exertion or efforts to increase speed as in racing a friend or the clock.

I'd like to recommend that you send 50 cents each for two Health Letters, number 1-11 and number 1-12. These are entitled Exercise, Heart and Circulation, Part 1 and Part 2. Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Polly's pointers

DEAR POLLY: Fine chain necklaces are fashionable but frustrating when they knot. I put a drop or two of salad oil on a piece of waxed paper and lay the knot in the oil. Then I pick at it with two straight pins. The knot comes apart quickly. Wipe all the oil off the chain.

Hands that have picked up the strong odor of fish, garlic, onions, etc. can be deodorized with a vigorous rubbing with damp baking soda and salt. Rinse and wash with soap. Campers who have no soda could use toothpaste.

When washing windows, either in the house or car, use up and down strokes on one side and side to side strokes on the other. If there are any streaks left you can tell where they are.

DIANA: DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with restaurants that are so dimly lighted that it is almost impossible to read the menu. I think the color and appearance of food is just as important as the taste, but in such places you cannot tell about anything. When there is a choice I always select a restaurant where I can see what I am eating. —RETA.

DEAR POLLY: I want to tell the lady who wants to cut foam rubber smoothly that I use my electric knife and get an extra smooth job. It is easy to cut up and down, sideways or in any direction. Also, when handling shredded foam for stuffing, shake a bit of talcum powder either on your hands or in the bag and it will not stick so badly. —MRS. A. T.

Aimbez- 'I don't compromise'

By Ellie Grossman
(First of Four Articles)

NEW YORK — (NEA) — "I started out with extreme styling that only 10 per cent of the population would buy but that's not what I want. If you're on Seventh Avenue you want to succeed as a manufacturer. Still, I don't compromise. You don't see a basic tailored shirt in my line or an A-line skirt because a woman has a thousand of these in her closet. She doesn't need me to design them for her."

What Gil Aimbez does dream up for the Genre label — at a maximum cost of $100 — are simple, innovative clothes, many cut square and loose. For summer, there are U-neck sundresses with toggles at the shoulder in crinkle cloth, wrap skirts, aprons, square sleeve big tops, trousers, shorts, jumpsuits and caftans in "no-colors" such as plum, apricot and yellow to meld with lots of other colors as well as the plaid he designed exclusively for them.

And there's his sense of humor. That harem jumpsuit in paper-thin cotton spreads out to the dimensions of a sheet. "You can wear it to the beach and use it as a blanket," he says.

He's a comer, this short, friendly 35-year-old. "People say to me, you're that old!"

And in the year and a half that he has been designing for Genre, his work has been featured in the magazines that matter and Women's Wear Daily. Three times in one week in the latter, although, he admits laughing, the last mention was to correct a caption attributing his clothes to someone else.

It hasn't happened quickly for the black-bearded man with glasses, high forehead and bulbous nose.

"I worked for 13 years in this business before I finally got to do what I wanted," he says. "I never felt the jobs I was offered gave me the chance to express myself fully."

When he came to New York from California, he put in his time as a pattern maker and assistant to Anne Klein and, later, to Carol Horn.

"Anne Klein taught me that as long as you design for the fabric you're working with you can design anything and it will be in good taste as well as seasonless."

And Aimbez believes in seasonless dressing. What you buy now can be worn months from now. The secret lies in layering.

"Layering is fun," he says. "Each piece goes on easily and was designed to work with others or alone. That's why layering isn't bulky. Proportion makes the art of layering. The armhole of a vest, for instance, must be cut longer than that of the shirt."

In the workrooms behind the showroom at Genre, where employees look up and smile, there are stacks of cardboard boxes labeled "Gil's ideas."

He has a library of books for stimulation and he considers what he does designing through clothes. "I conceive an idea, then look for a fabric to meet that design. This spring I did a motorman's coat, double breasted, with a drop shoulder, very soft in imported linen. It's part of my workman's compensation group — cotton-blend clothes in railroad stripes and it was inspired by a book from the 1900s."

"I like to mix patterns and all my things are designed to work together — stripes and floral prints, for example."

And they'd better be made properly because he won't compromise with execution. "I once sent back 365 shirts because I didn't like the way they were made. What you see in the showroom is exactly what you get in the stores. And if there are problems and we have to switch a fabric or something I insist on sending out letters."

One of 13 children born to a Filipino school-teacher and a Japanese mother in Los Angeles, he was a fussy child. "I didn't have much but I wanted it to look right. My mother used to tell me, if you don't like the way I iron your clothes, do it yourself. And I did."

In high school, one day he passed a classroom where fashion illustration was being taught and he was intrigued. "I wanted to join it, but the principal didn't know what to do. They'd never had a boy in there before."

But Aimbez got in and, at 16, won a scholarship to an art school. Contestants submitted designs anonymously, he says, and the sweet irony of it all was, "The judges never knew I was a boy."

THE WEEKENDER by Gil Aimbez for Genre requires no suitcase. Just wear it all — tunic jacket, zip front capped sleeve vest, basic pants, drop shoulder stand collar shirt.

Truman regains popularity

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The Watergate scandal prompted much of the new popularity for the late President Harry Truman because people yearned for a return to Truman's standards of honesty, according to the director of the Harry Truman Library.

Dr. Benedict Zobrist discussed the revival of interest in Truman in a speech during the weekend to the Women's City Club.

His speech marked the beginning of Truman Week in Kansas City, which includes such activities as the fourth commemorative luncheon and the unveiling of two statues of the 33rd President.

Zobrist said much of the new wave of Truman popularity began soon after the Watergate problems, when many citizens started to yearn for more plain speech and less under-the-table dealings. People began to remember the honesty and integrity Truman always showed, he said.

There was no double talk or lack of clarity in his chosen words, Zobrist said. "The more Watergate we had, the better Truman looked."

President Gerald Ford, one of Truman's biggest admirers, will come to Independence May 8 to help Margaret Truman Daniel dedicate and unveil a statue of Truman at Independence Square. Mrs. Daniel is the daughter of the former president and Bess Truman.

At noon on the day before — May 7 — the fourth annual commemorative luncheon honoring Truman's birthday will be held in the Muehlebach Hotel.

FBI Director Clarence Kelly, formerly Kansas City chief of police, will receive the Harry Truman "Good Neighbor Award" at the luncheon from last year's winner, Lt. Gen. Louis W. Truman, a second cousin to the late President.

Another statue of Truman, one sculpted by Rene Shapshak, world famous sculptor, will be unveiled at the luncheon. The Shapshak statue will stand in the rotunda of the new Truman Medical Center when it is completed.

A special table will be reserved at the luncheon for members of Battery D, Capt. Truman's battery in World War I.

Sadler to face Newton in RR commission runoff

DALLAS (UPI) — Staff-dipping Jerry Sadler, who faces Rep. Jon Newton, D-Beeville, in the June 5 runoff for the Democratic nomination for the Texas Railroad Commission, says he will keep his promise to keep Texas natural gas in the state.

Sadler, who once throttled a local lawmaker for criticizing his high-handed tactics, surprisingly led all contenders in Saturday's Democratic primary race for the powerful three-man agency which regulates the state's transportation and oil and gas industries.

Newton, backed by the petroleum industry and considered an energy expert in the Texas House, had predicted he would be in a runoff for the nomination to the powerful three-man agency. He is on the Governor's Energy Advisory Council and the Interstate Oil Compact Commission.

Newton, 34, spent more than $200,000 to get into the runoff and Sadler, 68-year-old former land commissioner and a former member of the railroad commission, relied mainly on name identification and spent $992.

"No sir, I wasn't surprised because I had been all over the state and I was convinced the oil companies couldn't buy an election," said the crusty East Texan who banned miniskirts and sideburns among his state employees. "My past record and years of experience in state government had something to do with it.

"I will make a qualified promise that I'll straighten out the mess that the oil situation is in and if necessary I'll shut it off (natural gas sales out of state) and keep it in the state. The first thing I'll do is stop the gas rate hike."

Rep. Lane Denton, D-Waco, a liberal supported by the Texas AFL-CIO who ran as the "consumers' candidate," finished third behind Newton. Denton had accused Newton and Houston attorney Terence O'Rourke of being bankrolled by the state's oil and gas interests.

O'Rourke, 28, who documented his frequent criticisms of the commission in technical booklets he called "The O'Rourke Report," finished behind Denton in the race.

Others who competed for the railroad commission seat vacated by the retirement of Ben Ramsey were Robert A. Wood of Pampa, a railroad commission employee, Rep. Dave Finney, D-Fort Worth, Woodrow Bean of El Paso, who claims kin to the legendary Judge Roy Bean of Texas frontier days, and R.R. Williams of Del Rio.

Finney got in the race early but apparently failed to generate the conservative support some expected. He campaigned on a six-point platform including a plan to eliminate "lost and unaccounted for gas" from the rate base of gas companies.

Bean, 58, who showed up for a press conference in the blue overalls and cap of a locomotive engineer, has advocated making the agency an appointive body, with members subject to removal by the governor.

Houston attorney Don Yarbrough surprisingly won the race for a vacant Supreme Court place. Yarbrough defeated veteran San Antonio Court of Civil Appeals Chief Justice Charles W. Barrow, who was favored 6:1 by a poll of the State Bar of Texas.

Court of Criminal Appeals Judge Truman Roberts defeated challenger, Dallas District Court Judge Jerome Chamberlain in his bid for the Democratic renomination.

W.T. Phillips, a Waco defense attorney, won a three-way race for the Court of Criminal Appeals seat vacated by the retirement of Judge W.A. Morrison. Phillips defeated state's attorney Jim Vollers of Beaumont and Carl E.F. Daly of Houston, a commissioner in aid to the court for five years.

Channing gave diamonds at barbecue

STONEWALL, Tex. (UPI) — Actress Carol Channing, dressed in a cowgirl outfit, tossed diamonds to a crowd attending a barbecue to raise funds for a memorial grove in Washington honoring the late President Lyndon B. Johnson.

More than 600 persons attended the barbecue Sunday and sang and danced along with the Fort Griffin, Tex., Fandangle and received diamond awards from Miss Channing for the $125,000 they contributed to the national memorial grove.

Lady Bird Johnson greeted guests from New York, California and across Texas for a "last roundup" of Johnson friends and admirers.

Music was provided by the Blue Belles, an all-girl country group from Nashville, and an array of colorful and historic flags welcomed guests.

Houseguests at the LBJ Ranch included the couples who originally suggested the memorial grove — Mr. and Mrs. Laurance S. Rockefeller, Mrs. Vicent Astor, Mrs. Charles Engelhard and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lasker, all environmental allies of Mrs. Johnson from New York.

Walt Matthews of Albany, Tex., a 74-year-old rancher who helped found the historic Fort Griffin Fandangle festival, brought the cast of 100 singers and dancers, a stagecoach, a covered wagon, 28 horses and six mules more than 300 miles from Albany for the performance.

Cliff Teinert's Texas Trails Chuckwagon of Albany dished up nearly 1,000 pounds of LBJ barbecue lunch cooked over an open campfire.

The crowd included many who served with LBJ in the National Youth Administration days and other "county and district men," as Mrs. Johnson put it, who helped her late husband in his 38 years in politics.

"My family and I thank all of Texas from the bottom of our hearts for so many years of good work together," said Mrs. Johnson.

A total of 31,000 Americans are blind from optic nerve atrophy alone, a disorder which accounts for 9.2 per cent of all cases of legal blindness. Each year 3,000 more people become blind from this disorder.

HUA KUO-FENG, China's newly designated prime minister, appears firmly in control following the recent demonstrations sparked by memorials to his predecessor, the late Chou En-lai. Hua has also been named first deputy chairman of the Communist party, apparently putting him in line as eventual successor to Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

American food chains alter Brazilian eating habits

By MARCLIPSHER
RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — It's a brightly lit corner luncheonette, a popular gathering place for young folks. A white-capped counterperson shouts his orders. Could be any fast-food stand in any American town.

But the orders are for "Dois cheeseburgers and dois milkshakes chocolates," or perhaps "dois sundaes." The young people are Brazilian. The luncheonette is Bob's in Rio's fashionable Ipanema district.

In its uniquely Brazilian interpretation of American fast-food operations, Bob's substantially altered Brazilian eating habits as it grew to a chain of 13 stores during 24 years of operation.

In the pre-Bob's era Brazilians took lengthy two-hour lunches. When they snacked, they ate meat pies or codfish balls.

Now, Bob's and its many imitators sell hundreds of thousands of hamburgers to busy Brazilians who eat 15-minute, stand-up meals — and apparently enjoy them.

Although owned now by a large American food conglomerate, Libby, McNeill & Libby, Bob's began as one expatriate U.S. entrepreneur's dream.

International tennis champ Bob Falkenburg came to Rio in 1946 to play in a professional match. Five years later, after winning at Wimbledon and retiring from the game, Falkenburg married a Brazilian and returned to Rio. He hoped to open a soft ice cream business in Brazil, a country where the product was unknown but where regular ice cream enjoyed great popularity.

"He had a heck of a time getting a franchise, so he finally bought his own machine and opened a shop in the Copacabana neighborhood," said Bill Maddox, Libby's general manager. Along with the ice cream, Falkenburg introduced hamburgers and cheeseburgers, new foods which Brazilians adopted eagerly.

Falkenburg retired in 1974, selling his stores to Libby which since has opened seven more.

"Brazilians accepted Bob's food right away," Maddox said. "They want to have open minds to accept new things and old things in new ways. They have a knack for taking the best things from Europe, Japan and the States and making them work."

And work it does. According to Bob's figures, the firm's chain of luncheonettes serves 600,000 hamburgers and 43,750 gallons of orange juice each month.

In order to maintain consistency of products, it builds its own ice cream and restaurant equipment, produces its own paper cups and launders its own uniforms and towels. Bob's also makes its hamburger patties, slices its ham and cheese and, of course, churns its now-famous soft ice cream, Maddox said.

Maddox, who worked for Ralston-Purina's Jack in The Box chain before coming to Brazil with Libby, said when he arrived he thought of changing the ordering system used by the mostly Portuguese counter employees — they shout the orders then slide on waxed concrete floors to pick them up and serve them.

"But the more I looked at the guys sliding back and forth and sort of singing, I saw it was a show the employees and the customers liked. So now we emphasize it in employe training courses," he said.

With the fast-food, hot dog-hamburger habit now a part of the Rio citizen's diet, Bob's plans to modify its service and attempt to break into the Sao Paulo market, Maddox said.

For other Americans planning to operate in Brazil, he had this word: Brazilians like their meat dry and lean, with only 12 per cent fat content. The 25 per cent fat content meat used in American hamburgers is not even available in Brazil, he said.

Parker Ranch, on the island of Hawaii, covers more than 300,000 acres, or about three-fourths the size of the island of Oahu.

EMMETT W. TEAKELL
SAN ANTONIO — Airman Emmett W. Teakell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Teakell of 920 Varnon Drive, has been selected for technical training in the U.S. Air Force munitions and weapons maintenance field at Lowry AFB, Colo.

The airman recently completed basic training at Lackland AFB, where he studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special instruction in human relations.

Airman Teakell is a 1974 graduate of Pampa Senior High School.

CECIL R. CANNON

DENVER, Colo. — Airman Cecil R. Cannon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willie G. Cannon of Route 1, Skellytown, has been graduated from Lowry AFB, Colo., from the U.S. Air Force munitions maintenance specialist course, conducted by the Air Training Command.

The airman, now qualified to inspect, assemble and dispose of explosive munitions, is being assigned to Andersen AB, Guam, for duty with a unit of the Strategic Air Command.

Airman Cannon is a 1975 graduate of Borger High School.

Mrs. Miller

Officers of the Horace Mann Elementary School PTA were installed during an afternoon assembly at the school Thursday.

Officers for the 1976-77 school year are Mrs. Joe Miller, president; Mrs. C.L. Farmer, vice president; Mrs. Davie Turner, secretary; Mrs. Joe Thompson, treasurer; Mrs. Charles Miller, parliamentarian, and Mrs. Roy Don Stephens and Mrs. Gary Graham, city council representatives.

The installation was conducted by retiring teacher Mary Reeves. The officers were elected at the March meeting.

INFLATIONARY impact of new contract won by President Frank Fitzsimmon's Teamsters has been questioned. Union and government spokesmen say the $1.65-per-hour plus fringe benefits settlement is "high" but not inflationary.

Some economists, however, warn the influence on union negotiations coming up later this year could push up food and manufacturing prices.

Owners get skirmish over sale of 49ers

By MURRAY OLDERMAN

SAN FRANCISCO — (NEA) — Since sports is now covered as the realm of high finance, let's delve into a particularly luscious example of the world of fun and games as big money business.

The recently publicized maneuverings to sell the San Francisco 49ers football team make good fun and games.

They can be had for a startling purchase price of $11 million — a veritable steal for a stable, well-stocked franchise in a desirable city. Especially since expansion teams in the National Football League cost $15.6 million.

Among the sellers was supposed to be Franklin Mieuli, the maverick owner of the Golden State Warriors who controls 10 per cent of the 49ers (5 per cent actually belongs to his divorced wife).

Franklin had taken a couple of weeks off to sail a new catamaran north from Los Angeles. After he docked in San Francisco bay, a document was thrust toward his gray-black beard with the admonition, "Here, sign." For his signature, Franklin would collect a million dollars.

In his absence, a deal had been secretly negotiated by the other 49er owners to sell the team to Wayne Valley, a founder and former co-owner of the Oakland Raiders.

But Mieuli, according to the 49ers partnership agreement, had a preemptive right to buy if he met the price set by any prospective buyer.

"If you want to sell the 49ers," he announced to his partners, "sell them to me." That's when the fun and games began in earnest.

The 49ers were founded in 1946 by Tony and Vic Morabito. Their widows, Josephine and Jane, respectively, remain the majority owners. Jane Morabito owns 25 per cent, Josephine (now Mrs. Raymond Fox) 30 per cent.

Dan Martindale Dan Guerra (3) and Steve Seeley. Tim Jones. Dennis Daughtery, Rob Hammer. Leading hitters: OCAW David McQueen. 2 hits. Moose Clayton Johnson. Darren Rice. Rob Hammer. 2 hits each.

Why do they want to sell?

The 49ers have had three straight losing seasons. Their season ticket is down some 14,000; season home attendance has dropped more than 116,000 since the 1972 peak of 852,676, which translates to a $1 million loss in actual revenue. Shrinking profits make shrinking owners.

Once before, in a similar situation, the 49ers had almost been sold, seven years ago, to the late Vince Lombardi and a businessman named Bud Levitas. The partners had all agreed, including Mieuli, but the deal fell through and the 49ers went on to win three division titles.

At their present depressed price, which is $7 million less than the publicized figure of $18 million, the 49ers are one of the great bargains of modern sports history.

Special cocidils to the sale make the basement figure possible. The present owners would receive, besides the $11 million, another $4 million in payments still being made by nine teams of the old American Football League to the 49ers (and also the New York Giants) as the price for merging with the NFL in 1966. Further indemnities might put another million in their pockets.

But the buyer would only have to fork over $11 million.

He would also inherit Lou Spadia, who is the president of the club and a 5 per cent partner, because Lou has a 10-year employment contract.

Valley understood this and was agreeable. If Mieuli bought the 49ers, Spadia's position would be considerably deflated. Spadia and Mieuli have not communicated since Franklin went from a straight arrow TV executive to free-style hippy attire, a beard, Sherlock Holmes double-billed cap — and also divorced his wife.

The Morabito ladies, whose own relations have chilled for the last couple of years, are reportedly not happy with Franklin either.

Mieuli says he would keep Spadia but use him only on the business side and away from the football operation. To keep the Morabito identity with the 49ers, Jane would also be permitted to buy 5 per cent.

Why does Valley, in his 60s and independently wealthy, want to buy the 49ers?

Because it still rankles him that he lost control of the Raiders to Al Davis in a legal suit last year. The prospect of owning a team right across the Bay from his old adversary is a savory one.

This is precisely one of the reasons Mieuli refused to sell out to Valley. Franklin is emotional. He has a deep affection for the 49ers as a San Francisco institution.

Enter now the influential presence of Commissioner Pete Rozelle of the NFL. Rozelle and Mieuli are old friends. For whatever reason, Rozelle wants to see the 49ers sold to Wayne Valley, too. He reminded Mieuli that a new owner must have 51 per cent of the club himself. Franklin, not as eccentric as most people think, can meet that stipulation, if only by selling the Golden State Warriors, of which he owns 96 per cent. (They're worth $8 million in today's market.)

Rozelle persuaded Mieuli to meet with Valley. After a two-hour session, Franklin emerged more fortified than ever he didn't want Valley to buy the team. In fact, he terminated the meeting by saying, "Wayne Valley, you can kiss off," and walked out.

Then he informed the 49ers by letter he was prepared to buy the team.

Negotiations to sell the 49ers — to anybody — suddenly stalled. Jane Morabito and 49er lawyer Marshall Leahy were off on a trip to the Orient and wouldn't be back for a couple of weeks. Spadia issued a terse announcement: "Talks with Wayne Valley on the purchase of the 49ers have been terminated." Beyond that, he wouldn't comment.

But Mieuli reasons the 49er partners are geared to sell. "They're already counting their money," he says. "Frankie Albert (the former coach who owns 5 per cent and could get close to a million) could build a lot of tennis courts." Another influential behind-the-scenes figure, Joseph Alioto, the former mayor of San Francisco and a prominent lawyer, has been reassuring Mieuli he has a perfect case for buying the club.

A source close to the 49ers has been quoted. "We will not sell to Franklin Mieuli."

Sandies club Harvesters, 13-0

By PAUL SIMS
Sports Editor

Amarillo High took advantage of three big innings, while pitcher Kym Sargent limited Pampa to no hits, as the Sandies clubbed the Harvesters, 13-0, in the District 3-AAAA baseball finale for both teams Monday at Optimist Park.

Pampa winds up its season with a 12-11 record, 3-2 in the second half of district play. Amarillo's season is not over — the Sandies must meet Tascosa, a 6-5 winner over Borger Monday, later this week for the district title.

Amarillo won the first-half championship with a 5-0 record, while Tascosa duplicated that record to capture the second-half crown.

The Sandies collected 15 hits in winning, including four in the first inning when they tallied four runs. Amarillo scored six runs on hits in the top of the third as they sent 10 men to the plate.

The big shot in the third was a three-run homer over the centerfield fence by Sandie catcher Mark Fox.

Amarillo rounded out its scoring with three runs in the seventh.

Pampa managed only four hits off pitcher Kym Sargent, who struck out seven and walked only one in winning his eighth game of the season without a loss.

Losing pitcher was Dave Edwards, who fell to 5-2 for the season, after giving up 10 hits and nine runs, all earned, in 22-3 innings. He walked two and struck out two.

Joe Davis pitched the remaining 4-1-3 innings and gave up five hits, four runs, two earned, while walking two and striking out none.

In only one inning, the second, did Amarillo not have any base runners. "They hit the ball real well," Pampa Coach Ronnie White said of the Sandies. "They wore us out, really. I didn't expect it to be that bad; they just got it all together."

"I don't know if we were ready to play, but our kids stayed at it — they didn't give up. I don't think."

Concerning the post-season playoff against Tascosa, White said, "I think Amarillo should win it. They've got a better team overall, better hitting and defense. They've got more pitching, not better pitching than (Ricky) Baker (Tascosa's ace) but more pitching."

Pampa won only one of five district games in the first half but bounced back to contend for the second-half championship.

For that, White was satisfied. "I think we could've won some more ball games than we did, but I was real pleased with the attitude of the kids," White said. "We were real close in a few games."

Lead American West

Rangers whip Red Sox

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — Who are these guys in the Bicentennial colors of red, white and blue, peppering the stands with homers, leading the American League West, and acting like Abner Doubleday was their manager?

It's the Texas Rangers, a brash and youthful group who obviously have no respect for their elders — in this case the American League champion Boston Red Sox.

The Rangers, generally picked to finish as the back of the pack behind Oakland and Kansas City in their division, swept Boston in a four-game series that left the Red Sox in a daze, wondering where all the magic had gone.

The Rangers Sunday's 6-3 come-from-behind victory like they had just whipped Cincinnati in the World Series.

They exchanged hundreds of handshakes, spent almost an hour watching the replay of the game on videotape, slapped backs and did everything but break out champagne and let the air out of the tires on the Boston team bus.

"Incredible and unbelievable that this team would sweep somebody like Boston," said Manager Frank Lucchesi. "Just listen to those guys out there. And you don't think they're for real?"

Even the fans extracted their pound of flesh. Some 24,000 beer-swigging, sun-tanning fans turned out in bright sunshine Sunday and a courageous group of pipefitters from Boston tried to urge their team on.

"They made a mistake of carrying around a sign boasting Boston onto another pennant and were met with showers of ice, popcorn boxes and beer."

"Mercy, these Texas fans are starting to get serious about their baseball," laughed one Boston writer.

NBA relaxes hardship rule

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Basketball Association has relaxed its hardship rules for college and high school players who wish to be drafted by the NBA, it was announced Monday by league Commissioner Larry O'Brien.

Under the ruling, which is part of the recent Oscar Robertson and collective bargaining settlements, any player whose high school class has graduated, may make himself eligible for the draft by renouncing his collegiate basketball eligibility.

The ruling is effective immediately.

Beginning with the 1977 draft, any player who wishes to become eligible for the NBA draft will have to give the league written notice renouncing his collegiate eligibility at least 45 days before the scheduled date of the draft.

For this year's draft, scheduled to be held June 8, an exception is being made to permit players to give written notice until May 10.

All players who previously have made hardship applications to the NBA for this

Bass tourney postponed

CANADIAN — The Jaycee-sponsored bass tournament Sunday at Lake Marvin was called off five hours after the start when lake waters became too choppy to continue.

year's draft and have not withdrawn them 24 hours prior to the draft will be deemed eligible and will not have to give further notice.

Previously, such players had to fill out hardship forms, and the NBA would carefully scrutinize their financial needs before declaring them eligible — or ineligible — for drafting.

Last year, for the first time in its history, high school players were picked in the draft — Darryl Dawkins from Maynard Evans High in Orlando, Fla., by the Philadelphia 76ers, and Bill Willoughby from Dwight Morrow High in Englewood, N.J., by the Atlanta Hawks.

Pampans win regatta races

LAKE MEREDITH — Three Pampans won Sunday in the Amarillo Yacht Club's first regatta of the season here.

Kay Fancher, commodore of the club, was first in the mixed keel boat division, Dr. Robert Loerwald won the Catalina 27 feet championship and Walter Colwell captured the Santana 22 feet title.

Because of strong winds, centerboard races were not held.

Some teachers worth twice, some half

By JEANNE GRIMES
Pampa News Staff
A Texas State Teachers Association resolution to increase beginning teacher salaries from $8,000 to $14,000 elicited some candid remarks by state politicians who answered a TSTA questionnaire on the 75 per cent salary hike. Resolution backers may not have appreciated all of the replies, however. The answers were published in the April 1976 issue of "Texas Outlook," TSTA magazine. The resolution, adopted at a statewide meeting in Ft. Worth March 11-13, would "place all Texas teachers' salaries above the national average; establish a beginning salary of $14,000 for a teacher with a bachelor's degree and a maximum salary of $28,000 to be achieved in 10 years. Recommended salary range for teachers with master's degrees was $15,000 and a maximum of $30,000 in 10 years. Doctorate holders would start work at $16,000 and achieve their maximum of $32,000 in 10 years. Included would be an annual cost-of-living salary adjustment and the TSTA urged that "this legislation be sought from the Texas Legislature at the earliest opportunity."

Shamrock Democrat Phil Cates, responding to "Is $8,000 a year a realistic salary for a beginning teacher with a bachelor's degree, compared with educator's professional responsibilities and required training?" wrote: "No, it's too high if $600 a month is realistic for competent, honest state legislators." The same answer was given to "Is $11,780 a year a realistic salary for a teacher with a bachelor's degree and over 15 years of experience, compared with educator's professional responsibilities and required training?"

Bruce Watkin Barrick, a Lubbock Democrat, answered that $8,000 a year was not a realistic starting salary, but to the second question he wrote: "Those who have been teaching 15 years should have obtained, or be close to obtaining, a higher degree than a bachelor's."

Another Lubbock Democrat, Xen Harris Oden, wrote that he considered "the $11,780 salary fair because 'a professional needs revitalization and re-education. After 15 years, one should have gone beyond a bachelor's degree.'"

An Odessa legislator responded "Teachers should be paid an equitable salary for their educational level and hours worked."

"A teacher with 15 years experience should have the foresight and energy to obtain a master's degree," answered an El Paso legislator.

Another candidate wrote "Some teachers are worth twice the figure quoted; some are not worth even half. More realistic increments need to be incorporated for experience."

A Dallas politician answered that while he has always supported higher salaries for teachers, he favored "getting rid of lazy, unqualified teachers."

Responding to "Do you believe there is a correlation between quality education and teacher salaries?" one candidate observed that teacher salaries in New York are 60 per cent higher than those in South Dakota, yet students' educational attainment is "much higher in South Dakota."

Another of the 39 questions was "Do you support raising teacher salaries to a position above the national average and appropriating necessary funds?"

"This is a ridiculous question and a strong indication that whomever posed it is only interested in money and has absolutely no interest in education."

However, despite these detractors, candidates responded favorably to the six questions dealing directly with the issue of teacher salaries.

The questions and responses were: "Do you believe there is a correlation between quality education and teacher salaries?" — 166, yes; 13, no, and five no reply or other.

"Do you support keeping teacher salaries at their present level?" — 10, yes; 154, no, and 13 no reply or other.

"Do you support a cost-of-living formula to be included in the state's compensation plan?" — 140, yes; 26, no, and 18 no reply or other.

"Do you support raising teacher salaries to a position above the national average and appropriating necessary funds?" — 109, yes; 43, no, and 32 no reply or other.

"Is $8,000 a year a realistic salary for a beginning teacher with a bachelor's degree, compared with educator's professional responsibilities and required training?" — 36, yes; 134, no, and 14 no reply or other.

"Is $11,780 a year a realistic salary for a teacher with a bachelor's degree and over 15 years of experience, compared with educator's professional responsibilities and required training?" — 20, yes; 153, no, and 11 no reply or other.

'Anything they can get'

like a lot of money. Another commented that it has become too easy to become a teacher the marked is now "flooded with unqualified teachers who are not dedicated as teachers once were."

Darlene Drinnon of 1913 N. Summer said the resolutions sound like a lot of money and she doesn't think teacher salary and quality is necessarily connected.

"A teacher can have a lot of education and still not be able to teach students," she said.

As for Pampa salaries she said, "They are okay." As for cost of living raises she said she thought teachers should have that.

"I'll be fair," she said. "She doesn't think the $12,280 is enough for a teacher with 13 years experience. The state should bear the bulk of the expense, she said.

"That's too much money," she added when asked her opinion of the resolution from the TSTA.

Gayla Summers of 1012 S. Nelson, a housewife, said one could teach for years and still not be able to "teach the children anything."

"I don't think salaries have anything to do with teacher dedication," she added.

As for the salary of Pampa teachers, she said a teacher who is head of a household would have to hold two jobs in order to support his dependents.

She isn't in favor of Pampa teachers being paid more than the national average.

However, she says that Pampa's beginning minimum is enough.

As for $12,280 being an adequate amount, she said that depends on competence. "But who's going to decide who is competent?" she continued.

The state should pay the bulk of the costs, she added.

Several others were interviewed who declined to be named. Most said the TSTA resolution "is completely out of line."

GOP to operate Reagan offices

The Ronald Reagan headquarters in Pampa at 205 E. Kingsmill will now be operated as the Gray County Republican headquarters, according to the announcement by Joe Curtis, 31st District Republican Committeeman.

A formal opening of the headquarters is scheduled later, officials said.

Judge imposes fines, jail sentences here

Jail sentences and fines were imposed in Gray County Court Monday after five persons entered guilty or no contest pleas before Judge Don Cain.

Glen Edward Black, 18, of Pampa pleaded guilty to two charges of driving with license suspended and a charge of resisting arrest.

He was fined $25 and $50 respectively on the DWLS counts and ordered to spend 72 hours in county jail — which he had already done. He was fined $100 for resisting arrest.

Court costs on each charge was $53.

Johnny Plaseenico, 21, of Pampa pleaded guilty to driving while intoxicated and was fined $200 and granted a six month probation term.

Arthur Louis McCampbell, 31, of Pampa received the same fine and probation term after pleading guilty to DWI.

Tall Cleve Berryman Jr., 48, of Pampa pleaded no contest to charges of driving with license suspended. He was fined $50 plus court costs and given credit for the 72 hours in jail he had already spent.

Sam Smiley Jr., 62, of Pampa pleaded no contest to DWI charges, and was fined $200 and granted a six month probation term.

HARD HIT by withholding of federal matching funds for presidential campaigns, Democratic contender Rep. Morris Udall accuses President Ford of "aiding and abetting" congressional delay in constituting the Federal Election Commission and its fund-distribution authority.

DRUG BILL ORADELL, N.J. (UPI) - A survey by Drug Topics magazine shows that while drug stores filled fewer prescriptions last year than in 1974, the price of the average prescription rose sharply. Part of the reason for the prescription decline was attributed to the recession, which forced patients to reduce medical expenses. The price of the average prescription rose 7.2 per cent from the year before and the nation's total prescription bill came to around $7 billion, the magazine says.

BAN EXPECTED CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) - The Arthur D. Little research consultant firm has advised its clients who produce aerosols that a ban on the use of fluorocarbons in aerosols can be expected within two or three years. The possibility of a ban is greater than many companies realize and it may become effective more quickly than generally believed, the firm says. Fluorocarbons are suspected of depleting the protective ozone shield around the earth, thus increasing the possibility of skin cancer.

Teague at sea on Schorr

By BILL CHOYKE
Pampa News
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Rep. Olin Teague has a pat answer when asked what he thinks the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, on which he sits, should be doing with the Daniel Schorr case.

"What would you do?" he replies.

When the College Station Democrat recently asked some editors in Dallas that question, he was surprised at the response. "I didn't get the answers I thought," he recalled. "They were more anti-Schorr than I expected."

Teague's committee, known as the House ethics panel, is currently grappling with the case involving Schorr — the television newsmen who admitted to forwarding a leaked copy of the House Intelligence Committee report to a New York City newspaper. Recently, the House voted the committee of six Democrats and six Republicans $150,000 for the probe.

The Schorr inquiry is only the fourth formal investigation by the committee since its inception in 1968. To date, none has been completed. Two were aborted after the Justice Department took action against the subjects. A third was abandoned because of a technicality.

By most accounts, the committee has tallied a lackluster record. It's generally agreed that it adequately handles one responsibility — storage of financial disclosure statements. But critics note it has failed to seriously investigate allegations lodged against congressmen or Capitol Hill aides.

John Gardner, chairman of Common Cause, charges the ethics committee has helped perpetuate the "buddy system at its worst." Rep. Alan Steelman, a Dallas Republican, observes that to ask the committee to investigate another congressman is like inviting the "fox to guard the hen house."

Teague disagrees. No defends the committee and thinks it can effectively oversee the actions of other lawmakers.

"I violently disagree with that — that we don't do anything," Teague says. "Not all of what we do is in the press. And I don't think it should be."

However, when pressed to give an estimate on the number of informal inquiries the committee has undertaken, Teague fails to respond. A committee aide also declines to report how many probes the panel has conducted privately over the past eight years.

The ethics committee was asked earlier this month by Common Cause, a national citizens' lobby, to investigate the conduct of Rep. Robert Sikes, D-Fla. The New York Times and others have reported that Sikes used his legislative position to his own financial advantage on some Florida land deals. A formal complaint was filed by the group against Sikes after informal proddings failed to prompt an inquiry.

Teague said personally he would rather not have the ethics committee look into the Schorr matter. While he condemns Schorr's action, he just doesn't believe that the committee's work will be fruitful.

Teague could not explain why the committee did not investigate Sikes months ago, after the initial reports by the New York Times. He said he had heard second-hand reports of Sikes' improper conduct but that nobody presented the committee with any hard facts.

Gardner said he wrote to all members of the committee last summer outlining the charges against Sikes. But Teague does not recall receiving any such letter. He does remember, however, that "about two, three or four months ago" Sikes approached him and said: "If this thing takes official notice, I want to talk with you."

The Texas Democrat said Sikes added that he had "nothing to hide."

It's that type of potentially cozy relationship that makes Dallas congressman Steelman, among others, argue that an independent body should be established to hear complaints against congressmen and their aides.

"We need some independent body created, something like the Federal Election Commission (which oversees election matters)," said Steelman. "It needs to be independent of Congress."

"I feel a bit inhibited taking an action against a colleague," Steelman, a candidate for the Senate, added. "And, I feel most of us here feel that way."

Butz welcomes more grain sales

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz said today he would welcome more Soviet purchases of American grain and predicted that even with such sales American food inflation would be cut to 3 or 4 per cent this year.

The reduced inflation forecast, which Butz said would materialize if farmers get average weather this year, compares with food price increases of 8.5 per cent last year and 14.5 per cent in each of the two previous years.

Butz attributed his prediction to heavy farm supplies and a decline in grain prices from last year's levels. He said the slowdown in food advances means food "will not be a political factor" in this year's presidential campaign.

Butz, at a news conference following a three-week global trade tour, offered his new forecast of the lowest food inflation rate since at least 1972 after questioning about a new round of Soviet grain orders during his absence last week.

Soviet buyers placed orders for an additional 4.3 million metric tons of American wheat and corn. This pushed sales from the American 1975 crop to 16.2 million tons and posted 1.9 million tons in sales for delivery from the 1976 crop under a five-year trade agreement which takes effect next fall.

Officials earlier had indicated the Russians could buy up to 17 million tons from the 1975 crop but would be required to consult with the government before going higher.

Butz said today he thinks there is a "likely prospect" of additional sales "and my personal attitude would be very favorable if they want to buy beyond 17 million tons."

So many people moved out of Fort Worth, Tex., during the "Panic of 1873" that a young lawyer wrote a newspaper saying the city was so dead he had seen a panther lying asleep and unmolested in the main street. This caused the fire department to adopt a panther cub as its mascot.

Fast food nutritious

CHICAGO (UPI) — The fast food fare of children — cheeseburgers, French-fries and milkshakes — may "stand up pretty well nutritionally," according to a report in the April issue of the American Journal of Diseases of Children.

Dr. Laurence Fineberg, a pediatrician at Montefiore Hospital and Medical Center in New York made a study of caloric, vitamin and mineral content of the typical teen-ager menu and published it in the AJDC, a scientific publication of the American Medical Association.

There, a couple of glasses of whole milk and some leafy vegetables once a day would make up the difference, he said.

Fineberg's study confirmed similar findings by the Consumers Union, he said.

"While one would not recommend a diet consisting solely of such meals, when eaten occasionally, even once a day, they are in our opinion in no way unreasonable," he said. "They may even stand up pretty well nutritionally."

Judge urges fight for freedom of press

NEW YORK (UPI) — Freedom of press rights under the Constitution are being challenged by every branch of government, according to the government affairs committee of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

"So constant and pervasive was the onslaught that Federal Judge Harold R. Medina felt compelled to exhort the press to 'fight like tigers' to preserve those constitutional rights," the committee said in its report to the 90th annual ANPA convention opening today at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

Medina, senior judge of the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, will speak on the free press-fair trial issue Wednesday.

"From every branch of government — executive, legislative and judicial — came challenges to First Amendment rights of press and public," the committee said. Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld and former presidential candidates Barry Goldwater and George McGovern also will address the convention.

The ANPA, with a membership of 1,166 newspapers, also will hear reports on press freedom, reader confidence, newsprint costs, labor relations, technology, newspaper production, advertising lineage, tariffs and postal regulations and broadcast and CATV ownership.

Rumsfeld, former White House assistant to President Ford, will address the convention at a Wednesday luncheon.

Sens. McGovern and Goldwater will ask questions on press coverage of political campaigns during a Wednesday news-conference-in-reverse on "Can Newspapers Be Fair to Candidates?" Fielding questions will be Rod W. Beaton, president of United Press International; Wes Gallagher, Associated Press president and general manager; Washington Post Publisher Katharine Graham; and Otis Chandler, publisher of the Los Angeles Times. The session will be moderated by Frank J. Daniels Jr., publisher of the Raleigh (N.C.) News & Observer and Times.

Frederick W. West Jr., president of Bethlehem Steel Corp., will discuss "American Economics and Financial Reporting — Its Strengths and Weaknesses" Tuesday morning.

Jack's beef act passes

Congressman Jack Hightower Monday announced final house approval of the Beef Research and Information Act which he co-sponsored.

The conference report on the bill (HR 7656) passed by a margin of 200 to 170 and is expected to clear the Senate with no difficulty.

The victory today was especially satisfying, Hightower said. "It represents an accumulation of several months of hard work by individuals, agricultural organizations and a majority of the house agricultural committee."

Hightower singled out Charles E. Ball of Amarillo, executive vice president of the Texas Cattle Feeders Association, and O.J. Barron Jr. of Spur, chairman of the Beef Development Task Force, as two constituents who played important roles in helping getting the measure enacted.

The bill was approved initially by the House of Representatives Oct. 2 and by the Senate Dec. 15 when the House voted overwhelmingly to recommit the conference report to conference by a vote of 263 to 112.

Hightower said that the only difference in the bill by organized consumer groups and last recently by various labor organizations. The bill as approved recommends that the secretary of agriculture name five advisors to the board. Hightower said the bill was not a government handout but provided congressional affirmation to the concept that the beef industry should have opportunity to help itself.
