

CIA nears 'domestic secret police' stage

By DAVID C. MARTIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Taking a step toward the dangers of a domestic secret police, the CIA amassed files on thousands of Americans, including information gathered by electronic eavesdropping, mail opening and undercover agents, a Senate staff report said today.

Operation CHAOS began in response to demands from Presidents Lyndon B. Johnson and Richard M. Nixon to uncover any foreign influence behind domestic unrest. It continued despite repeated findings that disturbances at home were not controlled or financed from abroad, the Senate report added.

The 52-page document, which revealed few new details about Operation CHAOS, provided extensive descriptions of three related projects — MERRIMACK, RESISTANCE and Project 2.

MERRIMACK began in 1967 as an effort to infiltrate dissident groups in Washington, D.C. to obtain advance information about demonstrations against CIA facilities. Using construction workers and tradesmen as part-time agents, MERRIMACK was gradually expanded to include "any information about the plans and attitudes" of such groups as the Women's Strike for Peace, the Washington Peace Center, the Congress of Racial Equality, and the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee.

In some instances, photographs were taken and persons were followed to their homes, the report said. MERRIMACK, which by the CIA's own testimony exceeded the agency's legitimate security interests, lasted until September 1970.

RESISTANCE, which lasted from 1967 to 1973, compiled information about radical groups around the country, particularly on campuses, the report said.

The project developed an estimated 600 to 700 files consisting mainly of newspaper clippings but also including information from confidential sources in the local community such as campus officials and police authorities, according to the report.

Project 2 began in 1970 as a separate operation in which agents entered American universities in preparation for undercover assignments abroad.

Information gathered from all three projects went into a computerized index of some 300,000 American names kept by Operation CHAOS.

CHAOS, which kept separate files on an estimated 7,500 Americans, also relied on information supplied by its own agents, CIA field offices in the United States and abroad, the agency's mail opening program, the FBI and the National Security Agency, the report said.

At least a score of CHAOS agents participated in radical activity here as part of their preparation for assignment overseas, the report said. "In the process, they supplied detailed information on domestic activities of Americans."

Agents, CIA field offices in the United States and abroad, the agency's mail opening program, the FBI and the National Security Agency, the report said.

Today's race crucial for Ford

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
The weather was as uncertain as a political prediction as the first voters appeared at the polls in today's primary election in Maryland, while in Michigan cool weather kept voter turnout mostly light.

In Maryland, the sun peeked through the clouds intermittently, and the early turnout in Baltimore after polls opened at 7 a.m. EDT was reported above normal.

However, the forecast was for afternoon showers, and officials said this might cut into voting, which the state Board of Elections had predicted would be a record, partly because of the hotly contested Democratic presidential race.

In Michigan, the turnout was reported light in Detroit and in one Upper Peninsula area, but heavy in President Ford's home town of East Grand Rapids.

A close associate of the President predicted on Monday that Ford would win in Michigan, reversing his string of defeats by challenger Ronald Reagan. It's thought that another loss, in Ford's home state, would heavily damage the President's campaign.

Jimmy Carter has said he is "absolutely" sure of winning the Democratic nod on the first ballot even if he loses in Michigan and Maryland.

His main competition is Arizona Rep. Morris Udall in Michigan and California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. in Maryland. It is Brown's campaign debut, and Udall has said he will continue campaigning even if he loses.

In Michigan, Republicans will choose 84 convention delegates and Democrats 133.

The Detroit vote in the opening two hours was 18,165, compared with 29,441 at the same hour in the 1972 presidential primary. City Elections Director George Dunbar blamed the weather.

"It is quite cool out there," he said, noting early morning temperatures of near 50. "This may have held the vote down and they will be out later in the day."

Skies were sunny in Detroit and over most of the state, with temperatures generally in the 40s or low 50s.

In East Grand Rapids, City Clerk John Welsma forecast that 6,000 of the 8,000 voters would cast ballots. Voting was reported average to brisk in adjacent Grand Rapids, where there are 118,450 voters, and even stronger in the city's suburban areas.

The area sent Ford to Congress in every term starting in 1948 until he rose to the vice presidency and then the presidency.

In the lightly populated Ironwood-Gogebic County area in the state's Upper Peninsula, a check showed only five persons voted in Ironwood in the first hour, while the nearby community of Bessemer reported only one or two votes in each of its five wards in the opening hour.

The Democratic race in Michigan has centered on Carter, Udall and Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace. Others on the ballot are Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington, former Oklahoma Sen. Fred R. Harris and Sargent Shriver — all of whom have ceased active campaigning — and antiabortion candidate Ellen McCormack.

In Maryland, the Republicans will choose 43 delegates and the Democrats 53.

In addition to Carter and Brown, the candidates there include Udall, Jackson, Wallace, Harris and Mrs. McCormack, but Brown and Carter, the former Georgia governor, have been the focus of the race.

Polls close at 8 p.m. EDT in both states.

Reagan's national campaign chairman, Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., said Monday that a Reagan victory in Michigan "would be tantamount to a nomination" for the former California governor.

He said such a victory "is still very much a long shot, but added: "political lightning may strike."

Ford has lost five of the last six primary contests to Reagan.

In weekend campaigning, Ford called the contest crucial and Laxalt said that if the President lost, the defeat would "strain the President's credibility" as an electable candidate.

Former Defense Secretary Melvin Laird, a long-time political adviser to Ford, said Monday night that the President would win 61 per cent of the Michigan vote.

Carter, with 603 committed delegates, is well in front of his nearest Democratic rivals, and he said Monday that neither the Maryland nor the Michigan primary was vital to him.

But in Maryland, Brown's intensive campaigning across the state has turned a potential runaway Carter victory into a close contest.

Longtime Pampa educator Aubrey Joe Page, 49, of 1103 E. Harvester, died this morning at Highland General Hospital.

Mr. Page, principal of Austin Elementary School since 1972, was a native of Wheeler and graduated from Lefors High School in 1944.

He entered the Marine Corps after graduation and later earned bachelor of science and master of education degrees at West Texas State University in Canyon.

Mr. Page married Marilyn Witt in 1952 in Canadian and they moved to Pampa in 1953. He has been with the Pampa Independent School District since that time.

In 1959, Mr. Page succeeded Aaron Meeks as principal at Lamar Elementary School, before accepting the Austin post in 1972. He was a member of the First Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Page was also a member of the Texas State Teachers Association, the National Education Association, and the Texas Elementary Principals and Superintendents Association.

Funeral services will be 3 p.m. Wednesday in the First Presbyterian Church with the Rev. Mert Cooper of Canadian officiating. He will be assisted by the Rev. Norman D. Dow Jr., pastor. Interment will be in Fairview Cemetery by Carmichael-Whitley Funeral Directors. The casket will remain closed at the service.

In addition to the widow, Mr. Page is survived by two daughters, Jo Lyn Page of the home and Iris Lee Page of Pampa; two sisters, Mrs. Marvin Cooper of Pampa and Mrs. W.L. Pevey of Lovington, N.M.; one brother, Amos of Quanah, and two grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be to Abraham Home in Canadian.

All schools in the Pampa Independent School District will be dismissed at 2 p.m. Wednesday according to superintendent Dr. Dan Long, so Mr. Page's friends might attend the funeral.

Long paid tribute to the principal saying, "The greatest thing about Joe Page was the fact that he loved kids and he was interested in seeing them succeed."

Long said a person will be appointed to supervise Austin school until this summer when a new principal can be approved.

PUC to tackle fuel adjustment

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Public Utilities Commission today adopted a rule that would require electric companies to bill customers at a flat rate for fuel costs, regardless of how much power a customer buys.

In areas regulated by the commission, starting in September, this would wipe out much of the preferential rates now given large commercial users.

Surprisingly there was little protest from the utility company representatives in the commission hearing room.

Robert Webb of Houston Lighting and Power Co. did propose the use of separate fuel adjustment factors for each customer class.

Asst. City Atty. Harriet Hubacker of Houston agreed with Webb — with whom she had differed several times during the hearing — and said that local regulatory bodies should be able to impose rating structures that would best reflect the needs of their citizens.

The commission Monday retracted its controversial proposal to allow utilities to recover from consumers only half their expenditures for donations and advertising.

But it said it would allow such expenditures as part of a company's rate base only up to three-tenths of 1 per cent of its gross receipts.

The proposal accounted for the most heated argument in the commission's all-day hearing on its 88-page proposed rule book for regulating utility rates and service.

Newspaper trade associations that had opposed the original proposal on advertising were divided in their reaction to the amended rule that the commission finally approved.

"We seem to have lost ground," said John Taylor, president of the Texas Press Association.

"It is going to be a better deal," said John Murphy of the Texas Daily Newspaper Association.

The original proposal would have allowed a utility company to include only half of its charitable contributions and advertising costs in its rate base, up to 1 per cent of its gross receipts. It was attacked by broadcasters, chambers of commerce and the Salvation Army, as well as by newspaper associations.

Les Daughtry of Galveston, speaking for the TDNA, said advertising by Texas utilities did not exceed $8 million a year and had "very little effect" on rates to consumers.

Later, Tom Steely of Paris, speaking for the TPA, asked why the commission staff decided on three-tenths of 1 per cent as the allowable proportion of gross receipts for advertising and donations.

"That's about $20 million a year, based on the gross receipts of utilities in this state," said commission chairman Garrett Morris.

Chambers of Commerce and the Salvation Army said utilities have been generous contributors and expressed fear that the rule would dry up donations and other forms of support.

Rush Evans of Austin, president of the Texas Association of Broadcasters, said a limitation on advertising was "an obvious conflict with the First Amendment and the public's right to hear both sides of every issue."

Laura Keever of the League of Women Voters said it was "ludicrous in a time of energy shortages that anyone would want to promote the consumption of energy."

Soviet bombers test US

By EDMUND PINTO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet bombers periodically breach U.S. air space off the Alaskan coast to test American defenses and are routinely intercepted by U.S. warplanes, an Air Force spokesman says.

The Soviet bombers fly between 20 and 300 miles off the Alaskan coast over the Bering Sea when the planes cross the U.S. defense perimeter known as the Alaskan Air Defense Identification Zone (ADIZ).

"They challenge our test identification zone procedures on a periodic basis," the Air Force spokesman said Monday. He emphasized that the Soviet planes are not flying over Alaskan land areas.

The ADIZ generally follows the contours of the Alaskan coastline. It shrinks from its 300-mile maximum to 20 miles where the Soviet Union and Alaska are separated only by about 50 miles of Bering Sea. The ADIZ is not a legal boundary but is a U.S.-defined defense perimeter.

The Soviet air force usually flies TU-16 Badgers, a medium-range bomber, or TU-95 Bears, a long-range bomber, on what essentially are reconnaissance flights, the spokesman said. He said the flights have been conducted in the Alaskan defense area since 1958.

Elmendorf Air Force Base, headquarters of the Alaska Air Defense Command, routinely sends two jet interceptors to identify and turn back the Russian planes. The interceptors are kept in readiness on the flight line for such duty, the spokesman said.

The latest incident to come to light was a Jan. 16 flight of two Badgers. They were intercepted and identified by U.S. Air Force fighter interceptors and they did not overfly the Alaskan land mass," an Air Force statement on the incident said.

The Air Force disclosed the flight of the Badgers in response to inquiries about a report that two Soviet MIG fighter planes flew over the Alaska pipeline and Army maneuvers in November-December 1975. Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., chairman of the House outer continental shelf subcommittee, said eyewitnesses told him of the intrusion by the two MIG 23 or MIG 25 fighters.

In a May 7 letter to Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld about the incident, Murphy said he was told the MIGs flew over and photographed U.S. troops in defensive positions around pipeline installations during an exercise known as "Jack Frost."

A Pentagon spokesman denied that the Soviet fighters flew over Alaskan land areas during the "Jack Frost" exercise but said U.S. fighter planes were in the area.

Demo platform 'ignored'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A citizens lobby and a labor leader said today the Democratic party's elected officials should be held accountable to the party's platform, which they said is being blatantly ignored.

Testifying in the second day of hearings by the Democratic platform committee, Common Cause president David Cohen said, "Your Democratic leadership in Congress has frantically ignored major planks in your 1972 platform."

United Auto Workers president Leonard Woodcock told the committee the platform should be a meaningful policy guideline for the national, state and local Democratic organizations as well as elected officials, including Democratic presidents.

"You must commit the candidates to the platform," Woodcock said in written testimony submitted to the committee.

This year the party is moving toward a platform aimed at doing battle with the Republicans on economic issues, with the emphasis on jobs.

Cohen reminded the group that the 1972 platform called for stringent controls against conflicts of interest in Congress and the executive branch, including disclosure of financial holdings.

"The House of Representatives has dragged its feet on such legislation and continues to allow congressmen to serve on committees where they can advance their personal financial interest, a practice the platform plank specifically singled out as an abuse that should be eliminated," Cohen said.

Cohen said the Democratic-controlled Congress also had ignored platform directives to provide public financing of elections, disclosures of lobbying activities and abolition of the electoral college. "The Democratic party should hold its leaders in Congress to account," Cohen said.

Woodcock said the platform "should bring a message to the Congress" and that "the new Democratic president" should report annually on party affairs as well as the state of the union "to provide new accountability to Democrats."

The outline of a party position, already expressed by individual contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination, emerged Monday in a report from a panel which had been working for three and a half years on a Democratic platform for 1976.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

No oil domination

Americans have historically viewed profit as a reward which stimulates business to try harder under the free enterprise system.

Of late, however, "bigness," a visible indication of profit, has come under attack. The oil companies are the primary target.

And a few members of Congress have taken up the idea of forcing the oil companies who explore for and produce oil, transport it, refine it and then market the products, to divest themselves of all but one phase of the business.

These critics claim that the industry is noncompetitive and monopolistic and that rising prices are a result of corporate greed.

But more than 50 oil companies can be defined as "integrated," engaging in three or more levels of the petroleum business. No one company produces more than 10 per cent of the nation's petroleum products. No one company accounts for more than 9 per cent of refining capacity. No one company dominates.

The companies grew simply because they gave us efficiency and service. They can conduct their operations by the most economical methods.

By turning the various phases of their well-to-market activity, they can keep a steady flow of petroleum and petroleum products to the consumer. They can cope with seasonal demands and geographical demands.

During the Arab oil embargo, which triggered the major producers' current unhappy state, they were responsible, paradoxically for easing the crisis through their ability to redistribute supplies on short notice.

Punitive actions in Congress — even against only the six largest firms — would have as victims 14 million investors, who own 90 per cent of the so-called "giants."

Divestiture would slow technical advance when we need it most. Capital for exploration would be depleted. In the end, the consumer would suffer through higher prices and energy shortages.

Eroded freedom

Michigan's Hillsdale College is one of a number of private institutions proud of their independence.

They have rejected federal handouts to remain free of federal regulation. Hillsdale president George Roche was understandably chagrined when the Department of Health, Education and Welfare insisted that the college must abide by HEW's Title IX regulations regarding equality of race, religion or sex — 18 pages of small type.

HEW conceded that Hillsdale's antidiscrimination record is well-recognized, but reiterated, because some of its students have obtained federally guaranteed loans or grants, the college must comply with HEW's rules.

The alternative, apparently, is to deny admission to affected students, undermining their right to the education of their choice and further curtailing college revenues.

Roche has suggested he would "welcome further discussion" with HEW. We wish him luck.

The lengths men go

On occasion one small fact does more than whole columns of punditry to spotlight the nature of the world we inhabit. As an example of this, consider the lengths to which the U.S. Embassy in Moscow goes to keep Soviet operatives from hearing what it said there.

We quote from Peter Osnos in the Washington Post: "Sensitive discussions are confined to a plastic bubble set on a raised floor in one room with walls said to be lined with lead."

The necessity for this is not questioned here. The point is: Think what this tells us about today's civilized society.

The most valuable stamp in the world, the one cent black on magenta from British Guiana, is now worth $300,000, though it was originally bought for 84 cents!

The yellow color of the withered mistletoe branch was thought to be endowed with the power to discover buried treasure.

Don Oakley Tyranny's strange fascination

By Don Oakley

Americans, who live in the oldest major democracy in the world and one of the last few still in working order, have always been strangely fascinated by tyranny. Maybe it's because tyrannies are so — well, "efficient."

In the 1930s, Charles Lindbergh, who should have known something about the indomitable of the human spirit, advised Britain and France that they could not hope to win a war against resurgent Germany under the Nazis.

A decade earlier, journalist and social reformer Lincoln Steffens had visited the Soviet Union and returned saying, "I have seen the future and it works."

Now another American has returned from another budding tyranny, that of Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, and reports that he has seen the present and it is working in India — except for a few intellectuals, newspaper editors, opposition politicians and other dissenters who have borne the brunt of her "emergency" crackdown.

Even though foreign critics have called Mrs. Gandhi a dictator, "there is little doubt that the concept of the emergency has gained public acceptance in India," says Francis R. Valeo, Asian affairs expert and secretary of the U.S. Senate, who traveled recently on a fact-finding mission to India, Pakistan and Bangladesh at the request of Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield.

Foreign observers in India are unanimous, he says, in holding that Mrs. Gandhi would win a vote of confidence if elections were held at this time. But of course, elections are not going to be held at this time or at any other time in the foreseeable future.

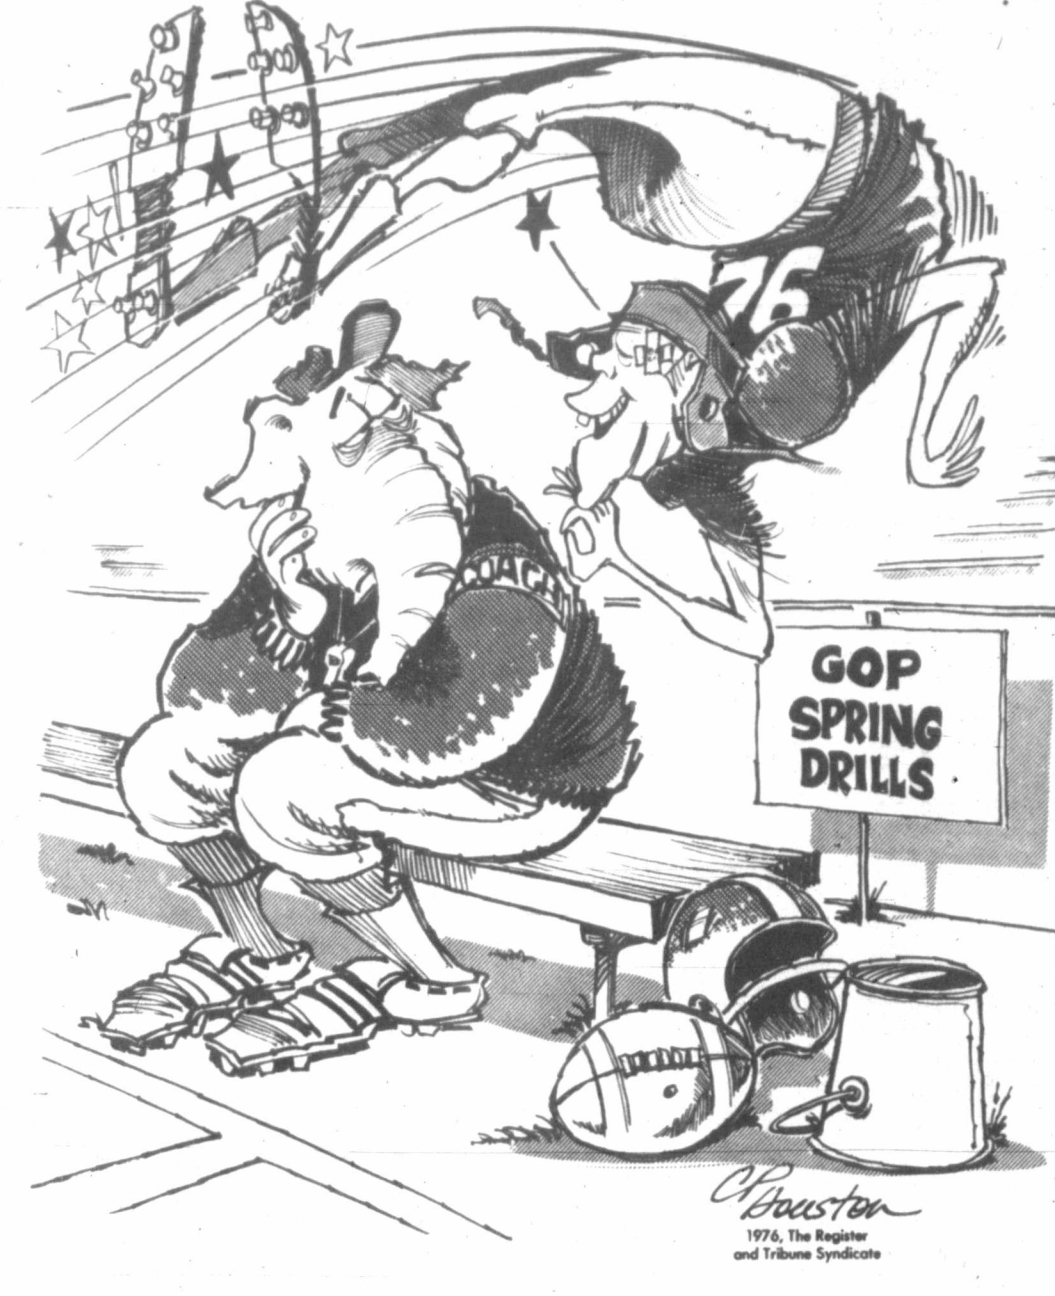

What has Mrs. Gandhi done for India lately? According to Valeo:

"Inflation has been tamed. Hoarders and speculators are disgorging their holdings and corruption has been curbed. Civil servants have become more attentive to public needs. Industry and labor seem to be responding to the government's pleading or pressure for increased output. Similarly, the railroads are providing better service."

Shades of Il Duce, who made Italy's trains run on time. Unquestionably, things were in terrible shape in India and called for drastic measures, just as they were and did in Russia in the 1920s and Germany, Italy and Spain in the 1930s and China, Vietnam, Korea, Cuba and etc., etc., in the 1950 and 1960s.

Each of these new-borne tyrannies, including the "electerats," has or had at one time its own lobby of champions in this country.

The 20th century's casualty list of peoples who have tried democracy and later abandoned it for tyranny, or who never tried democracy at all, does not make for comforting reading. Why any American should be the slightest bit enthusiastic that yet one more country has taken the autocratic route to solving its problems is difficult to understand.

Education in U.S. English teachers Poor in grammar?

By MAX RAFFERTY

As an old high school English teacher, I hate to say this, but duty calls: "The reason most college freshmen know nothing about how to write or to speak English is because their elementary and high school English teachers didn't know anything about it either."

Now before the tar and feathers are handed out to the mortgaged lynch mob, let me hasten to say that I don't blame my hapless colleagues overmuch. I blame (a) the nation's teacher training institutions and (b) the fifth state departments of education for not requiring each applicant for the teaching credential in English to meet minimum standards in his chosen area of specialization.

In case you doubt my bona fides, hear reporter Arthur Golden, writing in a national weekly: "More than half the English teachers who applied for jobs with a major school system flunked a grammar test."

The system? Montgomery County, Maryland — 18th largest in the nation.

The test? A 90-question quiz on basic English ministered by the personnel assessment specialist.

The flunkers? 247 out of 467 applicants, all with teaching credentials. They missed more than 18 of the questions.

The most typical error? Inability to identify a correct sentence.

Other boo - boos? Rotten spelling. Comma faults. Double negatives. And so on.

I'd like to make a couple of points right here:

1 - This "I - Ain't - Got - No - Need - For - Good - English Syndrome" is not confined to a single county in Maryland. Far from it. In the same release, the University of California's director of admissions is quoted as saying, "I'm certain it's a national problem." And one Eva Grant, a Chicago educational consultant, adds wryly: "From what I've observed, there are any number of teachers who can't spell any better than their pupils."

2 - Even more ominous in its implications are the words of the Montgomery County personnel director: "I have no doubt that some who failed our exam are now teaching elsewhere in the country."

Of course they are. Because scarcely any school system is as on the ball as is Montgomery County, at least insofar as screening and rejecting illiterate teacher applicants are concerned. Overwhelmingly, the practice is to check the applicant's letters of recommendation, go over his university grades with some care, and interview him in person to be sure he doesn't have two heads. If he has good papers and looks reasonable sane, he's in.

What ought to be done by every school district in the land, of course, is what Montgomery County does: find out the nonsense way if the aspiring English teacher can spell "medieval" without using a double - e, conjugate the verb "to have" in all its tenses, knows the difference between active and passive voice and understands the usages of the subjunctive mood. And this you cannot do by looking over letters of recommendation and university transcripts, for the simple reason that the average teacher training institution does not require its would-be English instructors to take one single course in English grammar.

When the graduating teacher finds he can't get a job because his alma mater has failed to teach him English, standards will go up like magic. In due time, the effect might even be felt down in grammar school.

"Hey, buddy! How about a lift and a quarter? I might be another Howard Hughes, ya know!"

Ray Cromley Keep politicians out of our banks

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Certain segments of the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives apparently have a death wish.

If one thing is crystal clear, it is that centralized political planning of finance, industry and agriculture is doomed to failure — as witness the Soviet Union and other authoritarian states which operate their economies under political direction.

Yet of late there has been an increasing number of measures seriously debated in the Congress which would establish, as a continuing function of the U.S. government, the centralized political planning of loans, investments and such.

One of the latest is a proposal that special tax favors be given to men and women of modest means who regularly invest in the stocks of corporations. The objective here is, of course meritorious. Having read studies which indicate that if this country is to employ all, or almost all of those who wish jobs, if we are to meet our energy goals, our anti-pollution objectives and our on-the-job safety regulations, the congressmen know that we must raise capital in this nation for investment in industry at more rapid rate than in the past two decades. This at a time when the data indicate — despite recent stock market advances — the average investor is more reluctant than in the past to put his money into long-term corporate investments.

The proposal to give special tax favors however, is, when analyzed, simply a means of increasing the return on capital for selected investors. This would be a way of Congress saying that returns on investment are not great enough to lure sufficient investors into the market.

But if Congress believes that profits are not great enough and that lack of sufficient gain is what is holding back investment, then there are a string of regulations, double-taxation provisions and other restrictions whose abolition would serve the purpose without the distortion this specialized favoritism would mean. Their elimination would not increase government involvement in decisions as to who and what investors and what industries should be favored, and would not increase the tax burden on all of us.

Obviously, Congressmen need to do their homework to determine what is holding back investment. They can't argue in the same breath that profits are too high and too low. They must also decide whether what could all too easily become government channeling of investment is the path they really want to travel. Here is where a careful study of what has happened in other countries would prove useful.

There are also repeated parallel attempts on the Hill to channel bank loans to one worthy purpose or another, to guide them away from speculative or frivolous enterprises.

Now there is no doubt that speculation by many banks in shaky real estate development projects and in other equally doubtful adventures is a burden on all of us, whether investors in bank stocks or not. And it is certainly true that imaginative banks could do a great deal for their communities if they put more of their funds into sound redevelopment enterprises, providing they have discovered means to determine which projects, especially those in the inner city, are sound and which not, monetarily.

But I submit that while it is sometimes disastrous to have these decisions made by bankers, it is certain folly to have loans monitored by politicians. I can think of nothing more likely to create a wave of bank failures, a breakdown of credit and a financial panic than to have the banks of this country required to divert an important segment of their money to economically uncertain "good causes." Welfare should come out of the tax budget.

...and now some bad news

It was recently noted that with the rise of steel production costs abroad, as had been predicted, the American product is again competitive in price. The era of "cheap foreign steel" according to a Wall Street Journal report, is over.

It should be added, however, that the beneficial effects are not being shared by everyone in the U.S. industry — particularly not by the makers of stainless, tool and other "specialty" steels.

Americans may be fully competitive with their overseas competition in terms of cost, technology and productivity, but unfortunately the foreigners don't play by the rules imposed by our free enterprise system say spokesmen.

The problem is much the same one domestic steelmakers faced in the '60s: Because most foreign producers are either owned outright by their governments or are subsidized, they are encouraged to sell in the American market at prices quite unrelated to the requirement of earning a profit.

Imports have been taking 20 per cent of the U.S. market for stainless steel and 30 per cent of the tool steel market, and in some cases the penetration has exceeded 60 per cent, points out the Advisory Committee of the Specialty Steel Industry of the United States.

Whether or not foreign governments can continue to sustain this kind of subsidized penetration in the face of rising costs remains a question. Overall, the outlook for American steelmakers appears brighter and more encouraging than it has in years.

NATO may boot Italy

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — The North Atlantic Treaty Organization may consider removing Italy from NATO's nuclear and intelligence systems if Communists gain a significant position in the Italian government, diplomatic sources said today.

Italy is to have national parliamentary elections June 20.

Most member governments of the 15-nation Atlantic alliance have publicly adopted a wait-and-see attitude to avoid charges of interfering in Italy's internal affairs.

But senior allied diplomats said Italy's wobbly political situation will dominate the regular spring conference of NATO foreign ministers in Oslo later this week — even though it's not on the formal agenda.

Informants said the attitude of major NATO governments, including the United States, Britain and West Germany, has been shaped during months of informal consultations.

They said the allied leaders have not drafted formal plans inside NATO to meet the contingency of a Communist entry into Italy's government. Italy now is represented at all levels within the NATO structure.

Informal consultations, according to a senior informant, have dealt with the central issue: Can Italy's Communist party, associated with the Soviet Communist party, be relied on to contribute to the collective defense of the West?

The Roman Catholic church in Italy, meanwhile, stepped up its anti-Communist activity. Prominent Catholics who have agreed to run on the Communist ticket were warned of possible excommunication by Antonio Cardinal Poma, head of the Italian Episcopal Conference.

A senior official here listed four immediate decisions NATO leaders would face if Italian Communists joined the government in strength after the election.

—Whether to move the NATO southern command headquarters away from its location near Naples.

—Whether to continue using a variety of facilities in Italy now at the disposal of the U.S. 6th Fleet.

—Whether they should call for an Italian withdrawal from permanent membership in NATO's nuclear planning group. This is one of the most sensitive agencies within the alliance, dealing with nuclear strategy, deployment of missiles and the use of tactical nuclear weapons.

—Whether to exclude Italy from NATO's sharing of political and military intelligence. Most of this top secret material relates to political and military developments within the Soviet orbit.

BOLIVIA SKIING
LA PAZ, Bolivia (UPI) — The skiing season in Bolivia, unlike most other South American countries, is in the southern summer, between January and April. During winter, which begins in May, the slopes on the high Andes are too icy for skiing.

The one ski tow in all Bolivia, run by the Club Andino Boliviano in Chacaltaya mountain over La Paz, is 17,000 feet above sea level. It's open to travelers, but oxygen and anti-altitude pills are necessary for first timers.

Membership kickoff

The annual Pampa Chamber of Commerce Membership Roundup was kicked off Monday in the Starlight room of the Coronado Inn with 15 teams of workers present. The teams will be competing for prizes relating to a bicentennial theme. The first check in is set for 10 a.m. Wednesday in the chamber office. Members were asked to bring the chamber's membership to an all time high. Tentative plans call for campaign completion on May 28. From left are Luther Robinson, Melvin Kunkel and Jerry Sims. Finance director is Art Aftergut. (Pampa News photo by Michal Thompson)

200 Lebanese die in fighting

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Moslem and Christian armies fought another dusk-to-dawn duel with rockets and artillery, police said today, leaving at least 207 persons killed and 346 wounded.

"Our morgue is full with unidentified bodies, we have no room for more," said a spokesman for one of Beirut's largest Moslem hospitals.

By police estimates, nearly 500 persons have been killed in the past three days, marking it as one of the bloodiest periods in Lebanon's 13½-month-old civil war that has taken nearly 20,000 lives.

Moslem leftists and their Palestinian allies sent hundreds of Soviet-made rockets slamming into Christian residential areas. Christian gunners answered with barrages of 155mm and 120mm artillery fire.

Dozens of office buildings in the commercial center and port area were ablaze. Flying shrapnel kept fire brigades out of the zones.

Tanks manned by renegade Christian and Moslem officers from Lebanon's disintegrated 18,000-man army reportedly were locked in combat for control of several ski resorts overlooking a beleaguered Christian enclave north of the capital.

Police reported Moslems on the slopes fired shells into the pine forests surrounding Bkirki, 10 miles north of Beirut and traditional seat of the patriarch of the Maronite Christians. The Maronites, a Roman Catholic sect and the largest Christian faction in Lebanon, have dominated the presidency and the nation's top army posts since the country gained independence from France 32 years ago.

Libyan Prime Minister Maj. Abdul Salam Jalloud, who arrived on a surprise visit to try his hand at mediating an end to the fighting, appeared to have made little progress. He planned to leave for Syria and then go on to Iraq.

Jalloud's main goal was to reconcile Syria and the Moslem-Palestinian alliance rather than step into the Moslem-Christian warfare. Leftist sources said he had failed to bridge the differences.

A leftist Beirut newspaper, Moharrer, claimed two Syrian army battalions, with the soldiers disguised as Syrian-based Palestinian guerrillas, had crossed into northern Lebanon overnight. There was no independent confirmation of the report.

Syrian pressure last month halted a Moslem and Palestinian offensive that had driven Christian forces steadily backward. The intervention led to loud Moslem protests and clashes between Syrian-based Saiga Palestinian units and Lebanese leftists and their Palestinian allies.

Syrian President Hafez Assad has sent thousands of the Saiga Palestinians into Lebanon to try to enforce the cease-fire negotiated by Syria.

Libya's radical leftist regime reportedly provides generous support to the most militant Moslem and Palestinian factions.

Libya joined the ranks of Syria, France, the United States, Saudi Arabia, the Arab League and the Vatican in trying to mediate an end to the war.

Jalloud, accompanied by Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasir Arafat, arrived Monday from Damascus, where he had met with Assad.

The Libyan official met with Moslem Premier Rashid Karami, and with Arafat and Kamal Jumblatt, over-all leader of the Moslem-leftist alliance.

The talks followed one of the civil war's fiercest artillery battles, in which 221 persons were reported killed and 383 wounded, Beirut Radio, controlled by leftist Moslems, said 10 children died and 40 were wounded when a boarding school in the Palestinian camp of Tel Zaatar was shelled.

The Moslems are fighting for a greater share of power in Lebanon, dominated since the country was formed after World War II by Christians who are now a 40 per cent minority. The Christians want assurances that the government will control Palestinian refugees and their guerrilla armies in Lebanon.

Monty Hall's ABC-TV special Aug. 7 will feature guests Cloris Leachman and Ed Asner.

Abductor cut girl's hair

DALLAS (AP) — Nicole Moore today no longer has the long, dark hair loved by so many other 4-year-old girls but she does have a new stuffed animal and her life.

For most of the past two weeks since Nicole's neighborhood playmates saw her disappear into a strange man's car, law enforcement officials assumed the Indian girl was dead.

Monday night, Nicole, her hair cut to a boyish length by her abductor, and her mother, Linda Moore, returned to their apartment where they were greeted by neighbors. Some brought gifts including a stuffed animal.

The Navajo mother and her daughter stayed at their apartment only long enough to grab some clothes before they were whisked away to a friend's home by the FBI.

Nicole appeared Sunday afternoon at the doorway of the Tulane Medical Center in New Orleans. She had a note pinned on her that identified her and said she was from Dallas.

New Orleans police called Dallas and learned Nicole had been the object of a massive search — since her disappearance.

Officials said other than her short hair, Nicole was in good condition and had not been molested by the man who, Nicole said, lured her into his car by promising to show her a puppy and take her for a swim.

"I don't care if she was brought back bald so long as I got her back," said Miss Moore, Nicole's mother.

Miss Moore flew to New Orleans Sunday night to see her daughter. The reunion was postponed until Monday afternoon by legal complications that arose by Nicole's designation as an abandoned child by

New Orleans authorities.

But after a tearful meeting between a sobbing Miss Moore and her bright-eyed daughter, the two returned to Dallas where they spent more than two hours with FBI agents.

Officials said Nicole told them she slept in a white car that was driven by a man named "Joe." She said she did go swimming in what investigators say may have been Lake Pontchartrain near New Orleans.

New Orleans police said there was a suspect in the case. The Dallas FBI office said Monday night they had no suspects although Nicole was to be questioned again today about her abductor and the car he drove.

Glenn Rosenquist, the assistant special agent in charge of the Dallas FBI office, said, "I just wish all our cases could have a happy ending like this one."

Ehrlichman conviction stands

WASHINGTON (AP) — The motive of "national security" is not automatic justification for a presidential aide to break the law, a federal appeals court said in upholding the conviction of former White House aide John Ehrlichman.

The U.S. Court of Appeals affirmed Monday the conviction of Ehrlichman for violating the civil rights of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist by authorizing a break-in at the psychiatrist's office. Ehrlichman's lawyer said he would ask the Supreme Court to hear a further appeal. Meanwhile, Ehrlichman could begin a 20-month prison term for that conviction. U.S. District Court Judge Gerhard Gesell must decide whether Ehrlichman should go to jail before the Supreme Court acts. His decision can also be appealed to the high court.

The three-judge appeals panel also upheld the conviction of the "silent man" of Watergate, G. Gordon Liddy, currently serving a jail sentence for the Watergate break-in, for his role in the burglary of the psychiatrist's office.

In that case, the appeals court rejected Ehrlichman's claim that he was acting under presidential authority to protect the national security when he authorized White House "plumbers" to burglarize the psychiatrist's office to find personal material about Ellsberg, who has acknowledged leaking the Pentagon papers.

Appeals Court Judge Malcolm Wilkey said the use of national security as a defense is "subject to abuse" unless carefully limited. Wilkey wrote that such a "risk is substantially magnified when the decision-making group, as here, is an amorphous, ad hoc unit with no tradition of public service and no clear lines of responsibility."

The other two judges indicated general agreement with Wilkey's ruling.

But the court divided 2-1 in deciding that the two men who actually carried off the Sept. 3, 1971 break-in in Beverly Hills, Calif., had been improperly convicted by a jury.

Wilkey said Eugenio R. Martinez and Bernard L. Barker believed they were acting under proper and lawful authority. Wilkey was joined in that view by District Court Judge Robert Merhige Jr. of Richmond.

Barker and Martinez, both veterans of the CIA's Bay of Pigs operation, were recruited for the break-in by convicted Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt, a retired CIA agent working in the White House.

Wilkey said the two men had every reason to believe Hunt's claim that the burglary had the blessing of the White House.

Barker and Martinez were both jailed for their part in the Watergate-burglary at the Democratic Party Headquarters on June 17, 1972.

Gesell said the two Cuban exiles had been duped by higher authority in the Fielding burglary and on July 31, 1974 gave them suspended sentences on probation with no time in prison.

Police report

Pampa police investigated three thefts, two criminal mischief complaints, one criminal trespass complaint, one residential burglary, one car-pedestrian accident and five non-injury accidents Monday.
Angie Moreno, 23, of 1016 Huff Rd., was driving east in the 500 block of E. Kingsmill when her car struck 73-year-old Paul Hughes Rice of 1104 E. Foster. Police said Ms. Moreno was blinded by the sun and did not see Rice who was walking in the street about three feet from the curb.
Rice was admitted to Highland General Hospital where he was listed in fair condition this morning. Ms. Moreno was not cited.
James M. Bowers reported that four kitchen windows in a rent house he owns at 306 Anne were broken out with a BB gun. Also, the kitchen storm door glass and an interior door glass had been broken with a rock.
Damage was estimated at $90-70.
Mrs. Lola Byers of 641 N. Faulkner told police that someone had cut the power to her house at the main box.
A vacant rental house at 1104 Varnon was burglarized, according to Delbert Johnson of 934 E. Francis. He told police that entry had been gained through the back door and 10 square yards of red shag carpeting were missing.
C.L. Casteel of 919 E. Francis reported seeing two men kick in the door at 628 1/2 Russell and leave in a white Chevrolet.
A travel-type lawn sprinkler was taken from the E.O. Wedgeworth yard at 1929 Fir. An attendant at Toot 'n Totum at 201 E. Brown reported that two knives were missing after he had opened the case for some boys to look at the knives.
Jack E. Evans Jr., of Amarillo reported that an employe of the Pizza Inn here stole a large amount of money sometime between May 10-17.

Typhoon Pamela hits Truk Islands today

AGANA, Guam (AP) — Typhoon Pamela roared across Truk Island today, causing mudslides that killed at least eight persons and injured an unknown number, authorities here said. The storm packed winds up to 150 miles an hour and torrential rains.
The typhoon, sweeping to the west through the western Pacific islands, caused extensive damage to homes and crops on the atoll 600 miles southeast of here that served as a Japanese fortress in World War II.
Radio reports from a National Weather Service station on Truk said those killed were inside a house that was crushed by a mudslide.
Several other persons believed to have been in the house were unaccounted for. Rescue workers with a crane and a bulldozer searched for survivors.
The National Weather Service here issued a warning that the storm was building in strength and would pass to the south of Guam within three days if it continued on its present course. Guam residents were advised to store water, and civil defense offices were opened.
One of the victims was identified as Sue Carroll, wife of a Micronesian legal services attorney in Truk.
The typhoon was expected to pass 120 miles southeast of Guam on Thursday, with maximum winds of 125 mph. Maximum winds on Guam were expected to be 50 mph, according to the Navy's fleet weather central on Guam.

Boy Scout's CPR effort saves New Mexico tot

RUIDOSO, N.M. (AP) — Dan Ellis, a 12-year-old Boy Scout, saved the life of a 20-month-old baby by administering cardio pulmonary resuscitation after Ronnie Stallings, 14, rescued the child from the Rio Ruidoso.
Authorities said the little boy, Paul Germany, apparently fell off two logs jutting into the river near his parents' home in Ruidoso.
Paul, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Barry Germany, apparently wandered away from home with his 3-year-old brother Matthew to the small river about 60 feet from the house.
Dan and Ronnie, in a nearby meadow, heard the Matthew's cries and ran to the river, where they saw Paul being swept away by the current. They scrambled after the baby, climbing several fences before catching him.
Ronnie went into the water, which was about 1 1/2 feet deep at that point, and pulled Paul out of the water. He handed him to Dan, who had learned cardio pulmonary resuscitation in the Boy Scouts.
Dan said Monday that the baby wasn't breathing.

"I laid him on his back and he started to choke," he recalled. "Then I turned him on his side."
He said he began administering resuscitation and then, "I saw water gush out of his mouth. I think I had worked on him about 40 seconds. Then he began to cry."
Dan said Ronnie picked up the child and began carrying him to the house, while he ran ahead and called the Ruidoso Hondo Valley Hospital where his mother works as a registered nurse.
Dan said his mother notified police and sent an ambulance.
Dr. Stephen E. Kessler said Ellis' knowledge of and quick action in administering cardio pulmonary resuscitation "absolutely saved his (Paul's) life. Dan really did a super job."
Paul was dismissed from the hospital after a short stay Saturday. Kessler said the only injury to the baby was three bumps on his head.
Scouting authorities said young Ellis, a tenderfoot, will be nominated for a Boy Scout lifesaving award. Young Stallings is not a member of the Boy Scouts.

Frenchman pledges country's friendship

By FRANCES LEWINE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Preparing to address a joint session of Congress, French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing says his country is "a dependable friend" in prosperity and adversity.
He told President Ford in a toast at a White House dinner Monday night that relations between the United States and France are at their best.
There has never been a time when contacts "have been more frequent, consultation more sustained and cooperation more good-willed," Giscard said. "Though our methods may sometimes differ, our final objectives are inspired by that same ideal of liberty, peace and justice."
Giscard speaks to a joint session of Congress today.
He and Ford took time out between formal talks on matters including nuclear non-proliferation to spend Monday evening dining, dancing, and listening to jazz pianist Earl "Fatha" Hines at the White House party for 157 guests, including Hollywood and sports stars.

Giscard, here to celebrate the Bicentennial, found one of his ancestors given a place of honor in the White House State Dining Room.
It was French Admiral Charles Henri d'Estaing, who brought the first French fleet to America's aid in the Revolutionary War.
Ford said that a bust of the admiral had long resided at the White House, and it was brought out for display for the occasion. "Unfortunately, Gen. Washington never met Admiral d'Estaing," Ford said. "I count it a special privilege as the 38th President that I can welcome one of his descendants to this house and personally express our long overdue thanks for the distinguished contribution that was made by one of your predecessors in our struggle for our independence."

The Fords gathered an especially large array of guests in honor of the French president, including dancers Ray Bolger, Martha Graham and Judith Jamison; movie stars Clint Eastwood, June Allyson and Marisa Berenson, and Olympic ice-skating winners Colleen O'Connor, James Mills and Sheila Young.
It was the night before the crucial Michigan primary for President Ford, but he seemed to put that aside as he enjoyed the party and danced until almost 1 a.m. Before they left at 12:20 a.m., Giscard and his wife danced, too.

Gas panics Hershey plant

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — The nation's best-known chocolate factory became a scene of panic after an ammonia pipe broke, unleashing poisonous fumes and forcing about 1,000 choking and gasping employes to rush outside for air.

"Man, I never saw so many people run so fast," a security guard said after the hubbub subsided and the Hershey Foods plant was able to resume operations late Monday night.
Thirty-eight persons were treated for injuries after inhaling the fumes.

Pampa FFA entries win in Lubbock Saturday

A vocational agriculture record book submitted by Ronald Haynes, Pampa High School agriculture student, won area farm employe coop competition in Lubbock Saturday.

Haynes, who was named outstanding student in cooperative vocational agriculture for Pampa High School during April, has been employed during the 1975-76 school year by Bowers Farms.
Kenneth Gage's application for the Lone Star Farmer award was approved at the Area 1 Future Farmers of America Convention in Lubbock and will be forwarded to the state level. Others from Pampa who made application for the honor were Russell Thornburg and Frank Morrison.

Haynes' record book will be forwarded to the State Record Book Check which will precede the State FFA Convention in Dallas July 14-16.
Chris Skaggs, public speaking winner in the Top 'o' Texas FFA District, placed second in the public speaking competition at the Area 1 FFA Convention. He was defeated in the area contest by an FFA member who placed second in the state public speaking contest in 1975.
Skaggs' speech was "Agriculture — America's Heritage."
Also attending the convention were Pampa FFA co-sponsors, Bob Skaggs and Randall Williams.

Dear Abby

Says Unwed Father Has Right to Know

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: GRANNY-TO-BE is thrilled at the prospect of becoming a grandmother even though her unmarried daughter, who is on welfare, has no plans to marry the baby's father and chooses not to disclose his identity!

You say, "That's her business and her secret." Abby, don't you think a child has the right to know who his real father is? And don't you think that when the child grows up, he should have the right to get in touch with his real father if he chooses to do so?

Also, maybe the father wants to support his child. Women talk about WOMEN'S rights. How about MEN'S rights?

MEN'S LIBBER

DEAR LIBBER: Fortunately (or possibly unfortunately), since women literally carry the load alone and deliver it, it is their prerogative as to whether or not to inform the father. And not all fathers are willing to own up to it. But read on for another enlightened viewpoint:

DEAR ABBY: Concerning the unmarried mother-to-be who is on welfare and prefers to keep the identity of her baby's father a secret: According to you, it may be her business and her secret, but that baby becomes the taxpayers' burden, and we taxpayers are sick and tired of supporting illegitimate children.

With all the resources available to prevent pregnancies, there is no excuse for any sexually active female to bear a child! And why should the father be excused from the responsibility of supporting his child? Yet, you would let taxpayers assume this responsibility because some 21-year-old female decides she wants to be a mother.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's new teeth don't fit him right and he talks funny, but that's not the problem. Every time I ask him to repeat something, he gets mad at me and says, "Why don't you get a hearing aid?"

Abby, there is nothing wrong with my hearing. It's the way he talks. Lately I have to be careful not to ask him to repeat anything for fear he'll take my head off.

How can I handle this problem without starting World War III?

AL'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Make a deal with Al. Tell him that you will have your hearing tested if he'll go back to the dentist who made his new teeth and get an adjustment.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (24¢) envelope.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have always thought that triglycerides came from animal fat. In one of your columns you said it was also in most vegetable fats. This has only confused me and maybe others too. Would you please explain what you mean about vegetable fats? Which vegetables is it from? I stay strictly on a no animal fat diet but, for some reason my triglyceride count is still at 180, which I was told by the doctor was high.

DEAR READER — There appears to be a large amount of public confusion about fats. Some of this may be a misunderstanding of the reason for emphasizing limiting animal fats. The term triglycerides simply means three fatty acids attached to glycerine. That's why the prefix tri is used, meaning three. These fatty acids may be saturated fats or unsaturated fats. The unsaturated fats may be either monounsaturated fats or polyunsaturated fats.

Most of the fats found in their natural state either in plants or animals have components of saturated and unsaturated fat. Just to use an example, a little less than half of the fat from beef is saturated fat. Most of the rest of it is monounsaturated fat. It contains very little polyunsaturated fat. Do not fall into the trap of thinking that animal fat is all saturated fat or thinking that fat from plant sources is all unsaturated fat. That is not the truth.

You can move on to a food like the avocado which is a high fat food, but all of the fats in the avocado are triglycerides. They're a combination of the different fats, saturated fat, monounsaturated fat and polyunsaturated fat.

Polly's pointers

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve concerns hamburger and hot dog buns that are always in packages of 8, 10 or 12. A family of two cannot eat this many at one time, and apartments often have limited freezer space. It seems the bread companies could package some with only four buns for small families. —DIANE

DEAR POLLY — L.G.P. wanted to know how to remove nicotine stains from the outside of her refrigerator. I suggest that she rubs it with a soft cloth with some lemon juice on it. As the cloth becomes soiled move on to a clean part and add more juice. The skin from a lemon might also be rubbed on the stains. This removes such stains from one's fingers and hands. —MRS. E.O.E.

DEAR POLLY — When making stuffed toys, I stitch around leaving an opening as usual, but before putting in the stuffing I turn back the seam allowance along the opening and baste in place. This helps to keep it from stretching and fraying, and I have the correct turn under when stitching the opening. (Polly's note: This also holds true when making pillow covers.) —ESTHER

DEAR POLLY — Recently the wick on a pretty and expensive candle ran out, after the candle had burned only a third of the way down. I did not know what to do and I hated to throw it away. Finally, I took a tapestry needle and threaded it with a piece of wick I bought at a discount store. Starting at the bottom of the candle I pushed the needle up the center of the candle, cut the wick at the right length and now have a candle that can be enjoyed right to the end. —DORIS

Clue to cause of crib death

By AL ROSSITER JR.

UPI Science Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A

Pennsylvania pathologist has discovered what may be an important clue in the effort to unravel the mystery of crib death, the puzzling syndrome that is one of the leading causes of deaths in infancy.

Dr. Richard Naeye, professor of pathology at Pennsylvania

State University, examined 56

victims of this sudden infant death syndrome and found that

86 per cent had abnormal carotid bodies. These are small organs that help regulate the amount of oxygen in the blood.

"This is by far the most striking abnormality ever described in crib death victims,"

Naeye said in a telephone interview. "It's something that could not arrive at time of death.

It's something that probably has been going on since birth. It's probably a chronic abnormality."

Sudden infant death syndrome claims about 7,500 to 10,000 infants each year. In the majority of the cases, the baby is apparently in good health when put to bed for a nap or for the night, and several hours later is found dead.

Why these babies die is unknown. Naeye said he was sure researchers will find that it has multiple causes.

He said since the carotid body abnormality was seen in most of the victims he examined with the help of the Maryland Chief Medical Examiner's office in Baltimore, "this could well be the major clue to a sizeable proportion of the total cases."

The carotid body is located in the aorta, the artery that carries oxygen-rich blood to all parts of the body. The carotid body samples blood passing by and regulates breathing to keep the level of oxygen and carbon dioxide normal in the blood stream.

Naeye found that in 63 per cent of the victims he studied at autopsy there were a substantially reduced number of cells in the carotid body.

Twenty-three per cent had an abnormally high amount of cells.

He said it is reasonable to assume that if a carotid body is structurally abnormal, its function might also be abnormal. A defect in the carotid body could contribute to the abnormalities of breathing control found in crib death victims.

The carotid body actually fine tunes the breathing and is not required in adults. But the control of breathing in infants is not yet well developed.

especially when they are asleep.

Naeye suggested the carotid body therefore might be important for babies.

"The problem is we don't really know for sure what their total role is in this particular period of life," he said. "So no one can speak with certainty about what role this particular

'defect' in the carotid body might have."

He said his finding now gives scientists an important lead for further investigation.

Claims Sampan hospital saves lives

By PAUL VOGLE

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI)

— Viet Cong nurses and doctors aboard a "sampan hospital"

rowed through the swamps of South Vietnam's Mekong Delta

during the final years of the war laying mines and performing major surgery under fire.

At least that's what Hanoi's

Vietnam News Agency claims.

It calls the floating hospital of small boats "the K9," without explaining the name.

To most people the swamps are a nightmare of lizards, water

snakes, gila monsters, poison

air and water and leeches falling like rain from the trees.

But K9 apparently was not put off by such hardships.

The news agency report, following the Tet 1968 offensive, said the doctors and nurses roamed the U Minh Forest from at least 1968 until the end of the war early last year.

The U Minh (Forest of Darkness) is actually a mangrove swamp. Roots of the trees sometimes rise as high as six feet above the brackish water which rolls idly toward the South China Sea in the Mekong Delta.

"Every day some of the hospital staff went to lay mines to keep away the enemy, while some stayed behind to look after the war wounded and fetch food," the report said.

The hospital staff, whose numbers were not given, stuck it out even during the Saigon government's counterattacks following the Tet 1968 offensive, the report said.

It said the doctors were performing surgery on the wounded one night in stilt huts they had built.

"While the operations were under way, enemy troops came," the Hanoi report said.

"At six a.m. all four operations were completed, while the enemy was coming nearer and nearer. Doctors and nurses quickly carried the patients to the boats and rowed away."

The news agency claimed that

"Sometimes, the hospital had to move two or three times a month. Doctors and nurses had to split into small groups.

Operating instruments were distributed among the doctors and nurses, who hid them under water during the daytime and took them out for work at night."

"When the enemy conducted fierce mopping-up operations, the whole hospital was moved by sampan to another, safer place where new huts were erected to hide patients and continue the work of the hospital."

The news agency claimed that when rice ran short, the hospital staff dug up provisions stored by the Viet Cong agents for just such emergencies.

They "pounded it in their steel helmets with pestles" to get the husks off and make the rice edible for the wounded.

"To supplement the diet, they caught fish from the canals or ponds."

The news agency said the sampan hospital staff also conducted offensive operations.

"Working and fighting at the same time, cadres and combatants of the K9 hospital wiped out one enemy company, including two aircraft and a jet aircraft of the U.S. puppets," it said.

K9 was on the job to the very end, until the Communists seized power in South Vietnam on April 30, 1975.

"In the general offensive and uprising of 1975, the combatants of the K9 army hospital, with their sampans, closely followed the fighting units to take care of the combatants' health, contributing to the liberation of the western part of the Mekong Delta," it said.

DALLAS (AP) — Three days before her police officer husband died of cancer last

January, Sandra Maxey, 30, sat

next to him in his hospital room and told him she had been accepted as a police recruit.

"I knew you could do it," he

Mrs. Maxey said she first ap-after her husband, Robert, joined the police force. But she withdrew the application after she became pregnant with her

SACRAMENTO (AP) — El-

as saying the American people

"are several generations ahead of the rest of the world" in race relations.

Cleaver said in an article

Sunday in The Sacramento Uni-esia have more freedom than blacks in dictatorial Uganda.

"Everywhere I've gone I've found that the whole sticky, relations is much more evolved and progressive in the United States than anywhere else,"

Cleaver said.

The Union said it commu-

Gold Sox contemplate Pampa

John Dittich, general manager of the Amarillo Gold Sox, was in the News office Monday along with Rick Rizzo, director of sales and promotion, and Randy Hamrick, director of stadium operation of the professional baseball team, to discuss an interesting proposition.

The three were here to solicit publicity for a Pampa Night, to be played either in Amarillo or at Pampa's Optimist Park. "We'll do one or the other," said Rizzo.

If the contest is in Amarillo, there is a chance that a Babe Ruth game between two of the three Pampa teams from the 16-18 league would precede the contest at Memorial Stadium. A large amount of tickets would be sold in Pampa prior to the Gold Sox contest.

The second choice — and the most attractive — would be to play the game in Pampa's Optimist Park, which has nearly the dimensions of a minor league stadium. The game would probably be played in July.

There are some drawbacks to playing in Pampa and they may thwart Dittich's hopes.

"Our main problem would be the facility. We don't want to place any demands on Pampa, such as 'fix this, fix that.' We don't want to say that there's gotta be this many seats and things have to be this way," Dittich said.

It is only 343 feet to centerfield at Optimist Park. The foul lines are 350 feet from home plate. With dimensions that small, pitchers could be in for a long afternoon.

Afternoon? That's another thing. The light poles at Optimist Park are not tall enough to meet Texas League specifications, which say that it should be impossible for a batted ball to go over the lights which would create lighting problems at night.

Dittich suggested if the game is played in Pampa, it would be on a Sunday afternoon.

The Gold Sox are averaging only 700 fans an outing in Memorial Stadium. If the admission charge is low enough and the game receives enough advance publicity, it could easily be a sellout and attract at least 7,000 fans.

It would probably be a good idea for the Gold Sox to consider playing at Optimist Park.

Glo-Valve's five homeruns in Friday's National League game against Dixie Parts and the three clouts in one inning may be new Pampa Optimist records.

Glo-Valve edged Dixie, 8-6. Benny Kirksey, Brad Thames and Mark Kotara homered for the winners in the bottom of the third inning.

Paul Sims

Kotara had previously homered in the second, while teammate Jill Speck, who's a girl, belted one over the fence in the fourth. Brian Goodman managed Dixie's lone clout, bringing the total number in the game to six.

"That's the most homeruns I've ever seen hit down there,"

Exes quarterback Garland McPherson connected on only one of four passes Saturday against the Harvesters in the spring game at Harvester Stadium. However, McPherson didn't need much of a passing attack as he rushed for 182 yards on 23 carries and led the exes to a surprising 6-2 win over the Harvesters. Spring training for the Harvesters continues this week and culminates Monday night with the annual Green-Gold Game. (Pampa News photo by Michal Thompson)

Andy wins over Astros

By FRED ROTHENBERG

A couple of anonymous scouts said earlier this spring that their free-agent pitcher Andy Messersmith had a sore arm, that he was damaged goods.

Evidently they never tried to hit against him.

Monday night, Messersmith, now happily chained to the Atlanta Braves, won his first game of the 1976 season, beating the Houston Astros 3-2 in the opener of a two-night doubleheader. The Astros turned the tables and won the second game 3-2.

"I'm just relieved to get the first one," said Messersmith, who signed with the Braves the first week of the regular season after missing spring training. "I can't believe it."

Elsewhere in the National League, the Pittsburgh Pirates edged the St. Louis Cardinals 2-1; the Cincinnati Reds downed the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-3, and the San Diego Padres pounded the San Francisco Giants 12-2.

Cleveland coach gets NBA honor

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland's Bill Fitch, a man until recently known more for his one-liners than for his coaching ability, is the 1976 National Basketball Association Coach of the Year.

Fitch's reaction to the announcement?

"That real nice, I guess."

Fitch, who also is general manager of the Cavaliers and has been their coach for the franchise's entire six-year history, doesn't mean to belittle the award. He just doesn't believe in individual awards.

"You know, I take this as a real big compliment to my basketball players, my assistant coach Jimmy Rodgers and the rest of my staff," Fitch said. "When you get an individual award, you're aware of how many people there are that made it possible."

The Cavaliers, who won only 15 games in their initial season and never had made the playoffs until this year, beat out the Washington Bullets for the Central Division championship, then knocked off the Bullets in seven games in the first round of the playoffs.

They trail the Boston Celtics 3-2 going into tonight's Game Six here in the Eastern Conference finals.

Fitch was elected by a panel of 54 sports writers and broadcasters, three in each of the NBA's 18 cities. He received 24 1/2 votes to 21 1/2 for Al Attles, whose Golden State Warriors won the Pacific Division title for the second straight season. That was the closest finish the Cincinnati skipper after the Reds beat Los Angeles and took over first place in the National League west from the Dodgers.

Ken Griffey keyed a four-run second inning with a two-run single and then tripled home Pete Rose in the seventh as the Reds ended Don Sutton's four game-winning streak before a Dodger Stadium crowd of 53,652, largest in the major leagues this season. The loss halted the Dodgers' home winning streak at nine.

Padres 12, Giants 2

Left-hander Randy Jones became the major league's first seven-game winner, tossing a seven-hitter to beat San Francisco.

San Diego, profiting from a 16-hit attack, tagged Jim Barr, 1-3, for three runs in the second with Jones, 7-2, aiding his cause with a run-scoring single.

Jones, runnerup in last year's voting for the National League Cy Young Award when he was the Padres' first 20-game winner, struck out three and walked one.

Hills compete in swim meet

DALLAS — Brothers Robbie, Richie and Raymond Hill, members of the Pampa Dolphin Swim Club, were entered in the Pentathlon Swim Meet over the weekend at Loops Pool here.

Robbie and Richie Hill won third-place trophies in the 11-12 boys and 10-11 under boys, respectively. Approximately 300 swimmers from 23 teams participated in the pentathlon, which consisted of five races — freestyle, backstroke, breaststroke, butterfly and 200 individual medley.

Robbie improved previous best times in five events, while Richie improved four of five times. Total times for all events determine the winners.

Robinson replacement sparkles for Baltimore

By HERSHEL NISSENBERG
AP Sports Writer

Since he came up to stay during the 1959 All-Star break, Brooks Robinson has played in 2,599 of Baltimore's 2,675 games. Monday night wasn't one of them.

On the night before his 38th birthday, one of baseball's all-time great third basemen was benched because he had developed a rusty .165 but to go with his perennial Gold Glove.

The new Brooks Robinson is 25-year-old Doug DeCinces, who collected a single and double and played errorless ball at third base as the Orioles rallied for three runs in the ninth and beat the Milwaukee Brewers 4-3.

"The fans will be looking for miracles, but I'm just going out and playing," he said.

Manager Earl Weaver said Robinson's benching was "not a permanent thing. I'll let him relax for a while. After we see what the others do, we'll decide how quick he'll be back in."

In other American League action, the Kansas City Royals nipped the Texas Rangers 8-7 in 12 innings. The Boston Red Sox blanked the Detroit Tigers 7-0, the Minnesota Twins edged the Oakland A's 5-4 in 11 innings and the California Angels pounded the Chicago White Sox 10-5. New York and Cleveland were rained out.

With Robinson watching from the bench, the Orioles won the game after Milwaukee reliever Ed Rodriguez walked three batters with one out in the ninth. Tony Muser tied the score with a two-run pinch single and eventually scored the winning run on a wild throw by catcher Darrell Porter trying to complete what would have been an inning-ending double play.

Royals 8, Rangers 7

Tom Poquette doubled home the winning run in the 12th inning after Al Cowens drew a two-out walk from Steve Foucault. The Royals had blown a 7-1 lead in the ninth inning as Jeff Burroughs of the Rangers started a six-run rally with a single and later singled home two runs to tie the score.

Red Sox 7, Tigers 0

Luis Tiant fired a five-hitter for his fifth victory and Carlton Fisk homered. Boston ripped Joe Coleman and Bill Laxton for six runs and eight hits over three innings beginning with a three-run third while Tiant handed Detroit its second straight shutout.

The Red Sox sewed it up in the third on Rick Barlow's double, a triple by Rick Miller and RBI-singles by Cecil Cooper and Dwight Evans.

Nixon becomes GOP campaign issue

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard M. Nixon is becoming a campaign issue, but ironically it is the Republican presidential contestants who are stirring the embers of Watergate and invoking the memory of the resigned president.

President Ford is, in effect, campaigning against the man who appointed him vice president, as he talks of his efforts to restore trust in the White House.

And Ronald Reagan has been speaking highly of Nixon's for-ign policy. "whatever else you may think about him." In the early days of the primaries, when he was losing to Ford, Reagan suggested that Ford would have to cope with Democratic efforts to revive Watergate.

Ford strategy now is to try to make a political plus out of the scandals and what he describes as the restoration of trust. His standard campaign speech asks for votes on the basis of the "restoration of trust in your presidency," among other things.

Less than a month ago, Ford said he was purposely avoiding mention of Nixon, believing that Watergate was best forgotten. He still avoids the name, but not the issue. "In August of 1974 there had been a shocking series of scandals in the highest offices in our lands," Ford said, campaigning for the Michigan presidential primary Tuesday. "And the American people had lost a lot of confidence in their government and the net result was that we had to restore that confidence."

"The Ford administration has been open, it has been candid, it has been forthright, and I can look every American in the eye and say that we worked at the restoration of confidence and the strengthening of integrity in the White House," he said.

Reagan, hammering at Ford foreign policy, has been saying that Nixon's was better. "Whatever you may think of the previous president, he had a foreign policy aimed at peace and I think it was working," the former California governor said in Flint, Mich., last Friday.

"He was the strategist at that time. Now someone else is the strategist at the State Department," Reagan said. That someone else, by Reagan's account, is Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, a major target for the challenger's criticism.

Kissinger was appointed secretary of state by Nixon after serving as White House adviser on national security. Kissinger said in an NBC-TV interview broadcast today that he would not prefer to remain in his post after the November election.

Reagan's praise of Nixon's foreign policy led to questions about the political future of the former president. Reagan said history will determine that. "I would not rule out whether he will ever become a viable political force. . . . He obviously is not now."

Later, Reagan said he hadn't meant there would be a role for

Nixon in any administration he headed. "I would not see a place for him in my administration," Reagan said. "I have ruled him out."

So has Ford. But neither Republican contestant has ruled him out as a topic in their battle for the 1976 nomination.

'Eleanor and Franklin' win most TV emmys

By LEE MARGULIES
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" was the big winner on the air but it was "Eleanor and Franklin," a two-part drama about the Roosevelt marriage, that emerged as the most honored program of the 1975-76 television season at the 28th annual Emmy Awards.

While "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" was named best comedy series for the second year in a row and captured four other Emmys besides, "Eleanor and Franklin" won four Monday night to add to the seven it had received last weekend.

The four-hour ABC drama grabbed Emmys in four prestigious categories during ABC's national telecast from the Shubert Theater — best comedy or dramatic special, best original screenplay for a special (James Costigan), best direction of a special (Daniel Petrie) and best supporting actress in a special (Rosemary Murphy).

In addition, "Eleanor and Franklin" had picked up seven Emmys in ceremonies held in Los Angeles last Saturday to honor the craft categories — for art direction and scenic design, costume design, makeup, cinematography, film editing, film sound mixing and an individual achievement award for hairstyling.

The other big winner Monday was "NBC's Saturday Night," a brash, satirical comedy show which won four awards, including best comedy-variety series.

Other top honors went to Peter Falk of "Columbo" as best actor in a dramatic series, Michael Learned of "The Waltons" as best actress in a dramatic series, and Jack Albertson of "Chico and the Man" as best actor in a comedy series.

"Police Story" was chosen as best dramatic series and "Upstairs, Downstairs," the English import shown on the Public Broadcasting Service, won its third Emmy in as many years as best limited series.

In addition to being named best comedy series, "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" also copied honors for three of its stars, including Miss Moore as best actress in a comedy series — her third such Emmy on this show and her fifth overall.

Honored in supporting categories were Ted Knight, the show's egocentric newscaster, and Betty White, the devilish host of a homemaking program. It was the second Emmy for each. Writer David Lloyd also got an Emmy for an episode of the CBS series.

Edward Asner didn't win as Mary's gruff newsroom boss, as he has in previous years, but he did win an Emmy as outstanding lead actor for a single drama or comedy appearance, awarded for his stunning performance as the bitter father of the two Jordache brothers in "Rich Man, Poor Man."

That was one of the few bright spots for ABC's 12-hour dramatization of the Irwin Shaw novel. "Rich Man, Poor Man" had received a record 23 Emmy nominations but wound up winning just four — Asner, Fionnuala Flanagan as best supporting actress, David Greene for direction and best music composition for a series.

"NBC's Saturday Night" won Emmys for its writers and director and for comedian Chevy Chase as best supporting actor in a variety or musical show.

Chase — best known for his satiric portrayals of President Ford and also one of the show's writers — and other "Saturday Night" winners provided some of the funniest moments of the evening.

In walking-to-the-podium to accept his acting award, Chase did an elaborate, funny fall — the trademark with which he opens each installment of "Saturday Night." He then proceeded to tell the audience: "Needless to say, this (award) is totally expected on my part."

And producer Lorne Michaels threw in his thanks to New York City, where the show is written and performed, "for providing the rejection and alienation that keeps the comedy spirit alive."

ABC captured most of the major sports awards for such programs as "NFL Monday Night Football," "Wide World of Sports" and the network's coverage of the winter Olympic Games. Sportscaster Jim McKay was named outstanding sports personality.

ABC's strong showing in sports, plus "Eleanor and Franklin," pushed it into first place in the networks' race for Emmys. ABC had 17, CBS 15, NBC 11, PBS 6 and the syndicated "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" won one special recognition Emmy for its writers.

Other winners included: Best lead actor in a limited series: Hal Holbrook, "Sand-

MOON QUAKES

HOUSTON (UPI) — A network of scientific stations set up on the moon by Apollo astronauts has detected quakes or movement about 400 miles beneath the lunar surface — as deep or deeper than quakes which occur on earth, according to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

After study of these quakes, NASA scientists believe the moon has a crust and rigid mantle as thick or thicker than the earth's.

LAND DONATED

TACOMA, Wash. (UPI) — Nearly 11,000 acres of forest land in the Great Dismal Swamp in North Carolina have been given to the nation by the Weyerhaeuser Company, a forest products company based here.

This large tract of land is the first to be donated under the auspices of a new program called The American Land Trust. The American Land Trust organization is composed of national leaders in conservation, business and civic affairs.
