School board hikes taxes 35 per cent

By JANE P. MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff

After listening sometimes reluctantly to several Pampa taxpayers questioning the need for a 35 per cent tax increase, the board of trustees for the Pampa Independent School District Thursday adopted a record $6.6 million budget and a tax rate to pay for it.

Only four of the seven board members were present. They were Paul Simmons, Bob Lyle, Buddy Epperson and Al Smith. Absent were Bill Arrington, Curt Beck and David Crossman.

The tax rate was set at $1.62. The rate for maintenance for general operation of the schools remained at the state maximum of $1.50. Debt service money used to pay off bonds to build Pampa Junior High was decreased from 30 cents to 12 cents. The rate for 1975-76 was $1.80 per $100 valuation.

The amount will represent a 35 per cent increase in taxes, the board in June raised the value of assessment from 40 per cent to 60 per cent.

It is the first tax increase set by the district since 1969 when the rate went from $1.46 to $1.50 and debt service was 40 cents.

The ratio of assessment has been at 40 per cent as far back as we have records, said Duane Walker, school business manager and tax assessor-collector.

In the lengthy, often heated discussion which preceded the motion to increase taxes, taxpayers in the audience and trustees all indicated they were after the same thing: a conservative, frill-less budget and a fair affordable education for Pampa students.

It's a very tight budget, superintendent Bob Phillips said.

There are no luxury programs in our budget, school trustee president Paul Simmons stressed.

It's a pretty good whack to taxpayers in one year, John Gikas said. He addressed a list of questions to the board, asking for an explanation of the new insurance program for school employees which will cost the district an estimated $90,000.

This is not sound stewardship, said Gikas, who served on the board for 12 years. The only way to reduce overhead is to reduce spending. It's obvious you've got problems.

But there are too many programs we didn't ask for, Simmons answered, citing the girls' athletic program as an example.

Phillips defended the employee insurance program. From the aspect of morale, it is very important. Call it a raise, that means we're paying $714 above scale, he said, adding that it was important that Pampa be able to compete with Borger, Amarillo, Spearman and Dumas for teachers.

The district had to hire 43 new teachers this year, he said.

Why does the $355,000 loan have to be paid back in one year? Why not spread it out over three years? Gikas asked.

It's illegal, Simmons said. I would not consider it a prudent way to do it, Phillips added, urging that the entire amount be paid off in 1976-77.

He pointed to the uncertain future. The next session of the legislature could enact school legislation which could further hurt the local system financially. I would like to see some relief but I'm somewhat frightened at what it could do, he said.

Smith pointed to the facility utilization, teacher ratio and curriculum studies which the board hopes might help cut future budgets.

E.C. Sidwell told the board. In the last 10 years your budget has doubled. He said the board was ripping off the taxpayers.

He likened taxpayers to stockholders in a corporation and called on the board to do a better job of communicating with its stockholders.

The revolution is already at hand, there are already two suits filed against you. It is a serious matter. There is suspicion, distrust and disrespect of the operation of the schools. I think it can be corrected with better communication, he said.

There should be a revolution if the taxes are not fair and equal, Phillips answered. Sidwell challenged Phillips to take a chunk out of this operation.

I'll be as conservative as anybody can be, but there is a point where conservatism cannot be continued without costing more in the long run, Phillips said.

Simmons agreed. There comes a time when you've got to look those things straight in the eye and do something about them.

Simmons said the board wanted to avoid this $355,000 crisis this year. He blamed the crises on the state legislature.

From the audience Peggy Palminter said she believed the $3,000 tax exemption which the board granted senior citizens discriminated against those less than 65 years of age.

The school tax system also punishes people who do not have children in school, she said, calling for an equalization of taxes.

Ad valorem tax is not the fairest way of taxing but that's the kind the legislature dictates, Simmons said.

From the audience, Barley Owens criticized the budget which has increased from $4 million to $6 million since 1973.

I think we can say that we can't take this in the next four years, he said.

Costs have gone up while actual enrollment has gone down, he pointed out. He proposed that a copy of the school budget be placed in the public library for taxpayers to peruse.

Owens also questioned the number on the school staff. It appears a lot of people are doing things other than teaching. Perhaps we have too many chiefs, he said.

Contact the legislature and tell them your feelings. We are simply working with what they give us from Austin, Phillips suggested. I say to you in all sincerity we are not overstaffed here.

Superintendent Bob Phillips pointed out that if the $355,000 which was borrowed to meet the 1975-76 budget were eliminated from the 1976-77 budget, the increase would be 7.4 per cent.

The $355,000 represents 17 cents on the tax rate, he said.

The board knew of the upcoming situation a year ago when it postponed the tax hike, board president Paul Simmons said.

We're right back to where we were a year ago and we still have to come to grips with this thing. He said industry wanted the tax rate to remain the same and the ratio of assessment to change. That is what the board did.

Al Smith said. The budget is reasonable for the program that we have. I don't see any major areas of the program I would approve of removing.

The tax rate will raise an estimated $6,073,290 for the school district depending, according to Phillips, on final assessed valuation set by the Board of Equalization and average daily attendance during 1976-77.

If, by circumstances beyond our control, the ruling were to go against the school district in regards to the suit brought by the pipeline companies, additional revenue will be lost. If this suit were lost, Pampa could well be faced with the fact of having to go through a complete program of appraisal of all real property, Phillips added.

Then Lyle moved the tax rate be set at $1.62. The motion was seconded by Epperson, who missed four of the five budget study sessions.

In other action, the board accepted a budget report, made adjustments to the 1975 tax roll and heard the first reading of a proposed policy defining full-time personnel for insurance purposes.

In a budget amendment, revenue for the 1975-76 school year listed at $5,324,711 including $2,299,776 from local and intermediate sources, $2,644,419 from state sources and $380,516 from federal sources, transfers and non-revenue receipts.

The expenditures were listed at $5,264,121 broken down into payroll costs — $4,186,937, purchased and contracted services — $301,627, supplies and materials — $208,764, other operating expenses — $130,152, debt service — $341,800 and capital outlay — $94,841.

The assessed valuation of the district was listed as $120,774,250.

Due bills and invoices were paid. They included $543,740 for a 55-gallon drum of Step Ahead and a mop bucket, $48.66 for diplomas, $857.44 for a scoreboard for junior high girl's gym, $337.40 for coaching schools, $15 for donuts for the industrial hearing and $1,322.38 for the June telephone bill.

Jet fighters retrieve bodies

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The United States was sending two squadrons of jet fighters to South Korea today as the bodies of the two American officers killed by North Korean guards in the Panmunjom truce village were flown home.

South Korean President Chung Hee Park promised immediate retaliatory steps in case of another illegal Communist North Korean provocation.

The U.S. Defense Department announced that a squadron of F4 Phantom jets had flown north from Okinawa to Korea and a squadron of F111s was being sent to Korea from Mountain Home Air Force Base in Idaho.

Officials in Washington said about 25 combat and reconnaissance planes were sent from Okinawa.

The Pentagon stressed that the air force reinforcement was a precautionary measure. Washington officials described it as a warning to North Korea, which has nearly three times as many combat planes as South Korea.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said other precautionary military measures were being taken but refused to give any indication of what they were.

We want to make it absolutely clear that the United States will not accept attacks on its personnel, he said.

The two Americans were battered and hacked to death Wednesday while heading the security detail for a South Korean working party pruning a tree in the joint security zone at Panmunjom, in the demilitarized zone between North and South Korea.

The United States charged that North Korean guards attacked the Americans and South Koreans without provocation, killed the two American officers with axes and metal pikes and wounded four American enlisted men and five South Koreans.

Three North Koreans were reported killed, and North Korea charged that the Americans and South Koreans attacked its troops.

One U.S. diplomat here, asked about the possible motives behind Wednesday's incident, said North Korean guards tend to over-react because they believe Pyongyang's propaganda that an all-out U.S.-South Korean attack is imminent.

He also said he believed the North Koreans may be capitalizing on the Vietnam syndrome, triggering incidents that they hope will wear down the American public's patience and cause it, as in Vietnam, to demand a withdrawal of U.S. forces.

The 41,000 American troops in Korea, South Korea's 600,000-man armed forces and North Korea's estimated 685,000 men in uniform were all put on precautionary alerts after the clash. But the 151-mile-long demilitarized zone was reported quiet today, and the people of Seoul went about their business as usual.

The bodies of the two Americans, Maj. Arthur Bonifas, 33, of Newburgh, N.Y., and 1st Lt. Mark T. Barrett, 25, of Columbia, S.C., were put aboard a U.S. Air Force C130 transport after a plane-side memorial service at Kimpo International Airport attended by military personnel and more than 100 government, military and diplomatic officials.

Chaplain Robert A. Hutcherson led the mourners in prayer. A sergeant sounded taps, echoed by another bugler in the background. Three rifle volleys were fired.

All airport activities stopped during the 25-minute service, and dozens of Korean workers in white fatigues stood with their heads bowed.

Consumer prices increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices rose by half a percentage point for the second month in a row in July, the government said today. Food costs increased moderately but there were rapid jumps in such things as gasoline and medical care.

The five-tenths of 1 per cent advance, which amounts to a compound annual rate of 6.2 per cent, means inflation has remained virtually stable since the four-tenths of 1 per cent price increase in April.

The Labor Department said prices now stand 5.4 per cent ahead of where they were a year ago. That's the smallest year-to-year rise since the 5.1 per cent advance as of April 1973.

The pace of inflation enabled workers to expand their buying power, the department said.

After-tax weekly earnings discounted for inflation grew by one-tenths of 1 per cent, reversing June's five-tenths of 1 per cent drop. For the year, inflation-adjusted earnings are up three-tenths of 1 per cent.

The Labor Department said the primary ingredients of the rise in prices were gasoline, used cars, medical care, transportation services, home loan interest rates and dairy products.

Food prices were actually up by the biggest margin in nine months — seven-tenths of 1 per cent — but since July is typically a month of higher food prices, the gain was adjusted to show a one-tenth of 1 per cent increase for the index.

Meat, poultry and fish prices, though actually up seven-tenths of 1 per cent, showed a 1.6 per cent drop after adjustment for seasonal variations and now stand 2 per cent below a year ago.

Those protein prices were offset by higher prices for coffee, eggs and dairy products. Coffee prices are 5.4 per cent above a year ago.

Commodities other than food rose by six-tenths of 1 per cent in price, the department said, with gasoline prices accounting for almost a fourth of that jump. Gasoline prices rose 1.5 per cent, leaving the average national price of a gallon of unleaded regular gasoline at 62.3 cents in July.

The costs of service were up by six-tenths of 1 per cent, with medical care showing the strongest increase. Prices for medical care had been increasing at about the same rate as consumer prices generally for the last three months, but in July the cost of medical care shot up 1.1 per cent. Medical care now costs 9.7 per cent more than it did a year ago.

The department said the latest changes in prices left its consumer price index at 171.1, meaning a market basket of goods and services costing $100 in 1967 now costs $171.10.

Consumer prices were up by five-tenths of 1 per cent in June, leaving them 5.9 per cent ahead of a year ago. This advance is expected to be smaller after the July report.

Much of the relief from the high rates of inflation of the previous three months can be attributed to food prices. They had declined for three consecutive months at the start of the year and as of June were only 3.7 per cent ahead of a year earlier.

If it hadn't been for food prices, inflation for the year ending June 30 would have been seven-tenths of 1 per cent higher at 6.6 per cent.

Middle American ticket

Convention ends; GOP primed

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Republicans' Middle America ticket of Gerald R. Ford and Robert Dole leaves this city with promises of support from the once-divided GOP convention for its underdog team and primed for debate with Democrat Jimmy Carter.

Ford took the initiative Thursday night when he launched his campaign against Carter with a challenge to "debate the real issues, face to face" before the Republican convention adjourned, Carter accepted.

From his home in Plains, Ga., Carter called on Ford to join him in a debate or series of debates that would provide "the fullest and most detailed examination of the programs offered by both sides."

The debate challenge wasn't in the advance text of Ford's speech accepting the presidential nomination.

"I am ready and eager," he told the delegates "to go before the American people and debate the real issues, face to face with Jimmy Carter. The people have a right to know where we both stand."

The delegates roared their approval in what was probably the most emotional and most spontaneous response Ford received during the convention.

But the final emotional moment belonged to the man Ford defeated. After his acceptance speech, Ford called Ronald Reagan and his wife, Nancy, to the podium.

It was gesture of unity often seen in the closing moments of national political conventions. The victor and the vanquished stand together to demonstrate to their followers that the contest is over and it is time to unite against the common enemy.

But when Reagan began to speak, the hall grew silent. He recalled the cheers that had greeted his arrival in the hall hours earlier. They give us a memory that will live in our hearts forever," he said.

Among the delegates who had given Reagan 1,070 votes, 60 short of the majority he sought for the presidential nomination, many wept.

The former California governor referred to the erosion of freedom that has taken place under Democratic rule.

He told the delegates that although they belonged to a minority party, their actions could significantly affect the course of American history.

We must go forward from here united, determined," Reagan said.

Then he embraced Betty Ford, and greeted others on the podium. Minutes later, the convention ended.

After his defeat Wednesday night, Reagan pledged to campaign for Ford. And Ford acknowledged the pledge in his acceptance speech when he said that "after the scurrillages of the past few months, it really feels good to have Ron Reagan on the same side of the line."

But only the campaign itself will demonstrate whether the show of unity that ended the Republican convention or the one that ended the Democratic convention a month earlier will hold up, whether wounds will heal, whether supporters of the losers will work with enthusiasm for the victors.

In an Associated Press survey of Reagan supporters at the convention, 80 per cent of the more than 600 who responded said they would work for the Ford-Dole ticket. But more than one-third of those who said they'd work also indicated most of their effort will go to the campaigns of other Republican candidates.

The survey turned up almost no support for a third-party effort among the backers of the conservative Californian.

And the Reagan delegates joined with Ford backers to interrupt the President with applause 63 times during his acceptance speech Thursday night.

I have been called an unelected president, an accidental president," Ford said.

Having become vice president and president, without expecting or seeking either," he added. "I have a special feeling toward these high offices."

To me, the presidency and the vice presidency were not prizes to be won, but a duty to be done.

So tonight, it is not the power and glamour of the presidency that leads me to ask for another four years. It is something every hard-working American will understand — the challenge of a job well begun, but far from finished."

He appealed for unity and support from the convention and for a mandate from the nation that watched and listened.

His speech contained the expected attacks on the Democratic Congress and inevitable contrasts to the policies of his predecessor in the White House, Richard M. Nixon.

It also included acknowledgement of his underdog position and another of his frequent tributes to Harry S. Truman, who won a come-from-behind victory in 1948 against Thomas E. Dewey and what Truman branded the "do-nothing 80th Congress."

In tones reminiscent of Truman's campaign, Ford attacked the "vote-hungry, free-spending Congressional majority."

He said the Democratic platform "talks about tax reform, but there's one big problem — their own Congress won't act."

In similar references to Democratic platform positions on school busing and crime, Ford concluded with the same refrain: "Their own Congress won't act."

My friends, Washington is not the problem — their Congress is the problem," he said.

The President never mentioned Nixon by name, but Ford recalled how he came to the presidency. "It was an hour of our history that troubled our minds and tore at our hearts. Anger and hatred had risen to dangerous levels, dividing friends and families. The polarization of our political order had aroused unworthy passions of reprisal and revenge."

There were other problems when he took office, Ford said.

Our economy was in the throes of runaway inflation, taking us headlong into the worst recession since Franklin D. Roosevelt took the same oath," said the President.

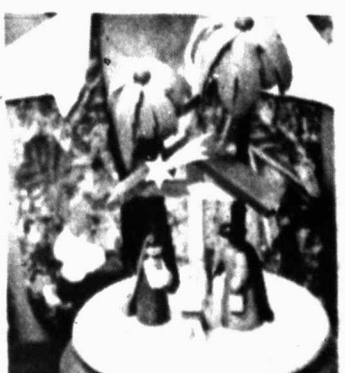

But first, there was the debate challenge which caught Carter's staff by surprise.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford had been considering issuing the challenge for the past 10 days. He said it was left out of the advance text of the speech because Ford wanted to save it as a surprise for the delegates.

Carter's staff protested references to their response as an acceptance of Ford's challenge. They said Carter has repeatedly said he would be willing to debate his Republican opponent, even before he knew whether it would be Ford or Reagan.

Private sector does it better

Exploding government costs and demands of strapped taxpayers are forcing city fathers and other government officials all across the country to call on private enterprise to get them out of their difficulties. As a result, notes the current edition of U.S. News and World Report, many jobs once done by government employees are being contracted out to private firms — more often than not at amazing savings.

Profit-seeking businesses have long provided some city services, like garbage collection, for example. Now, faced with the necessity of budget cutting, city after city is signing contracts with private firms for all sorts of services from fixing school meals, washing windows, plowing snow and operating land fillers to tending parking meters, collecting tax bills, trimming trees and feeding prisoners.

Some for instances — In San Francisco, some park and recreation facilities are being operated by private firms — at a profit rather than a cost to taxpayers.

—McDonald's, the fast-food chain, has taken over high school cafeteria service in Benton, Arkansas, with the result that what was a financial loser under bureaucratic management has been turned into a profit-maker.

—Under a seven-year, 26 million dollar contract, Orange County Calif. has turned its data processing functions over to the private Computer Sciences Corp. for an expected savings of 11 million dollars a year. The contract has done everything we had hoped for, a county official was quoted as saying, "and has brought some benefits we hadn't anticipated." —In such places as Barnesville, Ohio, undercover narcotics investigations are carried out by the private firm of N.E.T. Inc. The firm claims a 100 percent conviction rate in the 21 states in which it operates under contract with small local governments.

—Market place security guards protect the city hall and municipal courts buildings in Houston, Texas, although the police headquarters is just a half block away.

—And, in Scottsdale, Arizona, of course, a privately owned company has been providing fire protection for years, doing a better job of it than most municipally managed departments, according to enthusiastic city officials.

—The city of Arlington Heights, Illinois, contracts with a local firm for landscaping and maintenance of public property.

—Upkeep costs of the public golf course in Downey, Calif., have dropped 20 percent since the city turned operation of the facility over to a private firm.

—Any number of cities, among them New Orleans, La., and Portland, Ore., are getting out of the garbage disposal business, turning the job over to private enterprise. —And, to cite a final example, not because we have exhausted the list, but because we are running out of space, when new public buildings went up in Des Moines, Iowa, and Fort Lauderdale, Fla., the cities hired market place operators to clean the windows regularly rather than spend taxpayer money for special equipment and to put window washers on the cities' payrolls. "Contracting is cheaper," USN&WP quoted the Des Moines city manager as saying. The old saying, "anything the government can do, the market place can do better and cheaper," may not be true to the extent required to qualify it as an absolute principle but, certainly, as USN&WP found, it is true often enough to cause governments, running out of things to tax, to begin letting the market provide services in which bureaucracy should have never been permitted to become involved in the first place.

Voters swayed by poll results

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The other day at a community swimming meet each timekeeper was told to quietly write in reading on the record sheet — not to voice his results out loud. Experience had demonstrated other timekeepers could be unduly influenced and some would change their times.

Surveys by political scientists seem to suggest strongly that poll results do swing votes in political races. No one knows why.

It is usually argued, with apparently little foundation, that a percentage of the voters want to be certain of going with the winner, so that their votes aren't "wasted."

If polls were reasonably accurate, and unbiased, this might not matter — or not matter much. But there is increasing evidence that polls — including most of the better known political surveys — are not only inaccurate, except on occasion, but are subtly biased as well.

Michael Wheeler, associate professor of law at the New England School of Law in Boston, has now written a book entitled "Lies, Damn Lies, and Statistics: The Manipulation of Public Opinion in America."

In this book, Wheeler includes an analysis of some of the results of one of the more famous public pollsters in this country. He compares the reportedly nonpartisan ratings of President Nixon noted by this pollster (who had been employed by President Kennedy) before and after quietly taking on a job at the Nixon White House.

According to Wheeler, the more friendly this man became with Nixon assistant Charles Colson, the higher the Nixon rating in his nonpartisan polls. Wheeler suggests that these poll results may have helped to keep Mr. Nixon in office longer than otherwise.

Wheeler does not suggest this pollster consciously twisted his questions or deliberately biased his techniques. Nor is there any proof that the shift was anything more than accidental. But there it was, at least according to the Wheeler survey.

Now this same pollster, by his own statements, is a very close friend of Sen. Walter Mondale. Democratic vice presidential candidate.

The logical question is whether this man's friendship with Mondale is influencing his polls, which today show an extraordinarily high preference for the Carter-Mondale ticket. Some would say an unbelievably high preference, if judged by most past elections.

The other logical question is will those polls shift a significant number of votes?

To keep things in balance, it must be pointed out that another equally respected pollster has, according to some surveys, personally leaned toward Republican tickets, this reportedly showing up in his polls.

One thing is certain. Most of us are biased. For another, the questions in polls are normally highly subjective and usually poorly or vaguely phrased. The answers received and the interpretation of those answers can be consciously or unconsciously slanted to give results which may be far from the truth.

Part of the problem lies in our language, or interpretation. The word "fair" may be a derogatory term to some in evaluating a man. To others, it may indicate competence. Thus, when all the checks in a "fair" column are lumped together they may have no meaning statistically.

Some of the more famous of the pollsters have acquired their reputations by hitting presidential results on the nose on occasion in just before election surveys. What they fail to mention is that more often than not their crucial surveys are wide of the mark. They build their batting averages by including a wide number of polls on matters so obvious they can't go wrong.

The most dangerous polls by far are those taken early in a presidential race or on a controversial subject, when their results, according to Wheeler, can be self-fulfilling prophecies.

Expense accounts padded

By PETER GRUENSTEIN

News Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — One of the more than dozen expense accounts to which members of Congress are entitled is the $6,500 per year stationary allowance which representatives may legally pocket if they do not wish to spend it on business purposes. For example, The News Washington bureau reported last year that several dozen retiring legislators withdrew the remaining funds from their stationary allowances upon leaving Congress. Leading the pack was former Rep. H.R. Gross, R-Iowa, who took $23,600 with him.

And it has not been unheard of for some representatives to overpay their aides from the staff allowance, presently almost a quarter million dollars annually, and have them kick back some of it in the form of large campaign contributions.

The Wall Street Journal revealed a new congressional rip-off of the taxpayers' money: falsified travel vouchers. A case in point:

Rep. Ray Madden, D-Ind., the 84-year-old dean of the House, has regularly sent in expense vouchers that claimed he drove the 1,415 miles round trip between here and Hammond, Ind. With $4.50 for tolls, his request for reimbursements amounted to $287.50 per trip.

(Under House rules, representatives may claim reimbursement for 26 round trips between Washington and their districts per year. They can either claim the cost of a coach or first class airplane ticket upon presentation of the ticket, or they can request a more lucrative 20 cents per mile by car without having to supply any receipts.)

Madden admitted to the Journal that his expense vouchers were false. "I haven't driven in 15 years," he said. He blamed the inaccurate expense forms on his staff, saying he didn't know why they would consistently prepare false forms. (Round trip air fare would have cost Madden only $200 for first class, $146 for coach.)

A number of other congressmen have admitted that they too filed false vouchers. Several of them were recorded voting in Washington on days they were supposedly back in their districts. One — Rep. William Clay, D-Missouri — claimed reimbursement for two trips originating from separate cities during the same time period, obviously an impossibility.

Most of the congressmen nabbed by the Journal admitted their expense forms were inaccurate, but said they were merely honest mistakes and that they would reimburse the government for overcharges.

WASHINGTON — Here are some items of interest to Texans originating from the nation's capital.

CASE OF THE LOST CORK SCREW — One day not too long ago an attractive blonde woman who worked two doors from Rep. Charles Wilson's office in the House Longworth Building borrowed a cork screw.

The woman, who was seldom seen in the building by Wilson's staffers despite the proximity of her office to Wilson's, never returned the cork screw.

So when the Washington Post reported that Elizabeth Ray, 33, charged that she was put on the payroll of Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, to serve as his mistress, those in Wilson's office were surprised, somewhat. Ray turned out to be Wilson's neighbor who had never returned the cork screw.

Shortly after the Ray allegations made the news an attorney for Hays interviewed nearly everyone in Wilson's office, apparently attempting to ascertain if Ray was seen working with any frequency.

"I walked by that office every day," said a Wilson staffer, who added he seldom saw any sign of activity.

EVASIVE ANSWER — There some questions a congressman just doesn't want to answer these days.

Take, for instance, questions involving Capitol Hill morals. The recent flak regarding two congressmen allegedly putting women on their payroll primarily in return for sexual favors has reopened the age-old question: how much should the public know about a congressman's private life?

The answers vary. Rep. Jack Hightower, D-Vernon, says everything he does should be open to public scrutiny. Rep. Wilson, D-Lufkin, takes the opposite viewpoint. What I do in my spare time as long as it does not interfere with my job, Wilson says, is nobody's business but mine.

But Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Beaumont, takes the classic nonposition. He says he hasn't thought about where his public life ends and his private life begins, and doesn't want to talk about it.

"I don't want to tackle it."

Brooks replied to a query. He added, however, that it appeared from recent news stories that congressmen are judged guilty until proven innocent.

EXPECTED RESULTS — Rep. Alan Steelman, the Republican who hopes to unseat Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Houston, this fall, recently learned that his Dallas-area constituents are as conservative as he expected them to be.

Earlier this month Steelman, who represents the middle-class Fifth District, released the results of a fairly lengthy constituent questionnaire.

The results indicate that a majority of those responding to the poll believe that the United States should retain control over the Panama Canal, oppose detente with the Soviet Union, think public employees should not be allowed to strike for better wages and maintain that criminals who use guns should be given mandatory prison sentences.

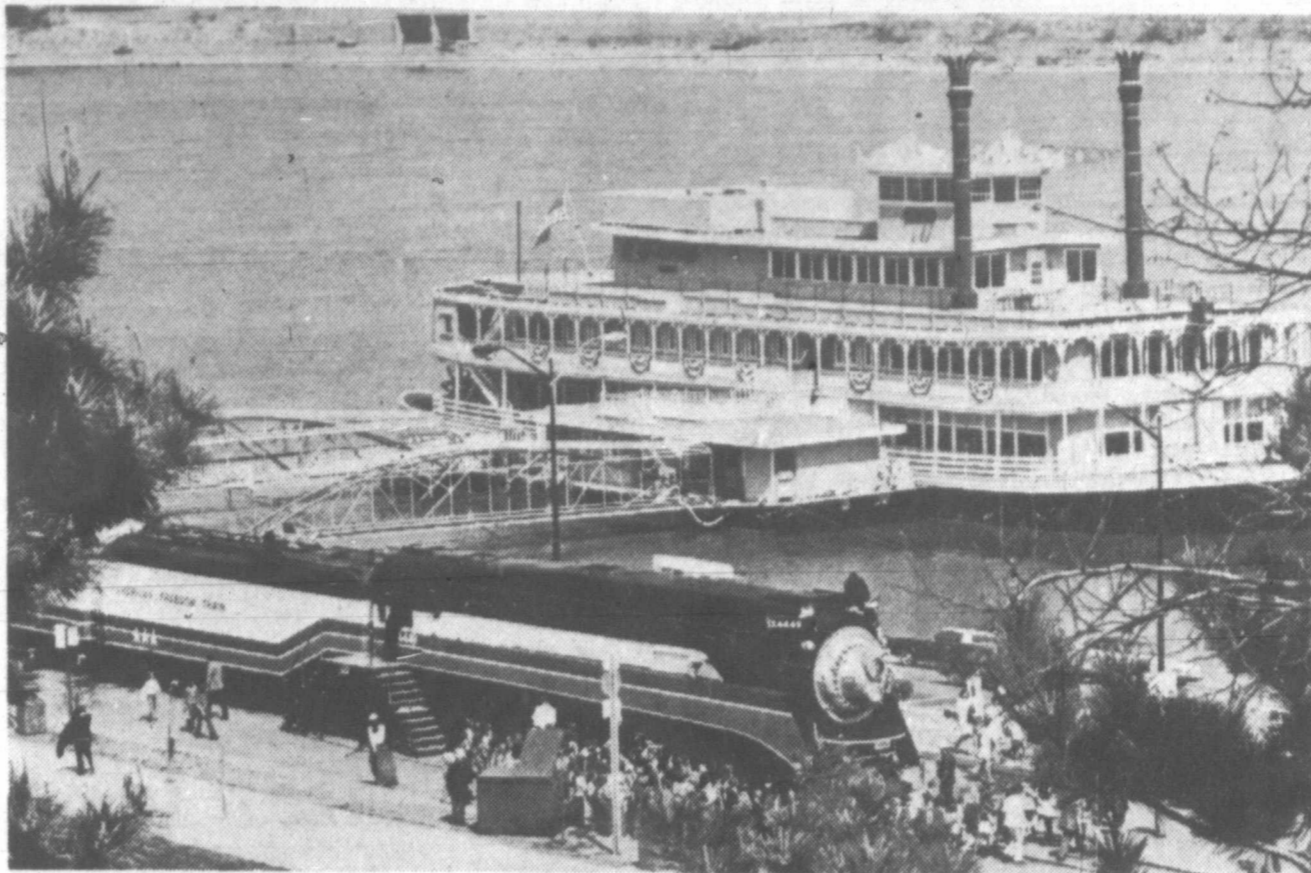

Steelman, a strong environmentalist who generally votes the conservative Republican Party line on other issues, in completing two terms in the House this year. He's running for a Senate seat, partly because of frustration working in the large 435-member House and partly because his polls show that Bentsen is vulnerable.

PICKLE POKE — Rep. J.J. Pickle has taken a verbal swipe at Secretary of Labor W.J. Usery for his recent remarks praising the leadership of the Teamsters Union at its convention in Las Vegas last week.

The Austin Democrat, a member of the House Ways and Means subcommittee which oversees the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, criticized the cabinet official in light of the Labor Department's investigation into the sizeable Teamsters' Central States Pension Fund.

"When the investigators bossman breaks bread and gives a toast to the target of an investigation, my common sense tells me such action hurts the morale of the investigators," Pickle said in a statement. Usery praised the Teamsters leaders at the union's recent convention, saying they "do an outstanding job."

Names in the news

ASPEN, Colo. (AP) — Entertainer Claudine Longet's trial on charges of killing her lover probably will not begin on schedule Aug. 30 because the prosecution has appealed a ruling suppressing her diary and other evidence, the judge says.

Miss Longet, 35, former wife of singer Andy Williams, has pleaded innocent to manslaughter in the March 21 shooting death of professional skier Spider Sabich.

The prosecution appealed to the state Supreme Court after Judge George E. Lohr granted a defense motion to suppress Miss Longet's diary and some personal papers. The judge ruled that investigators violated her rights by removing them from a dresser drawer.

Lohr said the appeal will affect the trial date. He said he would meet with attorneys on Friday to discuss the start of the trial. Miss Longet is free on $5,000 personal recognizance bond.

NAIROBI, Kenya — Uganda President Idi Amin says Israel must pay for the loss of lives and property in the Entebbe airport raid and for the "hospitality" he extended to the hijacked hostages.

Amin sent a cable to Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin giving him a week to respond to these demands, but making no specific threats if he failed. Radio Uganda said Wednesday in a broadcast monitored here.

Uganda has claimed that 20 of its soldiers were killed in the July 4 Israeli raid to free hostages taken in the hijacking of an Air France Airbus by pro-Palestinian terrorists. Some of the hostages later said Amin appeared to be giving full support to the hijackers.

NORTH WILDWOOD, N.J. (AP) — James Salamites, whose car collided with President Ford's limousine last fall, has been placed on three months probation and fined $25 in connection with a drug arrest.

Lohr said the appeal will affect the trial date. He said he would meet with attorneys on Friday to discuss the start of the trial. Miss Longet is free on $5,000 personal recognizance bond.

SALAMITES, 20, of Meriden, Conn. had been arrested here July 14 after police were called to a disturbance at a gas station and found what they said was some hashish in his car.

In a brief municipal court session Wednesday, Magistrate Edwin Bradway accepted a defense motion that Salamites be granted a conditional discharge on a charge of possessing drugs. He then pleaded guilty to a charge of creating a disturbance.

Last Oct. 14, Salamites' car collided with Ford's limousine at an unguarded intersection in Hartford, Conn., after Ford had left a Republican fund-raising dinner at the Hartford Civic Center. No one was injured in the collision.

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Barry Newman, who played a lawyer in the TV series "Petrocelli," has been accused in a lawsuit of negligent driving that led to the death of a man.

Barbara Hoppe of Green Valley, Ariz., filed the suit in Superior Court alleging that Newman's negligent and reckless driving last April 22 caused a traffic collision in which her husband, Herbert, was injured. The suit said the accident provoked a heart attack which killed Hoppe several weeks later.

The suit asks unspecified damages. Police records of the collision said Hoppe suffered a wrist injury, was treated at a hospital here and released. Newman was here filming the since-cancelled series.

No-frill house was shortlived

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans put fewer extras in the new homes they bought last year, but analysts say the shift to a no-frill house was short-lived and probably is over.

New Census Bureau figures show that homes built in 1975 generally were smaller, had fewer bedrooms, bathrooms and garages, and were less likely to have central air conditioning. Economists say the recession that began to lift in mid-1975 spurred the trend.

Not everything was barebones, however. Fifty-two per cent of new homes were built with fireplaces in 1975, up from 49 per cent in 1974.

Despite the economies, the median new home price jumped 9.5 per cent in 1975 to $42,600 from $38,900. That was a smaller increase than in 1973 and 1974, when the median price climbed 27.5 per cent, or $8,400. But in those years homes were growing larger and more luxurious.

Builders, who prefer to call the "no frills" house the "basic" house, felt that by cutting corners last year they could increase the number of persons who could afford to buy new homes.

But an economist with the National Association of Home Builders said the back-to-basics trend never got up much steam.

"From what we have in our own data, we already can see a leveling off," said Robert Sheehan. He expects homes to be built with fewer bathrooms in the future, however, and anticipates more townhouses in proportion to detached houses.

John C. Weicher, the Department of Housing and Urban Development's chief economist, commented: "I would not think you are going to see downturns like that continually. . . . My sense of last year is that along about the end of the summer it became reasonably clear we were pulling out of the recession. People in the market for new homes found they were in better shape than they thought they were."

Weicher said that in recent months the proportion of new single-family homes priced below $30,000 has slipped from about 23 per cent to 14 per cent or lower.

Marines drop charges on death of recruit

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — A Marine Corps captain has been offered non-judicial punishment and a court-martial has been dropped for a sergeant charged in connection with fatal injuries to a recruit.

Maj. Gen. Kenneth Houghton, commander of the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, said Wednesday all charges against Sgt. Henry C. Aguilar have been dismissed.

Houghton said he also is willing to drop a general court-martial for Capt. Cecil V. Taylor, 34, of Orlando, Fla., in exchange for Taylor's agreement to accept non-judicial punishment.

Taylor was commander and Aguilar a drill instructor at the depot's Special Training Branch, a unit for problem recruits, on Dec. 6 when Pvt. Lynn E. McClure, 20, was injured after being forced to fight consecutive pugil stick bouts.

McClure remained in a coma until his death in a Houston hospital three months later.

The Marine Corps has contended that forcing McClure to fight match after match with the padded sticks, used to simulate bayonet work, violated regulations.

Taylor, as commander of the Special Training Branch, had faced charges of dereliction of duty and violation of base orders. Aguilar was charged with those counts, negligent homicide, maltreatment of a recruit and aggravated assault.

The dereliction counts against Taylor were withdrawn May 20. An investigative officer this month sent new recommendations in the Taylor case to Houghton. The findings followed several days of testimony.

Defense hears tapes

HOUSTON (AP) — Defense attorneys for state District Court Judge Garth Bates, charged in the accepting a $59,000 bribe, have been given the right to hear tape recordings and look at photographs used in the investigation.

Retired Judge John Barron of Bryan, appointed to hear the case, ruled in a brief pre-trial hearing Wednesday that defense lawyers should have the right to check the prosecution evidence.

Bates, 61, was indicted by a grand jury of accepting a bribe to keep Mukie Fontenot, a Houston pawn broker, out of jail. Fontenot was accused of hiding some $90,000 in jewelry stolen from a salesman. His case was to be heard before Bates.

Also charged in the case is Ed Jay Riklin, 46, who was indicted as the go-between in the case.

Defense lawyers said the tape recordings and photos could be accidentally or intentionally lost or altered should they remain in the custody of the state.

Barron approved the motion after prosecutor John Holmes made no objection.

The pictures mentioned in the hearing were said to include shots of Judge Bates entering and leaving the Riklin apartment. The two were arrested outside that apartment July 16.

Debate call upstages Carter

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer
AMERICUS, Ga. (AP) — President Ford's challenge to a presidential campaign debate upstaged Jimmy Carter and caught the Democratic nominee and his staff by surprise.

The words "face-to-face" debate were hardly out of Ford's mouth when Carter's press secretary rounded up reporters to say his candidate, too, was ready to debate — a decision that could produce the first such presidential campaign encounter since John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon met in 1960 in a series of four nationally televised debates.

Ford made his challenge Thursday night in his presidential nomination acceptance speech to the Republican National Convention and a national television audience.

"I am ready and eager," he told the delegates, "to go before the American people and debate Jimmy Carter. The people have a right to know where we stand."

The debate challenge was not in the advance text of Ford's speech.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford had been considering issuing the challenge for the past 10 days. He said it was left out of the advance text of the speech because Ford wanted to save it as a surprise for the delegates.

Carter press secretary Jody Powell relayed Carter's acceptance — what Carter people called his "counter challenge" — to fewer than a dozen reporters watching Ford deliver his speech on a television set beside a motel swimming pool.

His staff had scurried from room to room searching for newspaper, wire service and television reporters. Powell read the only available copy of the Carter statement.

It wasn't supposed to happen that way. Carter had intended to issue his own debate challenge to Ford today at a 9 a.m. news conference in a carefully orchestrated response to the week-long GOP convention.

But he decided to release his prepared statement as soon as he learned of Ford's decision from television commentators, who reported shortly before Ford gave his speech that he would issue the debate challenge.

Carter and his wife, Rosalyn, watched the Ford speech Thursday night in their home on the outskirts of nearby Plains.

Carter's prepared text said he will do his best to use normal campaign methods — speeches, press releases and advertising — "to be sure the American people understand my hopes and plans."

He proposed a single debate or series of debates, and said, "In the interest of an informed choice for the American people, I believe the candidates have an obligation to meet in debate before the people of this country."

Carter said he does not believe choosing a debate format will be any problem, although he said he has not committed himself to any of the debate proposals he had previously received.

The League arranged a series of joint appearances by most of the contenders in this year's Democratic presidential primaries.

Carter said he has named Powell to the steering committee which is laying groundwork for a potential debate for the League of Women Voters. He said President Ford has named a member of his staff to the same panel.

Republicans shunned in polite conversation, they still referred to that actor, that Reagan guy, who radiated such sincerity, such belief in his 11th hour appeal for the Goldwater cause.

It was that one speech that launched Reagan into the 1966 California primary for governor, and "the Democrats laughed at him as a phony, a late-show freak and neophyte unskilled in the knife-sharp practice of politics. One chain of television stations ran old Reagan movies before the general elections that year, showing candidate Reagan every night in a different role. The opposition's favorite advertisements showed Reagan as a cowboy, carrying a gun, or as a detective or in some other role.

Dairyman Jacobson gets 2 year probation

By BROOKS JACKSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Former dairy lobbyist Jake Jacobson was sentenced to two years probation today for his part in the Nixon era milk scandal.

U.S. District Judge George L. Hart said Jacobson "richly deserved" to be jailed but that Jacobson is the only person able to care for his ailing wife who might die should her husband be imprisoned.

Jacobson, one-time White House lawyer for former President Lyndon Johnson, was indicted for his role in representing the giant dairy farmer cooperative Associated Milk Inc. during the Nixon administration.

Jacobson eventually pleaded guilty to a charge of bribing then Treasury Secretary John B. Connally with $10,000, and Jacobson was excused of other charges of swindling a Texas savings and loan association of $825,000. Connally was indicted for taking the dairymen's money but was acquitted in a jury trial last year. Jacobson was a key witness against Connally.

Jacobson's attorney, Charles A. McNelis, said Jacobson deserved mercy because he is bankrupt, a convicted felon, faces a seven year suspension from law practice in Texas, has been sentenced to seven years probation on state charges in the savings and loan case, and cooperated with the government in the prosecution of Connally and other cases.

Hart told Jacobson: "You richly deserve to be imprisoned for a substantial period of time you have walked with princes in your time and now you have been reduced to the degradation of the common criminal."

But Hart said his presentencing investigation convinced him that Jacobson's wife has been ill for many years and that Jacobson himself has been "more than a model of conjugal devotion."

The exact nature of Mrs. Jacobson's illness was not discussed during the sentencing. Jacobson said: "I hope your honor will take into consideration the physical and mental condition of my wife and my financial condition." McNelis said in court today that Mrs. Jacobson soon faces surgery as well.

Hart said that should he send Jacobson to prison his wife would have to be sent to a public institution. "I'm advised by her doctor that that could be fatal."

Hart went through the formality of sentencing Jacobson to the maximum on the federal bribery charge to which he pleaded guilty two years ago, two years in prison and a $10,000 fine. Then Hart suspended the sentence, remitted the fine and put Jacobson on two year's federal probation.

Although Jacobson pleaded guilty to the charge on Aug. 7, 1974, sentencing was delayed because a federal judge in Texas refused to honor the government's plea bargaining arrangement and appointed special prosecutors to try Jacobson on the federal charges in the savings and loan cases. However a federal court of appeals ruled that the judge must honor the government's bargain, and the Supreme Court recently allowed that ruling to stand.

Convicts return

DALLAS (AP) — Five convicts who challenged their transfer to state prison while their cases were on appeal must go back to Huntsville, a judge has ruled.

State District Court Judge Jerome Chamberlain denied Thursday a motion by the five that they be allowed to remain in county jail while their writs of habeas corpus are being considered.

Reagan gives followers tearful adieu after loss

By DAVE RILEY
Associated Press Writer
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — There were tears in Ronald Reagan's eyes at the moment of his deepest disappointment as there had been once before at the scene of his greatest triumph.

There was a feeling of past experiences, watching the 65-year-old former actor, former governor, never-to-be president standing there with tears welling, bidding farewell to troops wildly loyal not just to the cause but to the man.

Some who remembered Ronald Reagan's beginnings, the first step from "Death Valley Days" and the midnight movie to the very brink of the Republican presidential nomination, also recalled the tears on the night of the man's greatest success in California 10 years ago.

There was something incongruous back in 1964 about this grade B actor suddenly showing up on television late in the presidential campaign, pleading with the voters on behalf of a lost cause — Barry Goldwater.

And after Goldwater's candidacy became a debacle that the middle of the night, Reagan, tears welling, his voice tense and choked, took the oath and became California's governor. It would be his greatest role.

Those who were there and those who watched that bizarre TV late show remember the look, the sound of Ronald Reagan, actor now governor, as the full impact of what was happening to him struck home.

He wasn't just acting any more. He was the governor of a state populated by 15 million very real people.

So there was a similarity, watching Reagan the winner taking the oath of office and Reagan the loser bidding farewell to loyal legions.

"Don't get cynical," he told them. "Look at yourselves and what you are willing to do and recognize that there are millions and millions of Americans out there that want what you want, that want it to be that way, want it to be a shining city on the hill."

The tears came then and he turned away, saying, "I've done this once this morning, and I said I wouldn't do it again."

It was a strange ceremony in leaders held under the detention-without-trial provisions of the Internal Security Act since renewed violence broke out in black townships last week.

Kruger has in the past blamed the disruptions on the importation of "black power ideology" from the United States. The dissident blacks have been protesting the white government's apartheid policies of racial segregation.

The latest deaths, raising the toll in racial violence to at least 252 dead since mid-June, came in rioting and clashes between police and blacks that began Tuesday in Port Elizabeth's three African townships.

All but three of those killed in the past two months have been black, and more than 1,500 persons have been injured.

The rioting spread outside the Port Elizabeth townships on Thursday, and for the first time industrial plants became a target. Until then, the violence had been confined to the black

Police claim 33 blacks die in South Africa riot

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police said today a total of 33 blacks were killed in three days of antigovernment rioting in black townships around Port Elizabeth, the center of South Africa's automobile industry.

"More bodies have been found," a Port Elizabeth police spokesman said. "Some of them were killed by knives; others were run down by motor vehicles, and about two were shot."

Police said 49 more deaths had been confirmed. Many of the victims were killed by police gunfire.

The area around the southeastern coastal city was "relatively calm" today, a police spokesman said.

Police Minister James Kruger claimed in a speech Thursday night that almost all the organizers of South Africa's continuing racial upheavals have been arrested.

The Johannesburg Star newspaper reported today that 49 leaders of South Africa's growing "black consciousness" movement have been arrested in the past nine days. They are among an estimated 140 black ghettos outside the cities, and the only effect on industry had been absenteeism caused by workers being prevented from getting to work. But on Thursday several hundred blacks tried to storm two automobile factories. Police gunfire drove them off.

South Africa's industrialists called for sweeping improvements in political, living and employment conditions in the riot-torn black townships which supply their labor force. The Transvaal Chamber of Industries sent a memorandum to Prime Minister John Vorster urging self-government in the segregated townships in which all urban blacks must live, improved housing, and an end to job and wage discrimination.

"To give the black employe the dignity and self-respect to which he is entitled, wages should be adequate for him to pay for the services he utilizes," the statement said.

PIF board to meet, appoint new directors

The board of the Pampa Industrial Foundation will meet at 10 a.m. Tuesday in the Chamber of Commerce conference room to appoint a nominating committee for election of five new directors to serve three-year terms.

Kay Fancher, board president, said ten names will be selected from which the membership will elect five to take office Jan. 1.

Terms of Milo Carlson, Frank Culbertson, E.L. Green Jr., Ray Kuhn and Fred Neslage will expire Dec. 31.

New officers for 1977 will be elected following announcement of the election results. Fancher stated.

Current PIF officers in addition to president Fancher are Harold Barrett, vice president; E.L. Green Jr., vice president; Fred Neslage, vice president; Aubrey Steele, and Floyd Watson, treasurers; E.O. Wedgeworth, executive vice president and secretary; Bill Chambliss, auditor, and Don Lane, legal counsel.

Cabon awarded contract for more than $3 million

Congressman Jack Hightower's office today announced that a $3,617,785 contract had been awarded Pampa's Cabot Machinery

Division plant by the U.S. Army. Vic Raymond, vice president and general manager of the Machinery Division, said this morning that the contract represents an extension of current work at the plant and will involve production into early spring of 1977.

"We're happy," Raymond said. "It won't add any people to our force, but it gives us more time to find the avenues which will make us less than totally dependent on gun tubes."

The contract is for the production of 105 millimeter M-68 gun tubes for the M-60 American tank "which have been made out here for years," Raymond said.

Budget hearing set

City Manager Mack Wofford said today he had resolved the conflict in time block that would have prevented his appearance at next Tuesday's public hearing on Pampa's $3.2 municipal operating budget for fiscal 1976-77.

The budget hearing had been set for 9:30 a.m. Tuesday. Early this week the city manager was subpoenaed to appear at the same hour Tuesday for a deposition to be taken as a witness in the upcoming trial of the State of Texas vs. Packerland-Packing Co. of Texas, Inc.

Wofford said today he had successfully worked out an arrangement with Pampa attorney Ross Buzzard, representing Packerland, and Assistant Attorney General Paul Gosselink, representing the state, to change the time for taking the deposition to another hour on Tuesday afternoon.

Downtown apartments to be build by 1978

AMARILLO — An Amarillo real estate developer, a builder and an architect confirmed reports of construction of a $9 million, 20-story apartment building here.

The downtown construction could be complete and ready for residents by early 1978, the trio said.

Dean Lively, Kern Albertson and James R. Winstead made the announcement Thursday.

Lively said selection of a location has been narrowed to three sites in the downtown area, but he declined to name those locations.

Tentative plans call for 234 units — efficiencies, one and two bedrooms — with parking facilities, grocery store, swimming pool, laundry, exercise room, community room and basement storage space for each apartment. The building will include a security system limiting access to residents and their guests.

Construction time on the building has been estimated at 12-14 months and leasing will begin with groundbreaking.

Lively represents First Equity Real Estate and Albertson is with Western Builders. Winstead represents Architectronics, Inc., of Chicago.

Advice

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My wife just had her fourth child, and we now have two boys and two girls, which are all we want.

My problem is that she wants me to have a vasectomy, but I'm chicken. It's not the pain I'm afraid of; it's just that I'm afraid I'll feel like less of a man just knowing that I won't be able to father any more children.

My wife can't tolerate the Pill, and the other methods of birth control turn her off, so it's up to me. I feel dumb asking this, but should I or shouldn't I? What do other men who've had it say?

—CHICAGO CHICKEN

DEAR CHICKEN: If you're afraid you'll feel like "less of a man" after a vasectomy, the chances are you WILL, so unless you can overcome that feeling, I wouldn't recommend it.

Ask your wife to talk to her doctor about the new, quick and painless method of sterilization for women known as "laparoscopic tubal cautery." A tiny incision is made below the navel. The surgeon then inserts a scope, locates both tubes and seals them permanently. The incision is then closed with a small stitch, covered by a Band-aid. The patient can go home an hour later.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 32-year-old divorcee. No kids, thank heavens. I met a wonderful man. He's 68, but before you say he's too old for me, let me say that he can do everything a 25-year-old man can do, and I'm not just guessing.

He has had two bum marriages and says this is the first time in his life he's ever been in love. I get along fine with his two married daughters, and his grandchildren are crazy about me.

He has a summer home in Indiana and a winter home in Florida, and he's been retired for 10 years.

He has a pacemaker, but you'd never know it unless he told you.

My brother is trying to talk me out of marrying him because he's afraid I'll end up being a young widow, but my mother and father both died before they were 50, so I could be dead at 35. What is your advice?

WILLING TO GAMBLE

DEAR WILLING: No one knows how long he's going to live or what shape he'll be in next year, so gamble if you like. But if you live to be 50, and he's still alive, you'll have an 86-year-old husband.

DEAR ABBY: Howie and I have been married for two years.

Everything is fine except for one thing. Whenever Howie needs to see a doctor, he goes to his pediatrician, Abby. Howie is 20 years old and I think it's time he stopped going to a pediatrician and went to a regular doctor.

I've told him this, but he doesn't pay any attention to me. Maybe if YOU told him, he'd listen.

A BABY'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: A pediatrician has all the training of a "regular" doctor, plus specialized training in the care of children, so if Howie is more comfortable with his pediatrician, why make waves?

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am in good general health except for one problem. In the past six to nine months I have been plagued with headaches. Their frequency and intensity have increased to where I have at least one headache per day. These are not throbbing headaches but seem like a great deal of pressure over the entire head and behind my eyes. Also the sides and back of my neck are sore when I have these headaches.

I have tried various brands of aspirin and other pain relievers to no avail. I haven't been able to find any consistent reasons for this pain, such as tension, undereating, allergies, etc. However, I sometimes get a brief period of relief shortly after eating. I stopped taking birth control pills, but this did not seem to be causing the problem.

Could you please give me your opinions on the reasons for my headaches? If you feel there is a definite need to see a doctor would it be advisable to first see an M.D., a neurologist, or some other specialist?

DEAR READER — Headache is man's most common pain. About 90 per cent of all people experience a headache from time to time. Headaches can be caused by an acute illness as with a sinus infection or even with any febrile illness. Aside from these, most headaches are caused by tension associated with the emotional stress of living. Since we haven't found any good ways to live and not have any emotional stress it is likely that headaches will continue to be a part of life for most people at one time or another—at least during periods of stress.

There is at least a 90 per cent chance that your headache is in the anxiety-depression type group, as are most headaches. The fact that you have not gotten relief from aspirin or other pain

Teens describe trek: dream (Switzerland), gross (bullfights)

By TIM PALMER
Pampa News Staff

They were lost in England, immortalized in France and overheated in Spain, but six Pampa-area students survived until their return last week from a 28-day European tour.

Five students and their sponsor, Rose Nelson, were part of the 67-member Foreign Study League 2158. Culture classes accompanied each stop in the six-nation trip.

Participating students were David Chambless, son of Mr. and Mrs. W.J. Chambless; Teresa Harkrader, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Quillen; Tracy Rice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie Rice; Carol Sparkman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Sparkman; and Roady Spoonemore, son of Mr. and Mrs. D.D. Spoonemore.

The group departed with students and advisers from Texas, Kansas and Colorado on July 14 from Denver. According to Miss Rice, all the travelers recorded the trip in journals.

First stop was England. The group stayed at what Miss Rice described as "an old, mansion type thing" with antique furniture and separate bedrooms for the tourists.

They rode a double-decker bus and went to Trafalgar Square, where she said "we were all trying to acquaint ourselves with the subway system. We all got lost, too."

The students ate at local pubs and attended a play, "No Sex, We're British," Miss Rice gave the performance a favorable review and said "it was lots of fun seeing the difference between a theater here and a theater in England."

From London the tour went to Amsterdam, where "one of the first things that impressed me," Miss Rice said, "were the different types of windmills." The students saw the home of Anne Frank and toured a wooden shoes factory.

In Paris, she said "probably the Eiffel Tower was the most impressive thing," though they also visited the Louvre Museum and the Versailles Palace, saw the Leningrad ballet and had sidewalk artists do their portraits.

"It was something like a dreamland," the traveler said of Switzerland. The study group took a cable car up into the Alps before leaving for Italy.

League 2158 reported in a letter from Italy that "some spent the afternoon (in Florence) in the street market bargaining with the vendors or among the gold shops on Ponte Vecchio."

In Rome, they saw a production of the opera "Aida," visited the catacombs and the Cathedral of St. Peter and attended an audience with Pope Paul.

Besides all their Italian activities, Miss Rice added that "the pizza was real good there."

Their last stop was in Madrid — in 110-degree heat. The tourists spent their time in Spain shopping, touring the Prado Museum and attending bullfights. "Gross," Miss Rice said of the six bulls killed in the arena that day. "I'm glad I don't have to see what it was like, but I don't think I'd go again."

Misses Rice, Sparkman and Harkrader will be juniors at Pampa High School next year. Spoonemore will be a senior. Chambless, a 1976 graduate of PHS, will attend college this fall.

One man's junk is another's 'antique'

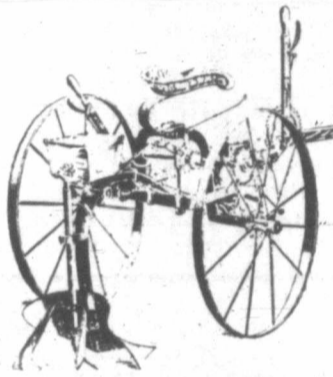

By Jean Barnes

Frequently we are invited to advise friends and casual acquaintances on the best way to dispose of "antiques." We use the quote marks because for most persons the word is a catchall for anything that appears old. It happened again at a recent Saturday night bash, when Phyllis said, "We're having a farm sale. Dad died and mother is moving into town."

She went on to explain that the family farm in western Kansas had been homesteaded by her great-grandparents and that there was a tremendous accumulation of "junk."

"You'll be surprised at how much that 'junk' is worth to collectors," we countered and added an additional word of advice, "Be sure you find auctioneers who know what they are doing."

She missed our point. "Mother's keeping the good things, cut glass and china, and letting us have our choice of what we want, so all that will be left will be the junk." We explained that in recent auctions, such "junk" as wooden boxes sold for as much as $45, depending upon condition and type; lengths of barbed wire for $26, a cast-iron implement set for $30. "There is absolutely nothing these days that lacks a buyer," we said. She then admitted to having had several offers for the 30-year-old "antique" tractor "which we thought no one would want." An auction is probably the best medium for bringing the buyer and the merchandise together. And farm auctions attract large crowds, geared for competitive bidding, virtually assuring financial success.

Tag or estate sales come a close second to the auction, although there's more chance of having a few leftovers with this kind of sale.

For those with just a few things to dispose of, the auction house or consignment sale is a simple solution.

Whichever method you choose, be sure you understand the terms of the service to be rendered. If you sign a contract be sure you read the fine print. Get it in writing and make sure there are no additional expenses to be levied after the sale.

Above all, choose a firm or a person with a solid reputation for integrity in your area. Ask for references if necessary and check them. You may think you are selling only "junk," but "junk" is bringing good prices these days.

Don't punish bed wetters

NEW HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — There is no point in a parent punishing a child who is a bed wetter or rewarding such a child for staying dry at night, says a specialist in children's kidney diseases.

"Bed wetting is entirely out of the control of the bed wetter," says Dr. Bernard Gauthier, physician-in-charge of pediatric nephrology at Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Center. "Spanking or punishing a child will not solve the problem. Do not turn bed wetting into an emotional tug-of-war."

Dr. Gauthier says that 10 to 15 per cent of all children are still bed wetters at the age of 5. The cause of nocturnal enuresis (the medical term for the condition) "is still a matter of controversy," he explains, "although many physicians, including myself, think the problem is seldom psychological. I believe it is usually due to delayed maturation of the mechanism which controls the bladder during sleep. As the child grows older, further development of the nervous system will solve the problem."

In many children, bladder development advances enough to keep the child dry all night by the age of 2. But sometimes this point in physical maturity is not reached before the age of 8. Dr. Gauthier explains. Occasionally, the problem continues into adulthood.

Dr. Gauthier advises a medical checkup for a youngster experiencing nocturnal enuresis. Medication or other types of treatment can be prescribed to help in most cases over the age of 7. But Dr. Gauthier finds it important to work with parents to prevent bed wetting from becoming a stress situation between parent and child.

Once in a while, bed wetting can be traced to a disease condition — but only rarely, he says. He lists kidney infection, chronic kidney disease and diabetes as possible causes. However, other symptoms would generally be present in such cases, he adds.

Among the symptoms he suggests watching for are unusual pallor or puffiness of the face, an increase in fluid intake, burning or frequency of urine, blood in urine or failure of a young child to thrive.

At wit's end

By ERMA BOMBECK

If you ever hear that I jumped into a jump suit, don't believe it. I was pushed.

This has to be the Brand X of the fashion industry.

There are only six women in this country who look well in jump suits. Five of them are terminal and the other was sired by a Xerox machine.

Out of sheer curiosity, I was rummaging through a rack of them when a saleswoman approached and asked, "Which size are you? 12? 14? 16?"

"Yes," I said. "Which?" she pursued. "All three. My bust is a 12, my waist a 14, and my hips 16."

"Try the 14," she said dryly. "The fitting room is behind better dresses."

The fitting room was something I had never seen before. It was a community deal... a large room with 16 mirrors on the wall, a rack in the center to hang discards and a woman by the door to make sure you didn't wear out any more than you wore in.

A fitting room to me has always been like a confessional — where my body and my contrition take up the entire room. There is no room for anyone else. I looked around. All eyes seemed to be focused on one woman. She weighed about six pounds and was trying on a jump suit... one of the six women mentioned above. It slid on easily, up over her hips and onto her arms. I winced as she distributed the cloth left over around her waist.

I looked at the crowd who could not take their eyes off her. I had seen that look of resentment and pain on only one other occasion. It was a Charlton Heston movie just before the door slid back between the Christians and the lions.

Inching closer, I whispered, "Lady, you better get out of here before they tear you to shreds."

It was my turn. For 15 minutes, I tugged and inched my way into the jump suit and looked into the mirror. The chest was disguised as a back, the stomach strained at the buttons, the legs were numb without circulation and the hems swirled around the floor.

"How do you...?" You get a carton of water pills with every suit," offered the salesperson.

I didn't buy the jump suit, but what the heck. For awhile seven women forgot about the Panama Canal.

Ford-Dole to run familiar GOP course

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — By selecting Robert Dole as his running mate and promising a debate with Jimmy Carter, President Ford is setting a campaign course marked by familiar Republican themes in a strategy at once traditional and unusual.

Dole is Ford's ideological brother, a political scrapper who probably will concentrate on attacking Carter and the Democratic Congress.

That is the traditional role of the vice presidential nominee, leaving the President to appear presidential and above the eyegouging, fist-swinging combat of the political arena. The main theme of the Republican attacks on Carter will be an effort to paint both the candidate and the Democratic Congress as big spenders whose policies spawn inflation and sap individual freedom.

But in a departure from the normal political strategy of incumbents, Ford offered in his acceptance speech Thursday night to debate Carter, a certain sign of the concern of a campaign trailing even before the race begins.

Departing from his prepared speech, Ford said he would "debate the real issues face-to-face with Jimmy Carter."

Carter quickly accepted, saying he wanted a format that would allow for "tough examination" with questions posed by the news media.

Since the celebrated 1960 television debate between rivals John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon it has been accepted political wisdom that incumbent presidents avoid debating their rivals, but Ford said, "The American people have the right to know first hand exactly where we both stand."

Ford and his advisers, conscious of polls showing him trailing Carter, decided the President had much to gain and nothing to lose by a debate with the former Georgia governor.

Ford's press secretary, Ron Nessen, said Ford had been considering debating Carter for the last 10 days, but had left the proposal out of the text of his speech so he could surprise the Republican delegates.

Nessen said he had not yet officially heard of Carter's proposal to debate, but said "If he accepts the challenge to debate we hope it finally will get him to state his stands on some of the issues."

He added that Ford had said it will take a series of debates "before the American people can get a clear idea of Carter's stands on the issues."

Asked what format Ford would prefer for the debates, Nessen said "The President's own view is that good hard questioning by good tough reporters would be a good way to do it."

In choosing Dole, a Kansas senator now in his second term, Ford deliberately ignored considerations of geography by picking a fellow Midwesterner.

He made no move toward an ideological broadening of the ticket, either. Dole, a former Republican national chairman, is also a conservative. And Ford ignored those who suggested he pick someone from outside Washington. Since Dole is a senator, he did not fit that category either.

Jack Ford apologizes to Texas

By SUSAN SWARD
Associated Press Writer
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) —

This was the way the Texas delegate recalled it: Betty Ford had leaned down over the railing and told him, "I love you" and his irritation had been smoothed over.

Tom Callison, a 30-year-old San Antonio salesman, gave this description Thursday to the 100-member, Ronald Reagan-pledged delegation which was mulling over complaints that Jack Ford had dumped confetti and toilet paper on them from his gallery seat.

Young Ford, the President's son, had done that all right, Callison told the group. But immediately after that Jack "leaned over the railing and said, 'Texas—that's what he called me all week—I'm very, very sorry.'"

Callison, wearing a Ford-Dole button as he spoke, said: "And Betty Ford leaned over and threw me a kiss, and I threw her a kiss."

His account of the episode apparently soothed over ruffled Texas' tempers which had prompted several delegates to call out loudly, demanding a public apology on the convention floor from Jack Ford.

Saying he was now behind Ford and Sen. Robert Dole, Callison said he was sure Jack Ford had not known there was any toilet paper in the confetti-stuffed airline bag when he tossed the confetti over the railing Wednesday night.

He added delegates had had a long-simmering verbal feud with the Ford party, which was seated above the delegation all week. "We'd been saying things like, 'I smell marijuana so the Ford family must be around," Callison said.

But some delegates remembered the incident differently.

Lila Rehkop of Athens, Tex., said Ford yelled out "Now take that!" as he tossed the confetti and toilet paper down on the Texas delegation.

"I was heartbroken," said Mrs. Rehkop, who said she had worked in GOP politics for 15 years. "It makes you wonder if it's worth it."

Ernest Angelo, the mayor of Midland, said the episode occurred when some delegates were already holding up Ford signs after the President's nomination.

"It was really bad. He dumped a whole lot of stuff right on" Mrs. Rehkop. "It was senseless. It was an unbelievable bad deal," Angelo said. Betty Ford was also disgusted by the delegation in another vein.

A six-member grievance committee appointed by Ray Barnhart, the delegation chairman, said in a draft report that Betty Ford had "demeaned herself" by dancing and interrupting a demonstration for Nancy Reagan, the candidate's wife.

That language was voted out of the report, which the delegation later voted overwhelmingly to send to the Republican National Committee, detailing the delegation's contention the Ford camp got better room assignments, guest passes and convention floor assignments.

Although the caucus heard several calls for unity behind the GOP ticket at its afternoon caucus before the final session, there were some delegates who weren't buying any of that sort of talk.

Pat Jacobson of Fort Worth was one of those. "I threw up right after I got back to the hotel Wednesday night" following Ford's nomination, she said. "Then I threw up again when they picked Bob Dole. I'm not kidding. I'd never, never support these men. There are two klutzes on the ticket." Mrs. Jacobson said shortly before she swept out of the meeting following several unity pitches by other delegates.

Barnhart told the delegation a lengthy, windy speech — full of his usual preacher-like rushes of emotion — that he would only support the GOP ticket if he felt the nominees were living up to the tough GOP platform.

Barnhart also termed the Ford victory a "defeat of the grassroots politics by an incredible political machine."

Late in the evening — even before Ford summoned Reagan to stand on the podium with him — Barnhart was up on a chair cheering away with the rest of the delegates on the floor.

Nonaligned leaders call for new economic order

By KENNETH L. WHITING
Associated Press Writer
COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) —

Leaders of the nonaligned movement returned home today after another call for a new international economic order and the usual criticism of the United States and its Western allies.

Communist and socialist countries were spared the harsh words.

Political and economic declarations approved Thursday at the end of the four-day, 85-nation summit conference condemned the West in specific and general terms. But the language of the economic statement was relatively restrained.

Diplomatic observers said this reflected awareness that the underdeveloped Third World can't achieve an economic breakthrough without the cooperation of industrialized North America, Western Europe and Japan.

The conference produced two unexpected moves: plans for the Third World countries to start their own commercial bank and a call for oil embargoes against France for agreeing to sell a nuclear reactor to South Africa and against Israel for contracting to build corvettes for the South African navy.

Although 10 of the 14 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) also belong to the nonaligned movement, no embargo is likely. The OPEC nations have never reduced their prices because of the hardships they cause other underdeveloped nations, and they are not likely to reduce their revenues for the remote possibility that this might benefit the blocs of South Africa.

The conference also asked the U.N. Security Council to impose a mandatory arms embargo against South Africa. This, too, is unlikely to be achieved.

The demand for a new economic order that would transfer wealth and technology to the developing countries has been made repeatedly at Third World meetings and in the United Nations. The have-not nations want a new monetary system in which they would have a big voice, curbs on multinational corporations, easier repayment terms for their debts and stockpiling of the major raw materials they produce so they can keep the prices up.

The conference approved political declarations and resolutions that —Accused the United States, France, West Germany and Britain of supporting white minority rule in southern Africa.

—Chided the United States for its military presence in South Korea but made no mention of the new tension resulting from the clash Wednesday in which two Americans and three North Koreans were reported killed.

—Condemned the presence of "foreign and imperialist military bases and installations" in the Indian Ocean, including the U.S. naval base on the island of Diego Garcia.

—Welcomed Soviet-American detente and said it should be made worldwide with the cooperation of the nonaligned nations.

—Accused Israel of aggression by its rescue of hijacked hostages from the Entebbe, Uganda, airport.

School motion denied

BEAUMONT, Tex. (AP) — A U.S. Justice Department motion to end the dual school system in South Park Independent School District was denied Thursday by federal District Court Judge Joe F. Fisher, who also turned down a government motion for supplemental relief.

Fisher ruled that the Justice Department failed to comply with required notification procedures in requesting the court to end the dual system.

In the motion for supplemental relief, the government sought to obtain an order forcing the school district to implement a plan by the spring term of the 1976-77 school year to end the segregated school system.

The judge, however, agreed to hear evidence about whether the district has complied with a 1970 order to desegregate the school system. Judge Fisher said he would hear the evidence in case the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reverses his decision to deny the motion.

In his ruling Thursday, Judge Fisher said the government had not complied with requirements of the law calling for them to notify the school system and the court of such action.

Daniel Jennings, a government lawyer, said he did not know if Judge Fisher's ruling would be appealed. It was pointed out in court Thursday that the U.S. Supreme Court has not interpreted the 1974 law Judge Fisher cited in denying the government motion.

In arguments here Thursday, Jennings claimed the school board has complete control over class assignments, yet classes at South Park High School are either predominantly white or black. He said the ninth grade classes consistently have less than 20 per cent minority pupils in them.

'76 deadliest for quakes

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Earthquakes have killed tens of thousands and wreaked devastation on three continents this year, making 1976 the deadliest year for quakes since 1970. U.S. experts say.

The U.S. Geological Survey said Wednesday the number of severe quakes doubled since June, indicating that 1976 may reverse the apparent worldwide earthquake activity lull reported since 1973.

Survey scientists said 10 major earthquakes and three great quakes already have occurred this year. The long-term average is for about 16 to 18 major and one great quake a year.

A major quake registers magnitude 7 or greater on the Richter Scale. A great quake registers 8 or more. Every increase of one number on the scale means the ground motion is 10 times greater.

The USGS National Earthquake Information Service in Golden, Colo., reported only 11 major shocks in 1973. There were 12 in 1974 and 13 in 1975. The first great quake since 1971 also occurred last year.

Earthquakes have taken more than 27,000 lives, and possibly many thousands more so far this year. This makes 1976 the deadliest year for quakes since 1970 when more than 67,000 were killed in Peru and Turkey.

This year's toll includes 23,000 deaths in Guatemala in February, 900 in northeastern Italy in May, 600 in Bali in July and at least 3,100 killed in the Philippines this week as a result of quakes.

The USGS said the death toll is expected to go higher because of expected fatalities from major quakes in China July 28 and afterwards. China has not released casualty figures for the quake and severe aftershocks that devastated the Tangshan area 100 miles southeast of Peking and largely destroyed Tientsin, the nation's third largest city.

Looking at the time of the quake (3:45 a.m.), its magnitude, the high population and the types of construction in the area, some of our scientists say they would not be surprised if deaths go into the hundreds of thousands," a spokesman said of the China disaster.

Also not included in the figures are deaths from major quakes that hit the Soviet Union April 8 and May 1, and unconfirmed reports of 9,000 killed in Western New Guinea on June 25.

USGS scientists say too little is known about worldwide earthquake activity to determine the significance of periods of high and low activity. Seismic activity tends to be episodic, they say, with periods of relative quiet alternating with periods of active movements.

In the first half of 1976, quake activity was slightly behind average.

"Patterns of recent years were continuing until June," a USGS spokesman said. "Then it picked up like no one could believe."

And no one can say if the increased activity will continue, he added.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The elegant Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, an uncrowned victim of "legionnaires' disease," is launching a public relations campaign to restore its tarnished image.

Penn takes county post

MARGE PENN of Pampa has accepted the position as Easter Seal Treatment and Service Chairman for Gray County.

Irving A. Baker of Dallas, president of the Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults of Texas, made the announcement.

During the past year, the Society aided 10,768 Texans through an information, referral and follow up program: physical, speech and hearing therapies; orthopedic equipment purchase and loan, and related aids.

Mrs. Penn and the County Easter Seal Representative, Betty Casey, may be contacted for help by a disabled member or a member of the family.

The forms are available at 1601 Dogwood in Pampa.

License hike proposed

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The Parks and Wildlife Department will ask the next legislature to enact a law requiring out-of-state visitors $10 to drop a fishing line in Texas waters. They now pay the same as Texans, $4.25.

The non-resident fishing license is part of the department's proposals to raise $2.670,000 in 1978-79, executive director Clayton Garrison told state budget examiners Wednesday.

He also said the department also will ask legislators to require state hunting licenses for all types of hunting. Currently, a person is not required to have a state license to hunt in the county in which he lives unless he is after deer or turkey.

"Some people have the benefit of hunting without paying anything," Garrison said.

The department also proposes charging for expenses in delivering fish which the state provides for private waters.

65 oil, gas wells in

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The railroad commission reported Wednesday that 26 wildcat oil wells and 39 wildcat gas wells were completed in Texas Aug. 1-15.

The oil discoveries included seven in west central Texas, four each in the San Antonio and southeast Texas areas, three in south Texas, two each in San Angelo, north Texas and the Panhandle areas and one each in the Midland and Lubbock areas.

A total of 357 wildcat—or discovery—oil wells have been completed this year, an increase of 79 over mid-August last year.

The gas discoveries included 14 in south Texas, 10 near Refugio, eight in southeast Texas, four in the Midland area, two in the San Angelo area and one in west central Texas.

A total of 573 wildcat gas wells have been drilled this year, 102 more than at this time last year.

The commission also reported that a total of 4,627 oil wells, including wildcats, have been completed this year for an increase of 455 over mid-August 1975.

ters for a state American Legion convention last month.

Since then, 26 people, all with some connection to the convention, have died of a still unidentified disease. An additional 146 persons, including six who stayed at the hotel this month during an international gathering of Roman Catholics, have become ill.

City health officials on Wednesday cited the hotel for 19 plumbing violations, including a cross-connection between the drinking water and air conditioning system that might contaminate the water supply.

The hotel issued a statement saying the cross-connection is protected by a valve which prevents contamination.

That news had little effect on business. "How could things get worse?" a bellhop shrugged.

The hotel responded by asking its public relations agency, Spiro and Associates, to launch a campaign stressing that the vast majority of people at the convention did not get sick and that none of the hotel workers were affected.

The lobby of the stately hotel was nearly empty Wednesday. Only four tables were occupied in the hotel dining room, where reservations are usually a must. Two hundred people usually eat breakfast in the hotel's coffee shop; only a handful were there Wednesday.

Hotel employees, who asked not to be identified, said occupancy in the 750 guest rooms have fallen as low as 8 per cent after being 80 to 90 per cent earlier this summer.

William Chadwick, the hotel's general manager, said Wednesday that business is beginning to pick up again.

"While the current publicity has been detrimental to the hotel due to some cancellations, we have also received some re-bookings," he said.

New landing site Martian 'Utopia'

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Scientists say Viking 2 is heading for a Martian "Utopia" after two preliminary landing sites proved too hazardous for its Sept. 31 landing.

Wary of ominous craters and deep, mysterious channels, scientists Wednesday rejected the original site and an alternative target area, opting for Utopia, a region in northern Mars. Utopia is about 4,000 miles from the red, rocky desert on which Viking 1 rests.

Project Manager James Martin said Viking 2 will try for a touchdown on Sept. 3 at about 1 p.m. EDT.

Utopia, also called B-3, is about 1,000 miles from the original Viking 2 landing zone. Martin said the region "looks very good right now," adding with a laugh, "because we have no pictures of it."

Actually, scientists have some sketchy photographs of the area, and it appears to be relatively free of the mysterious markings present around the rejected prime site, B-1.

Geologist Michael Carr said those markings resembled a farmer's field after it had been cross-plowed. Huge craters and rilles, or channels, also worried scientists.

THE IMPORTANCE OF NAMES

It is not unusual in religious discussion to hear someone say, "Oh, there is nothing in a name", or "A rose by any other name would smell just as sweet." But is a name really important? Many will argue it is not important in religion but refuse to so practice in every day life. If there is nothing in a name, why do we attach so much importance to the name written on the bottom line of a check? Why do we insist that the check be signed? How many people do you allow to sign your name on a check? There must be SOMETHING in a name.

If there is nothing in a name, why do men insist that wives wear their husband's name? Why is it considered a lack of respect for her to refuse to do so? And so it is with Christ and his Bride, the church. When those who are members of Christ's body, the church, wear the name of some other, they dishonor Christ.

The Bible teaches there is something in a name. "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches." (Proverbs 22:1) Peter said, "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." (Acts 4:12) Salvation is ONLY in the name of Christ. When one wears the name Christian, that person honors Christ. "Yet if any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed, but let him glorify God on this behalf." (1 Peter 4:16) In Acts 11:26, we read, "The disciples were called Christians first at Antioch." In every place the word Christian is found in the New Testament, it refers to a follower of Christ nothing or no one else is called by this name.

Paul rebuked the Corinthians for wearing the names of men religiously and not wearing the name of Christ. See 1 Cor. 1:11-13. We should learn to wear the name Christian and that only, to describe our relationship to God. Truly there is something in a name.

Dole unflaggingly loyal to GOP

By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Bob Dole and Gerald Ford, who spent eight years together as minority members of the House of Representatives, share many traits: they are unflaggingly loyal to the Republican party, particularly its conservative wing, personable and even-tempered in public.

But Dole, whom Ford named Wednesday as his choice for the vice presidential nomination, is far different from Ford in his slashing style of debate, marked by brashness and sarcasm that he used to vigorously defend the Nixon Administration on the floor of the Senate and as national GOP chairman.

The 53-year-old senator from Kansas was even called a "hatchet man" by a senator from his own party.

Dole gave preview of what could be his campaign style when he addressed the Republican Convention Monday night as its temporary chairman.

The dark-haired, wiry senator received a litany of the results of a Democratic presidency and Congress over the last two decades and then lashed the opposition party's platform. "It tilts so far left that any of us would slide off," he said of the Democratic platform. "But worse than that it is a collection of deceptions."

And he attacked Democratic candidate Jimmy Carter.

The Democratic party doesn't know what its candidate stands for, and the Democratic candidate doesn't think we have a right to know," he said. Dole is midway through his second term in the Senate, where he has compiled a conservative record.

The Americans for Constitutional Action, a conservative group, rated his voting record between 64 and 84 for his years in the senate, with 100 being a "perfect" score. The Americans for Democratic Action, a liberal rating group, put his score at 0 to 19 during the same period.

In naming Dole, Ford pointed to some of their similarities.

"His philosophy and mine coincide almost exactly," Ford said. "He has been a great team player."

Dole made his name in Washington with his counter-attacks against Democrats who were critical of Nixon administration policies. First on the war in Southeast Asia and then on the Watergate scandal, Dole was frequently on his feet, defending Nixon with his wit and a prosecutorial style developed in eight years as the district attorney in Russell County, Kan.

For his loyalty Dole was named national chairman of the Republican party in 1971, succeeding Rogers C.B. Morton, who is now Ford's campaign manager. Dole served as chairman until early 1973.

Dole married the former Phyllis E. Holden, a therapist who helped him recover from injuries suffered in World War II which cost him the use of his right arm, and left him with only partial feeling in his left arm. Married in 1948, they had one child before being divorced in 1972.

Late last year, Dole married Elizabeth Hanford, a member of the Federal Trade Commission.

Dole's selection as the vice presidential candidate has two parallels with Sen. Barry Goldwater's choice of Rep. William Miller as his running mate in 1964. Both Dole and Miller served as national GOP chairman. Both selections came unexpectedly.

Dole grew up in Russell, Kan., where his father operated a cream and egg station. He was aiming for a medical career when World War II broke out.

He rose to the rank of captain before being hit by shrapnel as he led an infantry charge against a machine gun nest in Italy. His right shoulder was shattered and his vertebrae cracked. He spent 39 months in an Army hospital.

After the war and his recuperation, Dole finished his undergraduate work at the University of Kansas and went on to earn his law degree there in 1952.

He immediately plunged into state politics, winning a seat in the Kansas legislature, where he served from 1951 until 1953. Then he won four straight elections as prosecuting attorney of Russell County.

In 1960, Dole was elected to the House of Representatives. His district spanned 52 wheat-growing counties on the plains of western Kansas.

During his eight years in the House, he worked with Ford and devoted much time to the interests of his district. He served on the House Agriculture Committee and chaired an ad hoc Republican committee investigating the scandal surrounding obby Baker, a Lyndon Johnson protege.

In 1968, Dole moved up to replace retiring Sen. Frank Carlson, defeating former Gov. William H. Avery for the GOP nomination. He won the general election with more than 60 percent of the vote.

Dole's style on both the Senate floor and the stump drew both praise and criticism from fellow GOP senators.

"He's the first man we've had around here in a long time who will grab the other side by the hair and drag them down the hill," Sen. Barry Goldwater said.

Sen. William Saxbe, R-Ohio, called Dole a "hatchet man" whose style was such that he "couldn't sell beer on a troop ship."

There also was the comparison made by a White House official when Dole succeeded Morton as GOP chairman.

"Rog is a big old St. Bernard, while Dole is a hungry Doberman pinscher."

Texas reps back bill to aid rural hospitals

By ED DeANGELO
Pampa's Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — Sen. John Tower and five Texas representatives have joined the ranks of congressmen supporting a bill that would relax federal health standards for small rural hospitals.

The bill's supporters argue that tight regulations imposed by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) have become a burden for hospitals with 50 beds or less. HEW's rules, they say, were designed for urban hospitals that can afford a large professional staff and a modern facility to meet stringent fire and safety codes.

But, according to the bill's proponents, rural hospitals face considerable difficulty and sometimes bankruptcy, in complying with standards like the ones requiring 24-hour nursing. If the hospitals don't comply, they lose their eligibility for Medicare funds.

As one aide to Rep. Max Baucus, D-Montana, who drafted the House bill put it, with a choice between relaxing high standards and forcing rural hospitals to close down, "Half a loaf is better than none."

An aide to Rep. Jack Hightower, D-Vermont, reported that a number of small-town hospitals in his home district had complained that HEW standards were raising operating costs too much. They just don't want to be bound by the rules and the congressman agrees," he added.

Joining Hightower in backing the bill are Reps. Robert Krueger, D-New Braunfels, J.J. Pickle, D-Austin, William Poage, D-Waco, and Charles Wilson, D-Lufkin.

The bill is now pending before committee in the Senate and the House. Its supporters hope to tack it on to Medicare legislation when it is considered by the Senate Finance Committee, but considering Congress's tight schedule ahead, a Baucus aide said, "It's pretty late in the session to expect action."

The bill has won the support of 34 rural congressmen. However, HEW and several professional-interest health groups like the American Nursing Association are expected to oppose this attempt to relax its standards, according to Baucus aides.

Although the HEW Secretary has been willing to waive temporarily the requirement for 24-hour nursing when hospitals prove they cannot comply, he has not exercised his authority to draw up new standards for rural hospitals.

Relaxing the Medicare regulations could mean "lowering the quality of care that the program wants to provide to its beneficiaries," one HEW spokeswoman said. If a general waiver were made, she added, several small hospitals which can now meet the requirements would be able to reduce their staff.

The RESPECTED WORD

The bible is a book translated into every known language. It is the word that men have died for, in order that it may be available to all men. It is the textbook for God's people.

The bible, itself, is not worshipped, but is respected, for it is the story of God and his relationship to man. It is man's guide for worship and daily living.

Attend church regularly, study, and seek God's will in your life.

"I wait for the Lord, my soul doth wait, and in his word do I hope."

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

NFL exhibitions slated today

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Sometimes a loss can be a good thing — especially if it happens in an exhibition game.

Sitting in a locker room and listening to a coach warn against overconfidence is one thing. Looking up at the scoreboard after 60 minutes of football and finding your team on the short end is another.

"We've finally learned we can't show up, get ahead and have our opponents roll over and play dead," said Baltimore's exciting kick return specialist, Howard Stevens, after the Colts were knocked off by the Chicago Bears 25-14 last week.

"We didn't practice well all week for the Bears," said Stevens, who played two years for the New Orleans Saints before being traded to Baltimore last season. "Then we played just like we practiced, and we were unable to suddenly turn on to 100 per cent."

The Colts, who won their first two preseason games before being shot down by the Bears, host New Orleans in one of three National Football League exhibition games scheduled tonight. The others are Green Bay at Buffalo and the New York Giants at Pittsburgh.

Saturday night's schedule lists Miami at Tampa Bay, New England at Atlanta, Washington at Kansas City, Detroit against Dallas at Memphis. St.

Louis at Chicago, the New York Jets at Houston, Los Angeles at Oakland, Seattle at Denver and San Francisco against San Diego at Honolulu.

Cincinnati is at Minnesota for a Sunday afternoon game, while Cleveland at Philadelphia closes out the weekend action Monday night.

New Orleans, following an opening loss to Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh, has beaten Houston and Buffalo in its last two starts. New Coach Hank Stram is anxious to instill a winning spirit in the Saints, 2-12 last season.

"It's important for a young team like ours to relate to a winning experience," Stram said. "We must establish a feeling of confidence now that will carry over into the regular season."

Stram's Saints showed a strong ground game in beating Buffalo 21-14 last week, rushing for 237 yards. Rod McNeill led the way with 80 and Mike Strachan had 60.

Unbeaten Pittsburgh goes for its fifth straight victory against the Giants, 2-1, in a nationally televised (ABC, 8 p.m., EDT) battle. The Giants, coming off two wins in three days — 16-14 over the Jets, 30-14 over Houston — will face a stern test in the Steelers, who have uncovered a pleasant surprise in rookie running back Jack Delplane, top ground-gainer of the preseason with 220 yards in 35 carries.

Buffalo, 0-3 and still without O.J. Simpson, will open with Gary Marangi at quarterback in an attempt to perk up a Juice-less offense which has managed just 41 points in three games. Green Bay, 2-1, has its top two quarterbacks — Lynn Dickey and Don Milan — out with injuries, so Carlos Brown will get the call.

The Giants-Steelers is the first of three TV games this weekend. The others are Los Angeles, 3-0, at Oakland, 3-0, Saturday on NBC at 9 p.m. EDT, and Cincinnati, 3-0, at Minnesota, 1-2, Sunday on CBS at 1:30 p.m., EDT.

Palmer, Snead close to leader in Hartford

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Pro golf's nostalgia buffs were in their glory.

There was Sam Snead, that 64-year-old relic from the days of the hickory shafts, one-putting nine times from his side-saddle stance and happily chortling: "If I could keep this up, they might be able to coax me back to the tour."

Snead, with his trademark, a brightly-banded Panama straw hat firmly in place, converted his best putting round in years into a 68. That was just three strokes off the pace of Rik Massengale, whose six-under-par 65 was all but overshadowed by the heroics of another generation of golfing greats Thursday in the first round of the $210,000 Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open.

There was Arnold Palmer, 46, a winner of this tournament 20 years ago, holing out his approach shot for an eagle two on the first hole and then bringing home a 68.

"I hit the wedge just the way

I wanted to," Palmer solemnly announced of the 70-yard shot that ripped a joyous roar of appreciation from his huge gallery on the first hole.

There was Art Wall, 52, a winner here a decade ago, moving into a tie for second with a 67 despite a bogey on the final hole. "I shot 63 in the last round last year with a bogey on that hole," Wall recalled. "I just don't play it very well. Maybe I'm just choking. Maybe I'm just a bad player," said the soft-spoken man who won the Masters and Player of the Year honors in 1959.

And there was Billy Casper, 45, once one of the game's premier putters, who used a rebounded touch for a 67 that included two putts of 35-40 feet in length and three more from about 15 feet.

"It's been a long time since I had a round like this," said Billy, who won the first of his four Hartford titles 13 years ago.

That quartet of challengers chasing Massengale, a 29-year-old Texan who has won but once, totals 206 years in age and has a combined accumulation of 210 official tour titles.

Women drop from tourney

SOUTH ORANGE, N.J. (AP) — Officials at the Tennis Week Open awaited word here today on whether more women players would drop out of the tournament in reaction to the entry of transsexual Dr. Renee Richards.

Gene Scott, tournament director, said Thursday that 15 players had been dropped because "they didn't intend on coming."

"I'm sure we'll lose some more," Scott said, but he guaranteed a full 32-member field for Saturday's start of the $60,000 event. "I've got a waiting list of 30 or more."

Scott said "a number of sources" had told him that at least four of the women — Wendy Overton, Val Ziegenfuss, Janet Newberry and Cynthia Doerner — were parading around the Canadian Open in Toronto persuading the other women from playing our tournament.

"Based on those reports, I excluded these girls and those who apparently had the ear of the ringleaders," Scott said.

Scott said when he talked to Cathy May she said, "She would follow the leaders" and not compete.

"The second reason that the 15 girls were dropped was because the Women's Tennis Association issued a letter to its players withdrawing its sanction of the tournament," Scott said. "The letter says that a man is playing in our tournament. The letter is patently incorrect."

The tournament, the annual warmup to the U.S. Open at Forest Hills, N.Y., is a major men's event. The women's event carries a first prize of $1,800, while the men's winner gets $10,000. Most of the top names in women's professional tennis will be playing in a Philadelphia tournament next week.

Richards, 41, a California eye surgeon who last year had a sex-change operation, will face Cathy Beene of Houston, Tex., in the tournament's first center court match at 1 p.m.

Before the operation, Richards was nationally ranked in the men's 35-and-over category. She will play here as an amateur.

Others dropped from the draw were Glynis Coles, Sandy Stap, Donna Ganz, Laura Dupont and Helen Gourlay.

Top-seeded Terry Holladay and second-seeded Ann Kiyomura are still entered, Scott said.

A spokesman for ABC-TV said Thursday the Richards-Beene match would be shown on tape on the network's "Wide World of Sports" later Saturday.

Richards won a professional tournament in La Jolla, Calif., last month, besting Robin Harris, 20, the top seed, in the finals. Tournament officials there did not learn of Richards' operation until after the finals.

Richards' personal life received widespread publicity when it was revealed she had filed an entry for the U.S. Open. Earlier this week, the United States Tennis Association announced that Richards would have to pass a chromosome test, like those administered in the Olympics, to prove she is a woman.

Scott said he accepted Richards' entry on "face value. She's a woman and that's all there's to it."

He termed the chromosome test "absurd and simplistic" and said he "accepted her application after I received a gynecological report stating she was a woman."

Los Angeles (AP) — Jack Cooke ended his feud with Jerry West, hired the all-star basketball player to coach his Los Angeles Lakers and now undoubtedly will demand a championship title.

West had filed a $6-million suit against Cooke claiming the owner hadn't lived up to his last playing contract two years ago.

Cooke had filed a $2-million countersuit claiming West hadn't lived up to what was expected from him, but in an amicable news conference, the 39-year-old former star guard said, "My differences with Mr. Cooke are settled. I'm extremely pleased with the terms

El Paso's Lawrence Rush clubbed a three-run homer to cap a five-run Diablos outburst and propel El Paso to an 8-5 win over Midland and back into first place in the Texas League West Division Thursday night.

There is also a new situation atop the East Division standings, as Shreveport's 3-2 win over Lafayette and Arkansas' 5-0 whitewashing of Jackson left the Captains and the Mets in a dead heat for first place.

In other Texas League action Thursday night, San Antonio shaded Amarillo 2-1.

El Paso's win, coupled with Amarillo's loss, left the Diablos with a one-half game over the Gold Sox in the West.

El Paso's Marty Friedman iced the game in the seventh inning with a run-scoring double in the seventh. Fred Juhalua, 1-0, got the win in relief, while Steve Hamrick, 9-10, absorbed the loss.

In other National League games, Pittsburgh blanked San Francisco 1-0; Philadelphia beat Houston 7-1 and Los Angeles nipped the New York Mets 6-5.

Pirates 1, Giants 0

John Candelaria, scattered nine hits and scored the game's only run as Pittsburgh beat San Francisco. The shutout was the third of the season for Candelaria, 12-4, with two coming against the Giants. He hurled a two-hit victory at Candlestick Park on April 25.

Phillies 7, Astros 1

Steve Carlton pitched a five-hitter for his fifth straight victory and Mike Schmidt belted his 32nd home run as Philadelphia beat Houston. Carlton, 15-4, struck out six and walked two in earning his 10th triumph in his last 11 decisions.

The Phillies rattled Houston starter Joaquin Andujar and relievers Bo McLaughlin and Joe Sambito for 17 hits, including four hits for Jay Johnstone that boosted the outfielder's average to a league-leading .344. He had his fourth home run, 30th double and two singles.

Dodgers 6, Mets 5

Steve Garvey blasted a three-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning and Ron Cey followed with a game-winning solo shot as Los Angeles rallied for a comeback victory over New York.

Trailing 5-2 entering the ninth, Ted Sizemore and Bill Buckner led off the inning with singles, and Garvey followed with his eighth home run to tie the score. Bob Apodaca replaced Skip Lockwood, and Cey followed with his 20th homer to give the Dodgers their fourth straight victory.

Terrell joins PCC as assistant

Buzzy Terrell of Odessa, who has been an assistant pro at three golf courses, has accepted a similar position at the Pampa Country Club.

Terrell will begin work either Saturday or Sunday, according to Hart Warren, Pampa Country Club pro. The 26-year-old Odessan is leaving Hogan Park Country Club in Midland.

He has also been assistant pro at Ridgela Country Club and Shady Oaks, both in Fort Worth.

"He acts like he knows what he's doing," Warren said. "In all probability, he'll turn out to be a pretty good helper."

Terrell replaces Sherwin Cox, who resigned after nearly five years to become assistant pro at Tacosca Country Club in Amarillo.

Reliever nabs 12th win

The Baltimore Orioles suffered another dose of indigestion Thursday after sampling the peas served up by Bill "Soupy" Campbell.

"When Campbell's throwing like he was for those couple of innings, he's not throwing peas," he's throwing split peas," Minnesota Manager Gene Mauch said after the bullpen ace preserved the Twins' 5-4 victory over the Orioles.

Campbell entered the game with two on and two out in the seventh inning. He retired Tony Muser on a grounder and then set down the final six batters.

striking out three and earning his 15th save to go with 12 relief wins, five short of the American League record.

In other AL action, Milwaukee turned back Kansas City 6-4. Cleveland outslugged Texas 7-5. Detroit edged California 5-4 and the Chicago White Sox downed Boston 4-2. New York and Oakland were not scheduled.

triple leading off the fifth and scored on a sacrifice fly by Robin Yount as the Brewers broke a 3-3 tie against Dennis Leonard. Scott followed with a triple and scored on second baseman Frank White's wild relay to third.

The setback sliced Kansas City's lead over Oakland in the AL West to 7 1/2 games.

Indians 7, Rangers 5

Boog Powell pounded a pair of two-run homers off his favorite pitching staff. Powell has hit only six home runs this year and four have come against the Rangers, who have lost six games in a row. Powell also delivered a run-scoring single in the ninth inning for his fifth RBI.

TCU begins workouts with only 3 missing

By The Associated Press

Texas Christian University football coach Jim Hofner counted 113 players as the Horned Frogs opened fall football workouts Thursday.

Three of Hofner's 1975 lettermen were missing.

Defensive back Marvin Brown is under disciplinary suspension from school for a semester. Fullback Raymond Woodard has transferred to Lamar University and offensive tackle Anthony Mican was a scholastic casualty.

Five offensive and six defensive players were back in the fold among the 34 letterman.

TCU will don pads for the first time Sunday and open the Horned Frogs' 1976 season with a Southwest Conference encounter against SMU in Dallas Sept. 11 in College Station, Texas.

TCU begins workouts with only 3 missing

A&M Head Coach Emory Bellard greeted 118 candidates Thursday as the Aggies opened drills.

Texas Coach Darrell Royal began his 20th season in Austin as the Longhorns opened fall workouts. The Longhorns don pads Monday, with two-a-day workouts continuing through next week.

Texas Tech Coach Steve Sloan put more than 100 prospective gridirers through their first three-day drill of the fall Thursday. The grinding three-a-days, at 8:30 a.m., 11 a.m. and 5:15 p.m., are scheduled to run through Saturday.

The Raiders don full pads Monday and work twice a day through next week.

In Dallas, veteran Southern Methodist quarterback Ricky Wesson was slowed by an allergic reaction from an insect bite as the Mustangs worked out in pads for the second day.

Boog Powell pounded a pair of two-run homers off his favorite pitching staff. Powell has hit only six home runs this year and four have come against the Rangers, who have lost six games in a row. Powell also delivered a run-scoring single in the ninth inning for his fifth RBI.

That's a Gene Mauch play all the way, no ifs, ands or buts," noted Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson.

He added: "If you're going to pull in outfielders, though, you just as well should bring them all in. But you know what it really is in that situation? You pray. That's the best play — you pray. At that point, it is how do I want my poison."

The Reds had men on second and third at the time with Lum in a pinch-hitter's role and the dangerous Pete Rose on deck.

"I pitched to Lum," pointed out Bristol, "because Rose with 2,700 lifetime hits is not going to beat me."

Pedro Borbon, the third Reds pitcher, boosted his record to 3-2 while Adrian Devine absorbed the defeat, dropping his record to 2-4.

White Sox 4, Red Sox 2

Jack Brabner drove in runs with a single and sacrifice fly and Ken Brett scattered eight hits for his first win in more than three weeks. Loser Rick Wise failed in his fifth consecutive try for his 10th win.

Reds nudge Atlanta Braves

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Atlanta Braves pulled one out of left field against the Cincinnati Reds.

"I've seen the Willie McCovey shift and the Henry Aaron shift, but never bringing an outfielder in to play the infield," said Mike Lum, shaking his head.

The "Mike Lum Shift" installed by Atlanta Manager Dave Bristol Thursday night brought left fielder Tom Paciorek in to play the infield, giving the Braves three fielders on the right side.

Lum, who doesn't consider himself a pull hitter, was baffled by the move — but obviously not shaken by it. He smashed a single through the dramatic overshift into right field to score the winning run in the Reds' 3-2, 11-inning victory.

Ford-Dole support weak in Pampa

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

Pampans, with few exceptions Thursday, predicted that Jimmy Carter and his running mate will win the presidential election.

A Pampa News survey, which followed the announcement that Kansas Senator Robert Dole had been chosen as the President's running mate, found little enthusiasm in Pampa for the team.

"I don't think a hell of a lot of 'em," one man commented referring to the Ford-Dole ticket. He declined to be named.

However, Ben Guill, former U.S. Congressman from Pampa and a strong Ford supporter, said the ballgame is just starting. "No one has ever taken after Carter — I'm predicting Dole will eat him up."

Guill said he was a little surprised at Ford's selection of Dole as his running mate.

"I like Connally, but Dole is a good man — a good campaigner — very conservative."

Guill said the presidential political lines are pretty well drawn for 1976.

It is conservatism for the Republicans, and liberalism for the Democrats, he added.

Speaking in favor of Ford, Mrs. D.C. Reed said she is "100 per cent Ford."

"But I don't know anything about his running mate," she added.

Her husband said he didn't know "much about politics or the Bible, but I guess it's (the Ford-Dole team) all right."

"But, no doubt Ford can beat Carter," another said.

Dorothy Chisum said she is for "Carter all the way. I think he will positively go in."

Claude Wilson of 1934 Grape predicted the biggest issue of the campaign between the Republicans and the Democrats will be foreign affairs.

"Don't put me on the spot," his wife, Edith, commented in regard to the Ford-Dole ticket. "I think Carter will win."

One resident said that no one could beat Carter.

"Not even a Ford- Reagan team, but they could have done a better job than Ford and Dole," the resident emphasized.

Another said the Republican delegates had more or less let the party down.

"I'm not talking about the Texas delegates. You know they stood solidly behind Governor Reagan," she said.

Sam Cobb said he doesn't think much of the Ford-Dole ticket.

"I'm not a Ford man," he said.

He predicted that the Republicans will not win in November.

Another said he personally knows Dole. "In my estimation, Ford should have picked Baker," he said.

"I don't think Ford is quite smart enough to win against Carter in November," the voter said. "Of course, that's only an opinion."

Charlotte Fleming of 2530 Mary Ellen said she would like to hear the candidates express their views on the Right to Work issue.

"I'd hate to see unions get a strong hold. They are already too strong. I'd like to know how both candidates stand on that issue," she said.

However, at 5 p.m. Thursday many of those interviewed locally still predicted that Reagan would be drafted from the floor as Ford's running mate.

Douglas Short of Loveland, Colo., interviewed at the Coronado Shopping Center, said he was neither a Ford nor a Carter man.

"I'll have to pick one and vote," he said. "I can't see anything but more of the same with either party. Inflation won't improve. We're hooked with it."

Short said the only cure for inflation is a depression. "And we can't afford that."

The survey was taken in various areas of the city, including the Senior Citizens Center.

One Reagan fan was heard this morning expressing a desire for the California campaigner "to choose a Democrat as a running mate and get on the ticket as an independent."

Health emergency hits Houston area

HOUSTON (AP) — The Harris County Commissioners Court has declared a public health emergency in the Houston area because of the possibility of an outbreak of St. Louis encephalitis.

The action came Thursday on the recommendation of Dr. Francine Jense, county health director, who said there already is evidence of much more virus activity in mosquitoes than last year.

In 1975 the county had 32 confirmed cases and two deaths.

This year there have been two confirmed cases and one suspected case.

Dr. Jense said, "But we are on the same human timetable as we were last year. We know the cases can go only up. Unless we move quickly and decisively, we may see more cases this year than last."

Spokesmen for the county Mosquito Control Division said there was a problem but "you couldn't consider it an epidemic at this time."

Dr. Jense said the proclamation makes it possible for the county to seek federal funds for aerial spraying of insecticide to kill the culex mosquitoes that acquired the sleeping sickness virus from birds and transmit it to humans.

County officials said some 20 to 25 employees from other county departments will be assigned to the mosquito control unit to assist in the spraying project.

The tax-supported mosquito control district was created after a 1964 outbreak in which 224 cases were reported, including 19 deaths.

Jense said county authorities, through the State Department of Health, will contact the federal Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., about personnel and equipment for aerial spraying.

The culex bites only at night, and city officials have advised residents to stay indoors during the dark hours if possible, and if going out to spray with insect repellent.

Health officials in several surrounding counties said the encephalitis isn't a problem in their areas.

There is one suspected case in Montgomery County, north of Houston, but the other border counties have been free of the disease.

DOUBLE DELIVERY
NORWALK, Calif. (AP) — It was a stork race all the way recently between Mrs. Ronald Peterson and her daughter, Mrs. Robert Curran.

The daughter, Kathleen Curran, 20, won when her son, Erick, arrived at 11 a.m. Then at 11:07 p.m. the same day, the mother, Zella Peterson, 39, delivered a new son of her own, Michael.

Surveyor's find good news to archeologists

PECOS, Tex. (AP) — Surveyor Frank Granado's good memory has archeologists clapping their hands in glee.

Three years ago, Granado discovered a cave housing a lively bobcat and her kittens. Wishing to avoid a confrontation, Granado noted the location of the cave and decided to explore it later.

Granado returned recently to the now-deserted bobcat lair in the hilly country northwest of Pecos and found Indian relics—ranging from partially mummified children to intricately woven nets and mats to boomerang-type rabbit hunting sticks—that archeologists termed "highly significant."

The condition of the relics, however, have astounded archeologists.

"We've seen fragments but very rarely intact articles," said Dr. Don Hamilton, conservator of the Texas Archeological Research Laboratory at the University of Texas.

Hamilton said the relics probably belonged to the Hueco Indian era, which dates to 900 A.D. or earlier.

Hamilton visited the site, which he named the Granado Cave after its founder, with James M. Malone, assistant state archeologist with the Texas Historical Commission, and Charles Ortega, an archaeology student at Eastern New Mexico University.

"Normally materials such as bone and matting will practically deteriorate before your eyes when it's exposed to light," Ortega noted. "But these materials appear to be in as good condition as the day they were taken from the cave."

Granado explored the cave and—with the aid of five other men—brought the relics to Pecos.

Granado said he first discovered a small burial mound and uncovered an infant body wrapped in three layers of material. A few feet from the mound, Granado unearthed two smaller bodies, wrapped in similar blanket-soft material and covered with a cone-shaped object.

"They said no evidence existed indicating occupation or visits by persons later than the Indian inhabitants."

Amarillo plane crash claims two men's lives

AMARILLO — The crash of a light airplane west of the city Thursday claimed the lives of a 57-year-old Amarillo man and his 25-year-old son.

J.E. Foust, Jr. and his son Eddie M. Foust were flying the leased aircraft when it nosed into the ground, cartwheeling across the pasture for about 100 yards.

The plane, described as an aerobatic trainer, had been rented from Flying, Inc., at the Tradewind Airport.

Flying, Inc., officials said the two men had rented planes from them numerous times. The Department of Public Safety reported that the men also checked out an operating manual from Flying, Inc., which explained how to maneuver the craft.

A witness to the crash, O'Neal Watson of Pleasant Valley, said "I just looked up as it nosed into the ground. It hit and bounced and there was a big cloud of dust. But there was no fire. It looked like the plane was coming almost straight down."

Watson was picking corn in a field east of the crash site.

Faust was a pilot during World War II and taught in an Amarillo junior high school. Funeral services for both men are pending with an Amarillo funeral home.

The Federal Aviation Agency is investigating the crash.

Agencies duplicated low quality work

By CHRIS CONNELL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. intelligence agencies duplicated each other's efforts and emphasized quantity, not quality, in gathering data abroad, according to a study that led to a major overhaul of the intelligence community in 1971.

The pivotal study, which was declassified and released Thursday, was prepared under the direction of James R. Schlesinger, then assistant director of the White House Office of Management and Budget (OMB).

Former President Richard M. Nixon not only heeded Schlesinger's call for reform, but eventually chose Schlesinger to serve as director of the Central Intelligence Agency and, later, as Secretary of Defense.

The study noted "the cost of intelligence has almost doubled during the past decade," but found that "it is not at all clear that our hypotheses about foreign intentions, capabilities and activities have improved commensurately in scope and quality."

Intelligence-gathering has become "exceedingly expensive," primarily due to "the acquisition of expensive new systems without simultaneous reductions in obsolete programs," the report found.

During his six-month stint as CIA head in 1973, Schlesinger moved to cut costs and improve performance. He forced 1,200 of the CIA's 18,000 employees into early retirement and also initiated an internal review that led to the first disclosures of CIA misconduct.

Schlesinger served as defense secretary from 1973 until last November, when President Ford fired both him and his successor as CIA director, William Colby. Schlesinger apparently fell from favor, with his outspoken criticisms of détente with the Soviet Union.

Nixon issued an executive order in November 1971 giving then CIA director Richard Helms an "enhanced leadership" role with broad supervision over all foreign intelligence activities carried out by the CIA, the Defense Department's Defense Intelligence Agency, the State Department, the Atomic Energy Commission and the FBI.

Schlesinger's OMB report was credited with precipitating that order, but the actual 47-page report had not been made public. It was released, with references to actual intelligence costs deleted, under a Freedom of Information Act request by Rolling Stone magazine and Morton H. Halperin, former National Security Council aide to Henry A. Kissinger.

The study found that the National Security Act of 1947, which laid the groundwork for present U.S. intelligence activities, did "little to provide strong leadership for the (intelligence) community."

One reason was that the act's primary intent was "to prevent a recurrence of the intelligence confusions and delays that occurred prior to Pearl Harbor." To do so, it emphasized collecting intelligence, not analyzing or coordinating it, the study found.

Another reason, the report said, was that "powerful interests in the military services and elsewhere opposed (and continued to oppose) more centralized management of intelligence activities."

Reaganites enter Ford camp

By DICK BARNES
Associated Press Writer
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Ronald Reagan supporters at the Republican National Convention, by a 4 to 1 margin of those responding to a survey, say they'll work for the Ford-Dole ticket in the fall presidential campaign.

But more than one-third of those who said they are willing to work for the ticket said their principal efforts will go to other Republican candidates.

There was almost no support for a third-party effort among the more than 600 respondents to The Associated Press poll of Reagan delegates or their alternates, conducted Thursday, the day after President Ford won the GOP presidential nomination.

The number of those responding was more than half the total of 1,070 votes Reagan received in the presidential balloting.

The level of enthusiasm for campaign work varied widely among the backers of Reagan and some said it was simply too soon for them to know what they'll feel like doing during the next two and a half months.

Peggy Wutke, a Reagan delegate from Nevada, said she'll work "with all my heart" for the national ticket.

Michael South, Reagan state chairman in Colorado, said, "Whatever the differences between ourselves and Mr. Ford, they do not compare with the differences between ourselves and Mr. Carter."

But Hugh Gregg, a Reagan delegate from New Hampshire, said the extent of his activity for Ford "depends entirely upon the tone of the Ford effort and its identification with the Reagan organization. It will be a very difficult ticket to elect without Reagan."

The survey, conducted by more than two dozen reporters, first asked Reagan delegates, "Now that President Ford has won the nomination and picked his running mate, will you work for their election this fall?"

Eighty-two per cent of those responding answered "yes." 6 per cent said "no" and 12 per cent said they don't yet know.

Among the more than 300 who said they would work for the ticket, 64 per cent said they would campaign actively. The others said they would endorse the ticket, but mostly work for other GOP candidates.

The more than 100 respondents who did not say they would work for Ford and Dole were asked what they did intend to do this campaign. Slightly more than half said they would vote for the ticket but not work for it.

Only seven persons answering the questionnaire said they would support a third party effort and just three said they would vote for Jimmy Carter, the Democratic nominee.

One of these three, Clara Giordano of Ford's home state of Michigan, said: "What's the difference? We might as well join the status quo and go with the winner."

Two delegates said they'd forget politics entirely and not even vote this year.

New teachers assigned

Nine new teachers joined the Pampa Independent School District Thursday, completing the faculty for 1976-77.

The board of trustees accepted the applications of Dale Opitz to teach industrial arts at Pampa Junior High School; Sharon K. Hatchel, kindergarten, Austin Elementary; Jill L. McCaskill, science, Pampa Junior High; and John F. Banks, mathematics, Houston Middle School.

Other include Ramona D. Williams, 5th grade, Lamar Elementary; Carol J. Caldwell, special education, Baker Elementary; Marla G. Eckhart, English, Pampa Junior High; Sherry K. Smith, mathematics, Pampa Junior High; and Judith Ann Lissman, special education, Pampa High School.

The board accepted the resignations of Shirley B. Welch, English teacher at Pampa Junior High, and Sandra K. Reeves, special education at Baker Elementary.

Thomas Bruton Jr. was charged with murder. The body of the victim, Frank Sawyer, 35, of nearby Drexel Hill, was found last week in a plastic trash bag along a highway in Delaware. He apparently was strangled, police said.

Sawyer's estranged wife, Sarah Ann, 21, and the younger Bruton's roommate, Alphonse Pritchard, 26, also were charged with murder. Delaware State Police said Sawyer was killed because of an affair between the younger Bruton and Mrs. Sawyer.

Pennsylvania State Police are handling the investigation. A state police spokesman said Chief Bruton wanted it that way. The investigation normally would have been under his jurisdiction, the spokesman said, because the murder took place in Media.

"I was very close to him as a child," Bruton said Thursday. "I was proud of both my sons."

The other one, William, he's a wonderful boy. But Tom, about three years ago, he started to go bad.

"Do I still love him? I guess I do. I guess I love to. He's my own flesh and blood."

Thomas Bruton Jr. has been in trouble before. Last year he was convicted of burglarizing his father's apartment and possession of a sawed-off shotgun. He spent five months in prison.

"I don't know what went wrong," said his father, a 30-year police veteran and police chief in this southeastern Pennsylvania town for eight years. "All of a sudden he started getting in trouble."

Thomas Bruton Jr. served in the Vietnam war, going back twice as a volunteer. Shortly after his discharge he married "a lovely Philly girl," said his father. "They broke up. I don't know what the trouble was, and that's when his problems started."

Houston budget kicked back

HOUSTON (AP) — The City Council has kicked back a proposed $385.7 million budget to the mayor's office once again, leaving Houston, the nation's sixth largest city, still without financial guidelines for the 1976 fiscal year.

Mayor Fred Hofheinz submitted the budget June 28 but various councilmen have delayed action on the proposed expenditures and did it again Wednesday.

In a 7-2 vote, the councilmen returned the budget to the mayor's office, calling for revisions to reflect an anticipated decrease in property tax revenue.

The action came after Gary Webb, city tax assessor-collector, said a recent ruling by Texas Atty. Gen. John Hill upholding the legality of a state law allowing property tax exemptions for disabled veterans, was legal. This, Webb said, could cost Houston a loss of about $1.3 million in revenue.

Hofheinz argued the projected loss in revenue is no problem because income is increasing from such tax sources as traffic fines, park fees and mixed drink levies.

City Comptroller Leonel Castillo said the delay in approved the budget is holding back the start of police academy training for 67 new cadets who have been waiting in the wings since June.

Castillo said, "Within an hour after you gentlemen approve a budget, I will have the necessary paper work for the police class completed."

Castillo said he couldn't certify the $632,000 needed for the police class until the budget was approved.

Councilman Frank Mann also asked the mayor to submit the number of city employees provided for in the 1975 and 1974 budgets so he could compare them with the new budget.

Hofheinz said Mann already had this information in his files.

Councilman Larry McKaskle cast one of the two votes against returning the budget to Hofheinz and said, "We're not getting anywhere."

To wipe out worn-out programs

Congress may try 'zero-base budgeting'

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Administration and congressional budget experts believe a budget system designed to rid of worn-out programs in the federal bureaucracy could become a useful accounting tool, but some fear it could also generate mounds of paperwork.

The system is known as "zero-base budgeting" and has been used in different forms and with different degrees of success in several states and by private industry. Now, Congress is trying to determine whether it can be applied successfully to the U.S. government.

It has worked in Georgia, where Jimmy Carter established it when he was governor, and in New Jersey, Idaho, Texas, Rhode Island and other states, according to a congressional researcher.

But experts studying the proposal and a companion measure known as a "sunset law" fear that it may not be applicable to anything so massive and tangled as the federal bureaucracy.

Under traditional budgeting procedures, only new programs or increases or reductions in funds for existing programs are evaluated. But under zero-base budgeting, all expenditures are evaluated in an effort to flush out the underbrush of programs that have outlived their usefulness.

A sunset law would set a date on which the statutory authority for a program or agency would automatically expire unless it is re-enacted, forcing Congress to study the program's effectiveness.

Both proposals have considerable political appeal, particularly in an election year when the Washington bureaucracy has become a major campaign issue.

Sunset bills have at least 166 co-sponsors in the House and 58 in the Senate.

The Senate Government Operations Committee has voted to send to the full Senate a bill that would establish both plans as federal budgetary procedures, but the House Budget Committee is still examining the proposals, and note has any likelihood of being enacted.

this year.

Paul O'Neill, deputy director of the Office of Management and Budget, told a House Budget Committee task force looking into the plan that requirements for reviewing how federal dollars are spent "may lead to a paperwork process that is mind-boggling, even by Washington standards."

"The underlying concept is an excellent idea," said William Nichols, the management and budget office's general counsel. "Programs ought to be re-evaluated at certain time intervals. Otherwise you don't get rid of them."

But, he said in an interview, "for these programs that come up for re-evaluation, you're going to have to do a lot of analysis, and a lot of writing. Is it worth the time, the money and the effort? How serious and how effective will the analysis be and how carefully will it be scrutinized by the executive branch and the Congress?"

He said the Office of Management and Budget had not found the answers to those questions.

In testimony before the House Budget Committee, Peter Phyr, who introduced zero-base budgeting in 1968 at Texas Instruments, a large electronics manufacturer, explained how it worked in Georgia, where he served as a consultant to Carter.

As an example, he used the Central State Hospital in Milledgeville, the state's largest mental institution.

He said that when the facility budget was reviewed, using the zero-base budgeting concept, "we found we could justify the need for one pathologist where we had three."

"In a couple of other hospitals they were woefully understaffed and normally would have hired pathologists," he said. So, two were transferred, and the Central State Hospital used the money that would have paid their salaries for other purposes.

He said the state hospital system had never had any method of identifying areas where funds could be channeled to different programs, and that the application of zero-base budgeting "brought these things to the surface."

Referring to fears that the system could produce red tape, rather than reduce it, Phyr said: "My experience is that it has not produced more paperwork. In some cases it has saved a great deal of paperwork."

In addition, he said, none of the states or industrial organizations that has implemented zero-based budgeting has had to add significantly to its staff to handle the increased reviews.

Alice Rivlin, director of the Congressional Budget Office, said that annual reviews of all federal programs would be impossible; evaluations conducted every four or five years would be more manageable.

She said a sunset law could "focus attention on a lot of small agencies that may have outlived their usefulness."

Frank Phillips College offers courses in Pampa

Frank Phillips College in Borger is offering four courses at its off-campus centers in Pampa this fall.

Law Enforcement No. 133 and No. 253 will be taught at the off-campus center at Pampa City Hall, with Detective John Ryzman as instructor.

Registration for both classes is set for 6:30 p.m., Sept. 1, at the City Hall.

Law Enforcement No. 133 will meet on Thursdays, from 7:00-9:45 p.m.

Law Enforcement No. 253 will meet on Wednesdays, from 7:00-9:45 p.m.

Also offered will be Fire Protection Technology, No. 123 and No. 243. Classes for these courses will be held at Central Station, in Pampa, with Patrick A. Veazy, instructor.

Registration for Fire Protection No. 123 will be at 6:30 p.m., August 31. Classes will be on Tuesdays from 7-9:45 p.m. This course offers a study of the required standard for water supply, special hazards-protection systems, automatic sprinklers and special extinguishing systems, signaling and detection systems, rating organizations and underwriting agencies.

Fire Protection Technology No. 243 offers a study of the chemical characteristics and behavior of various materials that burn or react violently when related to storage, transportations, handling hazardous materials; it will also deal with flammable materials and liquids, combustible solids and gases, and rocket propellants.

Registration for Fire Protection No. 243 will be at 6:30 p.m., Sept. 1. Classes will be on Wednesdays from 7:00-9:45 p.m.

Grading of students of the Fire Protection Technology courses will be determined by weekly test, attendance, classroom participation, and a final exam at the end of the semester.
