

We've got a problem. Brig Gen William R. Maloney, Marine information director, said recently.

Traditionally the military and the press have been skeptical of each other. For a long time, at least since World War II, we really had a captive press and we got used to it. Then Vietnam came along and at times we did lie. That major can't understand why you aren't telling his story the way he wants you to.

The military isn't the only one who doesn't understand. Some folks around here have the same type of problem. They are not wrong, it's just that they can't understand why the newspaper isn't telling their stories exactly like they want them told.

These folks range from local wheels who want their cause pushed a little harder than the next man's, to brides' mother who politely explain that their wedding write-ups must not be changed or cut when they are published.

Some other examples:

1. The newspaper reported that Pampa school board members studied the athletic department's deficit. The reporter gets branded anti-athletic because he didn't tell the athletic department's story the way the department wanted it told.

2. The newspaper reported that McLean Hospital was operating in the red. (Note the hospital is now operating in a better financial picture.) The paper is charged with being against the McLean Hospital because it wasn't telling the story the way McLean Hospital wanted it told and because it was reporting on the condition at all.

3. In girl's softball, some of the women coaches believed The News to be quite inadequate because it didn't cover their stories the way they wanted them told.

Examples could continue. They happen every day. But it always seems that the "major" involved cannot pinpoint factual error, nor can he charge the newspaper with omitting coverage.

The story just wasn't his way — with his son or daughter included. With his glossy public relations touch, with his subtle slant.

Smuggling is big business in America.

According to customs inspectors, who estimate they seized $400 million worth of items in 1975, contraband ranges from undeclared peat moss to lobster to diamonds.

And such hiding places? Stolen securities were stuffed into a man's undershorts, marijuana was frosted to look like a birthday cake, heroin replaced gunpowder in a bullet, hashish had been woven into a blanket, parrots were fed tequila-soaked corn and hidden in socks in a secret compartment, cocaine has been hidden in shaving cream and toothpaste tubes.

Foreign companies are catering to the would-be smugglers.

A West German factory sells hollowed out champagne corks to conceal narcotics, a Colombian company converts aerosol cans to contain contraband, a Paraguay firm makes church collection boxes with false bottoms.

People can sure go to a lot of trouble to hide things.

A concerned citizen wrote to The News with this suggestion for the City.

"Two or three weeks ago there was an article in your paper about the proposed city budget for the coming year. One thing that stuck in my mind was that over half the budget was for wages. The very next day, at Hobart and 18th, I observed one city employee painting a sign post while another employee was leaning against the fender of the pickup. A third employee was sitting on the driver's side of the pickup also watching the one employee work."

And he sent along a picture to verify his observation.

Roll up sleeve, flu shot coming

By JANET STAIHAR
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Roll up your sleeves, the flu shots are coming. Congress passed a swine flu insurance program Tuesday, ending a stalemate that had threatened to leave the vaccine sitting on manufacturers' shelves. Health officials now say swine flu inoculations will be available starting next month.

Brushing aside usual procedural niceties, the House and Senate both voted Tuesday to get the program moving in the wake of some concern over a mysterious disease that has killed 27 persons in Pennsylvania. That disease has not been linked to flu.

Saying an outbreak of swine flu "could mean the death of millions of people," President Ford had urged passage of the insurance bill in telephone calls made Tuesday morning to congressional leaders.

Ford is certain to sign the measure. The first shots next month will go to the elderly and chronically ill. The rest of the nation is expected to start getting the free shots by about mid-October, officials said. Four drug firms already have processed 120 million doses of vaccine but refused to sell any to the government until securing protection against lawsuits by users who might suffer adverse effects.

Government intervention in the liability protection facet of the program became necessary after private insurers refused to provide coverage to vaccine producers. Insurers claimed billions of dollars worth of claims might be filed if problems arose from what would be the biggest mass inoculation program in U.S. history.

Under the legislation, passed on unanimous voice vote by the Senate, and on a 250 to 83 vote by the House, the government would pay the legal defense bill against any lawsuits brought by vaccine users.

If a complainant proved negligence against a drug firm or volunteer medical personnel administering the shot the government could sue to collect from the private insurer for the drug firm or practitioner.

But the government is going to wind up paying the manufacturers' insurance premiums for even this limited coverage. After drug and firms negotiate a price, that amount will be added to the price drug firms are charging the government for the vaccine.

But the legislation prohibits manufacturers from making any outright profits on the swine flu vaccine.

To try to hold down potential lawsuits, the bill requires court action to begin within two years of any alleged injury or damages.

Patriotism goes to the field

It started out as a new paint job for the 'spudder,' a cable tool used to clean out oil wells. The original color was orange. Ed Story had the idea to switch into a red, white and blue theme for the Bicentennial year. Kevin and Freddy Romines, also of Pampa, helped with the paint job along with Jerry Farrell. Delmer Bowles of Pampa did the flag art and lettering. The rig is owned and the men employed by Copan Corporation, Lefors.

Monogue's booze, dues, credit card questioned

By PAMPA NEWS STAFF
Pampa News investigation has turned up evidence that Robert Monogue, administrator of Gray County's two hospitals, has charged liquor purchases to the account of a company that sold supplies to the hospital.

The News obtained a photostatic copy of a charge ticket bearing the signature of "R. Monogue" for two bottles of liquor totalling $15.54.

The company that Monogue apparently charged the liquor to was, according to the ticket, "Mid West Chemical Co." apparently Midwest Chemical and Processing Co. Inc. located in White Deer, which reportedly ceased business operations in May.

The bill at the liquor store was dated Jan. 16, 1976. Records at Gray County Courthouse show many purchases from Midwest Chemical and Processing Co. Inc., including December invoices in the amounts of $388 (invoice date Dec. 8) and $35 (invoice date Dec. 12).

Asked by The News in a telephone conversation Tuesday afternoon to explain why he had charged liquor to a company involved in selling products to the hospital, Monogue said, "No comment."

A handwriting analyst verified the signature as that of the administrator.

According to a document filed in 1974 in the Gray County Clerk's office, Clifford Everhart of White Deer was president of the Midwest Chemical and Processing Co.

The News attempted to contact Everhart for comment on the matter, but his telephone number was reported as being no longer in service and there was no new listing.

Other research at the courthouse turned up tickets showing that gasoline had been charged on a credit card issued to "Highland General Hospital" by a Mrs. Robert Monogue.

The News obtained photostatic copies of three invoices — one dated May 21, 1973; one dated May 28, 1973; and the third apparently undated.

"I don't have any comment," Monogue said when asked about the use of the hospital credit card by Mrs. Robert Monogue.

Also in the courthouse records a petty cash receipt showed that Monogue had been reimbursed $39 from the hospital petty cash fund to pay his Rotary Club dues. The receipt was dated March 28, 1973.

When asked about the Rotary dues Monogue again said, "I don't have any comment."

Shortly before press time today, The News received a news release from Judith Auen, public relations director at the hospital, in which she quoted Monogue as saying he did receive some liquor as a gift from a personal friend, Bill Slaughter, "at that time president of Midwest Chemical Company."

The administrator said that the liquor was delivered to his home. In explaining his signature on the receipt, in a telephone conversation with The News, Monogue said, "I don't remember how it was delivered. If I signed for it, I signed for it."

In cross-checking the information Monogue submitted, The News was told that liquor paid for by Midwest Chemical Company was delivered to Monogue's home on occasions, but that it was not the practice of the store to require a signature for delivery.

Monogue explained in the prepared release, "There was absolutely no connection with the gift and any business his (Slaughter's) company may have had in this hospital. I have never personally dealt with Mr. Slaughter in any business his company might or might not have done and was never a part of any negotiations with Mr. Slaughter concerning any business his company had with this hospital. Midwest Chemical did do business with the hospital and the only considerations were price, quality of product and service. Mr. Slaughter and or any representative from his company dealt with the maintenance or purchasing department at all times. I have many friends with which this hospital does business. It is clearly made a point in all instances, that the only way I do business is without regard to favoritism and the only things taken into consideration is price, quality of product and service."

In answer to the credit card used by his ex-wife, Monogue said in the release.

"Yes, my ex-wife did sign some gas credit cards. At that time there were no restrictions made on the use of the hospital vehicle. This occurred approximately three and a half years ago. One of the members (sic) of the hospital board at that time stated that someone had objected to them about my wife driving the vehicle. My reaction was that there had been no instruction given to me on the use of the vehicle and I stated that from that time on no member of my family has driven that vehicle."

In reply to the question about the Rotary dues, Monogue said.

"The first year I was employed as Administrator, I submitted a voucher for payment of Rotary dues. I believe it was paid, but then an objection was made (D.W. Bond was Chairman at that time) I informed him that my previous employer had always paid my dues to civic organizations as a matter of customary business practice but if someone did object to the practice, I would tender my resignation to the Rotary Club. I resigned approximately three and a half years ago from the Rotary Club."

The release closed by saying, "I feel sure that the answers given will more than satisfy the questions submitted."

He did not say if he had reimbursed the county or the hospital for the credit card use by his wife or for the Rotary dues.

County gets request for quick redistricting

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

The Gray County Commissioners Court will consider a letter Friday requesting that the county be redistricted "immediately" based on guidelines handed down in 1966 by the Supreme Court in a Midland County case.

Judge Don Cain added the request from Jean Martindale, Pampa attorney, who is representing Ralph Prock and other interested citizens, to the agenda today.

The judge has been out of town since Aug. 2, and returned to his office this morning. He added a supplement to the agenda which was posted earlier this week.

The Gray County Commissioners Court voted in 1972 to redistrict on an at-large basis as in the Hemphill County case with four geographic areas, effective Jan. 1, 1973," Judge Cain said today.

He added that in April of that same year, the Texas Attorney General ordered that was the Hemphill County redistricting unconstitutional based on the Texas Constitution.

"In 1974 we asked the Texas Constitution Commission for a provision that counties under 50,000 population be redistricted on at large basis. That failed 25-17," the judge said.

Judge Barbara Culver of Midland County was chairman of the commission and she was in favor of the proposition, he added.

"In 1975, we asked the Texas Legislature to provide provision that upon vote of the people in counties of under 50,000 they could choose to redistrict on at large basis," the judge said.

Redistricting of the commissioner precincts would also require redistricting of the justice of peace and constable precincts, the judge explained.

"It would also involve the wet and dry status of the county. Now all of this must be submitted to the U.S. Attorney General in accordance with the Voting Rights Act. We will discuss this Friday," the judge said.

He added that the court would also consider the hospital board's action of Monday night when it refused in a five to one vote to terminate the services of Robert Monogue, administrator of the county's two hospitals.

The action will be considered in executive session, Judge Cain said.

"I don't want to comment further on that at this time," the judge said.

"In regard to the action of the board I have worked with Mr. (Fred) Neslage, and Dr. (R.M.)

Bellamy for 25 years. I respect their right to their opinion."

The Commissioners Court unanimously passed a resolution on Aug. 2 requesting the administrator to resign and in the event he fails or refuses the court called upon the board to terminate his services.

In other action Friday, the court will consider approval of Roy Smith to buy the contract of Pampa Aircraft Inc. from Gene Gatewood and Clarence Swindle, as approved by the Airport Board.

Commissioners are also scheduled to consider amending an order passed in an earlier meeting which reflects the cost for radar units for the Highway Patrol at $1,850 each with trade in instead of $1,450 each.

The units are to be purchased from revenue sharing funds. The Friday session is set for 10 a.m. in the county courtroom.

Sex change may cause player to be ineligible

NEW YORK (AP) — Officials of the U.S. Open tennis tournament are still undecided whether Renee Richards, formerly Richard Raskind, a ranking male tennis player who underwent a sex change operation, will be allowed to play in the women's singles next month at Forest Hills.

"The tournament committee has the application under consideration," a spokesman for the U.S. Tennis Association (USTA), which will make the decision, said Tuesday.

Dr. Richards, 41, is an ophthalmologist who lived in New York City and now resides in Newport Beach, Calif. As Dr. Raskind, she played in the junior veterans division at Forest Hills just two years ago. In 1963, Dr. Raskind won the Eastern Juniors men's title.

Some tennis buffs have speculated that Dr. Richards, strong and mobile as a nationally ranked men's single player, could overpower even the likes of Chris Evert in the women's field.

The USTA's indecision has angered Dr. Richards. In a statement issued through World Tennis Magazine, she said she had the "same right to play" at the prestigious Forest Hills "as any other woman — more than most because I have already won a major singles event and I have been training for that tournament all summer."

The sex change was disclosed earlier this month when Dr. Richards won a women's title in a tournament at La Jolla, Calif. She already has been cleared for play in the Tennis Week Open starting Aug. 23 at the Orange Lawn Tennis Club in South Orange, N.J. The Tennis Week Open is the last big tuneup before the U.S. Open, the most important tennis event in the United States.

Democrats and Republicans may clash directly over the sensitive issue of abortion if the GOP convention adopts a platform subcommittee's recommendation.

Reagan and Ford supporters joined forces Tuesday night in adopting an antiabortion proposal by a 13 to 1 vote.

Another platform subcommittee endorsed a plank Tuesday night denouncing busing of school children as "unnecessary, counterproductive and wrong."

Urges community grant

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Housing Secretary Carla Hills urged Republican platform writers today to endorse block grants of federal money for community development and recommended "an expansion of the block-grant concept to an increasing number of our domestic programs."

"Evidence shows that communities on their own initiative can do a more efficient job with the funds than can the federal government," she declared. She urged condemnation of Democratic legislation creating "a welter of narrow, confusing and conflicting categorical grant programs."

Block grants give local governments more latitude in determining how federal money can be spent. Mrs. Hills said categorical grants, which define more closely how the money can be used, have created "an interminable application process... and no guarantee of approval at the end of the long line."

Mrs. Hills spoke at pre-Republican convention proceedings wracked by a dispute over women's rights and intrigued by speculation, supported by little apparent substance, that Sen. James L. Buckley of New York might become a third GOP candidate for president.

At final hearings by the platform committee later in the day, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who has acknowledged discussing with Buckley the possibility of entering the presidential race, was to press for adoption of planks embodying the views of a group of conservative delegates.

Elizabeth Athanasakos, presiding officer of the National Commission on Observance of the International Women's Year, deleted references to the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution from her testimony in support of women's rights.

She said she made the deletions because of a federal court injunction issued at the request of Phyllis Schlafly, a well-known conservative and president of Stop ERA. Mrs. Schlafly said the commission is a government body that should not use its federal funds to lobby for controversial proposals.

The temporary injunction was issued Monday by federal Judge Robert D. Morgan in Peoria, Ill., who said lobbying by the commission on behalf of the ERA violated the 1972 Federal Advisory Commission Act.

A Buckley candidacy might stymie the contest between President Ford and Ronald Reagan for the GOP presidential nomination and help Reagan, who trails Ford by 1,106 to 1,033 votes in The Associated Press poll of publicly committed or legally bound delegates. A total of 1,130 votes is needed for nomination.

Sen. John G. Tower of Texas, a Ford man, said he doesn't think a Buckley candidacy would be taken seriously by many people. Tower said if Buckley was entered in the presidential race, it would help Ford.

"It could perpetuate him into the nomination quickly by siphoning votes away from Reagan," Tower said. Republican party Chairman Mary Louise Smith tried to per-sue Ford and Reagan forces to bury their differences, saying the convention should nominate a president in "an atmosphere of calm deliberation."

Without referring directly to the Ford-Reagan fight, Mrs. Smith told the final meeting of the current Republican National Committee the party must have a peaceful convention if it is to have a chance against the Democrats in the fall.

In his presentation to the platform committee, Helms gave the drafters proposed planks ranging from maintenance of U.S. sovereignty over the Panama Canal Zone to support of constitutional amendments against abortion and school busing.

Helms said a majority of Americans consider themselves conservatives and "if Republicans are ever to become the majority party, we must give our citizens an incentive to leave the comfortable political attitudes they have worn for so many years."

Democrats and Republicans may clash directly over the sensitive issue of abortion if the GOP convention adopts a platform subcommittee's recommendation.

Reagan and Ford supporters joined forces Tuesday night in adopting an antiabortion proposal by a 13 to 1 vote.

Ford right on this one

The recently enacted $3.95 billion so-called Jobs Bill, passed by Congress over the President's veto points up the difficulty of using political power constructively to reverse the trend toward ever-bigger government and ever-bigger tax grabs at the earnings of the private sector.

Seeing the bill correctly, as a "giant boondoggle" which, instead of creating real employment as its proponents claim, would further weaken the job-creating capability of the private sector and add further thousands of "make work" jobs to those already being funded by the nation's taxpayers. President Ford, in a rare example of political courage, sought to use his veto in a responsible manner. The veto was easily overridden by vote-conscious legislators in both the Senate and the House, and the bill is now law.

Thus, in another demonstration of the truth that government cannot give us anything without depriving us of something else, another $3.95 billion will be taken by the government from its rightful owners, who would have spent it in job-creating ways to purchase goods and services desired by themselves, and spent by government bureaucrats on largely non-productive "leaf-raking" and other WPA-like projects and schemes.

As economist Henry Hazlitt recently pointed out in an article published in "The Freeman" magazine and reproduced on these pages, "Nothing is added by any of these government programs to the total of goods or employment. At best, what happens is that the community gets production or employment in one direction INSTEAD OF in another." In other words, at best, there is no net gain. At worst as is usually the case, Hazlitt went on to explain, there is a net loss. And this, for two reasons:

1. Much of the money expropriated from the private sector is used up in the process to pay for expanding bureaucratic salaries and operating expenses.

2. Of what remains, much is wasted on make-believe work which, although serving to keep people busy, fails to produce either goods or services wanted by the taxpayers.

Thus, as Hazlitt concluded, "These programs clearly reduce total production" and add up to a net loss.

As with some other spending vetoes, President Ford was right. In calling the so-called Jobs Bill a "giant boondoggle," he hit the resources wasting legislation right on its deceptive head.

"I WONDER IF THEY'LL FIND ANY SIGNS OF LIFE WHEN SOMEONE SENDS A LANDER HERE?"

The baffling case of the letter 'B'

By TOM TIEDE

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Little did Sherlock Holmes realize when he arrived in Washington last week that he was about to confront one of the most baffling mysteries of his career. He suspected the worst however; the cable to him from U.S. authorities was unusually brief, and he deduced that a government communication that is brief is also guarded and hence into a matter beyond the routine.

He was greeted at the airport by an official car and taken directly to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. There he was introduced to a distinguished group of scientists who he presumed had just finished a working lunch. "How did you know that?" they asked. Elementary, he replied, reminding them that each still had his vest unbuttoned, and besides there was an order of pasta in the hall.

"How may I be of service?" Holmes wondered. The scientists pointed to a large photograph on the table. "This is a picture of the surface of Mars as taken by our Viking spacecraft yesterday. It is the same as every other picture we've received, save one feature. Here, on this rock, do you see it Mr. Holmes?"

"It appears to be a character of the alphabet." "Precisely, the letter 'B'."

"Quite remarkable." "Mr. Holmes, we have been studying the letter for nearly 24 hours. We've gotten opinions from MIT, from USC, even from CBS, but so far we have found nothing to explain it. Can you help us at all?"

Holmes put his magnifying glass to the photograph. "Do you suspect foul play?" he was asked. "I think not," Holmes answered wryly. "Were the Chinese capable of hurling a monogrammed rock at a U.S. spaceship, they would undoubtedly select an initial of their own language."

He paused to light his pipe. "No, gentlemen, what we have here is in its own way something far more sinister than the Communist mind can conceive."

Then Holmes turned to the door. "Quickly," he said, "we haven't a moment to lose." And with the scientists in tow he raced from the building on a madcap investigation of the capital not designed for settling pasta. His objective: "When you have eliminated everything else," he explained tersely, "the solution must be what remains."

He talked with officers at Brookings Institute, the Bureau of Printing, the Botanical Gardens, even Bethesda High School. His final stop was the Civil Service Administration, which he said was suspect in this matter because of its historic propensity for expanding the symbol of the bureaucracy to ever new worlds.

Hours later, Holmes and the scientists returned to NASA where the famed detective requested a soundproof room and double security at the exits. He was asked if he needed a podium but he declined, saying he never drank during a case. At length he called for attention.

"The letter," he announced gravely, "is not of this world." There was utter silence.

"Keep in mind that the letter on the rock was not photographed until several days after the Viking landing. The rock had been photographed repeatedly during the period, but the symbol was not there. I surmise it was placed, as a warning, when the camera was not looking."

"As a warning? What kind of warning?"

"Gentlemen, the letter 'B' stands for: Betty for President."

"Which means?"

"Which means, my good fellow, that there is not only life on Mars, but intelligent life. The lady would be my choice as well."

"But that's impossible."

"Correct," Holmes said, slipping on his deerstalker cap. "she's not even running. Nevertheless, the Martians seem insistent. And in view of this I would suggest that you do not anything to cause panic. It would be better if you told the public the letter is an optical illusion — at least until after November."

NATION'S PRESS Stamps for strikers?

Anaheim (Calif.) Bulletin

If there is a certain way to do irreparable damage to the commonwealth it is to supply incentives for non-production. So that every person can enjoy greater access to gods and services it is still imperative that everybody pulls his own weight.

The promiscuous use of food stamps, which requires struggling taxpayers to subsidize the dinner tables of others (often more bounteous tables than the taxpayers can enjoy), has proved just such a threat to the commonwealth. The program does reduce incentive to produce.

The error has been compounded by the giving of food stamp privileges to striking rubber workers, who were encouraged to leave their jobs by irresponsible union officials. In the first place, the strikers subtract from the greater growth of the economy, which includes themselves. And in the second place, they're rewarded for it in a program also counterproductive.

Everybody in the marketplace benefits when taxpayers are permitted to spend their own money. That way the money gets spread around to the widest number of people. Anything that denies that most productive supplier of human needs is immoral.

Food stamps for strikers is an outrageous denial of human rights.

Carter urged to visit NATO allies, Mideast

By ROBERTS ALLEN
NEW YORK, July 15 — Democratic standard-bearer Jimmy Carter will do some foreign traveling — if he follows a suggestion of close advisers.

As proposed by them, the Georgian would spend a week or 10 days getting acquainted with leaders of key NATO countries and the Middle East, particularly Egypt, Israel and Saudi Arabia.

Underlying thought is that such first-hand meetings would bulwark his discussion of foreign affairs during the fall campaign.

Unlike some of his Democratic opponents, Carter did not make a foreign junket. Also, he did little talking about international affairs, especially sidestepping such explosive and thorny issues as a new Panama Canal treaty, detente and SALT II agreement.

But in the election battle, he will have to take stands on them and other foreign controversies, and in the opinion of advisers, his pronouncements would be enhanced by a "fact finding" trip abroad.

Also being stressed is their belief that if President Ford emerges as the Republican nominee, he and Secretary Kissinger are certain to spring a foreign "spectacular" — similar to the latter's "peace is at hand" (in Vietnam) avowal in October 1972 at the height of that year's presidential race.

If something like that is staged this time, it would most likely be announcement of an accord on the protracted SALT II strategic arms limitations negotiations.

Another session of these deliberations is scheduled in Geneva in early September, when long-considered loose ends could be wrapped up.

One Valid Reason
Timing, length and other details of a Carter trip are wide open — pending clearcut indication of what he thinks of the proposal.

So far, his response has been noncommittal. While evincing interest, he has not gone beyond that. "Lieu tenants think it is encouraging that he has not flatly said no, as a consequence they feel the way is still open for further consideration."

They are also heartened by the keen interest Carter has displayed in one sensitive foreign problem — the more than $56 billion owed the U.S. by other countries, notable among them oil-rich nations that have profited enormously in recent years by sky-high prices.

It is known Carter carefully read the entire House debate, published in the Congressional Record, on the amendment of Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ark., barring aid to any country in default for one year on debts owing the U.S.

Although strenuously opposed by the State Department, the measure was approved by the House 229 to 139.

A similar proposal was narrowly turned down in the Senate, despite vigorous bipartisan backing. An attempt to reinstate the House provision in a closed-door conference between the two chambers was blocked by State Department pressuring.

Notwithstanding these rebuffs, the issue is still very much alive on Capitol Hill; and more is very likely to be heard of it in the coming weeks as a result of Carter's indirect involvement.

There is every indication it may become a red-hot campaign issue — particularly the State Department's longstanding reluctance to seek repayment of the vast sums owed the U.S., and by some of the wealthiest countries in the world.

Amazing Details
Carter reportedly expressed astonishment at highlights brought out during the House and Senate discussions of Rep. Alexander's amendment — to the $5.9 billion foreign aid appropriation measure.

That bill, incidentally, brought the total of such expenditures since 1946 to more than $13 billion, nearly one-half of this country's national debt.

These highlights are: Of the 156.7 billion owned the U.S. by foreign countries, $23.89 billion dates back to World War I, and of that amount $12.4 billion is accrued interest.

As that amount $12.4 billion is accrued interest.

As of June 30, 1975, 100 countries were delinquent in debt payment to the U.S. Of them, nine are members of the 13-member Organization of Petroleum Export Countries (OPEC). Although they have profited immensely from record-high oil prices to the U.S., they are $59 million in default on obligations owing the U.S.

Top among them are Iran, more than $45 million in the red; Nigeria, $3,686 million; Venezuela, $4,164 million.

Bullseyes
Carter is described as particularly impressed by the scathing comments of Rep. Alexander and Sens. Harry Byrd, Ind.-Va., and Edward Brooke, R-Mass.

Cautiously citing the glaring disparity in treatment of U.S. taxpayers and foreign debtors, Alexander declared: "I realize my amendment is not popular in certain Washington quarters, particularly the cocktail circuit. But this is an issue that has long irritated most American citizens who can't understand why nothing is done about collecting foreign debts justly owed to the U.S."

"They are especially outraged in view of the Internal Revenue Service's quick and forceful crackdown on tax claims. The IRS slaps a lien on bank accounts fast and tough. But when it comes to foreign countries, the government applies a double standard, one that is far less strict and infinitely more lenient."

Old, Old Wine
In the Tuscany hills of Italy where the Chianti wine grape is grown, paleontologists have discovered a million-year-old fossil grape vine they think may be an ancestor of the same "Vitis vinifera" cultivated there today.

Ford's vp list covers GOP spectrum

TER R. MEARS

By sending out feelers to at least 16 Republicans and leaving them free to say they've been contacted, the Ford camp has offered every Republican faction a hint that its preferred candidate might wind up on the ticket if the President is nominated.

There's even a glimmer for conservatives who would like Reagan in the second spot if they can't install him as the presidential nominee.

In the close and, for the moment, virtually static competition for presidential nominating votes, the vice presidency has become part of the strategy, with Ford and Reagan using it in opposite ways.

Their goals are the same: to pry loose delegate votes for the presidential nomination.

Reagan designated his running mate, Sen. Richard S. Schweiker of Pennsylvania, two weeks ago, in an effort to broaden his bid for delegate support outside conservative Republican ranks. His choice of the liberal, Schweiker produced no breakthrough in the struggle for delegates, costing him some supporters, gaining him others. The Reagan camp claims the maneuver was a net plus.

If nothing else, it gained the party's attention, and that was one objective of John P. Sears, the campaign manager who engineered the tradition-breaking early selection.

Now Sears is trying to force public disclosure of Ford's selection before the presidential vote, seeking to make advance-announcement a convention rule. Dean Burch, a Ford convention strategist, said he is confident the move will be defeated despite "a sort of superficial appeal" in the argument that delegates should know the whole ticket before they ballot.

Ford contends the Schweiker choice hurt Reagan, and that an advance vice presidential announcement would hurt his cause, too.

He is taking the traditional course, and following a familiar strategy, by permitting a series of names to be floated as prospects, thus offering hope to every Republican bloc.

Nominate Ford for the White House, and they may see the vice presidential blank filled by a name they like — a Southerner, a New Englander, a conservative, a liberal, a woman, a diplomat, a Midwestern governor.

Every option pleases somebody; any advance choice would offend somebody, and with a nominating majority 25 votes away, the President's forces want to do only the former.

Hence, the Reagan push for vice presidential announcement before the presidential roll call. "I think they feel that if Ford would announce somebody, certainly some other delegates wouldn't like that person," said Sen. Robert J. Dole of Kansas, who just happens to be on the Ford prospect list.

There are at least 14 others. "If all the cars should assemble at once at the White House... you'd have a traffic jam," Dole said. Press Secretary Ron Nessen had said that the potential running mates who were asked to prepare financial and health records for the White House also were asked to keep the contact confidential.

But Dole said he was told he could disclose it if asked, which is a self-fulfilling prophecy. He was, and he did, along with most of the others. It appeared the White House design was to avoid formally announcing the names, while insuring that they would soon be disclosed. A secret list wouldn't do much to please the partisans of the various prospects.

And the U.S. Embassy in London hardly would have defied White House instructions by disclosing, as it did, that Ambassador Anne Armstrong is on the Ford list.

Among the other names are: John B. Connally, who is being considered but has not publicly confirmed the contact; Sen. Howard H. Baker of Tennessee, Gov. Christopher Bond of Missouri, Sens. William Brock of Tennessee and Edward W. Brooke of Massachusetts, all of whom asked not to be considered; Sen. James Buckley of New York, who said he would prefer to stay where he is; Dole; Sen. Pete V. Domenici of New Mexico; Sen. Mark O.

Hatfield of Oregon; Sen. Charles H. Percy of Illinois; Gov. Robert D. Ray of Iowa; Secretary of Commerce Elliot Richardson; United Nations Ambassador William W. Scranton; Secretary of the Treasury William E. Simon and Sen. Lowell P. Weicker of Connecticut.

Ideologically, they span the party, from Hatfield, Percy and Weicker on the liberal wing to Simon and Buckley on the conservative side. Indeed, Buckley originally was selected to the Senate as a Conservative, not a Republican.

Geographically, there's Richardson for New England; Baker for the South, Bond, Ray and Dole for the Midwest, Domenici for the Southwest, Hatfield for the Pacific Coast.

Furthermore, Ford campaign managers said that absence from the contact list doesn't necessarily rule out other possible choices, including Reagan.

Then too, there is always the incumbent, Nelson A. Rockefeller, who withdrew long ago when it seemed Ford's problem would be to placate conservatives.

The only Republican Ford has specifically ruled out is Schweiker, "because I would not go that far to the edge of the political spectrum."

Ford said he considers himself to be in the middle of the Republican road, and wants a partner who agrees with him ideologically. Judging by the vice presidential list, Ford considers that middle road to be wide indeed.

Hospitals operate at loss

Both Highland General and McLean General Hospitals operated at a loss during July, according to the financial report presented Monday night to the hospitals' board of managers.

Highland General's 126-bed hospital showed a $1,359.60 loss which was blamed on low occupancy.

The accrual loss for the McLean facility was $6,982.60 with a cash deficit of only

$337.50. "It looks like we are running $1,400 to $1,500 per month in red (at McLean)," Fred Neslage, board chairman noted. "We were running $4,000 to $5,000 a month in the red last year."

The total loss for the first seven months at McLean was $10,182.28 with a cash deficit of $13,146.

Robert Monogue, administrator, said the occupancy at the McLean hospital is much better than projected in the 1976 budget forecast which was based on a total of 2,000 patient days for the entire year.

The McLean hospital already has recorded 1,685 days for 1976. At this same time last year, the hospital had recorded only 997 patient days and a $10,182.28 loss for 1976.

The total cash loss for the first seven months of 1975 was $60,154.36 as compared with the $13,146.44 this year.

The total number of patient days in McLean for the first seven months of 1975 was 997. The 1976 figures is the largest number on record so far with the next highest recorded in July 1973 at 1,445.

Highland General recorded 2,019 patient days in July 1976 as compared with 2,117 in July 1975.

Neslage said the hospital was able to meet all expenses without any problems referring to monies generated from patient care.

The net operating income for the first seven months after offsetting the McLean deficit was $93,124.151.

Highland's total expenses for July were $280,764.96 with income of $229,405.36. The hospital has recorded 17,280 patient days this year.

OSHA constitutionality to be tested in court

WASHINGTON (AP) — Around noon on Jan. 12, 1972, the steep walls of a seven-foot deep trench at a construction site in West Virginia gave way after being weakened by rain the night before. Laborer Fred Deal was crushed to death.

In another incident, Johnny Boseman, a temporary employee of a Georgia roofing company, fell through a three-foot-square hole in an unfinished warehouse roof at 9 a.m. on June 6, 1972, and was killed.

Lawsuits arising from the deaths of these two workmen have brought before the Supreme Court a test of the power of federal agencies to fine employers without a jury trial.

At issue is the constitutionality of the Occupational Safety and Health Act. More than $20 million in penalties for unsafe working conditions have been levied since that law was passed in 1971.

Some businessmen opposed to OSHA say the implications of the cases could be more far-reaching than that because that law has been suggested as a model for other regulatory agencies.

The cases will be heard in the Supreme Court term beginning Oct. 4.

A conference on federal administrative law recommended in 1972 that federal agencies streamline their enforcement powers by more use of civil fines as an alternative to such steps as license revocation.

The attack on OSHA is based on the Seventh Amendment to the Constitution which guarantees trial by jury in "suits at common law."

The appeals courts in the third and fifth circuits held against the employers of Boseman and Deal, ruling that the penalties are part of an administrative scheme designed to insure compliance with safety regulations, not "suits at common law."

The appeals courts cited a 1937 Supreme Court decision upholding the power of the National Labor Relations Board to enforce back-pay awards. In that decision, Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes said jury trials were not required in such proceedings because those proceedings were "unknown to the common law."

In the cases now before the court, the two employers, backed by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, argue that the OSHA fines are not at all like an award of back pay to an employee but are "simply civil penalties" payable to the government. They maintain that the proceedings to enforce them are, in effect, lawsuits and that the firms should have the right to demand a trial by jury.

They also argue that the issues in the cases are the kind of issues juries traditionally decide.

Bentsen breakfast Thursday

A steak and eggs breakfast honoring Texas Democratic Senator Lloyd Bentsen is scheduled at 7 a.m. Thursday at the Coronado Inn.

The breakfast is free and the public is invited.

Rex McAnelly, Gray County Democratic chairman, said the cattle market is so "bad that beef is cheaper than pork."

Other members of the host committee include Billy B. Davis, head of the local steering committee of the McClellan Creek Watershed project, and Mike Dunigan, Gray County coordinator for the Bentsen campaign.

The senator will be officially welcomed by the Pampa Chamber of Commerce Top O Texans.

McAnelly said supporters here would like to extend appreciation for the work the Senator did in obtaining passage of the McClellan Creek Watershed project.

Pampa is the Senator's first stop on a two-day tour through the Texas Panhandle. He will leave here for a 9:15 a.m. coffee in Perryton.

Mondale to continue attacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Walter F. Mondale says he will continue to discuss and criticize President Ford's pardon of former President Richard M. Nixon, but that he will not make it a central issue in his vice presidential campaign.

"I don't plan to make that the only theme or the dominant theme, but the issue of equal justice is an important issue facing the country," he said in an interview Tuesday.

In his acceptance speech at the Democratic National Convention last month Mondale criticized Ford's decision to pardon Nixon for any crimes Nixon may have committed while he was president.

Jimmy Carter, who picked Mondale to join him on the Democratic ticket, has said he does not intend to make the pardon an issue during the campaign, but he has also said he would not ask Mondale to refrain from bringing it up.

"There is a difference of emphasis," said Mondale in comparing his position with Carter's.

Mondale said that during the campaign he will concentrate on the "traditional Democratic constituencies," but that he will also focus on business groups, a less traditional source of support for the Democratic party.

He refused to promise that he would campaign in every state, although he said, "I think we can get into all of them."

He also said that during the campaign he will draw on his work as a member of the Senate intelligence committee and as former chairman of an international economics subcommittee to speak on foreign policy and arms limitation, areas where Carter has had little experience.

In the nearly four weeks since he was nominated, Mondale has refrained from campaigning, spending his time instead in meetings with Carter to plan campaign strategy and to discuss foreign policy, defense, national security and economic issues.

Bloody truck found

LAWTON, Okla. (AP) — Authorities searched today for the driver of a blood-stained beer delivery truck found abandoned in a wooded rural area northeast of here Tuesday.

The Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation was conducting tests with the blood samples found on the driver's seat and on the roadway outside the door of the vehicle.

The driver, Raymond C. Haney, 21, of Rush Springs, was believed to be carrying about $1,000 in cash, police said.

The delivery truck was reported missing late Monday, police said. It was last seen about 5:30 p.m. Monday before it was parked along the roadway about half an hour later, a witness told police.

Haney's friends and relatives were being questioned by police. Authorities said the truck driver's car remained in the company parking lot.

Ford holding delegates

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — In politics great decisions can turn on labels. Like, who could possibly vote against something called the "Justice Resolution." Hardly anybody. President Ford's convention strategists hope.

And it has worked before. Back in 1952 when ex-General Eisenhower was trying to grab the GOP nomination away from old-line party leader Robert Taft he came up with the "Fair Play Rule."

Now the shoe is on the other foot and the established party leader has a label he hopes will stop the challenger. Ford's tacticians are arguing that "it's simply justice" to have delegates stand by their commitments.

Reagan's chances for nomination rely heavily on hopes of winning over delegates bound to Ford. If they don't switch immediately, it is hoped that they will at least sit out a ballot or two until their commitments have expired.

Beaten man 'our mistake' in Dallas jail

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas probation officer said it was "our mistake" when they jailed a man who authorities said was beaten and stabbed to death two hours after he was placed in the Dallas County jail.

Courthouse records show that Kenneth N. Coppinger, 20, was arrested on a warrant issued July 27, charging violation of probation on a statutory rape conviction.

Coppinger drew five years' probation Feb. 2 after pleading guilty to having had relations with a consenting underage girl.

In a document filed July 27 in criminal district court, Vernon charged that Coppinger violated a term of his probation requiring that he break no laws or risk losing probation.

Vernon's document said Coppinger was driving while intoxicated July 23, but court-house records reflect no DWI charge against a 20-year-old Coppinger.

Warren man made statement

Judith Auwen, director of public relations for Highland General Hospital, contacted The News Tuesday afternoon and said that one comment attributed to Dr. Joe R. Donaldson in The News article about Monday night's hospital board meeting should have been attributed to B.W. Warren.

Warren, a maintenance man at the hospital, said at one point in the meeting, "If anyone knows what we need here, I do." The News regrets the error.

Robert Monogue, hospital administrator, stated, "All I can say is that I feel that I serve here at the pleasure of the board and I recognize no authority of the Commissioners Court of Gray County, Texas, to request my resignation or any action from this board."

The News quoted the administrator as saying, "All I can say is that I feel that I serve here at the pleasure of the board and I recognize no authority of the Commissioners Court."

In omitting the final portion of Monogue's statement, ... of Gray County, Texas, to request my resignation or any action from this board, there was no intention to change any meaning of the comment, nor does The News believe the meaning was affected.

Many direct quotes in many news stories represent only a portion of complete statements since space requirements do not allow for printing the entire transcript of lengthy meetings.

Crews cleanup Belle's wake

By The Associated Press
From the New Jersey beaches to the green hills of Vermont, the cleanup in the wake of Hurricane Belle continued today.

The storm had been a full-scale hurricane when it hit the south shore of Long Island with 90-mile-per-winds. Small boats were smashed, cellars were flooded and power to thousands of customers was knocked out by falling trees and branches.

The Long Island Lighting Co. reported that 166,000 customers were still without power today and said it might be 48 hours before full service was restored.

The first death directly attributed to Belle occurred on Long Island when Karen Mayer, 19, was killed by a falling tree. Police in Vermont later reported that Barbara Chamberlain, 32, and her 7-year-old son Russell were drowned when the footbridge they were crossing near their home in Huntington was swept away.

Six other people were killed in traffic accidents on rain-slicked roads during Belle's three-day march along the Atlantic coast from her Florida spawning ground.

Until Belle hit Long Island, however, the center of the hurricane had remained far enough off shore to prevent serious damage.

Survivors include the widower, Minard, a son, Jimmie Lee, of Oklahoma City; three brothers, Eric R. Murray of Duncan, Okla., Minard E.

Carter promises clean government

ATLANTA (AP) — Jimmy Carter today promised the nation's lawyers "a new broom to sweep the ouse of government clean" and said if he is elected president he will never turn his back on misdeeds by officials.

The Democratic presidential nominee also proposed placing members of Congress under the same public financing law which is paying for his own presidential campaign.

Carter told the annual convention of the American Bar Association that lawyers should join with him in restoring fairness and justice to the American system of law.

During this post-Watergate era, our nation has been struggling with the question of how to establish and maintain standards of morality and justice," Carter said. "So far, we have failed."

He called for removing the U.S. Attorney General as far from politics as is humanly possible. The attorney general should be given "the same independence and authority and confidence" as was given the Watergate special prosecutor during the last weeks of the investigation that resulted in the resignation of President Richard M. Nixon.

Washington and do everything possible to sweep the house of government clean."

Carter called for a complete revelation by all major government officials of all business and financial involvements which might constitute a possible conflict of interest.

He said the so-called "sweetheart arrangement" between regulatory agencies and the industries they regulate should be ended.

Carter opened his speech by saying that he does not think that the honor code which governs the conduct of cadets at the nation's military academies is too strict.

He said federal spending aimed at deterring crime over the past eight years has been "grossly misdirected," and complained that only 6 per cent of the total $4.4 billion appropriated by Congress for the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration was allocated to aid state and local courts.

As he has in the past, the former Georgia governor called for a so-called "sunshine law" to open up the processes of the federal government and called for more thorough disclosure and control over the activities of lobbyists.

Kelley facing questions

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley is facing some questions about his efforts to discover and punish bureau officials who he says deceived him about FBI burglaries.

Kelley, who plans to enter a hospital Monday for surgery for a painful back ailment, was to hold a news conference today.

Kelley has been hospitalized twice this summer for treatment of his back problem, and has decided with the advice of his doctors that he must undergo the operation, an FBI spokesman said Tuesday.

The surgery is expected to keep Kelley off the job for two weeks or more. He will enter a hospital in Kansas City for the surgery.

The news conference today is Kelley's first in Washington in more than a year and he was preparing for questions dealing with a broad range of FBI wrongdoing.

The Justice Department is deeply involved in two major investigations of FBI misconduct. One involves burglaries conducted by FBI agents against political activists during the past five years.

That case is expected to go to a federal grand jury in New York later this month and could produce criminal charges that FBI agents or officials violated the civil rights of Americans.

The other investigation involves alleged financial improprieties in the bureau's purchasing operations and in the management of insurance and recreation funds. The evidence already has forced Kelley to fire the FBI's second-ranking official, Nicholas P. Callahan.

In a television interview Sunday, Kelley said bureau officials deceived him about the extent of the burglaries.

More than a year ago, Kelley said no burglaries were carried out against domestic targets

Mortars hit Rhodesian town

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Black Rhodesian guerrillas in Mozambique or Mozambican troops supporting them hit the east Rhodesian town of Umtali with about 30 mortar shells early today, damaging a number of houses, police said.

A police spokesman said nobody was hurt in the hour-long barrage. It appeared to be in retaliation for the Rhodesian army's attack last Sunday on a guerrilla base camp just inside Mozambique. The Rhodesian government claimed its raiders killed more than 300 guerrillas, some 30 Mozambican soldiers and about 10 civilians who were supporting the terrorists.

That attack was a reprisal for a mortar barrage on Saturday that killed four white soldiers at a frontier camp about 20 miles south of Umtali. A fifth white soldier was killed in a hunt for the attackers.

Umtali is Rhodesia's third largest city, with a population of 55,000. It is about a mile from the border and 130 miles southeast of Salisbury.

Trial over...or is it?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The William and Emily Harris trial has ended in a storm of confusion and accusations with the legal aftermaths likely to reopen the long proceedings.

Superior Court Judge Mark Brandler denied three mistrial motions during two unusual post-verdict hearings Tuesday and let stand the Harrises' conviction on kidnapping and robbery charges. The hearings had been called to investigate charges that the verdict was tainted by bias against the Harrises.

Chief defense attorney Leonard Weinglass, stunned by contradictions revealed in the post-verdict hearings, said of the trial's bizarre twists: "I don't think they're over."

There was no comment from the government of Mozambique.

The communicate said the raid was in response to an "unprovoked aggression across our border" and was "in accordance with the accepted international practice of hot pursuit."

It was the third raid into Mozambique since February acknowledged by Rhodesia. Mozambique claims there have been more.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army apparently was giving favored treatment to a company that was awarded an $11 million contract for mobile radios, a House report says.

The House Government Operations Committee, in a report released today, said the Army called for four different bids on the field radio units before finally awarding the contract to E-Systems, Inc., of Dallas, Texas.

The report said E-Systems had the low bid of $2.9 million on the fourth bid and was given the contract to build 5,464 radio sets at a cost of $528 per set.

After the contract was awarded, the report said, the Army modified it to permit E-Systems to supply another 10,039 radio units — with prices boosted to as much as $34.46 per set — making the contract worth $11 million.

Advice

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 21-year-old male who needs your help with an embarrassing problem. It's my behind. It is enormous! I'm 5 foot 8 and weigh 180.

I work out three times a week at a health club and am in pretty good shape except for the abovementioned. I've tried every conceivable exercise and diet I've come across, but I can't seem to lose any of the flab back there.

It's just plain fat, Abby, and no amount of exercise can firm it up.

Someone told me that it can be removed by surgery. Is that so? I don't care if the operation is painful and leaves a scar. Anything would be better than hauling around this outsized caboose all my life. I'm not exaggerating; I look practically deformed. It's so bad I hate to go to the beach. If this kind of operation can be done, who would do it?

A YARD OF LARD

DEAR YARD: A plastic surgeon. (But try to find one who doesn't mind getting a little behind in his business.)

DEAR ABBY: I live in an apartment building. Directly above me lives a woman and her 11-year-old son. He takes piano lessons and hates to practice, so her idea of the ideal punishment is to make him practice "extra time."

Lately he has been punished a lot, but I am being punished more. I have been hearing "The Blue Danube Waltz" in my sleep!

The mother is a music lover, and she's decided that her son is going to learn to love music if it kills him.

Please print this. I know my neighbor reads your column, because every time you knock smokers she cuts out the article and sticks it in my mailbox. (I smoke.) Thanks a million.

HIGHLAND PARK HEADACHE

DEAR HEADACHE: If your neighbor wants her son to hate music, she's going about it in exactly the right way. Now, stick this in HER mailbox, and lotsa luck!

DEAR ABBY: Sunday evening at 8:45, my wife and I received a phone call from a couple who have been very dear friends of ours for many years. They asked us to please come right over for dinner because at the last minute, the couple whom they had invited couldn't make it.

Our friends live about an hour's drive from us. We weren't dressed and were all set for a quiet evening at home. Also, we needed a babysitter and had made no plans for one.

My wife thought there was nothing wrong with their invitation, but I was amazed at their chutzpah.

Please understand that we have been their dinner guests many times, and I wasn't put out because we hadn't been invited initially. But to be called so late because, as they put it, "we have all this delicious food, which you would just love," was not a good enough reason for us to rush over there. We thanked them and declined.

ENCINO

DEAR ENCINO: The same way you did.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB—Please print this letter. By doing so you might actually save some lives.

First, I've got to express the following thought which many people feel the same about. It is so disgusting how many old people are smoking! Even on the street! That is ugly and bad enough but they — male and female — not only harm themselves but they aggravate non-smokers and also cause trouble in many cases, as my aunt did.

She is past 60 and nearly caused a tragedy. She smokes like a dragon. She also has so many wrinkles, coughs all the time and has a gravel voice. Ugh! She fell asleep with a cigarette in her hand while visiting us. My husband, our children and I were watching TV downstairs. She was watching her favorite program upstairs.

Suddenly we heard a piercing scream. We rushed upstairs and she was pouring a glass of water on the beautiful new (never slept in yet) expensive bed to try to put out the small but spreading flame on the bedspread. We called the fire department because we couldn't control it. We got auntie out and were so glad she was not burned at all.

She never apologized nor offered to pay for that damage. I hated to do it but I finally told her she would never be welcome again unless she stopped smoking. We never heard from her again.

A friend of ours had a real tragedy caused by a careless smoker. Five people burned to death. A house was completely destroyed. From a health and cosmetic view, why can't "smoking idiots" realize the hazards of smoking? Women especially look hard, ugly, cheap and smelly. They look like haggard old witches. The halitosis is nauseating. Smoking is also very expensive. Please, some strong words from you.

DEAR READER—A family has the right to set the standards for their own home.

Not everyone who smokes is as bad off as you describe your aunt but it is frequently a rather antisocial habit. It does increase the wrinkling of the skin and it does cause most smokers to have foul smelling breath. Apparently most smokers are unaware of their bad breath.

Many smokers just don't realize the effect of their habit on other people. They are immune to the smell and don't notice. I am constantly impressed by the number of people who have quit smoking and then realize that it is an unpleasant habit. For the first time they smell the bad breath and the smelly clothes. They also realize how much improved their sense of taste is. Food never tasted so good.

I have given you a chance to express your opinion in my column and your basic message about the safety hazard of smoking is well taken. In addition to its damaging effects on health, smoking is a fire hazard. I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-6. Tobacco: Cigarettes, Cigars, Pipes, for a resume of the effects of tobacco on health. Others who want this information for themselves or for someone who smokes and shouldn't, can send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with 50 cents for it. Just send your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York NY 10019.

Polly's pointers

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY—My biggest Pet Peeve is having to explain to people why I do not have an outside job. I have worked off and on during my life but now I prefer remaining at home and letting my husband support me. I am thankful he can afford to do so and I very much resent those "liberated women" who constantly ask me and him "Well, what do you DO all day?" as if it were any of their business in the first place. — MRS. A.L.

DEAR READERS—Glenn wrote to say he thought Louise's Pointer concerning putting a paper listing the quantity of paint or paper required to do the room on the back of the switch plate while redecorating was a fire hazard. To be perfectly safe, write this information on the edge of the wallpaper that extends under the plate or on the painted surface. It could even be written on the back of the switch plate itself. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY—When sewing on silk material and the sewing machine just will not pick up stitches because of the thinness of the material, try cutting strips of paper towels. Then put these strips between the seams. This makes the material thick enough so the stitches catch. The paper towels become perforated from the stitching, so removing them from the attached seams is a breeze. — JOYCE.

The body will react to the mind

Biofeedback eases tensions

By ROB WOOD

Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — She was a housewife and considered herself "cool," except twice a month when it was time to pay the bills.

Under a controlled biofeedback experiment, her stress and tension were dangerously high, indicating that one day these common problems, generally associated with the American businessman or professional, could bring hypertension, heart trouble, or one of the other of the nation's killer diseases.

Arthur Peiffer, director of clinical services at Houston International Hospital, said with a biofeedback program many individuals may learn to take the few minutes necessary to relax and add years to their lives and unexpected productivity to their jobs.

Peiffer and his staff are convinced biofeedback is the answer to many of the nation's illnesses, and the body will react to the mind. Extensive studies on biofeedback are under way in several Texas universities, including East Texas State and Texas A&M.

A group of professors at A&M is looking into the new medical field. The researchers include Dr. Leslie Bagnall of mechanical engineering, Dr. A.E. Bourgeois of psychology and R. Jones of computing science.

Bagnall said recently, "Biofeedback has applications in both medicine and psychology. Research is being done in such diverse areas as control of heart rate and blood pressure, migraine and tension headaches, physical rehabilitation, epilepsy and depression.

"Biofeedback is a tool, an adjunct to other forms of medical and psychological treatments. It is an electronic mirror, and like a mirror it is passive, but aids the individual help himself," he said.

At East Texas State, Dr. William Troth, associate professor of student personnel and guidance, and Dr. Robert Gold, assistant professor of student personnel, are deep in biofeedback research.

The two professors said the consequences of stress is the single most critical and painful physiological activity persons experience.

"Before this century," they said, "people mostly died from communicable diseases. Now, in this country, the majority of people suffer and die from stress-related illnesses such as heart conditions, other cardiovascular illnesses, ulcers, and such."

Gold and Troth said biofeedback is not the total answer to particular illness, but can identify elements of an illness and once that is done the problem can be attacked.

Peiffer agreed it was not the total answer, but said biofeedback could be a great assistance in health care when used with other medical procedures.

Peiffer said a faster-paced lifestyle often demands more from a person's central nervous system than it can handle effectively.

"The problem is that the human body still thinks it's in prehistoric times and our central nervous system still reacts as if saber-toothed tigers were the menace, instead of the more subtle pressures of modern life," Peiffer said.

"Our responses to stress, tension and anxiety are grossly out of date. Our environment has changed, but we haven't kept step," he said.

Researchers in biofeedback warn of the dangers of trying to use the biofeedback system without proper training, and are critical of advertisements that promise to eliminate stress and tension through various programs.

Peiffer said, "Make sure you take biofeedback training only at an accredited hospital or clinic. Don't get taken and make sure you check out any source offering the training."

Food costs down but just a little

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of food prepared at home went down a little between mid-summer 1975 and this June in the government's model grocery-buying plans.

The decline isn't much, less than a dollar a week, generally. But officials of the Agricultural Research Service in the Agriculture Department say it is a small, if temporary, sign of larger supplies of food coming off the farms.

The low-cost plan for a four-person family in June was priced .50 cents lower than 11 months before. The moderate-cost plan was down 80 cents.

Officials point out that the weekly grocery bill under the model plans has risen over the longer period of March 1975 to June 1976 by 3.76 per cent under the low-cost plan, 4 per cent under the moderate-cost plan and 4.7 per cent under the liberal plan.

The government has projected an over-all increase of up to 5 per cent this year in retail food prices after a year-to-year jump of 8.5 per cent from 1974 to 1975 and two years of 14.5 per cent increases immediately before.

Meanwhile, the Agriculture Department reported Monday that total production of 14 popular fresh-market vegetables was 6 per cent greater this spring in the major producing states than in the spring of 1975.

Ford anniversary quiet

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford let his second anniversary in office pass quietly.

There was no special ceremony in the White House on Monday to mark the occasion, spokesman Ron Nessen said.

Ford became the nation's chief executive on August 9, 1974, after President Richard M. Nixon resigned.

Ford worked on the acceptance speech he hopes to deliver at the Republican National Convention in Kansas City on Aug. 19. He also met with staff members to plot strategy for next week's showdown with Ronald Reagan for the GOP presidential nomination, Nessen said.

The only other event on Ford's agenda Monday was a National Security Council meeting.

Woman studies to be riverboat steersman

HELENA, Ark. (AP) — The romance of the Mississippi River and its chocolate-colored waters caused Lexie Palmore to put down her brushes and easel and enter the Mark Twain world of the sternwheeler Delta Queen.

Miss Palmore will be one of the vessel's qualified steersmen in another year, after a 22-month course at the National River Academy, where she is the only woman student.

A former commercial artist in Dallas, she says some males seem to resent her climb to the top. Until the establishment of the academy, rivermen advanced to the pilot house after seasoning as a deckhand or tankerman. It usually took five years or more.

"They feel I haven't worked my way up properly because I haven't mopped the deck or hauled any lines on board," said the Miss Palmore. "But they haven't made any beds or cleaned any toilets. These guys that are bellyaching are going to have to start working their brains if they're going to get ahead."

The 6-foot-2 Miss Palmore, 29, is a native of Tyler, Tex. She holds a master's degree in art. She was sent to the academy, which has existed since 1970, by the Delta Queen Steamboat Co. of Cincinnati, operator of the 50-year-old Delta Queen and the new Mississippi Queen.

At the academy, funded by the towboat industry, Miss Palmore is learning to read the warning lights, the river's currents, bends and inlets, the bridges and pipeline crossings and the towns that dot the thousands of miles of shoreline. She is also learning navigation techniques.

"It took me a long time to decide to do it because I didn't want to completely give up my art," said Miss Palmore. "But I'm young and single and it was something I wanted to do — to get out and see the world. The Delta Queen is not like anything else on the river."

Miss Palmore took a couple of vacation cruises on the riverboat and liked it so well she wanted to stay on permanently. She signed on as a maid and, on occasional trips to the wheelhouse, was allowed to steer just for fun.

"Lexie was working on the boat as a maid," said John Dreyer, press officer for the Delta Queen Steamboat Co. "She showed a great interest in piloting and a great love of the river and indicated she wanted to make a career of it."

With the help of the Delta Queen's skipper, Capt. Ernest Wagner, Miss Palmore enrolled at the academy in October 1975 and will graduate next August if she passes the Coast Guard requirements for a second-class pilot's license.

After that, she will be able to return to the Delta Queen as a steersman. A year after that, she will be able to qualify for a first-class license and the job of full-fledged river pilot.

There are other women with marine jobs, but the majority are on ferry boats and harbor tugs, she said.

Center nears goal

The Amarillo Speech and Hearing Center building campaign now has $400,000 or one-third of its $1.2 million goal, according to Mrs. George Cree Jr. of Pampa.

She is chairman of the fund raising project for the center. Mrs. Cree and her co-chairman Malcolm Douglas, are responsible for raising $17,000 to date.

Pampa has been assigned a goal of $50,000.

Over 1,600 adults and children have been served by the Amarillo Speech and Hearing Center since 1959.

Mrs. Cree said, "Thanks to the efforts of the Junior Service League of Pampa, thousands of pre-school children have been screened for hearing loss and language disorders over the past several years by the Speech and Hearing Center."

Wales Madden Jr. of Amarillo is general chairman of the fund-raising campaign. Others in Pampa who are working in the drive include Warren Fatheree, Mrs. Ben Fallon, Gene Green and Mrs. Hugh Burdett.

Anyone who wishes to make a contribution may call Mrs. Cree or Douglas in Pampa or the Amarillo campaign office.

'Drillers will continue to meet demands'

The search for oil and natural gas will become increasingly difficult, but a drilling expert at Texas Tech University believes drillers will continue to meet demands.

J.T. Rollins, petroleum engineering lecturer, said prices and environmental regulations have caused some present-day uncertainty in the petroleum industry. But he predicted oil and natural gas always will be in demand as fuels.

Rollins said fuel reserves are controlled almost exclusively by price. He maintains that as long as government regulations keep prices fixed, petroleum exploration will be discouraged.

"High prices encourage greater exploration resulting in more reserves," said Rollins. "At the old price of $2.75 a barrel, which is what the price of a barrel of oil was 10 years ago, we would have practically no reserves."

"As long as the price of oil and natural gas is controlled at a certain figure, we will have a certain level of drilling. As the price increases, drilling increases."

Rollins said a factor many persons do not understand is the cost of drilling. Investments are high and inflation has raised them even higher.

"Anything you do in this business requires high expenditures and high risk. It's not like gambling because you think you have a fair insight. But you really don't know if you'll find anything until you get there."

Rollins said oil prices were low until the Oil Producing and Exporting Countries (OPEC) raised them. He stated that the price of oil and natural gas would remain relatively low even if petroleum product prices were deregulated because competition between rival companies would stabilize them.

In addition, Rollins believes the price of decontrolled natural gas would be less costly than alternatives. He based his remarks on information provided by the Federal Power Commission (FPC).

According to an FPC cost comparison sheet, decontrolled natural gas would cost approximately $2.97 per 1,000 cubic feet for customers in New York City. The current cost is $2.73. The $2.97 figure would be lower than 1,000 cubic feet of Algerian liquefied natural gas ($3.84), Alaska gas ($4.27), synthetic natural gas from coal ($5.30) and synthetic natural gas from liquids ($5.46).

The engineering lecturer said a key to conserving energy sources is more efficient use. As examples, Rollins pointed out that gasoline is more suitable for automobiles than other energy sources and coal-burning boilers would be less expensive to operate than fuel oil boilers. Rollins favors development of all sources of energy, including petroleum, coal, solar and nuclear.

After 30 years in the drilling and exploration business, Rollins joined the petroleum engineering faculty in January.

He was partner and owner of H & B Oilwell Cementing Co. in Monahan from 1959-69. During those years, Rollins became one of the world's leaders in deep-well completion.

The Texas Tech petroleum engineer researched oilwell cementing procedures while working for Dowell, a subsidiary of Dow Chemical.

Rollins is a 1946 graduate of Texas A&M. He was graduated with a double degree in mechanical and management engineering. He received a master's degree in education in 1947 from North Texas State and is working toward a Ph.D. in education at Texas Tech.

FEA's life in danger

By GEOFFREY O'GARA
Pampa's Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — The Federal Energy Administration (FEA) is in danger. A movement to abolish the agency, which was born during the oil embargo to regulate energy usage, is picking up support in Congress.

The FEA recently survived a vote which would have abolished it on the spot. The agency would have expired June 30, but instead was granted a month-long extension, to await a House-Senate conference on another bill which would extend the FEA for 18 months.

Rep. Robert Krueger, D-Tex., actually speaking for a continuation of the FEA when he admitted, "To defend the FEA is rather to be in the position of defending an illegitimate child that nobody loves and everybody wants to get rid of."

Opponents claim the FEA has been ineffectual running a public relations office and doing little to stem the increasing reliance on foreign energy sources. They claim regulatory responsibilities could be handled in other government departments.

"The FEA, in its limitless wisdom," said Rep. William Ketchum, R-Calif., to the House, "has not produced one single additional barrel of oil for this country, not one mega watt of electricity, not one cubic foot of gas."

In response, defenders damn the FEA with faint praise. "Eliminating the FEA would," said Rep. Harley Stagger, D-W.Va., "result in great cost of money, disrupt regulatory programs, and cause administrative difficulties of serious dimension."

Despite a request from the Ford administration for a 39-month extension, Congress chose to continue the FEA only 8 months, and the battle to discontinue will take place then.

To control or decontrol, that is the question. Proposing to free the price of home heating oil and diesel fuel, Federal Energy Administration (FEA) Kingpin Frank Zarb says the move will increase competition and possibly lower prices. Opponents say the move will mean price increases next winter. Congress gave Zarb his way recently in a close 206-194 vote, allowing an FEA decontrol order to go into effect. Congressmen expressed particular concern about price rises in the northeast.

Zarb allayed those fears by promising to act to bring down heating oil prices if they rise more than two cents a gallon above the controlled rate. Heating oil and kerosene are essential to a warm winter in New England.

Alternative energy sources — all of them — are still many years and many dollars away from becoming practical solutions to the energy shortage, at least according to a study by Inform, a non-profit research group.

A survey by Inform of 142 corporations involved in the energy field revealed that most alternative-energy systems are unprofitable to the companies, and as a result the federal government bears the brunt of most research and development costs.

"These systems are alternative and not commercial largely because corporations cannot make a profit by selling them," says the study, and it estimates the 17 alternate energy systems studied — including solar, nuclear and synthetic fuel — to be at least five years away from making even a negligible contribution to the nation's energy supply.

House acts on fuels

Fearful of future gas shortages, the House has started to take action on a federal program that would help finance the development of new synthetic fuels to supplement the declining stock of natural gas.

Although many legislators, as well as the Energy Research and Development Administration, back the concept of developing new technologies, including the gasification of coal, a bill that would help private industries enter the field has gotten bogged down on its way to the House floor.

The major debate centers on whether it is the federal government's responsibility to direct finance private industry's exploration of new coal gasification technologies. Many Congressmen fear the assistance will subsidize big business and promote a technology that could soon be outdated by new research.

Four House Committees have studied the bill and come up with four different versions. Their recommendations range from generous provisions for loan guarantees for new synthetic fuels producers to more cautious promises of price guarantees to producers who have successfully financed their own way.

Lehman gets Phillips award

A.L. Lehman of Phillips Petroleum Company's Natural Resources Group, Pampa Area, has been awarded $1,545 through the Company's suggestion plan.

He had two suggestions. One concerned a piping change which resulted in warming the gas stream to prevent freezing of the controls. The other suggestion concerned the installation of an automatic intermitter to operate an oil well resulting in increased production.

Lehman, a field operator, has been an employee of Phillips Petroleum Company for eight years. His wife's name is Casandra Sue and they have three children. They live at Box 504 RR, Briscoe, Texas.

Long-range energy plan called blueprint for disaster

By ANN GHERLEIN
Pampa's Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — Testifying before a recent Senate subcommittee, Dr. Barry Commoner, director of the Center for the Biology of Natural Systems at Washington University and a leading energy authority called the long-range energy plan of the Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA) a "blueprint for economic disaster."

The testimony was delivered to the Energy Research and Water Resources subcommittee at one of a series of oversight hearings on ERDA's 1975 Energy Research Development and Demonstration plan, which was updated this April.

According to Commoner, "For the first time in the history of modern agricultural and industrial development we are in the midst of a rapid and continuing increase in the price of energy — a phenomenon which will have catastrophic economic effects if it is allowed to continue." He said that ERDA, in failing to assess the long-range economic impact of its plans, has developed an energy program which will cause the price of energy to continue rising for at least the next 75 years. In order for the price of energy to stabilize, he said, the energy source must be inexhaustible and the technology must be proven to the extent that its cost has become relatively stable.

ERDA's long-range program said Commoner, is based on three "inexhaustible" technologies — fusion (the source for which is water), the breeder reactor (so-called because of its ability to produce new nuclear fuel as it generates power), and solar energy.

But, according to Commoner, neither fusion technology nor the breeder reactor could be economical before 2040 or 2050. He says the fusion process is not yet known to work at all, and so "one can reasonably conclude that this technology will reach maturity well after that date — if ever."

He said the breeder reactor could not possibly operate economically until 2040 because of the cost of uranium. Until then, he said, the breeder will not have produced enough artificial fuel to run itself, and will have to rely on natural uranium. Since uranium is exhaustible, the currently rising costs can only be expected to rise further. He also cites breeders in England and France, which, although operating, are not "breeding."

ERDA estimates that both the breeder reactor and fusion technology will be operating economically by the 1990s.

The only source of energy, said Commoner, which is inexhaustible and for which a mature technology already has been developed, is the sun. Already, he said, mixing solar and conventional systems for space heat and hot water can be more economical in some parts of the country than a conventional system. And since this technology is proven, he said, the costs can only go down.

While Commoner said there are still uncertainties in solar electric technology, it should become cost-efficient by the 1990s, and ERDA agrees. But Commoner said the relatively small amount of funds allocated for solar energy for Fiscal Year 1977 — about $304 million for fusion research, $620 million for the breeder reactor, and $116 million for solar energy — makes it impossible to give solar technology, which Commoner feels would become economically feasible far sooner than nuclear technologies, high priority attention.

Shooting opens 'equal justice' sore

By RICK SCOTT
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Ricardo Morales, a 27-year-old Castroville construction worker, is dead.

But the punishment doled-out to his killer has opened an isolated rural road last September while in the custody of then-Castroville Police Chief Frank Hayes.

Hayes, 54, was charged with murder, but a San Angelo jury convicted him earlier this summer of the reduced charge of aggravated assault.

Hayes is serving a two to 10-year prison sentence.

Mexican-American leaders were dismayed at what they considered a light punishment. What if Morales had killed the police chief?, they ask. Would Morales have gotten such a sentence?

In addition to Mexican-American groups, Gov. Dolph Briscoe, U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and U.S. Rep. Henry B.

Gonzalez called for federal intervention in the case.

The U.S. Justice Department recently announced it would consider the matter.

Critics of the Hayes verdict and sentencing contend that the Justice Department should begin a probe into possible violation of Morales' civil rights.

Since Morales was in custody Hayes at the time of the killing critics believe there may be a federal civil rights case against Hayes and that it should be pursued.

But Hayes' lawyer, Marvin

Miller, says those who protest the Hayes punishment are attempting to "build enough hate to disrupt our government and disrupt our judicial process."

Miller said those who now call for a federal investigation of Hayes' actions "are attempting to disrupt and destroy our basic rights to a trial by jury which is available to every man, woman and child in the country."

The politicians who have carried out this attack on the judicial system are members of the executive branch of state government, not judicial," said Miller.

The trial of Hayes was moved from Castroville to San Angelo on a change of venue. A 10-woman, two-man jury heard the case before state District Court Judge Earl W. Smith. One juror was black; the rest were anglos.

The state's main witness was Donald McCall, a Hayes Deputy.

McCall said he arrested Morales at his home on some five-week-old theft warrants. While he was at the Morales home, Hayes drove up in his personal car, he said.

McCall said Hayes told him to get Morales and follow him. Hayes then led McCall and Morales to a deserted road northwest of Castroville.

McCall said Hayes threatened Morales and at one point, said "I've already killed one Mexican and I'm going to kill me another."

McCall said Hayes took Morales from McCall's car and told McCall and a companion to "get out of here." Hayes had a 12-gauge shotgun, McCall drove off.

About 100 yards away, McCall said he stopped. He then heard what he thought was a single shot.

McCall said he returned a few minutes later to the spot where he had last seen Morales alive, but found no body.

Morales' body was found several days later more than 400 miles away in a shallow grave near the Texas-Louisiana border. Hayes' wife led officers to the body.

Mrs. Hayes pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of tampering with evidence. She was accused of transporting Morales' body in the trunk of her car. She was given a one-year probation jail sentence.

Hayes, who was the only eye-witness to the shooting, testified at the trial that he never intended to kill Morales.

"I never in my life intended to kill Richard Morales," he said.

Asked if he intentionally pulled the shotgun trigger to shoot Morales, Hayes said, "As God is my witness, I did not."

"I had fear for my life because I remembered being shot before and I didn't want Morales to get that gun," he testified. He said he and Morales struggled for the shotgun and it went off accidentally.

The case outraged many Mexican-Americans.

Morales' wife, Maria, cried when she heard the verdict against Hayes. She had hoped for a murder conviction, she said.

"I just wanted to see justice done. I don't think he got what he deserved," she said. "He still should have gotten life (in prison). He ought to serve life because he's not going to bring my husband back in 10 years."

Tony Cruz, a leader of a Mexican-American group in San Antonio, wrote to Gov. Briscoe that the verdict was "a shameful and black day for Texas."

Cruz said the trial "has once again shown that justice in the State of Texas, is not blind, but prejudiced."

Meanwhile, Briscoe asked U.S. Atty. Gen. Edward Levi to initiate a federal grand jury to probe whether Hayes had violated the civil rights of Morales.

Rep. Gonzalez has asked the legislature to consider requiring all police officers in the state to meet minimum training standards.

An inlay is a kind of decoration usually made by cutting a design out of the surface of one material and putting other materials into the hollows.

Shrimp industry hurt

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — The Texas shrimp industry will be hurt, but will be able to survive the eventual phasing out of fishing in Mexican waters, an industry spokesman said Tuesday.

Robert G. Mauermann, president of the Texas Shrimp Association, said that only 318 U.S. fishing boats will be able to fish in Mexican waters until 1980 when the area will be closed to all foreign fishing.

"It's going to work a hardship on some of our people, but the shrimp industry is a strong and vital industry," Mauermann said.

"It's going to hurt, but it's not going to bankrupt us," he continued.

"We do have access for a three-and-a-half year phase-out program and we might be able to get a better treaty somewhere down the road," he said.

Mauermann said he does not believe shrimpers and fishing interests will move out of Texas. "There's always the possibility that other fishing areas will be found outside of Mexican water," he said.

Consumers in the United States will not notice any change in either the availability of shrimp or the price of the seafood delicacy, Mauermann predicted. "The same amount of shrimp will still be on the markets," he added.

The 318 shrimp boats that will be allowed to fish in Mexican waters will have to secure a fishing license for $2,000, pay an $80 registration fee and post a bond. The bond will cost $1,600 if it is obtained through the U.S. State Department or $160 if obtained through an association such as the Texas Shrimp Association. Mauermann said the licenses may be issued on a "first come-first served basis."

Texas shrimp boats landed 44.2 million pounds of shrimp valued at $87.9 million in 1975. Mauermann estimated at 15 million pounds of the shrimp valued at about $10 million came from Mexican waters. Under terms of the treaty, there will be an immediate 40 per cent cut-back of the amount of shrimp taken from Mexican waters, meaning a drop of about six million pounds.

Saying he is not at all pleased with the treaty, Mauermann noted, "It was the best that could be gotten. We started out with zero and we wound up with something."

Rio Ricans say they're forgotten

HARLINGEN, Tex. (AP) — Residents of Rio Rico, called "Forgotten Americans" by their lawyer, went to court here today to begin what may be a long quest for U.S. citizenship.

Rio Rico is a small village south of Mercedes that was originally located north of the Rio Grande until a man-made canal moved the path of the Rio Grande between the United States and Mexico.

Their court session today will be in the form of a hearing at the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service office.

In 1906, an irrigation company built a large pumping station on the Rio Grande. A small canal was cut between two points on the river to facilitate operations at the pumping station.

Eventually, the canal became the Rio Grande's main course, cutting Rio Rico off and leaving it in Mexico on the south side of the river.

Laurier B. McDonald, an Edinburg lawyer who represents the 130 residents of Rio Rico, said that if the river course change had resulted from natural causes, the people of Rio Rico would have been residents of Mexico. Since the river course change resulted from an artificial cause, McDonald said he believes the residents should be U.S. citizens with all rights and privileges.

"These people should rightfully be American citizens, but by some quirk in the bureaucratic system, they have been forgotten," McDonald said.

If the trial judge rules in their favor today, McDonald predicts it will still be a long legal battle before their citizenship is finally determined.

Citizenship for the residents of Rio Rico may be a topic of conversation at an upcoming meeting between President Ford and President Luis Echeverria of Mexico, McDonald said. He said that meeting may be held in either McAllen or Reynosa, Mexico, next month.

Residents of Rio Rico, called "Forgotten Americans" by their lawyer, went to court here today to begin what may be a long quest for U.S. citizenship.

Dallas prostitutes may join COYOTE union

DALLAS (AP) — Prostitutes in Dallas have decided to close ranks in order to combat a recently-passed ordinance designed to drive them from the streets.

A spokeswoman for the hookers announced Monday formation of a group called the Prostitutes Support System of Dallas, with an eye toward linking up with COYOTE, the West Coast-based national prostitutes union.

"The prostitutes are ready to organize and fight back," said self-confessed former prostitute Ruth Rinehart. "They're not going to put up with what the city is ready to pass today (Monday)."

What the council did pass is an ordinance making it an offense to loiter in public "in a manner and under circumstances manifesting the purpose of inducing, enticing, soliciting or procuring another to commit an act of prostitution."

Vice squad officers say they hope the ordinance is "on the books" by the end of this month.

Circulars bearing COYOTE's letterhead were passed out to council members Monday by Mary "Red" Johnson, who said she is an active prostitute.

Judy Edwards, COYOTE coordinator in San Francisco, said her group was unaware of the circulars, but endorsed the concept. "I just wish when they do this, they'd send us a copy."

The San Francisco organization publishes a newsletter which includes a list of names of undercover vice officers and information about alleged customers who are city officials. The union also provides advice on ways to combat discriminatory application of anti-prostitute laws.

The problems in Dallas surfaced in the last few weeks when residents in a once-elegant section near downtown complained to council that streets in their area were jammed nightly by roving street-walkers.

Police say burglar may be exterminated

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Police said Tuesday that a burglar who ransacked a Miami home probably inhaled deadly fumes from an exterminator's poison and may be dying.

However, the exterminating company says that is not so, and that police are probably trying to use the ruse to catch a thief.

Police said the burglar — possibly only 13 or 14 years old — faces possible brain damage and death within a week if he doesn't receive treatment.

"Completely erroneous," charged Chuck Steinmetz, district manager of Truly Nolen. "I think they're trying to do something to get him (the burglar) to turn himself in."

Steinmetz said the gas would be fatal — only if you remained in its presence until you died. But he said the house also had been sprayed with a warning tear gas that would force anyone outside before the poison could kill them.

"There are no cumulative effects. If you got out, you'd be okay," he said.

"That's not what we were told at the scene," a Dade Metro spokesman responded. "If they're changing their story, they should tell us. We're not scientists or chemists here."

Investigating Officer Jack Kramp said the burglar got in through an 11-inch hole in a window. The size of the hole and other evidence indicated the burglar probably was a young amateur, possibly 13 or 14 years old, Kramp said.

Kramp said "our main concern is that the burglar is a juvenile who's not brave enough to tell his parents what happened, and he might think he's going to be all right. But the problem is that, if you inhale this stuff and don't get treatment, you lessen the odds for survival every day."

No-hitter eludes Palmer but Orioles nip Twins

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Baltimore second baseman Bobby Grich could kick himself. On second thought, Jim Palmer might do it for him.

"If I had moved two steps," said Grich, "I might have had a shot at the ball with a dive. As it was, I almost left my feet."

The object of Grich's displeasure was a ground ball by Mike Cabbage that just eluded his glove in the second inning of Tuesday night's game with the Minnesota Twins.

As it turned out, it was the only hit that Palmer gave up while posting a 2-0 victory. Instead of pitching the second no-hitter of his career, Palmer had to settle for his fourth one-hitter.

Before Cabbage got the hit, Palmer had moved Grich toward first base. Grich complied, but only moved a step.

"I was behind 2-1 and I wanted him to hit it at somebody," said Palmer. "It was a low fastball and he just hit a grounder."

Actually, Palmer had nothing to complain about where his defensive support was concerned. Shortstop Mark Belanger made three outstanding plays behind the two-time Cy Young winner and Grich and third baseman Doug DeCinces also made fine defensive plays.

"Anytime you have a low-hit game, you're lucky unless you have overpowering stuff and you strike out a lot of guys," said Palmer after winning his 15th game, tops in the American League. "They were hitting rockets. I'm the first to say I'm lucky."

The Orioles kept pressure on the New York Yankees in the American League East with their victory. The Yankees maintained an 8½-game lead over Baltimore with a 2-1, 11-inning victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Elsewhere in the American League, the Oakland A's nipped the Milwaukee Brewers 2-1; the California Angels stopped the Boston Red Sox 5-4 and the Detroit Tigers defeated the Texas Rangers 7-5 in the opener of a doubleheader before losing a 3-0 decision in the nightcap.

Yankees 2, Royals 1
Thurman Munson hit a two-out, two-strike home run off reliever Steve Mingers in the 11th inning to lift New York over Kansas City. Munson's clout over the left field fence, his 13th homer of the year, enabled Yankee starter Dock Ellis, 12-6, to post his first victory in nearly a month.

A's 2, Brewers 1
Pinch-runner Matt Alexander scored all the way from first base on a sacrifice bunt and an error in the ninth inning to give Oakland its victory over Milwaukee.

Joe Rudi opened the ninth with a single, the 1,000th hit of his major league career.

Angels 5, Red Sox 4
Bob Jones' sacrifice fly tied the game and an error by third baseman Butch Hobson allowed the winning run to score as California rallied for two runs in the last of the ninth to beat Boston.

NY hit for rebel scoreboard

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees, who are battling for the American League East championship, have taken on an additional opponent in American League

President Lee MacPhail. Tuesday the Yanks accused the AL of a "cover up" policy and hinted they intended to defy a league directive concerning the use of instant replays on their scoreboard at Yankee Stadium.

MacPhail, a former Yankee official, fined the Yankees $1,000 and reprimanded the club Tuesday for using their instant replay scoreboard to show close plays.

The Yankees responded with a release which said: "We would like to point out that we have only the fans in mind when we use our scoreboard for instant replays. The board cost us $3 million and we see no reason, with this great innovation, why fans at the ballgame should see anything less than the fans at home, where instant replay has become a way of life."

Yankee owner George Steinbrenner had complained to MacPhail about the umpiring in Sunday's 6-5 loss to the Baltimore Orioles. The Yankees also put out a release criticizing what the team alleged was a series of bad calls by the crew headed by Lou DiMuro.

An eighth-inning call by Bill Kunkel started the action. On the play, New York's Gene Locklear was called out at first base. The Yankees insisted Locklear was safe, claiming that Baltimore first baseman Tony Muser juggled the ball and did not have his foot on the base.

House committee wants new teams

WASHINGTON (AP) — Baseball's prestigious exclusion from the nation's antitrust laws has come under attack by members of a House committee seeking to put major league teams in New Orleans and Washington, D.C.

Legislation to take away baseball's antitrust exemption was recommended by Rep. Willis W. Long, D-La., and three other members of the Select House Committee on Professional Sports.

Long, who has championed a team for the $163 million Superdome in New Orleans, told the House panel Tuesday baseball has abandoned its fundamental responsibility to the American fans by expanding to Canada earlier this year and leaving U.S. cities such as New Orleans and the nation's capital without teams.

He said baseball's protection from the law has resulted in unfair treatment of players and American cities where the fans are begging for major league baseball.

Committee chairman B.F. Sisk, D-Calif., said he was impressed with the testimony he has heard in the past few weeks urging that baseball be considered commerce as are the other major professional sports such as football, basketball and hockey.

Sisk said he hoped to hold hearings on the general subject of antitrust exemption in mid-September along with the so-called hobby tax laws in which a sports owner must make a profit in two of seven years of operation or have the franchise considered a hobby for tax purposes.

Jones, SD lose to Mets, 5-4

By HOWARD SMITH
AP Sports Writer

The dog days of August have not been kind to Randy Jones. The Padres' ace left-hander entered August with an 18-1 record and visions of a 30-victory season. Then things got sticky. A disappointing 5-4 loss to Cincinnati. A heart-breaking 1-0 defeat by Atlanta. And a run-in with a telephone pole that resulted in 30 stitches and one demolished Datsun.

"The telephone pole came right up into the car," explained Jones. "I was only going about 50 miles per hour, about as fast as my fastball."

Jones made his first appearance since the Aug. 4 accident Tuesday night and his streak remained intact. He lost to the New York Mets 5-4 on John Milner's pinch single in the eighth inning.

"This game was psychologically very, very important to me," said Jones. "I was up to hoping to do well in my first start since the accident. It's a shame to waste four runs."

Elsewhere in the National League, Atlanta edged Philadelphia 2-1. Los Angeles trimmed Pittsburgh 5-1. St. Louis rocked Houston 8-1. Montreal got by San Francisco 3-2 and Chicago downed Cincinnati 6-3.

Jones hooked up with Met lefty Jerry Kosman Tuesday night and both were tagged for four-run innings early. Kosman's two-run single helped

New York take a 4-0 lead in the second but the Padres got even in the third with the help of Dave Winfield's three-run homer.

Jones and Kosman settled down after that and matched zeroes until the bottom of the eighth. Joe Torre led off with an infield single, pinch-runner Leo Foster was sacrificed to second and took third on a single by Roy Staiger.

Then Milner lashed a single to right, scoring Foster and that was it.

"Kooz pitched a helluva game," said Jones. "He hung in there and I gave up the run first."

Braves 2, Phils 1
Phil Niekro picked up his 12th victory and doubled in a run in the seventh inning for Atlanta. The Phils rallied for a run in the ninth on Larry Bowa's infield single before reliever Adrian Devine put out the fire.

Dodgers 5, Pirates 1
Ron Cey belted a bases-loaded triple in the fifth inning as Los Angeles ended a six-game losing streak. Don Sutton, 13-9, won it with relief help from Charlie Hough. Jerry Reuss, 10-7, was the loser.

Cardinals 8, Astros 1
Keith Hernandez drove in three runs, two of them with a first-inning triple, and Lynn McGlothen, 10-11, scattered seven hits for St. Louis. The Cards collected 13 base hits off five Houston hurlers, including loser Bo McLaughlin, 1-2.

Expos 3, Giants 2
Earl Williams snapped a 2-2 tie with a seventh-inning triple off loser Dave Heaverlo. 3-4 Larry Parrish clubbed a two-run homer for the Expos and Don Carrithers got the victory.

It's the same as being there claims Gold Sox' re-creator

By PAUL SIMS
Sports Editor

Don't be surprised if you hear what you think is Rick Rizzs broadcasting a Gold Sox baseball game from Shreveport, La., then happen to see him in Amarillo five minutes after the contest.

No, Rizzs isn't a fast driver. Nor is he Superman, able to leap across the state in a single bound. He is, however, able to broadcast Gold Sox games from Amarillo while the team is on the road.

Rizzs (pronounced Rizzz), because of expense, doesn't travel with the Sox on the road. Instead, he re-creates out-of-town games by calling the ball park where the contest is being played, getting general information and broadcasting what is very close to an actual play-by-play account.

"A guy would have to listen real, real close to figure out I wasn't at the game," said Rizzs, who was in Pampa Monday to promote the Aug. 20 Pampa Night at Memorial Stadium in Amarillo. Rizzs, who is also the club's director of sales and promotion, broadcasts on KBUY.

"It sounds just like a real ball game. I have to mention before the ball game that this is a re-creation, for FCC purposes. People forget that's what it is. They just listen to the ball game," Rizzs said.

It all starts about 15 minutes prior to the game. Rizzs phones the stadium to get starting lineups and general info, such as weather conditions, game promotions and characteristics of the ballpark.

If the game begins at 7:30, he makes the call around 7:15. At 7:50, the Gold Sox pre-game show begins, with Rizzs using the information he obtained in the call. Five minutes later, Rizzs' assistant, Mike Higgins, will call the stadium for information concerning the first two innings.

"They tell him things like Bobby Mitchell flew out to centerfield, Tucker Ashford hit a base hit, Gene Delyon struck out, Donnie Reynolds hit a homerun over the leftfield wall," Rizzs said.

"That would be the raw facts. I'd make up the count (balls and strikes) and take care of the side effects."

For Ashford's hit, Rizzs would push the "hit" button and a tape cartridge would provide the sound of a bat making contact. On Delyon's strikeout, Rizzs might push the "cheer" button to get the crowd's reaction of joy.

"And I have a homerun hit — a loud crack of the bat with yells from the crowd," Rizzs has crowd noise, which stays on a constant level.

"I sit there and close my eyes and try to picture the baseball game. I get really wrapped up in it — I love it. It's a lot of fun."

The hardest thing is the tempo of the ball game, trying to make sure you don't get too far in front of yourself where you have to catch up and stall. I have to pace myself."

In his re-creations, Rizzs has encountered problems. Once, when the Gold Sox were at Jackson, Miss., Rizzs' correspondent left the pressbox late in the game.

"Here I am back in Amarillo without the information. Mike came in and told me what happened — when he went in to make his final phone call, nobody was in the pressbox and I couldn't get the last two innings.

"It was a close ball game. I called up Les Giles of the Amarillo Globe-News and found out what the final score was, then I made up the last two innings. We were leading 2-0 in the seventh inning and that's what the score was at the end of the ball game."

Since nobody scored and little action took place in the final two innings, things turned out all right. If the score had ended up as 13-11 or something like that, "it would have been a tough situation," Rizzs said.

Another time, the correspondent failed to report a pitching change, and Rizzs had the wrong hurler for the Gold Sox in the game.

Rizzs noticed the error when he read the game writeup in the Amarillo newspaper the following day.

Rizzs doesn't mind not being able to follow the San Diego Padres' Texas League representative on the road.

"The only reason I'd like to go out of town is to see other cities. I enjoy recreating. It's an opportunity to make myself a better broadcaster."

Duane gets starting nod

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — When the Dallas Cowboys offense lines up against the Denver Broncos at Texas Stadium in Irving Saturday, an old and controversial face will be set as running back.

Duane Thomas is back, and Coach Tom Landry, to whom Thomas once referred to as a "plastic man," says Thomas will probably start in the backfield with Roger Staubach and Ron Johnson.

Thomas scored the first touchdown in Texas Stadium back in 1971, scampering 56 yards against New England in the first game played at the Dallas Cowboys palatial ballpark.

A lot happened to Thomas since 1971, including tours of duty and non-duty with other NFL clubs and a hitch in the long-gone World Football League. There was a period when Thomas lashed out at Cowboy management, including General Manager Tex Schramm and Landry.

But the Thomas who will line up in the backfield with Ron Johnson has changed his ways, and when Landry said he saw "flashes of the old Duane Thomas' Saturday against Los Angeles, he was referring to the player who led the Cowboys to the 1972 Super Bowl.

Thomas' return to the Cowboys has been well publicized, and he has said he is a more mature person now than he was when he gave sportswriters the silent treatment and gave Dallas management the tongue-lashings.

Thomas has been working hard. "I'm comfortable where I am now," he said after Saturday's game. "I'm not there yet, however. A lot of things have changed and I can't fly until I can walk."

Slumping Texas writing epitaph?

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — It's 5:30 p.m. on an early August evening and the temperature inside Arlington Stadium is somewhere over the 100 degree mark.

Juan Beniquez watches intently as Tom Grieve batters pitch after pitch in the staggering heat. Then Grieve takes to the mound and serves up the ball for Lenny Randle.

"You just waste your energy out in all this heat taking extra batting practice," Beniquez says. "When you are in a slump, sometimes the best thing to do is take no batting practice at all. That way the bat isn't so heavy."

He turns his back to the scene to sign autographs and that night somebody named Steve Luebber, an unknown, comes within one pitch of throwing a no-hitter against the Texas Rangers. Texas loses again—this time to Minnesota 3-1.

You can get 50 different reasons why such a promising, talented team as the Rangers melted away from the American League scene in July, seemingly without a struggle.

Pep talks didn't work. Majority owner Brad Corbett, in a closed door meeting, asked of the team "What can we do for you? What do you want?"

Manager Frank Lucchesi appealed to the club's pride in an emotional speech in Kansas City and the team charged onto the field and produced a grand total of three hits in a losing effort.

"If I could explain it, I would be a genius," said Lucchesi.

"This team needs a good fight or a good bat kickin'," said first baseman Mike Hargrave.

"Baseball... it's damn frustrating... I hit line drives for out all season then win a game with a blooper — you figure it out," said slumping slugger Jeff Burroughs.

"We're not getting the clutch hits... the bats... and this team needs more speed," said Gen. Mgr. Danny O'Brien.

All-Star shortstop Toby Harrah, who leads the AL in errors, blames the press.

"I think adverse media can affect a team's performance," said Harrah.

A cartoon by Dallas Times Herald staffer Bob Taylor appeared alongside a question-and-answer interview with baseball beat writer James Walker in Sunday's paper. It showed Harrah rocketing a throw to first out of Arlington Stadium.

"Don't ever try to get another interview with me," Harrah told Walker, who didn't have a thing to do with the cartoon.

Walker told Harrah "Don't worry I won't."

There's a theory the Rangers—some 14 games behind Kansas City in the AL West—have been a pampered team. Corbett takes care of their every whim. Over a million fans have poured through the gates for the third consecutive year and few boos could be heard even when Texas lost 22 of 27 games.

On a big promotion night last week in which equipment bags were passed out at the gate, Harrah sent word to the press box that he wanted some.

"Hell, can't he come up here before or after the game and get them himself," said one Ranger official of the Texas shortstop who is making over $100,000 a year.

Corbett even flew the Ranger wives to New York for a series with the Yankees earlier in the year when the team was going good and in a hot first place fight with Kansas City.

But now the team is last in the AL in fielding and doesn't have a 300 hitter.

A trade that brought centerfielder Beniquez to Texas from Boston has been less than a sensation. In fact, Beniquez was disciplined for "Cadillac-ing" or loafing on a ball and put on the bench for several games.

Ford holds for long shot

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — President Ford's campaign strategists, trying to counter a move to require advance announcement of his vice presidential choice, are holding out the longshot possibility that Ronald Reagan might wind up as his running mate. That couldn't happen if the choice had to be disclosed before the presidential nomination is settled — so the Ford men say some Reagan delegates may wind up voting against the rule proposed by the challenger's campaign manager. They're ready to fight all week — and they may have to — against the vice presidential rule proposed by John P. Sears, who wants the Republican National Convention to require that candidates name their running mate at least a half-day in advance of the roll call on the White House nomination. With that maneuver, and with pressure in the platform committee, the Reagan camp is testing Ford's clout in convention preliminaries, hoping to gain strength for the main event. The process continued today, as a Republican rules committee considered a requirement that delegates be compelled to vote in accordance with the verdicts of binding primary elections in 20 states. Otherwise, delegates now bound to one candidate by primary election could be freed to switch to the other, with Reagan the likely beneficiary. Ford supports the rule binding the delegate votes. Reagan opposes it. The surprise vice presidential proposal Sears advanced on Monday would make the rule moot anyhow by declaring that no delegate could be bound to support a presidential candidate who failed to name his vice presidential choice by 9 a.m. on the day of presidential nomination, Aug. 18 in this case. Reagan already has named his, Sen. Richard S. Schweiker of Pennsylvania. Ford has said he will stick to the traditional route and will disclose his choice after the presidential nomination. "It's an attempt by Sears to write a rule that would force us to make the same mistake Reagan did," said Peter Kaye, spokesman for the Ford campaign. Two of the six members of Ford's board of convention strategy cited the possibility of a Reagan vice presidential nomination in forecasting defeat of the Sears proposal. Reagan has said he would not accept the vice presidential nomination, and a top aide said he means it. Ford at one point said he accepted Reagan at his word. He now has asked for financial and health information from more than a dozen Republicans he is considering as possible vice presidential choices. Richard Hermann of Lincoln, Neb., who is handling convention rules strategy for the Ford campaign, said that doesn't mean that Reagan is out as a potential running mate. Hermann said some Reagan delegates want their man in second place if he can't win the top spot, and therefore will vote against the Sears proposal. Dean Burch, a former White House aide and another member of the Ford strategy panel, added that despite the customary denials "it is not unusual that candidates for president wind up on the same ticket." The first railroad was built in New Hampshire in 1838.

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Southern Bell Telephone Co., with at least nine of its executives and one former executive facing possible 15-year jail terms on charges of falsifying company records, said it "stoutly supports" its executives who have been arrested. The arrests of the nine and the former executive stem from allegations that Bell officials diverted $142,000 in bogus expense vouchers during 1972-1973. One warrant remained unserved Monday but court officials would not say who was named on the warrant. Two executives were arrested Monday. They were booked at Mecklenburg County Jail and released under $5,000 bond. The procedure was the same as it had been for the seven officials and the former executive who were all arrested Saturday. Arrested Monday were Charles Duffy Penuel, 54, of Charlotte, an assistant vice president; and John O. Gilmore, 57, of Charlotte, an independent company relations manager. The company released a statement Monday, its first formal comment on the case since the arrests began Saturday, saying officials were "surprised and distressed" at the arrest of some of their colleagues. The statement said those charged had "cooperated fully" during a company investigation into the alleged voucher irregularities, it said after completion of the investigation and audits. "The company took appropriate action against employees who had violated company policy. That action included full restitution by current employees." The company did not say who violated company policy and what "full restitution" meant. Warrants against the 10 charged them with violating a state law by falsifying employee travel expenses and other miscellaneous expenses. The warrants do not mention how much money was involved in the alleged falsified records. Mecklenburg Dist. Atty. Peter Gilchrist III and N.C. Atty. Gen. Rufus Edmisten Monday declined to discuss specifics in the case, saying a court order prevented them from commenting. The order, issued in January by Superior Judge James Bailey at the company's request, prohibits comment on the case. Edmisten said the N.C. Justice Department was "successful in our first endeavor" into allegations against Southern Bell. He would not comment on whether more indictments may come. King Triplett, a Bell spokesman, said the seven executives charged Saturday went back to their jobs Monday. "As far as we can tell, all these gentlemen showed up at work today and things were normal," he said. Those charged Saturday were J. B. Smith, 59, former administrative assistant and now unemployed; Judson Palmer, 61, public relations manager; M. C. Bowers, 51, general marketing supervisor; F. Bryan Houck, 43, chief lobbyist; Frank Roberts, 50, commercial supervisor; Francis D. Joffron, 49, administrative assistant; Henry Helms, 52, general sales manager; and Edward F. Sykes, 55, division commercial manager. Houck lives in Gastonia; the others are from Charlotte. Those charged have declined to comment on the case.

Highway plan gets nod

AUSTIN, Tex. (ZAP) — A 20-year plan Monday to close the gap between declining revenue and construction needs has been adopted unanimously by the Highway and Public Transportation Commission. The commission adopted the plan Monday afternoon after a two-hour slide presentation by officers of McKinsey & Co. of Dallas. The firm devised the plan after a 15-month study that cost $600,000. Highway engineers in each district participated in the study. The ultimate solution to highway construction problems rests with the Gov. Dolph Briscoe and the legislature, the officials said, particularly in the possible use of a substantial portion of the state surplus on highway projects. Planned construction projects total $11.8 billion. But anticipated revenue over the next two decades is $1.9 billion. The increase in fuel costs has reduced the amount of fuel that would have been used and this cut fuel tax revenue. The federal government is requiring greater fuel efficiency in new cars, which will further cut into that revenue. And total consumption of fuel is expected to rise slightly over the next two years and then begin declining, partly because of increased engine efficiency. Today, only 15 per cent of the cars weigh less than 3,500 pounds. By the year 2,000, that is expected to grow to 50 per cent. That would reduce revenue from vehicle registration fees, so one of McKinsey's proposals is to base the registration fees on the value of a vehicle rather than its weight. Highway construction costs have jumped an astounding 19 per cent each year between 1971 and 1975. That forces the state to abandon its old project-by-project approach to highway construction, the study says, and replace it with an integrated and computerized system in which priorities are assigned on the basis of which projects are most needed to benefit the highway system as a whole. The plan calls for modification of "rigid standards" that "forced elaborate, high-cost projects." And reducing six-lane projects, for example, to four lanes is another way to save money. Concentrating on "hot spots," where traffic congestion is heaviest, is a better utilization of highway dollars, McKinsey says. It recommends a moratorium on right-of-way purchases. The department already has a large right-of-way inventory which it cannot use for several years. Portions of the plan already have been implemented, including the reduction in department personnel from 20,000 in 1969 to 14,852 by the end of this year. The plan calls for eliminating expenditure of highway funds on the highway patrol. Briscoe has proposed limiting the highway patrol to a flat $20 million a year from the highway fund. It also proposes transferring the sales tax on motor vehicles and vehicle parts from the state general revenue fund to the highway fund.

Computer routes out

HOUSTON (AP) — The president of the National Association of Letter Carriers (NALC) says an arbitrator has agreed with the union that computer designed mail routes are impractical. James Rademacher, speaking at the association's annual convention Monday, said the proposed plan "not only hurt" the carriers, but it hurts the people. It would have caused some mail deliveries to be made in evening hours. The union leader said the computer routes were designed as an economy move but tests in Portland, Ore., and Kokomo, Ill., cost the U.S. Postal Service $1 million. The computer plan, Rademacher said, was killed by an arbitrator during the weekend because it failed to take into account the physical stamina or the endurance of mail carriers. Also speaking to the letter carriers was Rep. James Hanley, D-N.Y., who said the Postal Service could go bankrupt if Congress failed to approve an additional $1 billion subsidy. Hanley, chairman of the House Subcommittee on Postal Service sponsored a bill that would grant a $500 million subsidy in 1977 and an equal amount the next year. The congressman said the measure now in the Senate would act as a "catalyst to help the postal service emerge from its dilemma." Hanley predicted President Ford would sign the bill as now written, but may balk if some "dangerous amendments" are adopted. Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Tex., told the letter carriers the Postal Service "is an obligation the federal government owes to its citizens and the public pays for and deserves high quality postal service." The Postal Service should be just that—a service... It should not be a corporation.

Names in the news

JERUSALEM (AP) — Former Prime Minister Golda Meir has been hospitalized for a routine medical checkup. The 78-year-old grandmother entered the hospital on Monday and was due to be released Wednesday, officials said. Mrs. Meir resigned as prime minister after the 1973 Mideast war but returned to politics several months ago to help form Labor party policy. CHICAGO (AP) — Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz says the United States may come to the aid of earthquake-stricken mainland China with supplies of food. "I think we'll move in when it becomes clear what is needed," Butz said at a news conference on Monday. Butz said that talks between the United States and the People's Republic of China already have taken place concerning relief for earthquake victims there. But he said he was uncertain of details about the talks.

Ceramic Closet

Helen Gallaher started the Ceramic Closet at 1304 Christine three years ago as a paying hobby. "My husband was in oil well servicing and we both enjoyed the things I could make," she said. "Since his death I have decided to try to make it a full time self supporting business not only to make a living but it will be something I can enjoy." The family moved to Pampa in 1951 from Stroud, Okla. The couple's three children grew up here. The oldest, Mrs. Glenda Budd, still lives here. The son, Richard, is a staff sergeant in the Marines, now on two Jims assisting with the airlift of Beirut. The youngest daughter, Gale Thompson, lives in Grove, Okla. Mrs. Gallaher has five grandchildren. Her hobbies include knitting, sewing, flowers — and my critters — everything from a mynah bird, cats, dogs, tropical fish and my dogs ranging from thoroughbred Shepards to Hintz 57 that we picked up hitch hiking, and a kitten that came out of the floor furnace at the White House Lumber Co. about three weeks ago. Mrs. Gallaher said she and her late husband had hopes of seeing a Humane Society established in Pampa. "It is a good town and I'm glad to call it home, but a humane society would make it an even better place to live," she emphasized. She announced that when school begins she plans to start ceramic classes again. "I enjoy the students coming in the shop," she added.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A new series of underwater adventures for television has been announced by Jacques Cousteau, KCET public channel and Atlantic Richfield Co.

The Cousteau Society is preparing the 12-part series with the oceanographer and his son Philippe as directors. Atlantic Richfield is financing the films, which will appear on the Public Broadcasting Service over a three-year period.

The first four programs, "Search for Atlantis," are described as "a fascinating blend of myth and reality, delving into areas never before covered in TV documentaries." Cousteau reported at an Athens press conference July 14 that his expedition had recovered gold, bronze and clay antiquities in the Aegean seabed.

Year-round schools 'promising'

By NIKKI FINKE
Associated Press Writer

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—Year-round schools may be the substance of nightmares for some students, but a growing number of communities are switching to them with dreams of saving money and improving education.

A Cambridge consulting firm, in the first major study of its kind, examined 24 year-round schools operating around the country and concluded they were "a very promising innovation."

The report, prepared by ABT Associates Inc. under a $52,000 contract from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, said year-round schools:

—Were a rapidly growing, locally initiated movement in education.

—Show potential for providing school districts with economic and space savings as well as educational gains.

—Could have a significant effect on federal policy and on American society in general.

In year-round schools, some portion of the student body attends staggered school terms during each season of the year. Vacations are shorter but more frequent than under the traditional school calendar.

The study said many educators see the traditional school calendar as a social anachronism, left over from America's early agrarian days, that persisted into the late 20th century out of custom.

Many year-round programs were started to cope with a sudden influx of new students or a shortage of teachers, especially following the two world wars and periods of heavy immigration.

What began as a space and money saver became recognized as a way of introducing educational innovations and curriculum changes to the school district as a whole.

"We must recognize that schools should respond to the ever-changing social and educational needs of their students and families," Morris A. Shepard, chief consultant for the report, said in a recent interview.

More than two million children currently are enrolled in year-round schools, the study says, and California leads the country with more than 38 programs. In 1974, districts in 19 states were operating about 100 year-round schools and 96 other school districts were seriously considering them.

The report said the flexible school calendar has special advantages for children from nomadic families who often move several times in the same school year.

Researchers also believe that year-round schools can minimize the usual learning loss which children experience during their three-month summer holiday.

The study noted that the new calendar has not always met with approval. While some parents enjoyed being able to take vacations in the off season, others complained that year-round schools disrupted the family's lifestyle.

Other parents criticized the program because their children showed signs of psychological letdown and strain after attending school months longer than students in nearby districts.

OSHA goofs, pays the price

By ANN COOPER
Pampa News
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — When Congress recently voted to lock out Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) inspectors from some small businesses, it was OSHA itself that provided the lock.

It's not that the five-year-old federal agency doesn't think it should be looking after the health and safety of small business employees. But OSHA, long the butt of anti-regulatory sentiment, made two major blunders at the wrong time.

—It began distribution of a booklet of farm safety tips aimed at farm workers with little reading ability. Phrases from the book, such as "When floors are wet and slippery with manure, you could have a bad fall," got legislators laughing as well as thinking about taking away some of OSHA's authority.

—In an attempt to set new standards to insure farm worker health, OSHA published a proposal that would require toilet and handwashing facilities in fields within a five-minute walk of each worker. A little "potty" humor went a long way when it came time to count votes.

The agency made those blunders in an election year when a major campaign theme has been: Down With Bureaucracy! And it made them prior to congressional consideration of the Fiscal Year 1977 Labor and Health, Education and Welfare appropriations bill, which sets OSHA's budget, and which has been the vehicle for past attempts to get OSHA out of the small business inspection business.

"We've been pilloried a great deal. The timing is everything. We were unlucky," said a rueful OSHA employee after House and Senate debates focusing on the OSHA blunders.

Before this year, the only exemption from OSHA Congress ever managed to get on the books was an end to record-keeping requirements for businesses with 10 or less employees. Plenty of enforcement exemptions have been proposed, and several have drawn heavy support. But no exemption from OSHA enforcement of its regulations ever made it into law.

That's likely to change this year. The House last month approved two amendments to the appropriations bill that would have the effect of exempting farms and businesses with 10 or less employees from OSHA regulation.

The Senate approved language that would exempt farms with an average of five or fewer employees, as long as they don't employ more than 12 on a given day. For other businesses with 10 or less employees, the Senate would only provide an exemption from civil penalties the first time the business has a non-serious violation—leaving OSHA free to inspect and to penalize for a first violation that threatens health or safety.

Although House and Senate conferees still have to meet to see what language stays in the final bill to be sent to the White House, even OSHA officials are saying it's a sure bet some enforcement exemptions will become law for FY 1977. Given a

Senate balks at financing legal action

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate has agreed to pay the legal bills of one senator who is being sued for libel, but it has balked at reimbursing a second member for his costs in challenging a law.

The Senate voted 56 to 20 on Monday to pay the legal expenses of Sen. William Proxmire, who is being sued for $6 million by a research scientist whose government-funded work Proxmire criticized.

choice between the two. OSHA would prefer the more moderate Senate exemptions.

Congressional staff members who watched the amendments whip through Congress by comfortable margins say it was the booklet and the toilet proposal—both parts of OSHA's debut into farm regulation—that led to the broader exemption for farms.

"The reason for the farm exemption is no deeper than it looks. OSHA put out its book at the wrong time, and then the Skubitz amendment (Rep. Joe Skubitz, R-Kan., made the farm exemption proposal in the House) gave everybody a chance to cast an anti-OSHA vote. They could have gotten amendments exempting more businesses if they'd really been organized," said a House Labor subcommittee aide.

The Skubitz amendment passed easily, 273-124, after debate which featured much discussion of the infamous booklet and the toilet proposal. Skubitz also argued that OSHA farm regulations would be very costly to farmers.

OSHA says its booklet, Safety with Beef Cattle, has been misunderstood. It is one of more than 60 pamphlets written by Purdue University as part of the agency's new safety education program. Eighteen of the booklets were to be written in a style designed for audiences with lower than average reading ability, according to an OSHA memo. OSHA is not alone among government agencies in putting out such booklets—just alone in the criticism, say agency officials.

When the Senate discussed the farm exemption amendment, Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., said he'd been told by OSHA the booklet was written for illiterate farmhands. "There is just not anybody that illiterate," the senator charged, before the 90-1 vote approving the Senate exemptions.

Maynard Dolloff, OSHA special assistant for agricultural affairs, like other OSHA officials, admits the book was a mistake. But, he says defensively, "I think when an agency is down, so to speak, it's pretty easy to criticize them."

Dolloff, whose position was just created this year to help with the new OSHA emphasis on farms, believes the House and Senate proposals may exempt many farms that need health and safety inspections. He quotes statistics from an Iowa state labor official: Of farm deaths in that state during 1972-73, 83 per cent occurred on farms now covered by OSHA which have less than five employees.

"I don't think we can assume that this will be true across the nation. But if Congress is thinking in terms of eliminating farms with five or less employees, on some farms where workers have been killed will no longer be covered," Dolloff said.

OSHA to hold up the "unwise and unworkable" proposal until it holds hearings on it. For another, the House Agriculture Committee already has hearings scheduled July 27.

And the more than 300 comments already filed on the proposal are overwhelmingly against it.

Even the chairman of OSHA's Standards Advisory Committee on Agriculture—representatives from outside the agency—wrote an angry comment opposing it. Though OSHA used some of the advisory committee's ideas in writing the proposal, changes were made that would mean, "Ranch hands across the nation will need to carry toilet and handwashing facilities on horseback," wrote Gary Erisman, a Florida Cooperative Extension Service official. Erisman suggested a more general regulation, such as, "Toilet facilities shall be readily available to each employee's place of work in the field."

The field sanitation standard draws heavily from a standard used in California, where many field workers are needed to do farm work by hand. "I know we have a little different situation in migrant camps in California than we'd have in the wheat fields in Kansas," says Dolloff, acknowledging that many midwestern farms cover hundreds of acres and are worked by a few people with machinery that they could easily drive to sanitation facilities.

OSHA defensively points out that it's just a proposal, that the public has until August 16th to comment on it, and that the idea could be reworked or even scrapped. And there's plenty of evidence that it will never become final in its present form. For one thing, the Senate Agriculture Committee has passed a resolution asking
