Hurricane Belle heads for New England

CAPE HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — The western edge of Hurricane Belle's 110mile-perhour fury brushed the southern tip of North Carolina's Outer Banks islands at 11 a.m. today with gusts up to 74 miles per

The center of the storm was 50 miles out to sea, picking up speed on a northerly course that could sweep its full force into Long Island and southern New England

We got plenty of wind — 55 miles per hour gusting to 74." said Mrs. U.L. Womach, whose family chose to remain in their home, three-fourths of a mile from the beach at Ocracoke, south of Cape Hatteras.

They're probably getting some pretty strong squalls and hurricane force winds in gusts." said Joe Pelissier of the National Hurricane Center in Miami.

Pelissier said the strongest winds were on the eastern or seaward side of the storm because of its northward movement and counter-clockwise rotation. Advance preparation was at full speed well into New England and, as the hurricane advanced to the north, the Coast Guard was at work

Police in Suffolk County, N.Y., on Long Island, told residents within 500 feet of the ocean and adjoining bays to be ready to leave their homes at a moment's notice.

The area, normally heavily populated, was jammed with tens of thousands of vacationers. It includes some famous summer resorts - Fire Island, the Hamptons, Montauck, Sag Harbor, Orient

Similar precautions were ordered into coastal Connecticut. Rhode Island and Massachusetts — including Cape Cod. which like Long Island is crowded with vacationers this time of year

The Coast Guard in Portsmouth, Va. said the empty tanker Amoco Virginia. headed for Yorktown, Va., was reported disabled off Chincoteague Island, Va., in the path of the advancing storm.

A commercial tug was sent to assist the ship, but was not expected to arrive until midafternoon

The Danish supertanker Kirsten Maersk, the largest ever to call at an East Coast port. was ordered to deep sea anchorage 50 miles off the Virginia Capes. The Coast Guard said she had been headed for Hampton Roads, and it was feared strong winds would blow the ship aground.

Larry Palmer, 34. of Arlington, Va. whose family sought refuge in the Kitty Hawk Elementary School, said he heard a policeman saying that the beach highway is flooding in areas.

There are at least 1,000 persons in the school. Most are vacationers," he said. 'It's really gone smooth. Nobody panicked. Everybody seems to be enjoying themselves. The kids have been fantastic." Palmer, who was with his wife and two children, estimated there were 250 to 400 children in the school building.

"I'm hoping we can get back to our (beach-front) cabin by 5 or 6 o'clock tonight." he said.

Waves appeared to be eight to 10 feet high, but the storm passed when the tide was out. In the Nags Head area north of here the water did not surge over the sand dunes toward homes as feared.

At the local National Weather Service Station here, hurricane watchers placed Belle's center 45 miles east in the Atlantic Radar indicated rain up and down the state's coast.

Roads from Frisco to Hatteras are impassable with ... water up to three feet deep." the weather service reported. Some trees and wires are down on the portion of the island south of Buxton and electricity is off

Winds and rain in the area were expected to maintain their strength for at least two hours and then subside about 1 p.m., according to the statement.

Many of the 10,000 tourists estimated to have been on the narrow string of islands were evacuated without incident before

Others visitors, along with many of the 2.500 to 3.000 permanent island residents. stood their ground as gale-force winds and torrential rains roared in ahead of Belle. Gale-force winds — 49 to 54 miles per hour extended 50 miles from the storm's

By 9:30 a.m., high tides were spilling water across stretches of road along the Outer Banks At Kill Devil Hills, north of Nags Head. 200 evacuees were jammed into a fire station. Many had to stand as children spread out on the floor with blankets. Others stretched out on fire engines.

Lynn Fox, 27, a registered nurse, said the majority were tourists.

"Some of the people are afraid," said. They've never seen a storm like this and they don't know what to expect.'

Most of the school buildings on the islands were either full or near capacity with persons seeking shelter.

Hope said the storm, moving north at 20 miles an hours, was "pointed toward New England. We don't see any turning toward the east right now.

It's dangerous, no doubt about it," said another forecaster in Miami, Gil Clark. "It's not an outstanding hurricane, but it's

At 3 a.m. the National Weather Service said the storm's center was estimated at 170 miles south of Cape Hatteras, near latitude 32.8 north and longitude 75.2 west. The hurricane was expected to keep moving northward at 20 m.p.h. or faster.

The highest winds were estimated at 110 m.p.h. Gales extended 75 miles to the west and 100 miles to the east

Politics, 1976

Lyndon Johnson, or his speech writer, was fond of defining politics as, "the art of the possible." While that is closer to the mark than the term "science" with which some have attempted to dignify it, even closer would be, "the art of flim flamming the people long enough to get a curb bit in their mouths, a saddle on their backs, and to mount.

If ever there was a presidential election in which voters who really believe in anything have, literally, no one to vote for certainly the one now shaping up will prove to be it. Of course, regardless of which candidate for the office, along with his "one heartbeat from the presidency" running mate, gets the nod, the time will come when those trooping to the polls will realize that, once again, they have been had; that the winning candidate they thought they were voting for and the man sworn into office were different men. But, by then, it will be too late. By then, the successful practitioner of the "art" will be safely in the saddle for at least four years, spurred boots jammed into the stirrups, bitted reins in hand.

The fundamentals of the game, this time around, seem to consist of a series of signals proclaiming, "Look, folks! I'm not really what I appear to be, or what I said I was last week. Just look at who I just picked for my V.P.

Currently, pundits of the media, wielders of the spoken and written word and of the cartoonist's pen, are having a field day pointing to "Conservative" Reagan's leap to the "left" with his choice of "Liberal" Schweiker as a running mate. Obviously, Reagan, still a few delegates short of the required number, doesn't care where he gets them. The The name of the game is, first of all, "Get Nominated," and then, "Get Elected." Moreover, "It worked for Carter, why not for

And, of course, that was precisely the strategy used so successfully by the candidate with a grin; a fact which seems largely lost on the pundits. Having garnered the "Conservative" democratic South with his shots at "big government" and the "bloated bureaucracy," Carter realized that wasn't enough to get the job done. Hence, with his choice of "Liberal" Mondale and acceptance of the big - spending Democratic platform, the man from Plains was wig - wagging to the Northern Liberals, "Look, fellows, I'm really one of you. All that talk about 'big government' and 'bloated bureaucracy' was for yokel consumption."

All of which, no doubt, will cause some to think that Ford, as the lesser fo three evils, is the only choice left for those who can stomach neither Ronnie nor Jimmy. If so, think again. "Conservative" Ford laid the groundwork for the current Carter and Reagan fence - straddling strategy when he appointed "Liberal" Nelson Rockefeller as his Vice President, away back there.

Democracy, Freedom Not Same

freedom.

What questions should be answered by the individual. what ones by majority vote? The first of these is the method of individual freedom, each person deciding for himself. The second is democracy, the group deciding by vote, with the understanding that each individual of the group will be bound by the will of the majority.

It is widely (and loosely) assumed that freedom and democracy coincide. Unhappily, they don't. The individual instinctively wants to make his own decisions. He resents having action forced upon him either by another individual or by a majority of the group of either case he may be forced to act against his will

In group decision, the individual is satisfied in case his group is in majority. This accounts for politics and the effort people put forth to insure that the will of their particular group prevails. Political decisions are group decisions. But there is always an unhappy group, the minority who lose out at the ballot box, and often the minority is nearly as large as the maority.

When the method of individual decision is followed, as it is in the free marketplace, no one has cause to complain. There is no resentful minority, for each decides for himself what his action is to be, and if this action proves unfortuante there's no one to blame but himself.

The theory of the labor union is that if all the workers of a given industry or craft stand together as a group they will get a better contract than if each acts individually. This may or may not be true. Whether or not the worker's income is increased, the fact remains that his freedom is reduced when he is required to join or pay dues to a union If he is a worker of mediocre ability, he will probably prefer to sell his labor under a union contract. If he is a superior worker, he is likely to choose individual bargaining, in the belief that he will draw a premium for ability. The right-to-work law. recently enacted in Georgia and now in force in some 20 states, is based on the principle that every worker has a basic right to sell his own labor and hence that he should be free to sell it either individually or collectively, as he pleases.

Those who oppose these laws hold that every worker should be made to join the union because otherwise he will be enjoying the benefits of the union contract without paying his share toward its cost. He will be a "free rider." to use the epithet common in union circles. Hence, they urge repeal of section 14 (b) of the National Labor Relations act, which permits states to pass right - to - work laws.

What they are saying is that if a majority of all the workers vote for collective bargaining not a majority of all the workers but a majority of those voting every one of the workers should then be required to bargain collectively. That is, it should be a group decision.

This is a poor argument. A better one is that if the individual worker does not wish to join a union, he is free to look for a job elsewhere. He has the

Thus, the Constitution is a balanced doucment, combining freedom and democracy. It works well because neither overshadows or negates the other. The danger today is that democracy will be overstressed - that group government will be exalted over individual government, throwing our system out of balance and resulting in a despotism worse than that of George III.

Our revolutionary fathers were conscious that democracy does not equate with freedom.

Anaheim (Calif.) Bulletin The time is near at hand, say the experts, when a second war between the states could erupt This one would be a business war, waged between the fast growing southern and mountain states and the rest of the nation. A recent edition of Business Week magazine has this to say: The second war between the states will take the form of political and economic maneuver. But the conflict can nonetheless be bitter and divisive because it will be a struggle for incomes, jobs. people and capital."

It is no secret that industry and population gradually have been leaving the industrial northeast and heading to what was a relatively impovershed south and southwest. But the tempo was slow and nobody got excited. Then, somebody noticed that there was more outgo than income and all the good winds blew out and not in.

Business Week asserted that not only has the "sunbelt" region lured manufacturing and retailing businesses away from the industrialized north; but the region is benefitting from such trends as massive infusion of investment from overseas, a steady flow of federal dollars into major projects, lower pay scales, the retirement of large numbers of financially independent business and professional people, and, ironically, the investment of from the ailing north.

Even though organized labor is weak in the growth states, the magazine said per capita incomes often equal, or exceed, those of the industrialized north.

"In North Carolina, for instance," said the magazines only 6.9 per cent of the work force is unionized but the per capita income of Charlotte, as early as 1972, surpassed that of New York and other major cities from Hartford to Milwaukee. If cost - of - living adjustments are added in, it would show that average living standards are actually higher in many other growth area cities from Little Rock to Louisville than they are in New York.

Berlin Blockade A land blockade of Berlin's Allied-occupied western sectors began April 1, 1948, when Soviet military authorities refused to permit U.S. and British supply trains to pass through the Soviet zone of Germany. The Allied governments responded by establishing an airlift to supply their garrisons and West Berlin's civilian population. The blockade was lifted Sept. 30, 1949, after British and U.S. planes had airlifted 2,343,315 tons of food and coal.

TAX REFORM?

Well, don't bet your life on it

By ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9 - If you haven't been paying attention to that voluminous (1,500-page) tax reform bill the Senate has been squabbling over for weeks, don't give it a thought

You haven't missed a thing. Not only is the massive measure far from completed, but it's virtually unlikely to be in the foreseeable future. The odds are against the Senate finishing. before recessing next week for the Republican national convention.

In fact, prospects of this far reaching legislation are so uncertain it's a toss-up whether it will even be enacted this year.

For after the Senate gets through with it, probably around Labor Day, it still faces a long and tortuous course. First, conference committees of the House and Senate will have a crack at it - and how long their secret deliberations will last is anyone's guess. Then the so-called "compromise" measure will go back to the two chambers for final consideration. That will take more time, particularly in the Senate where debate is unlimited

So with Congress slated to adjourn sine die in early October, your surmise is as good as any what the final fate of this 18 - month - old legislation will

It could very well wind up in limbo - as have other loudly touted tax reforms.

Going Overboard Selection of Sen. Schweiker as running mate evolved in two stages.

Masterminding both was John Sears, 36 - year - old Regan campaign director, one - time deputy counsel to President Nixon, member of a prominent Washington law firm until joining Reagan's electioneering

First stage was agreeing that a spectacular counter move was essential

There was complete unanimity on that. All concurred. "We've got to get off dead center. We're dragging bottom and if we don't move ahead, we'll fall behind and that will be fatal. We can't compete with personal telephone calls from the President and White House parties for whole delegatrions. We've got to out trump them.

Remarkably, Reagan appeared the least startled when Sears sprang the surprise idea that a running mate be announced forthwith, and followed that with a blockbuster that the choice by Schweiker. leading and highly vocal liberal. "You serious?" exclaimed

"Certainly, why not?" was the cool rejoinder. "If Connally is going with them, that means they're playing for the South. So the smart thing for us to do is to offset that with a play to the industrial Northeast. No one is better suited for that than Schweiker. In the ensuing discussion,

Schweiker on coalition

Editor's Note: Many questions have been raised about Ronald Reagan's coalition with liberal Sen. Richard Schweiker in his race for the Republican nomination for president. But what about Schweiker's side of the coalition? In an interview on the Reagan campaign trail, Schweiker describes his view of the coalition.

EDINBURG, Tex. (AP) -Lawyer Nago Alaniz Sunday became the first Duval County political figure in the past two years to walk out of a courtroom at the end of his trial a

A district court jury of seven men and five women found Alaniz innocent of a burglary charge after about 12 and a half hours of deliberations over a three-day period.

Sen. Howard H. Baker, the Tennessee Republican who was vice chairman of the Senate panel which heard Roselli's testimony, said he would ask FBI Director Clarence Kelley "to be fully briefed" on the case.

"I think they (the FBI) should take jurisdiction on the basis of what's happened now." Baker said from his home in Huntsville, Tenn.

FBI spokesmen in Miami and in Washington said the agency would not become involved unturns up.

Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, the Hawaii Democrat who heads the Senate's new permanent intelligence committee, said in Washington that it was too early to decide on a congressional probe of the case.

Roselli and Giancana were also reported to have been linked with Judith Campbell Exner, who said last year she had "a relationship" with the late President John F. Kennedy. The names of Roselli and Giancana appear in FBI reports released at Mrs. Exner's request for help in writing her memoirs.

The reports describe numerous meetings between Roselli and Mrs. Exner, now the wife of a golf professional in San Diego. One was in 1962 at a Los Angeles hotel, where Mrs. Exner turned over $600 in cash to pay a bill.

Dr. Ronald Wright, the chief deputy medical examiner, said Roselli, 70, had probably been dead since July 28, the day he left his sister's home in Plantation, north of Miami, for a round of golf. It was his sister. with whom had been living recently, who reported Roselli missing Friday.

Three fishermen sighted the 55-gallon drum Saturday. It was bobbing in an arm of Biscayne Bay.

Police said holes had been cut in the side of the barrel to make it sink, and Wright said the drum probably had broken loose from anchors after gases from the decomposing body made the drum buoyant.

Agreement fails on Pakistan plan

LAHORE, Pakistan (AP) -Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Prime Minister used nuclear fuel.

Kissinger reportedly told to prevent Pakistan from using the reprocessed materials to build nuclear weapons.

The secretary of state announced, however, that the United States is giving 200 tons of wheat to Pakistan for the aid of flood victims in the Lahore area. About 3,000 villages have been destroyed, and half of Lahore is under water.

Kissinger acknowledged at a news conference that the conflict over the reprocessing plant has not been resolved and said further meetings will be

He said he "hoped the issue could be settled without confrontation." The issues are complicated, he continued, but they will be discussed on merit without pressures or blackmail on either side."

U.S. law requires the cutoff of aid to a nation which receives a reprocessing plant without agreeing to place it under international control, because the plutonium produced as a by product could be used to build nuclear arms. U.S. officials suspect that the Pakistanis want operate their own reprocessing plant so they can match India's atomic bomb.

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Our 24-year-old son is engaged to a beautiful but spoiled 21-year-old girl. She has broken two engagements (one after the wedding invitations were mailed), and now she has asked our son for more time to "think things over." Meanwhile, the invitations are supposed to go out next Monday.

We have counseled with our minister, and he is all for letting her "think it over," but our son is trying to talk her into going through with the wedding on the scheduled

Her parents are no help at all and are pushing for the wedding as planned because they would like to get this spoiled, flighty girl married and out of the house. Also, they are very fond of our son. What would you do?

DETROIT DILEMMA

DEAR DILEMMA: I agree with your minister. I would give the bride all the time she needs to think it over. There are worse things than a late wedding. And one of them is an early divorce.

DEAR ABBY: Where can I find a doctor who does cosmetic surgery on legs like mine? They look like road maps-red and blue veins running everywhere.

I've never seen legs like this anywhere. I even wear thick hose in the hot summer when I wear short dresses. I wear slacks every chance I can to hide my legs. Even my ankles are covered with these ugly-looking veins. I'm 45, keep my weight down and am fairly attractive, so I'm told.

Please don't tell me to be thankful that I have legs that carry me where I want to go. I am, but I sure wish they were presentable.

H. IN FLORIDA

DEAR H.: Your family doctor should be able to refer you to a surgeon who specializes in this type of surgery. If he can't, call your county or state medical society.

DEAR ABBY: I'm on the road for sometimes as long as three weeks at a stretch. My wife is a wonderful woman. We have four children from 3 to 13 years old, and she is doing a great job raising them. She never complains.

Now for the problem: When I come off the road all I want is a homecooked meal and early to bed. My wife wants to "go someplace." She'd like to go out for dinner or a movie, or invite people over, and she's even suggested that I take her for a ride. (Imagine, after driving 2,500 to

I know it's not easy to be cooped up for three weeks with the kids, but can't she see my side of it? Wish you would settle this.

DEAR DR. LAMB - Please temperature in normal eninform me and many other vironmental temperature. A parents if this statement is tiny thermostat in the brain correct: "The main reason regulates the body for controlling a fever is to temperature. By make a child more comfortable. Fevers do not cause brain damage and rarely cause convulsions.

I know people who believe this is the reason for their child's brain damage. If this is true a person taking care of a child with a fever should not need to worry needlessly. Otherwise all parents should be informed of the real truth.

DEAR READER - The statement you refer to is an over-simplification. Excessive heat will damage body tissues. The point is what degree of heat you are talking about. Body cells begin to show damage at temperatures of 106 degrees F., or above. (Note: the body temperature may not be quite the same temperature as you get from a mouth thermometer.) Individuals suffering from severe heat stress with a heat stroke may have widespread body tissue damage.

The brain cells are particularly sensitive to heat and cannot be replaced if damaged. Many parts of the body regenerate if damaged, but not the brain cells. At body temperatures of 110 degrees F. death will occur if the temperature persists.

For these reasons I consider a fever of 106 degrees F. as dangerous, not from the disease but from the fever itself. Any elevation above this point should be treated vigorously to lower the body temperature.

The critical level of body temperature is about 106 degrees F. The body seems to have some special mechanism that usually stops the rise in temperature with illnesses at this level. A fever is sometimes helpful and the body can control its

Biofeedback combats stress

Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - The clicks came so rapidly it was impossible to count them. The meter on the nearby machine flipped far to the right Both indicated stress and tension.

Then the voice of Arthur L. Peiffer, a psychologist and director of clinical symptons at the Houston International Hospital, said relax, "let warmth flow through your body; enjoy the heaviness; remember your bronical tubes are pure, clear aluminum and there is a machine that will do the breathing for you.

The clicks, heard through the earphones on your head, slowed, and muscles begin to unwind, and there was a sense of well-being, of a loss of the troubles that brought a clinching of the fists and a gritting of the teeth.

This was biofeedback, a force that treats the body and the mind as a whole; where the power to relax can be learned and some physical malfunctions, such as high blood pressure, a rapid heart rate, migraine headaches, can be cured by simply learning to ease the tensions and the stress brought by every day problems.

Brilco, a Houston-based firm, recently conducted a management seminar near the port city and suggested that its administrators undergo biofeedback in an effort to relieve some of the tension of their jobs and personal lives.

It is one of the first companies to use the new process in an effort to relieve its top executives from the stress that brings on serious physical and mental programs, from headaches to

Reynolds Redd, staff psychologist for Drilco, said in an interview. "Once we began requiring physical examinations for our top employes we discovered that 80 per cent of the ailments were stress-related. We had lost a couple of key people with heart attacks and we knew something had to Joining with Peiffer and the hospital staff, Drilco began sending its management executives to the biofeedback clinics "and the results have been unbelieveable," Redd said.

"In one case an employe lowered his blood pressure by 38 points. In my own case, I have suffered from arthritis for years, taking eight aspirins a day. I underwent biofeedback and I haven't taken an aspirin since," Redd said.

Redd said troubled employes are less productive and many, many thousands of persons lose their energy and desire through worry.

Peiffer displayed the biofeedback system and it is relatively simple

Electrodes are attached to the forehead. earphones, like those used by airplane pilots, are placed over the ears, and, in some cases, skin censors are attached to the hand.

You can hear your own tensions through the clicks. With the use of a tape recorder, you are instructed how to relax, how to control your heart rate, your blood pressure, your sore neck, your aching back.

Once learned, the relaxing procedures can be practiced on a daily basis-on arising in the morning, or during a break in the work schedule. even during the few seconds waiting for that red light to turn to green.

Peiffer said the training sessions last about two or three weeks, depending on the individual; and "I am convinced it will someday be the answer to many of our physical and mental ills.

"I think it is the biggest movement in medicine in years. We are even considering having mobile ment to the people. It doesn't make sense, somehow, to have an individual drive through Houston traffic to our hospital to learn how to relax and then have to fight the traffic going back to work." he said

The use of biofeedback, Peiffer said, is not limited to the troubled, over-worked businessman. Often the housewife, plagued by the daily problems of home and children, can be trapped by tension, and the athlete, who gets up-tight before the big game, can find an answer in the Peiffer said many individuals are not aware of stress. Then he said. "Did you hear the air condityoner?"

Not until you mentioned it, but I do now.

'Isn't your buttocks tired from sitting in that one position?

"It wasn't until you mentioned it."

That," Peiffer said, "is awareness. Many persons are never aware of their tensions, but once they are and learn how to control them. many related physical problems can be solved.

Pampa miss goes East to learn pioneer crafts

By TIM PALMER Pampa News Staff

It was a special bicentennial celebration for Cheryl Birkes of Pampa when she returned to one of the 13 original colonies and experienced a life 200 years

The adventure was part of a Girl Scout Opportunity Program called "1776 All Over Again." The three - week event was at Camp Louise in eastern Pennsylvania

Miss Birkes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. wallace Birkes, 2356 Aspen, explained that the scout organization mails descriptions of 50 opportunity programs every year. Miss Birkes chose the Pennsylvaina camp because it was about 1776 and I thought since it was the bicentennial year it seemed the most interesting to me.

Five hundred other girls had the same idea. The Pampa High School junior was one of only 200 accepted this year.

The main program of the camp was to learn several crafts and activities of the early pioneer women," she said. "Our camp activities reflected a '76 influence " They included baking bread in a pit, square dancing, embroidering and making dolls from corn husks:

Some of her attempts were more successful than others. Miss Birkes returned with both a jar of her own strawberry jam and a container of pickles in a greenish liquid. "We're not going to eat the pickles," she said. "They look too bad."

The participants learned to spin wool and saw artifacts from the 19th century when a group from Quiet Valley, a restored pioneer farm, visited Camp Louise. "They showed us their 'modern' kitchens," Miss Birkes said, which was built in 1892." Among the latest utensils of that time were cherry - pitters and apple - peelers. Another new invention to the Quiet Valley farmers was barbed wire. "That guy just couldn't believe barbed wire. He didn't think it would work.

Each participant spent one of her weeks learning about Pennsylvania with a host family. Miss Birkes stayed with the William Rybitskis in Wilkes - was there to celebrate "an old fashioned Fourth." The camp dedicated a Friendship Bell in the afternoon and rang it in unison with bells across the nation. At night, each girl held a sparkler and surrounded the flag pole in the shape of a star.

The participants "shared their heritage." Miss Birkes continued, in other ways as well. "Our camp had a melting pot atmosphere," she said. "There were girls from 46 states and two foreign countries." Each posted on a large map a display representative of her area. Miss Birkes characterized Pampa with a windmill - oil well scene.

a piece of barbed wire and a shock of wheat "I became best friends with a girl from Nevada, a girl from South Carolina and a girl from New Jersey." she said. "We enjoyed each other's accents and terminology. For instance. I had eaten 'whimpies' and hoagies' all my life, but I knew them as sloppy joes and submarine sandwiches. Miss Birkes plans to continue learning about life outside of the Pampa area. She will travel with the high school band to Ireland in the spring and hopes to be accepted to a girl scout program in Mexico City next those who oppose violence on televsion, a new tactic is developing of pressuring sponsors to withdraw their commercials from shows featuring violence.

By LEE MARGULIES Associated Press Writer LOS ANGELES (AP) - A growing number of people who feel there is too much violence on television are directing their complaints to the advertisers whose commercial dollars support such programming.

Convinced that TV violence can be harmful to young viewers and maybe older ones, too. these people are declaring that the sponsors must be held accountable along with the creators and broadcasters who put the shows on the air.

Some are suggesting a boycott of sponsors' products.

Network executives decline to discuss the issue beyond saying there is no evidence that the complaints have had any affect so far. On the contrary, demand for commercial time on the tube is at an all time high and the Television Bureau of Advertising estimates that the TV industry will receive $6.4 billion from advertisers this

But this new assault on TV violence is still in its infancy. In just the past two months:

-The American Medical Association approved a resolution condemning television's "massive daily diet of symbolic crime and violence in 'entertainment programs and called on physicians, their families and their patients "actively to oppose TV programs containing violence, as well as products and-or services sponsoring such programs.

-The nation's largest advertising agency, the J. Walter Thompson Co., said a small survey it conducted showed eight per cent of the respondents "consciously not buying a product" advertisted on programs they considered excessively violent.

-The National Association for Better Broadcasting, a media activist group, wrote letters to 13 advertisers to complain that their commercials were helping to support a series of "degenerate horror movies" on Saturday afternoons on independent station KCOP-TV in Los Angeles. The association reported that 10 of the companies responded and said they were withdrawing their ads from the programs. -The National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting, another activist organization, spent six weeks analyzing the prime time programming of ABC. CBS and NBC to determine which programs were the most violent and what companies were sponsoring them. Their message to advertisers: "We think you ought to know what you're sponsoring and you ought to be responsible for it." The chairman of the Federal Communications Commission. Richard M. Wiley, recently told advertisers they could play a role in keeping excessive violence off the tube: "You, after all, must make a basic decision on whether or not to support particular types of programming fare. It is your buck, so to speak, which may be decisive, and thus I think it is fair to say that the buck must stop with you." Television executives are sensitive to advertisers for the obvious reason that TV revenue comes from commercials. Most programs are aimed at drawing big audiences that will be attractive to potential sponsors. What television is about is sers," says Ted Carpenter, executive director of the National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting. "Until the audience talks to the advertisers, you really don't have communication to the industry."

His organization undertook its six-week study of prime time violence to facilitate that sort of communication between the public and the advertisers, he

General Foods, the nation's second largest TV advertiser last year with more than $136 million invested, is one company that is firmly on record as opposing and avoding what it deems excessively violent TV programming. Says Archa O. Knowlton, media services director: "Advertisers have a responsibility when they're using the airwaves, just like everyone

But the record indicates that not many other advertisers avoid violent programs purely on moral grounds.

Public protest could change that attitude. So could the results of another poll the J. Walter Thompson agency is conducting as a followup to the survey that found that eight per cent of 200 adult TV viewers interviewed shunned products advertised on violent programs. Results of this much larger sampling will probably be released in October, the firm

Not everyone thinks boycotting advertisers is a commendable idea. At least some industry executives view it as yet another pressure tactic by a minority trying to inflict its views on the majority.

Jerome Bess, president of Sawdon & Bess Advertising in New York City, who agreed to withdraw Kinney Show Store ads from the horror movies on KCOP in Los Angeles, said he did so only because he concurred that the films brought to his attention were too gruesome for children.

Bess worries about what could happen if other groups began using the tactic to reflect their political or religious views. "Suppose somebody is successful in bringing to bear enough pressure on enough clients that he can control the decision of where advertising is placed on television," he says. There's a danger to that.

Connally criticism hurts party says Ford

By DICK BARNES Associated Press Writer

CAMF DAVID, Md. (AP) - President Ford ays Republicans who publicly criticize John B. Connally as his potential running mate are harming party unity.

He said complaints about the former Nixon administration Treasury secretary or any other possible vice presidential pick ought to be confined to "the procedure I set up" for privately receiving recommendations on the No. 2 position.

Ford, in an interview, also said he believes challenger Ronald Reagan hurt himself by picking liberal Sen. Richard S. Schweiker as a running mate in advance of the Republican National Convention. Ford said that if he made his own selection known in advance, he would probably lose more support than he gained no matter who he tapped.

He claimed that more than a dozen candidates he is considering "are all dead even at this point" as a process of checking their finances and other background information begins.

Ford wouldn't say who was being asked to announce his choice until presidential balloting at the GOP convention is completed Aug. 18. However, Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., and Commerce Secretary Elliot L. Richardson said Sunday they have been asked for data.

The interview with Ford at the mountaintop presidential retreat in Maryland marked the end of his second year as president, but principally covered three periods of the future: the two weeks climaxing his bid to win the GOP nomination; the three months of the campaign he anticipates against Democratic nominee Jimmy Carter; and the four years he hopes to serve as an elected president. Ford said he felt certain of winning the nomination, but he said the fight had been tougher than expected because "I do not believe we have sold our accomplishments as well as we should have."

He said he would "change the style of the campaigning" for a race-against Carter and "add to personnel" at his campaign he'd alter his often criticized campaign style and didn't indicate whether he'd put new leaders in charge of his campaign organization.

"I don't rule it out." he said about debating Carter.

Ford said he has not asked the former Watergate special prosecutor to fill him in on Connally's role in milk industry campaign funds that were linked to the Watergate scandal that put Ford in office.

"We expect the individuals who are contacted to make a full and complete disclosure of anything that would be detrimental in the campaign," he said in reference to the running-mate possibilities who are being asked to provide personal information.

Ford said that only at a later stage of evaluations might White House aides consult such material as a 1971 White House tape transcript concerning Connally, Reps. William Cohen, RMaine, and Tom Railsback, RIII., said last week Ford should examine that transcript.

We will pass judgment on that after we Connally, who was acquitted of milk fund bribery charges in a federal trial, has drawn fire from a number of Republicans. including Gov. William McLaughlin of Ford's home state of Michigan, both longtime Ford allies.

"Public controversy of that kind is not helpful as far as party unity is concerned." Ford said. Asked if he would take the comments into account nonetheless, the President said, "I am certainly going to take into consideration their recommendations as they come through the process we have established.

But he emphasized: From the point of view of party unity, it is far better if the discussion is within the context of the procedure I set up. Everybody will have an opportunity to state freely how they feel and the reasons therefore, and that is the better way for me to get the information."

One person Ford did rule out as a running mate was Schweiker, the Pennsylvania senator picked by Reagan.

that edge of the spectrum," he said in reference to Schweiker's liberal voting Ford said Reagan's selection of Schweiker "shocked a lot of people. And it hasn't produced results from his point of view. Therefore, I think he has further hurt his chances for the nomination.

The President said he would rather. however, "have the contest between Mr Reagan and myself settled on the basis of the two of us. And I would prefer to have the nominee for the vice presidency determined on the basis of his or her qualifications.

Looking ahead to an autumn campaign. Ford said Carter "will be very difficult to beat, but I am confident that we can win. He called Carter's recent references to the Nixon-Ford administration "a typical political ploy, but I will run on my record and that is the record of the last two years."

Asked where Carter was most vulnerable, Ford said, "Anybody that seeks to get a public office by promises, without any experience. I think is basically vulnerable

The President said the biggest disappointment of his first two years in office was that "we have not been able to reduce the unemployment as much as we would have liked.

But he restated his earlier prediction that by the end of the year unemployment will be less than 7 per cent despite its July level of 7.8 per cent, announced last week.

Looking to foreign policy goals of a new term. Ford cited a broader solution to Middle East problems, a responsible second strategic arms limitation agreement, progress in negotiations with the Soviets on mutual balanced military force reductions, strengthening of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and progress in southern Africa.

Body search continues

DENVER (AP) - Big Thompson Canyon is still littered with debris from the flash flood nine days ago, but tourism officials say that should not prevent a Colorado Rockies vacation-or ruin their profitable industry.

Private organizations and the state and federal governments are busy spreading the word that the flood, which killed an estimated 100 residents and tourists and caused $50 million damage, did not extend beyond the canyon.

The dollar loss in the disaster area is tremendous, but if people continue to stay away ... the loss in revenue to the area could very well match that of losses in the flood area," said Corky Rogers of the Estes Park Area Chamber of Commerce. Estes Park is the eastern gateway to Rocky Mountain National Park, one of the biggest attractions in the state's $710 million tourist industry.

Meanwhile, the search for bodies continued. Two bodies were brought to the makeshift morgue Sunday, bringing the number recovered to 86. Other

New data from one of Viking's biology experiments renewed a cautious belief that livrocky, desert-like region of Mars where Viking I touched down July 20.

The latest data came from what is called a "pyrolytic release experiment" designed to determine whether any process resembling photosynthesis is taking place on Mars.

Photosynthesis is the process by which plants on earth take in carbon gases and use the carbon for growth or for food. On Saturday, the pyrolitic release experiment found information that Dr. Harold Klein. head of the mission's biology team, called "tantalizing." What the experiment hoped to find was some indication sumed carbon gases, as plants do on earth. The pyrolytic experiment tries to make that determination by creating in a test tube a microcosm of Mars. A bit of soil was placed in the tube and was incubated for several days under simulated Martian sunlight, produced by a xenon lamp in the test chamber.

In this "miniature Mars," it was hoped that the supposed plantlike Martians would feel at home, absorb gases in the test tube's atmosphere, and use the carbon from those gases for

Ex-WFL players lead wins

AP Sports Writer

They are bittersweet memories: the Chicago Fire, the Birmingham Vulcans, the Southern! California Sun and the rest the World Football League teams which couldn't withstand empty stadiums and emptier bankbooks.

Most of the players are trivia questions now, but some survived and made interesting contributions to this weekend's National Football League preseason activity.

There was Mark Kellar, a Fire refugee whose one-yard scoring run produced Minnesota's only touchdown in a 13-10 triumph over the Kansas City Chiefs.

There was Tiny Adams, the WFL's leading passer in 1974 for the Sun, who directed the Chiefs' only touchdown drive and set up a Jan Stenerud field goal at the close of the first

There was Johnny Musso, the former Vulcan who carried 23 times for 81 yards and caught six passes for 95 more for Chicago in leading the Bears' 27-16 triumph over the expansion Seattle Seahawks Saturday night. He caught a 22-yard pass from Bob Avellini, the former Fire signal caller, for the Bears' first score of the con-

In other NFL weekend exhibitions Saturday, the Los Angeles Rams roughed the Dallas Cowboys 26-14; the Cleveland Browns blasted the Atlanta Falcons 31-7; the Cincinnati Bengals bombed the Buffalo Bills 31-10; the Green Bay Packers trimmed the Tampa Bay Buccaneers 10-6: the New Orleans Saints topped the Houston Oilers 13-10, and the Oakland Raiders bested the St. Louis Cardinals 20-9.

The Baltimore Colts beat the Washington Redskins 20-9 in the rain and the San Diego Chargers dropped the New England Patriots 26-17 in Friday night encounters. The New York Jets host the New York Giants and the Pittsburgh Steelers visit the Philadelphia Eagles in Monday night games.

Kellar once set a WFL record by scoring 36 points in a game against Hawaii: three touchdowns rushing, two on pass receptions and one "action point." You remember the action point, right?

Saturday night, Kellar and the Vikings settled for the one touchdown — but it's a point for the "rookie" who is trying to make the club.

Though he dropped a pass on one play. Kellar's chances of making the team weren't hurt any by 13 carries for 46 yards

Three Garo Yepremian field goals and a second-quarter 43yard scoring pass from Don Strock to Freddie Solomon helped the Dolphins overcome a 97-vard touchdown runback by Detroit rookie James Hunter on the opening kickoff and raise their preseason record to 2-0. Before Saturday night's game, Rams Coach Chuck Knox showed his players films of last year's 37-7 loss to Dallas in the National Conference championship game. Memories of "that horror movie" freshly in his mind, quarterback Ron Jaworski completed 10 of 19 passes for 138 yards in the first half to lift Los Angeles. 2-0.

Halfback Gregg Pruitt scored twice - one on a 38-yard run on the first Cleveland play from scrimmage - to help the Browns, 1-1, trounce the Falcons. 0-2.

Quarterback Ken Anderson and wide receiver Isaac Curtis connected on first-half scoring passes of 44 and 51 yards to boost the Bengals, 2-0, past the Bills, 0-2. Without O.J. The Chicago White Sox have found a short-cut to success. Bill Veeck unveiled his team's heralded short pants

"I like them, they're very comfortable," said Chicago second baseman Jack Brohamer. whose two-run single in the sixth inning was the big hit of the White Sox attack. "Everybody seems to like them. Especially the opposition.

"You guys are the sweetest team we've seen yet," crowed Kansas City first baseman John Mayberry. He then warned White Sox outfielder Ralph Garr, "You get over to first base and I'm going to give you a big kiss.

People are becoming convinced that the initials of the B.C. Open stand for "Be Careful." In 1973, flood waters surged over the par-71, 6,868-yard En-Joie Golf Club course. A year later, fire destroyed the club house and violent winds tore limbs from trees, littering the

After all, Saturday's third round had been washed out, necessitating the scheduling of two rounds for Sunday in order to end the tournament on time. That round was finished without incident, though secondround leader Buddy Allin winner of $40,000 at last week's Pleasant Valley Classic - lost

Rams whip Cowboys to get some revenge

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Tom Landry, a man not known for emotional outbursts, sounded somewhat like a cheerleader for the Los Angeles Rams. After the Dallas coach watched Los Angeles roll to a 26-14 National Football League preseason victory over his Cowboys Saturday, he was prompted to say:

"The Rams played a hell of a game. They ran well and controlled both the offensive and defensive line of scrimmage. Their defense was particularly tough in that our offense had a tough time giving the quarterback protection." Landry can take heart, however, in the knowledge that Los Angeles beat the Cowboys 35-7 during the exhibition season last year, but Dallas came back to win both a regular sea-

his advantage to Gilder and Wynn when he ran into putting this morning to see if the $200.-000 tournament could be completed and the $40,000 first prize handed out. The 25-year-old Gilder, at 265 with two holes remaining, had earned his Pro Golfers Association card last fall and won his second tour start this year at the Phoenix Open. The 36-yearold Wynn still was chasing his first tour victory.

Gilder had begun the final round at 10 under par and picked birdies at the fifth and eighth holes before parring through the 16th to pull past sagging Allin. Wynn was 11 under after 54 holes and shook off a triple bogey on the seventh by taking a birdie on the eighth and an eagle on the 12th to pull even with Gilder.

Not much later, the rains became unendurable. By that time. Terry Diehl was in the clubhouse - the leader at 274. 10 under par. But both Gilder and Wynn needed only to par the par-3 17th and par-4 18th holes this morning to better tthat by two strokes.

That left the other nine to battle for paychecks. Ed Sneed, tied with Gilder at 203 entering the round, stood at 11-under through 67 holes: Jerry McGee. also through 67, was at 10 under when rain washed him and Speed off hole 14.

Associated Press Writers WASHINGTON (AP) - President Ford's delegates to the Republican National Convention are better educated and earn more than the delegates backing challenger Ronald Reagan. an Associated Press survey

Ford, the 28-year veteran of political wars, also has the backing of the great majority of the elected public officials who are delegates, outnumbering Reagan backers in that category better than 3 to 1.

The former California goverfrequent choice of self-employed businesspersons and doctors who are delegates, a computer analysis shows.

Sex. however, appears to make no difference in preference. The President and Reagan each get 31 per cent of their delegate support from women. That's also the percentage of women among all the delegates.

The AP survey covered all the 2.259 delegates to the convention that opens a week from Monday. However, three delegates have died since being selected.

The AP tally of delegates legally bound or publicly committed shows Ford with 1,103. Reagan with 1,034 and 122 un-

The survey also found: -Two-thirds of the delegates said they earn or come from households with incomes of more than $25,000 a year. Only about 11 per cent of all Americans earn that much. " -Only 3.1 per cent of the delegates are black; compared with census figures showing 11.5 per cent of Americans are black. Another 1.2 per cent of the delegates are Spanish-sur-

-The GOP delegates are far better educated than Americans generally, with 65 per cent of the delegates holding at least a college degree. Only 14 per cent of the public completed college or went on to postgraduate work.

-The most common occupation listed by the delegates was ownership of their own business. That was given by 422 delegates, followed by 323 homemakers, 274 lawyers or others involved in legal services, and 248 elected public offi-

-Half of the Republican delegates are between 45 and 64. while only 6.7 per cent are un-

Although 60 per cent of Reagan's delegates have household incomes of $25,000 or more. that's well below the comparable 73 per cent mark for the Ford backers.

Five per cent of Reagan delegates earn less than $10,000, compared to three per cent for Ford - reflecting the challenger's favored position among the 39 students who are delegates. More than 43 per cent of Ford delegates have attended post-graduate college courses. compared to 32 per cent of the Reagan group. Reagan delegates conversely hold about the same edge in numbers of delegates who attended but did not graduate from college.

The ranks of the three other educational categories - college graduates without further work, high school graduates only, and persons with less than a high school education -

are nearly identical for both

The differences in education and income appear essentially to reflect the contrasts in the support for Ford or Reagan in different occupational groups.

Of delegates who own their own businesses, 236 prefer the Californian, while only 151 back Ford. Homemakers favor Reagan by 4-to-3. In smaller categories. Reagan is a 5-to-2 choice among delegates in sales occupations and a 3-to-2 favorite of those in health services. Ford, however, is the choice of 175 elected public officials, compared to only 54 who favor Reagan. Appointed public officials and political party officials like Ford 2-to-1.

Delegates in the legal field favor the President about 5-to-

Among the nearly 100 retired or otherwise unemployed delegates, it's a dead heat between

The AP count is based on delegates' public committments or the requirements of state law to adhere to the primary

In some states, delegates were chosen without regard to the primary's results. A delegate might be bound by law to vote for Ford, but the delegate really favors Reagan.

In four states where this is the case - North Carolina, Nevada, Kentucky and Tennessee - the AP asked for the delegate's true preference. The AP preference count is based on legal commitments, but in these four states the demographic analysis is based on true preferences, not the legal committments.

With whites making up nearly 95 per cent of the entire GOP delegation, there is little room to measure significance in support by other racial or ethnic

Ford is the choice of 55 black delegates, versus only 12 blacks favoring Reagan, probably because the President is stronger than Reagan in the industrial states that are sending most of the black delegates. Another three black delegates are uncommitted.

Reagan is a 3-to-2 favorite among the even smaller Spanish-speaking delegations.

Although there are no differences between the candidates on sex,*there are some interesting differences among the Women hold a majority of the seats in three states -Massachusetts, Oklahoma and Wyoming. In North Dakota, the delegation is split evenly.

In terms of income, two of the small GOP delegations from non-states - Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands - are make more than $2t,000.

About 92 per cent of the District of Columbia delegation also ranks in the top income category, as does 90 per cent of the New Jersey delegation.

In education, Puerto Rico again leads, with six of the eight delegates, or 75 per cent, having postgraduate work or degrees. The District of Columbia is next with 71 per cent at that level. About 63 per cent of Hawaii's 19 delegates continued their education beyond a college degree. The 17-member delegation from the nation's capital, whose population is more than 75 per cent black, had the highest percentage of black delegates, 43 per cent.

Kelley to answer questions on FBI

WASHINGTON (AP) - FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley is going public this week in his first attempt to answer questions about two major investigations of alleged wrongdoing within the bureau before and during his administration:

An FBI spokesman said the director "thought it was the proper time" to face questioning about Justice Department investigations of FBI burglaries during the past five years and alleged financial wrongdoing and other abuses of power by present and former bureau offi-

Those investigations began in March and April, and Kelley has not been available for questioning since then. His last Washington news conference was more than a year ago.

Kelley will be questioned Sunday on the CBS television program, "Face the Nation," and he is considering holding a news conference later in the Kelley finds himself in charge of an agency which was under attack before he took over three years ago. But the criticism has mounted along with more and more disclosures of improper and possibly illegal FBI conduct.

Until this spring, the disclosures involved misconduct during the decades of J. Edgar Hoover's reign over the FBI. Those activities, primarily the harassment of political militants, were widely condemned and Kelley issued a public

The latest investigations may be more devastating for the FBI because they hold the first real potential for criminal indictments against current and former FBI personnel.

Department prosecutors expect to present evidence in the burglary probe to a federal grand jury in New York later this month, knowledgeable sources say.

The probe of financial wrongdoing and abuses of power already has forced Kelley to fire the bureau's second-ranking official, Nicholas P. Callhan. An assistant director. Andrew Decker, has retained a private attorney to represent nim in the case.

Department officials involved in the investigations say they have no doubt about Kelley's integrity and his ability to root out improprieties.

Critics in Congress and elsewhere have not questioned his integrity, though some have criticized his unwillingness to rid the bureau of the old-line officials left over from Hoover's

Kelley "feels the criticism can be handled but it will take some time," said an FBI official familiar with his thinking. "He does not feel beleaguered. But yet, he is concerned about morale in the bureau. He feels it may have slipped but it can be built up again.

Each wave of criticism sets off speculation that Kelley may resign, but the FBI source said the director has no thoughts of leaving

Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi, who has pushed the department investigations and is monitoring them closely, wants Kelley to stay, said an official close to

Carrillo trial denied

District Court Judge Joe B. Evins Saturday denied a defense motion for a new trial for former District Court Judge O.P. Carrillo of Duval County on his recent felony theft conviction

Defense lawyers for the former judge claimed in their motion that there were three acts of jury misconduct and that the trial judge committed 22 material errors in allowing testimony to be entered.

After about four hours of testimony and arguments, Judge Evins denied the motion and then formally sentenced Carrillo to four years in prison.

After Defense lawver Richard 'Racehorse" Haynes of Houston announced he would appeal the case to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals,

The main defense claim in their attempt to gain a new trial was that the jury discussed in their deliberations the fact that Carillo did not take the witness stand to testify.

Ford's KC hotel suite lavish

Associated Press Writer KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - When things on the convention floor get tense, both contenders for the Republican nomination for president will be able to take some small comfort in their temporary luxury accommodations here.

President Gerald Ford and his White House and campaign staffs will command the top five floors of the 3-year-old Crown Center Hotel. The hotel is part of a $350-million urban renovation project on the edge of the downtown area.

Accommodations for the chief executive in the Presidential Suite include 3,000 square feet of living space, roughly double the area of an average threebedroom house. Multiple balconies offer a variety of views of Kansas City.

The decor is contemporary and plush. Browns and beiges abound. Sand-tone carpeting is used throughout the expansive suite. Velvet sand-tone drapes, linen wall coverings and use of natural fibers emphasize the earth tones.

The dual living room features a fireplace room, where the center of attention is the Italian travertine marble fireplace. Around the corner is the game room section, which features an entertainment center containing an oversize color television and a stereoradio system. The wet bar is also located in the living

The suite boasts two bedrooms and three baths, in addition to a fully equipped kitchen, to be stocked for snacking in the event of long, late-night convention

A hotel spokesman said little renovation was done to prepare the $325 per night suite for Ford and his family. But some changes were required on the suite down the hall, the Royal Suite, which will be used as the presidential office for about a week during the convention. Desks and some of the presidential trappings, to make it more like the executive office, have been brought in.

Meanwhile, challenger Roald Reagan, former California governor, will definitely not be roughing it. His $200 per night five-room Presidential Suite at the Alameda Plaza Hotel offers such amenities as six balconies, a large walk-in wet bar off the master bedroom and a full-size kitchen. For entertainment, if time permits, there is a baby grand piano in the living room, although a hotel spokesman admitted he doesn't know if any of the Reagans have the skills required for its use.

But Pat Greene, hotel resident manager, knows the makings of the lavish suite well since he did a large share of the decorating.
