

Watergate prosecutor clears Ford

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford today was cleared by Special Watergate Prosecutor Charles Ruff of an allegation that he converted campaign funds to his personal use while a Michigan congressman.

The matter has now been closed, and counsel for the President has been so advised, Ruff said in a two-page statement issued to reporters.

Ford had no immediate comment, but the White House said the President would conduct a televised news conference at 7:30 p.m. EDT to make a statement on the matter and answer questions about that and other issues.

Ruff said FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley on July 13 alerted the Justice Department to "information concerning alleged misuse of political contributions" by Ford during the period from 1964 to early 1974.

That information "concerned a previously unreported allegation that political contributions from certain named unions had been transmitted to political committees in Kent County, Mich., with the understanding that they would be passed on to Mr. Ford for his personal use," the statement said.

Ruff identified the source on the allegation only as "an individual who had recently become aware of the underlying information."

He said the individual took the allegation to an FBI agent.

Ruff described the investigation conducted by his office and the FBI and said, "The evidence developed during this investigation was not corroborated of the allegation on which it was predicated."

He continued, "Nor did evidence disclosed during the inquiry into that allegation give reason to believe that any other violations of law had occurred."

He also said the individual who made the allegation had "no apparent motive... to fabricate."

The statement said Ruff went into the case at the request of Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi.

The special prosecution force and the FBI "examined various public documents reflecting contributions made by the unions as well as those received by Mr. Ford or committees acting on his behalf."

It had been reported previously that the investigation focused on contributions from the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association and the Seafarers International Union.

In Grand Rapids, Mich., Robert Eleved, Republican chairman of Ford's old congressional district, said, "I'm so delighted with that," when informed that the investigation had been closed.

Eleved said he learned about the move from Republican attorney Stephen Brandsdorfer, who was in Washington talking with Ruff about the investigation.

Still to be answered, however, was the separate request from three House Democrats for the special prosecutor to look into whether Ford may have played a role in the early stages of the Watergate cover-up, an issue raised by former White House counsel John W. Dean III. The congressmen want Ruff to review several tape recordings of conversations between then-President Richard M. Nixon and Ford during those early months of the scandal.

Ruff reportedly told the House members he would make his decision on whether to listen to those tapes before the week is out.

In the congressional campaign probe, attorneys and FBI agents questioned a number of persons, and FBI agents examined records of the unions' political units and the Michigan

Ruff on Sept. 30 asked Ford's attorney for "certain information relating to the President's personal finances," the statement said.

"Counsel for the President complied with this request and, also at the special prosecutor's request, authorized the Internal Revenue Service to make available the work product of its 1973 audit of President Ford's income tax returns for the years 1967-1972," the statement said.

Good morning, sunshine

Exercises and reality orientation are one way to begin the day at Pampa Nursing Center. Volunteer Reed Echols begins the sessions each morning at 9:30 for stretches, walks, visits and songs. "One morning 35 of the more than 50 residents were there," she reported. Mrs. Echols, in slacks and smock, is one of the volunteers trying to re-organize a group to share its time with nursing center residents. They get good care, Mrs. Echols believes, "but many need more individual attention."

Four named to hospital

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff
Four new hospital board members were appointed today by the Gray County Commissioners Court to fill the unexpired terms of the four men whose resignations were accepted this week.

The four new appointees include R.W. "Bob" Sidwell and Joel A. Plunk, both of Pampa; John Haynes of McLean and Royce Gee of Lefors. The new board members will meet with the two remaining members at 5 p.m. today.

Resignations of Dr. R.M. Bellamy and Don Ritter, whose terms would have expired Dec. 31, 1976, were accepted by the court this morning. Fred Neslage, board chairman, whose term would have expired at the same time, resigned Tuesday.

Ed Patman of McLean was appointed early this year. His term would have expired Dec. 31, 1977.

Following a lengthy executive session with the new board members, the commissioners made the appointments in open session. Gray County Judge Don Cain administered the oath of office, effective this morning.

Sidwell will replace Neslage. Haynes succeeds Patman. Plunk was appointed as Dr. Bellamy's successor, and Gee will succeed Ritter.

Remaining members of the board are Susie Wilkinson and Bill Tidwell, who were appointed last December to serve until Dec. 31, 1977.

Sidwell, now retired, is the former president of Beacon Supply. Plunk is a local Certified Public Accountant. Haynes, a native of McLean, is a farmer and rancher. Gee, who was not present for the swearing in ceremonies, is production foreman for Producers Inc.

Following the ceremonies, announcement was made by a board member that the new board will meet at 5 p.m. today at the hospital.

The Gray County Commissioners Court will meet again at 10 a.m. on Nov. 1.

Wheat loan rate hiked

Acting Agriculture Secretary John A. Knebel denies that it was "in response to Jimmy Carter's cries," but the Ford administration Wednesday increased production loan rates for wheat and feed grains.

The loan rate for wheat was increased 50 per cent from $1.50 to $2.25, while the rate for corn was increased 20 per cent from $1.25 to $1.50. The rate for soybeans remained at $2.50 a bushel.

Knebel, in making the announcement, said the rates would apply immediately to 1976 crops as well as next year's crops.

Production loans are used, with the crop as security, to finance planting and other production expenses or at the end of a harvest to allow farmers to hold their crops until they can get a better market price.

"Just the rumors that the Secretary of Agriculture would increase the production loan rates for wheat and grains sent wheat prices up over 10 cents a bushel here yesterday," reported Bill Nelson, executive vice president of the Texas Wheat Producers Association in Amarillo.

He said the move indicates that the agriculture department is "really wanting farmers to sell their stored wheat, corn and sorghum crops at this time."

In Wichita Falls, Congressman Jack Hightower, D-Vernon, lauded the move. "It's wonderful news," he said, "and it represents a small step in the right direction."

He added that he is glad President Ford has recognized the critical economic dilemma confronting the nation's wheat farmers.

Hightower was among many who urged the increase. In a letter Sept. 8 and a telegram Sept. 30, he asked the President to raise the loan level to at least $2.50 a bushel, the level recommended in the emergency farm bill passed last year by the Congress and vetoed by the President.

"The new loan rate is less than what it takes to produce a bushel of wheat even on dry land acreage but it will give some farmers an opportunity to obtain interim financing without having to sell their wheat at today's depressed prices," he said.

Hightower reported that for the past several weeks the wheat market had hovered at around $2.50 a bushel.

In Hightower's letter to the President, which was signed by 17 other congressmen, he pointed out that Ford had said in his veto message that he would direct the secretary-of agriculture to make adjustments in the price support loan rates if price deterioration required action on his part.

When three weeks had passed with no action from the White House, Hightower sent the telegram which was signed by both Texas senators and 27 congressmen including eight Republicans from wheat producing states.

Less than a week later, Hightower's opponent, Bob Price, condemned Hightower for sending the telegram branding it a political act.

Price was part of a group of wheat growers meeting with Ford in Lawton, Okla., where he urged the President to raise the loan level to $2.50.

"It is personally gratifying to me to note that everyone has now recognized that the desperate situation affecting wheat producers is an economic and not a political problem," he said.

Ford paid more taxes

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford paid a larger share of his income in taxes than did Jimmy Carter last year because Carter was able to take advantage of a tax benefit tied to improvements in his peanut operations.

A comparison of the financial information provided by the two presidential candidates showed that Ford reported gross income of $251,991 last year and Carter reported gross income of $136,139.

Ford paid total federal taxes of $94,569 in 1975, which was 38 per cent of his gross income. Carter paid taxes of $17,484, equal to 13 per cent of his gross income.

Carter was able to take advantage of a business investment tax credit to substantially reduce his taxes. He also took advantage of income-averaging features of the tax code to further reduce his taxes.

Carter has made public his tax returns from the last five years. Ford has not revealed his tax returns but has released a statement of his finances, including the amounts of tax he paid for the past 10 years.

The bulk of Carter's 1975 income, $119,244, was from his peanut-seed business. "Carter's Warehouse," he also reported $3,293 in income from his book, "Why Not The Best?"

Most of Ford's income, $200,000, was from his salary as president. He also got $50,000 from the presidential expense account.

Carter was able to reduce his taxes by claiming an investment tax credit of $41,702, equal to about 10 per cent of the $410,646 he spent for equipment for his peanut business.

While Carter has pledged to eliminate many tax shelters if elected, he says he probably would retain the investment tax credit as an incentive for business to invest.

Congress recently raised the investment tax credit from 7 per cent to 10 per cent after Ford recommended a boost. Thus, Ford indirectly contributed to a lower tax bill for Carter.

Carter also reduced his tax obligation by averaging his income over a five-year period. Since his taxable income fluctuated from a low of $50,195 in 1972 to last year's high, it was to his advantage to do so.

Without the income averaging and investment tax credit, Carter had a potential tax of $58,981. At his level, the tax is $57,580 for the first $120,000 of taxable income, plus 64 per cent of anything above that up to $140,000.

Ford's $200,000-plus income potentially put him in the highest tax bracket, where incomes over $200,000 are taxed at 70 per cent if they are derived from unearned income such as interest. But since most of his income was earned, the tax he paid was substantially less.

Three Americans win Nobels

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Two American medical researchers and an American economist were named today as winners of 1976 Nobel Prizes in medicine and economics.

The Swedish Royal Academy of Science awarded the economics prize to Milton Friedman, dean of American conservative economists. The 64-year-old native of Brooklyn also writes a weekly column for Newsweek magazine.

The Royal Caroline Institute announced that the medicine prize was awarded to Prof. Baruch S. Blumberg of the University of Pennsylvania Medical School and Prof. D. Carleton Gajdusek of the National Institute for Neurological Diseases at Bethesda, Md., "for their discoveries concerning new mechanisms for the origin and dissemination of infectious diseases."

The economics prize, a latecomer to the Nobel awards, was established by the Swedish Central Bank in 1968 to mark its 200th anniversary, and Americans have now won or shared in six of the eight awards.

The other five Nobel Prizes — in medicine, physics, chemistry, literature and peace — were established by the will of Alfred Nobel, the Swedish inventor of dynamite, and have been given since 1901 from the income from a $9 million fund he established.

All the prizes this year carry a cash award of 681,000 Swedish kronor, or $160,000 at the current rate of exchange.

Friedman was honored "for his achievements in the fields of consumption analysis, monetary history and theory and for his demonstration of the complexity of stabilization policy," the Swedish Royal Academy of Science said.

Sources at the Royal Academy said the award to Friedman followed an unprecedented and sometimes heated debate, centered primarily over his political activity as adviser to conservative politicians and his journalism. Some academy members also reportedly felt his economic judgments were insufficiently scientific.

Deliberations of the academy are kept secret.

Friedman has declined to serve officially in Washington, but his influence was felt under the Nixon administration and during the presidential candidacy of Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz.

Friedman is perhaps the foremost American exponent of the monetarist school of economics, which maintains that the economic cycle is determined more by money supply and interest rates than by fiscal policy. His philosophy is generally associated with a "laissez-faire" or hands-off policy in regard to business and trade.

Friedman believes that interest rates within countries and the value of world currencies internationally should be free to seek their own levels. On the international monetary scene, Friedman has seen his view become a reality as major trading nations have permitted their currencies to "float."

Blumberg and Gajdusek are both native New Yorkers. Blumberg was born in New York City in 1925 and Gajdusek in Yonkers in 1923. The two professors will share the $160,000 prize equally.

Both doctors did their prize-winning research while with the National Institutes of Health at Bethesda, according to NIH director Dr. Donald Fredrickson.

Blumberg, a graduate of Columbia University, has been professor of medical genetics at the Institute for Cancer Research of the University of Pennsylvania since 1970. He is married and the father of four.

The Royal Caroline Institute said Blumberg was honored in part for his discovery of a protein related to a virus that causes hepatitis. The discovery led to a test that is now widely used to detect the presence of hepatitis of potential blood donors.

Harvard graduate Gajdusek, a pediatrician and virologist with a wide-ranging research career, has been professor at the Bethesda institute since 1958, specializing in protein physical chemistry, child behavior, the nervous system and study of primitive cultures. His main field in recent years has been autoimmune and neurological degenerative disease.

Gajdusek was "truly a man for all seasons," said his supervisor at Bethesda, Dr. Donald Tower.

He said Gajdusek's work began when his interest in anthropology took him to New Guinea to study the primitive, cannibalistic Fore tribe.

The Fore tribe suffered from a disease peculiar to it called "kuru," a mental disorder that plagued generation after generation.

Gajdusek began to suspect that the disease was passed on when the cannibals ate the brains of their dead. He proved it by giving the disease to chimpanzees by injecting them with human brain material from dead tribesmen.

Gajdusek discovered that the cause of the disease was a class of "slow virus" which lay dormant for long periods of time before causing progressive degeneration of the brain and nervous system. His first step was to persuade the Fore tribe to give up cannibalism, and the practice has been almost eliminated, Tower said.

His discovery has opened up new avenues of research. The immediate applications lie in the control and prevention of several degenerative disorders,

Absentees indicate record voter turnout

Gray County in all probability will record the largest voter turnout in history if the first day of absentee voting is any indication, according to Wanda Carter, county clerk.

Seventeen persons voted Wednesday in person, and 184 ballots were mailed.

"That's a bunch," Mrs. Carter emphasized.

such as Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease, caused by the slow viruses.

But in the long run, Tower said, the most important application may be in the discovery of ways to prevent and combat senility, which may be related to diseases like kuru.

The Royal Caroline Institute said: "Blumberg's and Gajdusek's contributions have a practical medical importance for prevention of disease. Of further importance is the demonstration that infectious agents may remain in an active form without any presence of overt disease."

Absentees indicate record voter turnout

The absentee balloting will continue through Oct. 29.

The election will be Nov. 2 when voters decide who will be president of the United States for the next four years — incumbent Gerald Ford, or Democratic hopeful Jimmy Carter.

An estimated 12,000 voters are eligible to vote in the 1976 general election here.

Hooked on jelly beans? help is near at hand

Is some member of your family on a licorice or black jelly bean kick? Never fear. Big Brother is out to protect all those hooked on sweets or other foods which are colored with Carbon Black. Just in time we might say since there has come to our attention a three generation case in point.

Grandmother, mother and son, all had a preference for licorice among all candies. And if a jar of jelly beans was minus any black ones, you could bet that one of those three people had been there first.

At least two of the three family members have paid for their ingestion of so much of the coloring now determined to be a hazard by our betters. The grandmother died at the age of 95 after a short illness and the mother also died at 96. The mother had never been in a hospital as a patient until a week before she died.

How about the son? Well, he is working and nearing his 72nd birthday and still hooked on the candy with the dangerous coloring. Now of course this recital has no bearing on a scientific approach to evaluating anything. But it would be our guess that there may be millions who, through experience, will relate to these people.

From the past batting average of the federal viewers - with alarm we are not afraid to make an educated guess that their findings may not be any more exact than the above.

Few thoughtful scientists have chosen to speak out amid the emotional turmoil engendered by the food and environmental scares. One has just lately published a book in which he demolishes some of the "Ecological Fantasies." Cy Adler, oceanographer, engineering consultant and former teacher of physics is the author of the book.

Adler says that messengers of ecological doom often raise alarms about dangers almost as remote as watermelons falling from airplanes being a threat to life. He says that he would be the last to claim that pollution is not a problem. But he maintains that much of human progress is marked by acceptance of some undesirable consequences in exchange for tremendous advances.

"The record shows," Adler says, "that individual wellbeing and life expectancy have improved even as industrial pollution has mushroomed. I'm not arguing that pollution is good for people, but rather that it is relatively a minor nuisance compared with other causes of death and unhappiness, such as war, cigarettes smoking and alcoholism."

It is good to see that there are some knowledgeable people who will speak out against radical controllers and their promulgators of "Ecological Fantasies."

It is good to see that there are some knowledgeable people who will speak out against radical controllers and their promulgators of "Ecological Fantasies."

It is high time to put some of the promoted myths into proper perspective. Perhaps now that the ice is broken more of our thoughtful scientists will speak out loud and clear. Enough damage has been done to industry and its workers.

Politics and Policy Decisions are mixed unwisely

By CLARK MOLLENHOFF
WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Ford Administration has mixed presidential politics and defense contract policy decisions in an unwisely manner that makes several members of President Ford's team subject to Democratic criticism for "conflicts of interest."

Perhaps the clearest point of vulnerability was the naming of Robert Moot, treasurer of President Ford's campaign committee, as a member of a special Defense Department advisory committee to make recommendations for new policies on defense profits.

To the casual observer as well as to Representative Charles H. Wilson (Dem., Cal.), a member of the House Armed Services Committee, the appointment seemed an effort at "exploitation of Pentagon processes for political gain."

The California Democrat accused the Ford Administration of having a "buddy system" between the political campaign and the Pentagon that resulted in contract policies that would be favorable to the big defense contractors.

Wilson has charged that new policies recommended by the "Profit 76" committee could "increase the profits of shipbuilders and missile manufacturers by over $200 million yearly."

The outspoken Democrat also hurled a charge of "a definite conflict of interest" at Deputy Defense Secretary William P. Clements, Jr. — the man who has accepted responsibility for selecting Moot.

Wilson's charge against Clements involves his ownership of stock in Sedco, an international oil drilling firm, and Sedco Maritime, its affiliate, at the same time he is taking part in oil decisions for the Defense Department.

Wilson in a recent speech claimed that Clements had been permitted to retain over $120 million in stock in Sedco by the then Defense secretary, James Schlesinger, who said Clements would remove himself from any oil decisions "to avoid even the appearance of a possible conflict."

However, Wilson declared that Clements is involved, at least indirectly, in oil decisions and other decisions that constitute a "conflict of interest."

Wilson also noted Clements' close ties to the Shah of Iran and Iranian business interests, and said that only a detailed investigation of Clements' financial interests and his decisions on Iranian arms and oil matters could determine the full seriousness of the "conflicts."

Clements rejects the claim of "conflicts" in his role on oil and arms matters, but through a Defense spokesman acknowledges he "might have been in error" in choosing Moot for the advisory committee.

Moot, commenting on his own role, says that "in fact there is no conflict, although I can see how the question might be raised."

"If I were an active fund raiser for the Ford committee, I can see that there might be a seeming conflict of interest," Moot told this reporter. He said the actual fund raising was handled by former Deputy Secretary of Defense David Packard, and that he, as treasurer, was "in charge of control and audit functions internally."

The active fund raising for presidential candidates took place in connection with the primary campaigns to cover pre-convention spending. Moot said, adding that this would mean that officials of defense industries could only contribute directly to either Ford or Carter up to the conventions.

In the period since the conventions, committees for both Ford and Carter received $22 million and are barred from accepting funds from defense industry officials or any other source, Moot explains.

Moot notes that this public financing of presidential campaigns changes the whole concept of campaign committee duties to more routine record keeping, and actually bars the enthusiastic booster fund raising associated with campaign committee officials in the past.

While he argues there can be no conflict of interest in his role in the fall election campaign, he concedes that a political treasurer's role in the pre-convention is often associated with trying to raise money from people with interests in government business.

A senior House Armed Services Committee member, usually favorably inclined toward the Ford Administration, declared that "it was damned foolishness to have named Bob Moot" to the Defense advisory committee.

Moot said that when Clements selected him for the position on the special advisory committee "I never gave the possibility of conflicts a second thought." He went on the advisory committee in June, and he said that all of the work of the committee was completed "in a couple of days in July."

Moot said he did not believe President Ford was even aware that Clements had named him to the special committee. He said he assumed that Clements made the decision because of Moot's extensive service in the Defense Department. He was the first comptroller of the Defense Supply Agency and later was administrator for the Small Business Administration, and has won numerous civilian service awards.

The veteran government accounting expert disagreed sharply with Wilson's judgment that the advisory committee recommendations amount to "a giveaway" to the shipbuilders and missile makers. He said "our recommendations" are an effort to solve defense contract controversies, adding that the defense industry has "fought against the principles of 'costing' in our report."

However, Air Force Cost Analyst A. Ernest Fitzgerald says that the recommendations by Moot's committee "would put an incentive on building up the costs in the first production contracts" because this could become the base for all later purchases.

Fitzgerald, who has had differences with Moot in the past, declared that the Air Force has raised opposition to using a base of actual costs because "it provides a loophole under which the costs of bribes and mismanagement cranked into the first year become a burden on the taxpayer for the duration of the contract."

The Air Force is insisting on a modification of the formula to a "should cost" figure, that would provide for elimination of excessive costs.

It was Moot who warned Fitzgerald against testifying fully and completely to a congressional committee several years ago on the nearly $2 billion in cost overruns on Lockheed's C-5A jet transport in 1968.

Moot acknowledged that he had warned Fitzgerald but said he "couldn't remember" whether, as Fitzgerald's superior in the Air Force, he said "there would be blood on the floor" if Fitzgerald told the committee the truth. Fitzgerald went ahead and testified.

Moot was one of Fitzgerald's Air Force superiors who subsequently took part in efforts to fire him, and to picture the firing as a reduction in force. It took Fitzgerald five years to fight that firing and be reinstated.

Barbs

By PHIL PASTORET
Our slightly preserved neighbor is so advance he's way beyond the metric system — he counts only in fifths.

One of the greatest ways to clean up the ecology would be to ban distribution of corner-handout throwaway flyers.

The witching hour: When the secretaries get together to talk over the boss.

Obscenities: omit or not to omit?

WASHINGTON (NEA) — What did Earl Butz say? Although he was forced to resign his cabinet position for making a racial remark, the remark itself has not been printed nor repeated in the media.

There have been censored versions of the comment, written in a code which asks the public to fill in the blanks, but most Americans still do not know precisely what forced the Agriculture secretary from office.

Similarly, many Americans are still confused about Jimmy Carter's remarks to Playboy magazine. News accounts say he talked bluntly, using earthy language, including a word meaning intercourse, but editorial tradition prevented much of the media from being entirely specific.

And then there was the affaire Rockefeller. Last month the vice president raised his middle finger in salute to a rowdy clutch of hecklers, and the public, forever protected against this kind of realism, was told the maneuver was a "gesture," a "dirty gesture," or in one notable case, a "dirty Italian gesture linked to fornication."

Don't look for real truth here, either. This column is tied to the same hoary ethic as the rest of the popular print industry: Everything is fit to print save dirty words. One breaks the rule at his peril, to be sure; last year an editor in Dayton, Ohio, published a grand jury transcript which included a four-letter word meaning coitus, and the outcry was so great he quickly resigned.

At that, the situation is far better than it used to be in the business. For instance it was not until red-baiter Joe McCarthy began to release his arrows that the word "homosexual" was allowed in the daily prints. And the word "rape" was kept out even longer, editors using "violate" or sometimes "ravage" to describe such crimes. "Sodomy," as I understand it, is still a no-no for many police reporters.

The logic behind all this has been fueled by benevolence. Also economics. The popular media reports to a nonselective audience: unlike Hustler, which is bought by customers for one reason, newspapers and the electronic media are purchased for another, and never the twain shall meet. When the content of a "family newspaper" falls below an imaginary line, e.g. four-letter words, subscriptions can be lost.

And so in cases where the vice president gives the bird to the rowdies, or a cabinet secretary says black people enjoy defecating under preheated conditions, the public gets the word without the words. When an 18-year-old lad is shot in the eye in Vietnam, we say it plain, but we print Richard Nixon's transcripts with deleted obscenities.

It is of course not as if the newspaper-television industry are otherwise paragons of morality. Some kind of advance sex education can be acquired from the papers these days simply by reading the ads for the X- and R-rated movies: "Hot and Horny," or "She went all the way but he wanted more." As for television, the same networks that will not reveal Jimmy Carter's language regularly project explicit acts of murder and sadism into the homes of eager viewers.

Hence there is an appalling sort of hypocrisy here. In Washington, as example, the news-reading public has recently been treated to a grisly photograph of three assassins being hanged in Syria, a front-page feature describing the terror of a young prison inmate waiting in his bed for a homosexual assault, and advertisement photographs of a go-go dancer who is reported to have the largest mammary glands in America. And yet what did Earl Butz say? That has been censored.

Benevolence or no, censorship in any name is risky. What Butz said was wrong, but not so terrible as the imagination may perceive. One recalls that the response to the Nixon transcript deletions was ignorantly exaggerated that it became sport to guess what words were omitted, that in fact the complete transcripts showed the language to be generally mild and so the ex-President had been done a disservice.

What is obscenity anyway? As Samuel Butler wrote, "Cannibalism is moral in cannibal country." Surely starvation and war and disease are obscene. One might wish for a time when the media would run out of filth to reflect; until then none of it should fairly be expurgated.

As a student in Cambridge University, Lord Byron, the famed poet, was not allowed to keep a dog—so he kept a bear instead!

The word "bride" is derived from an ancient Teutonic word meaning "to cook."

St. Augustine, Florida, which was founded in 1565, is the oldest city in the United States.

IT'S POSSIBLE!
Get close to God

By Robert Schuller

While flying home from a speaking engagement, a stewardess handed me a beautifully engraved card from the vice-president of a large corporation who was on board the plane. "He'd like to meet you," she said.

"How do I get close to God?" he asked when he joined me later.

"Have you ever asked Him to come into your life?" I questioned.

He replied, "That sounds too simple, I'm sorry I can't buy that!"

I said, "Well, the basics of beautiful living are all so simple. The sunlight on the path, a child's soft hand in yours, fragrant flowers blooming; it is all so simple! When God does something, He doesn't make it complicated. Let's pray about it," I suggested.

"Right here!" he questioned.

"Why not?" I said.

We held hands and prayed. When I finished, this rugged, intelligent executive was crying with happy tears rolling down his face, as he said, "It's real! It's real!"

God can come into your heart too, if you dare to believe in Him.

Communist found in Carter, Ford camps

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANGELO, Tex. (AP) — A man who has worked for the Communist party should not be working for either the Republicans or the Democrats, says Texas Republican Chairman Ray Hutchison.

Hutchison said Tuesday he did not want Democrat Jimmy Carter as president because Lawrence Klein, Carter's chief economic adviser, was once a Communist.

Later in the day Hutchison learned that Klein, an economics professor at the University of Pennsylvania, had done consulting work for the Ford administration on an economic forecasting computer model at Penn.

On hearing of Klein's administration involvement, Hutchison said, "I would have to ask the Ford administration first to find out what he had done." He added that Klein should not be working for either party.

Hutchison's original remarks about Klein were during a question and answer session with students at Abilene Christian University in West Central Texas.

In talking with the students, Hutchison said, "I am not a right wing biter... but I don't want a man as president whose chief economic adviser is openly a former member of the Communist party of this country and I don't think the people want it either. Lawrence Klein is such a person. I do not want anyone in that position (economic adviser) who has so much as considered joining the Communist party."

Klein, reached in New York City at a meeting, said he was a member of the Communist party for about a year in 1946, that he is not now a member, that his membership had been reported in news stories as long as two years ago and that he plans to remain at Penn rather than joining a Carter administration if Carter wins Nov. 2.

Klein said twice in the last two years he has done consulting work for the Ford administration on an economic forecasting computer model at the Wharton School called Project Link.

In Atlanta, Carter staffers said they would have no comment on Hutchison's remarks.

Hutchison later said here in an interview. "The people of Texas are not only interested in the candidates, but also in the people around the candidates. I think it is reasonable to make reasonable inquiries about people who affect the future of this nation."

He added the interest in former Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz following his controversial remarks about blacks was "legitimate," but so was interest in others.

He then referred to Klein and said, "We find that in his record and his background there is an influence potentially that in my opinion ought not to be a part of the government of this country. And that is that he is a former member of the Communist Party of the United States. I don't know if he is now or not. I assume, surely, that he is not."

"However, that's not the point. The point is, is it necessary really for this country to depend for its economic well-being upon advice of people who even have the tendency of the history or the propensity to pledge allegiance to the Communist party?"

Hutchison said his information came from publications in which Klein admitted he once was a member of the Communist party.

Klein said, "For a short period of time I was a member of the Communist party — a year maybe."

Klein said, "For a short period of time I was a member of the Communist party — a year maybe. That was 30 years ago — 1946. I was young, out of grad school and it was a question of my working on various economic systems."

HOUSTON (AP) — Driver Robert Johnson delivered a load of trash to the city dump today, unloaded and quickly called to inform police there was a man amid the squeezed up debris.

The passenger identified himself as Thomas Smith, 46, and told officers he lives at a small downtown hotel. Hospital attendants said he escaped serious injury and was in satisfactory condition.

FBI investigates Medders

DALLAS (AP) — The FBI says it is investigating the activities of Margaret Medders, who parlayed a hint of a fortune into a millionaire's existence in Dallas and Memphis in the 1960s.

And California officials say Mrs. Medders, 58, will be arraigned Friday in Los Angeles on charges of illegally using a credit card.

Los Angeles authorities said Mrs. Medders was arrested at the airport there Sept. 13 when she and a man identified as Sol Fielding tried to buy airplane tickets using a credit card.

The two were released on bail after being charged in municipal court in Los Angeles. Their whereabouts were not known Tuesday.

Ted Gunderson, head of the Dallas FBI office, said the Federal Bureau of Investigation is looking into Mrs. Medders' activities "to see if there are federal violations."

Carroll Sinclair, whose credit card officials say Mrs. Medders was attempting to use at the time of her arrest, said Tuesday he has not seen or heard from Mrs. Medders since she and Fielding were in his office last December.

That was about a month after Mrs. Medders' husband Ernest died, Sinclair said.

"She came to me saying she wanted me to handle the sale of some silver and antiques that were part of her husband's estate," Sinclair said. "She said it was all tied up in probate court, but she gave me an inventory."

He added he did not think it strange at the time that, while accompanied by a movie producer, Mrs. Medders asked him for an advance on the antiques transaction.

"I gave them $750," Sinclair said, "and that was the last time I talked to them until I realized later that my credit card was stolen and I got a call from the Los Angeles airport saying they had my credit card."

Meanwhile, Julian Abio, general manager of the Fairmont Hotel in Dallas, said that Mrs. Medders owes the hotel $5,000 to $7,000. He said she stayed at the Fairmont for about five to six months this year. Some of what she owes is for telephone calls, he said.

For six years in the 1960s the Medders blew $3 million of other people's money. Margaret was a former nurse and Ernest was a $65-a-week mechanic's helper when they used reports that they could be heirs to the Spindletop oil fortune to move them into a life of glamour among Texas' high society.

Bolivia mourns crash victims

SANTA CRUZ, Bolivia (AP) — Bolivia began three days of national mourning today for more than 100 of its people killed when a chartered American cargo jet plowed through a street crowd and into a group of young soccer players at practice.

The three American crewmen of the Boeing 707 were also killed.

At least 100 Bolivians were hospitalized, a government spokesman said, "and there are injured who are hovering between life and death."

He said at least half the victims were children.

The spokesman reported 84 bodies, including those of the Americans, had been identified. Officials said it was the worst aviation disaster in Bolivia's history. President Hugo Banzer flew to Santa Cruz, 350 miles southeast of La Paz, ordered three days of national mourning and said he would lead the funeral procession Thursday morning.

The four-engine jet was owned by Jet Power Inc. of Miami and was chartered to a Bolivian firm, Lloyd Aerero Boliviano. After delivering oil well machinery and other cargo from Houston, it had just taken off empty at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday from the airport on the edge of the city when it faltered.

"People at the scene said they heard an explosion before it fell and saw fire in one of the motors on the left wing," a Bolivian air force officer told reporters. The plane clipped the tops of several big trees, demolished a corner of the Julio Gutierrez primary school, mowed down a line of people buying kerosene from a street vendor on Avenida de Ejercito, and crashed into a practice field outside the municipal soccer stadium where a number of people were watching two boys' teams scrimmaging.

The pupils at the school were home for lunch, but the caretaker, his wife and three children were in the building and were killed, an air force official said.

Another official said about 50 people were killed in the kerosene line, about 40 were killed on the soccer field, and eight boys were suffocated in a locker room of the stadium by smoke from the burning plane.

Debris and bodies were strewn across the soccer field.

"All those people were destroyed, burned, mutilated," a witness said. "It was like a scene from Dante. There were screams from the burned people."

Jet Power Inc. said the three crewmen were Capt. Charles Baldwin, a former airline pilot; first officer Lee Marsh; and flight engineer Leslie Bennett. All were from the Miami area.

An air force officer said the plane's instruments indicated that one of the engines on the left wing failed. The "black box" flight recorder was recovered and turned over to investigators.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
Light to moderate showers dotted far West Texas today.
Fog in coastal areas was the nearest thing to moisture anywhere else in the state. Other sections had clear weather and temperatures remained mild.
Rain fell from around Marfa, Van Horn and Fort Stockton northward through the Davis Mountains to the vicinity of the Carlsbad Caverns in New Mexico.

Scattered showers and possibly a few thunderstorms were forecast in West and extreme South Texas. Little change was predicted elsewhere across the state.
Early morning temperatures ranged from 45 degrees at Dalhart in the Panhandle up to 69 at Corpus Christi on the coast. Wednesday's high marks were topped by 88 at Presidio in the Big Bend of West Texas.

National weather

By The Associated Press
A strong cold front barreled into the Northwest today, bringing high winds, falling temperatures, snow and an end to Indian summer for the northern Rockies and adjacent Plains.
Winds gusted to 56 miles per hour at Livingston, Mont., late Wednesday. Gusts to 45 m.p.h. swept Cut Bank, Mont., driving the temperature from 62 to 37 in two hours.
Showers, with snow at higher elevations, were forecast for the northern Rockies and northwestern Plains with temperatures sliding into the 20s and 30s by nightfall.
Record mid-October mildness had warmed the same regions earlier this week. A 75-degree reading Wednesday at Kalispell, Mont., was the highest ever for so late in the season there.
Mild and sunny weather hung on, however, in much of the country from the central Plains to the Eastern Seaboard.

Showers lingered in New England following a flurry of gusty thunderstorms that ranged from the eastern Great Lakes to Maine late Wednesday. Winds up to 62 m.p.h. shook Elmira, N.Y., and gusts to 58 m.p.h. jolted Johnstown, Pa. Rainfall generally was less than a quarter inch.
Temperatures overnight ranged from 24 at Craig, Colo., to 76 at Key West, Fla.
Some other reports: Anchorage 32 cloudy, Atlanta 54 clear, Bismarck 57 clear, Buffalo 42 partly cloudy, Chicago 41 clear, Cincinnati 38 clear, Cleveland 48 fair, Denver 49 clear, Des Moines 45 clear, Detroit 38 clear, Fort Worth 57 clear, Indianapolis 41 clear, Jacksonville 47 clear, Los Angeles 66 foggy, Louisville 49 clear, Miami 71 cloudy, Minneapolis-St. Paul 47 cloudy, New York 56 fair, Philadelphia 57 fair, Phoenix 75 cloudy.

Texas picture rosey

By MIKE COCHRAN Associated Press, Writer
SAN ANGELO, Tex. (AP) — According to the captain and crew, the Texas Ship of State is afloat, however perilously. And things could be worse.

That's the conclusion one might draw after listening for two days as governmental officials assessed their state's problems, pitfalls, priorities and potential.

What's more, there's even hope for Congress, according to a Texas Congressman.

The occasion was the West Texas Conference on State Affairs, an annual gathering of state leaders with selected college students, faculty members, county judges, city officials, business executives and others.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby brought the best news. It's not new, but it's worth repeating:

"Texas," said Briscoe, "stands now at the brink of a great potential of economic growth...greater and more dramatic, perhaps, than most have anticipated."

"Thus, no new or additional taxes, he said."

And Hobby:

"I don't foresee an income tax in Texas anytime in the near future."

House Speaker Bill Clayton: "Citizens feel that federal government is more wasteful."

$50 will buy Reagan ticket

Governor Ronald Reagan of California will be in Amarillo Friday on behalf of President Ford and will honor Bob Price of Pampa during a $50 a plate luncheon at the Villa Inn.
Tickets may be obtained at the Republican headquarters, 205 E. Kingsmill in Pampa.
Interested persons may call the office to reserve tickets.
Reagan is scheduled to arrive at the Amarillo Air Terminal at 12:40 p.m. Friday.

While it may grow as tall as 100 feet, the bamboo is not a tree, but a part of the grass family.

gives the taxpayer less for the dollar and is more corrupt than state government.

That would seem to imply that state government is indeed corrupt, only to a lesser degree, but Clayton hastened to add:

"The consensus is that state government really cares about what happens to the people."

Texas, he said, quoting "important economic indicators," is the "superstar state" of the future if it solves potential water and energy problems.

Hobby: "We're negotiating with Oklahoma and Arkansas for importation of water from Arkansas...they have a surplus of water and they're willing to deal."

And while oil and gas production is declining, he said, Texas is most fortunate to have an abundance of coal as an alternate source of energy. He said the state may also have "unique" geothermal resources and there is High Plains potential for significant wind power.

"Criminal activity costs the state government, businesses and individuals dearly and I will recommend to the next Texas Legislature...a package of anticrime legislation."

Pampa gets criminal grant for equipment

The City of Pampa has been awarded a $14,000 grant by the Criminal Justice Advisory Commission to obtain tape logging equipment.
The equipment will allow the city to monitor all radio and police phone transmissions at the police station, according to Chief Richard Mills.
"This will be a safety factor in which the emergency lines will be monitored in order to prevent errors in dispatching," he added.

The City also was included in a radio grant, in which the city will receive a new tower for the police radio and a new channel so the department can contact highway patrol units and Amarillo.

Briscoe said. "It is my hope that this package will form the basis for a new Bill of Rights for Texas: That Texans have the right to go about their business free from acts of violent criminal offenders."

And then that wily old fox Omar Burleson of Anson, who has been in Congress most of his life and admits that the legislative body ranks slightly below ax murderers in the public esteem.

He said Congress is spending the country to death but added, "We know what our problems are...and I think we have a real chance to get a handle on our fiscal affairs...to hit a balance of common sense."

Flu shot program ended in 9 states

By JEAN-CLAUDE BOUIS Associated Press Writer

Three of nine states that suspended the swine flu inoculation program have decided to resume giving shots after tests revealed no evidence that the vaccine caused the deaths of elderly persons.

But several areas reported sharp declines in the number of persons showing up Wednesday for the free inoculations. The program is designed to reach up to 200 million Americans.

There was no hesitation at the White House, however, where President Ford's personal physician, William Lukash, said the 63-year-old President would receive his shot today. White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford scheduled the shot for today in an effort to persuade Americans the vaccine was safe.

Officials in Louisiana and Illinois on Wednesday ordered the resumption of their programs. Vermont authorities said immunizations would resume on Friday.

At least 33 elderly persons in 16 states — most with a history of heart trouble — are reported to have died after receiving the inoculations.

That includes three persons in the Pittsburgh area whose deaths Monday prompted nine states to suspend the program a day later.

Federal and state officials stress that there is no known connection between the $135-million vaccination program — which began Oct. 1 — and the deaths.

Other states where the program was halted were Alaska, Maine, Michigan, New Mexico, Texas — except Houston — and Wisconsin. There also were suspensions of the program in some areas of other states.

At least 21 states have yet to begin inoculations. Food and Drug Administration officials said Wednesday they found no evidence in preliminary tests that a batch of swine flu vaccine used at a Pittsburgh-area clinic was responsible for the deaths there.

The FDA said it had completed tests of 35 vials of vaccine gathered from the Pittsburgh clinic and found no trace of foreign materials. FDA officials said they would run more tests on the samples' purity and potency in about a week.

Spokesmen for the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta repeated that "there is no evidence that the program should be curtailed in any way."

A spot check, however, showed a decrease in the number of persons lining up for shots.

In New York City, health officials said 10,000 persons showed up on Wednesday, compared with 20,000 who were inoculated Tuesday.

Pennsylvania officials said 12,803 persons were inoculated Wednesday, a drop of 11,000 from the day before. And in Florida, the director of the swine flu program in Dade County, the state's most populous, said the turnout was about one-fourth what it was on Tuesday, when more than 10,000 persons were vaccinated.

'Blue law' violates 'right to shop'

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — There is a "right to shop," and Texas' last remaining "blue law" violates it, a lawyer for Gibson's discount stores has told the supreme court.

Bardwell D. Odum of Dallas urged the court Wednesday to hold unconstitutional the 1961 law that lists 46 categories of merchandise that cannot be sold on both Saturdays and Sundays.

The case reached the high court on direct appeal after a district court in Dallas granted an injunction to stop Gibson's from selling its full range of merchandise on both weekend days.

John H. Hagler of the Dallas district attorney's office said the issues were no different from what they were when the court upheld the act in 1969.

Odum said if the purpose of the law was to give store employees Sundays as a day of rest, "the purpose is breached by giving a choice of two days" on which to suspend sales of the 46 articles.

"It is economic legislation, a bit of special interest legislation. The people of the State of Texas have a right to shop," Odum said.

Leo Michaud of Dallas, another lawyer for Gibson's, stacked white coffee cans on a table to illustrate the history of Texas blue laws, with each law underpinned by the ones passed before it.

He knocked the pyramid of cans on the floor to illustrate what he claimed the legislature did in 1973 when it rewrote the Penal Code and repealed all but the 1961 Sunday closing law.

Hagler said the law was passed to restrict trade on Sundays and said a drive through any business section on Sunday would show the result.

"The law fulfilled its intent," he said.

Hereford women to tour Pampa museum

A delegation of 25 from the women's division of the Hereford Chamber of Commerce was in Pampa today for a tour of the White Deer Land Museum.

Following a picnic lunch in Hobart Street Park, the group was shown through the museum by Mrs. Clotilde Thompson, curator, and tour guides Dona Cornutt, Viola Ingram, Mona Blanton and Mary Sturgeon.

The visitors were welcomed and escorted to the museum by members of the Chamber of Commerce Top O' Texas Club.

On their return trip to Hereford the group stopped to visit the Square House Museum in Panhandle.

Chinese Communist leaders meet

TOKYO (AP) — Leaders of the Chinese Communist party are believed meeting in Peking to back up Premier Hua Kuo-feng's purge of radical party leaders and perhaps to prepare the formal announcement of his elevation to chairman of the party, Japanese press reports from the Chinese capital said today.

Kyodo news agency reported that scores of limousines were parked Wednesday night at the Great Hall of the People, the Chinese party's central meeting hall. The report said traffic control in the area was strengthened, and that police were patrolling adjacent streets.

There was speculation that Hua had called the Communist party Central Committee together to endorse his reported arrest last weekend of Chiang Ching, Mao Tse-tung's firebrand widow, and some 30 other leading party radicals.

There was no confirmation from the Hsinhua news agency, Peking Radio or other official Chinese organs that a party meeting was in progress. Nor was there any official confirmation of the purge.

However, Japanese correspondents reported that photographs of Chiang Ching and the other three leading radical members of the party Politburo — Shanghai leader Wang Hung-wen, Vice Premier Chung Chun-chiao and ideologist Yao Wen-yuan — were no longer on sale in the city. This was another indication that the widespread reports of the purge were true, since photographs of disgraced leaders usually disappear quickly.

The power struggle between moderate and radical leaders that has been going on in China for years was intensified by the death in January of Premier Chou En-lai. Radicals blocked the advancement of First Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-peng, Chou's choice for his successor, and succeeded in having him named Premier and first vice chairman of the party, was considered a compromise choice whose leanings in the power struggle were not clear.

As first vice chairman, Hua has been acting head of the party since Mao's death Sept. 9.

Former Texas social queen charged with stealing cards

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Scheduled for a preliminary hearing Friday on charges they used a stolen credit card to pay bills, Margaret Medders languished in a Los Angeles area hospital today, and her co-defendant, Sol Fielding, called the charges "ludicrous."

Mrs. Medders is the distaff side of the Medders of Muenster, Tex., who went bankrupt after piling up debts in excess of $3 million in the late 1960s. Her husband, a former Memphis, Tenn., truck mechanic with dyslexia, died less than a year ago.

Fielding, in a telephone conversation from his Brentwood, Calif., home, told The Associated Press that Mrs. Medders, once the social queen of North Texas, was in a hospital and taking sedatives in order to sleep.

Fielding and Mrs. Medders have been working toward making a movie of the onetime Memphis nurse's life story, including the epic of "Colonial Acres Farm," the showplace ranch she and her husband built at the edge of Muenster, 85 miles-northwest of Dallas. It was there they entertained the elite of North Texas society, big-name politicians and the horse-and-cattle set.

Fielding said that Carroll Sinclair, Dallas antique dealer, was all wrong about his credit card being stolen.

"He pressed it on us," said the movie producer. "He offered to let us use the American Express card." Fielding said, quoting the suburban Carrollton, Tex., man as saying:

"Sol, I would like for you to use the American Express card—you're me when you are using it."

"I bought tickets (to Los Angeles from Dallas) on his credit card and I paid her bills with it at the Beverly Hilton," Fielding continued.

"He called every day. She told him she might go to Amarillo or Chicago on the card and he told her to go to Hong Kong on it if she wanted to. Later we went to get her a ticket to Chicago and both of us were arrested."

Fielding said he knew Mary Davis, an 80-year-old Memphis osteopath who says Mrs. Medders spent more than $100,000 of her money. He described the Memphis woman as a "sweet, little old lady who lived and ate with the Medders family."

"I don't know anything about Margaret spending any of her money," he said. "Margaret always paid the bills."

The movie producer, called a man of "good credits" and "most honest guy in Hollywood" by acquaintances, said it was true that Mrs. Medders has run up bills she couldn't pay in the past six or eight months. He said her troubles began when a bank in Brownsville, Tex., quit backing her checks as it had done previously.

"Since her husband's death," said Fielding, "her money has been tied up in probate. She'll be able to pay everything in November. It was not a studied or calculated design to do anybody in that caused the trouble."

Meanwhile, the FBI in Dallas said Wednesday that it no longer was investigating the financial affairs of Mrs. Medders.

Ted Gunderson, FBI agent in charge here, said a U.S. attorney has concluded there have been no federal violations. Dist. Atty. Henry Wade of Dallas said, however, that his office would submit to a county grand jury the Fairmont Hotel's complaint that Mrs. Medders committed a theft of services of more than $10,000 during a stay there in the spring.

The Medders family, with her son by a former marriage as foreman, raised prize-black Angus cattle and Apalosa horses at their spread in Cooke County. Ernest Medders was named man of the year by a North Texas chamber of commerce shortly before the bankruptcy broke.

They were invited to the White House during President Lyndon B. Johnson's term and Johnson had them picked up at their hotel by then Secretary of State Dean Rusk and his wife, who escorted them to the party. They rode back to Texas aboard Air Force One.

Medders was prouder of the cuff links that LBJ gave him

Goldwater to attend Dole-Mondale debate

HOUSTON (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater and Ronald Reagan, former Republican presidential hopefuls, will be among the growing list of politicians coming here for the nationally televised debate between vice presidential candidates Robert Dole and Walter Mondale.

Goldwater, R-Ariz., will appear with Reagan at a massive Republican rally tonight.

Others who will be here coincidentally for the Friday night debate include CIA Director George Bush, a former Republican congressman from Houston, and former Commerce Secretary Peter Peterson, both scheduled to address the annual meeting of the Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association.

Anne Armstrong, U.S. ambassador to the United Kingdom, is scheduled to make what is billed as a nonpolitical appearance today before the Chamber of Commerce.

Officials coordinating the debate announced the names of the panel selected to question Mondale and Dole. The panel will be Hal Brune, political correspondent for Newsweek, Marilyn Berger, White House correspondent for NBC and Walter Wears, Associated Press special correspondent.

Advice

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I read the letter from HIS WIFE who wrote an open letter to all women who were in love with a married man. I hope you will give me equal space to respond:

DEAR WIFE: He has never told me you are a shrew, cold, homely, too fat (or too thin) or that you have neglected him sexually. Instead he speaks only in glowing terms of you, how you stood by him in rough years, through all the difficult times.

There is no talk of divorce. I know I will never see him on Sundays or holidays. I don't call him at home. We meet at hotels since there are teenagers at his place. Yes, I sometimes spend more on him—on transportation, gas for the car, whatever. But we do not measure our relationship in money. And I insist he not buy me gifts.

I know how you feel about social status, financial security and retirement income. I ended my loveless, unhappy marriage without regard to such things. I love your husband; and we share a need for each other that has nothing to do with your set of values. But because your husband is a good man and would never hurt you, I know we will probably never be together.

I never went after your husband; he pursued me, because I recognized his pain and bewilderment, his triumphs and delights, in a way you have forgotten or belittled. He needed to be actively loved, or I would not be a part of his life.

THE OTHER WOMAN

DEAR ABBY: I beg to differ with you when you state that a girl can tell if a man is married because she never sees him on weekends or holidays.

I went with Rob for 14 months and he was with me morning, noon and night every day of the week. And last Christmas he came to my house at 9 in the evening and stayed until 10 the next morning until after the kids had opened their gifts. Then he left, saying he had to go to a family dinner. He came back again at 7 that evening and left at 6 the next morning.

When my little boy had an operation, Rob stayed at the hospital with me all day and night. Finally, on New Year's Eve, I learned he was married when we ran into some people who knew his wife.

He confessed it was true, and said he and his wife didn't sleep together but she didn't believe in divorce. I figured if he treated her that way, he'd eventually treat me that way, too, so I kicked him out. Why would a woman want to hang on to a louse like that?

STILL SINGLE AND LOOKING

DEAR STILL LOOKING: Because she probably figures she's better off with him than without him, I think he showed his "lousiness" more by lying to you about his marital status than by seeking satisfaction outside marriage to a woman who refused to sleep with him but refused to divorce him.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have had Meniere's disease for 26 years. The hearing in my right ear deteriorated first. After about 15 years my left ear started to go.

I no longer have the serious vertigo I had the first 15 years, only occasional slight dizziness, particularly when I roll over in bed, rarely when I am upright.

I wear hearing aids on both ears. The sound distortion, however, is becoming more serious and I am concerned about being able to continue working which requires talking to others and on the phone.

Last year I heard about a doctor who had some success in restoring hearing in Meniere's patients using a low cholesterol diet.

My other health is fine. I am 54 and weigh 130 pounds and am 5 feet 2. I would certainly try a diet if it would help my hearing. Thank you for any advice you can give.

DEAR READER — Your case is unusual because it involves both ears and began at such an early age. Meniere's disease more often begins in middle life.

For the benefit of other readers the disease is characterized by dizziness (vertigo) that makes a person have a sensation of motion, loss of hearing and ringing or buzzing in the ears. Unless there is an associated hearing loss it is not true Meniere's disease.

A person with this disease may feel fine except during attacks. The attacks may be associated with nausea and rarely vomiting, somewhat like motion sickness. During the attack the eyes may be seen to move back and forth in jerky movements called nystagmus.

As the hearing is lost dizziness disappears as it has in your case. Hearing loss is progressive so the dizziness

Polly's pointers

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — Somehow unsupervised children got into our church and spilled copying ink (we think it is mimeograph ink) on our beautiful red carpet. We would like to know if it will come out. If so, how do we do it. We church ladies are eagerly awaiting your reply. Also, I would like to know how to get silly putty out of my carpet. Both these are low pile with nylon. — M.J.

DEAR M.J. — Without knowing definitely what type of ink this is, it would be very foolish to start experimenting with a large church carpet. Permanent inks are usually permanent after they dry and set and should always be blotted up with water IMMEDIATELY. When quick enough about doing this, they can sometimes be washed out. I feel you need the advice of a professional rug cleaner who will come and look at your carpet.

You said "children got in and spilled copying ink" and that made me wonder if that would be considered vandalism. Perhaps it would be well to discuss this with the agent who carries the insurance for your church. It MAY take care of such a problem.

I know of nothing specifically for removing silly putty but you might try hardening the putty with ice and try to "ball" it like gum. Then roll gently to pull away from the carpet. Or you might try (test first) a dry cleaning fluid, then a detergent, water and vinegar solution and then more dry cleaning fluid, as the American Institute of Rug Cleaning suggests for chewing gum. Dry and then brush gently. — POLLY.

Child rearing today-- how good or bad?

Tom Braen

How good is child rearing in the United States?

The question is one that calls for self analysis on the part of a father of eight. I have come to the conclusion that the most important attribute a father can have is a capacity for what I call restrained affection. Affection about everything from a child learning to crawl to later on learning the rules of decent behavior. A father must be affectionate about these things because as we all know, the most important thing a person wants in life is love. And the most important thing a person can bestow in life is love. But I think restraint is almost equally important. We all know children who have been smothered with love and we know they grow up to be children — either weak and ineffective individuals or engaged in some pointless rebellion. My own feeling toward my children is one of such enormous affection that if I didn't exercise restraint I would smother them. I think all mothers and fathers love their children a lot and I think that it's important that we not be so demonstrative in our affection that we prevent them from becoming independent human beings who will eventually stand on their own feet and tell us where we went wrong. That is what I mean by restraint. I think it is very difficult for a mother and father to try consciously to make (children) grow into independent human beings who no longer even need them but it seems to me that's what it's all about. Except that this morning, I asked my son, Nicholas, if he thought he had been brought up correctly and he said, "Well, we get enough to eat." And being a father of eight, I have to say that I think that is what it's all about, too.

Why do so many young people say they do not intend to have children?

On the part of my own children — none of whom want to have eight — I tell myself this is societal rather than personal. All our children are learning a good deal about our environment and they look at me and say, "Dad you're polluted." I defend myself but I think that they have a point and that is why I think the basis for this is societal rather than personal. I think it is all to the good but I'm glad Dr. Spock says it is all right for people who really want to have children to go ahead and do it. In sociological terms, there is not sufficient emphasis on the joys of having a family. I think my children eventually will want to have some because it's such fun.

What about the mother who wants a career?

(My wife) certainly was a working mother. Through the first two children, she worked the whole time. We were lucky because Joan, at that point, had an understanding employer. That is to say, an employer that when she said she was pregnant, said, "work as long as you want to and then take off." An employer who also said, "You must not come back until you are convinced that the child is just right." Now that was lucky. I would think that there might be some general applications of this particular kindness so that all industry recognized that what a mother needed — and I would certainly throw in a father too — was a little more time than nine months and a day. And I would think that if we were to have legislation, that kind of legislation ought to be considered too.

(The National Town Meeting is sponsored by a grant from Mobil Oil Corp. Mobil has no control over the content of the debates.)

Dr. Benjamin Spock

How good is child rearing in the United States?

Child rearing is generally good as shown by the fact that there are more young people going further in their education than ever before. They're more thoughtful. They're more idealistic — at least in the sense that they're more interested in having an interesting job than in having a high paying one. They have more independence of judgment. I think that the reason for these contrasts between the children of the '60s and '70s and the children of the 1950s is that there is now on the part of parents more respect for children as human beings. There are certainly limitations. There are more pesky children — children who argue and make life miserable, not only for their parents but for themselves. And I think that is because there are more parents now who, in moving from the intimidation of the past, to the respect of today, have felt too guilty and are just a little too apologetic to their children nowadays. And there is a tremendous problem with delinquency for children. That occurs in all economic groups. But the greatest majority of delinquency occurs in the more depressed economic levels. This is not a failure of child rearing on the part of parents but it is the failure of our society to make a secure, stable life for those at the lower end of the economic scale.

Why do so many young people say they do not intend to have children?

A lot of it is either theoretical or youthful protest about the way parents took care of things. Of my personal friends among young people, I was first distressed about how many of them said marriage was just chains that spoil a relationship (and said) they didn't want to have children because it's a lousy world. Many of them just quietly got married later and then quietly had children, not just one but two. I think it's marvelous that some decide that they don't want to have children (and don't.) We have enough children. Only those who just can't help wanting children to love and cherish should have them. In the past, many people had children because that was just the thing to do.

What about the mother who wants a career?

When the father and the mother both want careers, I think that satisfactory substitutes can be found. My own preference under the age of two or three is to either have a care giver come into the home or the child go to the home of the care giver (where) there are no more than two or three children under 5 so that the child can get plenty of attention, love and encouragement from an adult. We should all be working to encourage industry to make the six hour day available without loss of seniority. My own hunch is that if industry made only what we really need and if everybody was employed, we could easily get to the six hour day. Then it would be easier for mothers and fathers to dovetail their work schedules so they could spend more time with their children. I think also that the government should pay the parent who stays home. There are many mothers who have to go to work. . . and they should not have to decide between good child care and earning enough money to feed and clothe the children.

People want that gore

Daredevil fights sharks

By GARY R. PEDERSEN

Associated Press Writer

SOUTH LAKE TAHOE, Calif. (AP) — Dick Minns is one of those average guys who jumps off cliffs, waterskis for eight hours at a stretch and wants to fight a Great White Shark.

"Sure, I know there will be those coming to watch me die," said Minns, 48. "It's just like boxing, or a bullfight. People want that gore."

Dick Minns is aggressive. He's celebrated recent birthdays with long-distance swims, thousands of sit-ups, dives from high cliffs. Training for the shark fight has been, for Minns, hours at a time on waterskis. He gulps bowls of vitamins and has a weightlifter's physique.

Minns, who is from Houston, made millions in the health spa business. He's a former Golden Gloves boxing champ, a bull rider, an ex-newspaperman and an advertising wizard. He lives every day as if it were his last.

"As a newspaperman, he said, 'I got a lot of new titles over the years, but never a pay raise. Finally I went into public relations and took over the spas and ended up ahead.'

"I never went out after money, but I am a competitor, and money is one way to keep score," he said.

"Now I am ready to do my thing. There's danger, and plenty of danger, but this is going to be a lot of fun and I will have a fine shark dinner," Minns said.

Minns, clad in T-shirt, blue jeans and sneakers, said the movie "Jaws" convinced him this year's act should be killing a white shark, 2,000 to 3,000 pounds.

The Houston Nut — that's what he calls himself — said he wants to prove a 150-pound man can kill a big white shark so "more and more people, maybe millions, will no longer be afraid of the ocean and can enjoy the water."

Minns' birthday was Aug. 17 but he said he plans to fight the shark next May when "conditions are right." The showdown will be somewhere off the Great Barrier Reef near Australia or in Samoa, he said.

Several television producers have approached him about closed circuit rights to the shark fight, he said. "I don't do anything for money. But if somebody wants to pay me, that's fine. I'll give all the money to charity. If they don't pay, I'll do it alone and enjoy the water," he said.

"I have made a covenant with myself to fight and kill a great white shark, nothing will interfere with that. I will fight the shark without any financial gain to me. I will fight it without having to compromise with Hollywood promoters, governmental and presidential politics, humane societies and ecological groups.

"The shark goes at you at 42 miles an hour with one great big mouth and 400 teeth coming at you," said Minns. "They have no fear, but I'll take it, you can count on that, mister."

Shelter from the rain

The second of three Hike and Bike Trail shelters is expected to be completed this week, according to Luther Sober of Pampa's Parks Department. Supervising the work here of Melvin Chaney, top, and Floyd N. Smith, right, at the west end of Central Park. Sober anticipates beginning construction next week on the third shelter which will be located at the west end of Coronado Park. The first shelter was completed last summer at the east end of Coronado Park. Benches, trees and signs will be added to the new section of the Hike and Bike Trail between Duncan and Harvester this month, according to Sober, then his crew will run routine maintenance and build picnic tables through the winter.

Nixon aides still free after appeals

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Although their convictions in the Watergate cover-up case have been upheld by a federal appeals court, it probably will be several months before H.R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman and John N. Mitchell begin serving their prison terms.

The three former high-ranking aides to former President Richard M. Nixon have been free on bond during an unusually long appeals process that began Jan. 1, 1975, when a federal jury found them guilty of seeking to block the original Watergate investigations.

Neither Haldeman, Ehrlichman, Mitchell nor their lawyers could be reached for comment Tuesday, but all have indicated they will fight to the Supreme Court. It appears likely the three will remain free until completion of the full appeals process.

While declaring they found no reason to reverse the convictions of Haldeman, Ehrlichman and Mitchell, the appeals judges ordered a new trial for onetime Nixon campaign aide Robert C. Mardian.

The judges, in their decision released Tuesday, did not dispute the evidence against Mardian but said U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica should have granted him a trial separate from the others because of Mardian's relatively small role during the early days of the coverup and the loss of his principal lawyer, David Bress, who underwent surgery after the trial began Oct. 1, 1974.

A spokesman for the special Watergate prosecutor's office said no decision has been made on whether to retry Mardian, but one lawyer familiar with the case said a second trial is unlikely.

Mardian, reached at his home in Phoenix, Ariz., said, "I'm thrilled. I didn't lose faith in the system and it works."

As for Mitchell, a former attorney general; Haldeman, a former White House chief of staff; and Ehrlichman, Nixon's domestic affairs adviser, the judges said evidence showed they took part in a "wide-ranging conspiracy" to impede a federal grand jury investigation.

In a carefully worded 300-page opinion, the judges considered two dozen legal challenges to the way Sirica handled the trial.

Answering Ehrlichman's contention that the absence of Nixon's testimony denied him a fair trial, the judges said Nixon would have been unable to make any serious dent in the prosecution's case "and thus his testimony would have been of marginal significance."

Schorr urges confidentiality

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — Former CBS reporter Daniel Schorr says there will be more Watergate if reporters are not allowed to protect their confidential sources.

Schorr, who refused to reveal to a congressional committee his source for a secret report on the CIA, spoke to more than 1,000 persons at Oregon State University Tuesday night.

"Americans want national security, but they don't want cover-up. They want safety, but they also want their liberties intact," Schorr said. "They see the press as one of the important instruments for that."

Schorr resigned recently from CBS amid controversy over his disclosure earlier this year of the CIA report. He refused to tell his source for the report, and the congressional panel finally dropped its inquiry without punishing him.

Ford has twice as much money left

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford had twice as much campaign money left to spend in the last five weeks before the election as Jimmy Carter, according to finance reports made public today.

Through Sept. 30, Ford had spent only $3.5 million of the $21.8 million he is allowed to spend in the general election under federal law. Carter, however, had spent $12.5 million of his identical allotment.

That left Ford with $18.3 million spending room compared to $9.3 million for Carter — an edge that could prove critical in the final days of advertising blitzes and other last-minute efforts to win what is regarded as a close election Nov. 2.

However, the reports filed with the Federal Election Commission do not show whether, for example, Carter may have already spent money for media advertisements which have yet to appear, or whether Ford may have already incurred obligations for which bills had not yet been received.

Both candidates' campaign committees are operating with federal funds for the first time in the nation's presidential election history. By accepting the taxpayer money, the candidates are forbidden from receiving any private contributions.

They offer 'alternative books' Is bread food, drug?

By GWEN FLORIO
Associated Press Writer
DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — "A Mind of Your Own" is one bookstore where little girls don't play with dolls and Mommy isn't always home while Daddy works.
Instead, the children's books the store carries picture girls with wrenches or fixing pipes. Boys do the cooking.
"We tried to choose books that offered children more options," said Bill Anderson, a day-care worker who volunteers at the nonprofit store.

"They show that girls don't have to be just mothers, or some man's possession," he said in an interview. "And there are books that show little boys crying or playing with dolls, all in a very positive light."
Judy Brunk, head of the board of directors that runs the store, said, "We also carry books dealing with problems children go through, such as death or living with a single parent.

"There was a need for an alternative bookstore in Des Moines to provide books people couldn't get in other stores, especially children's literature."
In selecting books, staffers look for those that don't stereotype women and for books written by women about their experiences, said Joyce Drury, coordinator of elderly services for Iowa Children and Family Services.

The store carries a wide selection of fiction and poetry. It also offers medical and sociological literature, with books on natural childbirth, abortion and battered wives.
But children's books are the fastest-selling, said Ms. Drury. So far, customers have reacted favorably to the store, she said. "A lot come in just to visit, and to talk about the women's movement."

None of the nearly 50 men and women involved in the bookstore have been in the business before, said Ms. Brunk. Each of them contributed $50 or 50 hours of work to help get the store opened three weeks ago. Day-to-day affairs are handled by a 12-person policy-making board.
The area of the Caribbean Sea is 750,000 square miles.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The folks who bake "Fresh Horizons" bread say their high-fiber product is a food — not a drug. But the government says they should stop claiming that their loaves help prevent ailments ranging from cancer to varicose veins.
The Food and Drug Administration said Tuesday it has issued a warning to ITT Continental Baking Co. telling the firm it has gone too far in promoting the medical value of its "Fresh Horizons" brand bread.

Unless the company immediately ceases making medical claims about "Fresh Horizons," the FDA said, the bread will be considered an unapproved new drug. Such a drug cannot be marketed legally.
In a regulatory letter to ITT Continental's president, M.C. Woodward Jr., the FDA charged that the bread has been promoted in advertising as a medical aid in preventing cancer of the colon, diverticulitis, heart disease, diabetes, obesity and varicose veins.

The federal regulatory agency said that unless such labeling claims and promotions aimed at physicians are halted, the government will seize the bread and seek a court injunction against the manufacturer to halt the practice.
A spokesman for the baking company in Rye, N.Y., confirmed that advertising of "Fresh Horizons" bread has been directed to physicians. But he said a brochure that praises the bread has not been sent to physicians as originally planned.
The spokesman said ITT Continental will ask FDA officials to clarify what claims the company can make for its bread. The product has been heavily promoted.
"We certainly shall comply with whatever steps are required," the company spokesman said. "But we don't want to move in the dark."

Tomato crop in California much lower

WASHINGTON (AP) — A recent special survey of California tomato processors shows the crop in that key state this year is down 30 per cent — reflecting old bad news for growers whose crops had spoiled and foreshadowing bad price news for consumers of canned and boxed products containing tomatoes.
The Crop Reporting Board of the Agriculture Department conducted the special survey, without commentary, because this summer's strike by California cannery workers had disrupted the board's usual production estimates.
California normally produces about 85 per cent of the U.S. tomatoes for processed foods and harvests about 75 per cent of the acreage for that crop.
The board's tables showed 232,000 acres are indicated for harvesting in California this year, down 22.5 per cent from last year and 7.2 per cent from two years ago.

Chocolate, colas may be unhealthy

BOSTON (AP) — Children who devour chocolate bars and guzzle cola drinks may be consuming unhealthy amounts of caffeine, according to a California researcher.
Mary Louise Bunker, a scientist at the University of California in Los Angeles, told a gathering of dieticians here Tuesday that the public should be given more information about the caffeine content of foods and beverages.
"Forbidding a child to drink coffee will not protect the youngster from consuming excessive caffeine in other foods that could lead to a variety of ailments, including insomnia and heart disease, she said.
"Children naturally have a lower caffeine tolerance than adults," she said. "If a child has been drinking a lot of cola or cocoa, he may become nervous and hyperactive."
While experts disagree on the dangers of caffeine, Dr. Bunker said there is substantial evidence that caffeine speeds up the heart, elevates cholesterol levels and irritates sensitive stomachs.
She reported her findings to the American Dietetic Association, holding its 59th annual meeting here.

Bomb simulation shocks Japan Police make no arrests after fight at high school

HARLINGEN, Tex. (AP) — Re-enactment by the Confederate Air Force (CAF) of the atomic bomb being dropped on Hiroshima reverberated on the other side of the world.

The CAF said it received a telegram Thursday from Ichiro Moritaki, president of the Japanese Congress against Atomic and Hydrogen Bombs, which stated, "simulation of dropping the a-bomb on Hiroshima... seriously shocked the Japanese. The dropping of the A-bomb on Hiroshima and Nagasaki is a historical crime to mankind which we have protested.

"You should consider that the tragic effects caused by the bomb cannot be simulated. The 350,000 people exposed to radioactivity have suffered. If you feel guilty, you should think of compensation for this crime. The Japanese feel guilty for Pearl Harbor and struggle to prevent it being repeated.

"We demand that you should not repeat such a show."

The re-enactment, staged last Saturday and Sunday as part of CAF's Airshow '76, was highlighted by Paul W. Tibbets, a retired Air Force general who commanded the "Enola Gay," a B-29 Superfortress which dropped the A-bomb on Hiroshima Aug. 6, 1945.

Tibbets flew "Fifi," billed by the CAF as the only remaining B-29 Superfortress still in flying condition. As the plane passed before the estimated crowd of 40,000, the U.S. Army demolition team on the ground detonated an A-bomb simulator which sent a mushroom-shaped cloud billowing skyward.

Glenn Bercot, the CAF publicity director, said the intent of the simulation was to recreate history, not to advocate the use of nuclear bombs to glorify war in any form.

Lloyd Nolen, one of the CAF founders, said the airshows staged by the non-profit organization tell the story of all major air battles of World War II which took place in all theaters of combat including the Far East, South Pacific and Europe.

He said the aircraft going through combat maneuvers, combined with remarks of a narrator, present a living history of war and its many tragedies to members of the current generation.

"We are opposed to war and the use of nuclear weapons just as much, if not more so, than anyone else," he said.

Nolen said the re-enactment was at the end of an historical sequence of shows depicting famous World War II air battles.

"The dropping of the A-bomb is part of our history," he said. "It did cause terrible destruction but then again, it did bring the war to an end quicker."

"What we try to do in our airshows is to give the people an historical view of the war. The American people should be proud of the way they responded during that war."

"The dropping of the bomb brought the war to an end quicker and in doing so saved millions of lives on both sides—American and Japanese alike. There would have been millions of casualties if the U.S. had been forced to invade the Japanese islands."

Nolen said after the re-enactment, planes flew over the field in the missing man formation to commemorate all the persons killed during the war.

Bercot said the dates of next year's show have been set (Oct. 6-9) but "we haven't really had time to think whether or not to include another A-bomb re-enactment."

"I would assume that we would, but I don't honestly know. You have to consider the source of the complaint."

"It's just like some people telling you not to have a parade on certain days," he said. "That may be just five per cent of the people doing the complaining. The other 95 per cent might want the parade on that day."

Japan Police make no arrests after fight at high school

An altercation occurred Wednesday morning at Pampa High School between two male students and police were called to the scene.

Richard Mills, police chief, said that two patrol cars and a detective were dispatched, but when they arrived, the fight was over, no charges were filed and no arrests were made.

Contacted early Wednesday afternoon, Paul Payne, principal, said, "Things are in pretty good shape now. Relations are better than ever."

It was in 20,000 B.C. that the glaciers covering much of the Northern Hemisphere started melting back for the first time.

He said that the disturbance stemmed from a similar fight between a white student and a black student on Tuesday. Following that outburst, disciplinary resulted in one of the students being expelled, Payne said.

However, the expelled student returned to school Wednesday morning and when the principal discovered it, he summoned the student to his office.

"I thought I had him all calmed down and had convinced him to go back home," Payne said, "but when the bell rang he found the boy he'd been fighting with yesterday (Tuesday) and they got into it again."

Payne indicated that while there are some students at the high school who are troublemakers, "the kids who care are getting along real good."

Several people have contacted The News recently concerned about reports of racial problems at the school and students carrying weapons — guns and knives — while in school and on campus.

Payne said the reports are ungrounded rumors and repeated his statement that, "Things are in pretty good shape."

CBS president quits $480,000-a-year job

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

Just 15 months after his powerful boss said he'd be "greatly pleased to have him as my successor," Arthur R. Taylor, 41, abruptly quit his $480,000-a-year job as president of CBS Inc.

Industry observers were surprised by his unexpected decision Wednesday to leave the billion-dollar conglomerate he's headed since 1972. He disclosed neither his future plans nor reasons for leaving, CBS declined to say why he resigned.

But it said his decision in no way involved CBS-TV's poor ratings this season or the controversial "family viewing" concept for early-evening shows he initiated and the networks adopted in September 1975.

A knowledgeable industry source attributed Taylor's departure to a personality clash between the handsome young executive and his strong-willed boss, CBS board chairman William S. Paley, 75.

Paley went to great lengths in July 1975 to rebut an article in "New York" magazine that mentioned "a strong rumormongering" that he and Taylor "aren't hitting it off" together.

"Absolute nonsense," Paley said in a statement then. "As I have said before and as I have been quoted in the press, Arthur Taylor and I have a very good relationship and I would be greatly pleased to have him as my successor."

Paley, declining to comment on Taylor's sudden resignation, praised him in a statement Wednesday, and tersely added: "We understand and appreciate his decision to make other plans for his future. We wish him the very best."

CBS said Taylor, an investment banker who rose to executive vice president at International Paper Co. before joining CBS, turned in his resignation shortly before a CBS board meeting Wednesday.

The board immediately replaced him with John D. Backe, 44, since early 1973 president of CBS' publishing group.

In another action Wednesday, Paley, who built CBS from a fledgling radio network to a broad-based company expecting to exceed $2 billion in sales this year, told the board he'll step down next April as chief executive officer.

Paley, in that post since 1928, said he'll remain CBS board chairman, which he became 30 years ago.

Backe, the new CBS Inc. president, is a native of Akron, Ohio. Like Taylor, his predecessor, he comes to his new job with no broadcast background. He is a publishing veteran who previously was president of General Learning Corp. He now may become Paley's successor.

Taylor, holder of a degree in Renaissance history from Brown University, joined CBS after his predecessor, Charles T. Ireland Jr., died of a heart attack after eight months on the job.

A hard-working executive with a penchant for 14-hour days, Taylor's financial skills were seen by many as an asset in managing the increasingly diversified CBS, whose main revenues still are from broadcasting and records.

Officials at NBC and ABC, who preferred anonymity, expressed surprise Wednesday at Taylor's departure from CBS.

Ford signs revenue-sharing

By HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press Writer
YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — President Ford, who says Jimmy Carter is "a minor leaguer" who would raise taxes on middle income Americans, Wednesday signed a $25.5 billion extension of the general revenue-sharing bill and called it "another milestone in the continuing effort to make the government work better for the American taxpayer."

The money will be distributed to thousands of state, county and municipal governments over a 45-month period from Jan. 1, 1977 to Sept. 30, 1980.

As a site for the signing, Ford chose the steps of the City Hall at Yonkers, a New York suburb which like the metropolis has had financial difficulties. New York state's fourth largest city with a population of 205,000, Yonkers was on the verge of defaulting last winter until bailed out by loans from the state and a consortium of banks.

Arriving here after attending a Republican fund raiser in New York Tuesday night, the President combined the symbolic bill signing — which ended 18 months of efforts by his administration to have the plan extended by Congress — with a campaign rally attracting several thousand persons.

He said that in the past four years more than $30 billion have been handed out to 39,000 government units under the federal revenue-sharing plan, and said this "has held the state and local property taxes in check and promoted economic well-being in thousands of communities."

"With revenue sharing we are restoring local control over local decisions rather than leaving them in the hands of some bureaucrat in Washington."

Ford said many Democrats in Congress had opposed the extension. "The Democrats in Washington don't trust local governments. The Democrats in Washington want to tell you how to run your state and local affairs," he said. "They would make federal government bigger, more powerful and more expensive."

Ford jabbed at Carter, saying the Democratic presidential candidate has stated his opposition to general revenue sharing in its present form, but found use for $141 million in such funds when he was governor of Georgia. "He didn't send back one penny to Washington during those four years," Ford said.

Carter has advocated extension of the revenue-sharing program for five years but with several changes, such as by-passing states to give funds directly to cities so they will have more control over the use of the money and because they cannot generate more taxes as easily as state governments can.

Carter has also said, however, that revenue sharing "violates a basic principle in government fiscal management, in that the responsibilities for raising and spending funds are separated."

Hemphill sheriff cleared

CANADIAN — A Hemphill grand jury no-billed the Hemphill County Sheriff's Office here Wednesday following an investigation which began in July.

The investigation allegedly stemmed from misconduct of officers of combined Hemphill County Sheriff's officers and Canadian police force during a drug raid late in 1975.

Allen Webb, grand jury foreman, said Wednesday that no indictments would be returned against Sheriff C.H. Wright or any members of his department.

Webb said the grand jury found "nothing wrong. No indictments will be returned."

The investigation of the grand jury also included bail bond practices and cost of feeding prisoners, in the local jail.

Parliament passed the East India Act in 1773. It granted the English East India Co. an exclusive monopoly on the sale of tea in the American colonies.

State District Judge Herman Jones said late Wednesday the plaintiff has not met that burden," Jones said.

The executive director of the board denied that he has taken a position on the amendment.

James Rose testified that the board and he have "identified" the need for "financing of some sort," leaving it up to the voters whether they want to approve Amendment No. 1 on the Nov. 2 ballot.

But Rose said the statewide forums have attracted opponents of the amendment as well as supporters, and all who wish to speak are allowed to.

Citizens Against Water Taxes asked for a temporary injunction prohibiting the board and an Austin public relations firm from spending state money in support of the amendment.

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A group claiming the Texas Water Development Board is holding a series of forums to promote passage of a constitutional amendment authorizing $400 million more in water development bonds has lost its fight to get a temporary injunction against the board.

Taiwan wants to keep name

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — The Taiwanese, victims of political maneuvers at the Montreal Olympics, are fighting grimly to keep their place in the Games of the future.

They are determined to go on calling themselves the Republic of China — the name which caused the Canadian government to refuse them entry for the Olympics.

While Olympic leaders and the international sports federations conferred here about political problems that threaten the Games, Henry Hsu, member of the International Olympic Committee for Taiwan, spelled out the case for the 16 million people who live in the island fortress.

"It should be part of IOC rules that any national Olympic committee may adopt its own name as long as it does not claim to represent territories not under its control," Hsu said Wednesday, touching a sore spot.

Communist China, which is trying to get into the Olympics but insists that Taiwan be expelled first, argues that by using the name Republic of China, Taiwan implies a claim to authority over the mainland.

Hsu said: "Peking claims to represent Taiwan. Until Peking provides proof that it actually controls Taiwan, any proposal affecting the status of the Republic of China Olympic Committee should not be considered."

The IOC slid out of a difficult situation at Montreal by asking the Taiwanese to change their name for the durations of the Games to satisfy the Canadian government. The Taiwanese, most of whom never reached Canada, refused and went home.

Some IOC members are known to favor a permanent solution to the China problem on the same lines. If Taiwan were asked to adopt a new name and left the Olympic movement in protest, the door would be open for Peking to come in without further political argument.

Hsu made it clear the Taiwanese will resist any such move.

"The people of Taiwan are Chinese by race, just as the people of Mainland China are, since they are both from the same family," he said.

The international federations which control the 26 Olympic sports are conferring in one room of a Barcelona hotel while the IOC Executive Board meets in another. Later in the week, the two bodies will meet jointly.

Texas Open to open

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Tough old Don January, who happily calls himself "Old Folks," will close out one of pro golf's most remarkable seasons this week.

"This is it," drawled the slow-moving, easy-going January before teeing off in the first round today as the defending champion in the $125,000 San Antonio-Texas Open. "I've played enough. I'm running out of gas."

That's exactly what happened in his last start, two weeks ago in the Sahara Invitational in Las Vegas. He led through three rounds, then faded over the last 18 holes, and finished in a tie for second with Dave Hill.

Still, that performance helped him to the best year of his pro career that has spanned more than 20 years, and capped one of the most dramatic comebacks in sports history.

At age 46, after a three-year retirement in which he rarely played even friendly golf, he won the prestigious Tournament of Champions, was in title contention almost every time he started, has a chance at the Vardon Trophy for the tour's low scoring average and now has won $162,772, more than twice as much as he had ever won.

"It's been very rewarding, very satisfying," January said.

He wasn't sure he would make it when he started on the comeback trail two years ago.

"I hadn't even played friendly golf," he said. "And that's a whole different animal from the golf they play out here on the tour."

"When I came back out, I gave myself a year to find out if I could make it back."

The year was almost up at this tournament last season. January won it. He was back to stay.

"I shall not leave on my own," he said. "It will take my game to force me off the tour. As long as I can be competitive, as long as I can play and make money, I will continue to play."

He has acquired more than his share this season and looks for even more in this chase for a $25,000 first prize.

"You always want to do your best," he said. "That's particularly so when you're defending. But you can't predict that you'll play well. All you can do is try your hardest. And if that isn't good enough, well, I'll just pack my bags and go back to Dallas."

Among January's chief challengers here are the veteran Hill, enjoying his best season since 1969; Al Geiberger, winner of two 1976 titles, and Ben Crenshaw, a three-time winner this season who needs a first or second-place finish to move into the leading money-winning spot.

Other standouts include 1976 winners Tom Kite, Rik Massengale, Mark Hayes and Larry Ziegler, along with John Mahafey and veteran Miller Barber.

Jim Bolding of East Carolina led college football with 10 interceptions last season.

Harvester volleyers

Members of the Pampa High girls volleyball team include, from left, setter-spiker Patty Elliott, spiker Tracie Cox and setter Martha Skoog, all juniors. The trio will be in action at 6:30 p.m. today when the Harvesters meet Amarillo Tascosa in a District 3-AAAA contest after a B-team match, which starts at 6:30 p.m. Pampa is 17-2 for the season and 1-1 in district play.

KC wins, seeks Series berth today

NEW YORK (AP) — Having beaten New York Yankees ace Catfish Hunter in the game they had to win to stay alive, the Kansas City Royals go after their first World Series berth tonight against Ed Figueroa.

The Yankees, hoping for their first American League pennant in 12 years, tried to wrap it up with Hunter Wednesday. But the bid backfired when the Royals kayed Hunter early.

That left Figueroa, a 19-game winner during the regular season but the loser in Game Two of these best-of-five AL playoffs, for tonight's deciding game. Today is Figueroa's 22nd birthday.

The Royals forced the championship series to its limit by beating New York 7-4 Wednesday with a barrage of extra-base hits that included a double and triple by Hal McRae.

That overcame a pair of home runs by Graig Nettles of the Yankees and sent the two division champions back for one more game in this see-saw series.

McRae, who broke out of a slump that had left him hitless in the first three games of the series, thought that beating Hunter in Game Four would give the Royals the edge tonight.

"I feel we have the momentum now," said McRae. "I think we're in the best position. We beat their best pitcher — their big gun. They won't have the same faith in the guy they throw tomorrow (Thursday night) that they had today (Wednesday)."

Yankees Manager Billy Martin bristled at that suggestion. "Figueroa will start the fifth game, and we have a lot of faith in him," he said.

What was Martin's reason for using Figueroa, who has lost three decisions to Kansas City this season, including the second game of the playoffs?

"Nineteen wins," snapped the Yankees manager. "That's a pretty good reason."

Ignored as a possible starter for the final game was left-hander Ken Holtzman, a veteran of playoff and World Series competition during his years in Oakland. "Holtzman hasn't been pitching well lately," said Martin. "I really didn't consider him."

If the Yankees had no plans for Holtzman, Royals Manager Whitey Herzog could have used him on loan. Asked about his fifth game starter, Herzog had to hedge Wednesday night.

"I have no idea right now," he said. "I have a choice of four — Dennis Leonard, Marty Pattin, Al Fitzmorris and Paul Splittorff. If I had Holtzman, I'd pitch him."

Splittorff, who pitched 5 2-3 innings of shutout relief in Game Two, would have had the assignment almost automatically if he had not had to warm up Wednesday. But he was anxious for another shot at the Yankees.

Leonard was the second game starter and was knocked out early. But Herzog thinks the 17-game winner could do a creditable job. "He's a power pitcher and if he throws strikes he can give them trouble," the manager said.

Fitzmorris is the only Royals player who has not played in the series so far. "If I pitched, I'd feel strange," he said. "I think my bid was turned down."

Pattin faced just one batter in his only playoff appearance. "I'm ready," he said. "I should be strong. I couldn't get the ball over the plate the other night."

He would have been in trouble if he had. Herzog ordered an intentional walk to the only batter he faced.

Herzog shook up the Royals' lineup, benching regulars Jim Wohlford and Frank White. He sent McRae, usually the designated hitter, into right field, inserted veteran Cookie Rojas at second base and made Jamie Quirk, a rookie, the DH.

All of the moves worked. Rojas supplied two hits, igniting a pair of rallies. Quirk drove in two runs and scored a third. McRae scored twice after his two hits. And Patek collected three hits and three RBI.

McRae had been experimenting with his stance, trying to battle his way out of the slump.

Pampa faces Rebels in volleyball match

Pampa, 17-2 overall and 1-1 in 3-AAAA, visits Amarillo Tascosa today in a district girls volleyball match.

The Harvesters lost 15-7, 14-11 to Amarillo Palo Duro Tuesday. Tascosa, 10-8 for the season and 0-2 in district, fell 15-6, 15-12 to defending district champ Amarillo High Tuesday.

Pampa's junior varsity, 10-0 and 2-0, faces Tascosa, 10-1 and 1-1 at 6:30 p.m. in the Rebel gymnasium. The varsity match will start 20 minutes after the conclusion of B-team play.

Wildcats, Panthers claw-off Friday

By PAUL SIMS
Sports Editor

Canadian, burned in both its losses by the bomb, may have its hands full with pass-happy Panhandle in the District 1-AA opener for both teams Friday in Wildcat Stadium.

The Panthers, led by quarterback Kerry Scheller and a bevy of sure-handed targets, are averaging around 125 yards per game through the air, a statistic which is giving Canadian Coach Jack Hawthorne cause to worry.

"Our pass defense has been fair — Wellington beat us on the long pass and Sunray scored on a pass on us," Hawthorne said.

"We've had some problems in coverage — we've leaked a little bit, but we've been working on it for two weeks."

Canadian was open last week, giving the Wildcats additional time to improve its secondary, consisting of cornerbacks Marty Carr and Jackie Thompson and safeties Roy Lee Todd and Robert Wilson.

Wellington used a 55-yard bomb with 1:58 left in the game to come from behind and down Canadian, 19-14, two weeks ago. Sunray, two weeks before, connected on a 60-yard touchdown pass en route to a 21-0 rout of the Wildcats, now 3-2 for the season.

"We haven't been explosive yet. Against Wellington, we had probably our best game of the year defensively. But we had a hard time moving the ball."

"We're not showing a whole lot of improvement. I'm a little worried. I really am... We should have an explosive team but we haven't gotten there yet."

Panther Coach Rod Ivy, however, considers the Wildcat offense, led by quarterback Gary Bob Hutcheson and running backs Thompson and Carr, to be potent.

"They're real large up front and they're real aggressive. Their backs aren't real big but they're real quick and they've got good speed," Ivy said.

"They didn't look bad offensively to me. They just beat White Deer, 13-7, but they ran up and down the field all night. Of course, they had a hard time with their offense against Wellington, but Tulia had a hard time with Wellington and so have a lot of other people."

Ivy added, "I think he's got a better ball club this year than what he had last year." So does Panhandle, which is 2-3 after stumbling through a 1-9 campaign last fall.

Scheller, fleet split end Lee Powell, flanker Matty Reynolds and Scott Kennedy comprise most of the Panhandle passing attack. Running backs Mike Kirkland, who has gained around 300 yards, and Anthony Watson are capable ball carriers.

Kirkland, who may miss Friday's game because of bruised knees, and Watson also are starting linebackers and lead a defense which has yielded more than one touchdown only once this season — in a 22-20 win over Stinnett. White Deer scored three touchdowns in downing Panhandle, but one came on a kickoff return and another on a return of a pass interception.

"We feel like we've got a pretty good defense," Ivy said.

Of course, the team's strength lies in its passing attack. It is that phase which make Panhandle a three-point favorite to upset Canadian.

Friday, White Deer hosts Gruver in a District 1-A clash. Tonight, Wheeler entertains the Pampa sophomore team in a non-conference battle.

Gruver at White Deer

"They're dangerous," White Deer Coach Mike Purcell said of Gruver, 4-1 overall and 1-0 in District 1-A. The Curlew twins, Jimmy and Jerry, are explosive running backs, and center David Bevil "is one of the best linemen in our district," Purcell said. Gruver's four wins have been by shutouts; the only team to beat the Greyhounds had been Texhoma, Okla., 18-14.

White Deer, 3-2 and 1-1, has one of the quickest linebackers in the area, Steve Williams, who gained 187 yards in sparking the Bucks to a district-opening win over Sunray two weeks ago. Stratford whipped White Deer, 37-18, last week, but the Bucks are still one of the most surprising Class A teams around.

Two quick teams with dangerous halfbacks, Gruver has more size, and that could be the difference — Greyhounds by eight.

Pampa sophomores at Wheeler

This will be the second game of the season against a varsity opponent for the Pampa first-year players, who lost 23-8 to McLean. That is the only time McLean has won this season. Tiny halfback Rudy Rolland, an exciting runner, is among Pampa's promising sophomores.

Wheeler (4-1) is one of the top Class B teams in the state and climbed back into contention for the 1-B title after Booker upset Groom 29-20, last week. Wheeler, Booker, Lefors, Miami and Groom all have one loss in district play. Last week's turn of events should fire up Wheeler, which has class tailbacks in senior Don Brown and tailback Marvin Grimes.

A mismatch, Wheeler probably will be careful not to have anybody injured before district play resumes next week, so substituting may keep the score down — Mustangs by 40.

Reds awaiting outcome in AL

CINCINNATI (AP) — They're playing a waiting game in Cincinnati — and they don't seem to care who shows up at Riverfront Stadium Saturday.

The Cincinnati Reds, fresh from their three-game sweep of Philadelphia in the National League playoffs, began looking ahead to the World Series.

For some, it was a matter of taking on the bigger name.

For others, it was a matter of raking in a bigger paycheck.

And for most, it was a matter of believing that whichever team wound up representing the American League would also wind up a loser.

"I don't care who we play because these guys represent the best team in baseball," Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson said Wednesday as he awaited the outcome of the best-of-five playoff between the New York Yankees and Kansas City Royals, now tied 2-2.

"There isn't another club in baseball that can match the eight players we can put on the field every day," Anderson added. "This isn't any three or four-man team, like most clubs."

Gary Nolan, the right-hander who started the final game of the Reds' playoff against the Phillies, said emphatically that he was hoping to play New York "because I figure it's a once-in-a-lifetime shot. I've never seen Yankee Stadium except on television. And it would sure make me feel proud, standing out there on the mound."

Pete Rose also said he would prefer going against New York, but for a more practical reason. "I know the Yankees' pitchers better because I've faced most of them before," he said. "I guess you might say it's a psychological thing with me, but it always bothers me when I'm facing a pitcher for the first time."

Blakeley getting head start

DENTON, Tex. (AP) — North Texas State basketball Coach Bill Blakeley is determined to get a head start on other NCAA schools by opening practice at one minute after midnight Friday.

The second-year coach of the Eagles scheduled an intrasquad game for 12:01 Friday, the first day that workouts are allowed under NCAA rules.

"Everybody's goal is to be in the last game of the season," says Blakeley. "We're going to make sure we're in the first one."

Blakeley said the reason he is calling the odd-hour practice is "because I'm a crazy coach."

He said he didn't ask his players' approval for the post-midnight session but he added, "My wife said it was okay for me to stay out late Thursday night."

Plainview favored in PCC meet

Defending champion Plainview winner of its own tournament last week, is the favorite to win the Pampa Invitational High School Boys Golf Tournament Friday at the Pampa Country Club.

Plainview shot 593 last weekend to capture the Plainview championship. The Bulldogs won the Pampa tournament last year behind medalist Greg Weathered, who shot 72. Weathered is favored to repeat.

Other teams entered include Pampa, Pampa B-team, Borger and Amarillo schools Tascosa, Caprock, Palo Duro and Amarillo High.

Caprock to invade Pampa

3-AAAA action to start

By PAUL SIMS
Sports Editor

Amarillo Caprock Coach Ray Basinger didn't say if he was trying to instill overconfidence in Pampa's players or if he was serious. But it is obvious he is concerned about Friday night's District 3-AAAA opener.

"We're just not very good," said Basinger, whose Longhorns meet Pampa at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Harvester Stadium. "We can't win — look at the record. We're 2 and 4... We're not ready."

Can this be the same school which whipped Pampa, 34-22, last year, tied the Harvesters for the district championship and represented 3-AAAA in the playoffs by virtue of that opening win over Pampa?

The school is not — it's the team, Basinger says, that has changed.

"You (Pampa) have some quality people, several of them. We have few quality people. And if you get a couple of them hurt, like we did, it hurts you. We had to depend on our defense this year to be good and we can't afford to take two key people off the defense."

Linebacker Danny Perez and tackle Raymond Estrada will not play Friday because of injuries.

Basinger didn't mention that Caprock always seems to play well when it counts. The Longhorns, not expected to do well in 1974, the year after they won the district title outright, came close to sharing the championship. Caprock led Amarillo Palo Duro, 3-0, but lost the game — and a shot at the co-title — in the closing minutes, 7-3.

With athletes like tailback Robert Hueber, the district's third-leading rusher with 453 yards on 82 carries (5.5 average), guard Gary Crist (6-2, 220) and tackle Mark Moorman (6-1, 230), the Longhorns may be the 3-AAAA darkhorse.

"They play good defense and they have enough good people to maybe surprise a few people," Pampa Coach John Welborn said.

Caprock ranks second in total defense in the district, allowing an average of 208 yards per game. The Longhorns are first against the rush but last against the pass, an area in which Pampa does not excel.

Champion on trial for taunting referee

NEW YORK (AP) — When Muhammad Ali comes to New York, he can't seem to avoid disputes.

Two weeks ago, the world heavyweight boxing champion retained his title with a controversial 15-round decision over Ken Norton at Yankee Stadium. Ali returned to New York Wednesday and appeared in court during a $30 million libel suit brought against him by fight referee Tony Perez.

Ali sat quietly in the courtroom as Perez testified that the champion taunted him during a bout against Chuck Wepner on March 24, 1975. Ali also was quoted as having said that Perez "probably had been paid by gangsters to see that I lose" in a fight against Joe Frazier in Jan. 28, 1974 and that Perez had bet on Frazier to win the fight.

When Ali took the witness stand, he was asked by Perez' attorney, Robert G. Sullivan, if he still believed Perez had bet on the fight.

"I truly believe it," Ali replied.

Ali had taken the stand after Perez testified that his career as a referee had been damaged by Ali's remarks, which included a reference to him as "not a black man or a white man. He is a Puerto Rican. He is more black than white but he is trying to be white."

Ali has filed a $1 million counter-suit in connection with the Wepner fight, in which the champion stopped the challenger in the 15th round. Ali accused Perez of allowing Wepner to throw rabbit punches and, in the ninth round, permitting the challenger to step on his foot, resulting in a knockdown.

New Carter strategy: no more Mr. Nice

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
Jimmy Carter's new-look campaign strategy is simple and blunt: no more Mr. Nice Guy.

Carter is hammering at President Ford in the harshest terms he has used as a candidate, and his strategists say the Democratic presidential nominee believes he is gaining momentum as a result.

Ford is fighting back in strong language, on familiar issues, but events of the past week have left him on the defensive — with little more than three weeks to reverse that.

By the time the White House rivals get to their final debate Oct. 22 in Williamsburg, Va., they may need a referee instead of a moderator.

Carter, who burst to the Democratic nomination presenting himself as the candidate of honesty, trust and love, appears to have canceled the latter as far as the Republican President is concerned.

Not that he hasn't been assailing Ford's leadership all along. But in his race for the Democratic nomination, he presented his own wares without assailing his rival's, and in the first month of the general election campaign he made it a point to describe Ford as a well-intentioned man who had failed as a leader.

No longer. Carter has taken to calling Ford either ignorant or untruthful, has accused him of uttering words that disgrace the nation, has said that the President apparently was brainwashed about Soviet domination of eastern Europe and has questioned his integrity in the handling of congressional campaign money.

An AP news analysis

Ford, concluding this weekend the third and longest swing of a campaign that has seen him spend most of his time at the White House, is pressing his assertions that Carter advocates defense spending themes that would endanger the nation, and home-front programs that would force huge tax increases.

Ford told Los Angeles businessmen that federal programs Carter favors would require a tax of 100 per cent on all personal income over $50,000 and still leave the government in need of another $191 billion.

Tax and defense have been major Ford issues all along, but his current counterpunches have been blunted by the fact that he has had to clarify his own denial of Soviet domination in eastern Europe.

Clarifications are a problem for any politician; explaining yesterday's statements takes the edge off tomorrow's. The problem is compounded for Ford because a key Republican theme has been the charge that Carter is a flip-flopping candidate who wavers from one day to another. Ford said he speaks the truth when he asks for votes.

"We don't need a mistake one day and apologize for it the next," he told campaign workers in Los Angeles on Friday.

But twice during the day he issued clarifications of his statement on eastern Europe, saying he hoped to "put an end to this misunderstanding."

Ford said that what he had meant to say in Wednesday night's televised debate with Carter was that the United States "never will concede" Soviet domination of eastern European nations.

Carter is not about to let the issue lapse, not in the midst of a weekend's campaigning that includes appearances in Cleveland, South Bend, Chicago and Milwaukee, cities where voters who trace their heritage to eastern Europe represent a large segment of the electorate.

Carter had the schedule before he had the issue, but he can hardly hope for a better forum at this point than his Sunday appearance before a Polish-American Pulaski Day dinner in Chicago.

Such ethnic Americans are the very groups whose leaders have chorused angry protests about the Ford statements.

Furthermore, many of those voters are Roman Catholics, and the controversy could prove a boon to Carter in dealing with his acknowledged problem with that group, a problem grounded in the controversy over abortion and in his own fundamentalist Baptist faith.

An Associated Press poll that showed Carter had gained slightly over Ford in the San Francisco debate also revealed an increase in Catholic support.

Among Catholics, Carter led for 4.1 percentage points before the debate and 9.1 points afterward. That was before the controversy about eastern Europe had ballooned to its present proportions.

It wasn't long ago that Carter was the candidate doing the explaining. His explanations followed his use of explicit language in discussing just in an interview with Playboy magazine, and of a vague statement on taxes that left Republicans an opening to assert he wants to raise levies on half the people in the country.

Ford grabbed the advantage in the first presidential campaign debate Sept. 21 in Philadelphia. Public opinion polls showed him narrowing Carter's lead.

In that situation, the Democratic nominee entered the second debate in San Francisco determined to hit hard, saying he would not defer to Ford's incumbency but would treat his rival as an equal.

He did that and more. Since San Francisco, he has escalated the attack. For days, Carter had refrained from criticizing Ford over reported federal inquiries into his congressional campaign finances. He seemed content to let that issue bloom as it would without trying to press it himself.

Now he has declared that there are discrepancies to be explained because of published reports alleging personal use of campaign funds.

Ford told a White House news conference last week that "no campaign money ever went to me personally."

Carter cited an Internal Revenue Service report, disclosed by the Wall Street Journal. "It's reported that he only spent on personal expenses out of his own pocket $5 a week for himself and his family. There seems to be a discrepancy here."

The Journal reported that the IRS report said Ford had used money from a campaign committee bank account to pay for clothes and a vacation and then later reimbursed the committee. It also said Ford apparently got along on about $5 a week in pocket money, but did not mention members of his family in that context.

"I call on the American people to force Mr. Ford to tell the truth, tell the whole truth, and nothing but the truth," Carter said.

There were other campaign problems for Ford. Among them:

—The fact that the administration did not do what he said it was going to do about U.S. companies involved in the Arab boycott against Israel. Ford said in the debate that the Commerce Department would name "those companies that have participated."

But the order he signed Thursday applies only to companies that observe the boycott in the future.

Carter already has pointed out that Ford's claim to have supported antiboycott legislation was "a disgrace" because the administration opposed it.

—Earl L. Butz, who resigned as secretary of agriculture because of a crude slur against blacks, quitting three days after the remark was disclosed. Carter said Butz should have been fired immediately. Ford said the comment Butz made was comparable to Carter's statement last spring supporting "ethnic purity" of neighborhoods. Carter apologized for that at the time.

And it hardly helped put the Butz episode to rest when Butz turned up Friday campaigning for Republican candidates in Mississippi.

Buttons missing from campaign

By BILL CHOYKE

Pampa's Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — Even the folks at Jimmy Carter's presidential headquarters in Atlanta are complaining that there's something missing in this year's presidential campaign.

"You can't get a button," moaned an aide to vice presidential nominee Sen. Walter Mondale. "The only way is through a private vendor. But you can't easily find any of them either."

The absence of buttons hailing the Carter-Mondale ticket is but one of many changes both Presidential campaigns have had to make this year in light of the new federal campaign financing law. The act, an outgrowth of the 1972 election abuses, limits the two major candidates to spending about two-thirds of what their counterparts did four years ago.

In Texas, for example, the new campaign financing law has produced slimmer campaign budgets, less paid staff and more reliance on volunteer help.

"We have to depend on very little paid salaries," said Chuck Parrish, the Georgian who is running Carter's Texas campaign. "It makes us work with the Democratic Party and the traditional Democrats in the country."

Carter's Texas budget, which covers staff and operating costs, is $175,000. Parrish directs about only a dozen individuals who make between $600-$800 monthly. There are another 60 Carter workers in Texas who receive "token amounts."

The result, adds Parrish, is that the Carter campaign is focusing its spending on less than 150 of the state's 254 counties.

Similar problems are being experienced by the President Ford Committee, which has had to reduce spending for field operations in Texas and other states, says a Ford national staffer.

"We have not elected to do away with any particular sector of the traditional campaign," said Royston Hughes, deputy chairman for administration and treasurer of the President Ford Committee.

Approved in 1974, the campaign financing law places limitations on both what a candidate could receive and spend in the primary.

Additionally, it establishes a federalized funding scheme for the general election in which each candidate is given $21.8 million.

Furthermore, the law says that both national parties could spend $3.2 million on behalf of a presidential campaign. While individuals and groups can raise and spend money on behalf of the candidate, those expenditures must be made independently of both the national committee and the presidential organizations.

For both the primaries and general election, Carter will have spent about $35 million by election day, Nov. 2, according to Federal Election Commission records. The President meanwhile will spend about $36.2 million for both campaigns.

Comparatively, former President Richard Nixon spent a total of $68 million in 1972, according to estimates. Democratic contender Sen. George McGovern's campaign cost $42 million, altogether.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — President Ford interrupted his campaign to visit Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., who is recovering from cancer surgery at a New York City hospital.

"He is doing extremely well," the President said doctors told him of Humphrey during Tuesday's 10-to 15-minute visit.

Humphrey, 65, who had his bladder removed last Thursday, is expected to remain in the hospital for another two to three weeks.

DETROIT (AP) — Antal Dorati, in his seventh and final season as conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra in Washington, reportedly will become conductor of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra.

The Detroit News said Tuesday that the Hungarian-born Dorati would succeed Aldo Ceccato as Detroit Symphony music director starting next season. Dorati, 70, who also is principal conductor of London's Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, is expected to serve at least three years.

Detroit Symphony President Robert Semple would neither confirm the nor deny the report.

ROME (AP) — Empress Farah Pahlvi of Iran celebrates her birthday Thursday, and the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization has chosen that day for the release of the new Ceres medal featuring the empress, FAO said Tuesday.

The Ceres medals depict distinguished contemporaries as the Roman goddess of agriculture. The medals are issued to highlight the crucial role of women in social and economic development.

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Eugenio Montale — last year's Nobel Prize winner in literature — apparently doesn't like birthday parties.

Montale turned 80 Tuesday and disappeared from his apartment in downtown Milan to avoid "useless celebrations," he said in a note left in his home.

The birthday of the Italian poet was celebrated anyway at some Italian universities and in his native Liguria.

CARTAGENA, Colombia (AP) — King Juan Carlos and Queen Sofia of Spain attended Columbus Day celebrations in this Caribbean city and heard Colombian President Alfonso Lopez Michelsen praise Spain's contributions to the new world.

"Spain gave us a culture, cities, a language... and today's Spain still can offer Latin America much more of its talents," the president said Tuesday.

The king and queen arrived Monday for a five-day visit to Colombia and are to make Bogota, the capital, their next stop.

LITTLETON, Colo. (AP) — Sen. Floyd K. Haskell, D-Colo., and his wife of 34 years have been granted an uncontested divorce.

Judge Philip Gregg of Arapahoe County District Court issued the decree Tuesday on the basis of a joint petition that Haskell, 60, and his wife, Eileen Nicoll Haskell, filed on January. Under Colorado law, grounds for divorce are not required when a joint petition is filed. The Haskells have three daughters.

Ford raps Sen. Tower

By BILL CHOYKE
Pampa's Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — President Ford took a potshot at his friend and supporter Sen. John Tower recently when he berated Congress for failing to pass the Export Administration Act.

Not naming any individual, Ford rapped Congress during last week's presidential debate for not approving the legislation, which included a tough anti-boycott provision. Tower, a strong ally of the President, personally takes credit for killing the bill.

"Yes, he did (kill it)," conceded a spokeswoman for the senator. "But Tower was acting on his own."

Late last month, on the eve of adjournment, Tower threatened to tie the Senate up in parliamentary knots if the Senate leadership attempted to pass the measure. At the time it was reported that the Wichita Falls Republican was acting on behalf of the White House — and Tower did not deny those accounts then.

But after Ford's recent statements blaming Congress for not approving the bill, Tower's office now says the senator acted independently of the White House because "he thought it was a bad bill."

During his foreign policy debate with Democratic nominee Jimmy Carter, Ford said the White House "tried to convince the House and Senate that we should have an amendment" in the export act "which would take strong and effective action against those who participate or cooperate" in the Arab boycott of American firms that had high-ranking Jewish officials or did business with Israel.

Then, saying that the Commerce Department would disclose those companies that participated in the Arab boycott, Ford added: "This is something that we can do; the Congress failed to do it, and we intend to do it."

During the closing days of the 94th Congress, Tower raised objections when the Senate moved to appoint conferees to reconcile differences in House and Senate — passed versions of the bill. After Tower repeatedly objected, the Senate leadership allowed the bill to die.

A leader in Ford's presidential campaign in Texas, Tower repeatedly invoked parliamentary procedure during the past month to kill several other bills which were generally more consumer than business oriented.

Ford's statements in light of his ally's actions triggered a strong outcry by a number of lawmakers who said the President was purposely misrepresenting the facts.

"I think it is unfortunate that the President of the United States would so mislead the American people about his position on the boycott legislation," said Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., the chairman of the banking panel of which Tower is ranking, minority member.

"His feeble, last minute effort to convince the public that he is against the boycott by ordering the Commerce Department to release the names of U.S. companies who are participating in the boycott is a sham," Proxmire added.

The panel of six men and six women returned shortly after lunch Tuesday and told Superior Court Chief Justice Walter McLaughlin they were deadlocked and "have been for some time."

The jury has been considering the case against the Brandeis honor graduate since Thursday afternoon.

Ms. Saxe faces three life terms if convicted on all charges.

Saxe jury deadlocked

BOSTON (AP) — The jury in the murder and bank robbery trial of Susan E. Saxe has been ordered back for more deliberations after the panel reported it was deadlocked and could not reach a verdict.

Today was the fifth day of deliberations in the case of the 27-year-old antiwar activist, who is charged in the holdup of the State Street Bank's Brighton branch in 1970. Boston Patrolman Walter Schroeder was shot to death during that $26,585 robbery.

The panel of six men and six women returned shortly after lunch Tuesday and told Superior Court Chief Justice Walter McLaughlin they were deadlocked and "have been for some time."

The jury has been considering the case against the Brandeis honor graduate since Thursday afternoon.

Campaign kicks off- Nobody for president

By WILLIAMSCHEFFMANN
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — They held a presidential campaign rally in front of City Hall — and Nobody showed up.

But that was fine with Wavy Gravy and the rest of the crowd from the Nobody for President campaign, who kicked off a national tour under a warm October sun in Civic Plaza on Tuesday.

The arrival of the candidate was strategically timed for late in the rally. The candidate's motorcade, a battered sportscar, drove across the sidewalk with a bunting-festooned wooden chair mounted on the trunk.

Nobody was sitting in it. Around the improvised stage were hung banners carrying slogans such as "Nobody loves the poor," "Nobody will end war," and "Nobody will lower your taxes."

Gravy, a San Francisco Bay area counterculture hero who said he's Nobody's Fool, was smeared with white clown makeup for the occasion. He told the estimated 200 people gathered around the reflecting pool that Nobody would address the crowd.

Then, a pair of plastic windup teeth chattered into the microphone in response to questions on foreign and domestic issues.

Gravy, along with other anti-establishment figures of the 1960s and early '70s, ran the Hog Farm commune in Sonoma County north of San Francisco. The group became known for rock music festivals and carnivals and for a variety of zany antics centered on the area's counterculture lifestyle.

Paul Krassner, editor of The Realist magazine and himself a substantial counterculture figure, told the crowd he wanted to see Nobody get elected.

"If we need an official greeter for the country, we can get Harry Belafonte or Paul Newman," he said.

Even Democratic hopeful Jimmy Carter gave Nobody a boost on one visit to San Francisco. Krassner said, when he told the throng assembled to see him that "nobody has all the answers."

"We all cheered and he didn't quite know why," Krassner said.

The cross-country tour is scheduled for stops in Los Angeles, Albuquerque, N.M., Austin, Tex. and Washington, winding up in New York's Washington Square on election day, Nov. 2.

Gravy, Nobody's manager on the campaign trail, said his candidate has a good chance to win the election. He pointed out that 40 per cent of eligible voters in the last presidential election voted for nobody.

Income in Anchorage climbs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Good salaries paid to workers on the Alaskan oil pipeline apparently were a factor in catapulting Anchorage, Alaska, into second place among metropolitan areas ranked according to income, the government reports.

The figures, which cover 1974, are used by the government to determine an area's eligibility for income support programs, revenue-sharing and other federal aid.

According to the report released Tuesday, the Bridgeport-Stamford - Norwalk - Danbury area of Connecticut remains the nation's richest metropolitan area with an average annual personal income of $7,781 per capita, an increase of 9.1 per cent over 1973.

The average per capita income for Anchorage amounted to $7,159 for 1974, an increase of 22.9 per cent. It had been 14th among metropolitan areas in 1973. The Commerce Department, which released the figures, gave no explanation for the surge, but the change was said to reflect at least in part the start of work on the Alaskan pipeline and the relatively high pay for construction workers on the project.

McAllen - Pharr - Edinburg, Tex., took over from Laredo, Tex., as the metropolitan area in the survey with the lowest per capita personal income.

McAllen ranked 261st at $2,857, an increase of 2.5 per cent over the previous year. Laredo moved ahead of McAllen with a per capita annual personal income of $2,960, an increase of 9.5 per cent over a year earlier.

The rankings do not take into account the differing costs of living around the country. In Anchorage and Stamford, for example, living costs are higher than they are in the McAllen area.

The Bridgeport area's income was 43 per cent above the national per capita personal income of $5,449, which had been reported earlier by the Commerce Department. The national average was an advance of 8.5 per cent over 1973.

Aside from Bridgeport and Anchorage, other areas in the top 10 for 1974 were Washington, D.C., with average annual per capita income of $7,102, up 9.4 per cent over 1973; Nassau-Suffolk, N.Y., $7,084, up 7.9 per cent; San Francisco-Oakland, $7,030, up 10.8 per cent; Newark, N.J., $6,861, up 9.7 per cent; Chicago, $6,780, up 10.1 per cent; New York, $6,668, up 9 per cent; West Palm Beach-Boca Raton, Fla., $6,622, up 6.5 per cent, and Reno, Nev., $6,620, up 3.6 per cent.

The only area to drop out of the top 10 from 1973 was Sarasota, Fla., where 1974 per capita income was $6,483, up 7.4 per cent.

Personal income consists of all wages, salaries, interest, dividends and other money received by individuals after deduction of Social Security taxes. Personal income tax deductions are not included.

In a 1919 speech Woodrow Wilson said, "I can predict with absolute certainty that within another generation there will be another world war if the nations of the world do not concert the method by which to prevent it."

Teamsters plan resignations from union pension fund

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most of the trustees of one of the Teamster Union's biggest pension funds are planning to resign in an effort to ease legal problems stemming from a federal investigation into alleged misuse of funds and ties to organized crime.

Informed sources said the 15 trustees of the Central States Pension Fund, who are drawn from the union and the trucking industry, made the decision at a meeting Monday at Rancho LaCosta, a plush resort south of Los Angeles.

The sources said the agreement called for at least 11 of the trustees to resign by the end of this month.

While no resignations have been made yet, the sources said, the trustees expect to work out the details within the next few weeks on who will go and who will stay.

A spokesman for the fund, Robert Billings, declined comment, but one source said the agreement was still "very tenuous at this point."

"There is general agreement. But the problem now is who must resign, the source said. 'It's not set yet.'"

Any mass resignation of trustees would represent the most dramatic of a series of moves the fund has taken in recent months to show the government it is taking reform steps in an effort to win back the tax exemption suspended by the Internal Revenue Service in June.

The trustees asked the IRS in September to restore the exemption, citing various changes the fund has made in its operations and declaring a willingness to sell the $1.4-billion fund's real estate holdings.

In addition to the IRS probe, the fund is also the target of a joint investigation by the departments of Labor and Justice.
