

Black jelly bean coloring banned

By JOHN STOWELL, Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration today banned the artificial colors used to make maraschino cherries red and jelly beans and licorice black, saying their safety is questionable. Laboratory tests with dogs suggest that food dye called Red No. 4 may cause urinary bladder polyps and atrophy of the adrenal glands, the FDA said. Furthermore, there is no reliable testing method to assure that the color carbon black does not contain a cancer-causing byproduct, the agency said. The FDA announced it also will ban 10 other color additives, approved for use only in cosmetics, in 30 days, that it will permanently approve 20 other colors for use only in external drugs and cosmetics by the year's end and give industry more time to conduct further safety testing of 52 other colors, three of them in food. Richard Honk, who heads the FDA's color additives division, said the carbon black ban signals an end to black jelly beans and licorice.

It was unclear whether the Red No. 4 ban would spell the same fate for red maraschino cherries or whether another additive can be used. The color does not influence the flavor of cherries, which also are marketed in green and in their natural yellow color after processing. Three years ago, the Giant Food retail chain began marketing maraschino cherries without artificial coloring in its 110 stores in Virginia, Maryland and Washington, D.C. But they have not been a wildly popular product, store officials say. People always think cherries should be red, and yellow ones just don't register. They're looking for something red to put on grapefruit or in whiskey sours, said Janet Tenney, assistant to Giant's vice president for consumer programs. Under the FDA order, Red No. 4 is banned for use in foods and drugs taken internally, but can still be used safely in cosmetics and externally applied drugs. Carbon black is banned for use in candies, drugs and cosmetics such as eye shadow and mascara. The FDA said there is a "lack of adequate chemical specifications" for the color and no adequate method to test for the presence of low levels of a manufacturing byproduct called extractable polynuclear aromatics, some of which are known carcinogens. The announcement follows the FDA's ban last February of Red No. 2.

A recent story in the Amarillo Globe Times disclosed the travel practices of the Amarillo City Commission. The reporter, Bill Cox, learned that commissioners take their wives along on city business trips.

Here at home, Mack Wofford, Pampa's city manager, said that Pampa has long had a policy of paying the expenses of six city officials — the mayor, four commissioners, city attorney — and their wives to two annual meetings.

Wofford said that last fiscal year the city spent $3,358 for travel expenses to any and all meetings concerning city business. He said the 1976-77 budget has $5,000 reserved for travel expenses.

The city manager said that if the elected officials want to take their wives along on the two trips a year, the city pays the fare. He said that this is a traditional practice in many Texas cities.

Maybe it is time — with inflation like it is and with city-owned utilities costing us more each year — for Pampa to break tradition. Many Pampans on fixed incomes, who have a difficult time paying increased monthly water, sewer, and trash collection bills, would appreciate the elected city officials cutting back on trips and not requiring taxpayers to pay the wives' expenses.

Once Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan is saddled with a problem, he takes the bit and pulls until he plows up the answer.

In mid July the sheriff determined that an unclaimed horse on a pasture in the south part of the county must be sold, in accordance with the law. He arranged for the proper newspaper advertising for the one-horse auction, but then was notified that an owner had been located.

But no one came forth and the horse stayed around for several days. Then it turned up missing and the sheriff was left holding a bill for a newspaper ad.

The bill was like a burr under the sheriff's blanket — up until late last week. He had managed to locate the person who had pastured the horse (the stallion had been borrowed from the actual owner).

Sheriff Jordan explained to the person responsible for pasturing the horse that the proper gesture would be for him to send along a check for the advertising bill so that the sheriff wouldn't have to drive down to Hale Center after it. Payment has been received. Case closed.

According to a recent report, Congress itself cost each American — every man, woman and child in the country — $4.30. That's almost $1 billion it spent on itself and $2 million for each member.

The annual cost of running Congress is rising at a much faster rate than either the federal budget or consumer prices.

The study showed that Congress costs increased 168 per cent since 1970 and 441 per cent since 1960.

The school system in Pampa costs each person in the district — estimating that the district population is about 24,000 — is about $253.

We've got National Pickle Week and Hospital Week and 4-H Week and on and on.

Well, this week we have two of them. Gov. Briscoe got carried away and proclaimed Sept. 19 to 25 Texas Volunteer Week and Highway and Transportation Week.

The vital role of transportation is a matter of concern to every Texan, he was quoted in one release.

In another news release, he said "I am proud to designate a special week to pay honor to the thousands of volunteers who give so much to their state and its people. They give not only of their time and talents, but they give our state services a special, unique quality — the quality of persons to persons caring and attention."

Boys vs. bears

The Buttram boys — Chris, 5, and Sean, 7 — both of Amarillo, paused in their tour of the Tri-State Fair in Amarillo Tuesday to become better acquainted with this Alaskan brown bear outside one of the exhibits. A Hereford, right, waits for a final grooming treatment before the junior heifer show today. Other competition through Saturday includes the barrow show, Angus cattle show, Shorthorn cattle show, Hereford cattle show, Quarter Horse show, Paint Horse show, lamb show and the Golden Spread Western pleasure futurity.

Midway life pretty fair business

By JEANNE GRIMES, Pampa News Staff

The carnival came to Sulphur Springs one day in 1925 and Robert "Sunshine" Stubblefield has never been the same since. Stubblefield admits he's "going on 75-years-old" but age hasn't done that much to slow down the man who has become a fixture with the Bill Hames Shows during the past 50 years.

The Bill Hames Shows, midway and carnival operator at the Tri-State Fair for "about 30 years," is back at the annual Amarillo exposition this week and Stubblefield is with them.

His duties with the carnival vary, he said, from picking up the mail, acting as night watchman, putting up the "Bill Hames Shows" sign at the midway entrance and countless other jobs which crop up in the day-to-day operation of the carnival.

Stubblefield, taking a break between jobs at the Tri-State Fair Tuesday, began to relax and reminisce about his life with the carnival.

It all started that day in 1925 when the carnival came to Sulphur Springs. "At that time," Stubblefield said, "the shows played in the park. They didn't allow no colored people out there."

But even though Stubblefield was barred from attending the carnival, he thought there might be the possibility of work when the show broke down to move on to the next stop.

"I saw them loading the show on the train," he said, "and I went down there and they offered me a job."

That first job was helping to hitch up the show's wagons so they could be hauled to the train for loading.

He picked up his name "Sunshine" when he joined the show and began performing in the minstrel tent.

"I was a song and dance man," he said. "They liked my dancing."

There are still some minstrel shows around, Stubblefield said, but they are no longer as popular as they once were.

He remembered one time in 1929 when tragedy struck the carnival, but spared the minstrel show.

"We played an old southern reunion at Sherman. We had a train show with 34 wagons. It come a storm and blowed every wagon over except the minstrel show stage.

"Didn't anybody get hurt," Stubblefield said, but show officials "never did get it all fixed around just right that year."

Carnivals, Stubblefield said, are living proof of the axiom "Work expands to fill the time allotted to it."

"If we've got four hours, we can get it (the show) up in four hours. If we have four days, it will take us four days."

Breaking the show down is always a much faster process that setting it up, Stubblefield said, because when setting up "we have to get everything in line."

Before joining the carnival Stubblefield said he was "kunda on my own. I used to work in the fields."

"I was 23 when I joined and I had worked on the farm all of the time."

The Bill Hames Shows, based in Ft. Worth, makes "about 30" show dates each year in Texas and Louisiana, appearing at fairs, stock shows and other gatherings.

The carnival year begins in February and closes in November, but Stubblefield said that after a two week rest in November he is ready to hit the road again.

His wife, who died three years ago, was not a carney, Stubblefield said. "She liked home better."

At the end of the 1970 season, the Bill Hames Shows gave Stubblefield a gold pocket watch for his 50-year tenure and then they sent him to Hawaii for a short vacation.

Stubblefield said he has never encountered any racial problems within the carnival.

"We're pretty lucky never to have run into that. Everybody tries to work together. I wouldn't leave these people."

"I must have done 'em a good job or they wouldn't have kept me on."

Comments 'could damage Carter'

By BILL CHOYKE, Pampa's Washington Bureau and Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Rep. Jack Hightower, a Southern Baptist, believed that fellow church member Jimmy Carter's recent comments on morality were "ill-advised and unfortunate."

Selecting his words carefully, the Vernon Democrat also said the Democratic Presidential candidate's statements to be published soon in Playboy Magazine could damage Carter's election hopes this fall.

Excerpts of the magazine article, in which Carter was unusually candid in reviewing some of his innermost thoughts about sex, were released this week.

Calling it a "pornographic magazine," Hightower, a first term lawmaker, said he could not understand why he (Carter) would grant an interview to Playboy Magazine in the first place.

"The whole thing is so unnecessary," said the dismayed lawmaker who faces a tough re-election bid against former Congressman Bob Price in the Nov. 2 election.

Carter's Playboy comments have triggered considerable discussion among members on Capitol Hill although most do not say much publicly other than assessing the possible political implications of the interview. Senator John Tower, for example, argued that the article should not be an issue in the campaign.

"I wouldn't have done it," the Texas Republican Senator reflected, "private morality has a lot to do with public morality as well. But I don't think it should be an issue in a campaign."

Hightower, a self described teetotaler, has previously both supported and defended the Presidential nominee against those critical of him and his religious leanings.

While leaving the distinct impression that he is less enthusiastic now about a Carter candidacy than before, Hightower said he still supports the Democratic nominee despite being unhappy with the Playboy interview.

"I have defended most of what he has said," Hightower remarked regarding Carter's religious beliefs. "Mr Carter has not initiated the dialog. From what I have read, he appears to have answered questions that others had raised about his religion."

"I am very much opposed to interjecting religion in the campaign," he added.

To his son, Jack, Jimmy Carter's remarks about sex in Playboy Magazine were part of an effort to reveal his "inner self."

To an authority on Baptist social ethics, they were an accurate reflection of Southern Baptist teachings.

And to a clergyman-psychologist they showed that Carter is admirably frank about his sexual fantasies.

The Democratic Presidential candidate said in the interview that he had "looked on a lot of women with lust. I've committed adultery in my heart many times."

Young Carter, asked for his reaction in Ashton, Iowa, where he spoke to a fund raising dinner Tuesday, said, "I've done that myself, and I think that most people who are truthful about it have committed some sin in their heart."

He said his father made the remarks because he believes that "a politician who runs for office ought to just open himself up completely. Anything in his past, anything anybody wants to talk about. Dad will talk about it with him."

In Nashville, Tenn., Dr. Harry N. Hollis Jr. said that "what Carter says about lust and forgiveness reflects deep insight and knowledge of the teachings of his religion."

Hollis, a staff member of the Christian Life Commission of the Southern Baptist Conference, said Carter's remarks reveal "an open man, an honest man who know a great deal about reality and teachings of his religion."

His only criticism was that he "wouldn't have used the same salty language" Carter employed in the interview.

Jack Carter defended his father's language on grounds that "he was saying this to people who talk that way all the time."

In Evanston, Ill., Dr. Ronald R. Lee said he admired Carter's candor, but felt he may have been politically naive in revealing his secret passions.

Lee, a Methodist clergyman and professor of pastoral psychology at Garrett-Evangelical Theological Seminary, said Carter's thoughts were not unusual. He said most people who don't have such sexual fantasies are simply repressing them.

"Some people feel that to have these thoughts is sinful," the psychologist said, "but that is not my position. When they are able to see that they don't act on their feelings and their behavior is responsible, this cleans up a lot of pathology and they are able to lead healthy, happy lives," he said. Carter's interview with Playboy magazine has spurred comment from Texas Baptist leaders that varies from ringing condemnation to unqualified approval.

The Rev. Dr. W.A. Criswell, whose 18,000-member First Baptist Church of Dallas is the largest Southern Baptist congregation in the nation, didn't like the forum.

Ford aides say he is hoping to dispel doubts about his intelligence and ability. "He wants to appear informed, decisive and experienced while picturing Carter as the opposite," one aide said.

For his dress rehearsal, Ford planned to perform before videotape cameras that would allow him to replay and refine his responses.

Carter's aides said the Democratic nominee planned no special preparations for the debate other than to rest and read briefing books designed to keep him abreast of the issues.

As Carter relaxed at home in Plains, Ga., his campaign organization issued the first details of what the Democratic nominee has promised would be an overhaul of the federal bureaucracy.

In a statement, Carter said he would abolish four existing agencies that now deal with energy questions, replacing them with a Cabinet-level department. He said he would abolish the Federal Energy Administration, the Federal Power Commission, the Energy Research and Development Administration and the Energy Resources Council.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Ford and the parks

President Ford's proposal to spend $1.5 billion to "expand" the national parks strikes us as an unnecessary departure from his customary fiscal theme. Possibly he thought a dramatic press conference in front of Old Faithful, reminiscing about his Yellowstone ranger days, would help his campaign promotion of the "quality of life."

The proposal comes at a time when the national parks are agonizing over their multiplicity of tourist problems. Some officials are weighing the possibility of closing the parks to all but backpackers and severely reducing the number of admissible automobiles — among other drastic moves.

How odd it is that the president, when it comes to the national parks, resorts to the old throw-dollars-at-a-problem formula that has so fallen out of favor even amongst liberal politicians. We think he would have been wise to reassess the whole structure of the national park idea before repeating the very mistakes that led to current headaches.

Foremost among national park problems is the flow of tourists. The principle was supposed to be that the parks belonged to "everybody" — a principle that never works in practice. The problem increasingly became how to regulate this flow enough to let "everybody" in and still maintain scenic integrity. The bureaucratic "solution" has been to declare the parks more and more off-limits.

Let us imagine that, instead of assuming 100 percent maintenance as the government has, a general recognition of private enterprise were to take hold. That is, the parks were to be considered, from now on, profit-making enterprises. The tourist regulation problem would be handled most fairly of all according to price of admission. Those people who cared most for the park and its environs would be willing to pay the gate.

Surely the most orderly, the most well-kept, the cleanest parks are the private ones. We need only cite Disneyland and Disney World — capitalism at its most delightful and democratic. Nor does the privatization of parks necessarily entail commercial clutter. There is profit in keeping places scenic, too — as commercial centers such as Vail, Colorado, can attest.

And we submit that the real clutter in the national parks today owes more to bureaucratic design than to sheer commercialism. Where concessions have defaced "nature," you can bet it was with government permission and even favoritism.

It is indeed time to do some serious thinking about the national parks. There is every reason, however, to include them in the fiscal conservatism theme, not to make them — however politically or unpolitically intended — the sole exception. If there are exceptions, which we don't think there are, there are doubtless more pressing and more humane matters.

NATION'S PRESS Carter Parroting HHH

(Wall Street Journal)

Probably it isn't true, but everytime Jimmy Carter brings up the Federal Reserve in a campaign speech we suspect that he has been getting thought messages from Hubert Humphrey or Henry Reuss.

dWe are told that Mr. Carter doesn't want to expand the powers of the "Imperial Presidency" even after he occupies that post. But Mr. Carter makes an exception by declaring that the President should be able to fire the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. The only reason we can imagine for such a reversal would be that Mr. Carter has heard from Capitol Hill how Fed chairman can spoil the fun of being a Congressman or a President.

Some of us think that is good, that we need protection against the beguiling notion that all the troubles of the Republican can be solved by printing more money. If Mr. Carter really wants to dominate the Fed we hope he is equally willing to shoulder the full blame for an consequences that flow from booting out old men who sometimes — but not often enough — guard the printing presses from Congressmen who would like to run them at full speed.

Imperial power carries commensurate risks.

Kissinger told to watch step

By ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23 — There is a strikingly significant difference between Secretary Kissinger's current round of shuttle diplomacy and his previous similar gyrations in the Middle East.

That venture has cost U.S. taxpayers more than $4 billion to date — with another huge installment sure to be sought next year.

This time on his southern Africa expedition, Kissinger is on forceful notice to watch his step in committing the U.S. to multi-billion-dollar handouts in the name of "peace."

Whether the strong-willed Secretary of State heeds the warning is conjectural. Certainly he could not have escaped the emphatic admonition.

In an unmistakable manner it was administered several days before his fanfare departure for Africa, and although little publicized it was as explicit as it was jarring. While outwardly Kissinger, and the White House, seemingly ignored it, it's clearly on the record — and they would be wise to mark it well.

If they don't, they are virtually certain to run into the same kind of crackdown that befell the $25 million in economic aid to Communist-ruled Mozambique that Kissinger airily promised at the Lusaka conference last April.

That wound up in the wastebasket — and the same thing could well happen again.

Buying Peace
It is now clearly evident that the essential ingredient of Kissinger's celebrated "shuttle diplomacy" is vast amounts of U.S. dollars.

In effect, he literally buys "peace" or what passes for it. That's how he put over the hooplaed Sinai and Golan Heights agreements between Israel, Egypt and Syria — with each of them getting huge handouts in the guise of "economic aid," and with more billions doubtless forthcoming in the years ahead.

While dollar-larded shuttle diplomacy in the Middle East had no difficulty winning congressional approval.

WORKERS EXPLOITED

Unions...the 'blue-collar elite'

By H.C. GORDON

It is the arrogant claim of union leaders in this country to speak for the interests of "labor" as a whole. In examining this claim however, it is clear that nothing could be further from the truth.

Barely a quarter of the American work force is unionized, and that mere fraction is made up of semi- or unskilled workers in marginal industries, but predominately of highly skilled workers in those industries most vital to the successful functioning of our economy.

What the union leaders really represent, therefore, is a blue-collar elite whose primary concern is the enhancement of its own special privileges — often at the expense of other, less fortunate workers. Ironically enough, it is usually the neediest workers of all who are the most cruelly exploited by the special powers and privileges now enjoyed by labor unions.

The exploitation of our young students by the union monopoly system is particularly disturbing. Today, thousands of our young people must take part-time employment — either to earn money for college or to acceptance of this formula when applied to southern Africa is another story. Factors, forces and other motivating elements are distinctly different.

Also importantly playing an intangible role is the widespread belief in Capitol Hill that the principal reason for Kissinger's headline-making African safari at this time is the presidential election.

Sardonically being recalled is what happened dramatically in 1972 — when on the eve of the November balloting he proclaimed the signing of the "peace in Vietnam" agreement that subsequently turned out to be a disaster riddled shambles. But for the election, the phony accord was a spectacular coup.

It will be no surprise to members of Congress if a comparable razzle-dazzle isn't again pulled out of Kissinger's hat.

On the Record
If that happens, he is militantly on notice of unsparring congressional challenge.

That is spelled out unmistakably and warningly in the Congressional Record.

It was done just before Kissinger took off for Africa when the Senate unanimously agreed to the demand of Senator James Allen, D-Ala., that all funds for Communist-ruled Mozambique be eliminated.

This was a complete breakdown by the bipartisan internationalists who several weeks previous had steamrolled Kissinger's handout through.

But Allen, tireless master filibusterer, stopped them dead in their tracks. With adjournment due in several weeks and the legislative calendar piled high with important measures, foremost among them the long-wrought tax revision, the tall Alabamian held the trump card and left no doubt of his readiness to use it.

Back by like-minded colleagues on both sides of the aisle, it was also very evident he was in a decisive position to make a time-consuming filibuster stick.

So after a hush-hush meeting between Kissinger and Sens. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., Charles Percy, R-Ill., and Dick Clark, D-Iowa, strong partisans of his "new African policy," they agreed it was necessary to come to terms with Allen.

Following is the official verbatim account of that portentous capitulation.

Allen: "As far as any funds going to Mozambique as requested by the administration, this bill contains absolutely no money for that purpose."

Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, Appropriations subcommittee chairman: "The Senator is correct."

Allen: "As to the Botswana appropriation, that is not to be used directly or indirectly for allowing that country to close down the railroad into Rhodesia, is it?"

Inouye: "The Senator is correct. Assurances have been received from Botswana that this railroad will be kept open."

Allen: "Again, none of the money would be used for Mozambique, is that correct?"

Sen. Brooke, leading advocate of large-scale grants to black African countries: "That is correct."

Allen: "There is no hidden source of funds in this bill that might be drawn on for Mozambique in any fashion; is that correct?"

Brooke: "That is correct."

Allen: "And assurances are given that an amendment will not be offered to provide $25 million as requested by the administration that might be used in whole or in part for Mozambique. Is that correct?"

Inouye: "If an amendment is present, I will oppose it and I will join the Senator for Alabama to carry on a lengthy educational discussion."

Allen: "And I have the same assurance from the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts, do not?"

Brooke: "The Senator has that assurance."

And that's the way Kissinger's grandstanding commitment at Lusaka was given the coup de grace. And it is also a foreboding reminder that the same thing could happen to grandiose promises he making during his dollar-dangling current diplomatic shuttling.

Justice loses again

The people's choice versus the people

By TOM TIEDE

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Contrary to the best image of government, Rep. Robert L.F. Sikes will be coming back to Congress next year. The Florida Democrat won his party's primary last week and as usual will have no Republican opposition in the general election. Unless his constituents get religion, and boycott the November polls unanimously, the aging warlord is guaranteed his 19th legislative term.

Hence justice loses again. Wrong triumphs. Democracy weakens. It is not just that Robert Sikes deserves reelection less than anyone in Washington, it is also the manner in which his victory will come. He is one of the few congressmen ever to be reprimanded by his peers for official irregularities, he is widely suspected of having regularly used his office for personal gain, yet there is no one in his district willing to challenge him on the November ballot.

He is not of course, the only federal lawmaker without opposition this fall. By latest count there are 25 Democrats (including one senator) and six Republicans who have no general election opponents. Add to this the 150 or more legislators of both parties who have only token opposition and the nation is faced with the sad fact that about 40 per cent of November's contests are merely formal exercises. Small wonder reform in Washington remains a thing of a remote future.

Who are these automatic returnees? In many instances they are good men and women whose service is such as to discourage challenge from newcomers. Just as often, however, they are questionable stiffies who are locked into power by political machines and ignorant voters. Sikes is in the latter category. Actually, he leads the category. His story darkens a candle on America's Bicentennial birthday cake.

Sikes came to Congress in 1941 from the panhandle of Florida. The war was on, and he was swift enough to realize benefit from it for himself and his district. He hopped aboard the military bandwagon and turned it in the direction of his supporters. In 36 years of effort Sikes has remade Florida's First District into a kind of armed camp with nine major military installations, which now receives about $500 million in annual subsidies from the nation's defense budget.

Undoubtedly this has been good for the folks west of the Appalachicola. As chairman of the House Military Construction Subcommittee, Sikes has become "Mr. Military" at the Pentagon, and his every wish has rained profit on his constituents. The average congressional district receives about $7 million a year in military construction money, but Florida's First receives seven times this sum. Those who have voted for Sikes all these years have voted for their own bank accounts.

But while his people have prospered, Rep. Sikes has grown rich. According to public records he has used his federal and military influence for various personal advantages. He has been a major stockholder in a U.S. naval base bank which he helped establish; he has held substantial holdings in Fairchild Industries (while voting for $170 million worth of federal finances for the military contractor); and despite the rules of the House, he has sponsored legislation to enhance the value of land in which he has had a financial interest.

It was for these reasons Sikes was reprimanded by his colleagues recently. It was a mild rebuke; congressmen dislike punishing their own, for who knows who turn is next? Still, Sikes is disgraced.

And yet back home he remains unbeatable. He rolled over a primary challenger with 75 per cent of the vote. And in November he will appear alone on the ballot. This says far less about Sikes than it does about those who defer to Sikes. Never mind his ethics, his misuse of power, his breaking of legislative rules; as long as he can keep the money flowing from Washington to Pensacola, the people are blind.

And so it is in many other congressional districts. The legislature is crammed with the corrupt, the incompetent and the arrogant, yet 90 per cent of those who stand for reelection this year will be reelected, because that's the way the people choose it.

It's chilling. The noise you hear is the restless bodies in the graves of the founders.

Elderly need home health care

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — There is an acute need for more health care services at home for the elderly, federal Health, Education and Welfare officials were told Tuesday.

The testimony came from most of the 23 witnesses who appeared before a special committee of HEW led by Stuart H. Clarke, regional director for Dallas.

The hearing is part of a new HEW policy aimed at gathering public reaction and information before new regulations on medicare-medicaid help are instituted.

HEW is currently considering changes in medicare-medicaid regulations that would allow some patients to receive health care at home instead of at hospitals or nursing homes.

Roy L. Swift, representing the Texas Senior Citizens Association, told the committee that "the day is approaching when senior citizens must decide between remaining in their homes without health or being kept in nursing homes or hospitals which are really warehouses to wait in until the hearse comes."

HEW officials said that currently home care costs about $500 million annually and includes treatment and care of patients.

Swift said the total is only one per cent of the $100 billion expenditure for all health services and is drastically low.

He said that some of the problems faced by elderly seeking home care services under federal programs are the "ignorance, indifference or outright hostility" of physicians.

A spokesman for HEW in Dallas said the idea behind the proposed regulations is to "provide health care in a home setting which sometimes can be better than a hospital or a nursing home."

He said this can be done sometimes even cheaper than it is now done through an institution.

The hearing resumed today.

Commission rejects hike in area gas

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The railroad commission rejected motions Tuesday by High Plains Natural Gas Co. and Southern Union Gas Co. for interim natural gas rate increases.

It also dismissed the appeal of Lone Star Gas Co. in a Palestine rate case.

High Plains had sought an interim, or temporary, rate increase, pending a final commission order on High Plains' request to raise residential and commercial rates in the rural areas of Booker, Canadian, Higgins, Mobetie, Perryton and Spearman.

Southern Union asked the commission for an interim rate increase in Galveston, after the city refused its request for higher rates.

Belly Dance to be offered

An exercise class in the art of belly dancing will be offered at the Pampa Youth and Community Center beginning Thursday, Sept. 30. Classes will meet on Thursday mornings from 10:30-11:45 a.m. for a six weeks course. SharRon Kay Morgan, who will conduct the classes, is a performer of the dance orientale (belly dance) who studied with Scheherazade of Lubbock, Meara of Dallas, Ibrahim of New York, Dahlana of Chicago and Leona of California. She taught and performed in the Lubbock area and New Mexico and is now in Amarillo and Canyon. Persons interested should contact the Youth Center or phone 665-4381 or 665-2622. The cost is $20 for members and $28 for non-members. The class is limited to 30.

Chained man found dead

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Before he died, Douglas Ray Sumner spent two weeks chained to a tree. He built a lean-to for shelter, dug a hole to collect rain, and ate palmetto leaves and bark chips while he struggled in vain to free himself, police say.

Sumner, 21, had not been seen by his family since he left home to go camping two years ago, telling his mother, "I'll be back in three or four days — or maybe never."

When his best friend saw him a year ago and asked what he had been doing, Sumner replied, according to police: "I'm just trying to get my head screwed on straight. Don't tell anybody you've seen me."

A Baptist pastor who knew him said Sumner had gotten involved in a "way-out religious group" and might have willingly allowed himself to be anchored to a tree by a 15-foot logging chain attached to a 20-inch metal collar around his waist.

Two hunters stalking wild boar found his bones in a dense thicket a mile from the Gulf of Mexico last month. Investigators say Sumner had died about seven months before that, from either starvation or exposure.

Police call his death murder, but have not speculated on a possible motive. No arrests have been made.

Pastor Pierre Kennedy said Tuesday that the last time he saw Sumner the youth told him "he was going to go up to the forest and stay for a while."

"I think he might have had somebody chain him to that tree. Maybe someone said to him, 'We'll chain you to this tree and you can get closer to God.'"

This is the type of thing some of those lunatic religious groups talk about, this ascetic idea that you can get close to God by depriving your body of things, food and drink and pleasure.

Found near Sumner's body were sneakers, shreds of clothes, a leather belt, books including a Bible and an identification card from the University of South Florida where he had worked as a groundskeeper.

Only 10 of the body's 206 bones remained. Officers said the rest must have been carried off by animals. Sumner was identified by a jawbone fragment and the identification card.

At the bottom of the pine tree was a gash where Sumner apparently tried to cut the thick bark, police said. They said scars 10 feet up showed where he tried to work the chains up and over the top of the tree.

UN avoids Korean question

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The 31st annual session of the U.N. General Assembly got down to housekeeping chores today after a smooth opening meeting in which the Korean question, one of its most troublesome perennial issues, was set aside.

Today's program called for election of vice presidents and committee chairmen to sit with the assembly president on the steering committee.

Acting North Korea's request, 34 supporters of the Communist government withdrew their annual resolution calling for dissolution of the United Nations Command in South Korea and the withdrawal of the 40,000 American troops there.

Japan, the United States and 19 other allies of South Korea then withdrew their agenda item calling for "constructive dialogue and negotiation toward a peaceful settlement of the Korean problem and the reunification of Korea."

He called for "honest, resolute and united action on the part of the entire United Nations membership, especially the countries best placed to influence these offending and offensive regimes."

Secretary of State Henry A.

Neither of the Koreas is a member of the United Nations. Some observers speculated that the North Korean regime was preoccupied with economic problems and rivalry among would-be successors to President Kim Il-sung, who is reported ill.

Some thought the North Koreans feared that the cool reception given them at the non-aligned summit conference last month indicated a smaller vote this year for the resolution favoring them. The 1975 Assembly adopted both Korean resolutions, voting 59-51 for the South Korean one and 54-43 for the North Korean.

Sri Lanka's ambassador, Hamilton S. Amerasinghe, was elected president of the Assembly and said in his inaugural speech that racial discrimination and repression by the white minority governments in Rhodesia and South Africa "have brought the world to the brink of disaster."

Hero sues on sex life

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — One year after Oliver Sipple reached out in a crowd and knocked away a gun pointed at President Ford, he remains a reluctant participant in a public drama that has moved from the front pages into the courtroom.

Sipple, 33, has avoided reporters since two days after the Sept. 22, 1975, assassination attempt, when he appeared at a news conference, his eyes red and his voice shaking, to protest that his sex life was private and had nothing to do with saving the President.

Attorney John Wahl appeared with him then and said he would sue the newspapers that had reported that the hero was a homosexual.

Wahl said Tuesday that since that day, Sipple has been "in and out of hospitals," but he refused to elaborate.

Sipple, a veteran of Marine combat in Vietnam, was on total disability for nervous problems the day he deflected a gun he saw raised at Ford as the President left a San Francisco hotel. The shot went wild.

Sara Jane Moore, 46, pleaded guilty to trying to assassinate the President, and was sentenced in January to life in prison.

Sipple has accused several newspapers of invading his privacy and is asking $5 million in damages. The lawsuit raises the question of whether a single heroic act gave Oliver Sipple the status of a public figure which courts have traditionally held is subject to media scrutiny.

"It's a well-established rule of law that a person's sex life is his own business unless he chooses to make it public," Wahl said. "In all the interviews he had after the incident, he specifically told the interviewers he didn't want to discuss his sex life."

The story about Sipple's sexual orientation was first reported in the San Francisco Chronicle. The Los Angeles Times also carried a story, which was printed by a number of newspapers subscribing to its news service. All are named in the suit, but the judge is considering a motion to exclude the out-of-state papers from the action.

Retiree salary higher than gov

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Several state officials, including former Public Safety Director Don Thibodeaux, are drawing retirement benefits while receiving state pay.

Thibodeaux retired this summer and began receiving $2,000 a month in benefits from the state police retirement system.

Then he was hired by Education Supt. Kelly Nix as a special assistant for a $31,500 annual salary.

Retirement laws adopted and changed over the years by the Louisiana Legislature allow the practice.

With a total state income of $55,500, Thibodeaux makes more than Gov. Edwin Edwards, whose annual salary is $50,000.

"I had nothing to do with creating the retirement system," Thibodeaux said. "I put in my 20 years and I contributed a portion of my salary to the system like everybody else."

He said he told Nix about the situation "because I knew something might be made of it. Wingate White was attacked by the press about the same thing."

"It's the way the law is. Byron Benton is doing the same thing."

Benton, Nix's chief assistant in financial matters, receives $1,000 a month from the teachers retirement system. He was a state employe for years and retired when former Supt. Louis Michot was elected.

When Nix defeated Michot, Benton was hired for $30,000 a year.

"I checked with the retirement system to make sure it was legal before I went to work for Kelly," Benton said.

White, a former state police official, gets $806 a month in benefits and a $26,000 annual salary as director of the Law Enforcement and Administration of Criminal Justice Commission.

At one time White said he would not accept retirement benefits while serving as director but he changed his mind.

Chilean secret police accused

WASHINGTON (AP) - Opponents of the ruling military junta in Chile are charging that nation's secret police with responsibility for a bomb blast that ripped through the car of a former Chilean official, killing him and a woman colleague.

The explosion in downtown Washington killed Orlando Letelier, 44, ambassador to the United States under the late Chilean President Salvador Allende. Ronni Karpen Moffitt, 25, a staff member at the Institute for Policy Studies where Letelier ran a foreign affairs program, was riding in the front seat and also was killed.

Her husband, Michael, a research associate at the liberal research institute, who was in the back seat, survived with injuries that didn't require hospitalization.

Opponents of the current Chilean regime claimed that Letelier, an outspoken critic of the military group, was the victim of a political assassination. Although they did not cite specific evidence, they pointed to violent attacks on other allies of Allende's Marxist rule in recent years.

Those include Carlos Prats Gonzalez, commanding general of the Chilean Army under Allende, and his wife, who were killed by a bomb blast on Sept. 30, 1974, in Buenos Aires, and Bernardo Leighton, a former Christian Democratic Party leader in Chile who was shot with a machine gun in Rome last October. Leighton and his wife were wounded in the attack.

Letelier's coworkers at the research institute here and the Council on Hemispheric Affairs, a private group that advocates suspension of U.S. economic and military aid to nations that violate human rights, said the killings were the work of Chilean spies.

But Chilean Ambassador Manuel Trucco said, "My government repudiates this outrageous act of terrorism. I urgently request that a complete and serious inquiry be undertaken."

Letelier was Allende's ambassador to the United States from 1971 until May 1973 when he was called back to Chile to become foreign minister. He also served as defense and interior minister under Allende. He was jailed on Sept. 11, 1973, when the armed forces overthrew Allende's government.

He spent a year in prison in Chile after the coup and came back to the United States after Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger intervened to have him freed. But upon his return here, Letelier charged that American officials deceived him about the CIA's alleged role in undermining Allende.

Police report

Pampa police investigated five thefts, one report of discharging firearms in the city limits, a hit and run accident, three non-injury accidents and one accident with injury Tuesday.

A bicycle was reported stolen from the parking lot at Woodrow Wilson Elementary School and the Pizza Inn reported that four men left without paying a $11.35 check. A clerk at the Toot 'n' Tatum, 309 N. Hobart, told police that two men came into the store to buy beer. When the clerk told them that beer could not be sold at that hour, the men took the beer and left.

A woman reported that her purse was stolen from 637 N. Dwight Sept. 16. It contained $1.50 and credit cards. A trailer was stolen from C&C Welding, 724 W. Brown. Police said they were told the theft occurred Sept. 17.

Police are investigating a report that a Pampa resident fired a 410 gauge shotgun at a subject he believed was riding a motorcycle on his private property.

A hit and run accident was reported when a car struck the fence at 2144 N. Faulkner and then left the scene.

Police said that an accident in the 1000 block of Alcock may have resulted in an injury, but neither driver was treated at Highland General Hospital.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
Right on schedule, Texas weather was crisp and a trifle cool to greet the official arrival of a new autumn season today.

Skies were clear throughout the state and expected to stay that way except for an occasional thundershower tonight in the Texas Panhandle and far West Texas.

Many points recorded early morning temperatures in the 50s. The readings ranged from 55 degrees at Texarkana and Waco up to 71 at Brownsville. Top marks Tuesday went no higher than 91 at Longview.

Another cool night was predicted, with readings down to the 40s in the West Texas mountains.

National weather

By The Associated Press
A frosty chill was summer's farewell over a large part of the Midwest today as temperatures slid into the 30s, and occasionally lower, overnight from Lake Superior to Central Illinois and Indiana.

Autumn begins at 4:48 p.m. CDT.

Readings in the 40s reached south to the Ohio Valley well before dawn, with a freeze warning in effect in Upper Michigan and frost warnings out in parts of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Missouri and Wisconsin.

Clear skies dominated most areas; from the central Rockies to the Eastern Seaboard. Showers developed in sections of Florida and North Carolina and in the Pacific Northwest and northern Rockies.

Temperatures overnight varied from 28 at Madison, Wis., to 85 at Phoenix.

Jackson wins at home; Ray leads for governor

By The Associated Press
Sen. Henry M. Jackson, one of the big losers in the Democratic presidential sweepstakes, is proving once again that he can be a big winner at home. And Dixy Lee Ray was leading in her quest to become Washington's first woman governor.

Jackson barely broke a sweat in capturing his party's nomination Tuesday night for a fifth term in the junior Senate seat from Washington, defeating two little-known opponents.

Dr. Ray, a former chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, led in a close contest for the Democratic nomination for governor. With 93 per cent of the precincts reporting, she had 185,355 votes or 38 per cent to 177,379 votes or 36 per cent for Seattle Mayor Wes Uhlman. Environmentalist Marvin Durning ran third.

Elsewhere, Rep. Henry Helstoski, D-N.J., won renomination in a special primary despite an indictment charging him with bribery, and House Speaker Carl Albert's top aide lost his bid for Albert's Oklahoma congressional seat.

Helstoski, indicted with three aides on charges of taking money in return for helping South American aliens win their citizenship, defeated state Assemblyman Byron Baer by about 3,500 votes in a Democratic primary called following allegations of vote fraud in their first contest June 8. Helstoski had won the first election by 1,500 votes.

Albert's aide, Charles Ward, was defeated in a Democratic runoff by State Sen. Wes Watkins, who also defeated him in the first primary. Ward had been endorsed by Albert, who is retiring.

There were two other Oklahoma contests.

In one, Carol McCurley, housewife, defeated Stephen Jones, a former American Civil Liberties Union lawyer, for a Republican nomination. She will face Rep. Glen English in November.

In the other, former hospital administrator Tom Dunlap won the Democratic nomination for the seat of retiring Republican Rep. John Jarman.

In Washington congressional races, Democratic incumbents Brock Adams and Lloyd Meeds were renominated easily.

Norm Dicks, a former aide to Sen. Warren Magnuson, defeated state Rep. Mike Parker in another Democratic race. Incumbent Democrat Floyd Hicks is retiring to seek a seat on the state Supreme Court.

Bill would cut oil jobs

HOUSTON (AP) - A trade group for firms that supply offshore oil operations estimates 500,000 workers would lose their jobs if Congress overhauls offshore regulations, a study says.

A study released today by the National Ocean Industries Association said most of the unemployed would come from the support companies rather than from the oil companies.

A House-Senate conference committee agreed Monday on a compromise bill that would revise the 23-year-old program for leasing of federal offshore areas.

One provision would require at least one-third of all future lease programs be other than the traditional bonus-fixed royalty bids. Joint ventures also would be prevented by companies with worldwide production exceeding 1.6 million barrels a day.

The trade group's study said the bill would be the third counterproductive measure Congress has directed at the domestic oil industry since the Arab embargo of 1973. It said the termination of the depletion tax allowance for major oil companies and the imposition of price controls below the world market price have reduced the cash flow to the industry for one-third and increased the nation's reliance on imported oil from 28 per cent 1972 to an estimated 41 to 43 per cent this year.

The report on the study quotes Frank B. Lynott, chairman of the Tacoma Boatbuilding Co. Inc., Tacoma, Wash., as saying the offshore bill would bring disaster.

"It requires a two or more year pause in exploration of new offshore areas while a complete reorganization of exploration and leasing procedures takes place," Lynott said.

"Such a delay would probably drive our company out of oil-related operations," Lynott said about 30 per cent of Tacoma's business was offshore oil related prior to last year's oil price control legislation.

"Now it's down to about 10 per cent," he said. "This has cost us about 300 jobs to date."

R.S. Chamberlain, Chicago Bridge and Iron Co., marketing manager, was quoted as saying the bill would curtail expansion plans.

"If Senate Bill 521 becomes law, our company will be forced to defer development of its east coast offshore construction and assembly yard," Chamberlain said. "We had expected to employ several hundred people at this facility with a direct payroll in excess of $5 million annually."

The Alaska Range extends generally northeastward from the base of the Alaska Peninsula to the frontier of Yukon Territory, Canada. The range averages about 50 miles in width.

Steelman to be in Pampa

Congressman Alan Steelman, R-Dallas, a candidate for U.S. Senate, will bring his "sweat and shoe leather" campaign against incumbent Lloyd Bentsen to Pampa on Friday.

Steelman's Pampa schedule includes a news conference at 10 a.m. at Republican Party Headquarters, 205 E. Kingsmill, and a 10:30 meeting with the Top O' Texas GOP Women's Club.

At 10:45 a.m., he plans to begin walking door-to-door in downtown Pampa to meet as many local citizens as possible.

Steelman's style of campaigning, which first won him his seat in the House of Representatives, apparently is effective.

"Recent polls conducted in San Antonio and Fort Worth show me leading Bentsen in those two communities," he said in a recent news release.

Gage takes fair first prizes.

Entries from Pampa, Panhandle and Canadian garnered a large share of the premiums in the textile and culinary judging at the Tri-State Fair in Amarillo.

Cindy Gage of Pampa caught the judge's eye to win first place ribbons with entries in artificial flower arrangement, quick bread, and white yeast bread. Her entry in the chow chow class took second.

Shelly Cochran of Pampa won first with a snap beans and seconds with a skirt in the junior textile show and with a cake in the baking competition.

Robby Cochran of Pampa won first in leather accessory in the junior textile show. Bobbie Skaggs of Pampa won second in the skirt class of the teenage textile show.

Debbie Thompson of Canadian won firsts in other cookie, pickled beets and skirt. She took second place with beets, other preserves, cucumbers, other pickles, blouse and long dress.

Dean Thompson of Canadian won first in bar cookies, devil's food cake, other preserves and cucumbers. His entries in fudge and ice box cookies won seconds.

Mrs. Ralph Alexander of Canadian was second in the bicentennial quilt class.

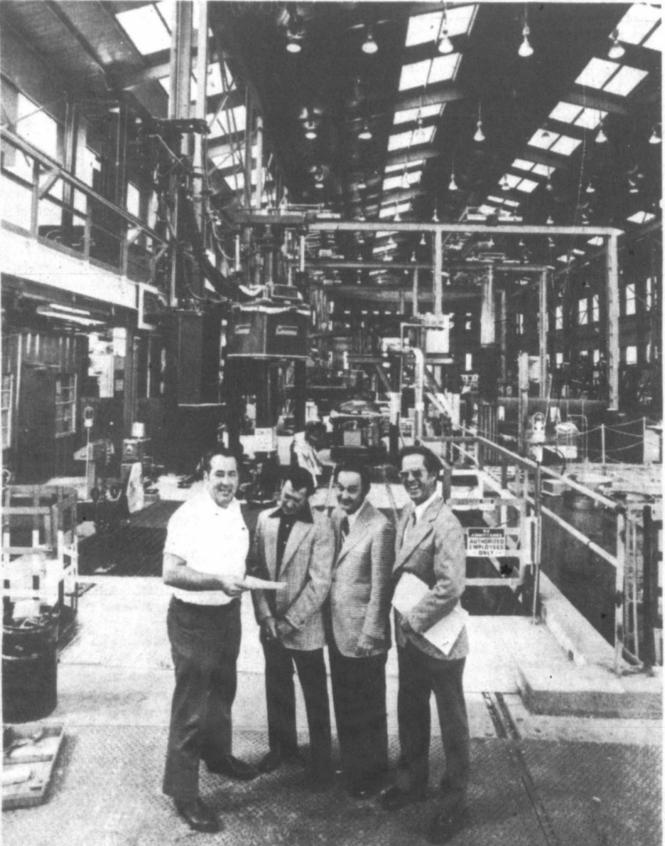

Sharlotte Redwine of Panhandle won firsts in plain yeast rolls, cinnamon rolls, ice box cookies, pound cake, beets, peach preserves and strawberry preserves. She was second in rolled cookies, other jelly and plum butter.

Lynn Redwine of Panhandle was the Kerr Jar winner with her entry of cherry preserves.

Lydia Mendoza and Rosaline Sierra, both of Panhandle, were first and second respectively in the teenage textile embroidery class. Junior textile winners from Panhandle were Theresa Rapstine, first in dress; Jeannine Smith, first in skirt; Angelina Gonzales, second in blouse, and Angie Ramirez, first in picture.

In the senior textile division, Panhandle winners were Sister M. Fidelis Freund, second in lady's sweater; Sister M. Theresa Mendez, second in pillowcase, and Sister M. Maxine Karnes, second in apron.

Senior culinary winners from Panhandle were Mrs. Henry Leven, second in snapped blackeyed peas and first in sweet potatoes, and Nancy Frumau, first in chow chow.

Money for school kitty

Cabot Machinery Division presented a giant - sized check five months early to Pampa Independent School District Tuesday. Victor P. Raymond, vice president and general manager, left, hands the $190,000 check over to school board president Paul Simmons and school superintendent Bob Phillips. At right is Sam Anderson, manager of property tax department for the Cabot division. Simmons thanked Cabot for its support of Pampa public schools. Behind the group is part of the taxed property: a new electro-slag remelting furnace, the most recent installation at the Machinery Division.

High Plains citizens argue for more water

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP) - A water importation system involving Texas, Arkansas, New Mexico and Oklahoma is needed and arguments that it would cost too much make little sense in times of travel to Mars, the Texas Water Development Board (TWDB) was told Tuesday night.

Several High Plains citizens who addressed the fifth of 21 public forums being conducted by the TWDB to gather input for revision of the Texas Water Plan expressed that sentiment.

The TWDB is currently studying the possibility of importing surplus water from Arkansas in a joint effort by that state and Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico.

While such an effort may be years away, the problems are not insurmountable, according to the Rev. A.L. Davis of Lubbock.

"Certainly if we can put a man on the moon or an instrument on Mars, certainly we can put water in West Texas," Davis said.

"We're for water importation," Donald A. Johnson, executive vice president of the Plains Cotton Growers Association, told the board. "We're not concerned about the source of the water, but we're going to need it."

The High Plains area's concern for additional water sources was underlined by attendance at the meeting. More than 200 persons attended, surpassing the crowd at Houston earlier this month.

Lubbock County Commissioner Arch Lamb told the meeting, "The day will come when the general welfare of the nation will depend on the food supply from this area. Then the federal government will help, but we can't wait for that."

Duncan Ellison, executive director of Water, Inc., a non-profit organization seeking a supplemental water source for the High Plains, said, "Water is most critical. We have a closed basin. It is geologically isolated with no source of replenishment except for small amounts of rainwater that replenish it through percolation."

Of the 15 million acres of land under cultivation in the High Plains, 6.2 million are irrigated. That land area is responsible for 65 per cent of the cotton produced in Texas and 77 per cent of the fed cattle, according to Ellison.

"Water is the key to our existence - past, present and future," Ellison said.

Talks about drug trips

DALLAS (AP) - A former co-defendant of accused drug smuggling ringleader Joe Dee Hicks has testified that he made 40 overseas trips and smuggled cocaine and heroin back into the states 20 to 35 times.

Coleman Ray Bandy, 35, testified in Dallas federal court Tuesday that drug-buying trips were made to Bangkok, Thailand; Saigon; Bogota, Colombia; Peru and Ecuador in 1973. Bandy pleaded guilty to two counts of cocaine smuggling last month in return for his government testimony.

Hicks, his wife Janet and Charles Lidge Bolts are on trial

Former comic coaches Ford

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - President Ford's normal plodding style of speech-making has some sparkle lately, thanks in good part to a former television comic named Don Penny.

Penny isn't collecting any medals for his efforts, however. On the contrary, he is on the verge of being transformed into the White House equivalent of a nonperson.

Politics has something to do with it. And another factor to be considered is Penny's own disregard for chains of command - like popping in on the President without getting an appointment through Ford's underlings.

One of Ford's aides said last week he expected the 43-year-old Penny to play a significant role in the President's preparations for Thursday's debate with Jimmy Carter. It seemed a reasonable expectation, because Penny helped coach Ford on his successful and well-received acceptance speech at last month's Republican convention.

But evidence that Penny has contributed anything to debate planning is hard to come by.

"I just don't know what Don Penny has been doing," said Ford's press secretary, Ron Nessen.

David Kennerly, the White House photographer who brought Ford and Penny together last January, was equally vague when asked about Penny's possible involvement in the debate.

"I've purposely stayed far away from all that because you might ask questions. I don't want to lie to you," Kennerly said.

Without announcement, Penny was transferred earlier this month from the White House payroll to the Ford campaign committee payroll.

He had been drawing $150 a day as a White House consultant, which had prompted Jimmy Carter to talk about a "$40,000-a-year gag writer" at the White House at taxpayer expense.

A source who should know says Penny has been told to avoid interviews.

One of his last interviews was last month in Vail, Colo., with a CBS correspondent. The CBS man later went on the air to report that Penny would play the role of Jimmy Carter during Ford rehearsals for the televised debates. Penny insists he had only been joking.

White House staff chief Richard Cheney was not amused, however, and the "making of a nonperson" seems to have been underway ever since.

Penny, a comedy writer who had Steve Allen and Merv Griffin among his clients, has done very little gag writing for Ford. Instead, he has tried to do something about Ford's wooden style of speech-making.

Jimmy Carter, according to reporters traveling with him, has no one quite like Penny in is entourage. Apparently, some folks at the White House would prefer that Ford didn't either.

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am getting tired of hearing people say how "rich" doctors are.

If a doctor collected everything owed him he might be, but he doesn't. How many people pay cash for a doctor's visit? Yet those same people pay cash for their gasoline, the food they put on their tables and their entertainment. And they pay their gas, electric and telephone bills within 30 days or else! Same for their house, car and insurance payments. But for some reason, the doctor is the last one paid—if ever.

A doctor's hours are unbelievable. He gets up at 6, is at the hospital by 7 to see his patients (or operate), then goes to his office to see patients all day. Often he stops at the hospital again to check on patients and doesn't get home for dinner until 8 p.m. And don't forget those "emergencies" at all hours of the night to interrupt his sleep.

A doctor pays a hefty income tax and another large chunk goes for malpractice insurance. I'm not saying there aren't doctors who care more about money than serving humanity, but you'll find mercenaries in all professions.

Abby, I hope you're big enough to print this in rebuttal to the letter from that clown who took a potshot at doctors.

A DOCTOR'S SECRETARY

DEAR SECRETARY: I am and I will. (P.S. Although your letter referred to doctors in the masculine, let's acknowledge that there are many women physicians, too.)

DEAR ABBY: I am 19 and in my sophomore year at college. Last year, I fell in love with a beautiful, sensitive girl of 18. She's a high school graduate who has many fine qualities, but her English is atrocious.

She says, "I see you there," or "you was or you wasn't there," or "I throwed it out," or "them there people."

I can't understand how she was graduated from high school.

I have tried to help her without nagging but have had very little success. I would like to introduce her to my family because I do care for her, but I know that they will question my judgment when they hear her talk.

What should I do?

ORLANDO

DEAR ORLANDO: Assuming she's as interested in learning to speak properly as you are to have her learn, adult education or tutoring is my recommendation.

DEAR ABBY: This may sound silly, but here goes. My husband and I have been married for two years, but before we were married he dated my sister for a short time.

I had almost forgotten about that until last week. My sister dropped by, and the two of us went shopping together. When we returned, we were greeted by a couple of burglars who had been hiding in my house. They ransacked the place and left us bound and gagged.

When my husband came home from work a few hours later and found the two of us tied up, to my surprise, he released my sister first!

Abby, I was very hurt, and now I can't help but wonder if maybe he still cares for my sister. What do you think?

TIED IN KNOTS

DEAR TIED: I think your husband was being courteous to a guest—no more, no less. Forget it.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB—I read an article on reasons for being tired. This article mentioned folic acid deficiency. That came the closest to being my problem. What is folic acid deficiency? I never had heard of it. What are its symptoms and causes? What can be done about it?

I am 53 and have seven children. I weigh 128 pounds and take Diupress, potassium chloride, Miltown and Enovid. Except for being weak at times and dizzy about a week at a time twice a year I seem to go great.

DEAR READER—Your letter amused me as it reminded me of the problem medical students have. Each time they read about a new disease they are sure they have it. By the time they finish medical schools they have had an infinite variety of strange diseases. I see you now have folic acid deficiency. It is human nature to read about something and wonder if you have it.

Fatigue is caused by many different things. It is a common symptom of problems ranging from emotional strain and depression, to tuberculosis, cancer and a host of diseases which I won't mention lest you develop those too.

I do note that you take Diupress which is ordinarily used for people with high blood pressure. It tends to eliminate salt from the body. Excess elimination of salt often results in a sense of fatigue.

If you have high blood pressure it should be determined if it is related to birth control pills. I don't know what pill you will be taking by the time you receive my answer but it is true that a small number of women develop high blood pressure in response to taking the pill.

Now to your question about folic acid. I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-5, Vitamin B-12, Folic Acid, Pernicious Anemia, to give you more information than space allows here. Others who want this information can send a long, stamped self-addressed envelope with 50 cents for it. Just send your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Folic acid has actions similar to vitamin B-12. It is essential in the formation of new cells. The nucleus of each new cell needs either folic acid or both it and vitamin B-12 to form vital new amounts of nucleic acids. Without this the 200 million new red blood cells you must form every minute cannot be formed. This failure in new cell production results in an anemia. The anemia from folic acid deficiency is much like pernicious anemia. In many respects they are hard to separate even using good clinical tools.

Other areas of the body that undergo constant regeneration also show failure in development. The lining of your intestinal tract is a good example. Did you know normally it is replaced every three days? When this function fails, diarrhea and other digestive complaints occur. The tongue is also sore.

You cannot substitute folic acid for B-12 because it does not protect the spinal cord from degeneration. Fatigue from folic acid deficiency is mostly related to the anemia. Folic acid is found in foliage foods, specifically spinach and other leafy vegetables. A small amount is found in many of the common daily vitamin preparations. It is not thought wise to take an excess amount because it may obscure a vitamin B-12 deficiency and result in serious complications.

Polly's pointers

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY—L.S. wanted to know how to remove rust stains from her bathroom fixtures. I have found that cream of tartar does this most successfully. Work on a damp surface. Put cream of tartar on a damp cloth and rub spot very hard. This always removes even old stains for me. —HANNAH.

DEAR POLLY—We had always found that it was quite messy to put homemade cup cakes in a school or work lunch box, until my eight year old Julie came up with a neat idea. We now place a cupcake in a plastic tumbler. We use the 10 oz. size with the top wider than the bottom and put a small piece of "recycled" aluminum foil over the top. The frosting does not get ruined and the tumbler is put back in the lunch box to be washed and used again. —WANDA.

DEAR POLLY—I broke the lid to my sugar canister and the unit on my crock pot burned out, so I drilled holes in the bottom of both these pieces to make great pots for plants. —LINDA.

Cheating charge creates nightmare

He always wanted to be West Point cadet

By MALCOLM N. CARTER
Associated Press Writer
WEST ISLIP, N.Y. (AP) —

From the time their only son was born, Kenneth and Ann Curley wanted him to be a West Pointer. They were not disappointed.

They wanted to savor his successes — the medals, the awards and the trophies. Again they were not disappointed.

They wanted him to be a leader, at the top of his class. He was.

Now he is a convicted West Point cheater, and Ken and Ann Curley say it is the worst thing that's happened since they lost one of their five children to crib death syndrome.

The cheating charge has created what Mrs. Curley calls a "living nightmare" of recriminations from their family, pointed comments from friends and telephone calls from cranks.

The plaques on the walls of their modest Long Island home are a testament to the hopes they had — still have — for Kenneth Jr., a strapping lacrosse and football player whom all four service academies courted.

He was once among the most promising leaders at West Point and in line to become fourth-ranking cadet in the entire corps. Now he has a clouded future. His stripes are gone and his pride bruised. He was convicted in August by an officer board in West Point's cheating scandal.

He stood tearfully back among the plebes in the year's first parade, filled with the indignity of carrying a rifle. He said he should have been out front carrying the command, for unstinting praise and the top positions of responsibility had been his.

"It really hurts," Cadet Curley, 20, says. "It really destroyed me — all this for one damn writ."

The "writ," cadet slang for a test, was the homework assignment administered early last March to 823 members of the Class of 1977. Roughly a quarter of the class was accused of collaborating on it, and those accused say the number is but a tip of the iceberg.

They are scapegoats and should be punished less lightly than what amounts to a year's suspension, they say. The honor system, they contend, isn't working.

HOUSTON (AP) — Police sought a pair of unusual holdup men today.

One walked with the aid of a cane and the other was in a wheelchair when they robbed a hotel cashier of $234 Sunday.

Police quoted Doris Session, a Grove Hotel employee, as saying the men came in shortly after midnight, told her they were waiting for their girl friends, pulled a pistol and robbed her.

The girl friends soon arrived and all four left in a late model car, police said.

"I love the place, but you look at it now, there are so many problems up there and the institution won't face it," young Curley said, expressing his determination to graduate nonetheless. He is destined to do so, his family says.

While still hospitalized after her son's premature birth — he weighed three pounds then, compared with 156 now — Mrs. Curley happened to watch "The Long Gray Line" on television. Then and there, she said, she decided: "This is where he was going to go."

The film was on several nights, and mother and father watched it at home. So it seemed natural enough that toy soldiers and tanks would grace his first Christmas. When the boy turned nine, the movie came on again. And his father let him stay up for it.

"As long as I can remember from that time on, that's where I wanted to go," the cadet recalled, idly thumbing the 760-page transcript of his hearing by the board of officers that convicted him.

He was always a leader, his parents said. When the Curleys moved to this pleasant community on the south shore, neighboring children mostly fished for play. But soon they played baseball and war.

"He organized this block," beamed the trim mother of three other children. "They were his army."

At high school, where he graduated 161st out of 800, Curley was captain of his football and lacrosse teams. By the time he was in the 9th grade, his mother said, he was already getting calls from West Point.

Young Curley wanted to go there so much that he didn't even answer the letter when the Navy invited him on a recruitment trip to Annapolis.

He has excelled at West Point. Seventh in his class of more than 800 in leadership. Ninth in physical education. Picked to be executive officer in charge of summer training at the academy's Camp Buckner.

"I think, based on Kenneth's ability to get along with people and his dedication toward his profession and doing a good job, he could be commissioned right now as an outstanding officer," his tactical officer testified at Curley's hearing.

Added a history professor: "I think Mr. Curley has more natural leadership ability than any cadet that I know ... There is no doubt in my mind that I would want that young man as a lieutenant in my company."

Even Col. Jack M. Pollin, the president of the officer board that convicted Curley, asked West Point's superintendent to allow him to remain at the academy, despite the mandatory penalty of expulsion.

Curley subsequently testified at a congressional hearing on the cheating scandal. Then the scandal came home.

Before she hung up, abruptly, Curley's grandmother had cried into the phone about the family's "disgrace," saying, Mrs.

Curley said, "What about my senior citizens club? What am I going to tell them?"

Ann Curley said she even asked her employer whether she should quit because of the notoriety. The offer was rejected. An out-of-work electronics buyer, she now works as a waitress to pay $300-a-month telephone bills she says accumulated in the cadets' defense.

"Everybody's turning their back on these cadets," said Mrs. Curley, who has stopped wearing her West Point necklace.

"I don't think it's fair. What I'm angered at, if something doesn't work, you ought to change it."

Said Mr. Curley, a 46-year-old industrial artist: "I think he's going to be a better officer because he went through this." And his son agreed: "There's not a guy involved who hasn't done a lot of growing up."

Not everyone stands behind their sons like the Curleys, the cadet said. He said one Long Island cadet was disowned by his Army captain brother. "A lot of guys are afraid to go home," he said.

Reds celebrate title by whipping Padres

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

It was champagne time in Cincinnati, a chance for the Reds to cavort in the locker-room and let loose after a long summer of hotel rooms and plane rides.

Rookie pitcher Pat Zachry, whose eight-hit, 9-1 victory over the San Diego Padres clinched the National League West title for the Reds, cavorted in a Groucho Marx rubber mask, flicking an imaginary cigar at anyone who wandered within range.

Veteran slugger Tony Perez, his head crowned by a towel turban, chanted "Here comes da judge." Catcher Johnny Bench chided club president Bob Howsam over the executive's inability to uncork a stubborn bottle of bubbly.

But Manager Sparky Anderson, standing aside from the celebration, kept matters in focus.

"We know this was the easy part," said the silver-haired Cincinnati skipper, whose troops have won five NL West crowns in the past seven years. "It's been 54 years since a National League team has won back-to-back world championships—and that's our goal."

"That would be a tremendous feather in our caps."

Elsewhere in the National League Tuesday, the Los Angeles Dodgers edged the San Francisco Giants 3-2; the Pittsburgh Pirates split a doubleheader with the Chicago Cubs, winning the opener 4-3 and then losing 2-1 in 13 innings; the Philadelphia Phillies beat the St. Louis Cardinals 5-1; the Montreal Expos shut out the New York Mets 4-0, and the Atlanta Braves topped the Houston Astros 6-2.

The Reds had a relatively easy road to the NL West title, staying within three games of first place through the early going and taking the lead to stay on May 29. They widened their lead over second-place Los Angeles to 13½ games in mid-August, watched calmly as the Dodgers closed to within seven games, then put things on ice by winning seven of nine games in early September.

Zachry raised his record to 14-5, best on the club, giving up a run in the first inning and shutting out San Diego the rest of the way.

The Red tied it in the fourth when George Foster tripled and scored on a wild pitch. Cincinnati went ahead 3-1 in the fifth on a double by Foster and a run-scoring single by Dave Concepcion.

They broke it open with four runs in the sixth, Johnny Bench and Tony Perez drilling two-run singles. Joe Morgan and Foster had RBI singles in the seventh to close out the scoring.

Dodgers 3, Giants 2

Ron Cey hit his 23rd home run of the season in the eighth inning off San Francisco reliever Randy Moffitt to snap a 2-2 tie for the Dodgers. The game was in the third inning when the Dodgers learned they had been eliminated by the Reds.

Phils 5, Cards 1

Dick Allen was the catalyst for the Phils, belting a home run and two doubles as Philadelphia extended its lead in the NL East to five games over Pittsburgh. The Phils have 13 games remaining, the Pirates just 11.

Allen started a two-out, three-run outburst in the fourth inning with his first double, scoring on Johnny Oates' single. Larry Bowa also had a run-scoring single and the other run scored on an error by third baseman Hector Cruz.

The Phils made it 4-0 in the sixth when Mike Schmidt hit his 36th homer off the left field foul. Allen's 15th homer accounted for the final run in the eighth.

Pirates 4-1, Cubs 3-2

The doubleheader split cost the Pirates one-half game in their pursuit of the Phils, and Manager Danny Murtaugh knows the situation has become grim.

"We've got 11 games to go and we're six down in the loss column," said Murtaugh. "It's going to be rough."

Expos 4, Mets 0

Dan Warthen limited the Mets to a pair of singles by rookie Lee Mazzilli in out-pitching New York's Jerry Koosman, who was bidding for his 21st victory. Ellis Valentine and Earl Williams belted consecutive homers with two out in the sixth and the Expos added two unearned runs in the eighth.

Braves 6, Astros 2

Knuckleballer Phil Niekro, 16-11, scattered nine hits and Jim Wynn drove in two runs with a pair of singles for Atlanta.

Tiant wins 20th

By PHIL CANNADAY
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Veteran Luis Tiant scooped up the fourth 20-game victory season of his long career while flirting with a no-hitter and setting a club season mark in strikeouts, but all he wants to do is just keep on pitching.

"I don't lie about my age," said the ageless right-hander Tuesday night after the Boston Red Sox trounced the Milwaukee Brewers 7-1 in the first game of a doubleheader. Milwaukee came back to take the second game 3-1 before a crowd of 17,796 at Fenway Park.

"I don't lie because I wish to be 50 and still pitching," said the Cuban-born Tiant, now 20-11, the best record of the Red Sox, who hold down third place in the American League East after winning the pennant last year.

Tiant tossed a total of 113 pitches, but enough were on the mark for home plate umpire Nick Bremigan to call 12 strikeouts.

"He had good command of his pitches, very good command," Bremigan said of Tiant, who walked only one Milwaukee batter.

Auburnite named top lineman

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Despite his 17 unassisted tackles against Baylor last Saturday, Auburn's Freddie Smith says he's still "got a lot to learn" about defense.

The 19-year-old freshman linebacker's performance in his first start for Auburn earned him The Associated Press national college Lineman of the Week award.

"You mean this is for the whole country," he asked when informed of his selection, "the whole country?" He had already been chosen AP Southeastern Lineman of the Week.

Smith's transition from high school offensive standout to college defensive stalwart was hailed Saturday when the crowd of 50,000 at Jordan-Hare stadium gave the 6-foot-1, 197-pounder a standing ovation.

"I had butterflies in my stomach when I came out on the field," Smith recalls. "I was all right, though, after the first contact."

That "first contact" led to another which led to another which led to another. At the end of the heartbreaking 15-14 loss to Baylor, Smith had racked up 17 unassisted tackles and another four assists.

He made three consecutive solo tackles to stop one Baylor drive. In a later series of downs, he stopped the ball carrier five times in six plays.

"I was just trying to do the best I could," Smith says. "I was just trying to get off the blockers and get to the ball."

"Everybody was really pulling for the old man," said first baseman Cecil Cooper, who chipped in with his 15th home run of the year, driving in three runs in a four-run eighth inning.

The bearded, stocky Tiant, who always lights up a long cigar after a game—whether he wins, loses or has the night off—hurled hitless ball until George Scott, a former Red Sox, tripled to center in the seventh inning with one out. Scott later scored when Mike Hegan grounded out.

Tiant, who bristles when his age is mentioned and has chastised writers for dwelling on the subject, weathered a five-game losing streak in July. Since July 30, however, he has racked up a 10-1 mark.

One-legged Campbell gets AP back honors

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas fullback Earl Campbell may have set a college football record for which there is no category: longest run from scrimmage on one leg.

Campbell, 231, painfully dragged his right leg as if it were a thick slab of wood on an 83-yard run Saturday night to set up Texas' winning touchdown in a 17-14 victory over North Texas State.

Nothing quite like Campbell's sideline hobble, his jersey torn from his back and a 226-pound linebacker riding him like a steer for 10-15 yards, has ever been seen in the football-wild Southwest.

Coach Darrell Royal got so excited he almost lost his glasses on the artificial turf of Memorial Stadium.

Campbell, a junior who could pass pro stars Roosevelt Leaks and Jim Bertelsen in Texas career rushing yardage this year, pounded North Texas' huge defense 32 times for 208 yards—only eight yards shy of North Texas' total offense.

His heroics won him acclaim as The Associated Press' offensive player of the week.

North Texas Coach Hayden Fry called Campbell the best running back in America, a tag other coaches accorded him when he was selected last year to the Football Coaches All-American team.

What makes Campbell's Saturday night performance extraordinary is that Campbell has been crippled so long with a pulled hamstring muscle that Royal quipped he was beginning to think his name was "How's your leg?"

It was only minutes before the kickoff that Royal and Campbell decided to test the leg again.

"If they hadn't gotten Campbell to play, we probably would have won," Fry said. "He took some licks like you've never taken. He's the greatest thing that's ever happened."

Campbell's 180 yards in the second half all came on straight handoffs into North Texas' bunched up middle, and Royal said, "He wasn't full speed. He wasn't the old slashing, quick Earl he's been. He was running under wraps, but he was outstanding."

Kansas City stifles Oakland

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Spies in the bullpen brush-back pitches from the mound... shouts of anger in the infield. It's nitty-gritty time in the American League West.

The Kansas City Royals and the Oakland A's got down to cases Tuesday night in their long-awaited confrontation that will ultimately settle the Western Division race.

Before the game was over, Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog charged the A's with stealing signs from the bullpen with binoculars. Kansas City batters were knocked down and out with pitches and players almost came to blows.

The Royals endured through it all, winning 3-1 to knock Oakland down a peg in the wild West.

"I'd love to beat them two more and put them nine back," snapped Herzog. "Then they would really be desperate."

The A's are desperate enough now. They are seven games behind the division pacers, with 11 games to go.

It's nervous time.

"It hurts, but it does not mean the season's over," said a hopeful Chuck Tanner, Oakland's manager. "It's not over until you see it in the paper."

The pressure of the moment was evident right away Tuesday night when Oakland pitcher Stan Bahnsen hit Amos Otis with a pitch and brushed back Hal McRae. Otis was carried from the game on a stretcher, but X rays later indicated no serious injury.

After McRae was brushed back, he and on-deck batter John Mayberry stalked the mound, but were restrained by Herzog and umpires.

Later, Herzog led the entire umpiring crew out to the A's bullpen, where binoculars were uncovered under a towel. Herzog insisted they be removed but the umpires rejected that request.

"If that is the way they want to run the league, that's fine," said Herzog. "Maybe we'll start getting cutesie on them, too."

In the American League East, the Baltimore Orioles denied New York a chance to clinch a tie for the title by beating the Yankees 11-8 in 10 innings.

Elsewhere in AL action, the California Angels nipped the Texas Rangers 2-1; the Minnesota Twins routed the Chicago White Sox 13-6; the Detroit Tigers defeated the Cleveland Indians 5-3 and the Boston Red Sox trounced the Milwaukee Brewers 7-1 in the first game of a doubleheader before losing a 3-1 decision in the second game.

McRae and Mayberry lashed run-scoring singles for Kansas City. Bahnsen, 8-7, held the Royals hitless until the third inning, then yielded McRae's RBI single after walking Jim Wolford and George Brett. Mayberry's single then scored Brett.

The A's tagged Kansas City starter Doug Bird, 12-9, for a run in the sixth on consecutive doubles by Campy Campaneris and Joe Rudi. A sacrifice fly by Mayberry off reliever Rollie Fingers in the eighth gave the Royals an insurance run.

Orioles 11, Yankees 8

Paced by Lee May's hitting, Baltimore came back from an early seven-run deficit to beat New York. May led the Orioles' comeback by driving in a run with an infield out in the fourth and delivering a two-run single that capped a five-run, game-tying rally in the seventh.

Twins 13, White Sox 6

Bob Randall drove in five runs with a pair of doubles and Larry Hise drove in three with a single and home run as Minnesota defeated Chicago. Tom Burgeimer, 8-1, hurled two-hit ball over the final 42-3 innings to pick up the victory in relief of Jim Hughes, who left the game with a six-run lead in the fifth.

Borger trims Pampa netters in fall opener

Borger won all but four girls matches en route to a 15-9 victory over Pampa in the season-opening fall tennis match for both teams Tuesday at the Pampa High courts.

Borger held a 9-4 advantage in girls' play and a 7-6 edge in boys'.

"No, I'm not too happy. We didn't win. In spots, we played well," Pampa Coach Kent King said. "I've got to work on my girls—my top three girls to be exact."

"And we need a little more consistency among the guys. I knew it (boys' matches) would be a dogfight. We're going to have a fairly good boys' team."

"They'll be competitive all year long which I couldn't say last year."

King added, "I'm very happy with my sophomore girls. They're the only ones that won."

Consumer prices up; meat prices down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices rose five-tenths of a per cent during August for the third month in a row, the government said today. A decline in meat prices failed to offset higher costs for most other foods, fuel and clothing.

The increase means inflation is running at an annual rate of 6 per cent, a level in line with the Ford administration's forecast.

At the same time, the Labor Department reported a further shrinkage in the purchasing power of the average workers' paycheck as inflation last month offset a slight increase in pay.

President Ford has claimed that his economic policies have helped cut the inflation rate in half from its 1974 levels. His Democratic challenger, Jimmy Carter, has charged that the current rate still is twice as high as when the Democrats were in office. Price increases averaged 2 per cent in the 1950s and 2.3 per cent during the 1960s.

Consumer price increases were smaller earlier this year but picked up to a 6 per cent rate in the spring. As the pace of inflation quickened, the economic recovery slowed and unemployment began rising again.

Although the administration contends the recovery will continue through next year, the Democrats have attempted to put Ford on the defensive about the economy.

In its August report, the Labor Department said consumer prices were 5.6 per cent higher than a year ago.

Food prices rose three-tenths of a per cent in August as lower meat prices helped offset increases for fruits, vegetables, dairy products and coffee.

But new increases for gasoline and clothing helped drive nonfood commodity prices up six-tenths of a per cent, about the same rate as in the previous three months but twice as much as during the first quarter of the year.

The cost of services also rose six-tenths of a per cent last month, matching increases in June and July.

All prices are seasonally adjusted. Unadjusted, the August increase in consumer prices also measured five-tenths of a per cent.

The consumer price index stood at 171.9 in August, meaning a market basket of goods and services costing $100 in 1967 now costs $171.90.

In a separate report, the government said real income of the average worker, adjusted for inflation and taxes, declined three-tenths of a per cent last month and was down six-tenths of a per cent over the past year. The August decline was due to the rise in prices which more than offset a two-tenths of a per cent increase in average hourly earnings.

In general, price increases have been running less than a year ago and have been one of the few positive developments in the economy during the summer months. Unemployment, which had been on the decline earlier this year, climbed to 7.9 per cent last month, its highest level of the year, while other elements of the economic recovery slowed.

Ford's chief economic adviser, Alan Greenspan, labeled the slowing only a "pause" in the recovery and said it would be temporary. He said there was no reason to alter the administration's forecast of a strong recovery into 1977, with only a moderate inflation rate.

The Democrats have made the economy the centerpiece of the presidential election campaign, charging that the Ford administration has over-emphasized the struggle against inflation at the expense of the unemployed.

While the current inflation rate is a better performance than the 9 per cent rate a year ago, it is still quite high by historical standards. Through much of the post-World War II period, price increases averaged about 2 per cent a year.

Wholesale prices, which are eventually reflected at the retail level, declined one-tenth of 1 per cent in August. This was due largely to a 2.9 per cent drop in farm prices, which have been a major factor in slowing over-all inflation in the economy this year.

News watch

Spy ship deactivated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy is going to spend $2.1 million to deactivate the spy ship Gomara Explorer, which was used by the CIA to recover part of a Russian submarine from the bottom of the Pacific Ocean in the summer of 1974.

The vessel, built with government funds under a secret agreement between the CIA and a corporation controlled by the late billionaire Howard Hughes, will be mothballed and kept in readiness for possible future use as a Navy salvage ship.

The government announced

Monday that it had failed in a months-long effort to find any private firm willing to lease the vessel.

The 618-foot salvage ship is worth $65 million, the General Services Administration said.

After the CIA was finished with the ship, the government tried unsuccessfully to find another federal agency that might use it, and then turned it over to the GSA to seek private bids.

GSA officials had declined to say how much a lease would cost, but industry estimates put the figure at about $30,000 a day.

Martha Mitchell believed

NEW YORK (AP) — Martha Mitchell's doctor says she believed to the end that the Nixon administration caused the cancer that killed her but that it was "a highly inaccurate supposition."

Dr. Klaus Mayer, a specialist who treated the estranged wife of former U.S. Atty. Gen. John Mitchell for cancer of the bone marrow, was quoted in the Ladies Home Journal as saying Mrs. Mitchell thought the disease resulted from tranquilizer injections.

She charged that she was given the injections by a Secret Service agent in California in 1972 to keep her quiet about the Watergate scandal.

"She never gave up the lingering idea that 'those guys' had induced her illness," Mayer added.

The physician also was quoted as saying that Mitchell thought of visiting her before her death last Memorial Day but decided against it.

"I don't think it was hostility," he added, "or that he didn't care. But the last thing he wanted was another blowup with her, for her sake."

Mayer said he thought Mitchell was "sincerely moved and saddened by her death."

Vet pensions

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $413-million increase in veterans pensions is on its way to President Ford.

The Senate completed action Monday on legislation to raise pensions by 7 per cent effective Jan. 1 for a million veterans and 1.6 million dependents.

The Senate also passed and sent to the House an 8 per cent increase effective Oct. 1 in government benefits for disabled veterans and for survivors of Americans killed in action. It would cost an estimated $393 million in the next fiscal year.

Both measures were passed by a voice vote.

Some 2.3 million veterans now receive compensation for service-connected disabilities. The amount varies from $35 to $707 a month, depending on the severity of the disability. Those with multiple disabilities may receive $1,139 a month.

Ford would protest

NEW YORK (AP) — President Ford says maybe his wife, Betty, would not be surprised if daughter Susan had an affair, but he would — and "would protest in a most vigorous way."

At the same time, the President said he does not want Susan to get married too young and does not think she will.

The President's views on extramarital affairs and early marriage were contained in an interview in the October issue of Ladies Home Journal.

The President said that if 19-year-old Susan told him she was having an affair, "I'd counsel her," adding:

"But I don't think that would happen — not the way Susan was brought up."

Underground evangelist

Dr. Silas Hong, China specialist for underground evangelism, will speak at the Lamar Full Gospel Assembly at 7:30 p.m. today. Dr. Hong, a native of Hupeh, China, has just returned from an extensive Far East visit and is now on tour to explain China's need for Bibles and other religious literature. Dr. Hong fled from China in 1948 and is author of a book, "How God Has Used 25 Years of Communism to Prepare China for Evangelism," soon to be published by Fleming Revell Company.

Federal agents raid Detroit official's home

DETROIT (AP) — Federal agents raided the home of Detroit's No. 2 police official, seizing records and files in a narcotics investigation that also involves one other high-ranking police official.

Agents said the raid at the home of Executive Deputy Chief Frank Blount, 51, was one of several Monday on Detroit's East Side that included five other persons, one of them a police inspector.

Officials said no one had been charged in connection with the raids.

The agents, accompanied by two deputy chiefs and Police Chief Philip Tannian, had a search warrant which said the records being sought at Blount's home related to narcotics distribution.

The warrant listed "... a black attache case and mixing bowl and mixer as well as narcotics paraphernalia used for the manufacture, distribution and possession of unlawful narcotics ..." among items sought at the house Blount shares with his son, Michael, also a policeman.

The records seized at Blount's home show "the identities, sources of supply and methods of importation and supply locations for unlawful narcotics ..." said the search warrant.

Federal officials refused to comment on the raid except to say that the matter was before a federal grand jury.

Sources said, however, that agents placed a listening device in a house trailer parked at a gas station frequented by Blount and Inspector John Henry, acting commander of Detroit's 11th Precinct.

The listening device was installed at the station about 10 months ago, the source said.

Officials said Tannian had been subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury and to bring with him all records involving Inspector Henry.

Tannian also was directed by the grand jury to deliver any of Blount's records that relate to criminal investigations involving Henry and the four others.

"I've never engaged in any narcotics activity," the 51-year-old Blount said from his lawyer's downtown office after the raid.

The 27-year veteran — the highest ranking black officer in the department's history — had tears streaming down his face as he denied any wrongdoing. He said the files contained records of a training course he once attended at Harvard University.

Ford records subpoenaed

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Records of the Kent County Republican party, headquartered in President Ford's hometown of Grand Rapids, have been subpoenaed by the Watergate special prosecutor, the party's county chairman said today.

Paul Henry, Kent County GOP chairman, confirmed a report in today's Wall Street Journal that prosecutor Charles Ruff has subpoenaed records of two Republican committees in Kent County. The subpoenaed records date back to 1964.

"We have no idea what they are looking for. But we hope to get it over quickly and get a clean bill of health," Henry said.

"We are cooperating in any way we can and our relationship (with Ruff's staff) is very cordial. We have made every attempt to comply," he said.

"I'm not laughing. It's a serious matter. But I think we'll come out with a clean bill of health," Henry said.

The Michigan Republican State Central Committee knew nothing of the investigation until informed by a reporter today, said Jerry Roe, state GOP executive secretary.

She goes from riches to rags

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Her summer cruises on the Nile and a $2,500 monthly allowance are things of the past. She lives no longer in an elegant palace but in a West Los Angeles apartment shared with her mother. Even the love which triggered her financial difficulties has turned sour.

Fathia Ghali, sister of Egypt's last monarch, King Farouk, was close to tears Monday as sat and watched the remnants of royal riches hauled into bankruptcy court.

"This is a difficult time," she whispered, bidding farewell to the last of her jewelry in the stark courtroom. Glittering on a table were two earrings, two necklaces, a ring, a pin and a bracelet — treasures which belonged to her mother, 81-year-old Nazi Fuad, widow of King Fuad I, ruler of Egypt from 1922 until 1936.

Mrs. Ghali's attorney had hoped the jewelry would bring $500,000. But the highest bid — $180,000 from Los Angeles auctioneer Sid Bush — was too low, said Judge James E. Moriarty, so the receiver may sell the jewels privately to pay off Mrs. Ghali's debts.

Mrs. Ghali and her mother, who once lived in a palace, now reside in a comfortable West Los Angeles apartment. Their rent and other expenses are paid by a family friend whom they refuse to identify.

The women filed for bankruptcy in 1973, listing among their assets the jewelry, mansions in Hawaii and Beverly Hills, Calif., five cars and an Arabian stallion valued at $5,000.

The princess married a young Egyptian diplomat, Riad Ghali, in 1950. Ghali was a Christian, not a Moslem. The queen gave her blessing, but an angry Farouk stripped both women of their royal status after the marriage.

Farouk was overthrown in a military coup in 1952. He died in exile in 1965.

Mrs. Ghali recalled that her mother received about $5,000 a month as a royal allowance and she, as a 19-year-old princess, received half that amount. When their royalty was taken away, all their property and possessions in Egypt were confiscated, leaving them only what they carried to the United States, where the queen was being treated for a kidney ailment.

For many years, the ex-queen and former princess led an active social life centered at a 28-room mansion in Beverly Hills. When Mrs. Ghali separated from her husband in 1965, she moved to a home in Hawaii, now up for sale for $350,000.

When her husband stopped support payments in 1972, Mrs. Ghali turned to domestic work as "the only thing I could do at the time, having no college background," Moriarty said "she cleaned office buildings at night."

Six months later the anonymous family friend enabled her to stop work, but the debts remained.

Mrs. Ghali said she hopes to return to Egypt in January and is considering an attempt at running an import business, travel agency or public relations firm.

Priceless artifacts stolen

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Police say they are concerned that thieves who stole about $750,000 worth of Spanish coins and jewelry from the Museum of Sunken Treasure will melt their booty down to disguise it.

The gold and silver artifacts — some considered priceless — date back to 1715 and were recovered by divers from sunken Spanish galleons off Florida's East Coast. They were stolen early Monday from the private museum here.

"The fear I have is that they (the thieves) will try melting down the coins and gold jewelry to hide their tracks," said Police Chief Bob Tweed.

Tweed said a few replicas of valuable artifacts were mixed in with real treasure dredged from the sandy resting places of ships driven ashore by hurricanes.

"Unless they know what they have got, it will take some time for them to discern what are replicas and what is the real thing," Tweed said. Museum officials said the value of the haul could only be estimated.

"The rarity and historic value of each item stolen makes it difficult to name specific values," said Alan McNair. He is vice president of the Patterson Eric Corp. of Vero Beach, which has a controlling interest in the museum's operator, the Real Eight Corp.

"Depending on how badly a collector wants an item, the price will vary," McNair added.

He said the stolen items included a chest of 1,000 silver coins and 500 gold coins and a $33,000 Spanish captain-general's whistle on an 11-foot-long, pure gold chain.

He said the thieves also took a gold emblem showing the cross of Jerusalem, numerous gold rings with rare stones containing inscriptions of their origin, and various types of gold pendants — one measuring five feet long.

Tweed said the theft was discovered by an employe reporting for work Monday morning.

The chief said the thieves had forced open a door to enter the eight-year-old museum in this historic city, now known for futuristic space launchings. They then smashed open 10 glass-plated showcases and stole items selectively.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor, who has resisted lending her name to commercial products, has at last found an offer she couldn't refuse: diamonds.

Harry Shuster, president and chief officer, has announced formation of the Elizabeth Taylor Diamond Corp., which will offer jewels from $50 upward through jewelers and other retailers in the United States. Shuster said the diamonds will be on the market in time for Christmas.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — United Artists reports that Robert Redford has begun filming his role in Joseph E. Levine's epic, "A Bridge Too Far."

Redford is portraying Maj. Julian Cook, a leader in the U.S. attack on Nijmegen bridge in September, 1944. The film is based on Cornelius Ryan's book about the World War II operation. Also starring: James Caan, Michael Caine, Sean Connery, Elliott Gould, Gene Hackman, Laurence Olivier, Ryan O'Neal, Maximilian Schell, Liv Ullmann.

Circus school closed

BARABOO, Wis. (AP) — Aspiring acrobats have walked their last tightrope and tumbled their last tumble at Circus World Museum's training school. It's been closed because of high insurance rates.

"The kids are really upset," museum director William Schultz said Monday. "Some of them were headed for stardom."

He said refusal by insurance companies to offer a liability policy the museum could afford had forced him to close the free school he founded here four years ago. The museum is operated by the state Historical Society on property that once belonged to the Ringling Brothers circus family in this western Wisconsin town.

Schultz said the chief purpose of the school "was to show visitors how acrobats are trained, and to provide a great recreational outlet for our young people."

The school trained hundreds of local youngsters in circus stunts that included tightrope walking, tumbling, juggling and bicycle riding. About 150 students were enrolled this summer, he said.

Schultz said he knows of only three similar schools, two in Florida and one in Indiana.

"Ours was a free program for kids aged 7-18," he said. "A few people sponsored the minimum costs."

The sawdust students held spring shows under a museum tent. Then they auditioned for the chance to give summer performances for tourists who visit the museum to see its internationally acclaimed collection of antique wooden circus wagons.

"We never had a single accident in the four summers and three winters we operated the school," Schultz said, "but still we could not find a reputable insurance company to give us insurance protection at a cost we could afford."

"We wanted a $1 million policy, but they just said they weren't interested."

Students had been covered under a state plan, but the state recently canceled coverage for any facilities not specifically operated by state employes.

Solar power set for prison

BASTROP, Tex. (AP) — A new federal prison for young offenders will have one of the world's largest solar-powered heating and cooling systems, Rep. J.J. Pickle announced Monday.

The comfort system will cost $1.3 million, Pickle said.

Delays in legislation to discourage energy?

HOUSTON (AP) — An oil executive says delays built into legislation now before Congress will tend to discourage future energy development.

C. P. Loucks said Thursday the pending legislation could cause a 40 per cent curtailment of offshore oil and gas exploration within two years after enactment.

Loucks, president of Imco Service, a division of the Halliburton Co., also said the current five to seven years in time between offshore leasing and actual production could be increased to nine years.

"At a time this nation needs to encourage further development of our energy resources, it appears the enactment of this legislation would seriously delay and possibly even halt the development of much needed offshore oil and gas reserves," Loucks said.

He said the current 1953 CCS Lands Act prescribes 70 procedural steps that must be taken between the leasing and the actual production of any offshore tracts.

"These steps, together with the actual work that must be performed usually means a wait of from five to seven years before any oil begins arriving onshore," he said.

Wollard promoted, transferred

Mike Wollard has been promoted to district manager and has transferred to the Oklahoma City office of Drilco-Division of Smith International, Inc.

Wollard moves up from the position of field salesman and transfers from the company's Pampa office. He joined Drilco in 1973 as field inspector trainee and since that time has also worked as field inspector. He was promoted to oil field salesman in June of 1974.

A native of Houston, Wollard is a 1971 graduate of Texas A&M University at College Station. He holds a BBA in Marketing.

Drilco-Division of Smith International, Inc. designs, manufactures, markets and services a variety of downhole drilling tools and equipment.

Phillips boosts Texas

BORGER, Tex. — Almost $137 million flowed into the Texas economy last year as a result of Phillips Petroleum Company's operations in the Lone Star State.

Figures recently compiled by Phillips show that in 1975 the company paid more than $97 million in salaries to its 6,100 Texas employees and about $31 million in state and local taxes.

The Oklahoma-based company also paid more than $5.3 million in annual dividends to shareholders residing in Texas and $3.2 million in annual pension benefits to retirees. Texas has long played an important role in the history of Phillips. The company set down roots with oil properties in the Fort Worth Basin in 1917, drilled in the Panhandle in 1925 and began operating its first refinery in Borger in 1927.

Today, Phillips has major facilities or offices in 38 Texas cities. Among these are 16 chemical plants, 21 natural gas liquids extraction plants and five petroleum marketing terminals. The company also has net total of 3,571 producing wells in the state.

PAPL sets seminar set

The Panhandle Association of Petroleum Landmen is conducting a set of seminars on oil and gas contracts Sept. 23, 30 and Oct. 7, 14 in Amarillo.

An "Executive Night" dinner, featuring the president of Shell Oil Co. as guest speaker, will be held Oct. 20 in the Amarillo Hilton Inn.

Each of the seminars begins at 7 p.m. on successive Thursday nights in the Concert Theatre Hall of the Amarillo College Art Center Building at 22nd and Van Buren.

On Sept. 23 the petroleum workers will hear Ross Brown, an independent operator in Oklahoma City, discuss the role of the landman, followed by a talk by Wayne Cummings of Diamond Shamrock Corp. in Amarillo in "What's in the Lease."

Sept. 30 includes Maston Courtney of Cutlon, Morgan, Britain & White in Amarillo on

"Recent Developments in Oil & Gas Law." Paul W. Eaton Jr. of Rosell, N.M., and Conrad E. Coffield of Midland, Texas, both with Hinkle, Bondurant, Cox and Eaton of Roswell, N.M., will discuss "State and Federal Regulations." Eaton will handle state regulations, Coffield will handle federal regulations.

The Oct. 7 meeting will include discussion of farmout and contribution agreements by Jim Holcomb of Cities Service in Oklahoma City; and "Pooling, Unitization and the Landman" by Barth Walker of Walker, Layrence & Walker in Oklahoma City.

A concluding seminar Oct. 14 will be led by Jeff Wornack of Exxon Corp. in Houston, on administration of the lease; Marvin Wigley with Exxon in Midland, on operating agreements and Patrick J. McCarthy of Northern Natural Gas Co. in Omaha, on gas contracts and balancing agreements.

The first three Thursday meetings are set to end at 9:30 p.m., and the final seminar ends at 10 p.m.

An "Executive Night" dinner, hosted by the Panhandle Association of Petroleum Landmen, is scheduled to begin with a social hour at 6 p.m. and dinner at 7 p.m. Oct. 20 in the Amarillo Hilton. Following dinner, John F. Bookout, president of Shell Oil Co., will speak.

Registration is $15 for the seminars and $10 for the dinner, and may be completed by writing to PAPL, P.O. 12658, Amarillo 79101.

Exec emphasizes exploration

By MAX B. SKELTON AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — An Exxon Co. USA executive says the nation has plenty of energy available only because it is importing four barrels of oil out of every 10 barrels used.

W.T. Slick Jr., senior vice president of the Houston-based firm, says the situation underscores the need to maximize explorations for new domestic reserves.

"Some 85 per cent of these imports come directly from the OPEC nations or are imported from countries refining OPEC crude," he said. "OPEC now controls nearly two-thirds of the world's oil supply."

Slick added that Exxon studies indicate that by 1980, and throughout that decade, the nation will be dependent on imports for more than one-half of its oil supplies.

"And virtually all of these imports will come from OPEC sources," he said.

Despite such an outlook, Slick said, there are people who discount any concern about the prospect of the United States becoming increasingly dependent upon foreign oil.

"They look upon domestic coal and nuclear power as the solution to the nation's energy security problems," he said. "But obviously these fuels cannot be adapted to all facets of energy demand."

Those fuels, he said, require long lead times, massive capital projects, and laws and regulations that facilitate both their use and timely development.

Slick said other energy sources also are waiting in the wings but their outlook not only involves long lead times and large capital sums but, in most instances, some very tough technical and environmental challenges.

"Synthetic oils from coal and shale are not expected to be commercially available until the 1980s," he said. "Even by 1990, they are likely to be providing only about two per cent of our total oil supply."

He said synthetic gas from coal should be somewhat farther along by then, accounting for about four per cent of total gas supply.

"In addition, synthetic gas from coal may play an increasingly significant role as a chemical feedstock if the price of natural gas increases to a British thermal unit equivalent with fuel oil," he said.

"Such an event would place natural gas and synthetic gas from coal on a fairly equal economic basis as a source for producing methanol, ammonia, and ethylene derivatives."

Slick said hydro and geothermal power meanwhile will do well to hold their own as energy sources and solar power, while very promising, is unlikely to become commercially important before 1990.

Other more exotic energy sources, he said, are even less predictable but probably lie even farther in the future.

"The end result is that for the foreseeable future petroleum—oil and gas—must continue to provide most of this nation's energy," he said. "They are the key to our current energy problem."

Unfortunately, he said, the nation consumed during 1975 almost 65 per cent more oil than it produced and produced 10 times as much oil as was discovered through new explorations.

As for natural gas, Slick added, the nation produced almost five times as much last year as was discovered.
