

Sonar outlines Loch Ness Monster

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Scientists report that a sonar search for the legendary Loch Ness monster has turned up a fuzzy outline of an object on the bottom of the deep Scottish lake which resembles a prehistoric dinosaur.

But Martin Klein, head sonar expert of this past summer's expedition to the loch sponsored by the New York Times and the Academy of Applied Science in Boston, is cautious about his discovery. Klein said in a telephone interview from Salem, N.H., where his sonar manufacturing firm, Klein Associates is located, "It certainly bears further investigation."

A picture of what might be a monster carcass — of a shipwreck or something else — appeared in the electronics trade journal EDN, published here Friday.

A carcass would establish Nessie's existence almost as well as a live specimen, but no one has ever found one.

The picture is a side-scan sonar trace of the bottom of Loch Ness. One object is almost certain to be a barge sunk years ago.

Nearby is what EDN said Klein described as "an unusual shape with a long neck-like projection and what could possibly be flippers" about 30 feet long.

EDN said the object was at 330 feet, too deep for a dive, but in his telephone interview Klein said the magazine was mistaken and it was 150 feet.

Klein provided another picture of a scan of what the sonar crew dubbed "The Average Plesiosaur," after the prehistoric animal that has been one candidate for the identity of the legendary monster. It also was about 30 feet long.

In the draft of an article for Technology Review, the alumni publication of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Klein wrote of that scan, "As is often the situation in our type of work, we made one of our most intriguing finds just as we were about to wind up our survey."

"The target has a carcass-like shape with a long neck-like projection, and... does not look like any of the other targets which we picked up in the loch. Of course it would be wild speculation to make any assumptions about this target without further investigation. An underwater television or a small submersible would probably be needed for identification... "We named this target 'The Average Plesiosaur' to tease our paleontologist friends. It will be interesting to find if the target is still there when we next go to look for it."

The expedition mounted a complex of cameras and other sonar equipment this summer in the loch in its most ambitious undertaking yet, and probably the most ambitious monster hunt ever launched. It has not yet reported its findings.

Alco to open here

Alco Discount Store is scheduled to open at the Coronado Center in Pampa in the spring of 1977 as the first phase of a $900,000 expansion and modernization program for the center.

The contract for the construction of Alco awarded to Hogan Schuneman Construction Company General Contractors of Pampa. The contract calls for a 36,175 square foot Alco facility.

Alco Stores are operated by Duckwall Stores Inc. of Abilene, Kan., who have run a variety store in the center for more than 12 years.

The Alco chain has stores in Kansas, Colorado, New Mexico, Nebraska and Iowa. The Pampa store will be the firm's first in Texas.

Bill Adams, manager of the Coronado Center, said an additional 21,000 square foot expansion is scheduled to complete the North Mall area.

Adams said the mall and parking lot areas will be updated and modernized during the construction period and estimated the total value of the new construction and updating of the center at about $9,000.

The first stores in Coronado Center opened in 1963, and has since expanded to include 25 merchants who offer a complete variety of goods and services.

The Coronado Center, according to Adams, has attracted regional trade from the entire Pampa area.

Dam work

A crew directed by J.C. Evans of Granbury, a geologist with the Soil Conservation Service, is drilling holes at site No. 2 of the McClellan Creek Watershed project about three miles east of Groom. The test drilling is being done to determine what materials are available for the dam construction and to learn what foundation conditions exist. Perry Gruhlkey, district conservationist, said that actual construction on the dam at site No. 2 probably will begin in February or March. The dam will drain about 35,000 acres and will cost about $400,000, Gruhlkey said.

Student stabbed to death in war game

By BOB MONROE
Associated Press Writer

LINDENHURST, N.Y. (AP) — A college junior pledged to an ROTC-connected military fraternity was stabbed to death with a bayonet, police said, during a hazing in which he played the role of a prisoner of war under interrogation.

Suffolk County police said Thomas Fitzgerald, 19, was stabbed in the chest by a member of the fraternity, the Pershing Rifles. The member, who was acting the part of a Soviet inquisitor, was arrested on a murder charge.

The slaying took place late Friday on Indian Island, off the south shore of Long Island near here, while 12 to 14 fraternity pledges were taking part in what police called a "training and hazing program."

Fitzgerald, the youngest of 10 children in his family, had joined the ROTC unit at St. John's University in Queens only last summer in the hope that he might get an Army scholarship for law school, his sister said.

The ROTC unit at St. John's serves schools in the area which do not have units of their own.

Charged with second-degree murder in the death was James Savino, 21, of Bayside, Queens, who was a cadet first lieutenant in the ROTC unit. He is a senior at the Stevens Institute of Technology in Hoboken, N.J.

According to his sister, Noreen Reiser, Fitzgerald was a junior at Queens College, part of the City University of New York. He worked at the school library to help pay for his education.

"He wanted to go to law school and my widowed mother did not have the money to send him," she said. "He joined the ROTC because he thought that under the Army program he could get some sort of scholarship. He was very, very smart."

A spokesman for St. John's University had no immediate statement on the death but said he was trying to reach the colonel in charge of the ROTC unit for comment. He described the Pershing Rifles as a military professional fraternity.

The spokesman said he did not know whether the fraternity outing was organized by the ROTC unit or not. "Sometimes the guys get together and just do things," he said.

Police said Fitzgerald, a slender 6-foot-2, was with the other Pershing Rifles pledges when the training and hazing program began at 11:20 p.m. on the island in Great South Bay.

Police said the uninhabited island, about 50 acres in size, is accessible only by water. It was believed the fraternity used a rubber raft to get to the island, located just off shore.

"The hazing took the form of role playing whereby 12 to 14 pledges were prisoners of war and the fraternity members were the inquisitors," police said in a statement.

"During the questioning of the pledge, Thomas Fitzgerald, playing the role of prisoner of war, Fitzgerald was stabbed in the chest by fraternity member James Savino playing the role of a Soviet interrogator," they said.

The bayonet, which was not affixed to a rifle, was later recovered at the scene.

Marijuana smuggling-- a family affair at border

RIO GRANDE CITY, Tex. (AP) — "We wouldn't mind the smuggling, if they'd just pay taxes on it," joked a Starr County resident.

It would be a hefty sum, indeed. The smuggling involves 20,000 to 40,000 pounds of marijuana a week sneaked from Mexico across the willow-lined Rio Grande into the brush of this South Texas county for distribution in northern cities.

It is the work of the "mafiosos," and a thriving "family" business in this county of 17,000 people according to state and county investigators working with a grand jury currently probing the smuggling activity.

The "mafiosos" a word used in northern Mexico to describe those involved in marijuana or heroin smuggling—are known to many residents of the area on both sides of the border.

Fear of involvement and physical harm, plus a distrust of law-enforcement agencies have made investigation difficult, according to law-enforcement officers.

"I'd say there are at least ten major families involved and when I say major families, I mean big dealers," said Herman Railey, a Border Patrol officer and foreman of the grand jury which began investigating drug trafficking seven months ago in this predominantly Mexican-American county.

"These family operations have blood ties on both sides of the border," continued Railey. "One part of the family lives on this side taking care of the business and the other part— and possibly the family's roots—are in Mexico."

Arnulfo Guerra, district attorney for this county located about 130 miles up the river from Brownsville on the Gulf of Mexico, says about 2,000 persons are involved in the smuggling operation.

The investigation was sparked by a series of gang-like killings apparently drug-related. Three bodies were found stuffed in automobile trunks during a two-day period and that "focused everyone's attention," Guerra said. "Everybody turns the other way until they find a body in their backyard."

"Most of the citizens here have developed an attitude of 'if you don't bother me, I won't bother you,' Railey said. "It is common knowledge among the people here that several persons have been killed or murdered over the dope dealings. This was nothing new."

Similar types of gang-like killings have occurred just across the border in towns from Camargo to Reynosa where officials and the general population often shrug them off as internal struggles among the "mafiosos."

Railey, Guerra and several investigators agree on one point: Many Starr County smugglers are flaunting their new-found wealth.

"Some of these people were working as farmhands two years ago for ten dollars a day," Guerra said. "Now they are driving Cadillacs, living in big houses and spending money like it's going out of style."

Similar displays of wealth are now common in the farming communities across the border. Residents smile knowingly when asked where the money comes from.

"It's got to the point where they are influencing school children," Railey noted. "There are cases of hero worship by younger adults and also the younger school children. They are almost like Robin Hood to the younger people."

Investigators said high school boys are getting a dollar a pound for unloading the marijuana off rafts in the Rio Grande and loading them into trucks.

While the grand jury was proceeding with the investigation, Customs patrolmen about six miles away confiscated a trailer loaded with more than 700 pounds of marijuana this week.

"That may seem like a lot to some people," an officer said. "But it is just another little load around here."

Railey says the grand jury has the time and desire to begin attacking the drug trafficking which stems from the country's long smuggling tradition.

"Some families in Starr County have always smuggled to make a living," said one officer. "It's tradition. The marijuana and hard drugs are just recent. They found out how to really make money with marijuana and they are going after it."

The Rio Grande meanders 59 miles along the border separating Starr County from Mexico with easy access on both sides.

"If you have ten families and each family moves 5,000 pounds a week on an average, then you could see the kind of tonnage that would mount up real quick."

The family aspect of the county's leading "industry" provides protection to the smugglers, says Railey.

"You are dealing with families," he says, "and unless you infiltrate the organization, it would be almost impossible to obtain information on them. They trust no outsiders."

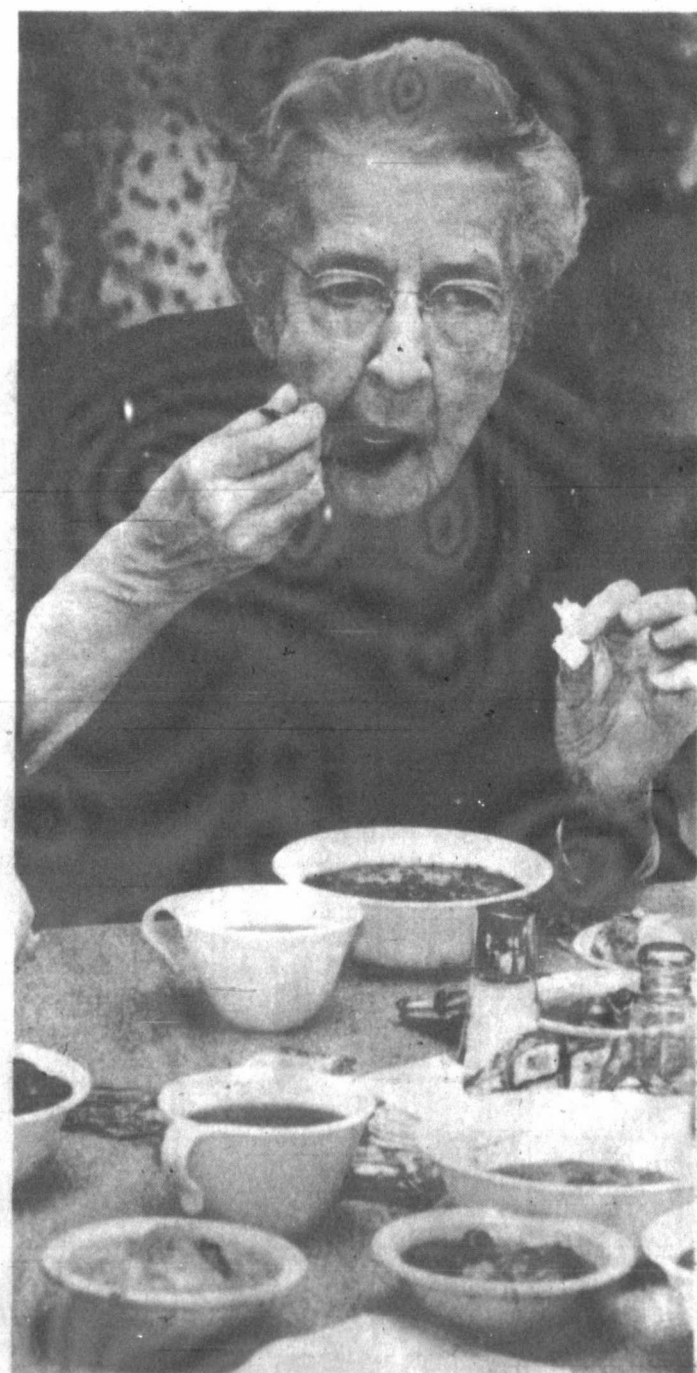

"I've lived here almost nine years and know just about all the people, but I'm still an outsider."

Railey still believes, however, the grand jury will be able to "start the ball rolling" toward "curbing the growth of the narcotic industry in Starr County."

"The confidence in law enforcement here has grown to the extent that most people have the feeling that it is useless to report any wrongdoing regardless of how serious in nature because they feel nothing will be done," he says.

"This has caused some concern to the good people in Starr County especially for the safety of their families."

"The grand jury feels something is going to have to be done now."

Landmark meal for Senior Citizens

Opening day for the first hot meal at the Pampa Senior Citizens Center, 500 W. Francis, Friday attracted more guests than officials had anticipated. Wanda Talley, executive director, said about 300 persons were served chili, stew and cornbread until it was all gone. Doors were also opened Friday for the Christmas bazaar, featuring handmade items and home cooked foods. Mrs. Nelle Edminster was among those who found the food "just right." Mabel E. Winter found the bazaar an interesting place for Christmas shopping.

Those 'tax loopholes'

The Wall Street Journal summed up the new tax laws as well as anyone: "The new tax provisions will affect a great many people — but not that much." In substance, after confronting the tax mountain for the past three years, Congress managed to move a few molehills, while leaving most of the massive tax structure not only intact, but, if anything, more complicated than ever. Hence it will be important that the changes be studied very closely this year, especially by the small businessmen, the farmers, the part-time professionals and the retired.

Questionably, the best tax "break" for the little fellow is the revised Estate Tax provision, which allows for increased exemptions. And for that change in the law we can all be especially grateful to the farmers of America who led the fight against the previous (and extremely unfair) penalties which helped to wipe out many a family farm and family business upon the death of parents.

Perhaps the most confusing element in the discussion of taxes — especially during an election year — is the attack by some politicians against "tax loopholes," usually on the grounds that the "loopholes" favor the rich against the poor.

The fact is, our tax laws are saturated with "loopholes" for which most of us, and especially the poor, can be very grateful.

For example the small businessman, the part-time professional and others who operate from their own home are granted certain exemptions (loopholes, if you wish) for the expenses involved.

This is simply to recognize that "big businesses," which can afford to build and maintain their own buildings and factories, can (and do) deduct all of the costs for that overhead. The tax provisions attempt to give the little fellow, who cannot afford to have his own, all-business property, something of an even break.

Or, the provision that interest charges are deductible. This recognizes that a rich person can pay cash for an automobile, house, or other possessions. But the little fellow who does not have that much cash is forced to borrow money to pay mortgage interest on his home. The law, therefore, attempts to make it possible for the "poor," and not just the rich, to acquire possessions such as home and automobiles.

"Equality under the law" has been a major objective of the United States from the very founding of our nation. Absolute equality, of course, is impossible; people are not born equal, with equal abilities, skills, talents, intelligence or inheritance. But no country in the world has tried to do more, or has been as successful, in providing an equal opportunity to all. Tax "loopholes" are an important part of the "even break for all" process.

Many economists feel that this type of reaction will harm the free enterprise system which has made our country so great.

It's significant that Sweden — admired by Social Democrats everywhere as the ideal welfare state — no longer finds that ideal so appealing to its own people. Of even more significance is the question of whether or not the country can chance the course it has followed for so long. Mr. Palme's challenge is a valid one not only for Sweden but for every other nation where socialism has gotten a solid foothold.

Mr. Palme is on solid ground. It is far easier to build a high-tax welfare state than to dismantle one. The coalition of centrists, liberals and conservatives who will now control the government may have to be content merely to try to halt the growth of government and its attendant costs.

Thorbjorn Falldin, leader of the Center Party, says that decentralizing government will "take time." He didn't offer extravagant promises. His main interest seems to be in closing down the country's nuclear power plants, which raises questions about whether Sweden is getting much of a bargain in its new leadership.

How's Your Knowledge Of Economics?

Surprisingly, fewer than one-third of all students completing the 12th grade will have had a separate course in economics.

Only one state in the country requires its high school students to take an economics course.

And, in a simple test administered to more than 21,000 high school students, over half of them did not know the United States economy is based on the free enterprise system.

SURPRISING STATISTIC — Many high school students do not know our economy is based on the free enterprise system.

With these grim statistics it's not hard to understand that when Americans get frustrated and unhappy by business misconduct and economic problems they tend to seek government intervention to relieve the problems and provide solutions. This in turn causes regulatory agencies to get together with business, congressmen to support anti-business legislation, and government to extend its regulations outside its normal province.

Many economists feel that this type of reaction will harm the free enterprise system which has made our country so great.

It's Possible! Turn goals into action

By Robert Schuller

What is the best thing that has happened to you in the past five years? The experiences of the past half-decade are, of course, largely the result of decisions you made — or failed to make.

I can tell you how the next five years can be great. The secret of dynamic and effective living is up to you.

(1) Make a commitment confidently.

(2) Establish goals — immediate and long-range — if you have only a vague idea of what you want to accomplish, don't be surprised if your achievements will be vague.

(3) Now, transform your goals into concrete action.

(4) Keep on never taking your eye off of your long-range objective. With determined perseverance you will live in a spirit that will keep you bouncing back. Then truly in the next 60 months wonderful things will happen to you.

"GOOD WORK, EVANS! AS SOLID A TOXICITY CLAIM AS WE EVER DEVELOPED"

When is a law not a law?

By JOSEPH NOCERA
News Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — There are not enough worlds in the dictionary to describe all the intricacies of our criminal justice system. I can think of at least one more that is urgently needed: the "unlaw."

If Webster was still around, he would define an unlaw like this:

"... a series of sentences appearing as a section of the U.S. Criminal Code which reads like laws, carries penalties like laws and resembles laws in most discernable ways, but still may not be laws. Found chiefly in sections dealing with Members of Congress."

Two of the classic unlaws are a couple of sections of the criminal code which appear, to the untrained eye, to prohibit congressional staffers from contributing to congressional campaigns. To show you how difficult it is to spot these unlaws right away, I quote from one of the sections:

"Whoever, being an officer, clerk or other person in the service of the United States ... directly or indirectly gives or hands over to any other officer back. "Are you sure?" I asked. Now she wasn't so sure. "I've since checked with our lawyers," she said, "and they say it's not legal."

At Common Cause lawyer Ken Guido said: "It sure looks illegal to me. That's the way I interpret it, and I would pretty surprised if Justice interpreted it differently." Guido gently suggested I go back to Justice for a final ruling. "Let me know what they say," said Guido.

Well, Ken, here's what the fellow at Justice said this time: "We're between a rock and a hard place on that. Technically, when a staffer contributes to a congressional campaign he violates the law. But it's been going on a long time, and since the FEC doesn't seem to want to do anything about it, no one here is going to either."

By now, of course, I knew I had uncovered an unlaw, but just to make absolutely certain, I placed a call to the campaign treasurer of an incumbent congressman running for reelection. This congressman had been accepting staff contributions, and the treasurer had recently also asked Justice for a ruling. Here's what the treasurer said:

"They told me that it was a cloudy area of the law, but that the committee could keep the money if it wanted because no one had ever been prosecuted for contributing to their boss' campaign. But they also said that for public relations purposes, it might be better to give the money back."

And that's the best definition of an unlaw you'll ever find.

It's Possible! Face problems with patience

By Robert Schuller

The greatest power in the world can literally shake the top of a mountain, carve it and crumble it to bits. This same power that can churn a granite mountain into dust also has the power to come into a human heart, heal a wound and change a soul. It is a power that you need to tap to make your dreams come true and change your destiny.

What is this power? It is TIME. Time changes everything. Today face your problem with patience. "Wait on the Lord: be of good courage, and He shall strengthen your heart." (Ps. 27:14)

Patience puts power in your heart and dreams. You can become the person you want to be and you can succeed in a most phenomenal goalsetting plan, if you're willing to pay the price in terms of time. Almost anything can be accomplished by the patient person.

RECOVERING from the frustrations of watching election night returns on TV is taking longer than we thought.

Another thing we've been kicking around in retrospect to last Tuesday night and the wee hours of Wednesday morning is how we fell into the stupidity trap of staying up until after 2 o'clock in the morning with the likes of Walter Cronkite, Harry Reasoner, Barbara Walters, David Brinkley, John Chancellor, Eric Sevareid and their cohorts on the three networks.

Switching from NBC to ABC to CBS and back again caused so much confusion early in the evening that you felt like you might as well throw your popcorn at the boob tube, pour your hard cider down Roger Mudd's neck and go to bed. As the evening wore on it got worse.

CBS, for instance, gave Texas to Carter real early. A switch to NBC and they said it looked like Ford was ahead here. Turning quickly to ABC you learned that Texas couldn't be called either way. All of this was taking place within a couple of minutes.

One thing learned from the election night experience was never to try watching three networks on one television set.

It must have been great in the old days before radio and television when you didn't worry about anything on election night. You just waited four or five days — maybe a week — and got the results in your newspaper.

It took that long to count the ballots. There were no voting machines, no computers and no radio and television experts projecting the winner ten minutes after the polls closed.

THAT'S another thing we don't quite understand. Because of time zones, the networks begin giving returns from the East a long with winner projections while voters in the Pacific and Mountain Time states out West still have two or three hours left to vote.

They can watch TV and see who is winning in the Central and Eastern Time states. Isn't it possible this could have a serious effect on decisions of voters going to the polls in the West?

There are laws to prevent campaigning around voting places — or doing any kind of electioneering within certain distances of the polls.

However, voters in western states can turn on their TV at 4 or 5 o'clock in the afternoon and see how the vote is going in the East, where polls already closed at 7 p.m., and even hear projections (right or wrong) of who the winners will be. There always is a tendency to go along with a winner.

It also seems unfair for politicians in the West to learn their candidate is running behind in early returns in the East. It gives party leaders a chance to man the telephones and get needed votes into the ballot boxes.

And that's the best definition of an unlaw you'll ever find.

It's Possible! Face problems with patience

By Robert Schuller

The greatest power in the world can literally shake the top of a mountain, carve it and crumble it to bits. This same power that can churn a granite mountain into dust also has the power to come into a human heart, heal a wound and change a soul. It is a power that you need to tap to make your dreams come true and change your destiny.

What is this power? It is TIME. Time changes everything. Today face your problem with patience. "Wait on the Lord: be of good courage, and He shall strengthen your heart." (Ps. 27:14)

Patience puts power in your heart and dreams. You can become the person you want to be and you can succeed in a most phenomenal goalsetting plan, if you're willing to pay the price in terms of time. Almost anything can be accomplished by the patient person.

"A true friend unbosoms freely, advises justly, assists readily, adventures boldly, takes all patiently, defends courageously, and continues a friend unchangeably." — William Penn, Quaker founder of Pennsylvania.

Seems it would contribute honesty and fair play to national elections if there were no results reported until after the polls close and voting ends in all sections of the United States. Crazy idea? Maybe. Maybe not.

HERE'S SOMETHING we never knew before: There are 120 "blind" street intersections in Pampa.

That means there are 120 home-made traffic hazards any one of which is a potential danger trap that could bring injury or death.

According to City Manager Mack Wofford, it is one of the most difficult problems facing the City Hall staff.

Principal causes of the blind corners are parking, shrubs, trees and fences, according to the city manager.

Wofford says he believes the best approach to solution is an appeal to individual property owners to realize the danger from street corner obstructions that block the view of oncoming traffic — and then ask them to cooperate with the city in removal of the blind spots.

North Dakota has surplus

By JIM WILLIS
Associated Press Writer
BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — While many states and cities worry where their next dollar's coming from, North Dakota has a surplus the tax commissioner says "isn't just a cushion — it's a mountain of pillows."

The coffers are bulging in this almost entirely rural state primarily because of booming prices for farm goods, which in turn have sent revenues from income and sales taxes soaring.

State Budget Analyst Dale Moug estimated Thursday that on Jan. 1 the general fund will have a surplus of $176 million left from a two-year budget of $442 million approved by the 1975 legislature. When the legislature adopted the budget, it cut taxes by $44 million.

Mindful of their fiscal fortunes, North Dakotans passed a measure in Tuesday's general election reducing the state sales tax on most items by 25 per cent — from four to three cents on the dollar. The vote was 129,181 in favor to 93,272 against.

Voters also reduced the sales tax on farm and irrigation equipment from 4 to 2 per cent, and eliminated a 4 per cent tax on electricity bills.

The tax cuts are expected to sharply reduce future surpluses, but state officials said they could not immediately project the amount. Officials also said it had not yet been determined what they will do with the $176-million surplus.

Tax Commissioner Byron Dorgan said that between 1970 and 1975 North Dakota, where the health of the farm economy "is everything," led the nation in personal income growth.

"The farm economy just went wild," said one state official. "The price of wheat went up and we had bumper crops."

The rosy picture for North Dakota is a switch from the early 1950s, when residents had the highest tax burden of any state in the country — with

'Shock parole' endorsed

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A state senator and two members of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles Friday endorsed the concept of "shock parole," to make prison a better deterrent.

Sen. A. R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, said he hoped the 1977 legislature enacts a law bringing "shock parole" to Texas.

Pardons board chairman Clyde Whiteside and member Paul Cromwell outlined the advantages of the idea in testimony before the corrections committee of the "Hobby Commission" on government economy.

Shock parole allows a judge to retain jurisdiction for 90 days after sentencing an offender to prison, receive reports on his behavior there and return him to the community to 11.27 cents of every dollar going to state or local taxes. The national average at that time was 7.58 per cent.

But taxes here climbed more slowly than elsewhere, so that in 1975 the average resident paid 12.03 per cent of his income in state and local taxes, compared with 11.89 per cent nationwide.

The sales tax cut will put the slightly more than 600,000 North Dakotans below the national average.

serve out the rest of his sentence on probation.

"It is a traumatic thing for a young man to go to prison, and he may not want to go back," said Whiteside.

Schwartz said it would be good to give judges another option besides immediate probation and sentencing to a full term in prison.

Cromwell, a professional penologist, said "inmates learn how to serve time," with much of the trauma dissipating after a few months.

"The deterrence of prison hasn't been very effective once a man has learned to do time. They say, 'I could do time standing on my head,'" Cromwell testified.

Yarbrough pays loans

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas Supreme Court Justice-elect Don Yarbrough paid off nine student loans today dating back as far as 1961, according to Asst. Atty. Gen. Bob Gauss.

Gauss was prepared to seek a summary judgment against Yarbrough in County Court at Law No. 2 when he learned Yarbrough had telegraphed $1,670 to the University of Texas student loan office.

Yarbrough borrowed the money under the National Defense Student Loan program.

He had made some payments on the loan but still owed $1,392 on the principal and $278 in interest.

Yarbrough won a seat on the high court Tuesday despite write-in campaigns by Tom Lorraine of Houston and State District Court Judge Sam Houston of Denton, who filed after many critics said most voters voted for Yarbrough in the May 1 primary thinking he was Don Yarbrough, a gubernatorial candidate of the 1960s.

Daley power grip loosens

CHICAGO (AP) — Mayor Richard J. Daley emerged from Tuesday's election with his near legendary reputation as a political kingmaker in tatters.

—His hand-picked candidate for governor was crushed by the largest vote margin in Illinois history and the winner was James R. Thompson, a former prosecutor who had helped put several of the mayor's cronies in jail on corruption charges.

—Daley's carefully chosen candidate for Cook County prosecutor lost to Republican incumbent Bernard Carey despite an enormous effort by the mayor's organization to return the powerful investigative post to party control.

—Illinois and its valued bundle of 26 electoral votes went to President Ford. And although Jimmy Carter didn't need them, as it turned out, the loss can hardly have won influence or obligations for the 74-year-old Daley or Chicago in the eyes of the new Democratic administration in Washington.

On the day after the election, as Republicans celebrated in jubilation and headlines proclaimed "Daley the Big Loser," the mayor ducked reporters and flew off to vacation in Florida, where the climate was warmer and brighter.

Daley still retains his control over the city and can still deliver Chicago votes. But his state and national power seems to be draining away.

How did it happen? Clearly, one factor was Daley's choice of candidates. His hand-picked choice for governor, Secretary of State Michael J. Howlett, ran what one writer described as "the most dreary, inept, shallow and pigheaded" campaign in decades. Another writer said the mayor's pick for state's attorney, Edward Egan, had "all the drive and charisma of your average algebra teacher."

But perhaps of equal importance was the 1976 Illinois electorate. Because of recent population shifts, the vote from Chicago — no matter how completely it is captured by Daley's Democratic organization — no longer is the decisive factor it once was.

An analysis of voting figures shows that Daley produced for Jimmy Carter a higher percentage of the Chicago vote than he did for John F. Kennedy in 1960. It was that election, widely regarded as a masterpiece of political manipulation by Daley, which established him as one of the nation's most influential politicians.

Carter got 67.5 per cent of the Chicago vote in 1976, compared with the 63.6 per cent that went to Kennedy in 1960.

But the Chicago vote represented 35 per cent of the Illinois votes cast for president in 1960; this year it represented only 25.7 per cent.

Still, Milton J. Rakove, a University of Illinois political scientist who wrote "Don't Make No Waves, Don't Back No Losers," a generally favorable book about Daley's organization, noted that "the Daley organization has been wounded, but not destroyed. It has suffered losses like this in the past and always survived."

25 fires set in area

Fire Department units from both Pampa and Lefors were called Friday afternoon to extinguish 25 separate fires "apparently set" over an 11-mile area between Pampa and Lefors.

Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan said late Saturday his office is investigating the matter.

"We intend to pursue it and see what we can find out," he emphasized. "Had the wind been right it could have been a tremendous problem."

A Gray County resident reported that a count Saturday morning revealed 32 separate places along the Lefors road had been burned.

Ranchers said the pasture lands covering acres of ground could have been wiped out by the fires had they not been controlled so quickly.

Bob Herring of the Pampa Fire Department said Pampa sent three units, and Denny Sneed of the Lefors Volunteer Fire Department said one unit went from there.

Both Herring and Sneed said the fires were "obviously set."

Hobby predicts tax surplus

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said Friday his "back-of-an-envelope" figuring shows the 1977 Legislature will have an additional $3 billion to spend, but that may not be enough to avoid new taxes.

"I'm not going to call that a surplus," Hobby told a legislative briefing for Texas newsmen, sponsored by the Texas Press Association. "That's just our end of the business period cash balance."

Hobby, who was one of a series of top state officials to address the conference, said a $2.6 billion "surplus" has been predicted but he thinks it will be more because of increasing revenues.

NAACP elects FCC member

NEW YORK (AP) — Benjamin L. Hooks, a member of the Federal Communications Commission, was unanimously elected Saturday to succeed Roy Wilkins as executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

A spokesman for the civil rights organization said the national board of the NAACP met Saturday morning and agreed on the selection of Hooks, 51, to replace Wilkins who retires next July 31.

Hooks, of Memphis, Tenn., was the first black appointed to the FCC. He is a lawyer, a banker, a licensed minister and a long-time activist in human rights.

"The NAACP has been a part of my life for as long as I can remember," Hooks commented after hearing of his selection.

"This is one of the most important jobs in the country... the very top in terms of the black community."

Hooks, who was in Memphis, said he will have to resign his position on the FCC to accept the new job. He said he would meet with NAACP officials in Washington to discuss details of the appointment.

"The legislature will have $3 billion over what the 1975 legislature had to spend but the demands we have are already up to $5 billion and all of these are good demands," Hobby said.

Tom Keel, director of the Legislative Budget Board, also stressed that the current $2.6 billion estimate was not a surplus. "It is simply the amount of revenues expected to be available for appropriation in 1978-79 over the amounts appropriated for general purposes in the current, 1976-77, biennium," he said.

Keel said he hears "no call for tax increases. We can, I think, set that choice aside, at least for now. Even proposals for refinery taxes usually are coupled with proposed reductions in some existing tax."

That leaves control of spending by the next legislature, Keel said. "If we have not the will to control our spending now, we may not be able to control spending when further increases mean higher tax rates."

Atty. Gen. John Hill said he would propose some amendments to the Open Records Act to the next legislature but generally Texas has the best "sunshine" laws in the nation. "With the possible exception of federal case law, I believe our office has developed the nation's most extensive body of Open Records law," he said.

Judge grants extension to grand jury

District Judge Grainger McIlhenny has granted a Gray County grand jury a 60-day extension to continue investigation of "certain matters which cannot be completed during this term."

The request was made Friday by Sam A. Haynes, grand jury foreman. The present grand jury term would have expired in January.

Haynes said in his written request that the grand jury was in the process of investigating matters, and added that the term should be extended.

Chinese diplomat signals changes with Moscow

By SETH MYDANS
Associated Press Writer
— MOSCOW (AP) — Simply by doing nothing, the top Chinese diplomat in Moscow has added to speculation over changing Peking-Soviet relations since the death two months ago of Mao Tse-tung.

The diplomat, Charge d'Affaires Wang Chin-ching, remained impassively in his seat Friday at the Kremlin's Palace of Congresses throughout an annual speech by a member of the Soviet Communist party leadership marking the anniversary of the Russian Revolution.

It was the first time since 1970 that Peking's representative at the celebration did not walk out when the Soviet speaker touched on China in his remarks.

In this year's speech, Politburo member Fedor D. Kulakov used much milder language regarding China than in recent years, reflecting the conciliatory line Moscow has taken toward Peking since Mao's death Sept. 9.

Wang indicated acceptance of this by staying put.

"This speech was the first time the Chinese were forced to react directly one way or another to the new Soviet approach," said a Western diplomat in Moscow. "Up to now, the Russians have been making all the moves in trying to get a conciliation started."

The Western observer was not inclined to expect any immediate, tangible warming of relations which have been strained by more than a decade of bitterness. But he suggested that the Chinese may be getting "a bit less sensitive" in their relations with Moscow and more inclined to listen to Soviet positions.

The Soviet attitude as out-

An AP news analysis

lined by Kulakov is that "we consider unjustified and unnatural the fact that friendly relations between the Soviet Union and the People's Republic of China have been disrupted, through no fault of our own, for almost 15 years now."

Kulakov referred to remarks on China voiced the week before by Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, who told a meeting of the Communist party Central Committee: "In our opinion, there are no issues in relations between the U.S.S.R. and the People's Republic of China that could not be resolved in the spirit of good-neighborliness."

Throughout Kulakov's remarks, Wang — a crew-cut, bespectacled man wearing a Mao suit — sat without expression, declining to join the frequent applause that interrupted the speech.

A well-informed Asian source here cautioned against reading too much into Wang's decision to remain seated, pointing out that Kulakov's brief and mild remarks gave him little pretext to protest.

Last year's speaker, Politburo member Arvid Y. Pelshe, for example, had offended the Chinese representative by citing "the enormous damage that is being done by the Maoists' great-power and hegemonist policy to the cause of socialism and to the Chinese people themselves."

While this kind of rhetoric stopped abruptly after Mao's death, to be replaced in the past two months by several conciliatory statements like Brezhnev's, the Chinese had not previously responded to the recent change in tone.

During the past week, the Chinese press has carried diatribes charging that "the momentum of Soviet expansion is particularly menacing in Europe" as Soviet leaders "try to lull the West with the song of detente."

The Chinese also asserted that hundreds of thousands of Soviet "aggressor" troops are deployed in Asia along with agents of espionage and sabotage, and contended that the Soviet Union itself is in turmoil.

Moscow observers will be watching the wording of the official Chinese greeting to the Soviet Union on its revolution anniversary Sunday for further signs of Peking's attitude and will also be keeping an eye on Wang himself as he watches the annual parade in Red Square.

Drug ring team guilty

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Three Dallas men, convicted of involvement in an international drug smuggling ring, have been sentenced by a federal judge to prison terms ranging from two and one-half to three years.

Bennie Boyd McKnight, 37, a North Dallas automobile dealer, and Kammel Kouri, 41, a television and stereo retailer, were given three year terms by U.S. District Judge Eldon Mahon. John Lewis Wall, 37, one of McKnight's associates, received the two and one-half year term.

All three were sentenced Friday while their tearful families looked on.

The three defendants names appeared on a lengthy list of sealed grand jury indictments handed down last summer after almost two years of investigative work by federal law enforcement agencies. They were accused of using telephones to facilitate the importation of heroin and cocaine from Thailand and Colombia.

Authorities named Joe D. Hicks, a former used car dealer from Plano, as the leader of the ring. Mahon sentenced Hicks to life imprisonment and a concurrent 45-year term Oct. 29 after a lengthy trial.

"I have a feeling that had it not been for the debates I would have lost," he said. "I think the debates let the American people be kind of reassured, well, at least Jimmy Carter has some judgment about foreign affairs and defense and all."

"After the second debate I felt that I had established myself in the people's mind as a more respectable person."

Carter said he thought his most grievous mistake in the campaign occurred just after the second debate "when I erroneously had an overly aggressive approach to Mr. Ford. Had I let him stew in his misstatement about Eastern Europe and not made an issue of it, I think I would have been much better off."

Carter said more unsettling than his own mistake was his treatment in nightly television news coverage. He said he watched tapes of the nightly news on weekends "and it used to make me terribly upset."

"I think the worst one of all was in the New York rally. The evening news was not anything about the size of the rally or the response to me or the potential support for me. The evening news coverage was almost completely dominated by the fact that the truck with the TV cameras was a block and a half in front of my car."

He said that sort of coverage was typical. "It was just a real problem with how to deal with it."

But he said that "on balance" newspaper coverage of him was fair. "If it hadn't been fair, I would not have won the election," he said.

The President-elect was generous in his praise for the man he will succeed. He said that when Ford conceded the election he felt considerable sympathy for him, "particularly with his family there. His family had worked as hard as they could, and I know how much my family had done for me. It was a personal relationship between him and his family as they all stood there and as Betty read the statement."

He said that Ford could have "waited another day to concede, but did not. I thought it was an extraordinary expression of generosity on his part."

To many who watched Carter's news conference Thursday night in Plains the President-elect seemed more at ease and self-confident than he did during the campaign.

"I felt more sure of myself," Carter said. "I was not grasping for something, I was not trying to prove my leadership capabilities and so forth in a way to appeal to voters. I was sure of myself and felt relaxed and enjoyed the exchange."

At the news conference, Carter said he planned to face the White House press corps every two weeks.

Looking ahead, Carter said he has assigned aides to find ways to strip the presidential office of some of its pomp and lofty trappings.

"The first demonstration of it will be in the tone of the inauguration," he said. "I'd like to make it as democratic as possible — democratic with a little 'd.'"

He also said that while he feels obligated to many groups of Americans for his election — minorities, labor, environmentalists and others — he feels beholden to none.

"I don't have any strings on me," he said. "The only promise I have made, and if was on my own initiative, was to make sure that as I choose Cabinet members and others I will give heavy representation to minority groups."

He said he wants to find out to what degree congressional leaders would like to participate in trips abroad. White House discussions with foreign officials and other international matters.

He said he also will likely make trips to Washington for budget discussions when he has more access to figures from the Office of Management and Budget, and for discussions on Capitol Hill on his plans to reorganize the executive bureaucracy.

Carter believes debates made difference

By JULES LOH
Associated Press Writer
PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — President-elect Jimmy Carter, reflecting on his long, uphill climb to the White House, believes he never would have made it had it not been for the presidential debates.

He feels that the second debate, dealing with foreign policy, made him "a more respectable person" in the minds of the electorate and blunted the Republican effort to paint him as an unknown quantity to be feared as a leader.

That effort, he feels, was responsible for half the votes President Ford polled and has left him, even in victory, with "an image in the country which is still there, which I've got to repair."

"A lot of people still feel, I'm sure, a question about what is going to happen when Jimmy Carter gets in the White House," he said.

Carter has no sore feelings, however, about what he called the Republicans' "negative" campaign tactics, accepting them as clear and clever campaigning, which he never knew how to combat.

He also has only praise for the "positive" aspects of the Ford campaign. That was the position, Carter said, "which is legitimate and I think accurate," that Ford had done a "reasonably" good job at governing and thus deserved his own administration.

Carter, relaxing in denim and hiking boots Friday afternoon at his mother's Pond House back among the pines just outside Plains, hashed over the election and some of his immediate plans in an informal discussion with about 20 reporters gathered in the comfortable living room.

"I honestly have never doubted that I would win," Carter said. "I'm not saying that in an arrogant way, but I had a confidence that we were doing the best we could and the accumulative impact of my family constantly campaigning, and the Georgians constantly campaigning and the natural numerical advantage of other Democrats, would eventually win."

But he said television coverage focused on his own mistakes in contrast to "a defense" shown to the President which gave Ford unfair advantage. He described that as "crippling" to his campaign.

Briscoe wants no part of Washington politics

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe, still grinning from the Jimmy Carter victory, says he is not ready to announce re-election plans. However, he did make clear Friday he wanted no part of Washington politics. After a speech at the Texas Press Association pre-legislative conference, Briscoe was asked if he was ready to announce re-election. "It's too early for a formal announcement," he said, "but I want to say again I like the job. I'll make an absolute formal announcement in the future. A few minutes later at a news conference he was asked the same question and gave the same answer. He added that in his travels around the state for Jimmy Carter "I found stronger support for my administration than I have ever had before." Briscoe said he had held a "strictly private, personal conversation" with Carter but would not say more. When asked if Carter had offered him an administration job, possibly a cabinet post, Briscoe replied: "I like this job. I have no desire to go to Washington in any position."

During the TPA conference, attended by about 150 editors and news writers, Briscoe and other state officials said they would stick by their no-new taxes policy, although there would be multi-billion dollar demands for state spending. "I believe it is a good for Texas to continue this policy of no new taxes," Briscoe told the TPA conference. "We can meet our responsibilities in education, transportation and other essential services within available revenues." In a news conference, Briscoe said he felt that substituting a refinery tax for a current tax

International delegates meet in Palacios, Tex.

PALACIOS, Tex. (AP) — The delegates, some 250 of them from around the world, will be coming this week to the small Southeast Texas coastal town of Palacios. There will be those from the developing nations, the world powers, from Latin American, from Africa, from divided Ireland, all gathering to discuss how the world can live in peace.

Palacios, a small town in the rice growing county about 100 miles from Houston, will be the site for the YMCA World Peace Conference. Steve Hayes, a young YMCA employee who moved to Palacios to escape the pressurized living of the big city, came up with the idea a year ago and was successful in bringing the international conference to Texas. This small community won the conference over more exotic locations such as Stockholm, Sweden, and Geneva, Switzerland.

YMCA officials said early registration indicated at least 250 persons, and perhaps 275, would attend the meeting at the Texas Baptist Retreat on the outskirts of the town. Fredrik Franklin, secretary general of the World Alliance of YMCAs, said the conference will be the first when the organization has dealt with peace and related issues. The meeting, scheduled for one full week, will explore ways the international ymca can contribute to the local, national and international levels for peace. Hayes said his dream to bring the international peace conference to Palacios was realized when the town residents rallied behind the idea and raised more than $50,000 in two weeks to give the financial boost that was needed.

Bell hike would have little effect

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The $296.3 million rate increase in Texas proposed by Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. would have little effect on the average telephone customer's bill, says an independent economist hired by the company. "We're talking about an increase per residential customer per month on the order of 25 cents, or perhaps 50 cents, and in some cases 75," Paul Gerfield of Washington, D.C., said Friday.

Gerfield testified before the Public Utilities Commission in support of the increase. Gerfield compared Bell's financial needs with those of food processors, but later declined to "compare incomparables." He said food processors need a return of 14.5 per cent on book-value common equity and so does the telephone company. On cross-examination, commission counsel John Bell asked Gerfield if it is fair to compare private industry with monopolies.

"The risks of the free market are less burdensome than the risks of regulation," Gerfield said. Asked by another attorney if competition increases risk, Gerfield replied, "In the telephone industry it surely has."

Gerfield noted the current rate of return on triple-A bonds for public utilities is higher, 8.48 per cent, than the 8.30 per cent corporate average for triple-A bonds, indicating investors see more risk in utility bonds. Attorney Don Butler, representing the Texas Municipal League, asked Gerfield if 14.5 per cent return on common equity would be sufficient for the telephone company. Gerfield said yes. Butler then asked if it was true that "using the methodology" of Bell vice president John Hayes, who testified Thursday, the rate of return actually would be 16.8 per cent. Gerfield gave a long answer that included his estimation that this amounted to comparing incomparables. Whenever that is done, it produces strange results, he said. Again, Butler asked the question, and again Gerfield gave a long, indirect answer. "Will the witness please answer the question," instructed Commission chairman Garrett Morris. "I'm sorry, your honor," Gerfield said. He then agreed that methodology would produce that figure, but said he did not agree with that procedure.

TATUM, Tex. (AP) — Texas Rangers investigated a grisly discovery made Saturday by a family on a canoe trip in East Texas. Off-duty Dallas County Deputy Sheriff Ed Lowe, his wife, and two boys spotted the nude, headless body of a man floating in the Sabine River near Tatum, in Rusk County. Searchers later found the head, which had two bullet holes in it. The head was sent to Dallas for dental match tests. Investigators said the body was that of a middle-aged white male about 5-9 and 175 pounds. About 100 feet from the river bank, officers found a pool of blood, and indications that the body had been dragged to the river, after the head was cut off. No clothing was found, but searchers turned up some change, a comb, a cassette tape and fur-lined gloves. The body was sent to Dallas for an autopsy and possible identification.

Washington Watch

By BILL HOLLYER
Pampa's Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — Consumer and environmental groups feel that while they didn't get everything they wanted from Congress this session, their troops on Capitol Hill saw more victories than defeats.

"Given the pressure from the White House, consumers didn't do too badly," said Carol Tucker Foreman director of Consumer Federation of America. "They had more access to Congress, more of an ability to get a response."

Peter Harnik, coordinator of Environmental Action, said about the 94th Congress: "The problems haven't let Congress turn its back on them... and they (representatives) are now turning around and facing them" more than ever before.

Foreman and Harnik named the following as the most significant legislation for consumers:

ANTI-TRUST: The President signed into law a measure to permit state attorneys general to sue on behalf of a class of citizens for price-fixing violations on small, commonly purchased items like bread, milk and potato chips, if consumers feel they have been deliberately overcharged. Previously, it was too expensive and time consuming for a group of citizens to allege illegal price fixing on a small commodity if they felt they were being cheated.

TOXIC SUBSTANCE CONTROL: This legislation authorizes the administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to order tests on chemicals before those substances are put on the market. If it is determined that a chemical is dangerous, EPA can delay its sale approximately 180 days for further study. However, EPA can only permanently prevent a chemical's sale by a voluntary appeal to the manufacturer or by seeking a court order.

SOLID WASTE MANAGEMENT: Under this bill, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) would supervise the disposal of industrial waste and would set state guidelines for conserving resources. It would provide $90 million to states over the next two fiscal years to develop plans for the disposal of hazardous chemical wastes. Both chambers have passed the measure and the President is expected to sign it this year.

SYNTHETIC FUELS: Consumer groups applauded the one-vote defeat of this bill. It would have provided $3.5 billion in loan guarantees to private industry entering the coal gasification, coal liquefaction, bio-mass, solar, or geo-thermal energy fields. They charged that the money would have been a giveaway to large companies to develop sources of energy that the government's Energy Resource and Development Agency (ERDA), had already begun. The opponents claimed that if the government was going to make money available for energy research it should go to smaller companies and give them a chance to compete for energy sources in the future. The bill proponents said that only the large companies could afford the capital outlay to risk the research; and that the government should share some of the responsibility for development.

Both Harnik and Foreman said the defeat of the Consumer Protection Agency (CPA) was the biggest disappointment of the session. The bill, setting up an independent consumer advocate within the executive branch was passed by the House and Senate, but is being withheld from the White House because of the threat of a Ford veto.

Other defeats mentioned by consumer spokesmen included the failure of a strong lobbying reform bill to pass Congress; the filibustered death of tough air pollution standards; the defeat of a strip mining bill and of legislation on debtor's rights.

Freedom on his mind

Prison rodeos were 'freak shows'

By PAUL SIMS
Pampa News Staff

To Rusty Huff of Pampa, the October rodeos helped to pass the time. To his wife, they were a freak show of sorts and she despised them.

To the Texas Department of Corrections in Huntsville, the prison rodeos are a source of revenue. Last October alone, the five go-rounds netted a total of $236,278.10 from a crowd of 72,280 which paid $4, $5 and $6 to watch convicts compete.

"I always thought they came down there to see 'em get hurt and wonder what the convicts were in for," said Wanda Huff, Rusty's wife and accomplice in the Miami, Tex., bank robbery of 1967.

Mrs. Huff, an inmate in 1972, was embarrassed that year while watching Rusty ride. The public address system at the rodeo blurted out Huff's name, his crime and his sentence — 30 years — to the crowd of some 70,000.

"Then he got bucked off," Mrs. Huff remembered, "and they said he didn't ride a horse any better than he robbed a bank... I don't like prison rodeos. I'll never go back."

Huff, back in Pampa Tuesday after being paroled Monday, doesn't plan to return, either. He served 9½ years on his last stint for bank robbery, and a total of 23 months in two previous stints for robbery.

"I'll never go back," said Huff in a tone so sincere it was difficult not to believe him. "I had two years of transactional analysis down there and the first thing we learned is the difference between 'I can't' and 'I won't'."

"Now I'm gonna make up for the misery I've caused."

Huff plans to work at a service station in Pampa and hopes to train horses later. He also wants to attend college on weekends to study nursing.

"Five years from now, I see myself as a veterinarian assistant."

"Drinking, Huff said, and "running with the wrong kind of people" started his slide downhill... and downstate.

He was shot by the Hemphill County sheriff about 18 miles north of Miami after robbing the First State Bank of Miami on March 3, 1967. He was taken to Highland General Hospital in Pampa, then to the Veteran's Hospital in Amarillo.

He escaped from the latter and was apprehended between Panhandle and Amarillo in a stolen car. Huff went to the penitentiary and, after filing a writ of habeas corpus, was released on a bench warrant after 2½ years — in 1969.

He was confined in Roberts County Jail but he chiseled out through a wall. "I turned myself in three days later."

Huff's original 20-year sentence was increased to 30 — five more for escape and five for stealing a pickup after breaking out of the Miami jail.

Mrs. Huff was imprisoned from 1972-74. Rusty's brother, George, who at 32 is nine years younger, was released from the penitentiary in Nov., 1975. George Huff now is a cowboy foreman near Perryton.

In prison, Huff earned 35 college hours, made saddles, went to church and "prepared myself that if I ever get free again, I was gonna go it right this time."

And, for the last five years, Huff competed in the rodeos on each October Sunday afternoon.

Huff placed sixth in the overall standings this year. His best October was in 1974, when he was third, just behind his younger brother, Rusty, according to the Huntsville news media, was favored prior to this year's rodeo to win the overall championship and the $280 first prize. He still won the bareback bronc championship.

"I didn't do that good because I had the free world on my mind." For sixth, he won $120. "That's a lot of money when you're in the penitentiary," Huff smiled.

Will he ride again?

"My wife won't let me."

Injuries — a cracked hip and broken finger — are the reasons for Wanda Huff's intervention.

"It scares me," she said. "We spent much of our life apart and I don't want him to get hurt."

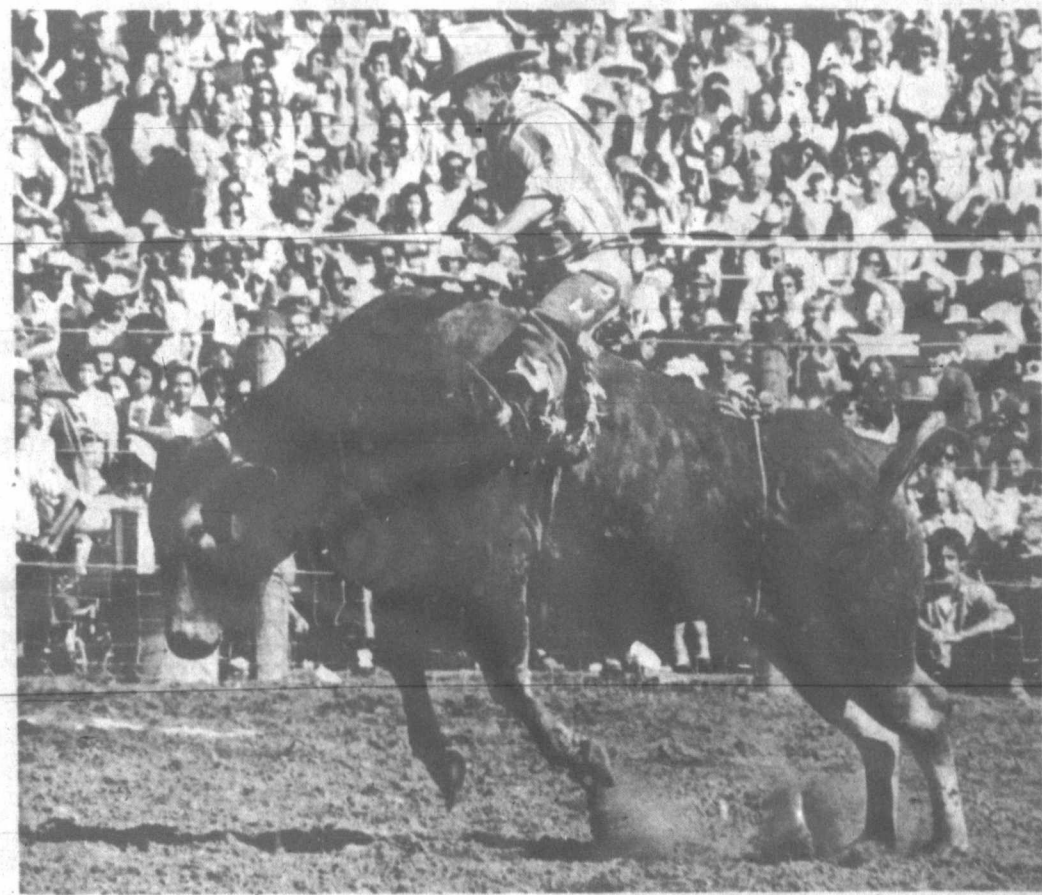

Huff, for now, will work at starting over, something he doesn't feel will be an easy task.

"I'm not in any hurry. That's one reason I went to the penitentiary — I tried to live my life too fast. There's an old saying that an old dog won't change its tricks. I'm gonna prove it's not true. I believe it'll come."

One of the first people he visited in Tuesday's homecoming was Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan.

"Rufe raised me in that Gray County Jail," Huff said. "I think a lot of the sheriff. If I'd have listened to Rufe Jordan when I was 17 years old, I could've saved myself and my nine sisters, my brother and my mother a lot of heartache and misery."

Said Jordan: "I surely do hope that Rusty does well."

PAMPA NEWS Sunday, November 7, 1976 9

Rusty Huff of Pampa was bucked off this bull last year in the prison rodeo at Huntsville. This year, he started out competing in three events — bull riding, bareback riding and saddle bronc riding — but "my wife put so much heat on me that I just rode in one, bareback bronc." As a result, Huff, who was picked to win the all-around championship in the October rodeo, dipped to sixth place. He said another reason for his not-so-good showing was "I had the free world on my mind." Huff was released from prison Monday. (Texas Department of Corrections photo)

There's always room for one more in Mrs. Rusk's house full of dolls

Armand Marseilles doll

Mrs. Maggie Rush and part of her family (Pampa News photos by Michal Thompson)

By JANE P. MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff

Maggie Rush describes herself as a real sentimental person.

Maybe that's how she got into doll collecting. A ragged discarded doll found in the dump is just the kind she'll pick up, take home, clean off and love.

"... you see one being neglected or if someone doesn't like one..." Her voice is kind and gentle.

No matter how tattered or bruised, the doll will be set on a shelf or stored in a trunk with an uncounted number of other dolls in the Rush home at 1230 S. Dwight.

Perhaps it will find a spot next to an elegant Madame Alexander doll, or a cute handmade tea cosy from Moscow, or a handsome collector's bisque head doll.

Just how many dolls does Mrs. Rush have? "Oh, I have no idea," she answers with a laugh. She's so busy reading about dolls and collecting dolls and doing her other little projects, she has just never taken time out to count them. She looks around her doll-crammed living room and adds, "but I have more than I thought I did."

But don't let Mrs. Rush's compassion for her doll family fool you. She's an expert on the hobby which is growing both in popularity and expense. A few of her dolls have been featured in Johana Gast Anderson's books about dolls. She has bought some from dealers and has been offered higher sums for them by other dealers.

Now and then, Mrs. Rush will sell a doll or trade with another collector.

"I try to buy older collectable dolls. Ones that are rather 'homey,'" Mrs. Rush looked at her Poor Pitiful Pearl, "and boy dolls are more popular with collectors right now."

She gets up and fluffs Pearl's hair.

"Somehow or other dolls have just appealed to me. I like all miniature things, furniture and dolls," she said.

One doll sits at a small roll top desk; another stands beside little piano.

"I try to be a little choosy, but it isn't easy."

The history of Mrs. Rush's family can be traced through her dolls. She made giant-sized Hiram Hired Hand for her son. The felt hiram will be 19 years old this year. One is dressed in a white gown which Mrs. Rush's mother made from a flour sack.

Other dolls were discarded by her grandchildren.

One tiny doll head, listed as being made between 1887 and 1891, was dug up in a private dump in the area. Mrs. Rush won't say exactly where. One baby, Toddles Toddler, is 22 years old.

Other dolls depict the history of the country — Depression dolls fashioned from crepe paper; Swing and Sway dolls which date back to the radio big band days; ventriloquist doll; a hickory nut doll. She has a Fulper doll, one of the first successful bisque dolls made in the United States.

Another porcelain doll was made in Occupied Japan. Others come from Russia and the Netherlands. But most, she said, are American or German made.

She's researched most of her dolls. Now she searches for information for other doll collectors when she can.

Mrs. Rush tries not to play favorites with her collection, but admits to being a bit partial to Honeyboy and Phyllis. "Some I feel real strongly about," she says.

Others she will collect, dress in new clothes and give to needy children.

She doesn't mind parting with those. Her doll family is big enough already.

Mrs. Rush's granddaughters love to visit Grandmother. She plays with dolls and, if they promise to be careful, they can play with them, too.

Mrs. Rush predicts that doll collecting will be one of "my lasting interests."

Lawyers profuse in Buzzard family

By THOM MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff

When Mark Buzzard graduated last December from the Texas Tech law school in Lubbock he was, at 23, the youngest member of the class.

He indicated that one reason he sped through college and law school is because he "always wanted to be a lawyer."

"I grew up in legal surroundings," he said.

His father is Pampa attorney Ross Buzzard. An uncle, Dan B. Buzzard, is an attorney in Clovis, N.M. A sister, Andrea Buzzard, practices law in Santa Fe.

"My mother is the only normal person in the family and she manages to keep us straightened out pretty well," Buzzard said.

Another Buzzard attorney is on the way. In about a year Mark's wife, the former Vanessa Arthur of Pampa, will complete law school at Tech.

Being a member of the Pampa law firm, Buzzard, Corner and Buzzard and having a wife pursuing studies in Lubbock is a bit inconvenient, but the junior member of the firm indicated that since the arrangement is temporary it is tolerable.

"We sort of commute on the weekends," he explained.

There has been no firm decision made concerning Mrs. Buzzard's pursuit of a legal career, "but I think we'll be able to work together very nicely," Mark said.

That description also fits his current arrangement — working with his father.

"We have always gotten along fine," Mark said, "and I thought we could be able to work well together. I think this has turned out to be the case. I find his experience — and that of Harold's (Corner) — very helpful."

One in the younger Buzzard's situation might be inclined to agree with an article in a recent weekly news magazine which opined there are getting to be too many attorneys in the United States, but he doesn't.

"I am not at all convinced the field has become too crowded," he said. "Our society becomes more technical each day; I therefore think that attorneys are in a position to be of greater service than ever before. I believe there is always room for a good lawyer."

Buzzard graduated in 1970 from Pampa High School and in 1973 from Oklahoma University.

At 24, he may be the youngest attorney in Texas, but "I've found it's been absolutely no problem with colleagues and judges in the area," he said.

And as far as clients are concerned, if they decide not to retain him because of his age, "I wouldn't know about it," Buzzard commented.

One problem has surfaced with Buzzard's Pampa practice, but it isn't his problem. It belongs to the uncle for whom young Mark was named, Uncle Mark Buzzard is with Allstate Insurance.

"He sometimes gets my calls late at night," the nephew said. "But he takes it good naturedly."

PET ROCK
LOS GATOS, Calif. (AP) — The Pet Rock, the superstar of the 1975 gift-giving season, made a lot of money for Gary Dahl, its creator — an estimated $4 million.

Dahl says he still has a few Pet Rocks lying around and that he might use them to pave his driveway here, headquarters for him and his Rock Bottom Productions.

The Pet Rock, Dahl said, was inspired by all those disobedient, destructive and dirty run-of-the-mill pets, like dogs, cats and birds. Rocks are relaxed, clean and they don't bark.

He said he's putting a piece of his Pet Rock proceeds into a salon.

GLASS GAINING
WASHINGTON (AP) — Glass is gaining a larger share of the container market, the Glass Packaging Institute says. For the first time in over 15 years, in 1975, glass container shipments rose nearly 2 percent while the packaging industry's total container shipments declined more than 3 percent, according to U.S. Department of Commerce statistics.

Miss Teresa Frances Alewine and Mickey Gene Lowe both of Pampa, were married Oct. 15 in the Central Baptist Church here.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Alewine of 1129 Seneca. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. N.R. Lowe of 408 Lowry. The Rev. Ted Savage officiated.

The bride's maid of honor was Linda Young of Pampa. Best man was Jerry Weaver of Pampa.

Following the wedding, a reception was held in the church with Traci Pettingill and Brenda Crocker assisting. The bride is a senior at Pampa High School. Her husband was graduated from Pampa High School, and is employed by Northern Natural Gas Co.

HELLMAN AWARD
BOSTON (AP) — Lillian Hellman was recently presented with the Edward MacDowell Medal for her "outstanding contribution to literature."

Miss Hellman is the author of the bestselling "Scoundrel Time" and a number of plays.

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I know the libraries are full of books on the subjects, but you seem able to put so much into a few words. What makes some kids good and some bad? In other words, is there a formula for raising good kids? Is it heredity or environment?

TRYING HARD

DEAR TRYING: That battle has been going on for a long time, but I'm inclined to be on the side of environment.

All kids need discipline. ("Discipline" does not mean punishment; it means "teaching.") Kids need to know how far they can go. And they don't really want everything they ask for.

Reward them when they're good, and deprive them of something they enjoy when they misbehave.

I don't believe in hitting a child. A little slap on the wrist (just enough to hurt his dignity) is all right. However, hitting a child hard enough to hurt him physically may rid you of YOUR hostilities, but it will only teach the child that violence is the answer to all conflicts.

Don't ever tell a child he's "bad." If he misbehaves, tell him you do not like what he DID; don't tell him you don't like HIM.

Give a child lots of love, and when he comes to you with a confession, don't be too hard on him.

DEAR ABBY: Another guy and I have shared an apartment for three years. (I'll call him Bob.) We're both adults and don't depend on our parents for financial aid, but Bob is still afraid of his mother. Or maybe I should say he's afraid of hurting her feelings, so he lies to her.

She's very religious, and so was Bob until he left home, but he hardly ever goes to church anymore.

What should I say when Bob's mother calls here on Sunday morning and asks me if her son is home from church yet?

Sometimes he doesn't even come home to sleep on Saturday night, but I can't tell his mother that.

I wish Bob would tell his mother the truth and get it over with, but he can't seem to do it. In the meantime I have to lie for him. So what's the solution?

HATES TO LIE

DEAR HATES: You don't HAVE to lie. You're not obligated to give Bob's mother any information. When she phones, tell her her son is out and you'll ask him to return her call when he returns.

DEAR ABBY: I am not a vain man, but I'm only 29 and I'm rapidly losing my hair. I suppose I could consider a hairpiece, but I'd rather keep what hair I have if it's at all possible.

I've heard that taking female hormones can prevent baldness in men. It makes sense to me because you never see any bald women.

Have you ever heard of men taking female hormones to prevent baldness? Can it be dangerous? If it's okay, will I need a prescription to get it?

GOING BALD

DEAR GOING: Baldness is hereditary. And my consultants tell me that if men start monkeying around with female hormones, they'll have to start making brassieres in men's sizes. And yes, you DO need a prescription for it, so the word from here is to forget it.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Four years ago the doctors discovered I had multiple myeloma. They explained there was no cure for this type of cancer, and I have been on chemotherapy since.

Sometimes I am on complete bed rest, either at home or in the hospital. Other times I can be up and around doing light housework. I have very little strength, getting tired to the point of exhaustion from very little activity. I have to get a lot of rest all the time. Even at my best I have to force myself. I have a lot of pain and nausea.

I understand the life expectancy is usually not much over five years. My white count is around 2800 to 3000 and my hemoglobin around 10. What happens at the end? Do I spend months in the hospital? Or do I just go into a coma? Anything you can tell me about this type of cancer would be appreciated.

DEAR READER — Multiple myeloma is considered as a form of cancer. It is a lot more common than it used to be and the outlook is better, too. Some patients go into remissions without any problems for years. So just having the diagnosis does not mean that there is no hope.

Every case is different and your doctor, familiar with how you have responded to treatment, will have the best idea about your individual outlook.

Multiple myeloma does cause bone destruction. There is apparently a presymptomatic stage, perhaps as long as 20 years in some patients. In that stage the diagnosis is made on the basis of a type of protein found in the urine with this disease. The first symptom is usually bone pain, sometimes with a fracture. The typical bone lesions are discovered and the diagnosis made.

Anemia is a common associated finding. It is an un-

DEAR POLLY — A few months ago, we moved into a home where people who smoked and drank had lived. Now I cannot get these odors out of the house. There is shag carpeting throughout. How do I get a solution to my problem. — IRMA

DEAR IRMA — Commercial deodorants can be used to freshen the air and, of course, opening the windows and doors on breezy sunny days would help, too. Tobacco odors can usually be eliminated by placing open bowls of ammonia and water in each room (well out of reach). Since you mentioned the carpet, I presume this odor is in it. You could try covering the carpet with dampened table salt, let it dry and then remove with the vacuum, being sure to clean all salt off of any of its parts. — POLLY

Friends of the couple are invited to attend.

More tornadoes cited this year

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Tornadoes whipped through the United States at a higher rate than normal during the first 10 months of 1976, but the number of fatalities was far below average.

The Severe Storms Forecast Center of the National Weather Service said today that preliminary figures show there were 830 tornadoes through the end of October, and the 10-month average for the last 20 years is 660.

If the next two months are near normal, the storm center said, there will be another 40 tornadoes reported for the year. The storm center said the threat of tornadoes is virtually over for all parts of the United States except the southern states.

Fatalities for the year totaled 44, less than 50 per cent of normal, and there were 1,175 injuries resulting from tornadoes.

For the first 10 months of 1975, there were 845 tornadoes and 59 deaths reported.

"A lot of tornadoes this year are what I would call mini-tornadoes — mild and short-lived," said Allen Pearson, head of the storm center in Kansas City.

In a bad tornado year, he said, high energy disturbances form off the California coast and spread eastward across the United States. He attributed the milder tornadoes of 1976 to the same weather system that caused a drought over much of the Midwest and in California.

Texas led the nation in tornadoes reported through the first 10 months this year with 173.

More women in politics

LONDON (AP) — Women are assuming a growing and more important role in Western European politics, stepping into jobs as Cabinet ministers, party leaders or top political aides.

But some who have made it to the top caution that their political success doesn't mean the women's battle for equality is over. And they wish they weren't centers of attention just because they are women.

"One must not imagine that the women's issue is suddenly solved because a woman has become foreign minister," says Karin Soden, Sweden's first woman foreign minister. She serves in the centrist government of Thorbjorn Falldir, which came to power in the Sept. 19 election.

"I'm tired of being regarded as a phenomenon," says Margaret Thatcher, who in February 1975 became Britain's first woman party leader. She would also become the country's first woman prime minister if her Conservative party wins the next national election.

"The idea of a woman making decisions and giving instructions is not yet easily acceptable in Greece and is viewed suspiciously by some male colleagues," says Lina Koutiafiri, who in October became undersecretary of education and only the third woman since World War II to hold a Greek cabinet post.

West Germany's outgoing president of the Bundestag, the lower house of parliament, is a woman: Annemarie Renger, France, Italy, Britain, Austria, Greece, The Netherlands and Sweden all have women in their Cabinets. Antwerp, Belgium, has a woman mayor.

But most of them would agree that women are far from fulfilling their potential in a field long considered in most countries a bastion of male chauvinism.

The relatively recent emergence of women in Western European politics may be attributed in varying degree to women's liberation movements in their countries, but few of the successful women politicians consider themselves militant feminists.

Britain's Mrs. Thatcher, 51, and a mother of grown twins, says she doesn't have much time for women's lib. "I had a Cabinet post before the term women's lib became trendy," she said.

But as recently as 1973, when Mrs. Thatcher was education secretary in the then-Conservative government of Prime Minister Edward Heath, she said she didn't think a woman could become prime minister in her lifetime.

Now she expresses confidence that Britain's voters will oust the Labor party government of Prime Minister James Callaghan and sweep the Conservatives to power and to the prime minister's job.

Another woman politician not regarded as a militant feminist is Simone Veil, 49, French minister of health since July 1974 and the only full-ranking woman minister in the government of President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

"I am a minister because I am a woman, not in spite of it," said Mrs. Veil, a lawyer and magistrate and wife of the director-general of the French intercontinental airline UTA.

Soon after her appointment she steered a bill through the National Assembly authorizing abortions for the first time in modern French history. Shortly afterward, a poll rated her the most popular member of the government.

Some of the women who have made it in politics feel they have "a responsibility" to help other members of their sex achieve full equality.

West Germany's Annemarie Renger, for example, faced some opposition from cautious feminists in her Social Democratic party in 1972 when she became Bundestag president, the highest political position ever held by a woman in her country.

But Mrs. Renger, 57, replied: "I regard that as a well-meaning but very unpolitical statement. It's my conviction that one should use every opportunity given us women to show that we can assume a place from which we can help to change the role of women."

Other successful women politicians say they would just like to be treated on equal terms with men and get on with the job and not have to be proving themselves over and over.

Murder charges dropped against 12-year-old

MIAMI (AP) — Second-degree murder charges against a 12-year-old boy accused of slaying a young playmate were dropped today by a prosecutor who said the youth was "not competent to understand the adult system."

Asst. State Attorney Ed O'Donnell said Wallace Mosley would be held in Dade County's Youth Hall until he is 21 years old. Mosley had been charged as an adult in the July 31 stabbing death of 9-year-old Gregg Billiter.

A grand jury indicted Mosley as an adult after O'Donnell presented the case to the panel.

Sims-Bergin marriage

Miss Frankie Maureen Bergin of Lubbock and Mickey L. Sims of Pampa were married at 7 p.m. Saturday in the Gruver Methodist Church.

Milton Jochetz officiated. Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. William M. Sims of 2801 North Duncan in Pampa, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Bergin of Gruver.

Debbie Beville was vocalist, and Barbara Stedje was organist.

Sherry Bergin of Borger was the maid of honor. Other attendants were Nannette Weis and Sandra Sims Keeton, both of Lubbock.

Best man was Dan A. Hood of College Station. Other attendants included Randy Sims of Lubbock and Gregg Sims of Pampa. Ushers were David Bergin and Frank Griffin, both of College Station, Steve Haley of Lubbock and Mark Guest of Vail, Colo.

Ring bearer was David Sims.

For her wedding, the bride chose a formal gown of ivory satin, designed by Priscilla of Boston. The bodice of English net was covered in re-embroidered lace, and accented with pearl clusters and sequins.

The deep V neckline was edged in re-embroidered scalloped lace. The full skirt fell into a chapel train and the hemline was trimmed with scalloped lace.

The reception was held in the Gruver Methodist Church Fellowship Hall. Assisting were Shawn Stephens, Shavonne Lile, Shannan Lile and Judy Towns.

The couple will live in Pampa where he is employed by Sims Electric.

She is a graduate of Texas Tech University with a bachelor of science degree in speech pathology. She is a member of the Sigma Kappa Sorority.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Texas Tech with a degree in finance. He is past president of the Saddle Tramps.

Prof. Robert Koch announced the discovery of the tuberculosis germ March 24, 1882.

Synthetic Suede Better Than Real
Consumers continue to demand suede-like fabrics this fall and winter for both clothing and accessories.

Several textile mills are meeting these demands by introducing new forms of synthetic suede — some even offer light and heavy weights for more flexible pattern selection.

A synthetic's advantages over real suede are its washability, permanent flexibility, color fastness and larger size, which eliminates piecing. While costly, synthetic suedes are also much less expensive than sueded leather.

Suede-like fabrics are easier for the home sewer to use, too. Most standard sewing techniques may be used, although some need modification. The non-woven suedes may be treated like real leather for a ready-to-wear look.

A leaflet, "Synthetic Suede Looks All Sewn Up," containing suggestions for sewing to achieve a professional appearance is available from the county Extension office.

Lemon Fresh Beauty Easy to Obtain

The ordinary lemon can be a quick, easy, inexpensive beauty treatment. A few drops of lemon in a favorite shampoo leaves hair shiny and squeaky.

A fresh lemon squeezed into warm water is a great rinse for soap-dulled hair. Rinse thoroughly with clear water.

The lemon is a natural face astringent. Squeeze a fresh lemon into the rinse water for a fresh tingling splash. Rinse with clear water.

Keep a lemon half near the sink to rub over hands after washing to help remove stains and food odors.

Stick rough elbows in two halves of cut lemons to help whiten and get rid of dry, scaly skin. If lemons are at room temperature, they'll be juicier and more comfortable.

A wedge of fresh lemon rubbed on the skin will give a refreshing relief to tired feet. It helps soften and whiten while it sooths.

For a fresh clean smell and tingle all over, drop fresh lemon slices into a warm water bath.

'Harvard feels' 'mush' courses'

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Freshman Harry Gersh says he picked Harvard University because it fits his "theory of education for the elderly — no feeding them 'mush' courses and talking down to them, not making demands on them."

At 63, Gersh is the oldest man to enter Harvard, as far as officials can recall.

Gersh, who graduated from high school in 1930, retired last March as a writer with an actuarial firm.

He and his wife live in an apartment near Harvard Yard.

Club news

Twentieth Century Forum
A mini book review on "The Boys from Brazil" by Ira Levin was included on the program of a recent Twentieth Century Forum meeting in the Larry L. Cross home at 2555 Aspen. The review was given by Mrs. M. McDaniel.

Members also heard a program on Australia and New Zealand given by Mrs. Cranz L. Nichols and Mrs. Homer D. Johnson.

The presentation was highlighted by a slide program on the two countries. Mrs. Nichols displayed a spinning wheel and some wool samples and explained how wool is spun. Mrs. Johnson displayed carvings from New Zealand.

Hostesses were Mrs. Cross and Mrs. Victor P. Raymond.

Beta Chi conclave
Nine members of the Beta Chi conclave of Kappa Kappa Iota met recently in the Lefors High School library to initiate two members.

New members were Mrs. Bob Phillips and Mrs. Harry Youngblood. Mrs. Phillips is a former member from Amarillo.

The group will meet at 7 p.m. Nov. 22 in the Lefors High School library for a workshop for senior citizen party gifts.

Kappa Alpha chapter
Kappa Alpha chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha accepted four new members during a combined pledge ceremony and monthly business meeting recently.

New members are Sharon Russell, Betty Tucker, Barbara Smithers and Eva Dennis. They were initiated by Elsie Floyd, vice president.

Thirteen members attended the meeting to finalize plans for the group's Ways and Means Dance Nov. 13 in the M.K. Brown Auditorium. Music will be by Tiny Lynn and Band from Lubbock and reservations are being taken by Paula Hungerford, 689-7565. Tickets are $12 per couple and proceeds will be used for various chapter and philanthropic projects.

Members also heard a program "Unmatched Talents" given by Wanda Talley, administrator of the Senior Citizens Center. The Center is a project adopted by Kappa Alpha chapter.

Gamma Conclave
A program on various types of old-fashioned needle work was presented during a recent meeting of the Gamma Conclave of Kappa Kappa Iota in the home of Mrs. A.D. McNamara, 1012 North Somerville.

Mrs. Emma Lou Larsen and Mrs. Dolores Cross were the speakers.

Other hostesses for the event were Mesdames Joe Diosimo, Jim Goff, D.V. Biggers and Able Wood.

During the discussion Mrs. Cross told the story of the Quilting Bee, which was popular for many years and is a part of the American heritage.

She stated that women gathered from miles around in one designated home. The rectangular quilting frame was hung from hooks in the ceiling of the parlor or a bedroom.

Sometimes the young children sat under the quilt, and caught the needles as they passed through, then poked them back through the quilt to the top side.

Mrs. Larsen read an article from an East Texas newspaper which described the life of her grandmother in Ohio 134 years ago. She also showed items owned and made by her grandmother. Among these were many pieces of crochet, tatting, hemstitching and cross-stitching.

Mrs. Frank Craig, president, presided over a short business session where members were requested to collect and save family snapshots for state and local press books.

The next meeting will be at 6:30 p.m. on Nov. 15 in the Pioneer Natural Gas Flame Room.

Xi Beta Chapter
Mrs. Danny Strawn presented excerpts from Erma Bombeck's book, "Wait Till You Have Children of Your Own," in connection with a program on Parent and Child Communication during a recent meeting of the Xi Beta Chi Chapter of the Beta Sigma Phi Sorority.

Announcement was made that Mr. and Mrs. Slaughter are the parents of a son.

A Thanksgiving dinner was scheduled for members and their families on Nov. 13 at Pam Cel Hall.

A bazaar is set for Nov. 22 at the Senior Citizen Center.

American Legion Auxiliary
The American Legion Auxiliary has voted to send a contribution to the auxiliary's Guatemala CARE Fund to help with the disaster and rehabilitation there.

The Legion's Pampa auxiliary met recently at Furr's Cafeteria for dinner. During the business session, Mrs. J.M. Turner reported the group has 13 members who have paid their dues.

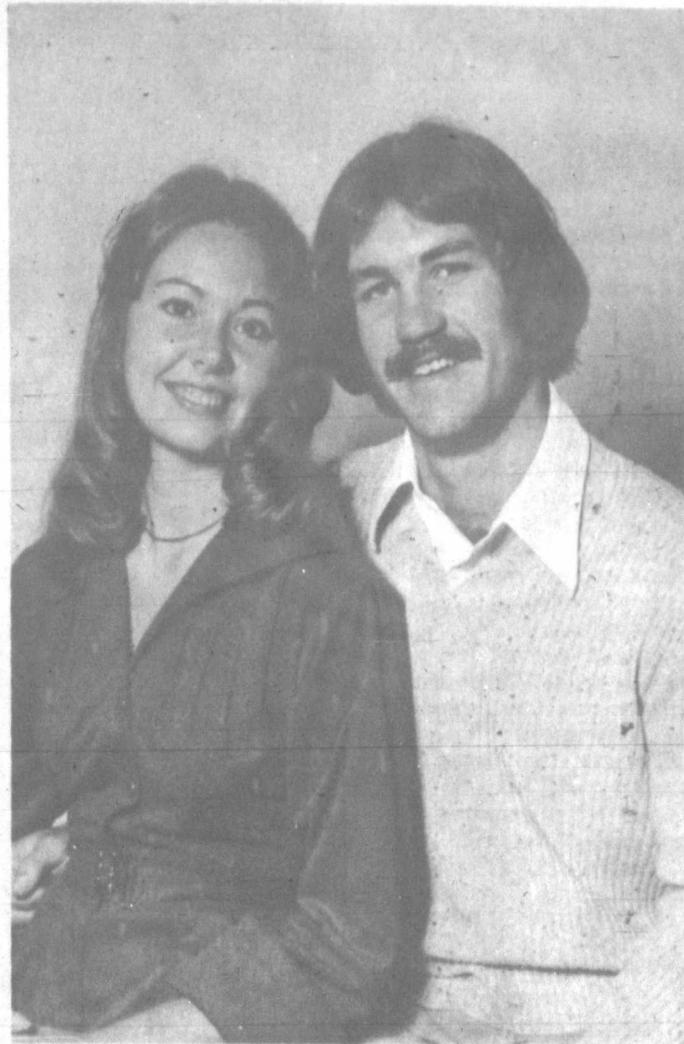

Ruth Sewell, secretary, said the Pampa Auxiliary was invited to attend a special meeting at the Amarillo Veterans Administration Hospital on Oct. 23. Members were urged to help get out the vote on Nov. 2.

Plans were made to place flags on the graves of deceased veterans at 7:30 a.m. Oct. 25 at Fairview Cemetery. The men in the VFW Post placed large flags on the driveway of Memory Gardens Cemetery.

Pampa High School Red Cross boys and girls assisted with placing the flags on the graves and in picking them up.

Mrs. Frank Shotwell, auxiliary president, will host the next auxiliary meeting.

On Feb. 13, 1960, the first French nuclear test explosion occurred in the Sahara desert.

Holsey-Hansen engagement

Miss Judy Hulsey and Chris Hansen will be married at 3 p.m. on Jan. 9 in the First United Methodist Church of Pampa. The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orin Hulsey of 1944 N. Faulkner. Parents of the prospective bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Hans R. Hansen of 1727 Chestnut. Miss Hulsey was a 1975 Pampa High School honor graduate. She is now a sophomore student at West Texas State University majoring in elementary education. Her fiancée was graduated from Hill City, Kan. High School in 1972. He attended the University of Kansas at Lawrence for 3½ years. He is presently employed at the Cabot Corporation.

By Joanne Koch

One of the country's leading authorities in the field of genetic counseling advises any pregnant woman over 35 to undergo a test called amniocentesis which reveals the presence of abnormalities in the fetus related to mental retardation.

Dr. Arthur Robinson, who is professor of Biophysics and Genetics at the University of Colorado Medical Center, notes that the risk of incurable chromosomal abnormalities, as Down's syndrome which is a primary cause of mental retardation, rises steadily after a woman reaches the age of 35. According to Dr. Robinson, the chance of chromosomal abnormalities is approximately one per cent at age 35, two per cent at 38, three per cent at age 40, and at age 45 the chances of being a mongoloid child or one with chromosomal abnormalities is as high as one in 10.

Even those opposed to interrupting a pregnancy for any reason will sometimes choose to undergo amniocentesis as a means of preparing themselves to deal with the special problems an affected child and his family would face. (The test also reveals such conditions as spina bifida and certain metabolic disorders.)

The actual "tap," or extraction of a small amount of amniotic fluid, should be conducted by a physician experienced in this procedure. "Ultrasound" is often used to chart the exact position of the fetus and the placenta. The fetal cells contained in the fluid must be analyzed by a team trained in genetics. The results constitute an accurate picture of the chromosomal make-up of the fetus. The intensive session of genetic counseling which should precede the tap, the extraction of the fluid and the laboratory analysis costs approximately $300.

Most parents who learn that the fetus will be a mongoloid or otherwise affected will consider an abortion. Since amniocentesis cannot be conducted until the 14th or 15th week of gestation when there is a sufficient volume of amniotic fluid, and since the analysis of the fetal cells requires two or three weeks, a decision to abort the fetus cannot be made until the second trimester.

Despite this fact, Dr. Robinson regards amniocentesis as a lifesaving procedure, citing that only two-and-a-half per cent of the tests run by his Denver team revealed babies who were not normal. In his opinion, this means that the normal babies — the 97.5 per cent — were saved from possible abortion.

Before amniocentesis test was available, many women who were at an increased risk age, might have chosen to have an abortion because they knew their chances of bearing a retarded child were high. This was particularly true for women who had previously given birth to an affected child. The procedure allays those fears when they turn out to be unfounded and offers the small percentage of women who will have abnormal children an opportunity to make their own decisions.

An ardent opponent of abortion, Dr. Watson Bowes, Professor of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the University of Colorado Medical Center, nevertheless conducts many amnio tests. He believes that each woman has the right to know what special problems she will face with her future offspring.

Oyster harvest down

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Louisiana's oyster harvest, hit by a drought that made the beds too salty, is down 40 per cent this year and prices are zooming, oystermen report.

And, the worst is yet to come, said Orville Allen of National Marine Fisheries Service.

"We're off about 40 per cent in quantity in my shop," said Stanley Pausina Jr., treasurer of the Louisiana Oyster Dealers and Growers Association. "The quality is excellent, but there's just not enough of them."

"Last year, a boat would make about 70 sacks a day. This year, a boat gets about 30 to 40 sacks a day."

As a result, Pausina said, oyster prices soared $4 to $5 a gallon shucked and $3 to $4 a sack unshucked this fall. Oyster currently are selling retail for $19 to $22 a gallon and $9 to $11 a sack and still going up.

Several specialists agreed that Louisiana's multimillion dollar oyster industry is in the midst of a significantly bad year, blamed on a dry spring and the lowest Mississippi River level in many years.

The drought and the low river let too much salt water creep into state-owned oyster beds, specialists said. The water balance was tipped too much to the salt side in California, American and Black bays, retarding oyster development.

The harvest isn't expected to be as low as the 4.7 million pounds of oyster meat recorded in 1966, but in the years since a couple of times production fell to 7 million pounds off the Louisiana average of 9 million pounds. This year could fall to the 7 million total.

Osborne to be honored with reception today

Ruth Osborne, who says she has been actively involved in Democratic politics all of her adult life, will be honored with an appreciation reception from 3 to 5 p.m. Sunday at the Pampa Country Club.

She is the immediate past 31st District Democratic Committeewoman.

"I've done everything from scrub floors to install precinct chairmen," she said.

She served as committeewoman for six years — and considered it an honor to work for this 26 county area — one of the largest districts in Texas.

During her 25 years of active political work, she said she has seen the political picture change many times.

"And I expect to see a great many more changes," she added.

About Jimmy Carter's election as president, Mrs. Osborne said she was overjoyed.

"It has been a long time since we had both a Democratic president and a Democratic Congress. They should be a great asset to the nation," she commented.

As committeewoman, she insisted that people get involved and express their views.

The former Miss Ruth Reynolds, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. E.E. Reynolds, and Jake Osborne were married in 1935. He is a farmer and cattleman.

She is the granddaughter of the late Mrs. P.A. Worley, who built Worley Hospital, and a niece of the late Mrs. Inez Carter of Pampa.

Ms. Osborne attended Pampa Schools and the University of Colorado.

Mrs. Osborne said when the only hospital here was located over Texas Furniture her mother was a patient.

"And Grandmother Worley visited her there, and said then she would see that Pampa had a modern hospital," Mrs. Osborne said looking back.

However, before Worley Hospital became reality, the old Pampa Hospital was built.

During the summer, her favorite hobbies are yard work, but during the winter months she turns to arts and crafts.

The Osbornes have two children, Jim Osborne of Seminole, and Betty Bailey of Pampa. They also have four grandsons.

Lord Roy Thomson of Fleet on Sept. 30, 1966, acquired ownership of The London Times.

Crooning, singing softly, began in the U.S. about 1929 and rapidly became popular.

Married couples don't listen

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer
MADISON, Wis. (AP) —
Most married couples don't listen to each other, and many get into fights as a result, says a professor who helps couples learn to communicate better.

"The one thing that's real important is accuracy," said Jeff Edelson, a University of Wisconsin social scientist.

"You should not try to decide whether to buy a new car or something like that by talking about it a little bit, now and then," he said. "You should set aside a time to talk about it, like after dinner, to spend as much time as you need going over all the details involved in the decision."

"Make sure everything you said was accurate and it was understood," he said. "If you both know why you're doing it, then it's okay to ask if they understood what you were saying."

Just as the speaker has to concentrate on saying exactly what is meant, the listener has to ask: "Am I hearing that right?" he said.

Understanding each other's words, however, is only part of the battle, Edelson said. "What you say is important, but how you say it is even more important," he said.

Simon keeps machine gun

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (AP) — Treasury Secretary William Simon has applied for permission to keep a "unique" submachine gun in a gun collection at his Morris County home after he leaves his Cabinet post in January, a newspaper said today.

The Newark Star Ledger said Simon made the request in a letter to Judge Charles M. Egan Jr., who handles all gun license applications for the county.

Simon wrote he owned a 1921 45-caliber Thompson submachine gun and had a federal license and a license to keep the "unique firearm" in his Virginia home, the newspaper said.

Simon was quoted by the newspaper as saying the gun would not be used for protection but would be part of a gun collection. "I'm a gun collector, pure and simple, and protection has nothing to do with it," said Simon, 49.

The Star Ledger printed a copy of the letter to Egan, which said, in part, "My eventual return to private life will, of course, result in my family spending more time in Morristown, and it will cause the termination of my Secret Service protective detail."

Egan said he passed the request to the sheriff for his "investigation and approval." He said Simon's request would not be approved until the Treasury secretary provides more detailed information as to why he needs the gun.

The Star Ledger said Sheriff John Fox, in a letter to Egan, declared, "I cannot in good conscience approve such a request at this time. If and when Mr. Simon complies with your letter requesting specific reasons for such a need, I would be happy to reconsider my present position."

Simon was quoted as saying he had sent a Treasury agent to discuss the matter with the state police, and "my understanding is I have the license and it's all taken care of. This is all being pursued perfectly legally. I am simply exercising my noninstitutional right to bear arms."

Bicentennial quilt

Mrs. Joe Ford, 82, will remember the Bicentennial Year with a stars-and-stripes quilt, which she finished recently. Mrs. Ford, who lives at 924 S. Banks, said the pattern was "50 stars and 13 stripes." It is red, white and blue. (Pampa News photo by Michal Thompson)

Mrs. Fatheree to be speaker on library

Mrs. David Fatheree, president of Pampa Friends of the Library, will speak at the pre-conference workshop for the joint conference of the Mountain Plains and Southwestern Library Associations in Albuquerque, N.M.

The conference is scheduled Tuesday and Wednesday. Mrs. Fatheree will discuss organization of a Friends of the Library group and the development of a public relations program for such a group.

The goal of the Friends session at the conference is to encourage friends to look at library problems, to stimulate interest in sharing ideas for forming Friends groups, and in expanding and improving already existing Friends groups.

The conference covers a 14-state area and includes public and private libraries.

Jim McCann to manage Pampa Club

The Pampa Club, upstairs at the Coronado Inn, recently came under new management when Jim McCann, 37, was named interim manager by the board of directors of the club.

McCann was assistant manager of the hotel in 1970 and was at that time involved in managing the club.

He left Pampa to attend graduate school at West Texas State University in Canyon. When he completed courses there he moved to New York City where he worked as an accountant for the past three years before returning to Pampa.

Citizens arrest could lead to civil suit

By JEANNE GRIMES
Pampa News Staff
Vigilance against crime by law-abiding citizens may be admirable in theory, but law enforcement officials say that vigilance can mean trouble for the citizen who decides to turn his convictions into action and arrest a crook.

While citizens in Texas do have the right to arrest a suspect for a felony or when officially deputized by a law enforcement officer, Pampa Police Chief Richard Mills said the average person's lack of knowledge about the law can leave him open for civil suits if he tries to arrest someone.

Mills added that he knew of only one attempt at citizens arrest since he came to Pampa 19 months ago.

"A man became upset at what he thought was a drunken driver and gave chase," the police chief said. "He was involved in an accident and wrecked a fence."

This man, Mills added, received a traffic ticket and had to pay for fixing the fence. The "drunken driver" he was chasing kept right on driving and was never caught.

But even if the man had caught his inebriated prey and arrested him, he could have faced charges for false arrest because driving while intoxicated is a misdemeanor — not a felony as the law requires for citizens arrests to be legal.

"The biggest problem with citizens arrests," Mills said, "is are you big enough to make it? Police are trained and equipped to handle these situations."

Law enforcement officials also have the responsibility to protect the criminal suspect — sometimes from the citizens.

A retired Army colonel in Virginia shot two youths who broke into his home last year, leaving police and prosecutors with a problem they didn't want.

"We couldn't take him to court," the prosecutor said, "because the community would have howled. At the same time, we couldn't condone it for fear of encouraging others to do the same thing."

When interest in the case had died down, officials let the case drop — quietly.

Mills said that much of the flap surrounding cases like the Virginia shooting is based in the gun control laws of that state.

"We don't encourage anyone to randomly shoot any person," Mills said. "In Texas, any shooting is investigated and if the legal requirements are not met, charges can be filed."

The chief cited a recent case in Chicago where a young woman entered her apartment to find an intruder had raped a friend and thrown her body out the window. The woman shot the intruder and was later charged by police with having an unlicensed gun — a misdemeanor. The charge was later dropped.

In addition to the police charge, the woman also faces the very real possibility of a personal injury suit filed by the man whom she shot.

There is a growing conviction among many people that if they were forced into the position of shooting someone to protect life and/or property, they had better make sure that the criminal doesn't recover from the experience.

Law enforcement officials tend to steer away from condoning or condemning the philosophy.

"You don't want people forming posses," a Chicago police captain said. "But other than that it is very nice to know you've got friends in the neighborhoods."

Mills praised the support his department receives from the community.

"You find more spirit of cooperation here. If an officer is in trouble, citizens are more inclined to help him here than in the East."

"Society pays us to get into dangerous positions. We need the citizens' help; we need it greatly. But give us the information. Don't take the physical risks yourselves," Mills said.

"A criminal might be more reluctant to injure or kill a police officer because he knows the retaliation would be more than if he injured or killed a private citizen."

Studios gear for Oscar

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The 1976 Oscars won't be presented until March 28, 1977, but already the film studios are gearing up their awards campaigns.

Sales chiefs are booking choice sites for their December releases — theaters in Westwood and Beverly Hills are preferred because most academy voters live near the area. Publicity departments have reserved the deluxe private screening rooms throughout January. (The nominations will be announced on St. Valentine's Day.)

Many of the Oscar hopefuls will receive mass releases throughout the country this month and in December. Thus, if they catch on with the general public, a steamroller effect could influence Academy voters; monetary success is often equated with quality in their eyes.

The race cannot yet be judged, since some of the last-minute releases have not been previewed. At this point in the race, "All The President's Men," now in rerelease throughout the country, appears the front-runner.

Warner Brothers is making sure the Watergate film maintains its visibility; it's currently playing in more than 600 theaters and will be playing in some metro areas, including Los Angeles, well into 1977.

"When a film is released earlier in the year, you've got to book it locally to remind the voters," explains a publicity executive.

The year's releases so far offer few possible contenders. "All The President's Men" is likely to be nominated in most major categories, including stars Dustin Hoffman and Robert Redford, and Jason Roberts and Jane Alexander in support.

"The Omen" was a surprise blockbuster for 20th Century-Fox, and it may draw nominations for star Gregory Peck and director Clive Donner. The company's fiscal health was also revived by "Silent Movie," and it could be among the nominees, although the academy often overlooks comedy. Both films are in first release around the nation.

John Wayne appears a sure nominee for his dying gunslinger in "The Shootist," easily his best role since "True Grit." Although the film was not well received, "W.C. Fields and Me" could reward Rod Steiger with a nomination. Another repeater could be Walter Matthau for "Bad News Bears."

As in recent years, the field for best actress and supporting actress appears slender. There may be sentimental votes for the returns of Lauren Bacall in "The Shootist" and Audrey Hepburn in "Robin and Marian." Sarah Miles could get a mention for "The Sailor Who Fell from Grace with the Sea."

Shelley Winters, already a double winner, seems likely to be in the supporting-actress race again with her Jewish mother of "Next Stop, Greenwich Village." Young Jodie Foster is another good choice for "Taxi Driver."

Robert DeNiro, winner as supporting actor in "The Godfather, Part II," may be competing with himself as best actor. He could be nominated for "Taxi Driver," "The Last Tycoon" or "1900," although it's undecided whether the latter will be released in 1976.

Another self-competitor: Faye Dunaway. She is being mentioned for both "Network" and "Voyage of the Damned." "Marathon Man" might score for Dustin Hoffman instead of "All The President's Men." "Network" is being touted for the star performances of William Holden and Peter Finch, and support by Robert Duvall.

December releases with high hopes include: "Bound for Glory," David Carradine; "The Last Tycoon"; "The Seven Percent Solution," Nicol Williamson, Alan Arkin; "Voyage of the Damned," Dunaway, Oskar Werner, Max Von Sydow, etc.; "A Star is Born," Barbra Streisand; "Silver Streak"; "Nickelodeon"; "Rocky."

And don't forget another Christmas release. If "Jaws" can be nominated as best picture, why not "King Kong"?

He became jellybean gourmet

By STEPHEN FOX
AP Business Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Does the world really need a coconut jellybean?

Yes, says Dave Klein, a 30-year-old lawyer turned jellybean entrepreneur. Of course, he also says the same thing about his tangerine, root beer, green apple and cotton candy jellybeans.

"Jellybeans have been around for a long time, but no one's ever done anything with them — this is a breakthrough," says Klein, who sells his "gourmet jellybeans" under the name "Jelly Belles."

At $2 a pound Jelly Belles are the world's most expensive jellybeans, according to Klein, who claims to have researched their history extensively. There are 417 to the pound, give or take a bean, and each has four calories.

Klein is marketing Jelly Belles to department and food stores and is offering franchises in theaters and ice cream parlors. A pilot franchise in an Alhambra ice cream parlor has been quite successful, according to store owner Bob Fosselman.

"They really seem to have caught on," said Fosselman, who has been in the ice cream business for 35 years. "The concept catches people's imaginations. Originally, it was sales to kids, but now they've developed party business — showers, weddings and so on."

In addition to the above flavors, Jelly Belles come in ordinary strains like lemon, lime, cherry and grape. For the more adventurous, there are licorice, cream soda and country melon jellybeans.

Klein, who developed the flavors with the aid of a food chemist, originally had concocted a watermelon Jelly Belly. However, he couldn't decide whether to color it red or green — two-tone jellybeans present technical problems — so he picked green and named the flavor country melon.

Klein went to law school after working his way through UCLA selling "Big Dave's Popcorn" but decided against practicing law.

Klein is currently working on new flavors — there are 14 now — and planning his next creation — a 10-pound Jelly Belly, possibly with a pumpkin flavor. For Thanksgiving of course.

Liquor execs indicted in Lubbock

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP) — Three Lubbock County retail liquor executives who pleaded innocent to price fixing charges were scheduled for trial March 14 by U.S. District Judge Halbert Woodward Thursday.

The three were indicted by a federal grand jury last week for conspiring to fix prices on alcoholic beverages between 1967 and 1974.

Named in the Oct. 26 indictment were Bob J. Grimes, of the Lubbock division of Pinkie's Inc. of Odessa, Hubert Odum, president and general manager of Cecil's Inc. of Lubbock and Kenneth F. Odum, secretary-treasurer and manager in charge of operations at Cecil's.

Pinkie's Inc., Cecil's Inc., Crossed Keys Package Store of Lubbock, the All Star Liquor Company of Lubbock and the Lubbock County Beverage Association were also named in the same indictment.

Woodward ordered the executives to continue on their personal recognizance bonds until the trial. He continued $1,000 bonds on the stores and corporations.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Robert Wilson said the trial should take about four days.

Down you go

Pampa linebacker Pat Bailey (55) and defensive back Doug Watson drag down Palo Duro halfback Robert Brooks, the game's leading rusher with 111 yards on 30 carries. Outside of Brooks, the Dons had trouble running against Pampa's defense, which limited the 3-AAAA opponent to 126 yards on the ground. The Harvesters and Amarillo meet for the District 3-AAAA title Friday in Pampa. (Pampa News photo by Michal Thompson)

PHS harvests Dons, 15-14

By PAUL SIMS
Sports Editor

AMARILLO — Ricky Moore bulled over right tackle from a yard out then ran over the two-point conversion on the same play late in the game to lift Pampa to a tense 15-14 win over Amarillo Palo Duro before 3,000 fans Friday night in Dick Bivins Stadium.

The District 3-AAAA football win gives Pampa, 6-3 for the season, a 3-0 conference record, same as Amarillo High, the Harvesters' opponent Friday night. The winner of that game will represent 3-AAAA in the bi-district playoffs against Lubbock Monterey.

Palo Duro, 6-2-1 overall, was eliminated from the title chase Friday with its second district loss against one victory.

Behind, 14-7, Pampa appeared to have lost when Palo Duro's Mike Stumbo intercepted a Mike Lancaster pass on the Don 12 and returned it for a two-yard loss. Palo Duro took over with 5:11 left in the game, ran four plays and punted. Steve Hancock returned Curtis Sinclair's punt 23 yards to the Palo Duro 29 with 2:57 left in the game.

Pampa, behind a crucial third-down pass from Lancaster to Gary Dumas for a 17-yard gain, drove to the nine. Moore gained eight to the one, then Lancaster was stopped for no gain. Moore plunged over right tackle on second down to score with 1:13 left.

A Juan Vargas extra-point boot would have given Pampa a tie and still would have given the Harvesters a shot at the district championship.

It was a matter of principle, said Coach John Welborn, for Pampa to go for the victory.

"I felt like the kids had gone through enough bad luck and adversity" after playing that hard. I think the chances of going for two and making it were about as good as kicking it. I always remember Colorado last year going for the tie against Oklahoma and missing the extra point.

"We talked about a tie; it was good as a win. We had to beat the Sandies anyway to win district."

The call was inevitable. Moore was the only regular, besides Lancaster, in the Harvester backfield. Fullback David Caldwell was out with a torn knee ligament, and his replacement, Dean Smith, who had switched from halfback, missed the game with a kidney infection.

Moore, Pampa's leading rusher Friday with 107 yards on 17 carries, scored on the same play that resulted in the touchdown.

Palo Duro took an early 7-0 lead on a one-yard run by Stumbo and extra point by Trini Villereal at 10:37 in the first quarter. Pampa's Steve Young coughed up the ball on the return with a fumble, which the Dons' Perry Sanders recovered on the Harvester 11.

It took Palo Duro four plays to score. Pampa took the ensuing kickoff and marched to the Palo Duro 18 but lost another fumble. In all, the Harvesters lost four fumbles, and Lancaster was intercepted twice.

Moore scored on a three-yard dive off right tackle with 1:51 left in the first half. Juan Vargas booted the extra point after the Harvesters had driven, behind a 38-yard romp by Lancaster, from their own 43 in four plays.

Palo Duro took the lead on a five-yard sprint by Robert Brooks, who dragged a Pampa tackler into the end zone, at 8:07 in the first period. The touchdown came on the first play after Stumbo fell on a Lancaster fumble.

Villereal added the extra point. "The fumbles are frustrating," Welborn said. "I think they (the Harvesters) proved they didn't give up. They stayed in there and put good drives together."

"Palo Duro, after losing to Amarillo High the week before, was down emotionally at the start of the game. When we fumbled on that opening kickoff, it fired them up."

"I think if we'd have scored first, we could have beaten them by three or four touchdowns."

Lancaster, who rushed for 100 yards in the first half in his best game of the season, finished with 88 yards on 20 carries. The game's leading ground gainer was Brooks, who carried 20 times for 111 of Palo Duro's 126 rushing yards.

Sandies narrowly beat Rebels

AHS forces 3-4A showdown

AMARILLO — Heavily favored Amarillo High (25-points according to the Harris Rating System) withstood a final surge by Amarillo Tascosa Saturday afternoon and held on to defeat the Rebels, 10-6, before a crowd estimated at more than 8,000 in Dick Bivins Stadium.

The triumph by the Sandies, their seventh straight after losses to Odessa High and Odessa Permian, sets the stage for Friday's District 3-AAAA showdown against Pampa. Both AHS and the Harvesters stand 3-0 in District play. Friday's winner at Pampa will nail down this year's playoff berth and advance to the bi-district playoffs against 4-AAAA champion Lubbock Monterey, which clinched that title Friday.

The Sandies scored on their fourth offensive play of the game when Perry Williams bolted 51 yards on a quick hitter over the left side. The drive covered 78 yards following the opening kickoff. Williams score came with the contest less than two minutes old.

Amarillo's only other score came on a 23-yard field goal by Carl Birdsong midway through the third period after Tascosa had scored the tying touchdown moments earlier.

The Rebels, who lost their fifth straight game and eighth this season against two wins, scored in two plays following the second-half kickoff.

Don Williams, the loop's top ground gainer prior to the game, raced 26 yards to the Amarillo 42 on the first play of the second half. On the next play, fullback Stan Frampton sped 42 yards to score with the third quarter only 22 seconds old. Terry Bridges' two-point conversion pass attempt was knocked down in the end zone by Sandie defensive back Mel Figuay.

With just over two minutes to play in the game, Bridges intercepted a Bret Jordan pass at the Rebel 20 and returned it to the Tascosa 39. A 25-yard pass from Bridges to Paul Tiffany gave the Rebels a first down at the Sandie 36. Two plays later, Tiffany ran 18 yards to the AHS 18 with just over a minute to play.

After two plays netted two touchdowns, the Rebels scored on a 34-yard run by Paul Tiffany in the third quarter on the running of fleet Arthur Whittington who scored on runs of five and one yard.

Williams dropped a Bridges pass at the 10 after working his way into the open. On the fourth down try, Birdsong intercepted Bridges' pass in the end zone with 48 seconds left in the game.

AHS held a 267-222 edge in total offense. The Sandies rolled up 242 yards on the ground as Perry Williams accounted for 176 on 19 carries.

Frampton led Tascosa with 97 yards on 13 carries. Don Williams added 45 yards on 17 tries and wound up the season with 733 yards.

Tascosa's 2-8 record represents the worst in the school's 19-year history. It also marked the first time the Rebels ever failed to win a district game.

Former Texas gridder reports scalping offer

DALLAS (AP) — A former Texas high school football star heavily recruited by Oklahoma says he was told by Sooner players he could make good money on game tickets if he attended the school.

"Nobody ever said how much money — but they made it sound like quite a bit," the player told the Dallas Times Herald. He agreed to talk to the newspaper if he and the school he attends remained anonymous.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association is currently investigating allegations that Oklahoma players have been selling game tickets through Sooner coaches to generate a "pay-off" for the players.

There have been allegations that the sales have brought $1,500 or more per player every season.

The player quoted by the Times Herald was one of Oklahoma's Top Ten prospects in Texas the year he was recruited. He selected his current school over Oklahoma after receiving close to 50 scholarship offers from across the nation.

Midland, Amarillo net cross country crowns

AMARILLO — Midland and Amarillo High won the varsity boys' and girls' titles, respectively, in the Amarillo Invitational Cross Country Meet at Thompson Park.

Midland scored 39 to win the boys' championship, over Amarillo 70, Brownfield 86, Lubbock Monterey 87, Amarillo Tascosa 97, Amarillo Caprock 125 and Pampa 171.

Amarillo scored 29 for first place in the girls' division, ahead of Brownfield 59, Caprock 112, Amarillo Palo Duro 115, Tascosa 117, Pampa 151, Monterey 200, Hereford 216, Lubbock High 228 and Lubbock Coronado 245.

Midland won the junior varsity boys' crown with 32 points, ahead of Brownfield 49, Tascosa 50, Amarillo 103 and Hereford 121.

Junior varsity girls' teams paced her team by finishing seventh in 9:19. Her varsity teammates were Jana Vaughn, 15th, 9:33; Angela Brooks, 32nd, 10:14; Karen Pope, 49th, 10:44; Lucinda Mynear, 50th, 10:48; and Anita Marlar, 51st, 11:26.

Pampa will host the District 3-AAAA meet Nov. 20.

West Texas St. Tops Lamar

CANYON — West Texas State grabbed a 21-0 lead then held on for a 21-6 non-conference win over Lamar Saturday night in Frank Kimbrough Memorial Stadium.

Raiders survive TCU scare, 14-10

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Rodney Allison staked unbeaten Texas Tech to two quick touchdowns Saturday and the fifth-ranked Red Raiders turned back a bold, gambling upset bid by Southwest Conference doormat Texas Christian 14-10.

Allison winged a first quarter bulseye to Brian Nelson that covered 88 yards for one touchdown and the wily junior quarterback then pranced three yards for another.

The heavily-favored Raiders (7-0) then spent the remainder of the sun-swept afternoon battling for their collective lives against a hapless TCU club that had lost seven straight while yielding an average 42 points per game.

Substitute quarterback Steve Bayuk took the Horned Frogs on a desperate long distance drive against the clock in the closing minutes but the threat died just inside the Raider 10 yard line when Ekrick Felton picked off a third down pass.

Tech ran out the clock at that point to resume the Raiders' uncluttered march toward a Jan. 1 date in the Cotton Bowl. Bayuk, a sophomore, had hurled a 77-yard scoring pass to Mike Renfro in the second quarter to breathe new life in the near moribund Christians and a meager crowd of 20,986 watched in disbelief as the inspired Frogs torpedeod a Tech scoring drive at the goal in the third period, then drove into range for Ruben Ray's 22-yard field goal.

A roughing penalty washed out a TCU pass interception inside the Raider 40 in the final period and even then the Frogs did not surrender.

With nearly eight minutes left, Bayuk guided the Frogs from their own 25 down to a first down at the Raider nine with a little over a minute remaining, completing eight passes in the process. But with third and nine after two incomplete tosses, Felton stepped in front of a Bayuk toss to the seven and returned it out to the Raiders' 24.

Rice nudges SMU, 41-34

HOUSTON (AP) — Quarterback Tommy Kramer, the nation's leading passer, whipped Rice to two touchdowns in the final 3:52 of the game to rally the Owls to a 41-34 Southwest Conference football victory over Southern Methodist Saturday.

The Mustangs had pulled to a 34-20 lead at the end of the third quarter on the running of fleet Arthur Whittington who scored on runs of five and one yard.

Baylor knocks' Hogs from SWC leadership

WACO, Tex. (AP) — Senior quarterback Mark Jackson sneaked the final yard himself for a touchdown on a tense 80-yard fourth quarter drive to enable Baylor to tie the 12th-ranked Arkansas 7-7 in a Southwest Conference game Saturday, Arkansas, which was knocked out of the SWC leadership because of the tie dodged an upset bullet when Lester Belrose of Baylor missed a 32-yard field goal with 16 seconds left to play.

Belrose had a 15-mile an hour wind at his back, but hooked the ball just left of the upright.

Arkansas now has a 5-1-1 record for the year and is 3-0-1 in SWC play.

Baylor is 1-2-1 and 4-2-1. Arkansas had apparently dealt Baylor a staggering blow in the defensive duel when freshman wide receiver Bruce Hay slipped behind the Bear secondary and caught quarterback Ron Calcagni's 41-yard scoring bomb late in the third quarter.

Hay was all alone behind Baylor cornerback Scooter Reed and Steve Little added the extra point.

But Jackson countered with a 13-play drive before the screaming 47,900 homecoming fans.

Arkansas aided the drive with a personal foul penalty and Jackson twice converted crucial third-down situations to keep the drive alive.

Houston rips UT, 30-0

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Houston quarterback Danny Davis scored once and hit a crucial fourth down pass to set up a touchdown and Lennard Coplin kicked three field goals as the Cougars defeated Texas 30-0 in a Southwest Conference football game Saturday.

The victory before a sellout crowd of 77,800 broke Texas' home-field winning streak of 42 games, which dated from the 1968 opener when Houston tied Texas 20-20.

It was also the first shutout of Texas since mid 1972, when Oklahoma blanked the Longhorns 27-0, and virtually eliminated the Longhorns from the SWC title race.

Houston was ranked 19th and Texas No. 20 in the nation going into the game.

Davis' 15-yard pass to Don Bass on fourth and eight on the Texas 28 set up Houston's first touchdown in the first quarter. Alois Blackwell scored on a seven-yard dash on a late pitch-out from Davis.

Davis, a 175-pound sophomore, sprinted 28 yards late in the fourth quarter for Houston's final touchdown.

Fumbles by Johnny "Lam" Jones at the Texas 15 and Jimmy Walker at the Texas 22 led to Coplin field goals of 30 and 20 yards.

He also kicked a 32 yarder after Davis drove the Cougars 59 yards to the Texas 16.

Houston clinched the victory with two last-quarter touchdowns on Davis' run and a one-yard plunge by Charles Lynch, capping a 65-yard drive.

Houston is now 6-2 for the season and 5-1 in SWC play. Texas dropped to 3-3-1 and 2-2.

The game ended with sophomore Mike Cordaro at quarterback for Texas, the third signal caller that Coach Darrell Royal tried in a futile effort to generate some offense against the raging Houston defense, which was anchored by 265-pound tackle Wilson Whitley.

Houston so effectively shut down the Texas offense that the Longhorns only had two yards in the entire second quarter.

Texas played without its leading rusher, fullback Earl Campbell, who did not even suit up because of a pulled leg muscle. Offensive tackle George James also was sidelined for Texas in the first quarter and had to be replaced by freshman Guy Sellers.

Game's hero

Pampa's Steve Hancock (42) forced Palo Duro end Brian Adams to fumble after a 13-yard gain in the final minute of Friday night's District 9-AAAA contest. Hancock, who had returned a punt 23 yards to set up a Harvester touchdown two minutes earlier, fell on the fumble to give Pampa possession on its own 48-yard line. The Harvesters host Amarillo High Friday in the regular-season finale.

Kratzert-Blackburn move into tie for lead in National Team Golf

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Bill Kratzert made eight birdies on his own ball and combined with partner Woody Blackburn for a better ball 63 that staked the longshot rookies to a tie for the lead after Saturday's third round of the $200,000 National Team Golf Championship.

Kratzert and Blackburn, who gained their tour playing rights only last June, put together a 54-hole total of 194, 22 under par on the 7,197-yard Magnolia course at Walt Disney World. Scoring in this event is based on the better ball of each two-man team.

Jerry McGee and Allen Miller, who led or shared the lead through the first two rounds, birdied the final hole—long after the national television cameras had completed their coverage for the day—to retain a tie for the top. They had a third-round 66, six under par.

Veterans Gay Brewer and Bobby Nichols, each a former champion in this tournament but each with a different partner, were alone in third at 196, 20 under. Their third-round score was 64.

Cal Peete and Slugger White had a 63 in the warm, sunny, breezy weather and were another stroke back at 197.

Three teams were tied at 198. John Schlee and South African Bobby Cole had a 63, including 30 on their last nine. Joe Porter and Bob Zender had a 69, and Tom Jenkins and Bobby Walzel a 66.

U.S. Open champ Jerry Pate and George Burns combined for a 66 and 199, five shots back.

Kratzert, who has won $21,000 in his brief time on the tour, had a phenomenal round. With Blackburn, his long-time friend and rival reading the putts for him, he dropped birdies from 30, 25, 15 and 15 feet, once hit a par-five in two and two-putted and stroked irons 6, 4 and 1-2 feet for eight birdies on his first 15 holes.

Blackburn finally got into the act on the 18th, scoring from eight feet on the 18th.

"Bill actually stood there and clapped for me," Blackburn said. "I think he was more relieved than I was."

Pitt, Dorsett roll again, crush Army

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Record-breaking Tony Dorsett, college football's all-time rushing king, galloped for 212 yards and three touchdowns and smashed his ninth NCAA mark Saturday, leading unbeaten, second-ranked Pittsburgh to a 37-7 victory over Army.

Coupled with top-rated Michigan's stunning 16-14 upset at the hands of Purdue, Pitt's triumph thrust the Panthers into the favorite's role for the No. 1 position in the next rankings.

Dorsett carried 32 times before being shaken up on the first play of the fourth quarter. He ran for touchdowns of 4, 32 and 5 yards and caught two passes for 14.

Miller kept his team in the running over the first 15 holes, making birdie on three par-five holes.

"I kept looking at the leader board and I couldn't believe we were still tied, or close to the top," McGee said. "It was a very poor start and Kratzert was playing great."

They regained a share of the lead with a birdie-birdie-birdie finish. McGee scored on the 18th, from about 10 feet. Miller pulled them to within a single stroke of the lead with a 15-footer on the 17th and McGee lofted an eight-iron shot to within four feet of the cup and made the putt for a tie on the final hole.

Maryland whips Cincy

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Mark Manges completed 11 of 19 passes, including two for touchdowns, and added 71 rushing yards to lead unbeaten and sixth-ranked Maryland to a 21-0 victory over Cincinnati in college football Saturday.

The Terps, now 9-0 and winners of 13 in a row over the two seasons, allowed Cincinnati just four first downs through the end of the third quarter.

Maryland missed a scoring chance following a fumble recovery deep in Bearcat territory early in the game.

Purdue surprises Michigan

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Scott Dierking rushed for 162 yards and two touchdowns and Rock Supan kicked a 23-yard field goal with just over four minutes remaining Saturday as Purdue stunned top-ranked Michigan 16-14 in Big Ten football.

A 37-yard field goal attempt by Michigan's Bob Wood with nine seconds left was wide to the left and the delirious Boilermakers ran the clock out.

Purdue dominated play most of the game and led 13-7 until Michigan quarterback Rick Leach hurled a 64-yard TD pass to Jim Smith late in the third quarter to tie the game.

Wood's extra-point kick gave the Wolverines a 14-13 lead, and they appeared headed for their ninth victory of the season when Jerry Zuber's second pass interception halted a Purdue drive at the Michigan 22.

Pampa-AHS tickets to be sold

Tickets for the Pampa-Amarillo High football contest Friday night in Harvester Stadium will be on sale Monday at the high school business office, 119 N. Frost.

"I fully anticipate a sellout," Ed Lehnick, Pampa athletic director said. "Fans ought to buy their tickets early in the week."

Cost is $2.50 for reserved seats and $2.25 for general admission. Student prices are $1.00 at school and $1.25 at the game.

Pampa and Amarillo High are tied for the District 3-AAAA lead with 3-0 records. Friday's 7:30 p.m. contest will be for the district championship.

The Harvesters edged Amarillo Palo Duro, 15-14, while Amarillo nipped Amarillo Tascosa, 10-6, in this weekend's district games.

Alabama cruises past Louisiana State, 28-17

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Fullback Johnny Davis bulled through a proud Louisiana State defense Saturday to lead Alabama to a 28-17 Southeastern Conference victory with scouts from eight bowls watching.

Davis, stung when put on the second team earlier in the season, ran with vengeance, scoring on bursts of 13 and 58 yards as the 15th-ranked Crimson Tide increased its record to 7-2 and virtually wrapped an 18th consecutive bowl appearance.

LSU, which last defeated Alabama in 1970, now has a 4-3-1 record. Tailback Terry Robiskie set an LSU record by scoring the 25th touchdown of his collegiate career, but by then the Tide had put the game away.

Alabama led 14-3 at halftime and each team scored twice in the second half, with a blocked punt setting up the final LSU touchdown.

Butch Knight blocked the punt and Phil Triche picked it up and ran it to the six with Robiskie taking it in. He finished the day with 72 yards on 19 runs.

Davis picked up 138 yards on 18 runs for Alabama with the running and passing of quarterbacks Jack O'Rear and Jeff Rutledge spicing the attack.

The press box contained scouts from the Sugar, Cotton, Gator, Sun, Fiesta, Tangerine, Peach and Liberty bowls.

PJH teams to compete in loop games

The Pampa Junior High freshmen will play Plainview at 6:30 p.m. Thursday in Harvester Stadium for the district junior high championship.

Pampa won the North Zone title and Plainview won in the South Zone.

The Pampa eighth-grade red team will travel to Plainview for a 6:30 p.m. district championship game Thursday. The Plainview blue team won a coin flip with the Plainview red team and Canyon for the right to represent the South Zone in the district title game.

Pampa quarterback Mike Lancaster (11) romps for yardage en route to 100 yards in the first half of his team's 15-14 win over Amarillo Palo Duro in a District 3-AAAA contest Friday in Amarillo. Lancaster carried 12 times for 100 yards in the first game, but due to some second-half losses, finished with 88 yards on 20 carries. It still was his best game, statistically, of the season. Pampa, 6-3 for the season and 3-0 in district play, meets Amarillo High, 7-2 and 3-0, for the conference championship Friday night in Pampa. The game will mark the Harvesters' homecoming. COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Fullback Pete Johnson scored four times to become the fifth player in college history to score 50 career touchdowns leading eighth-ranked Ohio State to its 18th straight Big Ten football victory Saturday, a 42-10 rout of Illinois that gave the Buckeyes the conference lead.

Johnson scored on runs of one, two, four and one yards to run his regular season touchdown total to 53. The 247-pound senior from Long Beach, N.Y., joins Army's Glenn Davis, Steve Owens of Oklahoma, Ed Marinaro of Cornell and Anthony Davis of Southern California on the select list.

Ecofallow is the name of a relatively new practice which is gaining more supporters every season. Basically, the system involves letting wheat stubble stand after harvest. Spraying it with herbicide then planting the next crop with the straw still in the field. Purpose of the system is to utilize the ground cover for moisture retention and as a buffer against wind erosion. Using the herbicide application gets rid of weeds that could in as little as a month's time burn up 30 pounds of nitrogen an acre. Specific systems being used are generally of two rotations: winter wheat-corn-fallow and winter wheat-sorghum-fallow. With ecofallow being tried on about 20 thousand acres this year, some specifics on yield effects should be available next year. Major problem with the new system is reported to be using planters heavy enough to get through the straw.

'Cats claw Boys Ranch in District 1-AA contest

BOYS RANCH — Canadian jumped out to a 14-0 lead then held on for a 14-9 win over pesky Boys Ranch in District 1-AA action Friday night here.

Canadian, 6-3 overall and 3-1 in district play, can force a tie for the 1-AA championship with a win over Spearman Friday in Canadian.

Marty Carr scored on a five-yard burst off left tackle with 2:43 left in the first quarter, and Roy Lee Todd scored on a five-yard pass from Mike Schaefer at 9:26 in the second period for the Wildcats. Ken Adcock booted the extra points after each touchdown.

Canadian drove 50 and 70 yards for the two touchdowns. The latter was set up on a 65-yard run by Gary Thompson.

Boys Ranch, just before intermission, scored on a 19-yard pass from Brian Latchaw to Joe Maloy. Boyd Garrett, who had intercepted a pass to set up the score, booted the extra point to cut Canadian's lead in half.

Lonnie Wade of Boys Ranch blocked a Roy Lee Todd punt in the final period, and Canadian's Tim Ferguson recovered the ball in the end zone for a safety with 10:33 left in the game.

Thompson was Canadian's leading rusher with 117 yards on 13 attempts. Robert Wilson and Carr rushed for 54 and 50 yards, respectively.

"It was a good ball game — we won the first half and they won the second," Wildcat Coach Jack Hawthorne said. "We played real good defense. We played real, real good in the first half.

"In the second half, we were stale. I don't believe it was there as much as it was. We didn't have a dressing room to go to and we went under the trees at halftime. I guess we got cold and stiff."

Boys Ranch, 5-4 and 1-3, visits Panhandle Friday.

White leads Lefors past Warriors

LEFORS — Phil White rushed for 257 yards and three touchdowns to spark Lefors to a 39-16 District 1-B football victory over Miami Friday.

White scored on runs of eight, 51 and 19 yards to pace the Pirates, 6-2 for the season and 5-2 in district play going into Friday night's season finale against Groom.

Miami fell to 4-4 overall and in league play.

Kenny Howard scored on a six-yard pass from White in the first quarter to give the Pirates a 6-0 lead. White then booted the extra point. Miami came back in the quarter on a five-yard touchdown run by Phillip McCullough and conversion run by Duane Childress, who made it 6-7.

White's three touchdowns came in the second quarter. The conversion failed after each score, as Lefors held a 25-8 lead at halftime.

Howard scored on runs of six and 25 yards in the third quarter, and White converted after each touchdown for a 39-8 led. Miami's final touchdown came in the final period on a one-yard lunge by Childress. McCullough ran over the two extra points.

Groom visits Lefors and Miami hosts Booker in season wind-ups Friday.

Higgins Tips Tigers

McLEAN — Quarterback Joe Smith bulldozed over from five yards out with 3:43 left in the game to lift Higgins to a 7-0 victory over McLean in a battle of District 1-B cellar dwellers Friday night.

Higgins now is 2-7 for the season and 1-6 in district games. McLean is 1-8 and 0-6.

Greg Norton booted the extra point after the game's only touchdown.

"I thought we played as good defense as we've played all year," McLean Coach Jesse Smelley said, "but we couldn't do anything offensively. We couldn't move the ball."

McLean managed only two first downs, 51 yards rushing and four yards passing.

The Tigers close out their season Friday at Follett, while Higgins travels to Wheeler.

Ah, those pleasure loving Swedes. They've invented the most carefree fabric in the world.

and look what Varsity-Town did with it.

It took them years of research and experimentation but they finally came up with the fabulous Swedish knit. An extraordinary fabric that holds its press and fights wrinkles no matter what. And keeps looking good. Varsity-Town tailors it with all the care and imagination a great fabric deserves.

Butz out, Knebel in, who's next?

By BRIAN B. KING
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Undersecretary John A. Knebel has been named secretary, replacing Earl L. Butz. But that's less than a three-month job, and many people are thinking about his successor.

Some farm lobbyists have suggested in the days since Democrat Jimmy Carter won the presidential election that, as one put it, "who would want to be his agriculture secretary and spend all day second-guessing the boss?"

Carter comes from a peanut-farming family. But he and his relatives have more diverse interests as well and there's been little indication that agriculture is the president-elect's major national-policy concern.

Furthermore, the members of Carter's transition team who have focused on the Agriculture Department and farm-food issues have backgrounds in consumer activism and environmental protection.

Finally, the farm community is no more of one mind than, say, all workers.

Carter may be a peanut man but, as his congressional supporters have pointed out for several weeks, he needs allies for his farm policies among producers of the major money crops: grains and livestock.

That suggests, the speculation goes, a new secretary outside the Carter circle.

Two other political factors are involved in his decision, these observers say.

The "bread basket" states and California voted, however narrowly in some cases, for President Ford.

And Vice President-elect Walter F. Mondale, a Minnesota colleague of former Agriculture Secretary Orville Freeman, might have some dairy-related suggestions for the new administration.

Some names being bandied about include:

Rep. Bob Bergland of Minnesota, an heir to the Humphrey-Freeman-Mondale tradition; Ed Jaeneke, former governor of the Farm Credit Administration, and P.R. "Bobby" Smith, head of Carter's farm-food campaign committee.

On the theory that Carter wants to show the capital "new faces" instead of the old Washington crowd, some sources also suggested a state agriculture commissioner might be chosen from, for example, Texas or Illinois. A Republican USDA official on his way out had heard Nebraska Gov. J.J. Exon mentioned.

However, it is known that the Carter inner circle steadily consulted throughout the campaign with the "Washington Establishment" staffs of the House and Senate agriculture committees, a practice Carter's staff did not follow when developing positions in other such areas as defense and taxes.

The chairman of the Senate committee, which will first pass on Carter's secretarial nomination is Sen. Herman Talmadge, a fellow Georgian who has indicated in the past a strong liking for Jaeneke.

Bergland is said not to want the job, preferring his role as a low-key persuader and vote-collector in the House Democratic vanguard and on the Agriculture Committee in that chamber.

"Carter wouldn't dare pick one from the South" like Smith, a cattleman-lobbyist said. "He needs to look West and probably will draw either from the Minnesota crowd or the Midwest." Jaeneke came to Washington from Missouri.

A key Senate aide cautioned, however, "Everybody thinks he has a connection to Carter now — they're coming out of the woodwork and you'd do well not to listen to anyone but Hamilton (Jordan) and (Jody) Powell." Carter's two top aides.

cannot get mortgage credit without one.

Eligible for the guaranteed loans, which must be sought through private lenders, will be borrowers with adjusted yearly incomes generally of $15,000, after deducting 5 per cent and $300 per dependent child from actual earnings. The cut-off is higher in Alaska, Hawaii and Guam.

A spokesman said the agency would guarantee, for the first $25,000 of the loan, 97 per cent of the value of the house and site and, for the balance of the loan, 95 per cent.

The maximum it will guarantee will be $33,000 in the 48 contiguous states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, $40,000 in Hawaii and Guam and $45,000 in Alaska.

Farmers Home loans are available in areas of open country, towns with populations of 10,000 or less and 337 listed communities with populations between 10,000 and 20,000 where mortgage credit for low- or middle-income families is "seriously lacking."

Soviet Union has shifted to the current marketing year about 117,353 metric tons of wheat it had bought for delivery during the 1977-78 season, the Agriculture Department says.

That brings to 2.9 million metric tons (of 2,204.6 pounds each) the total amount of wheat for shipment this year under a U.S.-Soviet agreement that calls for a minimum of 3 million tons each of wheat and feedgrains.

Cattlemen won't see higher beef prices in 1977 unless a lot of cows, non-fed cattle and calves are slaughtered this year. The main goal of cattlemen should be to cut feeder cattle availability by putting more cows, calves and non-fed cattle on the market. Feedgrain prices and winter pasture conditions will also affect cattle prices this fall and into 1977.

Whaley honored
Foster Whaley, retired Gray County agent with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service was one of 22 Extension Service retirees honored recently at a special banquet at Texas A&M University. He was presented a plaque by Rockwall County Judge Derwood Wimpee, left, president of the County Judges and Commissioners Association of Texas, and Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, right, Extension Service director. Whaley retired Jan. 31 after 27 years of service, the past 16 of which were in Gray County. He also served in Deaf Smith, Carson and Armstrong Counties. He holds a B.S. degree from Texas A&M University and has done graduate work at the same institution.

County agent comments

Aerial coyote hunt proposed

By JOE VANZANDT
County Extension Agent
The snow and wet weather last week caught most people by surprise. Farmers with sorghum in the field didn't exactly welcome the moisture unless they had some wheat that was getting dry. And most wheat fields were getting to the point of needing some additional moisture. Some of the wheat had previously been showing up a little on the yellow side and I am inclined to think that this was caused somewhat by dry soil moisture condition around the young wheat plants.

We have had reports of coyote problems lately, especially around cows that are calving. Some interest has been expressed in a widespread coyote control program such as was conducted in 1972 in Gray County with helicopters.

Fairly large acreages would need to be blocked together for an aerial hunt. Probably something like a minimum of 10 miles square for any control program to be very effective as coyotes will travel long ways in search of food. Also, if small places are not signed up, it creates problems for the pilot to avoid the non-participants.

The program will cost $115 per hour. Based on average results obtained here in 1972, 274 coyotes were killed on about 280 square miles, almost 1 per section, at the rate of 8.6 coyotes per hour or a cost per coyote of $13.37 based on the current cost.

If you would be interested in participating, you can call the County Extension Office, 669-7420. In the McLean area, you can contact Ted Simmons, 779-2258.

Cattlemen can obtain M-44 units to control coyotes on their own property. These are similar to the old "coyote getters" but are a lot safer and are permitted to be used. A booklet MP-1181 Using the M-44 in Coyote Control, and information on how to obtain the units can be obtained at the County Extension Office, Courthouse Annex.

The Emergency Livestock Loan Guarantee program through Farmers Home Administration which was scheduled to expire December 31 this year has been extended until Sept. 30, 1978. This extension gives producers a lot more time to sign up for this program if desired.

Two Texas shade trees, the mimosa and the mulberry, are suffering from fungus diseases.

The mimosa tree is being removed from the Texas landscape by Fusarium wilt. The fungal organism that causes the disease had its origin on the eastern seaboard and has spread westward in recent years.

The wilt, which also occurs in cotton, peas and watermelons, results from spores that become airborne after lying dormant in the soil. It affects plant vitality and the leaves. The tree later shows symptoms of color loss and drooping and cracks along the bark soon appear, emitting a foul smelling sap.

Two resistant varieties of mimosa trees, Charlotte and Tyrone, are currently being used but not to a great extent in Texas. Furthermore, chemical controls for the disease are not profitable at this time. About all homeowners can do is to give the trees good cultural care and to avoid mechanical injury.

The mulberry tree is afflicted with a fungal leafspot disease during the autumn months. This shade tree loses its leaves as a result of a windborne fungus that produces the disease.

Fungal leafspot can be contained by applying two fungicide applications during the year. Since the disease is predominant in the fall, the first application of Benomyl or a liquid broad spectrum fungicide should be applied in early fall and the final application made three weeks later.

The disease does not kill mulberry trees but defoliates them prematurely, bringing on a wintery appearance.

The Gray 4-H Farm Machinery Auction Sale will be held Saturday starting at 11 a.m. at Recreation Park on the east side of Pampa. All types of good equipment and other items will be on hand for the sale. The proceeds will go the Gray County 4-H Council to help finance 4-H activities for the coming year. provided by 4-H families.

Commercial production of red meat in the United States totaled nearly 3.5 billion pounds in September, 12 per cent more than a year ago and 13 per cent above September 1974. Total red meat output for January-September 1976 was up 7 per cent from 1975 ... change by individual components: beef, up 11 per cent; veal, up 2 per cent; pork, up 2 per cent; lamb and mutton, down 11 per cent. Commercial meat production includes slaughter in Federally Inspected and other plants, but excludes animals slaughtered on farms.

Beef production totaled almost 2.3 billion pounds, 10 per cent above September last year and 22 per cent above September 1974. Cattle kill totaled 3,748,900 head, 2 per cent above last year and 21 per cent above September 1974.

Deputy defense secretary -- mighty Texan in D.C.

By BILL CHOYKE
Pampa's Washington Bureau
 WASHINGTON — Deputy Defense Secretary William F. Clements Jr. might be the most powerful and controversial Texan now working in the nation's capital.
 Nominated by former President Richard Nixon in early 1973 to be the number two man in the Pentagon, Clements is now weathering a barrage of criticism for a number of alleged conflicts of interests ranging from his personal finances to his departmental policy.
 In the past four months, critics of Clements, a Dallas civic leader and former chairman of the board of Sedco Inc., an oil drilling firm, have charged:
 —That he has ignored a public pledge to refrain from any business involving Iran because of his former company's extensive business interests there.
 —That he has consistently disregarded the appearance of a conflict of interest by appointing to top Pentagon positions individuals who recently worked for defense contractors.
 —That he appointed a politically partisan committee linked both to Texas politics and the national Republican party to devise a plan to increase profits for the lagging shipbuilding industry and some other defense contractors.
 —That he has pressured Pentagon subordinates to settle a dispute with a subsidiary shipbuilder of a large Texas oil and gas conglomerate by accepting a settlement favored by the shipbuilders that may cost the taxpayers $1 billion.
 Moreover, critics of Clements also maintain that he has used his position to perpetuate the "revolving door" policy between the Pentagon and Defense (DOD) contractors. This, they say, has led to too cozy a relationship between the Pentagon and the industries which supply U.S. weaponry.

 Furthermore, that relationship has frightened some Pentagon critics who say the United States has moved closer to the "military-industrial complex" cited as an anger by late President Dwight Eisenhower in his farewell address in 1960.
 "Absolutely he has done that," says Felice Cohn, coordinator of the Military Audit Project, a Washington-based private research group funded by liberal philanthropist and General Motors heir Stewart Mott.
 "That's why I think he was appointed. To do just that," she added.
 Clements succeeded former Deputy Secretary David Packard in his post, which oversees day-to-day Pentagon affairs as well as supervising critics, geared his policies to special defense contractors, such as Lockheed Corp. And critics say Clements has done little to alter that direction.
 The sharpest recent criticism directed at Clements was from Rep. Charles Wilson of California, who last month said he should be fired.
 The West Coast Democrat, who represents the district which includes the main offices of defense contractor, the Northrop Corp., has accused Clements of "definite conflicts of interest" in connection with his ownership of stock in Dedco, Iranian arms sales and the "Profit 76" Pentagon advisory committee.
 The "Profit 76" group established to rewrite Pentagon profit guidelines, particularly ranked Wilson who charged that its members were part of the "old Nixon Texas campaign team" politically bent on increasing profits for shipbuilders and the aerospace industry.

 The committee, appointed by Clements, was chaired by Robert Moot, who is treasurer of the President Ford Committee. Also on the committee were several others who worked closely in the past with Moot, a former defense controller, or Packard.
 The recommendations, calling for an additional one per cent profit for certain types of capital investment, will particularly benefit the shipbuilders and to a lesser degree the aerospace industry, a Pentagon spokesman acknowledged. However, he said they should also lead to considerable taxpayer savings on defense contracts because the work will be accomplished more quickly and at a less expense.
 National columnist Jack Anderson also reported last month that Clements privately accused an assistant Navy secretary and admiral of dragging their fee on a deal that could cost the government as much as $1 billion.
 Clements, the columnist said, took the side of the Newport News Shipbuilding Co. against Navy lawyers. The company, a subsidiary of Houston-based Tenneco Inc., maintains the Navy owes it almost $900 million for construction changes and other cost escalations—a claim the Navy is challenging in court.
 Clements departed for a six-country, two-week trip to the Middle East Oct. 17 and was unavailable for comment. However, a Pentagon spokesman, Julian Levine, said the deputy secretary has been generally unfazed by the recent attacks.
 "I don't read it as anything special," Levine said. "He has no special problems."

 However, some on Capitol Hill don't see it that way. Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., has asked Attorney General Edward Levi to investigate possible fraud in Tenneco claims. A Senate multinational subcommittee is also scrutinizing Clements' performance as part of a close-door inquiry into U.S. fighter plane sales to Iran.
 Since he holds a stake in Sedco — 750,058 shares in 1975 according to one report — Clements has pledged to forsake any involvement in matters pertaining to Iran to "avoid even the appearance of conflict." However, the subcommittee has learned that Clements had become specifically involved in the sale of 80 sophisticated F14 fighter planes to Iran by the Grumman Corp.
 Sedco, now headed by Clements, has been in business in Iran for 18 years. One report said land drilling amounted to 22 per cent of the earnings for the company, which has the majority of its land operations in Iran.

Navajo weaving shown

By Jean Barnes
 Affluency has made it possible for many Americans to enjoy the pleasures of collecting works of art. And, Indian art is gaining in popularity with such collectors.
 Although Indian jewelry is usually considered the most popular target for collectors, there are many other forms of the Indian art.
 Recently at the Mid-America All Indian Center museum in Wichita, Kan., we were fortunate to experience an exhibit of Navajo weaving — rugs, blankets and tapestries. Many dated from the 19th century and were in excellent condition.
 The history of Indian weaving has no known beginning with their first looms being finger looms, according to the docent (lecturer) who provided a wealth of information on the exhibit. Weaving took a significant step forward about 800 A.D. when the Pueblo Indians are given credit for developing a loom with which the weaver could produce wide cloth in a single piece.
 According to the docent, the Navajo were apt students of the Pueblos and soon surpassed them as weavers. Thus, over a span of years the term "Navajo" became almost synonymous with Indian weaving.

 Even the experts are unable to pinpoint the time when Navajos began weaving their own cloth. It was early in the 17th century that they began trading with the Pueblos.
 History records, however, that in 1706 the Navajos were weaving not only for their own use but for barter. The Spanish, who introduced wool to the Pueblo weaver, set up trade fairs in the last decade of the 17th century. These trade fairs in the Southwest made it possible for the

Hollywood joins CB craze

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Red Rover to First Mama, have you heard the news? Hollywood is getting into our act."
Indeed, the word is spreading among the growing myriad of Citizen's Band radio devotees that their pastime will be featured in upcoming movies. One is already being made in locations in the South, another is starting in Northern California, a third is scheduled to begin early next year.
"Smokey and the Bandit," starring Burt Reynolds, has been filming in Georgia as a first-time movie for director Hal Needham, formerly stunt coordinator for Reynolds, John Wayne and other action stars.
Producer Mort Engelberg, speaking from the Georgia location, described the action: "Burt Reynolds plays a retired truck driver who was once known as 'King of the Road' because of his feats of derringdo on the highway. Two eccentric and perhaps nefarious Texans hire him for an impossible task: to drive a truck roundtrip from Atlanta to Texarkana, returning with 400 cases of Coors beer within the space of 24 hours.

"The only way Burt can accomplish the 900-mile trip is to hire a friend (Jerry Reed) to drive the truck while Burt races a car as 'blocker' to draw away the police. The most important use of CB radio is between Reynolds and Reed, but friendly truck drivers, ordinary citizens and the pursuing police, including Jackie Gleason as sheriff, also use their CB."
"Smokey and the Bandit," said Engelberg, is a "flat-out comedy with eight or nine of the most amazing stunts ever staged for the movies." Yet he insists that it is "urbane material, not designed for people in pickup trucks."
Up north in Marysville, Calif., producer Freddie Fields is starting a movie simply called "Citizen's Band," a Paramount release.

"It's not a picture about truckers, but about the people in this incredible new world of CB," said Fields, a superagent turned film maker. "By the end of 1977, according to reports I've seen, 20 to 25 per cent of the public will be involved with CB. Right now there are about from 12 to 15 million sets in use, with 20 million expected by the end of the year."
"There's something behind the movement, some urge that people have to communicate. CB seems to allow them to communicate and still maintain their anonymity."
"Citizen's Band" was written by young Paul Brickman and is being directed by another newcomer, Jonathan Demme, who made "Fighting Mad." The leads are Candy Clark, late of "The Man Who Fell to Earth" and "American Graffiti," and Paul Le Mat, who made an impression in "Aloha, Bobby and Rose."
Like "Smokey and the Bear," "Citizen's Band" will be filmed entirely on location.

Producer Robert Sherman ("The Missouri Breaks") is preparing "Convoy," based on the hit song that helped make Americans aware of Citizen's Band.
"It was No. 1 not only in this country, but in Australia, England, Germany and other countries as well," says Sherman. "It has sold six million records throughout the world, so there is an audience out there for 'Convoy.'"
The story follows the song, which was created by Bill Fries, Chip Davis and Don Sears and delivered by C.W. McCall. "CB is not a major part of the plot, but it is a useful device," said Sherman.
He expects to start filming in New Mexico next March, with Sam Peckinpah directing. Sherman is negotiating for a major star. Originally a United Artists project, "Convoy" is now backed by British Lion (E.M.I.).

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Jack Ford says he expects his father to be more active than most former presidents when the family leaves the White House.
"He knows there will be a lot of flexibility, ways that he can remain active," the 24-year-old son of President Ford said in an interview in today's New York Daily News. "But the first thing he'll make certain is that mother will be comfortable with it — that it's something she would like to do."
"For the better part of the first year, they'll devote the time to doing all the things they wanted to do before but never had the time for. Dad will enjoy traveling to places — like Mexico — where he always wanted to go with mother, as tourists."
"He'd like to teach at a university if it could be on the basis of about one month a year," Ford added.
DALLAS (AP) — The general manager of the Fairmont Hotel has fired singer-composer Roger Miller in the middle of a two-week engagement at the hotel's Venetian Room.
Julian Abio said Thursday that Miller's performance had not been "up to expectations." He declined further comment.
It was the first time in the room's history that a performer was fired in the middle of an engagement.
Abio said singer Marilyn Maye would open at the hotel today to replace Miller.
Miller has had several hit records, including "King of the Road" and "Dang Me." He also had a short-lived network television show.
CLEVELAND, Tenn. (AP) — Country music star Hank Snow will hold a concert here Dec. 9 to benefit abused children, the Bradlee County sheriff's office says.
Snow had written Gov. Ray Blanton and the sheriff, deploring the beating death of 4-year-old Melisha Gibson. Sgt. Robert Lawson wrote back asking Snow to give a concert with proceeds going to build a new shelter for abused children.
"Hank Snow called, told us just to set a date and get a location, and he and some of his friends would be here," Sgt. Lawson said Thursday. "He said he had been on tour in western Canada and had just come home to find our letter."
Lawson said he has reserved the 4,500 seat Cleveland State Community College field house for the concert Dec. 9.

LANDING, N.J. (AP) — Karen Anne Quinlan's mother, who pleaded with the courts to "pull the plug" on her comatose daughter's respirator so she could die with dignity, has been inducted into an organization that gives psychological counseling to people dying of cancer.
After months of litigation, the New Jersey Supreme Court in March gave Julia and Joseph Quinlan the right to remove a respirator from their 22-year-old daughter. She has been given no chance of regaining consciousness, but she has survived.
Her mother recently earned a certificate as a member of the newly established Riverside Hospice Volunteer Corps, which includes doctors, nurses, psychologists, social workers, clergy and people like Mrs. Quinlan with useful personal experience.

DALLAS (AP) — The general manager of the Fairmont Hotel has fired singer-composer Roger Miller in the middle of a two-week engagement at the hotel's Venetian Room.

68 crimes reported in Pampa in October

Pampa police investigated 68 reports of class 1 crimes during October, according to a report released by Pampa Police Chief Richard Mills.
Two of those cases were unfounded, Mills added, leaving 66 actual class 1 crimes during the month.
Police cleared 30 of those cases, for a 45.9 per cent clearance rate, according to the chief.
Theft was the leading class 1 crime with 38 cases reported during the month. Burglary was second with 17 cases reported.
Mills compared crime figures for the first 10 months of 1976 with figures from the same period in 1975 and said there have been 832 class 1 crimes in 1976. This is an increase of 51 crimes over 1975.
Class 1 crimes include criminal homicide, forcible rape, robbery assault, burglary, larceny theft and motor vehicle theft.
Class 2 crimes reports for October include 125 cases, one of which was unfounded.
Police reported three drug cases for the month, bringing to 73 the total for 1976. Twelve driving while intoxicated cases were reported. There have been 117 DWI cases in 1976.
Mills said that while there were more class 2 crimes in the first 10 months of 1976 than during the same time in 1975, police were able to clear more class 2 crimes in 1976 than 1975.
There have been 1,537 class 2 crimes reported in the first 10 months of 1976, an increase of 61 cases over the same period in 1975.
Police cleared 1,066 class 2 crimes during the first 10 months of 1976 for an increase of 162 cases over the same time in 1975.

$2 million ransom paid

MUNSTER, West Germany (AP) — A kidnapped West German supermarket heir and Olympic horseman was freed today for a $2 million ransom, police said.
Hendrik Snoek, a reserve rider on West Germany's Olympic equestrian team at Montreal, was released after being held two days.
Snoek, 27, was the second son of a West German supermarket fortune to be kidnapped in the last month.
On Oct. 8, Wolf Gutberlet, 32, who with his father owned a chain of supermarkets and drugstores in the state of Hesse, was kidnapped at Fulda and held for seven days before being ransomed for $800,000. In that case, police quickly arrested three of four suspected kidnapers and recovered the money.
As in the Gutberlet kidnaping, police hushed up Snoek's abduction until he was released.
Snoek was assistant to his father in the management of the Ratio supermarket chain in Westphalia, which is West German horse country.
For thousands of years dates have been one of the chief foods of the people in the dry lands near the Mediterranean sea.
