

In Pampa, drive-ins enjoy happy days

By TIM PALMER
Pampa News Staff

Carhops, curbside dining and after-school socializing may, to some, be but visions of a by-gone era... but in Pampa the drive-in still enjoys happy days. An Associated Press story recently reported "the demise of the drive-in." The story reasoned that they had been replaced by fast food franchises that dispense cross-the-counter hamburgers, tacos and fried chicken to take out." The McDonald's - Burger King - Taco Bell chains, however, have yet to link Pampa in their expansions and rival the drive-in business.

The AP further mourned the passing of Mel's Drive-In in San Francisco, "a key locale for the movie 'American Graffiti,' a nostalgic look at an era when drive-ins were teenage social centers."

reported trend away from curbside dining in larger cities. "I don't think the days of the drive-in are past by far," said Carl Lawrence, Caldwell's last manager. "It's a good business; business was all right here." But after 14 years, Lawrence decided to retire.

others as roving autos cruise around the circular drive.

The circle has a special appeal to the high schoolers. It divides the drive-in into two sides: students park on the left, passing by the right side and its fewer, adult customers.

"They say they can drive in and see if any of their friends are here on this side," Ms. Newsome explained, pointing to the left. "And they park and can see if their parents are here on the other side."

The younger customers do not drive the older ones away, Ms. Newsome said. "Kids behave themselves here. When I was a kid we gave Mr. Lawrence a hard time; I don't know why, we just did. The kids here don't do us that way. They're real sweet."

Drive-ins continue to reap a large revenue from their high school patrons. Reporting on their demise in Pampa, then, might be a bit premature.

"It's always been that way," said Pat Newsome, assistant manager at Sonic Drive-In. "My mother grew up here and she says everybody used to go to the place that's now Kenney's Steer Inn. Then when I was a teenager we'd go to Caldwell's. Now everybody comes to Sonic."

The closing, however, is not part of

New York fire burns through warehouses

NEW YORK (AP) — The biggest fire here in eight years burned through a complex of vacant warehouses near the Hudson River in lower Manhattan early Saturday. Nine firemen suffered minor injuries.

The seven-alarm blaze started in the Raleigh Warehouse at 10:30 p.m. Friday and spread to three neighboring buildings before it was brought under control about 9:15 a.m. Saturday.

High winds gusting to 30 miles per hour hampered efforts to put out the flames in the five and six story frame structures.

About 300 fire fighters using 50 pieces of apparatus fought the blaze which reached "city alarm" status at 2:43 a.m. after passing the five-alarm stage.

The Fire Department said the citywide alarm, which calls for help from other boroughs, was the first in the city since an explosion at a Queens factory eight years ago that went to 13 alarms.

Icy roads heat up salt on snow debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The great debate over whether to put salt on icy roads heats up each year with the first snowfall. This winter each side is armed with a big, new study proving it's right — to the tune of billions of dollars.

The Salt Institute, representing the world's largest salt producers, has released a 140-page study that claims using road salt gives the nation $18.4 billion in benefits each year.

Environmentalists who say excessive salt harms the ecology and threatens health have rallied around a recent federally-sponsored study that said salt causes $2.7 billion in damage each year. They claim the total would be higher if potential health hazards were included.

The salt industry study, conducted by the Institute for Safety Analysis, calculated that delays of up to three hours because of snowy roads could cause as many as 472 additional deaths in the United States each year. It said about 2,000 traffic fatalities occur annually during snow and ice conditions.

But the institute, a Washington-based consulting firm, admitted there is a certain amount of guesswork in estimating both the benefits and the hazards of salting the roads.

The institute's researchers said that in the absence of hard data, they had to make assumptions in calculating how many accident victims might die if medical help were delayed by bad road conditions.

The report said the chance of motor vehicle accidents are 47 times higher on a snowy day than on a dry winter day. Other studies also show that the injury rate per million vehicle miles before snow from a storm is cleared is 650 per cent higher than the dry day rate, it said.

In addition to reducing accidents and saving lives, the report estimated that drivers can save hundreds of millions of dollars in fuel alone each year on roads cleared by salt. A Salt Institute spokesman said cars use 50 per cent more fuel to push through two inches of snow.

The study of salt's ill effects was sponsored by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and conducted by Abt Associates, a Cambridge, Mass., consulting firm. It estimated that salt causes $2 billion worth of damage each year by rusting cars and trucks.

The report also estimated damage to highways and bridges at $500 million, to water supplies at $150 million, trees $50 million and utilities $10 million.

The Salt Institute admitted there are adverse effects, but put the total cost at about $800,000.

The EPA study said salt running off roads gets into water supplies and could be a hazard to those with high blood pressure and heart disease.

The Salt Institute study said other medical authorities conclude sodium in drinking water from road salt is too low to be a major health hazard.

The study said salt was the best material available to clear roads and control road ice.

The industry spokesman said his organization's 4-year-old "Sensible Salting" training program for road officials has greatly reduced instances of oversalting that were common in the past.

Grover Cleveland was originally named Stephen Grover Cleveland, but he dropped the name Stephen in his youth.

'You can please all of the...'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter Inaugural Committee sent out approximately 300,000 invitations in hopes of pleasing everyone, but some people who worked for Jimmy Carter's election are unhappy.

Some who spent more than a year seeking his election didn't get an invitation; some Republicans who opposed him at every stage did.

"In an operation the magnitude of a presidential inauguration, and given the short period of time within which there is to plan this program, mistakes are bound to be made, and some were made," said Vicki Rogers, a co-chairman of the Inaugural Committee.

"Presently, we are in the process of checking our invitation lists and correcting the errors regarding the mechanics of the process. By next week, most of our mistakes will be corrected."

The mistakes and irregularities have been of a various nature:

—A local railroad executive was asked to be host at one of the inaugural parties, although he had not been invited to the party himself.

—A campaign worker in northern Virginia was asked to submit a list of 10 colleagues who deserved an invitation; she did, but none of the 10 names she submitted received invitations nor did she.

—A Maryland man who campaigned for Carter for two years drove more than 27,000 miles in his own automobile and donated more than $700; he has not been invited to any inaugural party, but knows three Republicans who were.

The Carter Inaugural Committee concedes that there have been many mistakes, which it blames on a foul-up by its computer.

"We have aggressively planned a series of free public events in Washington for inaugural week," Miss Rogers said.

NAACP opposes Bell

NEW YORK (AP) — The executive committee of the NAACP voted unanimously Saturday to oppose President-elect Carter's nomination of Griffin Bell as U.S. attorney general because of what the organization called Bell's questionable civil rights record.

The executive committee's position is expected to be adopted by the NAACP's national executive board when it meets here on Monday.

San Antonio Fair may survive

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico's huge annual trade fair at San Antonio may survive a reorganization and reduction in funds of the Mexican Foreign Trade Institute, officials said today.

A spokesman for the Institute said the Mexican government will make a decision later this month to reduce most of its foreign trade fairs, but added that the fairs in Madrid and San Antonio "may survive."

Spokesman Rene Gonzalez said the decision to eliminate the fairs was the result of a 40 per cent reduction in the institute's budget and a change in strategy aimed at concentrating in established markets.

Gonzalez said the fact that the San Antonio trade fair is one of the most successful could save it.

"For every peso we invested in the San Antonio exhibit, we recovered 32," Gonzalez said. But he said the final decision on which fairs are eliminated will be announced later this month.

The change in strategy, the spokesman said, "is intended to give more attention to settled markets, such as the one in the southern United States, and to forget those markets in which we have not been successful."

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-H. V. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Twenty-eight years ago my husband and I adopted a baby girl. I'll call her "Jean." Jean has always known she was a chosen child. Her natural parents had three other children and insisted they couldn't afford to raise a fourth.

Jean, now married with two children of her own, set out to find her biological parents. She succeeded, so she and her husband left their younger child with us and took their 7-year-old son to visit Jean's "real" parents. (She lied, saying they were going to visit her husband's relatives.) Jean told our grandson that they were her "real" parents, and he should call them "Grandma and Grandpa." Naturally, the boy was confused.

In anticipation of Jean's visit, her biological parents had sent out 75 invitations—in the form of a "birth announcement," giving Jean's CURRENT weight, height, name and birth date, but naming THEMSELVES as the proud parents.

Abby, how can people who didn't want a baby 28 years ago now claim her as their own—completely ignoring us who raised her since she was 5 days old?

What do you think of all this? Suddenly we feel excluded and unloved.

PARENTS ONCE REMOVED

DEAR PARENTS: For what may be the best commentary on your understandable dilemma, read on:

DEAR ABBY: I feel an overwhelming need to respond to the letter from the 15-year-old adopted girl who felt it would be a poor "thank you" to her adoptive parents were she to search for her biological parents.

As a mother of three adopted children who know they're adopted, I could fully understand their desire to meet their biological parents. And that desire has absolutely nothing whatsoever to do with the love they have for us—their adoptive parents.

My children have given me the greatest pleasure of my life. Of course we have had our problems, all families do, but the love we have for each other far outweighs the problems, and will last forever.

Every child loves more than just his parents. There are grandparents, friendly, eventually a mate, and then children of their own whom they will love. When we love, it doesn't mean there's less love for someone else; it only increases our capacity to love. And if ever my children come to know and love their natural parents, it will show that they grew up in an atmosphere where love was not something that had to be held tightly and exclusively, for fear that it would be lost.

For my children to search for their biological parents is no more threatening to me than their search for a mate. I need no more "thank you" than just having been allowed the privilege of raising them, and sharing their joys and sorrows.

A GRATEFUL MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: An uncommonly civilized viewpoint, beautifully stated.

DEAR ABBY: My mother passed away early in November after a lingering illness. She knew she was dying, and her last wish was that my sister's son go ahead and get married on the scheduled date, which will take place in about three weeks.

My question: Do you think my three sisters and I should attend the wedding in our mourning clothes? And should we dance?

IN MOURNING

DEAR IN: Don't sadden an otherwise happy occasion by appearing in mourning clothes. (Your mother wouldn't have wanted you to.) Dress as you normally would for a wedding, but don't dance.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I have diverticulosis. Many years ago my internist showed me the X rays with a number of pockets coming out of my colon. At that time the doctor said I could eat most anything but to stay away from seeds and nuts. Three summers ago I started eating corn on the cob again and haven't had any new problems due to the corn. Can I eat seeds, nuts and tomato skins again? I am going to try using All-Bran for bulk.

I have gas some days. It is always worse after dinner, but it doesn't bother me after breakfast or lunch. Why?

DEAR READER: A certain amount of gas in the digestive system — and in some cases most of it — comes from swallowing air. Since this goes on all day, the largest amount of gas accumulates by evening before your evening meal. So you notice the gas more when you add more space-occupying food at that time.

During the night you don't swallow air, and your digestive system is fairly empty of gas. So you don't notice the gas after breakfast or lunch.

The gas is probably trapped because of spasm of your colon. This commonly goes along with diverticulosis. Many specialists now think the pockets are small ruptures through the wall of the colon as a result of colon spasms. The spasms are thought to be related to a diet that doesn't contain enough cereal fiber.

The only reason for not eating seeds, nuts and skins is the concern that one of these may become impacted in one of the little pockets, block it and cause it to act like an acute appendix. A good plan is to try to modify your diet by

Polly's pointers

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY: My answer is for Pearl who complained about having to buy milk in quart or half-gallon containers and then having it spoil before it could all be used. That is really no problem. You can freeze what you think you will not need right away. Divide milk into plastic containers or cartons (not glass) and freeze. When ready to use, bring out of the freezer and let melt. You'll be surprised, for it tastes the same as when bought. I know. We tried it after being away for three weeks. It is not necessary to waste milk. Good luck! — HELEN P.

Mackie designs suits to flatter

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK — (NEA) — If the average American woman found herself face to face with the Good Fairy one day, outside of Robert Redford, what would she ask for?

Cole of California, the swimwear firm, thought about that and decided most of them would grab her by the wand and shout, "Cher! Make me look like Cher!"

So with a corporate smile on its lips, the company took Bob Mackie to lunch and said, look, we know you're responsible for Cher's wardrobes and that you're probably the most successful costume designer in television.

You've won three Emmy Awards. You've been dressing every single person who appears on "The Carol Burnett Show" for the past 10 years. Like we said, you put Cher in sparklers and spangles, and between the two shows, you work seven days a week to provide costumes for roughly 35 people.

Then there are the cabaret wardrobes you create for Diana Ross, Gwen Verdon, Raquel Welch, Mitzi Gaynor, even Peggy Fleming.

Well, we don't think you have enough to do. We think it's time you tackled ready-to-wear and started relating to those lovely ladies out there who make it possible for us to take you to such a nice restaurant.

We'll make it worth your while, the company said, nudging Mackie with its corporate elbow. Why not design a line of swim-and-afterwear for us? Who knows but those lovely ladies out there may think by wearing it, they'll sort of resemble Cher?

"I would like to do other things," Mackie replied as they got down to dollars and cents.

Now, Mackie's Beach and Beyond collection for Cole of California is in the stores. It consists of maillots, bikinis, sarong and cutout swimsuits that begin at $29, and cover-ups — caftans, robes and playclothes — that stop around $90.

"It's doing very well," he reported during a recent visit to New York.

Slightly built, wearing a bow tie and easily mistaken for a young chorus boy, he was sitting in a dressing room off the beachwear department in Saks Fifth Avenue, where models had just finished two mini showings of his clothes.

"Now, it all seems so clear and lucid, but at first, I was insecure about every area."

But he didn't rush, he took his time "trying to come up with the right stripes and the right kind of jersey — I wanted to get away from that sleazy look jersey can have."

And he found that there are similarities in designing for television and ready-to-wear. "The human body, for instance," he said, grinning. "I deal with stars and their bodies aren't any better than anyone else's. Every once in a while you get a fabulous one like Cher who can wear any style, but otherwise they have the same problems every other woman has."

BOB MACKIE: "I deal with stars and their bodies aren't any better than anyone else's."

He wouldn't say who had what problems, but they include bow legs, long waists, short waists, thick thighs, "and behinds that are too big. And some stars look better in pantyhose at the beach."

It's the camera you have to keep in mind in television because it does strange things. "On television, stripes can start moving and there's nothing worse than a lady singing a song with her dress creating a rainbow effect."

You don't put a chubby woman in "white sequins" and if a dancer's legs are strongly developed, "I raise the leg line on the costume to make the legs look longer."

BATHING SUITS such as this stripe diamond mio cut out are designed by Bob Mackie to flatter a woman's figure. The design in nylon and spandex is for Cole of California.

FLATTERING maillot in nylon and spandex for beach and pool wear this season flatters problem figures. Bob Mackie design for Cole of California is a one-shoulder, front-slit mio in body-slimming solid color.

doesn't matter as long as the body is young."

But no matter what your body looks like, "I think it's silly to worry about it. Everybody should go to the beach. You know that first five minutes in a bathing suit is terrible for everyone." Even Cher?

Names in the news

BOSTON (AP) — Only Orson Welles could do it.

In what was billed as his first stage performance in 17 years, Welles drew 2,000 persons, many of college age, to Symphony Hall despite a storm that dumped more than a foot of snow on the city.

Welles, 61, won standing ovations at the beginning and end of his appearance Friday night.

For 90 minutes, Welles — dressed entirely in black, down to a black cane he carried — told stories and answered questions.

Finally, he recited — in a Yiddish accent — two speeches of the villainous Jew Shylock from Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice."

And as an encore, he recited Mark Antony's funeral oration from "Julius Caesar" — "Friends, Romans, countrymen," etc. He said he had always wanted to play the role and never had.

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Film star Omar Sharif is engaged to the latest sex queen of Egyptian movies, Soheir Ramzy. Sharif was divorced last year from the Egyptian screen's foremost actress, Faten Hamama, after more than 18 years of marriage on the grounds that their profession kept them apart.

Miss Ramzy's mother said her 30-year-old daughter and Sharif, 45, became engaged at a party on Thursday attended by family and close friends.

In her latest film, Miss Ramzy plays a film star who is murdered by her fiancée because of her sexual involvement with a number of men.

The movie, considered daring by contemporary Egyptian standards, has been running in Cairo for two months.

Miss Ramzy has been married and divorced three times. Her first husband was a musician, her second a Saudi Arabian prince and her third an Egyptian millionaire.

PAGO PAGO, American Samoa (AP) — Frank Barnett, a former FBI agent, has been installed as governor of American Samoa in a colorful ceremony conducted by traditional chiefs.

Barnett, 43, a Tennessee lawyer, was appointed lieutenant governor of the island territory two years ago. He was appointed governor by Interior Secretary Thomas S. Kleppe last Dec. 10.

Tattooed chiefs wearing traditional garb bestowed the title of "paramount chief" on Barnett by sprinkling his head with the juice of a coconut, then gave him gifts of Samoan food and a finely woven red mat.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Grand Ole Opry comedian Jerry Clower will be cited by the Southern Baptist Radio and Television Commission for "sharing his great gift for laughter in a world that desperately needs mirth."

The award ceremony for the Yazoo City, Miss., native will be next month in Fort Worth, Tex.

Fiedler deserved...and got...a medal

By JULES LOH
AP Newfeatures Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Lucky for the country, the White House got its invitation list straightened out. It wouldn't be much of a party without that grand old music maker. Besides, America owes him one.

Arthur Fiedler, of course. Remember the party he gave us all last Fourth of July? When his baton came down and his Boston Pops Orchestra swung into "The 1812 Overture," cannon boomed and tympany banged and 400,000 people lining both sides of the Charles River, young people mostly, clapped and whistled and waved big flags and unabashedly cheered a nation many among them were more used to sneering at.

Some who watched on TV thought Arthur Fiedler ought to get a medal. Monday at the White House, he will.

President Ford will give him the nation's highest civilian honor, the Medal of Freedom — and perhaps also an apology on behalf of the clerk who left Fiedler's name off the list when the 21 other recipients were announced last week.

That oversight, decidedly a sour note, didn't faze the maestro.

"I had already been informed, so I was a bit surprised when I didn't see my name in the paper. They called to say it was a clerical error."

He shrugged. "I hope the President isn't embarrassed. I wasn't."

The medal clearly isn't for that one memorable Bicentennial performance but for the contribution Arthur Fiedler, in his 47 years as conductor of the Boston Pops has made to his art and his country.

He admits, though, that musical purists sniff at his democratic way of leavening heavy symphonic fare with "gumdrops" as Fiedler calls the light selections that end his concerts. That doesn't faze the maestro either.

"I think the snobs are missing something," he said the other day, having been persuaded to hold still a minute for an interview.

"There's no boundary line between music. One overlaps the other. There is relaxation in lighter music — and lighter art and lighter literature. And some of the highbrows have now discovered there can be wonderful light music.

"By the same token," he said. "People who have never been to a symphony concert come to ours and discover the beauty of the heavier stuff. Many have become regular patrons of the Boston Symphony."

Arthur Fiedler at 83 still has more energy than two men half his age. He's hard to catch.

He's always dashing off to conduct some orchestra somewhere.

Last year, he made 164 appearances outside of Boston, in cities all over the country, and that's since being cautioned to slow down after three heart attacks. One year he made 196 appearances. No wonder he quit sticking pins in the map on his office wall in 1962; there was hardly any more room. At home he has another pin cushion map — of the world.

One thing about Arthur Fiedler, in white tie and tails, baton uplifted, he simply looks like a conductor. But in sport coat and slacks, an empty can of soda on his desk, firemen's hats crowded on shelves — he's a fire buff, ever has his own fire engine, a family gift on his 75th birthday — a big brass ship's bell on the spinet piano, one feels he is not in the presence of a famous musician, but of a favorite old uncle.

Tell us, maestro, what do you symbolize to America?

"It is my country, but I'm not chauvinistic about it. I make music, not patriotism."

"I was the first American to conduct the Boston Pops — I did not start it, there were 17 conductors before me — and when I became conductor in 1930, most of the musicians were foreigners. They looked down their noses at American music. Their hearts weren't in it."
