Ready and waiting, Mr. President

President Jimmy Carter, commander-in-chief of the armed forces, will oversee U.S. Army recruiting efforts in the recruiting substation at 115 N. Cuyler. That is, as soon as the new president's official portrait arrives. Sgt. Carlos Diaz, recruiter, was ready for the change Thursday when he removed Gerald Ford's picture and put up the empty frame for Jimmy Carter's likeness. (Pampa News photo by Gene Anderson)

Carter keeps promise, grants full amnesty

WASHINGTON (AP) — In his first executive order, President Carter today fulfilled his campaign promise and granted a full, complete and unconditional pardon to all Vietnam draft evaders who were not involved in any violent act.

Deserters from the military forces were not included, but Carter ordered an immediate study of their cases and also of the possible upgrading of bad conduct or undesirable discharges.

Press Secretary Jody Powell said there are "no good estimates of the number of persons that might be affected" by the pardon but that it is probably "well up to the hundreds of thousands, including people who failed to register for the draft. There are an unknown number of persons whose failure to register has never come to official attention."

Draft evaders who are now overseas may return home under Carter's action, Powell said.

Those who have become citizens of another country can come home to visit families "without fear of prosecution," but if they wish to regain American citizenship they will have to apply under the same terms and conditions as any other alien, he said.

Other activities today for Carter included opening the White House doors to his friends.

During his campaign, President Carter often spent the night with supporters, promising to invite his hosts to the White House some day. For some of the families Carter roomed with, today is the day.

Between 600 and 800 of them, including their families, are arriving for a reception.

It's part of the Carters' second day of celebrations marking his inaugural as 39th President of the United States. Virtually all day is taken up with White House parties.

But the new President and his wife, Rosalynn, will highlight their first full day in the White House with a party for some of the people they find closest to their hearts: The renowned "Peanut Brigade" of campaign workers from Carter's home state of Georgia who helped propel him into the executive office.

The "Peanut Brigade" was invited to a late afternoon celebration with the Carters, Georgia Gov. George Busbee and the state's congressional delegation.

"You're partners of mine," Carter told the Georgians as he wound up a blitz of partygoing Thursday. "Together, I'm sure we'll reach for greatness. We'll be seeing you tomorrow, a lot of you."

The Georgians were at the last of seven inaugural balls the Carters attended Thursday night before calling it quits at 12:30 a.m. Carter's mother, Miss Lillian, was there and waved from the balcony of the District of Columbia Armory as her son and Rosalynn danced on stage to "Red Roses for a Blue Lady."

Daughter Amy, 9, joined her parents at two of the balls. Her father asked her to wave, and she did. Clutching a bouquet of pink roses tied with a pink ribbon, she perched on the front edge of a red-carpeted hotel stage while her parents waltzed and shook hands.

All the hoopla in this partyhappy town is because Carter was successful in his early efforts during the primaries. That success is partly attributable to those who gave Carter, the then-lonely campaigner, a place for a meeting or a room to sleep in.

"When I began, I didn't have much money," Carter says about those early primary days. "We walked the streets, went into barber shops and beauty parlors and restaurants and stood in factory shift lines, farmers' markets, livestock sale barns, country court houses and city halls."

And when night came, Carter looked to friends for lodging.

So it was he found Paul and Vickie Landry and Lucille Kelley and Peter Hance and hundreds of others like them who let him share a room or a meal or both.

The Landrys in Manchester, N.H., now call their second-floor guest room, where Carter spent a night, "The Jimmy Carter Room."

The Landrys and other hosts remember Carter as the best of guests. In the mornings, he would make his bed and leave his room as if no one had been there.

The President is remembered, too, as open and friendly.

"After a tiring day, his feet were sore. He went upstairs, took his coat and tie off, took his shoes and socks off, came down barefoot and sat in the living room and had cookies and milk," Landry recalls.

Another Carter host, Peter Hance of Laconia, N.H., remembers Carter as "Jimmy Who?" driving around "with Jody Powell in a rented Datsun." Powell is now White House press secretary.

That night it was 20 below outside, and we didn't turn up the thermostat. We figured it was about time a Southerner learned what it was like to be a Yankee during the winter and during a fuel shortage," says Hance, joining others at today's reception.

Lucille Kelley, one of Carter's earliest supporters, remembers going to a sandwich shop with the candidate one night and buying a fig bar to take home.

"The next morning he wanted one for breakfast," she says. "He put an inch of peanut butter on it. That struck me so funny, but he really likes peanut butter."

The Carters, who surprised many by walking a mile and a half from the Capitol to the White House after Thursday's inauguration, showed little signs of tiring in the whirl of parties and dances. "You noticed I got a lot of exercise today," he told partygoers.

"I believe it's time public officials like myself show we trust the American people," he said, referring to the risks in such a long, open walk.

Carter also had energy enough to give reporters a look at the Oval Office, and told them he had held his first executive conference with assistant Hamilton Jordan and White House Counsel Robert Lipshutz.

Carter sat behind large desk that held five books and a pen and pencil set. The room was sparsely furnished, and some of the books on the shelves had been there during his predecessor's tenure.

The President said he would decorate the office with photos of his wife and family.

CBer jailed for language

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The operator of a citizens band radio has been sentenced to a year in prison on charges including the broadcast of indecent language.

U.S. District Judge William E. Steckler said he believed Lewis L. Simpson, 31, of Indianapolis, was one of the first persons convicted on such a charge.

A jury found Simpson guilty of one charge of using indecent language and six charges of operating a CB radio without a license.

Witnesses testified that transmissions by Simpson, who used the handle "Sly Fox," were received on televisions, radios and telephones in his neighborhood. He operated the radio at home, officials said.

FBI uncovers $1 billion con

EL PASO, Tex. (AP) — The FBI says it has uncovered an elaborate scheme in which two men posed as high Mexican officials in an effort to convince the intended victims to loan $1 billion for the Mexican government.

Six men have been arrested by FBI agents in El Paso and Miami in connection with the alleged scheme.

According to an FBI affidavit, the scheme involved getting investors to put up $1 billion as a loan for the Mexican government. The loan would be paid at a 9.3 per cent interest rate for 20 years.

Those named by the FBI as possible intended victims were El Paso real estate man Johnny George Martin, Calvin Buehrer and Robert A. Leighton of Chicago and Canadian lawyer William Momotuk, of Hamilton, Ont.

The FBI identified those arrested Tuesday night as Armando Aguilar, 48, and Miguel Angel Chavez Delgado, 58, both of Mexico City; Luis Silva Anchondo, 34, Rogelio Sanchez, 46, Adrian Ricardo Flores Crosby Jr., 42, and Alfredo Silva Cisneros, 42, of El Paso. They were charged with conspiracy to commit wire fraud, the FBI said.

Anchondo, Silva Cisneros, Sanchez and Flores Crosby were arrested in El Paso and arraigned before U.S. Magistrate Jamie Boyd Aguilar and Chavez Delgado were arrested in Miami, the FBI said.

According to the FBI affidavit, Flores Crosby contacted Martin and introduced him to Aguilar and Silva Anchondo, who claimed to be high Mexican government officials.

They came on as very high up in the government. Martin told the El Paso Times. They said it was basically an official and an unofficial venture into the market, if I could find the money.

Martin was offered a finder's fee of $4 million. He suggested to Aguilar and Silva Anchondo that they contact Buehrer and Leighton, who were also promised a share of the finder's fee.

Buehrer declined to comment when contacted by the Times. Leighton, told the FBI that Martin told him the Mexican government was willing to borrow the $1 billion for 20 years at 9.3 per cent interest.

Leighton also told the FBI he contacted Momotuk who told him he could probably raise the money.

But Momotuk later told a newsman he "didn't bite" when he was offered the deal and added he doubted it "because if the Mexican government wants this money, they would be making a formal representation."

The FBI affidavit said Momotuk had been represented to Martin as "the secretary of one or more pension funds in Canada."

The FBI said an attempt was made also to get the money

Lefors sets blood record

LEFORS — A new record was set during the blood drive Wednesday here. A total of 73 pints of blood were given, topping a previous high of 54 units donated in September.

Mrs. Wayne Moxon, drive chairman, said she was pleased with the turnout, which totaled approximately ten per cent of the local population. Donor to population ratios on the national level average only 3 to 5 per cent, she said.

The bloodmobile was from Coffee Memorial Blood Center in Amarillo. Director of the center, Jerry Henderson, said the results of the drive were especially gratifying, due to a dire need for blood at this time through a bank in the Bahamas. Leighton admitted to the FBI that he had visited the Bahamas and discussed the deal with two Mexicans.

The transaction was at a standstill when the FBI moved in.

No date has been set for the next bloodmobile visit to Lefors, but Mrs. Moxon said the schedule includes three drives annually. "People like to be sure they've given at least once a year to keep their blood insurance in force," she said.

Asked about a goal set for the next drive, she said, "We'd like to surpass this one."

China makes nuclear missiles

TOKYO (AP) — A Peking newspaper reported today that China has succeeded in manufacturing missiles with nuclear warheads. The Kyodo news service reported from the Chinese capital.

The Japanese correspondent said the Kwangming Daily, an organ of Chinese minority parties, reported "China succeeded in the trial manufacture of atomic and hydrogen bombs and nuclear-armed missiles at a relatively early date after the founding of the People's Republic, ending the monopoly of such weapons by the Russian revisionists and American imperialists."

Kyodo said this was the first confirmation that the Chinese were now manufacturing nuclear-armed missiles.

The dispatch said the article was written by a group of theoreticians among officials of the national defense industry.

The Kyodo report did not give further details.

The Chinese exploded their first nuclear test in 1964, 13 years after the Communists completed their conquest of mainland China. They have set off 20 atomic or hydrogen bombs since then. Reports from Peking in November after the 21st test said Western military sources in Peking concluded that the test indicated the Chinese had completed a hydrogen warhead for long-range missiles.

The sources also said the Chinese were believed to have developed ICBMs (intercontinental ballistic missiles) with a range of 2,000 to 4,000 miles. Since July, 1975, the Chinese have launched four earth satellites, and one in November 1975 was reported to have been recovered on the ground.

10-year-old reports on Carter inauguration

EDITORS: The 10-year-old son of Associated Press Science Writer Brian Sullivan received his own invitation to the inauguration of President Carter. He came, and here, in his words (and his spelling) as he wrote them longhand, is his report.

By CRAIG W. SULLIVAN
For The Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first thing that happened at the Inauguration was the marine band played a few songs. A black chorus sang a couple of songs after that. Then the speaker of the house said a few words. The black chorus sang three songs. They were, Hail to the Chief, Hooray for the red white and blue, and America the Beautiful.

The Inauguration took place at the Capitol. The Capitol had a statue at the top of the building. It looked sort of like the statue of Liberty. There were a couple of policemen at the top of the building. At noon Walter Mondale was sworn in. At twelve o two Jimmy Carter was sworn in.

In about the beginning of September I wrote to Jimmy Carter. I got a postcard responding back.

Then on December 29, 1976 I got an invitation to the Inauguration. That's how I got to be here. After both Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale got sworn in, some cannons started shooting bomb sounds.

Around the middle of the Inauguration the wind started to blow. It got bitter cold. After Jimmy Carter got sworn in he made a speech he told about what he was going to do and some things about the Ford family and some other things. On our way to the Capitol for the Inauguration they were setting up for '77 Inauguration parade. I saw Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale in the parade.

There was an enormous crowd at the Inauguration. The crowd was all around the Capitol back yard grounds. On my way up to the Capitol I walked past some very nice buildings. It was a very long walk. After the Inauguration we walked a little ways looking for a cab but we couldn't find any. We ended up walking all the way back to the Hotel. The Inauguration was a great experience, for me. I liked it very much.

Where did our street go?

It would appear that city planners got a little ahead of themselves when installing intersection markers in Skellytown. In fact, it isn't even an actual intersection since 8th Street really isn't there. And the only traffic appears to be a small animal from time to time.

The Achilles heel

It was almost ludicrous to watch the oil consuming nations wring their hands in anguish concerned over whether oil producing nations would freeze proposed increases in petroleum prices, raise them nominally or sock it to the industrialized world.

If price increases alone are our concern then we can count the score as a touchdown for the oil producing countries or a touchback for the Western world. But to dismiss the subject at that point would exhibit that we have failed to grasp the enormity of the disaster we are facing. We are examining the wart when the problem might be terminal industrial cancer.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries affects the destiny of our country. OPEC has the power to increase inflation and underemployment half the twenty-century old industrial revolution push least developed countries into bankruptcy and even advance communism in Europe.

Disaster is not too strong a word to describe the effects of the OPEC decision to raise prices from $2.75 to about $12 per barrel in 1973 and 1975. The increased price of energy has meant a loss of about $600 billion in gross national product to consuming nations, pushed the debts of the least developed nations to an uncollectible $170 billion and advanced the strength of the Soviet Union in the United States alone. Quadrupling of oil prices has cost an estimated $200 billion in Gross National Product and at least a million jobs. And that's only a three-year toll.

President Ford is right in denouncing as irresponsible the decision of 11 of 13 OPEC members to raise oil prices by 15 per cent in two steps. His encouragement of Saudi Arabian efforts to hold down oil prices also makes sense although the Saudis must shoulder much of the blame for past oil price increases.

However, one encouraging aspect of the OPEC meeting in Qatar is that it exposes for the first time the vulnerability of the oil cartel. It presents the target on which the Western industrial world can focus.

Historically, the basic contradiction of any cartel is the restraint that it places on its members. No cartel has ever had a long life because it is not to the ultimate advantage of any member to belong to it.

OPEC members have shaved prices in the past, but the spread between the 5 per cent increase that Saudi Arabia and Abu Dhabi approved and the 15 per cent of others in the cartel hardly can be termed shaving.

The oil consuming world should lose no time in taking advantage of this potential Achilles heel even as it braces for the additional economic havoc that higher energy prices will bring.

Letters to editor

Editor: Read your article in the paper about the test our new school superintendent passed and I personally am very unhappy about it. He agreed to the salary when he took the position and I, for one, am tired of increasing anything in our school system until we see some sign of someone doing something about the things that need to be done and living one block from the high school I can assure you there is much to be done.

Also, I hold down two jobs to pay my bills right now and as things are going there is no strength for another job. If the people of Pampa do not stand up and be counted, we deserve what we get.

When are people in authority going to be able to see that we, the working people, are paying these wage increases and our wages are not increasing, but everything else is.

Our school board isn't made up of the working class (middle income) people and do not realize exactly what they are doing to the ordinary people of Pampa.

I for one would like that $3000 test to be retaken and flunked.

"RUNNING AGAIN? WAL, YOU MIGHT SAY I'M LEANING IN THAT DIRECTION"

INSIDE WASHINGTON

Much juggling still coming

By ROBERT S. ALLEN
WASHINGTON, Jan. 21 — Two things already are clearly certain regarding President Carter's multi-billion-dollar economic stimulus package.

(1) It will look considerably different after being worked over by Congress, with more emphasis on job creating than he proposes in the first of the two-year program.

(2) Carter will accept the congressional changes whether he likes them or not. He is firmly determined to avoid clashing with the overwhelmingly democratic legislative body — at least at the start.

It's entirely possible Carter himself may shift on job creating. The pressures on him are powerful and insistent both in and out of Congress.

So much so the inside word is that when he formally submits his plan to Congress, the announced ratio of tax cuts and job creating will be modified to favor the latter.

Under the original formula, the package for this year consists of four-fifths tax cuts and one-fifth increases in public spending to create jobs for an overall stimulative total of $12 to $16 billion. For 1978, tax reduction would be smaller while the job component would be enlarged to between two-fifths and one-half of a total of around $16 billion.

But regardless of what Carter does, rank- and-file congressional sentiment leans strongly toward more job creating.

Legislators are by no means averse to cutting taxes, far from it. But they also urgently want more concrete action aimed at reducing unemployment — and are determined to get it.

Turning on the Heat
The $2 billion proposed by Carter for job stimulation this year is virtually certain to be doubled — if not more.

The AFL-CIO is demanding $5 billion. And that's not just empty talk. High-powered labor lobbying and pressuring is already in full stride not only in Washington but in home states and districts. Both lawmakers and the Carter administration are feeling the heat, and it will intensify as the program nears House and Senate consideration.

Illustrative of the tough bearing down being applied is a forceful position paper by the Council of National Priorities and Resources, headed by Robert Nathan, prominent liberal economist going back to the New Deal.

The CNPR declares flatly the "economic indicators are very ominous" and immediate potent measures are needed to avert a full-scale recession.

"The unemployment rate has climbed to 8.1 per cent," points out the CNPR, "and real GNP growth in the third quarter slowed to 3.8 per cent, which is inadequate to provide jobs for new entrants into the labor force. The GNP gap is still running at an annual rate of over $200 billion in current prices. In fact, the gap widened in the last quarter."

"As the index of economic indicators makes clear, things are not getting better. They are getting worse. Weaker than expected capital spending, an $18 billion shortfall in federal spending, the OPEC hike in oil prices, increasing state and local budget problems and balance-of-trade deficits add to the prospect of a stalled economic recovery and support the absolute requirement for emergency stimulus."

That's the foreboding message being imparted to Congress, and there are plenty of attentive listeners.

Where It Started
The prestigious Committee for Economic Development can claim credit for Vice President Mondale's impending taking soundings trip abroad.

The potentially far-reaching mission grew out of an idea in a report of the independent research and educational organization of 200 leading business executives and educators titled "Strategy for an Enduring Expansion."

President Carter was struck by the suggestion and discussed it with Mondale and close advisers — all of them equally impressed.

Following is the CED proposal, under the subtitle "Attacking Inflation and Unemployment Simultaneously."

"An enduring economic expansion in the United States cannot take place without a sound world economic recovery. We believe, therefore, that the three strongest trading partners — the U.S., West Germany and Japan — need to take the lead in a concerted effort to shape harmonious policies that will promote world economic expansion, while assuring a maximum freedom in international trade and financial transactions."

In a large measure, that is the nucleus of Carter's concept of convening an economic summit conference of the leaders of the major non-Communist industrial nations later this year.

In Mondale's one-week sortie he will seek the views of Western Europe and Japanese authorities on the desirability of such a parley. On his report will depend what happens next — if anything.

To His Head
Sen. Hubert Humphrey is taking seriously that honorary title of Deputy President Pro Tem.

Voted the Minnesota as a consolation prize after his sound trouncing by Sen. Robert Byrd for Majority Leader, Humphrey is insistently demanding the tangible trappings to go with it.

Not only is he getting a hike in pay to $52,000, chauffeured limousine and additional staff help, but he also wants a spacious and ornate office in the Capitol itself.

He considers his four-room suite in the one of the Senate Office Buildings as no longer befitting his newly acquired title — which will cost taxpayers around $250,000 a year.

The difficulty is finding a satisfactory suite in the Capitol building. All already are taken by various Senate leaders. So what to do?

One suggestion is to move the Senate barbershop, where the legislators get free haircuts and shaves, from its decades-old site on the ground floor of the Senate wing of the Capitol, and remodel the place for Humphrey — at an estimated cost of $25,000 or more.

But that idea has run headlong into vehement disapproval from Humphrey's colleagues, who balk at being inconvenienced to shave his ego.

thom marshall's FORUM and against 'em

It was Jesse Mays' car-driving abilities that made it easy for him to find and keep good jobs in 1926 when he was a 19-year-old New Yorker, transplanted from Erick, Okla.

As quick as he had paid his $4 and took a quick, easy drive around the courthouse block for a license test, Jesse was hired by Ward Baking Co. in Brooklyn to run a bread route in one of the company's electric delivery trucks.

It wasn't five months before Jesse had been promoted to a route rider, which was the fellow who worked just under the foreman. There was a route rider and a foreman over every eight routes and when one of the drivers didn't come to work, the route rider took the absentee's route.

"And if all the routes showed up, there was always a cruiser or destroyer in port, or we'd go over to Ellis Island. The company did business with the U.S. Government," Mays explained.

Another part of Jesse's job was teaching new drivers how to drive.

"Oh, they had their license, all right," Mays explained, "but all they'd done was drive around the block. I'd been driving since I was 13."

Pay for a route driver was $28 a week and 8 per cent commission on everything sold over $300. But since Jesse could teach others how to drive and he proved his worth in other ways as well, he was recompensed a bit more liberally than the normal driver.

"Every once in awhile I'd get mad and threaten to quit," Mays said. "I got up to making $45 a week. That's 50 years ago."

One of the biggest sellers the bakery had was the small hard loaf commonly referred to as a "New York roll" — 13 cents a dozen, wholesale.

"New Yorkers would split this roll open and fill it full of butter and that'd be their breakfast," Mays explained.

They could pick one or two of the rolls up at the store on their way to work. Or the wife would come shopping first thing in the morning so she'd be back with the rolls before the husband went to work and the children went to school.

So it was important for a route driver to get his deliveries made on time, early in the morning.

New York was quite segregated in 1926. Immigrants from the various countries lived, worked and shopped each in their own neighborhoods.

The bakery Jesse worked for matched delivery men with neighborhoods — an Italian fellow would deliver to stores and restaurants in the Italian area, and so on. There probably are several federal laws that would prevent such a practice today, but it worked fine for Ward Baking Co. most of the time.

Jewish delivery man did not show up to deliver bakery goods to the Jewish neighborhood.

Jesse, whose forebears hailed from Ireland, was route rider and had to fill in. He got a bit of a later start on the run and hadn't worked that part of Brooklyn before, so he was two hours late when he got to the first stop.

"People had already been there for their rolls," Jesse said. And because the manager of the store had not had rolls to sell the customers, he took his anger out on Jesse.

"And the manager at the next store, he ate me out. And at the next store he ate me out." And Jesse finally got enough of it.

In those days large loaves of rye were delivered and sold unwrapped. If they stayed in a store unsold, the delivery man was supposed to pick them up. But the fellow Jesse was filling in for had left about 10 loaves of that rye on the shelf of one store until it all had gotten quite hard.

Jesse was carrying those 10 loaves of rye when he determined he'd heard sufficient complaining for the time being.

"I turned around and hit him with a loaf," he explained. Well, the bread-bopped store manager called the bakery about the incident and when Jesse got back from his run there was yet another chewing out awaiting him — this one from the boss.

That was it. It was just more than Jesse felt like he had to take, in one day. So he quit. But this time the boss let him.

"I had no intention of quitting," Jesse said. "Every time I quit before, I'd gotten a raise."

He only lost two days' work before he got another job with another bakery. He probably could have gotten a job the very next day, but he couldn't believe he'd really quit.

"I got on the subway the next morning and went down to see if that Ward Baking Co. was still in business," he recalled. "Sure enough, they were open just fine without me."

Worry Beads
Misbaha beads, known to the West as "worry beads," are carried by both Lebanese Christians and Moslems. They help count the number of prayers, and by the rhythm of their clicking tell the mood of the holder — boredom, nervousness, impatience or hostility.

Carter plans to tour nation

By RICHARD E. MEYER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Jimmy Carter will promote his domestic programs with a two-week national tour in March and will open a drive to reach a new strategic arms agreement by October, if he follows a plan that aides hope will give him the image of a "can-do" president.

In a proposed six-month White House agenda, the aides also have suggested.

An economic State of the Union address to Congress week after next.

Meetings next month in Washington with the president of Mexico and the prime minister of Canada; sessions between Feb. 15 and March 5 with officials from Israel and the Arab nations, and a meeting after April 1 with a representative of mainland China.

A speech to the United Nations the week of March 6.

Beginning a National Youth Opportunity Program to create jobs and ending the Office of Telecommunications Policy to eliminate waste and express "commitment to a free and vigorous media."

The 29-page agenda, proposed by aides including pollster Pat Caddell, combines "substantive and political" appraisals of activities necessary in the first six months, and especially the first three months, when initial judgments will be made by the press, the public and Congress about the leadership of the Carter presidency.

It was not known how Carter has responded to the proposals, made in mid- or late December. But some recommendations already have been followed, and top Carter aides have said others will be.

Aides call the agenda "a working paper," not "a master plan," but sources say as far as they know it has not been superseded.

A copy of the agenda was obtained Wednesday by The Associated Press.

It says Carter must play these roles in his first 200 days: The unifier, who heals past divisions; the shaker, who prods the entrenched bureaucracy; the leader, caring and compassionate about the American people; and the manager, energetic and effective in solving national problems.

It is suggested that effective leadership be demonstrated through a series of early legislative victories projecting the image of a "can-do" president," the agenda says.

It adds: "The new administration cannot afford any major early legislative defeats." The word "any" is underlined.

The agenda suggests that Carter announce "a Vietnam veterans unemployment proposal ... prior to the pardon of draft evaders." It says the proposal might be "an employment-related initiative to be incorporated in the economic stimulus package."

"As part of the pardon message, the President might then refer back to the Vietnam veterans' proposal, stating his deep personal feelings that those who served during the war deserve to be honored," the agenda says.

A clubfoot is a congenital deformity in which the foot is twisted and the muscle or tendons of the foot are shortened. It can usually be corrected by means of plaster casts or braces during infancy.

School board 'illegal'?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department has asked a federal court in Houston to disband the board of trustees of a new school district in suburban Houston on grounds that the members were elected illegally.

It was the last suit approved by Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi before he left office at noon.

The civil suit against the board of trustees of the Westheimer Independent School District alleged that the seven members were elected and sworn into office in violation of the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

The department's civil rights division had reviewed plans for the election and determined that the ballot could discriminate against blacks and Mexican-American voters.

Squad pleads guilty

NEW YORK (AP) — Three members of the Savage Skulls "Gestapo squad" pleaded guilty to a brutal assault on a young woman after a detective spent his own time and money to bring the victim back from Puerto Rico.

Before Detective Robert Werner persuaded the still-disfigured 20-year-old woman to return to testify against the gang members, there seemed little hope that Monserrat "The Rat" Irizarry, 21, Melvin Nunez, 21, and Jorge Pierna, 19, would pay for their vicious attack.

But when the trio saw the woman enter a court hearing, Werner said, there was a quick huddle between their attorney and a representative of Bronx

Dist. Atty. Mario Merola's office. The guilty pleas followed.

Their admissions of second-degree assault, reduced from the original charge of first-degree assault, could send them to prison for six years, Merola said.

He praised the 28-year-old Werner for "extraordinary police work which has succeeded in removing these aptly named savages from the streets."

Werner, a member of the youth gang task force, said in an interview at his suburban home that the guilty pleas were "a satisfaction, but only a momentary one."

The Skulls have been around so long that somebody else will take over the Gestapo duties," he said. "We didn't eliminate the Skulls with this, only put a crimp in them and maybe some day we'll wear them down."

The victim of the attack was visiting from Puerto Rico when she rebuffed the sexual overtures of a gang member and he ordered the squad to teach her a lesson.

Caught in a Bronx hallway on the morning of last July 31, she was beaten and stomped with stuffed boots on the face and body until she was almost unrecognizable.

She fled back to Puerto Rico in fear of the gang, but Werner used his vacation time and paid his own airfare to go there and bring her back, promising her protection from the Skulls.

Traffic death rate down

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas traffic death rate is down but the speeding arrest record is up, says Col. Wilson Speir, director of the Department of Public Safety.

Speir, who has recommended raising the 55 mile-per-hour speed limit to 60mph on interstate and major highways, made the report Wednesday to the Public Safety Commission, which sets policy for the DPS.

Speir said there were about one million arrests by DPS troopers in 1976, of which about 800,000 were for speeding. In 1975 only 69 per cent of the arrests were for speeding.

Speir said preliminary traffic death reports show an estimated toll of 3,310 in 1976, a reduction of 3.5 per cent from the 1975 death toll of 3,429.

He said the death rate per 100 million miles was 3.6 deaths, the lowest in the state's history. The ratio in 1975 was 4.7 deaths per 100 million miles and in 1973, the last year of the 70mph limit, the rate was 4.6.

Henry says nation needs quiet

NEW YORK (AP) — Henry A. Kissinger, ending his eight years of service in the White House and as secretary of state today, said he believes what the nation needs most "is a period of tranquility and confidence."

Kissinger, in an interview with the New York Times, said he leaves office with mixed feelings of regret and cautious optimism.

"My first feeling after Nov. 2, was one of enormous relief that I was no longer responsible for what might happen after Jan. 20," he said. "Now the feeling is one of some emptiness because I realize that while I am not responsible, I can also not influence events."

Kissinger said that for the first time in almost a generation the nation is not at war, it has survived the constitutional crisis of Watergate, has improved relations with China and the Soviet Union and some progress has been made on arms control.

However, Kissinger said one of his regrets is that he has to leave the Western nations poorly organized to deal with the oil cartel.

Another regret was the slow progress on the limitation of strategic arms.

But he said there are some bright possibilities ahead for the nation.

"I think for 1977 we have some rather positive prospects," he said. "I think in 1977 a SALT agreement ought to be attainable. The objective conditions for making peace in the Middle East are better than they have been since the creation of Israel."

"I don't want to put my successor on the spot by pretending it will be easy," Kissinger said. "It will be murderously difficult, complicated ef-

Tate said the new projects are public speaking, crocheting and knitting and any interested 4-H member should contact the Extension office, 669-7429.

"Also, there is still time to get into a foods and nutrition project," Tate added.

Boy bought for $3,000

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Colorado man accused of buying a 12-year-old boy for $3,000 last year has been charged with felony child molestation, police said.

Police investigator Lloyd Martin said Earl Jordan, 47, of Colorado Springs, was charged Wednesday. He was arrested Monday at his Van Nuys apartment after officers were notified by Colorado authorities.

The boy, who was not identified, was also found at the apartment and was placed in protective custody, officers said.

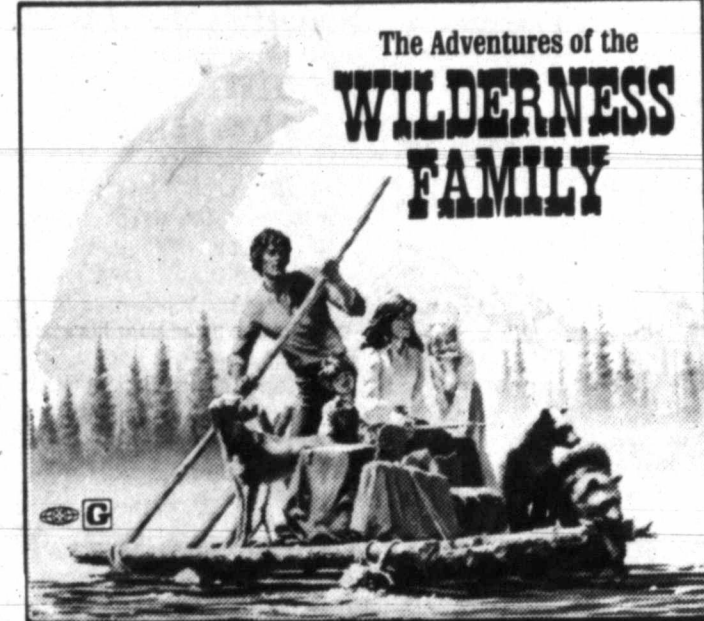

Martin said the boy's parents were arrested in Colorado Springs and booked for investigation of misdemeanor child selling.

He said the boy's parents originally agreed to give their son to Jordan in exchange for management positions in a motel in Livingston, Tex., run by Jordan. The deal fell through and Jordan allegedly paid the parents $3,000 by check.

Jordan, who remained in custody in lieu of $30,000 bail, was due back in court next Monday for arraignment.

Curtis to chair Democrats

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Maine Gov. Kenneth M. Curtis, an old colleague and friend of President Carter, was elected chairman of the Democratic party today and promised to lead it in building a program unprecedented for a party in power.

Curtis, 45, was elected by acclamation at the postinaugural meeting of the Democratic National Committee. He was Carter's hand-picked candidate for the job.

Mayor Coleman Young of Detroit and Carmela Lacayo of California were elected vice chairmen. Joel McCleary of North Carolina became treasurer and Dorothy Bush, familiar to a generation as the drawing Southern voice who calls the roll at party conventions, was retained as secretary.

Curtis succeeds Robert Strauss, the Texas lawyer who took over direction of a shattered party after the elections of 1972 and restored the Democratic coalition which carried Carter to victory last fall.

"We have become friends,"

Strauss said in his farewell to the once-warring Democrats. "We are a family of Democrats."

In his acceptance speech, Curtis said the Democrats must not rest on the laurels of victory.

He promised a major party reorganization, massive voter registration, continued efforts to open party ranks and a new program "to sense the moods and needs of our diverse population."

Strauss' resignation is in keeping with a tradition that allows a new president to name his own chairman.

Most White House incumbents tend to diminish the national committee in favor of their own staffs, but Carter has big plans to work through Curtis to convert the party machinery into an organization largely dedicated to helping Carter keep his promise to be responsive to the wishes of the people.

Carter aides say he views the national party as an important part of his administration and hopes to make good use of it instead of treating it as a rival as have other presidents.

President Lyndon Johnson virtually dismantled the Democratic National Committee when he was in the White House. And Richard Nixon used his 1972 re-election committee to virtually replace the Republican National Committee.

Curtis said in an interview that he plans an ambitious building program and will put the party apparatus to work gathering issues data and campaign information that will be available to Democratic candidates. In addition, he plans to computerize polling data to give Carter and party candidates up-to-the-minute information on how the voters feel about any given issue.

Strauss is leaving Curtis and the party in better financial shape. He has worked to eliminate, or at least control, most of the painful financial problems of the past.

Science hall exploded

PITTSBURGH (AP) — When Bernie Payne rushed from a nearby classroom and saw the twisted rubble that seconds before had been a University of Pittsburgh lecture hall, he thought of his fellow students and said, "My God. I hope there weren't a lot in there."

There weren't, but two of the 20 or so people inside — early arrivals for a lecture — were killed when an explosion destroyed the science hall auditorium Thursday. Dozens more were injured.

Had the blast come 20 minutes later, the auditorium would have been filled with 150 students.

Police were investigating the possibility that laboratory chemicals or gases caused the explosion. There was no evidence of foul play, they said.

The building was steam-heated, and Alex Kaminsky, director of plant services, said the natural gas line that led to a burner on a lab table could not have been the cause.

An adjoining auditorium in the 16-year-old hall was undamaged, and an adjacent five-story complex of three buildings was evacuated safely. There was no fire, but dozens of windows in the area were shattered.

"All we could see were girders," said Payne. "And the cement was sliding and rolling down. The building was still crumbling. You could see that one of the lecture halls had just crumbled inward."

Shelley Dubin, who was in the adjacent auditorium, said, "I turned around and looked back, and I just saw cement and steel falling. It was just like a movie."

A total of 45 people were treated at four hospitals, including about a dozen firemen who inhaled toxic gases stored in basement laboratories.

Three of the injured were in guarded condition, two were in serious condition and two were in fair condition. The remainder were treated and released.

John Tower to speak in Amarillo

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — U.S. John Tower, R-Tex., will be the featured speaker today when delegates to the Texas Farmers Union convention get down to the business of discussing policy statements on issues concerning agriculture.

Other speakers at the 73rd annual convention include U.S. Rep. Jack Hightower, State Sen. Max Sherman and Tony Dechant, president of the National Farmers Union.

Speaking of the convention, Texas Farmers Union President Jay Naman of Waco, said "It comes at a hopeful and yet crucial time for agriculture. With a new farm program being debated in Washington and the volatile issues of property taxes and other matters being argued in Austin, the voice of the farmer needs to be clear and unified."

Matters ranging from farm programs, property taxes, energy, land use and many other issues will be discussed at the convention. The TFCU plans to formulate a unified policy statement on the issues they consider important to farmers.

The convention will end Saturday.

Youth's body identified as Californian

CLOVIS, N.M. — The body of a youth found Tuesday morning in an open railway car at the Santa Fe Railway yards has been identified as that of 16-year-old John Michael Block of Norwalk, Calif.

Clovis officials said there was no evidence of foul play, and the youth apparently froze to death.

He was found in a three-level automobile carrier car that arrived Tuesday from LaMerida, Calif. He was wearing a t-shirt and blue jeans but no coat, officials said.

The boy's mother said she had last seen him Sunday in Norwalk.

Gunman killed while robbing liquor store

BIG SPRING, Tex. (AP) — Owner V.A. Whittington shot and killed a young gunman who tried to rob his liquor store Thursday night, officers reported.

Police Chief Stanley Bogard said a would-be bandit wearing a blue ski mask strode into a place called Elmer's Liquor Store while Whittington was in the back, demanding money and fired a .38 caliber pistol once after the owner refused to hand over the cash.

Whittington answered the shot with three bullets from his small caliber weapon, Bogard said, and the intruder fell dead. Police said they later identified him as Danny Hooser, 25, of Big Spring.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
Light rain dotted far West Texas near the Pecos River from around Sanderson northward to Carlsbad, N.M., today. A few showers also fell farther south from Del Rio toward Co. Tulsa.

Elsewhere across the state clouds hung low around El Paso in the west while skies were clear or there were only high clouds over the rest of the state.

North winds blowing 10 to 15 miles per hour fanned the Panhandle-Plains sector. The winds were light and variable in other areas.

More scattered showers were expected in West Texas, and a few were in prospect for other sections by tonight or Saturday. No big changes in temperatures were forecast.

Yoshimura jury deadlocked

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A "disappointed" Wendy Yoshimura remained free on bail today after a jury reached a last-minute compromise verdict in her weapons and explosives trial that could send Patricia Hearst's last underground roommate to prison for 25 years.

Jurors, who had planned to quit deliberations after Thursday night, deadlocked on a charge that could have brought Miss Yoshimura a life sentence — that of possession with intent to injure people and destroy property.

"I'm very disappointed in the verdict, but I'll be okay," the 34-year-old defendant told reporters after the verdict, which stemmed from her rental of a Berkeley garage that police raided as a bomb factory in 1972 — years before she encountered Miss Hearst.

Alameda County Superior Court Judge Martin Pulich refused a prosecutor's motion to revoke Miss Yoshimura's $25,000 bail, which had been collected by the Japanese-American community here. Pulich said he was "impressed" by the community's faith in the defendant, adding "I don't think she will break that trust."

Sentencing was set for Feb. 24. Miss Yoshimura could receive a maximum of one 15-year prison term and two five-year terms.

The jury found her guilty of possessing an explosive, a machine gun, and materials with intent to make a destructive device.

Prosecutor Jeff Horner said he may seek a new trial on the disputed charge, on which the panel declared itself hopelessly deadlocked after more than 44 hours of deliberations spanning six days.

Foreman Robert W. Loge, drawn and exhausted after 11 straight hours of deliberations, told Pulich there was "no possible way to reach a decision" on the charge. Pulich declared a mistrial on the deadlocked count.

Defense attorney James Larson expressed disappointment, but pledged an immediate appeal. "We will continue to fight in every possible way to overturn this verdict," he said.

Miss Yoshimura was arrested with Miss Hearst in San Francisco in September 1975. She had fled and dropped out of sight within hours after police raided the Berkeley garage in 1972.

The judge said he would decide at time of sentencing on a hearing date on five contempt of court citations lodged against Miss Yoshimura for refusing to testify about her time in the underground, some of which was spent with Miss Hearst and Symbionese Liberation Army members William and Emily Harris.

Miss Hearst, now free on bail, has been convicted on federal charges of armed bank robbery stemming from a 1974 heist with members of the SLA who had kidnaped her 10 weeks earlier.

The prosecution contended during Miss Yoshimura's 13-week trial that she conspired with antiwar radicals to bomb military buildings and rented the garage as a workshop and armory.

The defense claimed Miss Yoshimura rented the garage to store personal belongings but that her boyfriend, William Brandt, was responsible for the arsenal.

Scoggins still missing

AMARILLO — Police are continuing their investigation into the disappearance of an Amarillo petroleum engineer, Paul B. Scoggins, who was reported missing by his wife nearly six months ago.

Mrs. Lena Beth Scoggins told police she last saw her husband July 23 when he left the house on a business errand. She contacted police when he failed to return home.

Mrs. Scoggins has offered rewards of $10,000 for information leading to the discovery of her husband if he is alive and $7,500 for information leading to the recovery of his body if he is dead.

Investigators have followed leads in Texas, Mexico and New Mexico in a case police officials describe as one of the department's most thorough missing person investigations.

Scoggins' locked pickup was discovered in an Amarillo parking lot the day after his disappearance and police have conducted aerial and ground searches of farms and ranches across the Texas Panhandle.

Officer Larry Barlow who has worked on the Scoggins case since the beginning said, "There hasn't been any indication of why he disappeared... There's lots of possibilities."

Mrs. Scoggins had told police she believed her husband may have been murdered because of a dispute over a large amount of money owned him. Police have discounted the theory.

"The thing of it is, that wouldn't have been a good motive," Barlow said, "because there are bank notes that prove he owes the money."

Barlow explained that the man involved in the loan dispute would not have been able to gain anything by killing Scoggins, since he would still owe the money.

Barlow and Det. Bert Collins have done most of the investigation in the case.

Carters party but Amy bored

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — It was an evening to savor for the new First Family, a whirlwind tour of seven inaugural parties that brought together the folks from Plains who have known Jimmy Carter since boyhood and the powerful of Washington he had come to lead.

Hand in hand, Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, made appearances at each party, telling the cheering crowds, "This has been the greatest day in the life of the Carter family."

As he entered the ballroom at each affair, the bands played not the traditional and ponderous "Hail To The Chief," but Carter's bouncy campaign theme song, "Why Not The Best?"

At each stop, Carter greeted the excited and exuberant partygoers with a string of campaign-type questions.

"Do you think you live in the greatest country on earth?"

"Do you think you can help make the nation even better?"

"Do I have a great vice president?"

And each time, the crowd invariably responded with cries of "Yes," "Whoopee" and stomping cheers.

Carter, in black tie, then flashed his famous grin and continued, "Six years ago this month I was inaugurated governor of Georgia. And I had the same date that night I have tonight. And she was wearing the same dress. How do you like my wife's dress?"

Though most of the 50,000 people who paid $25 each to attend the parties could not see the old blue chiffon gown Mrs. Carter was wearing, they roared their approval. And if they cared that she had had a New York designer update the outfit with a cape, nobody said so.

At the Mayflower Hotel, the evening's second stop, Carter gazed out at the faces craning to catch a glimpse of him and said:

"I see here so many of you who helped me when I didn't have any friends. Now I have thousands of friends, thanks to you. We have the greatest nation on earth."

Then, almost as an afterthought, Carter looked at his 9-year-old daughter fidgeting at his side and said, "Amy loves it, too."

Amy, who was wearing a blue cape and carried a bouquet of pink sweetheart roses, sat on the front edge of the redearped stage while her parents danced. She looked bored, lost and forlorn.

It had been a long day for the little blonde fourth-grader who soon starts public school in Washington. Around 10 p.m., after the second party, she went home to the White House to bed.

While the Carters continued their first tour of the Washington party circuit, Vice President

Walter F. Mondale and his wife, Joan, were on a tour of their own, greeting old friends, thanking their supporters and promising them "the kind of government that brought you into politics in the first place."

At one point, Mondale looked over the crush of sweaty, smokey-smelling bodies pressing in around him and said, "This isn't a dance. It's a can of sardines."

And so it was. At many of the parties, the floors were so crowded that there was barely room to wiggle and dancing was almost out of the question. Many guests were disgruntled to find that cash bars had been set up, with drinks selling for $1.50 and beer and soft drinks going for 50 cents. Snacks consisted of slices of cheddar cheese, pretzels, potato chips — and, yes, peanuts.

No party tickets were free. Even those who in the past were given free invitations, like members of Congress and the Cabinet, were "invited" to purchase tickets this year. Perhaps for that reason, veterans of the Washington social scene reported relatively few familiar faces in the crowd.

"I really don't see too many people I know," said House Whip John Brademas, D-Ind., who was at the Mayflower Hotel where members of the Cabinet, Supreme Court and Joint Chiefs of Staff gathered.

He had just missed seeing the country's only five-star general, Omar Bradley, who arrived in a wheelchair. Former Rep. Patsy Mink, newly named to a State Department job, arrived later, as did Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind.

By far the greatest number of people who came to celebrate having a Democrat in the White House were just regular folks. One Carter volunteer, 82-year-old Nick Sarno of Solway, N.Y., wore a necklace of peanuts and promised to outdance anyone on the dance floor.

Denton Kurtz, an elementary school psychiatrist from Winter Park, Fla., said he came because he had campaigned for Carter and thought it would be fun.

"It's a circus," he said. "A real crush. But it's fascinating."

At midnight, three-and-a-half hours and hundreds of kisses and handshakes later, the Carters ended their evening at the D.C. Armory, where Carter staffers and fellow Georgians had gathered.

Mrs. Carter, who had remained quietly at her husband's side through most of the night, addressed the crowd: "There is no way we could be here with Jimmy as President of the United States without you. We love and care for every single one of you. Thank you. And good night."

With that, the Carters were gone.

Advice

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren
© 1976 by Chicago Tribune-H. Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: The clan gathered at my sister-in-law's house for a holiday dinner. Everyone was nice and friendly until Sis turned to me and in a very loud voice said, "Say, what color would your hair really be if you didn't dye it? Gray?"

Taken completely by surprise, I said the first thing that came to mind: "I'll tell you what color my hair really is if you tell me how much you really weigh." (Sis is very fat. She claims she has a thyroid condition, but she eats constantly.)

Well, things got pretty hot around there, and now the whole family—including my husband—is furious with me for insulting the hostess.

I don't see why her privacy is any more sacred than mine, but if you think I should apologize, I will.

NOT IRISH FOR NOTHING

DEAR IRISH: Even though she struck the first blow, you were childish and unkind to have struck a lower one. If it will restore peace in the family, apologize.

DEAR ABBY: I have always believed in God, and in His goodness, but I am now having doubts.

There are 365 days in every year, yet on my wedding anniversary, the most joyous day of the year for me, God chose to take my beloved mother from this earth. So now, instead of celebrating my anniversary, it has become a day of sadness and mourning.

Then I had a son. On his 10th birthday, God chose to take my beloved father from me. Again, a happy day was turned into a sad one.

Have you any words of comfort for me, Abby? I feel as though the Lord has punished me, but for what, I do not know.

Another thing. People describe themselves as "God-fearing Christians." I have read the Scriptures and can find nothing in them that says we should FEAR God.

So, when people want to describe themselves as "good Christians," why do they say they are "God-fearing" Christians?

HAVING DOUBTS

DEAR HAVING: Read the Book of Job again and restore your faith in the Lord. According to my dictionary, "God-fearing" means "devout."

The Old Testament tells us (in Ecclesiastes) to "Fear God and keep His commandments."

DEAR ABBY: When letters come to you asking about whether a girl should wear a bra or not, you should take the opportunity to say, "Yes," with a capital "Y," and then explain that girls who have ample bosoms and fail to support them become victims of Cooper's Syndrome.

To further explain: Native African women whose pictures you see in the National Geographic magazine have never known what a brassiere was, and consequently their breasts are all stretched out and hang practically to their waists. They are victims of Cooper's Syndrome...or Cooper's droop.

Please tell girls that as soon as they have something to hold up, they should invest in a brassiere, and wear it faithfully.

When I see young girls with full bosoms going braless, bobbing up and down and thinking they are liberated, I want to cry. It's too late for me, so sign me...

FLIP-FLOP IN GARDEN CITY

DEAR FLIP: I'll pass your works of warning and wisdom on to my readers. Girls, hie thee to a corsetiere!

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I would like to know something about the pancreas and what it controls in the body, if you please.

My husband has a calcifying pancreas. He drinks quite a bit of beer. He was told by our doctor that he was not to drink a drop of any kind of alcohol, but I am unable to convince him to stop. I am embarrassed to say that he has loose bowels (very loose). He weighs 140 pounds and is 6 foot tall. He is extremely nervous.

I have talked to him nicely and I have scolded him and nothing helps. I told him that I would write to you for information on the hazards involved.

DEAR READER — The pancreas is an important organ in our ability to digest food. It is located just below the stomach and attached to the first part of the small intestine. It is from four to six inches long. The gland in animals is often used for sweetbreads.

There are two parts of the gland, the tissues that form pancreatic juice (we form from one to three quarts a day) and the small islets of Langerhans seeded throughout the pancreas that form insulin.

The pancreatic juice drains into the small intestine through a tube that is joined to the common bile duct. The bile and pancreatic juice mix together with the partially digested food from the stomach.

The pancreatic juice contains the enzymes that accomplish most of the breakdown of starch from various carbohydrate foods. It also contains the enzymes that break down the proteins into amino acids so they can be absorbed through the intestine. And it contains the enzymes that break down fat. So, most of the food we eat must be acted upon by enzymes from the pancreas before it can even be absorbed to do us any good.

Failure to break down food, particularly the fat, leads to diarrhea and large foul-smelling stools. Part of your husband's problem here may be from his pancreas.

The pancreas may have a few small or even larger calcifications in it without being significantly damaged. However, I presume from your letter that your husband does have damage. How much trouble he has, or will have, depends entirely on how much damage there is to the pancreas.

Many people have disease of the pancreas and never drank a drop of alcohol, but alcohol is definitely damaging to the pancreas: Your doctor was 100 per cent correct in saying your husband should not drink a drop. It is a matter of life or death for him and his pancreas will only get worse as long as he continues to drink. The quality of his life, in terms of diarrhea and what he gets out of the food he can't digest will only go downhill from here unless he follows his doctor's instructions to the letter.

Your letter really tells me that your husband has an alcohol problem and that the pancreatic disease is a complication of that problem. I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-4 on alcohol to give you more information. Others who want to know what alcohol does to the body can send 50 cents for it with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

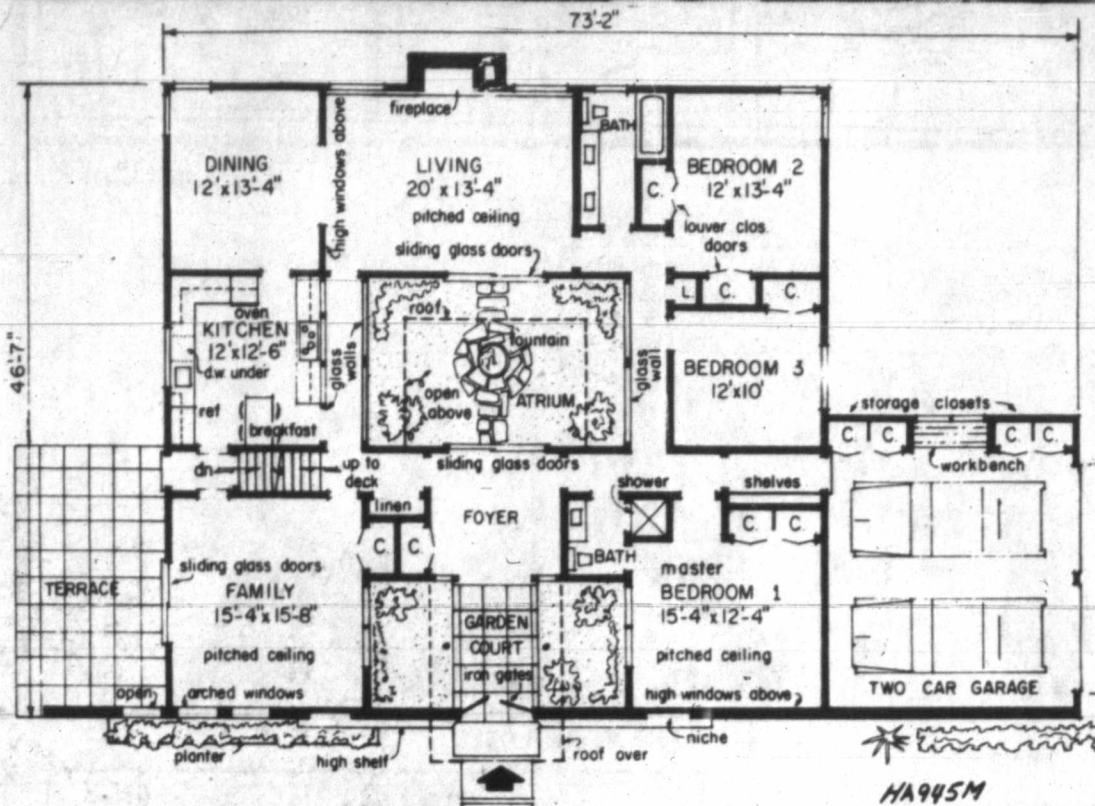

Since you have the same doctor I think you would be wise to talk with the doctor with your husband, or alone if necessary, and try to get his help in getting your husband some assistance locally for his alcohol problem through whatever organizations are available to you there.

Graphics contribute diversity

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer
A pioneer in architectural graphics — she has spread her graphics language over airports as well as public areas since the early '60s — Jane Davis Doggett believes we have done "too much strip mining in architecture" and should preserve what is left before it is too late.

She and her associate, sculptor Deborah de Moulpied, plan visual networks of sign systems for airports, transportation systems, universities, hospitals and the like. In New Canaan, Conn., their offices reflect the work with models of airports and cities.

"Cities are losing their identity. You can see the same building in Atlanta and Houston. In Nashville, they don't know what will happen to their beautiful railroad station, and if they remove it there will be a big architectural gap," contends Miss Doggett, who grew up there.

"This country's biggest asset is diversity, an incredible panorama as you travel from coast to mountains to desert. What comes out in architecture and landscape is very important." She would like to see the kind of analytical principles that are used in good airport planning applied to cities.

In New England many old towns "that are better laid out than many cities" are dying, but they could be rescued, she believes. Old mills could be turned into shopping centers, perhaps, and retired persons integrated into normal neighborhood patterns of living.

"Who will take care of whole communities of old people? We must save the small towns in the interest of balanced communities where old people can be cared for much better than in planned retirement communities."

Miss Doggett's graphics system at approaches to airports is a visual network of steel signs with alphabet forms. They have been hailed for clarity, colors, symbols and flow patterns that produce a pleasing effect upon the eye even as they ease the way to ticket counters, baggage claims, parking lots or whatever.

"We don't rely on color. It would be too risky," explained Miss de Moulpied. "Some people do not even see a red stop sign. They know it by shape and design."

At Shreveport, La., the airport symbol has stripes swirling upward in blue to indicate departure and downward in earth colors for arrivals and ground facilities. An Indian symbol was used at Cleveland and the nautilus shell at Miami, where they are at work on a four-year plan. At Tampa, where they cut by two-thirds the signs suggested by engineers, their symbols may be read from 3,000 feet. They have completed work at Memphis, Houston, Jacksonville and Newark airports and are working on plans for San Juan, Fort Lauderdale and Baltimore.

Sign cubes and graphically inspired design for the Niagara Falls Convention Center earned them a citation for "excellence in environmental enhancement" from the American Iron and Steel Institute.

Miss Doggett, a graduate of Yale's School of Art and Architecture, and Miss de Moulpied, a graduate of Yale's School of Fine Art whose work is exhibited at the Museum of Modern Art and other museums, combine their efforts in terms of dimensional work.

"People now want to see fine arts taken off the pedestal and become part of the whole art world," Miss de Moulpied explained.

For the Miami International Airport extension she has proposed a design of arched stations, two oval steel planes with a recessed space that would carry a continuous light tube integrating the signboard and the winged arch structural system that is 60 feet high. It is a visual landmark in preventing collisions — motorists are not distracted by disparate shapes and forms — even as it becomes an identifying landmark.

"It is one answer to the integration of art into public space," says Miss Doggett. "Many cities try to be different by acquiring an object of art and plopping it down somewhere in the town, kind of an 'our town has a Calder stable response' rather than choosing a design that is needed and could make the town distinctive in a unique way."

At wit's end

By ERMA BOMBECK

You always hear about fashion's success stories.

But what about the losers? The fashions that came in and went out the same day? The hopes and dreams of designers that were shattered by the sound of 50 million women... laughing.

Some styles, for one reason or another, just don't make it. These are some of them.

Scratch and Smell T-Shirt. This should have been a smash. The principle was great: you scratched and voila... a scent was circulated that ran the gamut from perfume to pizza. Unfortunately, there were too many imposters. People scratched for status and stirred up only perspiration. This gave the official scratch-and-smell shirt a bad name... not to mention the smell.

The Gladiator Boots. Remember them? They were the polished leather boots that hit just above the knee. You could look stylish in them or sit down. You couldn't have both.

The Diaper Bikini would have been a real seller if wearers had been able to keep their weight down to under 8 1/2 pounds.

Fanny Sweater: This is one of the many knit styles designed to fit a hanger and not the human body. The name was deceiving. It suggested that everyone who had a fanny should cover it with a sweater. In many instances, that's all the sweater covered and the sides and front were left wide open.

By actual count, there were only three women in the country who could actually button a fanny sweater. They were ill.

The Satin Pillow Stomach: I'm not making this up. A few years ago a manufacturer came out with a fake satin stomach that you tied around your waist for thin girls who wanted to look healthy.

I looked so healthy in it, two men on the bus hoisted me into their seats and another called the police who reported I was in the final stages of delivery.

The "fake" stomach now resides on the living room sofa.

This year, once again, we'll be looking over the nominees for the fashion losers. What will it be? The cigarette jeans for legs that don't need circulation? The jump suits for people who swear off liquids after 4 p.m. the night before? Or the tube dress for women who want to be mailed?

May I have the envelope, please?

Youth reach to begin for Adventists

A program especially for youth, "Reach Out For Life," will be offered by the Pampa Seventh Day Adventist Church, 425 N. Ward.

An investment in Your Future

ATTEND CHURCH

"For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also"

A REASON FOR EVERYTHING

The giraffe was given a very long neck and legs so that he could feed on the leafy part of trees. The giraffe is the only animal that can not make a sound. We do not know the reason for this. God has revealed many things to us, but not all things. Men delve deeply into theology and find many things that cannot be answered, but God has given us the answer to all things pertinent to our salvation.

Attend church, study God's word and grow in faith.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way-of-life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

THE GOSPEL

It is inconceivable that any person would not desire to hear the gospel in its virgin purity. This truth should be apparent if we define "gospel." It is the good news or the glad tidings of salvation for mankind through Jesus Christ. Nothing has been devised by the mind of man that can replace the gospel of Christ. It is the purpose of God revealed to us. Paul said, Romans 1:16, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ for it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth to the Jews first and also to the Greek." The apostles of Jesus made great sacrifices to fulfill the command given them to "preach the gospel to every creature" or "to all nations." They themselves spoke, and commanded all others who taught it to, "speak as the oracles of God." They revealed the gospel as the Holy Spirit gave them utterance. No one has the power or the authority to change or pervert that which the Holy Spirit delivered to mankind.

This pure, original gospel, Jesus commanded the apostles to preach among all men and in all nations, is the thing and the only thing Paul described as the "power of God unto salvation." No man is criticizing, slandering or judging any one when he calls attention to the fact that the word of God promises salvation to those who obey the gospel. It is also a Bible fact that those who do not obey the gospel have no divine assurance of eternal salvation. It matters not what denominational theory a man has learned or believes, the fact remains that unless he obeys the gospel of Christ, as it was delivered by the apostles, he is out of Christ, lost and undone, without God and without hope.

It is a most disastrous mistake for any one to neglect or fail to obey the commandments of the Gospel of Christ. God has no power to save except the gospel. But man must choose to obey it. He cannot be forced to do so. Remember Paul said, "at his revelation from heaven with his mighty angles, Jesus shall render vengeance to them that know not God and obey not the gospel of Christ." (2 Thess. 1:8) Have you obeyed the gospel? If not, why not?

3-AAAA favorite opens with Caprock

By PAUL SIMS
Sports Editor

David Camfield, basketball coach at Amarillo Tascosa, says it will take "a major catastrophe at Pampa" to keep the Harvesters from winning the District 3-AAAA title for the third straight time.

The four other district coaches, including Pampa's Robert McPherson who has logged a 152-55 record in seven seasons, agree that the Harvesters are the class team of 3-AAAA.

Pampa begins its title chase today with the first of two potentially tough road games, travelling to Amarillo for a 7:30 p.m. contest against the team that district coaches picked to finish second in a pre-season poll — Caprock.

"Pampa runs and shoots well and they play well as a team. They're quick, the quickest team in the district," said Caprock's Bill White, whose club has recorded an 8-10 record after non-conference games.

"They key to beating them is catching them when they're not hot," White added.

Pampa for the most part this season has not been caught cold. The Harvesters, 15-5, are scoring at a 71.9 pace and have four players averaging in double figures. Three of those are returning starters — 6-0 guard Rayford Young (16.7), 6-3 guard

Brian Bailey (14.3) and 6-4 forward Don Hughes (13.0) and the club's leading rebounder.

Rusty Ward, a 6-4 junior forward up from the junior varsity is averaging 14.1 points, and 6-4 junior post Rickey Buntun sports an 8.2 norm.

Bailey was named player of the year in 3-AAAA last season after averaging more than 20 points in district play. Knee surgery last summer limited him earlier in the season but he had played close to last season's form in recent games.

"He's just now playing on that knee where it doesn't hurt," McPherson said. "Without the injury situation we had earlier, we probably would have a better record than what we've got."

Amarillo Palo Duro Coach Ed Smith calls Bailey and Young "the best guards in the district."

Caprock tonight will counter with 6-6 post Jay Hunt, 6-7 post Alvin Raef, 5-10 forward Bruce Nipp, 6-0 forward Billy Parks and 6-0 guard Stanley Errington.

Hunt is one of the district's most respected posts, "probably the best big guy in the district," according to McPherson. "He ought to be — he's been around since he was a sophomore."

"To beat Caprock, you've got to stop him."

Hunt is averaging 21.1 points, ranking second behind Amarillo High guard Mike Smith (23.2), and 12 rebounds. Raef complements him, sporting averages of 7.8 points and 8 rebounds.

Nipp, a streak outside shooter, is averaging 13.0 points. Caprock boss Bill White has been pleased with Nipp's shooting but refuses to place him in the same bracket with Mark Leonard, one of the district's deadliest outside scorers a year ago.

"I don't have a Leonard-type kid. I don't want another one of them — they do too much themselves. No one kid is the key to our game this year. We have team play," White said. "I do think Hunt's the best big man in this part of the country. He shoots well and he rebounds well. I think he could be a little tougher on defense."

Caprock, despite its record, has played well in non-conference action. The Longhorns are hitting on 49.5 per cent of their field goal tries and have been outrebounded just three times, against Borger, El Paso Bel Air and Plainview.

"I haven't put too much emphasis on the win-loss thing," White said. "I haven't put pressure on the kids in non-conference; I've put emphasis on controlling the game and turnovers."

"I would say we're playing good right now."

Caprock has beaten Pampa twice in history, both times in the Longhorn gymnasium.

In the only other district game tonight, Tascosa, 13-7, visits Palo Duro, 6-13, Tuesday. Pampa is at Tascosa and Caprock visits Amarillo, 8-12.

Tascosa has won 8 of its 10 games. The Rebels are led by inside men DeWayne Gilbreath, averaging 16.9 points and 9 rebounds, and Dwight Cleveland, 14.3 points and 9 rebounds.

"Their front line is real good," McPherson said. "They have good size and they rebound and they're quick."

Rebel mentor David Camfield calls rebounding his team's strength.

"When the referees will allow us to, we normally rebound well. We played a couple games where the refs called an excessive number of fouls and it hurt our rebounding."

Camfield says Pampa also is "an excellent rebounding team. I imagine their strong point is their ability to score and to play so mistake free."

Tascosa must improve its shooting, Camfield said, to be competitive. A detriment might be the team's lack of a consistent outside scorer.

"We're probably as poor a shooting ball club as there is in the district... We could use a quality offensive guard but we have as good defensive guards as most of the teams."

Palo Duro will try to offset Tascosa's inside physical prowess with the rebounding of post Winston Cleveland, who averages 11.9 cars per game and 17.8 points.

Forward Raymond Cloudy is averaging 12.3 points and more than 6 rebounds.

"Palo Duro is the scrappiest ball club in the district," Camfield said. "If you let down a minute, they're gonna get you."

Smith hopes somebody lets down.

"To win district, it'll take a lot of prayers. I guarantee you," the PD boss said. "I don't think we're strong or big enough to win district. To win it, we'd have to have a lot of things go our way."

Amarillo High is open tonight. The Sandies, district coaches agree, might be a strong contender once conference play begins.

"I think Pampa's got to be the favorite," Sandie Coach Tom Leezer said. "Tascosa's got good size and strength. Caprock's got a couple of good outside shooters and Hunt is greatly improved. And Palo Duro has improved since the start of the season."

The Sandies? "Our kids are ready to play."

District standout

Pampa guard Brian Bailey, a 6-3 guard who was named 3-AAAA's player of the year last season, will lead the Harvester attack tonight in the district opener against Caprock.

Green leading Crosby by 1 stroke after 65

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Hubert Green has the lead with a spectacular 65. Tom Watson is one pop back. Jack Nicklaus is in the hunt.

But, in the golfing extravaganza that is the $200,000 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, they had to take a back seat to an unemployed, 18-handicap amateur who — so far at least — hasn't helped his partner a single shot.

"I don't know where my partner was," Arnold Palmer said with a twinkle in his eye. "but he didn't help a bit."

His partner, one Gerald Ford, was airborne at that moment Thursday afternoon, enroute from the inauguration of Jimmy Carter in Washington to the spectacular beauty of the Monterey Peninsula. He was scheduled to play in the second round today — his first full day as an ex-president — as Palmer's amateur partner in the pro-am portion of this unique competition.

And they had their work cut out for them today on the Shore Course at the Monterey Peninsula Country Club.

"To make the cut," Palmer mused after a long look at the scoreboard, "we're going to have to go about nine under each of the next two days."

The 168 teams of a pro and amateur play one round on each of three courses — the Shore, Cypress Point and Pebble Beach — before the field is cut to the low 30 teams for Sunday's final round at Pebble Beach.

With Ford unavailable for competition Thursday, Palmer's individual total at Cypress Point had to count as the team score, which normally is computed on a better-ball basis, including the amateur's handicap. Palmer shot a shoddy 74. While the 47-year-old Palmer was having his problems in his first start of the season, Green took advantage of the unusually good weather to humble proud Pebble-Beach with a seven-under-par effort that was just one shot off the course record. He would have had that but for a three-putt from 15 feet for his only bogey.

The tournament which traditionally offers wind, rain, cold and sometimes sleet and snow, produced hazy skies with mild temperatures and just a hint of a breeze.

"It's a fun course to play in weather like this," said Watson, a former British Open champion who had a shot at the title last week in the Tucson Open. He holed one bunker shot for an eagle three on the way to a 66, also at Pebble Beach, that left him just one stroke out.

Athletes in Action stun No. 1 Dons

By DICK JOYCE
AP Sports Writer

Maybe it was the home court advantage.

It apparently helped a California-based group called Athletes in Action because the team upset the University of San Francisco, the nation's top-ranked college basketball team, 104-85 Thursday night at its home court in Anaheim, Calif. AIA's previous 364 games in its 9 1/2 years of existence were on the road.

But these college basketball graduates now playing for the sports arm of the Campus Crusade for Christ recently found a home at the Anaheim Convention Center after all those years of away games.

The game was an exhibition, so the NCAA will not count it against the Dons, who boast a 19-0 record against college opponents.

"Well," said an AIA spokesman. "We didn't have much of a following for the first nine years, and we didn't think we could afford to play any home games."

A crowd of 6,715 saw Tim Hall, Irv Kiffin and Ralph Drollinger lead AIA, which claims it plays the toughest amateur schedule in the nation, to its 24th victory in 30 games this season.

Meantime, fifth-rated Michigan beat 19th-rated Purdue 82-76 and 16th-ranked Arizona downed Utah 102-98 in games involving other Top Twenty teams Thursday night.

Athletes in Action got 20 points from the 6-foot-8 Hall, from Colorado State, and 18 each from the 6-9 Kiffin, from Oklahoma Baptist, and the 7-2 Drollinger from UCLA. Drollinger challenged San Francisco's 6-11 1/2 Bill Cartwright and hit seven of 10 shots from the field, most of them 15-foot jumpers. AIA outrebounded the Dons 50-37.

AIA takes on seventh-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas next week — at home.

Michigan Coach Johnny Orr has foud out the hard way that he may be right in claiming he has the best three guards in the nation.

When Rickey Green, the Wolverines' star guard, suffered a back injury with 7:36 remaining against Purdue, Orr called on Dave Baxter. The 6-foot-2 junior from Detroit responded with 10 points in the last 6:13, helping Michigan to a home court Big Ten Conference triumph.

Green twisted his back while scoring on a fast-break layup that put Michigan ahead 69-59 and was listed as a questionable starter against Illinois Saturday.

It was Michigan's 12th victory against one loss and made the Wolverines 5-0 in Big Ten play.

Green was Michigan's leading scorer with 22 points while Phil Hubbard scored 19 points and grabbed 14 rebounds. Baxter finished with 14 points.

Herman Harris scored 35 points, 23 in the first half, as Arizona tripped Utah for its 29th straight home victory. Utah rallied from a 19-point deficit and trailed 99-96 with one minute left. But Harris

Baylor cage mentor resigns

WACO, Tex. (AP) — Saying the team needed "new direction," Baylor basketball Coach Carroll Dawson has resigned after three and a half years on the job.

Dawson's resignation is effective immediately and Athletic Director Jack Patterson said assistant coach Jim Haller would replace Dawson.

In another Western Athletic Conference game, Arizona State beat visiting Brigham Young 86-84 in overtime on James Holliman's goal with three seconds remaining. Mark Landsberger topped ASU with 25 points. BYU's Mark Handy bagged 21 points.

Greg Kesler's 24 points led host Michigan State 67-58 over Illinois, which got 20 points from Rich Adams. Spartans Coach Jud Heathcote benched his starting team for about five minutes in the first half, a move he claimed sparked his team to victory.

Patterson said he was surprised at Dawson's sudden resignation. "He is an outstanding young man and the entire university and the athletic department wish for him the very best in the future," Patterson said.

History already treats Ford kindly

Carter bows to predecessor in rare moment

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — Gerald R. Ford left town saying that history will treat his presidency kindly. It already is.

In an extraordinary moment, President Carter began his new administration with a tribute to his vanquished Republican rival.

"For myself and for our nation, I want to thank my predecessor for all that he has done to heal our land."

Applause, then cheers, for the loser, who leaves an uncommon legacy.

Denied in his quest to win the presidency for himself, Ford said in his last days that his greatest satisfaction was the restoration of trust and confidence in the White House he held by appointment.

Ford the President has been eulogized as the man who restored decency to the White House, but it was more than that.

An AP news analysis

That almost surely would have happened had another man succeeded Richard M. Nixon, who was not, after all, a hard act to follow.

A mere absence of scandal and wrongdoing was not enough to regain the trust shattered by two years of Watergate.

To the task of restoration, Ford brought a special gift, for he was an ordinary man, who never pretended otherwise. A better politician would have made a worse president for his time.

Here was a man who bumped his head sometimes, and tripped, and gave dull speeches, and couldn't pronounce the name of Sen. S. I. Hayakawa even when campaigning for him.

But he said he'd do his best. What the job demanded, he tried.

With Ford, what you saw was what you got, and that inspired trust. Even those who challenged his programs and questioned his competence could not find grounds to assail his motives.

His workaday style in the tasks of the presidency was never more evident than in the 2½ months that followed his narrow defeat by Carter, as Ford sought to smooth the transition of power to his Democratic successor.

It was part of the job. Yet never had an incumbent of one party done so much to assist the victorious candidate of the other. Carter said the cooperation was unprecedented.

While Franklin D. Roosevelt awaited inauguration, he shunned the defeated Herbert Hoover. Harry S. Truman wouldn't ride to the Capitol with President-elect Dwight D. Eisenhower. When his turn came, Eisenhower privately described the incoming John F. Kennedy as "that boy." Lyndon B. Johnson was proper but no more than that as Nixon prepared for office.

This transition was different, and it was Ford's doing. "I wanted the new President to get off to an easier start than I had," Ford said.

Ford enters golf tourney

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Private citizen Gerald Ford, who suddenly has a new set of priorities, is setting out "to get my golf game in shape" on his first full day out of the presidency.

Ford was partnered with Arnold Palmer in the Bing Crosby Pro-Am Golf Tournament here today after relinquishing the nation's highest office to Jimmy Carter.

As he flew from Washington to Monterey, Calif., after the Carter inauguration Thursday, Ford said he thought he had prepared himself well for the swift switch in power.

"We certainly took the attitude that our time had ended and President Carter's time had begun," Ford said, "and I said to him that we wished him the very best, that I was available to help."

But he said that his leaving-taking was poignant anyway, and that he was moved when Carter began his inaugural address by thanking Ford on behalf of the nation.

"I thought it was good, I thought it hit the right tone," he said of Carter's inaugural address. "I naturally was very grateful for his opening comment and his very kind remarks."

Ford had spent 28 years in Washington as congressman, vice president and president, and, after the ceremonies, he asked his helicopter pilot to circle the city once before taking him to the airport.

At the airport he wiped away a tear or two as he climbed aboard the Boeing 707 that had been designated Air Force One whenever he boarded it as president.

"I don't deny I got a little sentimental," Ford said, "but tried not to expose it, to keep it within myself."

For about 10 minutes Thursday, as they rode along Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House to the Capitol, Ford and Carter chatted.

Because they had battled each other in the election, the subject of the chat might have been intriguing, but Ford said, "It was mainly just very nice pleasantries, small talk."

The former president said that he and Carter are friends, and that he will refrain from criticizing Carter for some time because "I'm going to be busy, he'll be busy, and I wish him the very, very best as he takes on some tough responsibilities."

Beginning with his State of the Union address last week, when he added a tantalizing "maybe" to a sentence that said it was his last speech there, Ford has implied he might seek office again.

"We've got a lot of things to do between now and then," Ford said Thursday. "I just want people to do a little thinking and speculating. I don't want anyone to move in and pre-empt the field without thinking they'll have a challenge from an old-timer who's got the good spirit."

Betty Ford said, "The only time that I really felt emotionally, perhaps upset was when we left the Capitol" where the inauguration ceremony was held.

"After all, Jerry and I were married in October (1948) and he was elected in November and our whole married life has been spent at the Capitol," she said.

Former president Ford lost little time in exchanging his customary presidential duds for his golf shoes.

New cabinet minus three

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will begin work without three of his Cabinet nominees who have to wait at least until next week to take office.

A few hours after Carter took the oath of office on the Capitol steps Thursday, the Senate confirmed by voice vote eight of his Cabinet choices and two nominees for top economic posts.

But several Republican senators demanded more time for debate and roll-call votes on the nominations of Joseph C. Califano Jr. to be secretary of health, education and welfare, Griffin B. Bell to be attorney general and F. Ray Marshall to be secretary of labor.

None of the nominations was considered in jeopardy. All 11 nominees previously won approval of Senate committees.

Califano's nomination will be voted on Monday after a debate limited to two hours. Sen. Robert W. Packwood, R-Ore., sought the delay in order to express opposition to Califano's stand against abortions.

On Tuesday, under an agreement to limit debate to eight hours, the Senate will turn to Bell.

Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., and others wanted time to review the extensive committee testimony on Bell's civil rights record.

After voting on Bell, the nomination of labor economist Marshall will be taken up, with no time limit yet set on debate. This is unlikely to be before Wednesday.

Some conservative Republicans, including Sens. Paul Holt of Nevada and Orrin G. Hatch of Utah, oppose Marshall as too pro-labor, particularly because he favors repeal of a federal law allowing states to ban the union shop.

The only Cabinet nominees acted on Thursday were those on which no senator asked for a roll call vote. Leaders agreed to the procedure to spare senators time to attend the inaugural festivities.

In order, the Senate confirmed: Secretary of Defense Harold Brown; Secretary of the Interior Cecil Andrus; Secretary of Treasury W. Michael Blumenthal; Secretary of State Cyrus Vance; Secretary of Commerce Juanita Kreps; Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Patricia Roberts Harris; Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland and Secretary of Transportation Brock Adams.

The Senate also approved

Thomas B. Lance as director of the Office of Management and Budget and Charles Schultz as chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers.

Sales tax loss probed

LAREDO, Tex. (AP) — The Webb County district attorney says he has "definite ideas from a criminal standpoint" about the possibility of $250,000 owed to the state for automobile sales taxes.

The possibility of the shortage was uncovered by state auditors.

Dist. Atty. Charles Borchers said Thursday he would not elaborate about his ideas, but said he is investigating the matter.

Borchers said officials from the state comptroller's office in Austin briefed him on the audit.

Borchers said the comptroller's office began the audit of Webb County registrations after it noticed a decline in collections and a difference in the number of new titles issued by the highway department and the number of receipts sent to the comptroller.

The audit showed that registration receipts apparently were sent by Webb County to the Texas Highway Department in Austin so a title could be issued to the new owner of a vehicle.

However, Borchers said, a copy of the receipt, showing the amount of sales tax collected on the transaction by the county, apparently was not sent to the state comptroller's office. Nor was the collected sales tax ever forwarded to the comptroller, he said.

Borchers said estimates are that up to 2,500 individual receipts were never sent to the state comptroller's office during 1976. Based on the average tax per transaction, the missing receipts would be worth about $250,000, he said.

Borchers also said the missing receipts would indicate a shortage of about $13,000 to the county, since the county receives a percentage of the tax collected.

Borchers said the comptroller's office is now obtaining from the highway department copies of the receipts which were not sent to the comptroller's office.

The largest hurricane disaster in the United States took place in Florida on Sept. 16-17, 1928, and claimed 1,833 lives.

Woodkin leery of appeal

MARSHALL, Tex. (AP) — The lawyer for condemned killer Calvin Woodkins says he will file a motion within "two or three days" seeking a stay of execution for his client, who says it won't do any good.

Lynn Patton of Longview represents Woodkins, 21, scheduled to die in the Texas electric chair Feb. 10 for the shooting death of Jimmy Kuykendall in Marshall in 1973. Woodkins became next in line when the execution of Jerry Lane Jurek of Cuero, scheduled for last Wednesday, was stayed Monday.

The motion will be filed with the U.S. Supreme Court, Patton said Thursday.

Following sentencing, Woodkins told newsmen he has no hope. "I know it's going to happen."

The condemned man said "nothing especially" went through his mind when sentence was pronounced by State District Court Judge John D. Furrh last month. He said he held out no hope for his attorney's appeals.

Woodkins said he does not want to die and would be prepared to spend his life in prison if permitted to live. He called death by electrocution "the terrible way in the world to die."

The black man still maintains his innocence of the crime and says he did not receive a fair trial.

At the time of Kuykendall's murder, Woodkins was on five years' probation for burglary.

In addition, Worthington said Lewis has had peptic ulcers for several years.

"I have recommended that he cancel all personal appearance tours for three or four months to get his health straightened out," Worthington said.

Lewis is scheduled to leave Feb. 10 on a 12-day tour of six European countries — Switzerland, Denmark, Sweden, Germany and France.

He is expected to remain in the hospital for another week to 10 days.

Jerry Lee Lewis in pain

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Jerry Lee Lewis was "resting but in extreme pain" Thursday after removal of his gall bladder, his doctors said.

"Jerry Lee is doing OK now, but he is in tremendous pain," said his physician, Dr. Hall Worthington.

Lewis underwent surgery Wednesday at Doctors Hospital.

"He has been sick for the past year, but continued to fill his concert shows as often as possible," Worthington said.

"In addition to the gall bladder, he had a collapsed right lung that is doing all right but still had not healed."

The doctor said Lewis also had pleurisy that caused him chest pains.

Vending machine culture

By JEANNE GRIMES
Pampa News Staff

Vending machines and the products they dispense are usually taken for granted by a public used to having their needs met with the insertion of a coin and the pushing of a button.

But sometimes when a machine fails to deliver merchandise and - or change, people get mad - for awhile.

Occasionally the inequities of a coin-operated convenience prompt people to question our whole vending machine culture.

Imelda Harrison of Alanreed was one to question the vending machine mystique when she wrote The Pampa News with a complaint of sorts:

"I have a complaint to make about vending machines," Harrison wrote. "Why (are there) 25 cent machines ... at the nursing homes? The (Court)house annex has 15 cent machines for county employees on regular salaries. The 25 cent machines are a hardship for the Social Security and welfare patients at the nursing homes."

G.R. Fugate, assistant manager of McCarty - Hull Tobacco Company, explained that prices are determined by the companies that own the machines.

McCarty - Hull, wholesale suppliers of vending machine merchandise, service only those machines which they own and they set the prices on items purchased from those machines.

"Everybody can do that (set prices)," Fugate said. "It's a country privilege."

He added that there are "three or four" different companies which own vending machines and their contents in Pampa.

A spokeswoman for the Coca-Cola Bottling Company said that firm charges customers "average" prices for the machine-dispensed refreshment, adding "I've never gotten any out of the other machines so I just don't know."

She did explain that bottled soft drinks are less costly than canned pop, whether purchased from an impersonal machine or off the grocer's shelf.

"They usually put those (machines dispensing canned soft drinks) out where there's a lot of traffic," she said.

People who stock vending machines - particularly soft drink machines - say that they favor a higher price because they must absorb the loss incurred when customers carry off returnable bottles without paying a deposit on them.

In some cases, such as the Courthouse annex, signs ask the customer to leave returnable bottles by the machine.

Joe VanZandt, Gray County Extension agent, said the machines at the annex are operated on a break - even basis and are there "to serve the people who visit or work in the building."

No one is out to make a profit, VanZandt said.

With pricing determined by companies which own the machines, the question of vending machine equality is not one of salaried vs. fixed income. While some Gray County employees may save a few pennies on the soft drink or candy bar of their choice in one building, fellow workers across town are paying the going rate of 25 cents.

A spot check of nursing homes, city and county buildings, grocery stores and Highland General Hospital revealed that 25 cents was the rule, not the exception, for soft drinks. Candy, gum and potato chips were selling for 15 cents at all locations.

It may be little consolation, but consider the vending machine injustice endured by an Oklahoma City security guard a few years ago.

The guard became angry when he did not receive any food in exchange for his money. When he forcefully tried to redeem his merchandise, he became entangled in the machine and could not free himself.

For whatever reason or frustration, the guard pulled his service revolver and shot the offending machine numerous times.

It was a shallow victory at best. Police arrested the man for a firearms violation, the security firm fired him and the state ordered him placed under psychiatric observation.

'Andrea Alrea' dupes Yale

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — The application of Andrea Alrea painted him as just the sort of scholar and gentleman Yale would like to educate. But as it turned out, Alrea taught Yale a lesson.

He pulled off one of the biggest hoaxes in the history of the 275-year-old Ivy League university.

Fourteen months ago the 21-year-old San Bernardino, Calif., resident sent Yale an application that described him as a multimillionaire businessman, he said Thursday.

He claimed to have founded a chain of luxury hotels in Alaska, to have marketed business machines in South America, and to be fluent in seven languages - including an Indian dialect no longer spoken. Added to this alleged youthful success, he said, were a near-perfect transcript from a prestigious California high school and glowing recommendations from teachers and business executives all over the Western hemisphere.

Admitted to Yale's class of 1980 last April, he was heralded in the school newspaper as one of the outstanding students in the class.

On Thursday, the youthful whiz went to Yale's dean of admissions, Worth David, with a confession: everything in his records at Yale, from transcript to business interests, was total fabrication.

His real name, he said, is Patrick Michael McDermit, he remodels houses and does odd jobs for a living. English is the only language he speaks, and he has not attended school for five years. He said he spent about $15,000 to carry out his hoax.

Dean David said his reaction was "alarm, distress and surprise." He refused to verify McDermit's claims of what was in his folder because of Yale's policy on student records.

But he did say he believes it was the first time Yale had admitted a student whose records later were discovered to be forged.

The dean said that because McDermit has withdrawn from the university, Yale does not plan to take any action against him "other than to ensure that he is never able to reapply to Yale again."

Said McDermit: "I did it on a dare. I just figured I was smart enough to get in. So if they didn't want me as I was, I'd come in as somebody else."

In addition to paying his tuition, he lived in one of Yale's residential colleges and was attending class in an honors course for freshmen. At the end of the fall term in December, McDermit officially withdrew.

"He stayed until he came to the point of sitting down to finish his first paper," said a roommate. "Then he decided he had carried it far enough."

Sniper called lonely

CANTON, Tex. (AP) — James Roberson was a lonely man, angry over what he considered to be a racist world.

Why he tried to run motorists off Texas 64 in the eastern part of the state Wednesday and shot at several of them will never be known.

State troopers shot Roberson to death after he tried to elude them.

His mementos were few — two small-caliber pistols, his scope-mounted rifle, a Bible, a book entitled "Everyday Black Magic" and a map with several Florida and Texas cities circled.

The 27-year-old Vietnam veteran talked with his father Tuesday night. "Everything was all right," his father said. "He was a good boy. The only trouble he ever got into was when he was 17 or 18."

Roberson came out of the Army with a back problem, and hadn't worked steadily for the last two years.

He kept notes of his war experience in the well-worn Bible. One notation told of his black man's frustrations. "Entered service 7-1-68," the notes said. "Entered Vietnam 12-18-69. These two years that's been taken from me is two years of my life, a slow death. My five-month-old daughter I only saw twice for a short time. I'm need home with my family. There's no place for a black man in a white man's world, surely not in a white man's war but God be on my side."

No one knew Roberson. Tom Crow owns a lumber yard where the senior Roberson worked for 12 years. "Nobody else in town would have known him as well as I did and I didn't know him," Crow said. There were a lot of rumors, you know...but they were just rumors.

The capital of New Zealand is Wellington, located on the extreme southwestern tip of North Island.

Rhythm methods help stop heart problems

By RICHARD SALTUS
AP Science Writer
SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Disorders that cause a person's heart to slow, speed dangerously or otherwise lose its steady rhythm are being treated in laboratories where doctors can turn the rhythm changes on and off at will. As a result, the sometimes long process of finding a suitable drug or other solution to the problem is often dramatically shortened. News from the research front in the field of cardiac arrhythmias, as the disorders are collectively known, was reported at the American Heart Association Science Writers Forum that ended Wednesday.

Described by Dr. Kenneth M. Rosen of the medical school at the University of Illinois, the new methods of diagnosis and treatment involve the natural electrical network that controls the sequential beating of different chambers of the heart. In principal, it is like the electrical system of a car, which uses a distributor to send electrical impulses to the spark plugs in a certain order. But like a car, the heart can have timing problems that throw the firing sequence out of whack.

Persons who suffer from these conditions, which include tachycardia (excessively fast heartbeat), palpitation (attacks of a pounding heart beat), heart block (interference with the transmission of the electrical impulse), may have symptoms off and on for years. Ordinary examinations such as electrocardiograms often don't detect the problem because they are made at a time when the heartbeat is normal. In such cases, said Rosen, the arrhythmia can now be brought on with the patient in a laboratory. Wire-like catheters passed through a vein into the heart are used to spark the abnormal rhythm in the heart, so physicians can see just when and where it occurs. "If we can reproduce the rhythm, we can control it," said Rosen. Though it might seem likely to scare a patient, Rosen said the technique generally reassures people who have intermittently suffered from an arrhythmia that has never occurred when doctors were looking for it. One frequent cause of these conditions is that the impulse traveling through the heart reaches an area where instead of passing through the tissue, the impulse is trapped in a circling pattern that halts its progress. If the arrhythmia can be reproduced in the lab, said Rosen, "then we can on sequential days test a number of different drugs singly and in combination. It is frequently possible to delineate a drug regimen which totally controls rhythm disturbances" that had previously gone uncontrolled. Some 150,000 rocky islands (called the Skaergaard) line the coast of Norway.

Texas citrus crop safe

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas is having better luck with its multi-million dollar citrus crop than the Florida growers. Agriculture Commissioner John White said today. The Texas crop so far has escaped weather damage, he said. "Experts in the Valley region do predict higher prices for citrus both in Florida and at home," White said, "due to the freeze damage in Florida. We can't say at this point how much prices will increase."

White said Texas cabbage is selling for as much as $10 a sack or nearly $1 a head as the result of less acreage devoted to the crop this year. A portion of this year's crop also was lost or damaged due to prolonged wet weather which has hampered harvesting in the Valley. Several days of dry weather allowed farmers to finish up their harvests and some are beginning to prepare fields for spring cotton and grain crop seeding.

FEA predicts hard times

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Energy Administration is greeting incoming President Carter with a grim forecast of tight energy supplies and rising prices for years to come. In a report issued Wednesday, the energy agency predicted a near doubling of residential fuel costs by 1985 as a result of inflation and real energy cost increases. The outlook beyond that may be even worse, the report warned.

Regardless of inflation, the FEA estimated, residential energy prices will reflect annual real cost increases of about 3 per cent if imported oil prices rise by 2 per cent. That alone would cause the 1976 residential energy bill to grow more than 30 per cent by 1985. Taken together, inflation and real cost increases may add nearly 89 per cent by 1985 to the size of the residential energy bill — including purchase of natural gas, fuel oil, electricity and motor gasoline.

brunt of natural gas price hikes. Looking further into the future, the FEA said that "by the mid-to-late-1980's projected world demand for oil could approximately equal the world's production capacity, and produce pressures for increases in world oil prices."

The FEA says the world's demand for oil will bump up against the limits of its production capacity in the mid or late 1980s. That supply-demand collision is likely to spark even steeper price increases. The report's relatively good news was that U.S. energy demand was expected to increase more slowly than previously predicted, a trend that will make it easier to reduce U.S. dependence on foreign oil.

If Congress ends regulation of interstate natural gas prices, the FEA said, the cost of residential gas may reach some 37.5 per cent higher by 1985 than if regulation at present rates continued. More realistically, even regulated rates would probably increase. The Federal Power Commission has a policy of reviewing them every two years and adopted substantial increases just last year. Either way, said Christie, householders using natural gas for heating, hot water, cooking, or air conditioning will take the Compared with a historic growth rate of about 3.3 per cent a year before the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo, U.S. energy consumption was predicted to rise at about 2.5 per cent a year, slightly lower than last year's 2.8 per cent forecast. The FEA said the slower growth is due to the combination of energy conservation measures and fuel price increases.

John Christie, assistant administrator for energy information and analysis, said in an interview that the FEA is assuming continued inflation ranging from last year's 5.6 per cent down to 4 per cent by 1985, forcing energy prices up a total of 58.4 per cent by then.
