

It's Ireland time for the Pride

The money has been raised. The bags are packed. The show is ready to go on the road. So look out, Ireland, ready or not, here comes the Pride of Pampa Band.

It seemed an almost impossible thing to achieve," said Jeff Doughten, director of the high school band. "We started with point-zero-zero funds looking at a goal of $113,000 to finance the trip. Then, after the band arrived on the first week of June, it seemed much closer. We only lacked $100,000," he quipped.

There followed the annual fruitcake sale, spaghetti supper, Christmas tree sale, candy sale, concession booth at the rodeo, the Jim Ed Brown Show with the help of KERO Radio, car hopping at the Sonic Drive In and thousands of dollars in donations from businesses and individuals in Pampa.

The exact amount of money raised is not yet known, but it was enough. In fact, the goal was surpassed. Whatever the excess after the trip, it will be put in an emergency fund for future band projects, Doughten said.

Raising the money was but part of the work. Parade marching routines had to be readied, concert music rehearsed, and stage band numbers polished.

We have been rehearsing at least three and a half hours a day on school days," Doughten said. "And we've been rehearsing four hours on Saturdays."

In addition to those rehearsals, band members gave up the recent teacher work day, which was a holiday for other students, to get in four more hours of rehearsal and marching.

On Monday night they stood inspection from 9:30 to 10:30 p.m., then several of them volunteered to stay and help Doughten and assistant director Bill Surface pack equipment for the trip. It was after midnight before they finished.

They are probably some of the most loyal and dedicated and responsible kids in Pampa High School," Doughten said of his band members.

No one could ever question their dedication and loyalty to me or the program because they have sacrificed many personal things to make this trip a success. I fully believe there is no other band program around any place that has the type of individuals we have in Pampa. The trip begins at 2:30 p.m. Thursday when the buses leave Pampa High's music building bound for the Amarillo Air Terminal and the chartered aircraft that will fly the musicians and sponsors to John F. Kennedy Air Terminal in New York City, then on to Shannon, Ireland.

At 5:50 a.m. Friday Ireland time — six hours ahead of Pampa time — equipment, baggage and travelers will load onto trucks and buses for a short trip to Limerick.

There will be some sightseeing Friday and Saturday and, of course, more rehearsals. Then, on Sunday, the band will compete in parade marching.

There will be 26 bands competing in six classes," Doughten said. "We will have to win our class to be eligible for the Treaty Stone Trophy which goes to the outstanding band in the contest."

The Pride of Pampa will be the 26th band to march, the last band the judges will observe, which is just the position we'd have selected if we'd had a choice," Doughten said.

There will be more bands entered in the St. Patrick's Day Parade in Dublin, Doughten said.

Anybody can enter," he said. "It isn't like Limerick which is an invitational contest. And there also will be other kinds of entries at Dublin — floats and things. Limerick will just be bands."

Just a few days after the band returns, they will compete in Amarillo at the University Interscholastic League concert and sight reading contest. On top of getting ready for Ireland, rehearsals have been held for the UIL contest.

Dr. Gary Garner of West Texas State University was in Pampa Tuesday for a clinic with the band, a concerted effort to polish contest music. There were two sessions, 4 to 6:30 and 7 to 9:30 p.m.

It has been a lot of work and it isn't over. But the Pride wants to bring back the top trophies from Ireland and they want to win UIL sweepstakes honors when they get home.

Doughten said that one reason the band wants to win is because "it will be the first band from Texas ever to participate and perform in the St. Patrick's Day festivities. These marching, musical ambassadors have a great opportunity to represent Pampa, Texas, and the United States."

The director added that the trip would not have been possible without the support from the community, both monetary and encouragement throughout the year.

Gunman surrenders

WARRENSVILLE HEIGHTS, Ohio (AP) — A black gunman surrendered today to the white police captain he had held hostage for 45 hours, while complaining of oppression of blacks and demanding that whites leave the planet within seven days, police said.

The release came shortly after President Carter repeated during a nationally televised news conference his earlier promise to speak with gunman Cory Moore after the hostage, Capt. Leo Keglovic, was freed.

Everybody's out everybody's safe, nobody's hurt," Police Chief Craig Merchant told reporters who waited outside this Cleveland suburb's City Hall where the siege had taken place. Also waiting on hand were relatives of Keglovic, 49-year-old father of five.

Merchant said the young community college student was to talk with the White House, but there was no immediate word as to when.

Merchant said Moore emptied the bullets from his two handguns and gave them to Keglovic. The police captain then led him out of a room and turned him over to police who waited in the corridor.

Keglovic, a diabetic, was taken to a hospital but authorities said he was unharmed.

Moore was allowed to go outside under police custody to speak with reporters.

Moore, who had been given a television set when he freed an earlier hostage, watched Carter's nationally televised White House news conference before giving up authorities said.

Carter said he was concerned that talking with Moore might set a dangerous precedent, but said he would do it anyway.

I weighed that before my own decision. I hope the police officer is released, but if he is released, I would talk to him (Moore), Carter said.

Moore, 25-year-old ex-Marine and former auto worker, had originally demanded a public apology from Carter for what he said were "misdeeds" done to blacks throughout American history.

But he said today he would free his hostage after the news conference, regardless of what Carter said, according to Merchant.

Earlier, Moore, who was armed with a handgun, had said he was demanding that whites leave the earth within seven days.

As soon as the program is over, he will unload the weapons and give them to Leo Keglovic, the diabetic police captain, Leo Keglovic, whom Moore was holding hostage, Merchant said.

Everything is all set, Merchant added. It's just a matter of sitting and waiting for the news conference.

He didn't come here to hurt anyone," Merchant had said earlier. He's constantly reminded us of that.

Carter had agreed on Tuesday to talk with Moore by telephone on the condition that he first release Keglovic.

But through the night, the ex-Marine and former auto worker refused to release the 49-year-old father of five.

He wanted the President to talk to him before he would release the hostage, and we wanted it the other way around, said Sgt. Larry Shanker.

Moore then insisted that Carter make an apology on local television this morning for all the misdeeds done to blacks from the year 1619 to 1977.

Moore has been insisting on talking with Carter almost since he took two hostages Monday afternoon. The second captive, Shelley Kiggars, 17, was released unharmed after Moore was given a television set so he could monitor news reports of the siege.

She said Moore walked into city hall, fired three shots and took her and Keglovic into a room. At times Moore tied them up, but he didn't harm them, she said.

Apology to Chili retracted

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter today repeated his determination to pursue violations of human rights around the world, but he disavowed a charge by an American delegate that the United States was involved in the 1973 overthrow of the Marxist government in Chile.

Carter's statement at a news conference came shortly after the diplomat, Brady Tyson, retracted his charge made Monday to the U.N. Human Rights Commission in Geneva.

Tyson had expressed "profound regret" for the alleged role in the overthrow and death of Chilean President Salvador Allende and said the current right-wing military government in Chile still violates human rights.

Carter was vague about this latest charge, saying he didn't know "what his concerns are."

However, Carter went on. "We are still concerned about deprivations of human rights" in other nations and "Chile may be one of those."

"Torture has been reported to us from some nations of the world," Carter said without specifically mentioning Chile.

The United States will keep up its campaign to alleviate human rights violations, he said. I think it is entirely appropriate for this nation to take the lead. I am proud of this and intend to adhere to this.

As to Tyson's original charge of U.S. involvement in the coup, Carter repeated earlier White House and State Department reactions. The remarks made by the delegates concerning our past were inappropriate," he said. "I didn't know ahead of time. It was a personal expression by our delegate."

Carter, as a candidate last year, criticized the Ford administration for helping establish the military dictatorship that now rules Chile.

In Geneva, Switzerland, Tyson said he "exceeded instructions" but did not act contrary to them in apologizing for the alleged U.S. involvement.

He made the comment to reporters outside the meeting of the United Nations Human Rights Commission where his statement Tuesday created a major stir.

Earlier Tyson told The Associated Press he thought his apology was "in the general framework of the Carter policy" but that he talked under his own responsibility.

Using his right of reply at the 32-nation meeting, Chile's delegate observer, Sergio Diez, said Tyson's statement was "not consistent from what we have heard from President Carter" recently and that it had done "great injury" to Chile. He pointed out that official U.S. reports produced no evidence of direct U.S. involvement in the coup that toppled Marxist President Salvador Allende.

Diplomats attending the commission sessions noted Washington's disclaiming of the apology, and one senior West European delegate said of Tyson, "I am not so sure I will see him again."

But some doubted that Tyson acted on his own. One Middle Eastern observer speculated that the disavowal might hint at a clash between the President, sympathizing with Tyson's views, and the State Department.

This personal statement seems to be a tactic for airing President Carter's views without facing the consequences," a Latin American diplomat commented.

In his apology Tuesday, Tyson, a former Methodist missionary and now an associate professor of Latin American studies, said:

"Our delegation would be less than candid and untrue to ourselves and our people if we did not express our profoundest regrets for the role some government officials, agencies and private groups played in the subversion of the previous, democratically elected Chilean government that was overthrown by the coup of Sept. 11, 1973."

But in Washington the State Department disavowed the apology, saying it was a "personal one that was not approved in advance and is not an expression of the administration's views."

Inspection for perfection

Band Director Jeff Doughten held inspection of his troops Monday in the band hall at Pampa High School. Each uniform and stance were scrutinized before the equipment was packed into giant boxes to be flown to

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Still no energy policy

Charging that the petroleum companies, or some of them, are deliberately withholding natural gas from the market in hopes of higher prices is one thing. Proving it is quite another matter.

Even without the built-in burden of bias, which most of us carry, the same set of facts or statistics can lead different people to entirely opposite conclusions.

Consider the allegation by congressional investigators that Texaco is sitting on more than 500 billion cubic feet of natural gas in two fields off the coast of Louisiana which they say could have been tapped to help alleviate this winter's shortage.

According to the investigators, the fields could be brought into full production in six months. Texaco, however, has not slated them for production until the 1980s.

Is this a case of capitalizing on the suffering of fuel-hungry Americans, a blatant attempt to force the deregulation of gas prices? Or is it simply prudent and commendable foresight on the part of Texaco?

The company argues that those who claim production from these reserves should be stepped up are advocating a "drain-America-now" policy. Is this a self-serving subterfuge? Or is it a wise warning we ought to heed?

Obviously, if we wanted to, if we made it our No. 1 national priority, we could vastly increase production of domestic gas and oil in a matter of months. If the nation faced a war-emergency situation, there would be no question about doing so.

For that matter, the timber industry could double or triple its production of lumber by cutting trees scheduled for future harvesting. The mining companies could accelerate their output of iron and coal as could every other supplier of raw materials.

Again, if it were a matter of immediate national survival there would be no question about doing so, and we would worry about the consequences later.

But the challenge facing us in regard to gas and oil is not that of boosting output as quickly and as greatly as possible — severe as the current shortage is.

Rather it is one of insuring that there will be enough fuel to keep the country running over the coming decades.

Of course, this still leaves room for the possibility that the energy companies have not been as energetic as they reasonably could have been in meeting the unprecedented demands of this winter. But the amount of natural gas allegedly withheld is so small compared to total consumption that it could not in any event have prevented the present crisis.

It is smaller yet compared to our projected future consumption. Thus the real danger is that by focusing on the symptoms rather than the disease itself, we risk deluding ourselves into believing there really is no long-range energy crisis and that all we have to do is force the companies to give us as much as we need.

Whether the government proves its charges against Texaco or others or not, the fact will remain that Americans are still without a sense of urgency about energy, and the country is still without a rational energy policy.

Will Carter have secrets?

All the world now knows that the Central Intelligence Agency made secret cash payments to eight 10 or maybe a dozen foreign heads of states or national leaders. In the case of King Hussein of Jordan the "financial relationship" extended over a period of 20 years.

The Republic has not fallen. Soviet tanks are not rumbling in the streets of Washington.

The same information would have been available to Americans several years ago in a book called "The CIA and the Cult of Intelligence," written by Victor Marchetti, a former CIA official, and John D. Marks, a former State Department officer. Would have been that is, had it not, along with dozens of other still suppressed passages, been censored by a federal judge as a result of a civil suit brought against the authors by the CIA.

Would the Republic have fallen then, or Soviet tanks have rumbled in the streets of Washington?

It's Possible! Key to success

By Robert Schuller

One evening a father came home to find his boy practicing baseball. "Hi, Dad!" shouted the budding athlete. "Watch me hit the ball a mile!"

The young fellow tossed the ball up, took a swing and missed. "Strike one," he shouted gleefully. "Wait, Dad. I'm going to knock the cover off this one!"

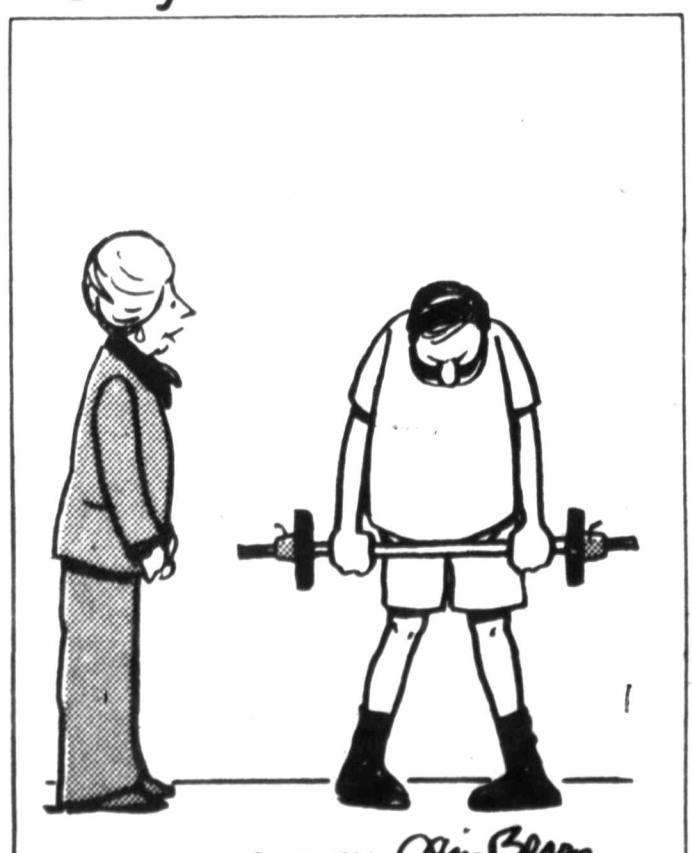

Again he tossed the ball in the air, took a healthy swing and missed. "Strike two," he said. "Well, Dad, it only takes one," he enthused. "I'm really going to clout this one!"

Carefully he positioned his feet, checked his grip on the bat and kept his eye on the ball as he tossed it up. Then a mighty swing — but again he missed. "Strike three — you're out!" he announced. And then joyfully turned to his Dad and beamed. "Boy, Dad, aren't I a great pitcher?"

That boy's going to succeed. The cure of inability is to consistently maintain a positive mental attitude, looking for possibilities! Try it in your life — it works!

"We've become so wrapped up with welfare, security and economy that we forget about freedom. You can't succeed unless you have the right to fail. If we eliminate that, we are placing a slipknot around our necks."

—William B. Saxbe, former attorney general, warning that America must avoid the trend toward socialism.

"What we're seeing today may only be the initial step in destroying the Northern states... These are the worst days in the history of Ohio and next year it will be worse."

—Gov. James A. Rhodes of Ohio on the threat of a permanent natural gas shortage in his state.

"Americans are boycotting coffee. Don't drink Coca Cola."
—Sign in a restaurant in Salvador, Brazil.

"That stuff about morality — I don't know where that came from. I'm an old line Hollywood director, and my generation believes in entertaining the public. When people come out, I don't want them to feel they wasted their money. If they find a moral too, that's okay."
—Film director Fred Zinneman.

"In the final forthcoming phase of negotiations with the United States, Panama will not swerve from its demand that the American sovereignty over the Canal Zone ends at the appropriate time, which must not be after the year 2000."
—Panamanian foreign minister Aquilino Boyd.

"I realize that it has become normal procedure for those successfully elected to public office to run term after term... but I've never believed that I'm indispensable. While I consider it the public duty and responsibility of every citizen to work for the benefit of others within our society, I have another duty — a duty which I have neglected — and that duty is to my family."
—Sen. James Abourezk (D-S.D.), announcing he will not seek re-election in 1978.

"Women's lib is of value if it teaches women to be self-reliant and courageous, but there's no point in having a women's lib movement without larger changes in society. True equality is a fearful thing. If women really want to be equal, let them carry their own things in a knapsack going through the jungle, let them go out with 19-year-old boys carrying their own mortars."
—Gloria Emerson, author of "Winners and Losers," a book about the Vietnam war, on equality for women.

"For the first time we have the Arabs asking for a resumption of peace negotiations in Geneva... Even if we don't trust every word they say, and even if there are different interpretations of the meaning of peace — whether it's real peace or the ending of the state of war — I think the conference will take place some time in the summer."
—Former Israeli defense minister Moshe Dayan, optimistic about Middle East peace prospects.

Secret prompts suit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A censored report on 20 years of secret, domestic germ-warfare tests has prompted plans for a lawsuit by the family of a man who died in 1950 after Navy ships launched bacteria in San Francisco Bay.

But most officials expressed only surprise at the report, made public Tuesday, which revealed Army tests conducted in highway and subway tunnels, stockyards, on military bases and at sea off numerous populated areas.

"The family is determined to proceed with legal action. We wanted to have as much evidence available as possible," said Edward Nevin III, an attorney whose grandfather, Edward Nevin, died of a heart infection allegedly caused by Serratia marcescens bacteria.

It is this bacteria that was released from ships off San Francisco in September 1950. Army officials testified on Tuesday before the Senate subcommittee on health and scientific resources.

Their report said the Serratia marcescens bacteria spread up to 50 miles inland, but it had been believed that the bacteria would not endanger humans.

Two years later, they said, researchers became alarmed by an outbreak of infectious disease related to Serratia marcescens among San Francisco Bay area residents who had been hospitalized at about the time of the September 1950 test.

Despite the Army's alarm, however, California apparently noticed no strange illnesses. Bob Nance of the state Department of Health, said record checks for San Francisco and other cities from the time of the tests "found no unusual health situation."

Nevin said he felt the results of his private investigation of Army domestic germ tests from 1949 to 1969, combined with material contained in the Army report, were sufficient to file a claim.

He said the claim, which must be presented before the Army can be sued, would be filed within 30 days. The Army, which has denied any link between the tests and Nevin's death, would have six months in which to consider its merits, he said.

The Army report also said a farm owned by the University of Wisconsin was one of four sites where 48 tests involving "pathogenic agents," which are disease causing, were performed.

Glenn Pound, dean of the College of Agricultural and Life Sciences, said he believed the report referred to work on Newcastle disease, a virus affecting chickens and other poultry.

Dr. B.C. Easterday of the university's department of veterinary science said Newcastle disease is a virus that affects poultry and which resembles bronchitis in its early stages, but later leads to incoordination, tremors and twitching of the head.

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Foreign aid for Romania's earthquake victims is picking up, with planes arriving or due from 13 nations. East Germany appeared to be taking the lead, sending one or more plane-loads of medical supplies and food daily.

The U.S. Air Force sent a C-130 transport loaded with antibiotics, bandages and other medical supplies on Monday. A Soviet plane arrived Tuesday.

Other shipments came from Austria, Britain, Bulgaria — which itself reported 50 dead and 120 injured in the quake Friday night — Italy, Poland, Switzerland and Yugoslavia, where the quake toll was one dead and 100 injured.

The first flights from West Germany, Greece and Denmark were due today, along with additional shipments from East Germany and Italy. The Communist party newspaper Scinteia published messages of sympathy from foreign leaders, including President Carter and Soviet Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev.

Carter said the United States "stands ready to extend emergency assistance," but Brezhnev's message made no mention of Soviet help.

"The Russians won't give us anything," one Romanian told another as they looked at a collapsed building on Magheru boulevard.

The official death toll in Romania stood at 1,034 Tuesday night, 810 of them in Bucharest.

Insurers want 'benefits'

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Insurance companies are not seeking the right to set their own rates in order to help the public, says State Insurance Board Chairman Joe Christie.

"They are proposing this bill for the benefit of the insurance industry," Christie told the House Insurance Committee Tuesday night.

In the four years he has been chairman, Christie said, the board has saved Texans hundreds of thousands of dollars by keeping rates lower than those requested by the insurance industry.

The savings in car insurance premiums in 1973 amounted to $12 million, in 1974 $61 million, in 1975 $29 million, and last year $73 million, Christie said.

Christie testified against a bill by the committee chairman, Rep. Bob Davis, R-Dallas, that would permit insurance firms to set their own rates on casualty and car insurance, subject to rollback if the board finds the rates are excessive or discriminatory.

The bill has no provision for refund of premiums the board orders reduced.

"The insurance lobbyists are asking you members of the committee to trade a proven system, which has consistently denied the full rate increases sought by the insurance companies, for a system which promises nothing," Christie said.

"You are being asked to swap a system which gives the public a voice in rate making for a system which leaves rate making to the whims of the insurance companies," he said.

Father, son buried after double murder

HOUSTON (AP) — Mark Naquin, 11, "idolized his father" and would spend weekends with him at the service station where he was employed.

Tuesday, father and son were to be buried together, victims of a gunman who held up the station where the father, Leonard Roy, worked and shot them both execution style — once each in the back of the head.

Mark's body, with tear stains still showing on his face, was found next to that of his father Sunday morning by a police officer in the service bay of the gas station. Mark's body was still in a semi-kneeling position with his head resting on his father's knee.

"It is a nightmare. It would take someone who is crazy to do something like this," said Mark's mother, Margaret.

J. T. Brewer, manager of the station, said: "The little boy idolized his daddy. He stayed here with his daddy on weekends and would sleep in an old camper besides the station."

Police investigators said the gunman took nearly $700. Officers said another service station attendant was shot about a mile away apparently by the same man.

They said bullets found at the two sites were the same caliber and had the same markings.

The man shot at the second station was identified as Mohammed Sadat Nasser. He was reported in poor condition in a Houston hospital with a head wound.

The insurance industry may argue that flexible rates will permit greater competition and drive down premiums, Christie said, but all one has to do is look at what has happened with county mutual insurance companies, which by law are allowed to set their rates on car insurance.

Comprehensive coverage runs 107 to 171 per cent higher than the board's rates, he said. Liability coverage averages 6 to 50 per cent higher, and collision coverage averages 21 to 119 per cent higher, he said.

"We believe our record shows public's voice in insurance rate making is being heard. That is what the insurance companies mean when they complain that the present system allows 'political pressures' to enter in the rate making process."

"If the companies don't know that 'political pressures' is what make democracy work, they have a lot to learn about our form of government," Christie said.

Don Cavness, an Austin insurance agent, spoke for the bill. A former legislator who specialized in insurance law, Cavness noted that life insurance, hospitalization insurance, accident and health insurance and other kinds of insurance were not similarly regulated.

"Is fire and car insurance such a dire necessity for Texans that they must be regulated?" Cavness said.

"Then why don't we set the rates on washing machines, or dryers, or houses? Let casualty insurance companies fight it out like everybody else, in the market place."

"The only purpose of insurance companies is to write insurance, fulfill a need and make a bare profit," Cavness said.

Davis said the bill would be referred to a subcommittee.

After months of planning and practice, the Pride of Pampa band's trip to Ireland will begin Thursday.

The students' experience aboard has been made possible by countless people... those who donated time, those who donated money, those like Chuck and Doris Ekleberry who have helped get the travelers organized.

Band Director Jeff Doughten has made extra sure that no tax dollars are being spent. That was a promise he made to the school board when it approved the trip.

Official sponsors who are school teachers are hiring their own substitutes, the Band boosters are footing the bill for the chartered bus to take the band to the airport and for phone calls to Ireland to firm up last minute details.

Although we won't be able to bring you reports on the journey every 10 minutes, The News will bring you a special Ireland Scrapbook on Thursday, March 31.

The special edition will feature stories and photographs from the two newscasters which The News is sending to cover the trip.

Although all Texas visitors won't leave the imprint of cowboy boots on Irish soil, Pampans will leave a bit of the traditional West with their new friends.

The Pampa News is furnishing 15 western dress hats to be presented to Dublin dignitaries. The Top of Texas Cowbells have given each band member a giant-sized red bandana to pass along to an Irishman.

The sheriff estimated damage would run into thousands of dollars. It was the second explosion this month involving the quarry, when workers have been on strike since Feb. 19 over a wage reopener clause in the contract.

Needed: used clothing for two 5-year-olds. Jane Kadingo of the county welfare department sent out the plea this week. Some of the children in the department's care — temporarily usually — need clothing and Mrs. Kadingo explained that county funds are limited.

Rex McAnelly said a fellow from back East was complaining to him about the recent bad dust storms. Rex told him we are fortunate to have some of them now and then because otherwise the Panhandle is such a great place it would be overrun with folks moving here from cold, congested Northeastern portions of the nation.

An 81-year-old nursing home resident in Milwaukee found a cure for loneliness. She placed a classified ad in a local newspaper chastising her friends for abandoning her. Within three weeks her room was filled with mail.

The woman found her deluge of mail overwhelming and heartening... a "kind of a joke because all of a sudden everyone is trying to see me, talk to me and know something about me."

One letter came from a friend she had not seen in 45 years. A group of fifth graders sent letters.

Stasia Pokora had been confined to a wheelchair since suffering a stroke last summer. She plans to place another newspaper ad thanking the friends and strangers for their attention.

This item was noted by Nan Ezzell of the Canadian Record in her award-winning column Petticoat Patter. Mrs. Ezzell said a resident of the Abraham Home there gave her the story.

Dallas Baptist College is dropping athletic programs and shifting the funds... an estimated $100,000... to academic programs.

The college's athletic director said, "I expected some reductions in my budget but this came like a bombshell."

As explanation, the school president said, "we are committed to a balanced budget. The board felt the only way to balance the budget and still have a quality program would be to have the athletic program take a back seat to the total mission of Dallas Baptist College."

Bill would mean gas price hike

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Representatives take a final vote today on a bill limiting take-or-pay gas contracts, which tend to increase the price consumers pay for natural gas.

The measure won tentative approval in the House on Tuesday, 102-36.

A bill-killing amendment came close to adoption, however, and the measure was saved only by the flip-flops of 12 members who changed sides in mid-debate.

House members were told take-or-pay contracts require pipeline companies to pay producers for specified amounts of gas, even if demand declines and they cannot use it all.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Tom Schieffer, D-Fort Worth, would prohibit contracts requiring the buyer to take more than 80 per cent of the seller's deliverable gas.

As written, it also gave buyers two years in which to make up shortfalls in their purchases under such contracts.

Representatives changed that to three years, however, on a 74-63 vote.

Dynamite rocks homes 100 miles away

CAREY, Ohio (AP) — A dynamite blast felt 100 miles away in Michigan tore through a rock quarry in rural Wyandot County today, hurling debris for a mile and causing damage to homes in a five-mile radius.

Sheriff Mark R. Kauble said the blast, which occurred at 3:46 a.m., formed a crater 100 feet long by 80 feet wide and 50 feet deep.

He said 40,000 to 50,000 pounds of dynamite were involved in the blast at the National Lime and Stone Co., one mile north of Carey in northwestern Ohio.

The sheriff estimated damage would run into thousands of dollars. It was the second explosion this month involving the quarry, when workers have been on strike since Feb. 19 over a wage reopener clause in the contract.

A minor explosion on March 2 in the driveway of the plant manager caused little damage and no injuries.

The suit named only Hereford.

That was the decision Thursday of U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward in Lubbock and his ruling may have far-reaching effects in Texas school districts, many of which use the place system.

The federal order originally was issued during the Ford Administration and, according to the Justice Department, it was designed to prevent the diluting of minority representation which the department alleges can be the case in the place system.

Judge Woodward's ruling upheld the HISD contention that the district does not qualify as a political subdivision because the district does not register voters.

An April 2 school board election in Hereford will be conducted as planned with trustees to be elected by places and with runoff for positions in which no candidate gets a majority.

If Justice Department attorneys appeal the decision, the case will go to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington.

Miss Loren's chief attorney, Emmanuele Golino, said, "The questioning may also be connected with the financial status of Mr. Ponti and recent investigations begun by financial authorities."

Miss Loren was reported in tears during her long stay in the airport customs office. When she emerged just before boarding a 5:05 a.m. flight to Paris, she refused to answer reporters' questions but managed to smile for photographers.

Ponti met Miss Loren at the airport in Paris, but neither would discuss her interrogation. "I'm tired because I haven't slept," she said. "That's all."

"I don't want to talk now," said Ponti. "I just want to see my wife."

The Pontis have been French citizens for some years but still carry on much of their film activities in Rome. They maintain residences in both Paris and Rome.

Miss Loren had just walked through a passport checkpoint at the Rome airport about 7:30 p.m. when an officer stepped up and asked her some questions, witnesses reported.

Also added was a provision requiring producers to share with landowners the revenue they obtain under take-or-pay contracts for gas not actually sold.

Schieffer said gas prices to consumers rise when pipeline companies must pay producers for gas they don't receive.

"This bill will ease the burden on the consumers and ratepayers of Texas," he said. Lo-Vaca Gathering Co. has contended that take-or-pay has added more than a dime per 1,000 cubic feet (mcf) of gas during some months.

Rep. John Wilson, D-La-Grange, said the take-or-pay problem was solved by the railroad commission's Dec. 13 order tying gas production allowances to pipeline company estimates of their monthly needs.

"If the legislature votes for 80 per cent take-or-pay, I guarantee the oil industry will tell the railroad commission the legislature has mandated it and will insist that they amend their order to allow 80 per cent," Wilson said.

He offered an amendment dropping the permissible take-or-pay requirement to 10 per cent of a producer's deliverable gas. A motion to table it failed.

Rep. John Wilson, D-La-Grange, said the take-or-pay problem was solved by the railroad commission's Dec. 13 order tying gas production allowances to pipeline company estimates of their monthly needs.

But after long minutes of further debate, the amendment itself failed, 67-72.

Switching sides were Reps. Bennie Bock, D-New Braunfels; Phil Gates, D-Pampa; Forest Green, D-Corsicana; T. H. McDonald, D-Mesquite; Walt Parker, D-Denton; Clay Smothers, D-Dallas; Bill Sullivan, D-Gainesville; Kenneth Vaughan, D-Garland; Tim Von Dohlen, D-Houston; Emmett Whitehead, D-Rusk; and Ron Wilson, D-Houston.

Advice

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 23-year-old woman who is taking over a prosperous family business started by my grandfather. This is a small town, and my grandfather formed some valuable business relationships with men who are still very important to the success of our business.

The problem is that these "gentlemen" find me quite attractive. So much, in fact, that I have found myself backed up against the wall, hugged, squeezed and generally mauled by these kindly old bizzards, while they keep reminding me that they've been good customers for over four decades.

If these men were my age, I could handle them, but they're all over 65, and trying singlehandedly (and sometimes doublehandedly) to close the generation gap.

Is there a way to keep this business (and myself) on our feet?

EDGY

DEAR EDGY: If you're a good businesswoman, you'll keep the business on its feet without tolerating passes from lecherous grandfather types. It may take the technique of an O.J. Simpson or a Tony Dorsett on broken-field running, but that, plus a good straight-arm (and, if necessary, some straight talk) is all you need.

DEAR ABBY: When a guy asks me to dance, how can I turn him down without hurting his feelings? I'm 16, if that makes any difference. Thank you.

CHICKEN

DEAR CHICKEN: Say, "Thanks, but I think you'd be more interesting to talk to. Shall we sit it out?" (P.S. Then you'd better have something to talk about, even if it's only a string of questions to keep the conversation moving.)

DEAR ABBY: Right now I am so upset I want to get this off my chest to relieve my own anxiety, and if you print it in your column it will be a big favor to many women.

I am in my eighth month with my first child, and today I had a checkup. Coming home on the bus, I sat next to a motherly-looking woman who struck up a conversation with me. She talked about nothing but the horrors of childbirth! She had had six and lost two. Her sister had a child who was born deaf and blind, and her daughter's first child was retarded because of the long and complicated labor she had endured. Then her neighbor's baby strangled on the umbilical cord during the birth process. Abby, by the time I got off that bus I was shaking like a leaf!

Please tell well-meaning (?) women that pregnant women do not want to hear such tales, and if they can't say something cheerful about childbirth to not say anything at all.

UPSET

DEAR UPSET: You've said it all. And very well. Let's hope it gives those bearers of bad tidings cause to pause.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My problem is that I am 5 feet 10 and only 140 pounds. There is so much information on losing weight and so little on how to gain it. Please help me and the many others who want to gain weight.

Is it best to start on a weight-training course or should I try to put on weight first and then go on a weight-training course?

Can I gain more weight by eating more, while limiting my activities, or can I gain weight faster using a weight-training course? What vitamins will help me gain weight? I would appreciate any information you can give me.

DEAR READER — This question is asked far more often than you realize. It is asked most often by young men and may be related to our stereotyped concept of masculinity. Adding pounds of fat to your torso will not increase your maleness.

It will only increase your chances of having a major problem with obesity later in life and the chances of having arterial disease that causes heart attacks, strokes and even decreases a male's sexual capacity earlier in life than would otherwise occur. Many think that extra blubber is actually unsightly.

At your height 140 pounds is just fine. If you want to improve your body contours so that you appear more muscular you need a muscle strength training program. I am not implying you need to develop large bulging muscles, but rather to firm up your body and if you have body fat convert it to muscle.

When a young man says I want to gain weight it is necessary to know if he wants to gain muscle size, strength, or wants some blubber on his torso. It makes a difference. If you want to emulate the fat, stock show animal all you need to do is be inactive, use as few calories as possible and stuff yourself with rich foods, to take in as many calories as possible. Such a program will help you get fat and sloppy if that is your goal.

Otherwise I recommend a strength-training program. You can build muscle strength and reasonable size without adding a lot of fat to the body. In most instances the key to success is the exercise program. As you load a muscle when it contracts, it grows stronger and bigger to be able to lift that amount of weight easily.

There are right and wrong ways of doing this. I am sending you The Health Letter number 54, Weight Training for Energy and Weight Control. As you develop and maintain muscles your muscle mass will help keep you from getting fat. So, developing muscles is good for those who want to avoid obesity, including women, and for those who want to develop a stronger, healthier, muscular body. Others who want this information can send 50 cents for it with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York NY 10019.

When you develop adequate strength of the muscles you need for sports it makes it easier to be successful. A person who wants to play tennis is wise to develop the arm and shoulder muscles by a good training program.

Vitamins will not help you gain weight unless you have a vitamin deficiency. They do not provide calories for energy nor do they provide protein for building body tissues. They merely provide the chemical catalyst that your body's enzyme system uses to process your calorie-containing foods; fats, proteins and carbohydrates.

Polly's pointers

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — Can you tell me how to remove green crepe paper water stains from a dark pine table? Condensation from a plant seeped through during the holidays and the table does not have a protective finish, only furniture wax and polish. — MARY R.B.

DEAR MARY R.B. — If your table has a heavy wax finish the color may not have penetrated through it. I would remove the wax and see the state of the actual wood. I can find no authority for your particular stain but the colored water doubtless works much like an ink stain. You might try a furniture cleaner. If that does not work perhaps it could be rubbed out with rottenstone and oil, as is often prescribed for ink stains. Sanding of the entire top may be required as a last resort. Such offbeat types of stains often require a lot of experimenting. Good luck! — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — The one-half pound plastic margarine containers are ideal to use for holding cosmetics. One can be used for lipsticks, roll-on perfumes, nail polish, cotton balls, etc. — BONITA.

DEAR POLLY — Men who find that those new double edged razors clog after a few shaves can make them last longer by cleaning between the blades with an old toothbrush. The blades will last twice as long with fewer nicks and cuts. — MRS. C.S.

Polly will send you one of her "peachy" thank-you cards, ideal for framing or placing in your family scrapbook, if she sees your favorite Pointer, Peeve or Problem in her column. Write Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

About books

The worst years of our lives

Capsule reviews prepared by the American Library Assn.

By Carol Felsenthal

Where does success in high school get you after graduation? Nowhere, according to a couple of new books on the subject.

In fact, life after high school usually turns out much better for the unattractive, unathletic and all-around unpopular.

Ralph Keyes has written a very funny book about the horrors of high school. Himself an "outie" back then, Keyes obviously loves bombarding the reader with marvelous anecdotes about celebrities, all of which prove that today's winners were often yesterday's losers. He has an equally impressive supply of examples of "innies" who marched "off into obscurity after graduation."

Ever hear of Bill Schilling? He's the man who beat President Ford for class president. How about Robert Logue? He beat Richard Nixon for the same post.

Actress Mia Farrow was a high school wallflower. All McGraw never had a date. "Vogue" cover-girl Lauren Hutton had to have her prom date arranged by a teacher. Cartoonist Charles Schultz, the creator of "Peanut," had every one of his cartoons rejected by the yearbook staff.

The high school experience, Keyes claim, leaves an indelible mark, particularly on the misfits, because they're neither able to forget their misery nor forgive their tormentors.

The late Janis Joplin, a rock superstar, was so unpopular in high school that her claim to fame was membership in the slide rule club. "Man those people hurt me," she later recalled. "It makes me happy to know that they're still back there plumbers and all."

Or, as successful writer Sam Keen puts it: "I can't imagine anything, even old age, being as painful as high school."

But high school suffering is not in vain, Keyes concludes, since the very qualities that insure unpopularity in high school — ambition, aggressiveness and imagination — stimulate success later on.

Keyes concedes that "innies" may star in movies and professional sports but he points out, "outies" write their lines, produce their movies, own their teams and comment on their performance.

Keyes' book is a story of a group of high school classmates called, "How did they turn out?" That's exactly what co-authors Medved and Wallechinsky have done. But unfortunately they wrote a whole book on the subject, forgetting that "What Really Happened" to the 30 classmates they interviewed is apt to be less interesting to outsiders. Still the book is a readable and valuable view of a group leaving home and high school at the onset of radically changing times.

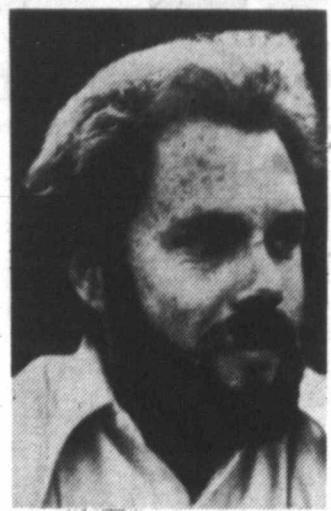

In 1965, Time magazine selected the senior class of Palisades High, a wealthy suburban Los Angeles school, as the subject of a cover story on "Today's Teenagers." Time predicted that these young people would be the most successful and affluent ever to raise families and fortunes in America.

Just after graduation, riots broke out in Watts, troop buildings began in Vietnam, and drugs hit Palisades High. In 1966 Newsweek ran a story school. . . They're all working for Bell Telephone now, and I'm GLAD."

Comedian Mike Nichols had just finished his nightclub act when a former classmate, who had been very popular in high school, approached and said, "You don't remember me, but . . . Nichols, who had been very unpopular, replied, "I remember you very well. Your name is so-and-so and you are a s—."

What are you doing now?" "I sell used cars," the classmate replied. "I'm so glad," said Nichols.

But high school suffering is not in vain, Keyes concludes, since the very qualities that insure unpopularity in high school — ambition, aggressiveness and imagination — stimulate success later on.

Keyes concedes that "innies" may star in movies and professional sports but he points out, "outies" write their lines, produce their movies, own their teams and comment on their performance.

Lou Grant to be editor

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lou Grant, the sardonic, fireplug-shaped TV news director Ed Asner plays on CBS' "Mary Tyler Moore Show," began as a newspaperman. Next fall, he'll be rejoining the pad-and-pen brigade.

"Haven't seen the first script yet," said Asner, puffing on a cigarette in the den of his pleasant, sunny home here. "But I'm sure it'll show me as a 50-year-old man winding up in Los Angeles, looking for a new lease on life. And a job."

"And with my old newspaper contacts. I'm able to land a job on a major Southern California daily."

The job, as assistant city editor and a paper run by a strong-willed woman publisher, is a step down for Grant.

But for Asner, it's a step up to star billing in his own hour-long CBS series, an as-yet untitled newspaper show created by Allan Burns and James L. Brooks, who created "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" in 1970.

The MTM series is ending. Its last episode, on March 19, is about . . . well, let's just say Lou Grant, at an age many men start their pension-time countdown, finds he needn't worry about that at WJM-TV.

Which sets the stage for Asner's return next fall to newspapering, again playing Lou Grant, the old pro with a heart of gold and liver of steel, the classic scribe with a jug of fire-water in his desk drawer.

Asner, regarded off-camera as one of this town's truly nice guys, reminds me of a few old newshawks I've known. It may be because he actually once worked on a newspaper in his home town, Kansas City, Kan.

That it was the Wyandotte High School newspaper makes no difference. You've got to start somewhere. Ed says he started as the paper's feature page editor, working with a lady coeditor.

"I handled all the gossip columns, did all the interviews," he explained. "At the same time, I was playing football. It was one of the greatest honors my journalism teacher, Bill Corporan, paid me."

"He never thought I could do both and seemed to be enormously impressed that I found a way to wear both hats at the same time."

Mexican Fiesta set for April in Canadian

CANADIAN — The annual Mexican Fiesta, parish-wide project of the Sacred Heart Catholic Church here, will be April 3 in the Women's Christian Temperance Union building on Main Street.

Mrs. Othello Miller, publicity chairwoman for the fiesta, said it is the only money-making project where 100 per cent of the proceeds go to the church.

"It is made possible by the generosity and patronage not only of the business people and residents of Canadian, but also by those of Pampa and other area communities," Mrs. Miller said.

The Rev. Wendelin Dunker, pastor of Sacred Heart Catholic Church, "works closely with all committees, giving the necessary incentive to lagging spirits and aching backs to make the Fiesta a success," she added. Rev. Dunker is also associate pastor of St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church in Pampa.

Ron Butler belted a grand slam homer in each game to ignite unbeaten Altus, Okla., to a 9-3, 14-6 doubleheader sweep over Pampa Tuesday afternoon at Optimist Park.

The wins give Altus, a state semifinalist last year in Oklahoma, a 6-0 record, while Pampa falls to 1-4.

After sophomore pitcher Rick Dougherty retired Altus in order in the top of the first inning, the Harvesters took a 3-0 lead on a three-run homer by Loug Burns. Dougherty then shut out Altus through the next three innings even though the Bulldogs got runners on second and third in the fourth.

The fireworks began in the fifth when Butler pounded a grand slam to give Altus a 4-3 lead. The Bulldogs added three runs in the sixth and three in the seventh.

Altus hurler Jackie Irons, who beat Wichita Falls Friday on a no-hitter last week, upped his record to 2-0, giving up five hits (two in the first inning) and two walks. He struck out nine.

Borger's Jackson named all-tourney

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Ten of the 21 all-tournament basketball choices in schoolboy divisions A, 2A and 3A have at least another year to play, including Broadus Terry Teagle, who has won honors three years in a row.

The 6-4 junior has paced his team to two consecutive Class A titles. He scored 52 points and grabbed 24 rebounds in the semifinals and finals at the two-day tournament this year.

The all-star players selected by media covering the tournament include nine juniors and sophomore Bobby Patton of Morton, who tied for the fifth spot in 2A with two other players.

Champion Dangerfield placed three players — unanimous choices Gary Lewis and Sedrick Younger and Carey Bardwell — on the 3A all-tournament team.

Mike Jackson of runnerup Borger also was a unanimous selection in 3A. He was the leading scorer in that division with 56 points, followed by Lewis with 42 and Younger with 41.

Indiana State, Houston meet in NIT tournament

HOUSTON (AP) — The "birds" performing in Hofheinz Pavilion tonight when Houston meets Indiana State in a first round match of the National Invitation Tournament (NIT) will be of no interest to the Audubon Society.

Bird-watching enthusiasts would also have to be basketball fans to enjoy the sights and sounds of Houston's Otis Birdsong and Indiana State's Larry Bird.

Bird, a sophomore from French Lick, Ind., is the nation's No. 3 scorer with a 32.4 average and Birdsong, a senior from Winter Haven, Fla., ranks fourth nationally with a 30.5 average.

The game is one of eight regional contests serving as the first round of the 40th annual NIT, oldest post season basketball tournament in the U.S.

First round winners will advance to the quarter-finals in New York's Madison Square Garden March 14-15.

Tournament semifinals are March 17 and the championship game is March 20.

Indiana State comes into the game with a 25-2 record, which ties Nevada-Las Vegas for the best record in the nation for a major independent.

Bird, who also ranks ninth nationally in rebounding with a 13.7 average, already has caught the eye of pro scouts and Cougar coach Guy Lewis.

They say he's one of the best players in the country," Lewis said. "He not only can shoot but he dribbles well and gets the ball to the open man. And what scares me is they'll me the kid playing next to him is an even better shooter."

Lewis referred to junior Harry Morgan, who is averaging 17 points per game. Indiana State also has 6-11 center DeCarsta Webster, who averages 10 rebounds per game.

The Cougars hope to counter with a balanced scoring attack that is ranked No. 2 in the nation behind Nevada-Las Vegas. The Cougars, who are 26-7, are averaging 95.2 points per game.

Houston was beaten by South-west Conference champion Arkansas Saturday in the finals of the SWC tournament here and then was shut out by the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) tournament committee.

The winner of the Cougar-Sycamore game will advance to New York March 14 to play the winner of the Illinois State-Creighton game.

Allen quits at Lefors, accepts Silverton job

LEFORS — Jim Allen, an advocate of the old Notre Dame box offense, has resigned as the Lefors High football coach and has accepted the same position at Silverton.

Lefors of District 3-B was 2-7 under Allen in 1975, his first season, and 6-3 last year. Allen was an assistant under Leonard Tolbert in 1974 when the Pirates had their most successful season since 1949, advancing to the state semifinals.

Silverton of 2-B was 2-8 last season under Weldon McCord, who resigned recently after four years as head coach.

O.C. Rampley, superintendent at Silverton, declined to say whether McCord's resignation was forced, adding that Allen "was the best man for us out of nine or 10 applicants."

Applications are being accepted by Jerrell Julian, Lefors superintendent, for the position of head football coach. Julian also is seeking a girls' basketball coach to replace Billy Bob Adams, who recently resigned.

Dougherty went the distance in picking up his first loss of the season against no victories. He yielded seven hits, walked four and fanned four.

Altus catcher John Haggerty, who had no hits in 14 plate appearances before the game, was two for four with a double and home run.

Altus rapped five Pampa pitchers for 13 hits in the second game. Butler's grand slam sparked the Bulldogs to a 9-0 lead in the top of the first inning.

The Harvesters cut the gap to 9-5 before Altus scored once in Altus, Okla., catcher John Haggerty prepares to fire the baseball down to second base to catch Pampa's Jeff Copeland in the bottom of the seventh inning of the first Double play game of Tuesday's doubleheader. The throw, which was in time, came after John Davis struck out and the ball got by Haggerty.

ISU rips Creighton in 1st round

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Illinois State rediscovered basketball after a full half of its first post-season game. Now, says Coach Gene Smithson, bring on the best.

The towering Redbirds, cold after a 10-day layoff, spluttered through the first half but surged back and whipped Creighton 65-58 in a mistake-riddled first-round National Invitational Tournament game Tuesday night.

Illinois State won a berth in the NIT quarter-finals at New York next week. Smithson, whose team's 22-6 record includes a victory over fifth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas, gives his club a good chance in the tournament.

"We can play with anybody in the country," Smithson said.

"We've proved that. We didn't play a real good game tonight. The layoff hurt us. We weren't sharp."

Illinois turned the ball over 13 times in the first half and missed 25 field goal attempts on the way to a frigid 32 per cent shooting average and a deficit of 32-28.

But Creighton was hampered when 6-foot-8 center Rick Apke, its leading scorer, got into early foul trouble. Illinois State mounted a second-half surge when Apke drew his fourth foul shortly after intermission.

Although Creighton pulled within one point on the strength of a 10-point streak by John Johnson, the surge ended when Apke fouled out at 5:57 with the score 53-52. The game ended with a rash of fouls as Creighton tried to break an Illinois State slowdown.

Dietl hired as WT's AD

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Drake Sports Information Director Dick Dietl has confirmed that he will accept the athletic director's job at West Texas State.

Dietl, 46, said he will turn in his resignation Thursday to Athletic Director Bob Karnes. He will succeed Gene Mayfield, who resigned on Jan. 8 effective April 1.
