Wider highway for Pampa

Bonds to finance a new storm sewer, approved by the Pampa electorate in 1966, are paying for this 12-foot deep trench along Texas 273 (South Cuyler Street). The trench, which will house the new storm sewer, is part of an $886,668 construction project to widen the highway between intersections with U.S. 70 and FM 750 (McCullough Street). Contractor on the job is Gilvin - Terrill Inc., of Amarillo.

Most contracts renewed

By JANE P. MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff

The Pampa Independent School District board of trustees stuck to its promise Monday night and reduced the number of teachers employed by the school district.

All contracts were renewed with the exception of three groups: seven retirements, seven resignations and several pending conferences with principals.

This takes care of a major part of the recommendations passed March 11 by the board to reduce the number of personnel and improve the quality of education. Paul Simmons, board president, told The News.

Resignations came from Mary Reeve, Coralie Laughlin, Suzanne Palmer, Dale Opitz, Peggy Daniel, Judith Lisman and George Bailey.

Simmons said that several teachers who were offered new contracts would be subject to re-assignment in qualified positions.

The contracts were a result of two executive meetings of the Pampa school board.

"We are looking at teaching ability and ability to achieve discipline in the classroom," Simmons said.

One change was to add duties of part-time assistant principal for Scott Dunnam. He is head track coach and assistant football coach.

In other personnel matters, the board asked the superintendent to try to rehire Vernon Day who quit his job as school tax appraiser to rejoin the National Guard.

David Crossman moved and Curt Beck seconded that the school try to rehire Day with a $150 a month salary increase. The vote was a tie. Also voting for the motion with Beck and Crossman was Bob Lyle.

Beck then moved, with a second by Buddy Epperson, that Day be offered a $150 a month increase on his anniversary date. The motion passed by a 4 to 2 vote.

Voting against was Al Smith and Simmons.

Day was hired Aug. 30, 1976 at $1,000 a month.

The board tabled a request from Ed Lehnick, athletic director, to buy $5,793.45 in athletic supplies for the 1977-78 school year.

Several trustees expressed the desire to purchase equipment from local vendors when the bids were close. Lehnick said that out-of-town bids did not include shipping charges which could make the bids more expensive.

Trustees asked to have another list of bids which included shipping costs for a more equitable comparison.

"Are we making sure we keep the equipment we have, exercising the best controls possible," Simmons asked the athletic director.

"We're working on it," Lehnick answered.

Simmons read a letter from Chuck Ekleberry, Band Booster president, praising the conduct of the Pride of Pampa Band in Ireland.

The band returned Saturday morning from a nine-day trip to the Emerald Isle.

"You (Superintendent Bob Phillips) and the board of trustees of Pampa Independent Schools must be very proud of this group and the good name they are bringing to Pampa, the Texas Panhandle and the Nation," the letter read. It also lauded directors Jeff Doughten and Bill Surface for their "dedication and hard work."

In other action the board approved the second reading of Section E of the policy manual and okayed the payment of bills.

Bills include: $2,208.25 for shoes and track supplies, $4,388.53 for milk for February,

$651.05 for tortilla shells, $37.80 for rapidograph set, $1,313.75 for January phone bills, $400 for tax contract with City of Pampa, $43.50 for bus barn laundry services, $19,303.84 for January gas bill, $315,916.90 for February payroll, $136.50 for entry fees for five choirs, $1,200 insurance for 100 football players, $200 lodging for swim team at Midland and $173.60 filming basketball.

Bill Arrington was absent from the meeting at Carver Center, 321 W. Albert.

A bit of the blarney

The Pampa school board members looked like Irish tourists Monday night when Jeff Doughten, director of the Pride of Pampa band, gave each an Irish wool tam. The band returned Saturday morning from Ireland where it won the top trophy in the Dublin St. Patrick's Day parade. Doughten thanked the board for its support of the band and its activities. Among the new hat owners are Buddy Epperson, left, and Curt Beck.

Proposal: register on election day

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration asked Congress today to allow voters to register on election day and to pass a constitutional amendment to provide direct popular election of the president and vice president.

The proposal to junk the embattled Electoral College method of electing presidents and vice presidents was part of a comprehensive election law revision plan prepared by Vice President Walter F. Mondale, who disclosed it at a news conference today.

The administration proposal also seeks public financing for congressional campaigns, a revision of the present system of public financing for presidential campaigns and liberalization of the Hatch Act to allow increased participation in political campaigns by federal civil servants.

The array of confusing and sometimes burdensome registration requirements now prevents many citizens from casting their ballots on election day," the vice president said in a statement prepared for his news conference.

He said states that have simplified registration requirements have seen dramatic results through increased voter turnout.

Under current procedures, voters must register in advance of going to the polls. Mondale said that in states where voters can register for state elections on election day, including his own state of Minnesota, the results have typically been a significant increase in voter participation with no increase in voter fraud.

Over 450,000 Minnesota citizens were registered on election day in 1976 yet not a single charge of fraud was filed.

Under the plan, which Mondale said has bipartisan support, a state could receive 20 cents for each vote cast in the previous presidential election to help pay for increased registration costs.

According to estimates provided at the news conference, the total cost could reach $15.5 million or more.

President Carter discussed the revisions with the Democratic congressional leadership at a White House breakfast today.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., a leader in efforts to eliminate the electoral college, planned to attend the news conference.

His presence was considered a sign of the administration's support for its efforts to replace the electoral college with a system that will more accurately reflect the popular vote in presidential elections.

Under current law, presidents are elected on the basis of electoral votes. Each state has one electoral vote for each senator and one for each member of the House of Representatives. All of a state's electoral votes go to the candidate who wins the popular balloting in the state.

Reps. John Brademas, D-Ind., and Frank Thompson, D-N.J., planned to introduce the proposal for a "universal voter registration act" today.

Cable tv gets rate hike

By TEX DEWEESE
Pampa News Staff

City commissioners today granted a 50 cents a month rate increase to Pampa Cable TV Inc. and in return Wayne Stedum, manager of the cable outlet, announced programs from Channel 17 in Atlanta, Ga. An independent television station will be brought to Pampa subscribers via satellite within the next two months.

The increase will boost the cable rate from $7.25 to $7.75 monthly effective April 1.

Stedum told commissioners subscribers who have prepaid balances in advance will not come under the rate hike until time for renewal.

"We have plans to bring space age service to our system in Pampa," Stedum said "this will bring Station WTCC in Atlanta to local subscribers."

Stedum said an earth station will be erected at the Pampa cable tower site to receive signals from the satellite.

WTCC is a 24-hour operation and will make available many sports events not seen heretofore in Pampa. Stedum said it will carry Cincinnati Reds and Atlanta Braves baseball games as well as the Atlanta Hawks and Atlanta Flames schedules.

Pampa Cable TV observed its tenth anniversary in February. It started in 1967 with three Amarillo channels and currently has expanded to 10 channels including Dallas and Fort Worth along with news and weather outlets.

When no opposition was offered, an ordinance annexing Lea St. in northwest Pampa and Cherokee St. in northeast Pampa was approved on final reading.

Approved on first reading was an ordinance changing from SF 2 to SF 3 Lots 10-15 inclusive, Block 1 Broadmoor Addition, and Lots 17-18 Block 1 Cole Addition, to allow mobile homes in the area.

Favorable action was taken on resolutions authorizing participation in improvement of the police teletype system and law enforcement radio communication network.

City Manager Mack Wolford was authorized to discuss with school and county officials a proposal to join the city in contracting for aerial photography and mapping of the city and a one-mile radius around the city limits. The total cost of the project would be around $6,200.

An ordinance was approved on first reading prohibiting park on the west side of the 300-block of N. Frost St.

Commissioners asked that an ordinance be drawn for presentation at the next meeting to prohibit parking on Kentucky St. for a certain distance east of N. Hobart in the vicinity of Highland General Hospital. It would affect only the south side of Kentucky.

Further study was asked on a request for the lease of city-owned land between Texas Ave. and N. Ward St.

Commissioners heard a report from the city manager concerning the public hearing scheduled April 13 on the city's application for a landfill permit.

Islands may secede

BOSTON (AP) — Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket, wanting to prove their threat to secede from Massachusetts is not an idle publicity ploy, are ready with legislation to sever the commonwealth from its two most famous island communities.

Islanders are up in arms over a legislative redistricting plan announced earlier this year that would cut them their two seats in the Massachusetts House.

They are backing state Rep. Terrence McCarthy's proposal that the islands simply break away from the commonwealth and either govern themselves or find someone who will treat them with more respect.

McCarthy of Martha's Vineyard, planned a news conference today to unveil a three-page document officially seeking secession.

The proposal will be filed as a bill in the Massachusetts House. If approved by the legislature, it would then have to be ratified by Congress.

But McCarthy said he is not sure what the final result will be if the secession attempt succeeds.

"A protectorate (of the United States), maybe, a separate state. I doubt it, joining up with another state, that's likely," he said in an interview Monday.

The combined population of the two islands — about 14,000 year-round residents — probably is not enough to make them self-supporting as a state. But that's still considered a possibility by the islanders because the islands' populations swell to four or five times that in the summer, when tourists flock there for vacations.

As an alternative to statehood, McCarthy said, letters will be sent to New England governors asking them to petition Congress to make Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard part of their states.

House to debate malpractice bill

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A medical malpractice bill, described as the product of "a tenuous, fragile compromise" that could be destroyed by a single amendment, went before the House today for what promised to be a long debate.

"This bill resulted from a tenuous, fragile compromise. A substantial change in the bill could blow the compromise, and the doctors of this state would not have a bill dealing with this issue until 1979," said Rep. Tom Uher, D-Bay City, architect of the agreement.

Key provisions included mandatory review of malpractice suits by screening panels of three doctors, a $500,000 limit on damages unless actual costs run higher and a requirement that suits must be filed within two years of a claimed medical mistake.

Doctors were not a party to the compromise, and numerous physicians and their wives circulated in the Capitol hallways before the House convened.

Rep. Jim Kaster, D-El Paso, noted that doctors observing from the gallery were in for a long day and wondered out loud "if we could get some magazines, at least five years old, and pass them out to the doctors."

Trial lawyers and doctors, two professional groups that have quite different views on malpractice, were heavy contributors to legislative campaigns last year, and one legislator observed to reporters, "Well, here we go — pay off all the campaign debts today."

The Texas Medical Association remained adamant against the measure, which other medical organizations and trial lawyers support. It ran newspaper ads Monday to urge last-minute opposition to the bill, saying it doesn't go far enough.

W. Page Keeton, former University of Texas law dean and chairman of the blue ribbon medical malpractice study commission, agreed with the TMA at a news conference Monday.

He said the bill would complicate the judicial process without "achieving any substantial reduction in insurance costs."

Senators passed, 21-10, and sent to the House Monday a bill prohibiting telephone companies from charging for directory assistance calls — something allowed by the public utility commission in its recent rate order for Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.

They also passed, 31-0, a "shock probation" bill that allows judges to probate sentences of first-time felons after giving them a 60-day taste of prison life.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Alarm over tax break

The exemption of a wide range of properties from real estate taxes is an old established American tradition that has withstood numerous court challenges.

The question today is whether it can withstand a brewing taxpayer revolt.

Most people recognize that tax-exempt real estate property held by churches, schools, charities, hospitals and similar non-profit institutions, as well as by federal state and local governments, serves the general welfare.

It is the growing ratio of this tax-exempt property to taxable property, combined with ever-higher property taxes for homeowners, that is giving more and more people cause for concern, writes Leonard Sloane in a recent Parade magazine.

In financially precarious New York City for example, the percentage of tax-exempt property rose from 25 per cent in 1950 to almost 40 per cent in 1976. More than $25 billion worth of property in that city is now free from real estate taxes.

According to Democratic Rep. Edward I. Koch, the city of New York is subsidizing the federal government alone to the tune of $50 million a year in lost property tax revenues, and foreign governments by another $8 million. He has proposed a bill that would allow cities to apply for government payments in lieu of real estate taxes on exempt federal and foreign held property.

In Ohio, 15 per cent of the real property in the state, valued at over $6 billion, is tax exempt — up $2.6 billion the last 10 years.

Nationwide, the International Association of Assessing Officers believes that about one-third of all potentially taxable real estate in the United States is exempt for one reason or another. With an aggregate value of some $300 billion, the potential annual tax loss may exceed $10 billion.

Not only must the tax-paying public absorb that loss but it must provide community services to the exempt properties.

Some experts assert that in the not-too-distant future, approximately half the property in American cities will be tax exempt. The percentage in Washington, D.C., has already reached 55 per cent.

In an extreme example of taxpayer restiveness, more than 100 residents of the tiny Catskill mountain town of Hardenburgh, N.Y. last September had themselves ordained as ministers in the little-known Universal Life Church. Their acknowledged purpose was to avoid paying part of the taxes on their homes, in keeping with their status as "ordained clergy."

A court challenge to the Hardenburgh caper would seem to be certain. One can imagine the chaos if millions of property owners around the country suddenly got this kind of religion.

In any event, demands for more study of and possible changes in the tax-exempt property situation are likely to become stronger and more strident in the years immediately ahead, writes Sloane.

One area where the tax exemption principle may have been stretched beyond reasonable limits concerns profit-making businesses run by some religious groups, such as publishing houses, life insurance companies, wineries and distilleries.

While a massive rollback of tax exemptions appears politically and socially infeasible, a closer scrutiny of present and proposed tax-exempt projects might lead to a better balanced tax structure.

More than cold winter

It's lucky that winter comes but once a year, and luckier yet that winters like the current one blow in maybe once or twice a century.

According to the U.S. Commerce Department, January's severe cold was chiefly responsible for a record monthly trade deficit and the biggest drop in the nation's economic indicators since the 1974-75 recession.

Due to weather-caused plant shutdowns and transportation tie-ups, exports declined 7.8 per cent during the month to give the United States a deficit of nearly $1.7 billion in its foreign trade balance. A 12 per cent decline in the composite index of leading economic indicators (jobs, building permits, orders for new goods, etc.) was the first decline in four months and, temporarily at least, put the nation's economic recovery on hold.

About the only thing that went up was oil imports, which increased 5 per cent in January.

That's only part of Old Man Winter's bill. Winter damage to roads and bridges is expected to add up to a cool $2.8 billion in 21 eastern and midwestern states, says The Road Information Program (TRIP), a highway industry research and information agency.

This is in addition to the cost of filling an estimated 55 million potholes and resurfacing pavement with minor damage, and doesn't include another $270 million for snow removal.

It could be worse. Think what it would be like if the United States wasn't in the "Temperate Zone."

UPSTREAM

On the termination of winter

By MADSEN PIRIE
R.C. Hoiles Fellow
Hillsdale (Mich.) College

Following what has been for many states the worst winter in over a century, the time has clearly come for Congress to act to make sure it never happens again. Surely our legislators cannot stand by and watch the suffering, deprivation and misery happen again next year. They have a clear public mandate: no one likes winter at the best of times, and certainly not one likes a winter such as this one.

Faced with overwhelming popular sentiment against winter, it seems impossible that Congress could allow it to occur unregulated. My suggestion is that instead of devising a cumbersome and complicated bill, they should settle for the simple expedient of passing a "Minimum Temperature Bill." If Congress could galvanize itself into action and pass a law establishing a minimum temperature of, say, twenty-eight degrees, this would soon take care of the worst excesses of winter.

This would mean that when the cold weather came along next December, we would all know that at least it was not going to get any colder than twenty-eight degrees. The benefits would be incalculable. Quite apart from the beneficial effects on national morale, and the lower frequency of depression and suicide, there would be enormous economic gains. Our precious fuel reserves would be conserved, and no factories and businesses would have to shut down owing to excessive cold or shortage of energy.

I realize that there would always be some moaners and dismal johnnies complaining that such a measure would be unfair. No doubt they would point out that some parts of the country are "naturally" warmer than others, and that different standards would be needed for different states. This objection is easily overcome. In the first place, Congress has already established the principle with environmental legislation that differences do not matter. The same standards for emission control apply in heavily populated areas of the northeast and in the Arizona desert. This principle of refusing to recognize natural differences could be extended to cover laws regulating winter.

Secondly, and more importantly, this idea of treating different areas differently represents the worst kind of discrimination: it is geographicism, and should be outlawed.

I recognize, of course, that some areas could claim that they needed colder weather.

Colorado, for example, might need snow now and then for its tourist trade. This would present no problem. It would give local Representatives and Senators the opportunity to win special treatment, fighting for that few extra degrees of cold that could mean so much to their state; and it would also give the President another lever to bargain with individual Congressmen and to get them to support Administration bills in exchange for concessions about how severe winter would be allowed to be in their own state.

I have no time at all for those who might object that Congress does not have the power to regulate winter. This is just the kind of defeatist talk that stops things getting done. If Congress can legislate to set minimum wages, and expect the same number to remain in employment, then they can certainly set minimum temperatures and expect the weather to get better. If they can legislate to fix prices and wages and expect it to make any difference, then they can certainly make a difference to winter.

The time for talk is past; the time for action is here. We must break up the monopoly which the big seasons hold over our weather. Sunbathers of the world unite: you have nothing to lose but your frostbite!

IN WASHINGTON

By Martha Angle and Robert Walters

Power brokers on the Hill

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — An old sport, long out of fashion, has been reintroduced on Capitol Hill this year by House Speaker Tip O'Neill and Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd. The name of the game is hardball.

It's not a whole new genre; Sam Rayburn and Lyndon Johnson were all-star players in their day. But they've been gone for many a year, and congressional Democrats had more or less forgotten what it's like to have leaders who occasionally dust off the batter and nail unwary runners at first base.

O'Neill and Byrd could hardly be more different in style and personality, but they share an appetite for power and an eagerness to exercise it in a fashion never attempted by their immediate predecessors, Carl Albert and Mike Mansfield.

In less than three months, the garrulous Boston Irishman and dour West Virginian have clearly established their supremacy in the House and Senate and, in the process, have shown the new boy in the White House who is boss on Capitol Hill.

The two leaders are ubiquitous and indefatigable. All day long, they are talking to their colleagues — soliciting information, stroking, cajoling and counting their votes. O'Neill and Byrd abhor surprises; they don't intend to be blindsided and are taking every precaution to insure that they aren't.

Both collected some valuable chips from their colleagues by taking the heat for sliding through last month's $13,000 congressional pay raises without a roll call vote.

O'Neill quickly collected the due bill when some Democrats on the House Rules Committee got balky about the stringent new ethics code he had pledged to produce. He hauled the recalcitrant Rules members into his office, reminded them they owed him for one fat pay raise and threatened to blow the whistle on them on the floor if they didn't produce. He got his ethics package — intact.

Byrd demonstrated his clout in the Senate in similar fashion when some uppity liberals tried to challenge Russell Long's chairmanship of the Senate Finance Committee in a secret ballot vote of the Democratic caucus.

Russell Long is a cherished Byrd ally, and the majority leader didn't take kindly to the liberal effort to unseat the Louisiana Democrat, even though it produced a piddling six votes in caucus. He dusted off an old Senate rule no one had ever bothered to use before and forced a roll call vote on the floor over the Finance Committee chairmanship. Strangely enough, not a single senator could muster the courage to vote against Long in public.

"He knocked the wind right out of the reformers," one disgruntled Democrat said.

So far, O'Neill and Byrd have generally cooperated with President Carter in pushing administration appointments and bills. They whipped Carter's emergency natural gas legislation through Congress in short order, heading off unacceptable amendments. O'Neill helped Carter circumvent a reluctant committee chairman, Jack Brooks, to get authority to reorganize the executive branch. Byrd blocked a Senate vote on a resolution condemning Carter's pardon of Vietnam draft evaders. And the Senate leader forestalled a filibuster of Paul Warnke's nomination as head of the disarmament agency and chief SALT negotiator.

But the two leaders have also shown they will not play ball with Carter when either their personal political interests or the collective concerns of Congress are at stake. O'Neill exercised his lungs and his political muscle to knock Republican Jack Eckerd out of the top job at the General Services Administration after Carter had agreed to keep Eckerd on.

And Byrd cheerfully allowed the Senate to adopt an amendment to the President's public works jobs bill ordering Carter to spend money on 18 controversial water projects the President wants to delete from his budget. In fact, Byrd joined the majority in pushing through the amendment by a 65-24 margin.

O'Neill and Byrd are bound to face internal challenges to their authority as the session goes on. No leader can keep a tight rein on all those galloping egos forever. But neither the speaker nor the Senate majority leader is likely to lose many fights, and Carter had best speak nicely to both of them if he wants to get his programs through Congress.

Dishwasher 'violent'

Harvester honored

Mary Sweeten to talk about food for diabetes.

HOUSTON (AP) — A dishwasher described as being a violent person has fatally shot two co-workers and himself following a heated argument at a downtown restaurant.

Police said Johnny Joe Guerrero, 29, a dishwasher at the Pound Sterling Restaurant, fatally shot Debbie Phifer, 26, the restaurant manager, and Clyde Nichols, a busboy at the restaurant and then turned a 45 caliber pistol on himself Monday.

"He always carried a gun to work," said Lee Ann Boland, 29, the restaurant bartender. "He was a violent person."

Witnesses told police Guerrero, who had served two terms

in state prison, became angry when he asked Nichols to help him clean off some tables and Nichols refused.

Police said Guerrero apparently then pulled out a pistol and shot the two victims and then turned the gun on himself.

Miss Boland said Guerrero had been told he would be fired from the restaurant if he didn't straighten up.

"He messed up a lot and got drunk at work," Miss Boland said. "If he didn't understand somebody was just kidding him, he would get mad, real mad."

Police sealed off all streets surrounding the annex building of the First City National Bank building where the restaurant is located after being told a gunman was holding at least three persons hostage. Police said the shootings occurred in the lounge area of the restaurant.

About 15 persons were in the restaurant breakfast room when the first shots were fired.

"First we heard three shots, then we heard a girl screaming," said Mona Medina, 21, an employee of the First City Bank. "We all were scared and wanted to get out of there. I was scared a shot would come through the wall."

Det. J.W. Calmpitte said

Marcus S. Notias, an employee of a nearby firm, tried to talk Guerrero into surrendering but to no avail.

Ron Taylor, a Texas Department of Corrections official, said records show Guerrero was sentenced to three years in the TDC for theft in 1965. He was arrested and charged with attempted murder with forethought in late 1969 and later sentenced to eight years in the TDC.

Taylor said Guerrero apparently was a trustee and records show he got four years off his sentence for good behavior and was released Aug. 14, 1974 with no parole restrictions.

The Little Harvester, Pampa High School newspaper, won top ratings in state and national conventions Saturday.

At Columbia Scholastic Press Association in New York, the newspaper edited by Julie Ward won first place rating.

At the Fiftieth Anniversary convention of Interscholastic League Press Conference in Austin, the newspaper won the Award of Distinguished Merit. Leslie Hale, junior who is copy editor of the Little Harvester, represented the staff at the Austin meeting.

Miss Ward conducted a roundtable session at the New York meeting on "Coping With Weekly Deadlines." Ms. Elizabeth

Hurley, publications adviser, conducted a session on newspaper problems.

Ms. Hurley received one of 47 awards given to college and high school journalism professors, advisers and others involved in the communications education fields who received the Order of the Golden Quill at the Austin convention.

The Pampa High journalism teacher was among former recipients of the CSPA Gold Key award honored at a council dinner in New York Thursday night.

Edwin Newman, NBC news correspondent and author of "Strictly Speaking" and "A Civil Tongue," was speaker at the closing luncheon at the Columbia convention.

Texas farmer talks to Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas cotton farmer Jose C. Hinojosa stopped working in the fields long enough to spend a day in Washington as a consultant to President Jimmy Carter.

Hinojosa, who farms 700 acres near Edcouch with his brother, was one of five carefully selected farmers invited to dine with the President as part of his continuing effort to stay in touch with common people. He was technically on the government payroll as a consultant so his expenses could be paid.

Hinojosa was picked up by his congressman, Rep. E. Kika de la Garza, D-Tex., at the request of the White House. Four other legislators sent a constituent, and they provided a group of studied diversity.

Besides Hinojosa (a Mexican-American from South Texas), there was James R. Frazier, a black who raises poultry and produce in Bucksport, S.C.; Tom Davis, a wheat farmer from Coolee City, Wash.; Homer Foster, a beef, hog and grain dealer from Mowile, Iowa; and Robert Hawrigan, a dairy farmer from Fairfield, Vt.

Mrs. Sweeten will be bringing information about various diets especially diet related to heart disease, diabetes and high tri-glycerides. She will be giving a slide presentation and lecture covering the various diets followed by a question and answer period.

She is also bringing a variety of educational pamphlets given free to those attending.

I said I was from Texas and he said, "You're a cotton grower, well, I come from area where cotton is grown in Georgia." Carter did not, however, tell the group about his own farm or try to speak Spanish with Hinojosa.

Instead, the group discussed farm problems over their lunch of bean soup, club sandwiches and iced tea.

Hinojosa told the president about low prices for sugar and the drainage problems some of his neighbors are having because of too much rain in the Rio Grande Valley. Wheat farmer Davis talked about his problems with not having enough rain in the Northwest. Frazier put in a word for tobacco farmers in the Carolinas.

The meal was also attended by Deputy Secretary of Agriculture John White, Vice-President Walter Mondale, Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., and Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga. Foley and Talmadge are chairmen of the congressional agricultural committees.

"The President, it seems like him and the vice president are really concerned about these things and they're going to study everything possibly to help these people out," Hinojosa said.

"This is really something that I never thought would ever happen to me. I was really honored," he said, before boarding a plane and heading back to his Texas cotton fields.

Comedy to be held over at theatre

"Boeing, Boeing," the fast-flying, jet-age comedy now on stage at Country Squire Dinner Theatre in Amarillo, will be held over an extra week due to sell-out shows.

The play originally was scheduled to close Saturday. The comedy's final performance now will be Saturday, April 2.

A new production directed by Joe Barone, director of "Boeing, Boeing," will open April 5 and run until early in May, said Peter Fox Jr., Country Squire president.

Dinner service at Country Squire, located in Amarillo at Hilton Inn, 1-40 at Lakeside, starts at 6:30 p.m.; Country Rogue music, 8 p.m.; and comedy time is 8:30 p.m. Advance reservations are advisable.

Special diets to be topic here

A diet seminar will feature information on diet problems related to diabetes, heart disease and high tri-glycerides. The special program will be at 1:30 p.m. Thursday in the Courthouse Annex Meeting room.

The program is free and is sponsored by the Gray County Family Living Committee.

Featured speaker will be Mrs. Mary Sweeten, Food and Nutrition specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, College Station.

Mrs. Sweeten has had extensive experience in dietary analysis and is a noted authority in this field. She received her B.S. in home economics from the University of Texas; completed dietetic internship at Indiana University Medical Center and received her M.S. in food, nutrition and institutional administration from Oklahoma State University.

Before coming to the Texas Agricultural Extension Service she worked as a therapeutic dietitian, administrative dietitian and research associate.

Mrs. Sweeten is a native of Big Spring and the granddaughter of the late County Judge John Edward Kinney from Roberts County.

Mrs. Sweeten will be bringing information about various diets especially diet related to heart disease, diabetes and high tri-glycerides. She will be giving a slide presentation and lecture covering the various diets followed by a question and answer period.

She is also bringing a variety of educational pamphlets given free to those attending.

McLean may get rental house project

McLEAN — A rental housing project for the community is in planning stages.

According to Mayme Hathaway of McLean Housing Authority, a survey is now underway to determine public opinion of the project.

Mrs. Hathaway said rental units would be offered at comfortable rates, and that public opinion is needed to determine whether the proposed housing would be practical.

Residents are asked to contact Mrs. Hathaway or Irene Pagan for an opinion form. The blanks are also available at the McLean News office.

Reagan lauds cattlemen

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Ronald Reagan has lauded cattlemen as being the "last bastion against accepting government help and free of government regulations."

The former California governor, who raises steers himself, spoke to approximately 1,800 ranchers and their wives Monday at the kickoff luncheon of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association centennial meeting at the Tarrant County Convention Center.

Reagan spoke out against "too much government" and urged the group to help make changes to protect the free enterprise system. "To some people, changing the government is likened unto changing a baby's diaper. You say it isn't your line of work. But it is," he said.

J.A. Whittenburg III of Amarillo, president of the 13,000-member cattlemen's group, said Reagan was "a man who still speaks out for the principles as did our forefathers who formed this organization 100 years ago."

Gov. Dolph Briscoe was to keynote the opening general session Tuesday.

Brown named ag commissioner

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Reagan V. Brown, a speech-making agriculture expert who once ran against the legendary Speaker Sam Rayburn, is Texas' new agriculture commissioner.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe announced the appointment Monday to fill the vacancy when John C. White, commissioner for 26 years, quit to become deputy U.S. Secretary of Agriculture.

"I will dedicate all my efforts and mission to helping the farmers and ranchers of Texas make a profit," said Brown, 55, a 30-year veteran in agriculture work.

Brown said he definitely will be a candidate for a full four-year term as state agriculture commissioner in the 1978 elections.

"I was born and raised on a farm," Brown said when asked his qualifications for the job. Brown said the biggest problem of Texas farmers and ranchers was "making a living." After that come conservation problems including the recent dust storms, the energy problems and getting more of a share of the world markets.

Briscoe told a news conference that a number of other candidates were considered including Bill Pieratt, deputy state commissioner to White for 11 years, and Reps. Pete Laney, 33, D-Hale Center, and Joe Hubenak, 39, Rosenberg.

Briscoe said he was told by his legal staff that neither of the legislators could be appointed because they had voted for a cost of living raise for the commissioner in 1975. The state constitution prohibits a legislator from taking a job he help create or increased the salary.

Brown has been a special assistant to Briscoe since March, 1974, making many public appearances in the name of the governor throughout the state. He proudly pointed out that in the last 30 months he has addressed more than 422 meetings of more than 180,000 persons.

He recently was honored by Texas chamber of commerce managers for making 5,000 speeches to chamber gatherings during the past 30 years.

Brown also is chairman of the governor's "Texas First" program, a cooperative effort to improve employment in Texas.

He is on leave from Texas A&M University, where he was an extension sociologist. Prior to that he was a county extension agent in Hunt, Kaufman, and Caldwell Counties. Brown frequently tells how he received his "Ph. D." in politics during Korean War years when he made an unsuccessful race against Speaker Rayburn.

Skellytown calls candidates

SKELLYTOWN — All candidates for local offices and the board of directors for the Skellytown Elementary School are invited to a community meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Skellytown School cafeteria.

The meeting is sponsored by the Concerned Citizens' Committee for Skellytown.

All citizens who are concerned for our little town and for the welfare of our schools are invited to attend this meeting," a committee spokesman said.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Alarm over tax break

The exemption of a wide range of properties from real estate taxes is an old, established American tradition that has withstood numerous court challenges.

The question today is whether it can withstand a brewing taxpayer revolt.

Most people recognize that tax-exempt real estate (property held by churches, schools, charities, hospitals and similar non-profit institutions, as well as by federal state and local governments) serves the general welfare.

It is the growing ratio of this tax-exempt property to taxable property, combined with ever-higher property taxes for homeowners, that is giving more and more people cause for concern, writes Leonard Sloane in a recent Parade magazine.

In financially precarious New York City, for example, the percentage of tax-exempt property rose from 25 per cent in 1950 to almost 40 per cent in 1976. More than $25 billion worth of property in that city is now free from real estate taxes.

According to Democratic Rep. Edward I. Koch, the city of New York is subsidizing the federal government alone to the tune of $50 million a year in lost property tax revenues, and foreign governments by another $8 million. He has proposed a bill that would allow cities to apply for government payments in lieu of real estate taxes on exempt federal and foreign-held property.

In Ohio, 15 per cent of the real property in the state, valued at over $6 billion, is tax exempt — up $2.6 billion the last 10 years.

Nationwide, the International Association of Assessing Officers believes that about one-third of all potentially taxable real estate in the United States is exempt for one reason or another. With an aggregate value of some $300 billion, the potential annual tax loss may exceed $10 billion.

Not only must the tax-paying public absorb that loss but it must provide community services to the exempt properties.

Some experts assert that in the not-too-distant future, approximately half the property in American cities will be tax exempt. The percentage in Washington, D.C., has already reached 55 per cent.

In an extreme example of taxpayer restiveness, more than 100 residents of the tiny Catskill mountain town of Hardenburgh, N.Y., last September had themselves ordained as ministers in the little-known Universal Life Church. Their acknowledged purpose was to avoid paying part of the taxes on their homes, in keeping with their status as "ordained clergy."

A court challenge to the Hardenburgh caper would seem to be certain. One can imagine the chaos if millions of property owners around the country suddenly got this kind of religion.

In any event, demands for more study of, and possible changes in, the tax-exempt property situation are likely to become stronger and more strident in the years immediately ahead, writes Sloane.

One area where the tax exemption principle may have been stretched beyond reasonable limits concerns profit-making businesses run by some religious groups, such as publishing houses, life insurance companies, wineries and distilleries.

While a massive rollback of tax exemptions appears politically infeasible, a closer scrutiny of present and proposed tax-exempt projects might lead to a better balanced tax structure.

More than cold winter

It's lucky that winter comes but once a year, and luckier yet that winters like the current one blow in maybe once or twice a century.

According to the U.S. Commerce Department, January's severe cold was chiefly responsible for a record monthly trade deficit and the biggest drop in the nation's economic indicators since the 1974-75 recession.

Due to weather-caused plant shutdowns and transportation tie-ups, exports declined 7.8 per cent during the month to give the United States a deficit of nearly $1.7 billion in its foreign trade balance. A 1.2 per cent decline in the composite index of leading economic indicators (jobs, building permits, orders for new goods, etc.) was the first decline in four months and, temporarily at least, put the nation's economic recovery on hold.

About the only thing that went up was oil imports, which increased 5 per cent in January.

That's only part of Old Man Winter's bill. Winter damage to roads and bridges is expected to add up to a cool $2.8 billion in 21 eastern and midwestern states, says The Road Information Program (TRIP), a highway industry research and information agency.

This is in addition to the cost of filling an estimated 55 million potholes and resurfacing pavement with minor damage, and doesn't include another $270 million for snow removal.

It could be worse. Think what it would be like if the United States wasn't in the "Temperate Zone."

UPSTREAM On the termination of winter

By MADSEN PIRIE
R.C. Hoiles Fellow
Hillsdale (Mich.) College

Following what has been for many states the worst winter in over a century, the time has clearly come for Congress to act to make sure it never happens again. Surely our legislators cannot stand by and watch the suffering, deprivation and misery happen again next year. They have a clear public mandate: no one likes winter at the best of times, and certainly no one likes a winter such as this one.

Faced with overwhelming popular sentiment against winter, it seems impossible that Congress could allow it to occur unregulated. My suggestion is that instead of devising a cumbersome and complicated bill, they should settle for the simple expedient of passing a "Minimum Temperature Bill." If Congress could galvanize itself into action and pass a law establishing a minimum temperature of, say, twenty-eight degrees, this would soon take care of the worst excesses of winter.

This would mean that when the cold weather came along next December, we would all know that at least it was not going to get any colder than twenty-eight degrees. The benefits would be incalculable. Quite apart from the beneficial effects on national morale, and the lower frequency of depression and suicide, there would be enormous economic gains. Our precious fuel reserves would be conserved, and no factories and businesses would have to shut down owing to excessive cold or shortage of energy.

I realize that there would always be some moaners and dismal johnnies complaining that such a measure would be unfair. No doubt they would point out that some parts of the country are "naturally" warmer than others, and that different standards would be needed for different states. This objection is easily overcome. In the first place, Congress has already established the principle with environmental legislation that differences do not matter. The same standards for emission control apply in heavily populated areas of the northeast and in the Arizona desert. This principle of refusing to recognize natural differences could be extended to cover laws regulating winter.

Secondly, and more importantly, this idea of treating different areas differently represents the worst kind of discrimination: it is geographicism, and should be outlawed.

I recognize, of course, that some areas could claim that they needed colder weather.

Colorado, for example, might need snow now and then for its tourist trade. This would present no problem. It would give local Representatives and Senators the opportunity to win special treatment. Fighting for that few extra degrees of cold that could mean so much to their state, and it would also give the President another lever to bargain with individual Congressmen and to get them to support Administration bills in exchange for concessions about how severe winter would be allowed to be in their own state.

I have no time at all for those who might object that Congress does not have the power to regulate winter. This is just the kind of defeatist talk that stops things getting done. If Congress can legislate to set minimum wages, and expect the same number to remain in employment, then they can certainly set minimum temperatures and expect the weather to get better. If they can legislate to fix prices and wages and expect it to make any difference, then they can certainly make a difference to winter.

The time for talk is past: the time for action is here. We must break up the monopoly which the big seasons hold over our weather. Sunbathers of the world unite: you have nothing to lose but your frostbite!

Power brokers on the Hill

By Martha Angle and Robert Walters

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — An old sport, long out of fashion, has been reintroduced on Capitol Hill this year by House Speaker Tip O'Neill and Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd. The name of the game is hardball.

It's not a whole new genre; Sam Rayburn and Lyndon Johnson were all-star players in their day. But they've been gone for many a year, and congressional Democrats had more or less forgotten what it's like to have leaders who occasionally dust off the batter and nail unwary runners at first base.

O'Neill and Byrd could hardly be more different in style and personality, but they share an appetite for power and an eagerness to exercise it in a fashion never attempted by their immediate predecessors, Carl Albert and Mike Mansfield.

In less than three months, the garrulous Boston Irishman and dour West Virginian have clearly established their supremacy in the House and Senate and, in the process, have shown the new boy in the White House who is boss on Capitol Hill.

The two leaders are ubiquitous and indefatigable. All day long, they are talking to their colleagues — soliciting information, stroking, cajoling and counting their votes. O'Neill and Byrd abhor surprises; they don't intend to be blindsided and are taking every precaution to insure that they aren't.

Both collected some valuable chits from their colleagues by taking the heat for sliding through last month's $13,000 congressional pay raises without a roll call vote.

O'Neill quickly collected the due bill when some Democrats on the House Rules Committee got balky about the stringent new ethics code he had pledged to produce. He hauled the recalcitrant Rules members into his office, reminded them they owed him for one fat pay raise and threatened to blow the whistle on them on the floor if they didn't produce. He got his ethics package — intact.

Byrd demonstrated his clout in the Senate in similar fashion when some uppity liberals tried to challenge Russell Long's chairmanship of the Senate Finance Committee in a secret ballot vote of the Democratic caucus.

Russell Long is a cherished Byrd ally, and the majority leader didn't take kindly to the liberal effort to unseat the Louisiana Democrat, even though it produced a piddling six votes in caucus. He dusted off an old Senate rule no one had ever bothered to use before and forced a roll call vote on the floor over the Finance Committee chairmanship. Strangely enough, not a single senator could muster the courage to vote against Long in public.

"He knocked the wind right out of the reformers," one disgruntled Democrat said.

So far, O'Neill and Byrd have generally cooperated with President Carter in pushing administration appointments and bills. They whipped Carter's emergency natural gas legislation through Congress in short order, heading off unacceptable amendments. O'Neill helped Carter circumvent a reluctant committee chairman, Jack Brooks, to get authority to reorganize the executive branch. Byrd blocked a Senate vote on a resolution condemning Carter's pardon of Vietnam draft evaders. And the Senate leader forestalled a filibuster of Paul Warnke's nomination as head of the disarmament agency and chief SALT negotiator.

But the two leaders have also shown they will not play ball with Carter when either their personal political interests or the collective concerns of Congress are at stake. O'Neill exercised his lungs and his political muscle to knock Republican Jack Eckerd out of the top job at the General Services Administration after Carter had agreed to keep Eckerd on.

And Byrd cheerfully allowed the Senate to adopt an amendment to the President's public works jobs bill ordering Carter to spend money on 18 controversial water projects the President wants to delete from his budget. In fact, Byrd joined the majority in pushing through the amendment by a 65-24 margin.

O'Neill and Byrd are bound to face internal challenges to their authority as the session goes on. No leader can keep a tight rein on all those galloping egos forever. But neither the speaker nor the Senate majority leader is likely to lose many fights, and Carter had best speak nicely to both of them if he wants to get his programs through Congress.

Dishwasher 'violent'

Mary Sweeten to talk about food for diabetes.

HOUSTON (AP) — A dishwasher described as being a violent person has fatally shot two co-workers and himself following a heated argument at a downtown restaurant.

Police said Johnny Joe Guerrero, 29, a dishwasher at the Pound Sterling Restaurant, fatally shot Debbie Phifer, 26, the restaurant manager, and Clyde Nichols, a busboy at the restaurant and then turned a .45 caliber pistol on himself Monday.

"He always carried a gun to work," said Lee Ann Boland, 29, the restaurant bartender. "He was a violent person."

Witnesses told police Guerrero, who had served two terms

in state prison, became angry when he asked Nichols to help him clean off some tables and Nichols refused.

Police said Guerrero apparently then pulled out a pistol and shot the two victims and then turned the gun on himself.

Miss Boland said Guerrero had been told he would be fired from the restaurant if he didn't straighten up.

"He messed up a lot and got drunk at work," Miss Boland said. "If he didn't understand somebody was just kidding him, he would get mad, real mad."

Police sealed off all streets surrounding the annex building of the First City National Bank building where the restaurant is located after being told a gunman was holding at least three persons hostage. Police said the shootings occurred in the lounge area of the restaurant.

About 15 persons were in the restaurant breakfast room when the first shots were fired.

"First we heard three shots, then we heard a girl screaming," said Mona Medina, 21, an employee of the First City Bank. "We all were scared and wanted to get out of there. I was scared a shot would come through the wall."

Det. J.W. Calmpitte said

Marcus S. Notias, an employee of a nearby firm, tried to talk Guerrero into surrendering but to no avail.

Ron Taylor, a Texas Department of Corrections official, said records show Guerrero was sentenced to three years in the TDC for theft in 1965. He was arrested and charged with attempted murder with forethought in late 1969 and later sentenced to eight years in the TDC.

Taylor said Guerrero apparently was a trustee and records show he got four years off his sentence for good behavior and was released Aug. 14, 1974 with no parole restrictions.

Harvester honored

The Little Harvester, Pampa High School newspaper, won top ratings in state and national conventions Saturday.

At Columbia Scholastic Press Association in New York, the newspaper edited by Julie Ward won first place rating.

At the Fiftieth Anniversary convention of Interscholastic League Press Conference in Austin, the newspaper won the Award of Distinguished Merit. Leslie Hale, junior who is copy editor of the Little Harvester, represented the staff at the Austin meeting.

Miss Ward conducted a roundtable session at the New York meeting on "Coping With Weekly Deadlines." Ms. Elizabeth

Hurley, publications adviser, conducted a session on newspaper problems.

Ms. Hurley received one of 47 awards given to college and high school journalism professors, advisers and others involved in the communications education fields who received the Order of the Golden Quill at the Austin convention.

The Pampa High journalism teacher was among former recipients of the CSPA Gold Key award honored at a council dinner in New York Thursday night.

Edwin Newman, NBC news correspondent and author of "Strictly Speaking" and "A Civil Tongue," was speaker at the closing luncheon at the Columbia convention.

Texas farmer talks to Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas cotton farmer Jose C. Hinojosa stopped working in the fields long enough to spend a day in Washington as a consultant to President Jimmy Carter.

Hinojosa, who farms 700 acres near Edcouch with his brother, was one of five carefully selected farmers invited to dine with the President as part of his continuing effort to stay in touch with common people. He was technically on the government payroll as a consultant so his expenses could be paid.

Hinojosa was picked up by his congressman, Rep. E. Kika de la Garza, D-Tex., at the request of the White House. Four other legislators sent a constituent, and they provided a group of studied diversity.

Besides Hinojosa (a Mexican-American from South Texas), there was James R. Frazier, a black who raises poultry and produce in Bucksport, S.C.; Tom Davis, a wheat farmer from Coulee City, Wash.; Homer Foster, a beef, hog and grain dealer from Merville, Iowa; and Robert Hawgrin, a dairy farmer from Fairfield, Vt.

Was Hinojosa nervous? "I'm still nervous now," he said, an hour after lunch.

But Hinojosa recalled President Carter putting him at ease quickly. "He was real friendly,

I said I was from Texas and he said, 'You're a cotton grower, well, I come from area where cotton is grown in Georgia.' Carter did not, however, tell the group about his own farm or try to speak Spanish with Hinojosa.

Instead, the group discussed farm problems over their lunch of bean soup, club sandwiches and iced tea.

Hinojosa told the president about low prices for sugar and the drainage problems some of his neighbors are having because of too much rain in the Rio Grande Valley. Wheat farmer Davis talked about his problems with not having enough rain in the Northwest. Frazier put in a word for tobacco farmers in the Carolinas.

The meal was also attended by Deputy Secretary of Agriculture John White, Vice-President Walter Mondale, Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., and Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga. Foley and Talmadge are chairmen of the congressional agricultural committees.

"The President, it seems like him and the vice president are really concerned about these things and they're going to study everything possibly to help these people out," Hinojosa said.

"This is really something that I never thought would ever happen to me. I was really honored," he said, before boarding a plane and heading back to his Texas cotton fields.

Special diets to be topic here

A diet seminar will feature information on diet problems related to diabetes, heart disease and high tri-glycerides. The special program will be at 1:30 p.m. Thursday in the Courthouse Annex Meeting room.

The program is free and is sponsored by the Gray County Family Living Committee.

Featured speaker will be Mrs. Mary Sweeten, Food and Nutrition specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, College Station.

Mrs. Sweeten has had extensive experience in dietary analysis and is a noted authority in this field. She received her B.S. in home economics from the University of Texas; completed dietetic internship at Indiana University Medical Center and received her M.S. in food, nutrition and institutional administration from Oklahoma State University.

Before coming to the Texas Agricultural Extension Service she worked as a therapeutic dietitian, administrative dietitian and research associate.

Mrs. Sweeten is a native of Big Spring and the granddaughter of the late County Judge John Edward Kinney from Roberts County.

Mrs. Sweeten will be bringing information about various diets especially diet related to heart disease, diabetes and high tri-glycerides. She will be giving a slide presentation and lecture covering the various diets followed by a question and answer period.

She is also bringing a variety of educational pamphlets given free to those attending.

McLean may get rental house project

McLEAN — A rental housing project for the community is in planning stages.

According to Mayme Hathaway of McLean Housing Authority, a survey is now underway to determine public opinion of the project.

Mrs. Hathaway said rental units would be offered at comfortable rates, and that public opinion is needed to determine whether the proposed housing would be practical.

Residents are asked to contact Mrs. Hathaway or Irene Pagan for an opinion form. The blanks are also available at the McLean News office.

Reagan lauds cattlemen

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Ronald Reagan has lauded cattlemen as being the "last bastion against accepting government help and free of government regulations."

The former California governor, who raises steers himself, spoke to approximately 1,800 ranchers and their wives Monday at the kickoff luncheon of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association centennial meeting at the Tarrant County Convention Center.

Reagan spoke out against "too much government" and urged the group to help make changes to protect the free enterprise system. "To some people, changing the government is likened to changing a baby's diaper. You say it isn't your line of work. But it is," he said.

J.A. Whittenburg III of Amarillo, president of the 13,000-member cattlemen's group, said Reagan was "a man who still speaks out for the principles as did our forefathers who formed this organization 100 years ago."

Gov. Dolph Briscoe was to keynote the opening general session Tuesday.

Comedy to be held over at theatre

"Boeing, Boeing," the fast-flying, jet-age comedy now on stage at Country Squire Dinner Theatre in Amarillo, will be held over an extra week due to sell-out shows.

The play originally was scheduled to close Saturday. The comedy's final performance now will be Saturday, April 2.

A new production directed by Joe Barone, director of "Boeing, Boeing," will open April 5 and run until early in May, said Peter Fox Jr., Country Squire president.

Dinner service at Country Squire, located in Amarillo at Hilton Inn, 1-40 at Lakeside, starts at 6:30 p.m.; Country Rogue music, 8 p.m.; and comedy time is 8:30 p.m. Advance reservations are advisable.

Brown named ag commissioner

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Reagan V. Brown, a speech-making agriculture expert who once ran against the legendary Speaker Sam Rayburn, is Texas' new agriculture commissioner.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe announced the appointment Monday to fill the vacancy when John C. White, commissioner for 26 years, quit to become deputy U.S. Secretary of Agriculture.

"I will dedicate all my efforts and mission to helping the farmers and ranchers of Texas make a profit," said Brown, 55, a 30-year veteran in agriculture work.

Brown said he definitely will be a candidate for a full four-year term as state agriculture commissioner in the 1978 elections.

"I was born and raised on a farm," Brown said when asked his qualifications for the job.

Brown said the biggest problem of Texas farmers and ranchers was "making a living." After that come conservation problems including the recent dust storms, the energy problems and getting more of a share of the world markets.

Briscoe told a news conference that a number of other candidates were considered including Bill Pteratt, deputy state commissioner to White for 11 years, and Reps. Pete Laney, 33, D-Hale Center, and Joe Hubenak, 39, Rosenberg.

Briscoe said he was told by his legal staff that neither of the legislators could be appointed because they had voted for a cost of living raise for the commissioner in 1975. The state constitution prohibits a legislator from taking a job he help create or increased the salary.

Brown has been a special assistant to Briscoe since March, 1974, making many public appearances in the name of the governor throughout the state. He proudly pointed out that in the last 30 months he has addressed more than 422 meetings of more than 180,000 persons.

He recently was honored by Texas chamber of commerce managers for making 5,000 speeches to chamber gatherings during the past 30 years.

Brown also is chairman of the governor's "Texas First" program, a cooperative effort to improve employment in Texas.

He is on leave from Texas A&M University, where he was an extension sociologist. Prior to that he was a county extension agent in Hunt, Kaufman, and Caldwell Counties.

Brown frequently tells how he received his "Ph. D." in politics during Korean War years when he made an unsuccessful race against Speaker Rayburn.

Skellytown calls candidates

SKELLYTOWN — All candidates for local offices and the board of directors for the Skellytown Elementary School are invited to a community meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Skellytown School cafeteria.

The meeting is sponsored by the Concerned Citizens' Committee for Skellytown.

All citizens who are concerned for our little town and for the welfare of our schools are invited to attend this meeting," a committee spokesman said.

Milk price support increased

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration announced today a nine per cent boost in the basic price supports for milk which could add six cents a gallon to the consumer price in two or three months.

Agriculture Secretary Bob S. Bergland said that dairy farmers need the increase because severe drought in the West and Midwest has significantly increased feed costs and market prices for milk have dropped nearly 8 per cent in the last six months.

The increase takes effect April 1, the date required by law for readjustment of dairy price supports.

Sidney Cohen, head of the Agriculture Department's dairy branch, said that the increase also could boost the price of butter by 10 cents a pound, cheese by 5.5 cents a pound and nonfat dry milk by 5 cents if all those wholesale increases were passed through to the retail level.

But, he said, there are wide margins between the wholesale and retail prices for those products and "the increases may not be entirely reflected."

Despite the statements of his aides for the last week, Bergland said he recommended to President Carter the 9 per cent increase, to $9 per 100 pounds of milk from $8.26. The National Milk Producers Federation had recommended a smaller increase. And Bergland's aides had said Bergland favored a 5 per cent increase.

Bergland said a dairy farmer with a 40-cow herd would receive an increase in his cash income of about $3,000 because of the action.

"We're taking a calculated risk in this increase ... because the question is whether or not we'll have an adequate supply of milk for the consumers of this nation," Bergland said.

He said that Carter agreed with this increase because he had made a commitment in a letter to Wisconsin milk producers during the presidential campaign to support an increase that President Gerald R. Ford had vetoed.

"This is a signal to the dairy producers in the United States that we want them to stay in business," he said.

The decision would set the price support at 83 per cent of parity, a formula devised to give farmers the same buying power they had in 1910-1914, when costs and income were said to be in balance.

The increase in the price support is likely to lead to a hike in consumer prices because farmers are unlikely to sell their product to manufacturers for less than the government will give them, officials said. Manufacturers' price increases end up being passed on to the retail level.

Bergland had announced earlier his own backing for a five per cent increase in price supports for milk.

USDA figures show the average retail price nationwide last October was about $1.67 a gallon, with the farmer receiving 57 per cent of the total. By January, the cost had dropped a penny a gallon, with the farmer receiving a reduced share of 54 per cent.

Under federal law a new support level must be set every April 1 and the dairy industry and the USDA both say an increase is necessary to cover inflated production costs.

Gandhi son to quit, too

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Repudiated by the Indian electorate, Indira Gandhi resigned today as prime minister, saying, "The collective judgment of the people must be respected." Her son, also defeated, said he was quitting politics.

With returns from the general election last weekend almost complete, Mrs. Gandhi's foes claimed they would have a majority of at least 126 seats in the lower house of Parliament. In a statement conveying her best wishes to the new government and offering the "constructive cooperation" of her Congress party, Mrs. Gandhi said she and her colleagues "accept the verdict unreservedly and in a spirit of humility."

In a related development, Sanjay Gandhi, Mrs. Gandhi's 30-year-old son who was defeated in his first bid for Parliament, said he was quitting active politics.

"I have been thinking about what to do," the national news agency quoted him as saying. "There are other ways of serving the people than being in Parliament. I don't propose to be in active politics but propose to devote my energies to quiet, constructive work."

Meanwhile, two former leaders of the Congress party, Morarji Desai and Jagjivan Ram, jockeyed to succeed Mrs. Gandhi. In another development that symbolized the sudden political transformation here, imprisoned Socialist leader George Fernandes, accused of plotting to topple the Gandhi government, was released on bail.

A spokesman for Desai's Janata — People's — party said its members in the new Parliament and those of Ram's Congress for Democracy would meet Thursday to elect a leader who would become prime minister.

Fernandes, who was elected to Parliament on the Janata ticket, was released along with 22 other Indians accused with him of conspiring to use force to overthrow the government. India's national news agency reported.

Mrs. Gandhi submitted the resignations of herself and the other members of her cabinet to Acting President B. D. Jatti. He accepted the resignations but continued Mrs. Gandhi and her ministers in office as a caretaker government until a new one is formed.

Despite the humiliating defeat she and her Congress party suffered in the general election, Mrs. Gandhi smiled broadly at reporters and held her clasped hands up in the traditional Indian greeting as she was driven from Jatti's residence.

With returns in for 524 of the 542 seats in the lower house of Parliament, the anti-Congress forces claimed a total of 334 seats. This included 267 for the Janata, a four-party coalition; 27 for the Congress for Democracy, which ran candidates in only 40 districts because Ram did not organize it until after the campaign started; 18 for the Marxist Communists and 22 for independents and regional parties whose support the Janata claimed.

Mrs. Gandhi's Congress party, which won two-thirds of the seats in the 1971 election, had won only 147, while its allies in the pro-Moscow Communist party dropped from 23 seats to seven and a southern Tamil party, another ally, won 19.

Regional groups, minor parties and independents accounted for the rest.

But it was not clear yet who would be chosen to succeed Mrs. Gandhi.

'Illegal aliens take jobs'

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Illegal aliens are making "a tremendous impact on unemployment" in black areas of Houston, says Rep. Anthony Hall, D-Houston, a black.

Hall testified Monday night before the House Labor Committee in support of his proposal to penalize employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens.

The committee also heard five similar bills, all sponsored by Houston representatives, and referred all of them to subcommittee.

The bills touched off arguments between black and Mexican-American legislators. The Mexican-Americans said they discriminated brown-skinned people.

Hall said unemployment "approaches 20 per cent" in his Houston district because illegal aliens are taking jobs at less than minimum wage.

"If he (an employer) can hire an illegal alien for a dollar (an hour), he's not going to hire me at $2.30 that doesn't make sense for him," Hall said.

Rep. Paul Moreno, D-El Paso, twice asked Committee Chairwoman Eddie Bernice Johnson, D-Dallas, if it was time for questions. She said she wanted to place all five bills before the committee first in order that witnesses who wished to speak on more than one bill could do so.

When question time came, Moreno opened with a statement. "The Mexican-American population of this state opposes this bill, and I bitterly oppose this bill because it would result in discrimination against Mexican-Americans."

Moreno said Hall's bill would require him to prove his citizenship.

Hall denied it, saying an employer "shall take reasonable steps to determine" the citizenship of a prospective employee.

Squalls hamper search

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Squalls hampered the search for remaining survivors from a Panamanian tanker that broke apart after an explosion and disgorged thousands of barrels of oil into the Atlantic Ocean.

The Coast Guard said Monday it had rescued 27 of the 39 crew members. Italians and Uruguayans aged 25 to 65.

Several survivors said the ship, the Claude Conway, was split in two by a blast sparked by welding equipment. They said the blast killed the captain, the radio operator and a number of other crewmen.

The ship remained afloat. Coast Guard officials said they had found no bodies, but plans were made to board the stern portion today if rain and gale-force winds ease.

From the information we have after talking with the crewmen here, there is nothing to indicate that anyone was left on board," said Lt. Richard Wigger. "But until we get people aboard the stern part of the vessel there's no way to tell for sure."

The explosion came Sunday morning when the ship was about 120 miles southeast here, on its way to the Bahamas with 7,000 barrels of fuel oil in addition to 6,000 barrels of its own fuel, or a total of about 536,000 gallons.

The surviving crew rode the drifting stern section until 4:45 a.m. Monday, when a passing merchant ship spotted their flashlight and sent a Mayday call.

Wigger said an oil slick near the wreckage was about 2,000 feet wide and 15 miles long.

"It is reported by the Marine safety observer that this oil slick should not affect the U.S. shores for two days, if at all," he said. "It is reported to be on the other side of the Gulf Stream."

Hospital can't accept death row convict body

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Lawyers for John Sealy Hospital have said the institution cannot legally accept the offer of a death row convict who wants to donate his body "to help the living" if he is executed.

James E. Whitmore Jr. had asked his attorney, Brantley Pringle, to prepare a document bequeathing his body to the hospital.

"He emphasized he didn't want to die, but said he felt the time would come eventually when they would strap him in the chair and send the current through his body. He said as a man who has accepted Christ, he wanted to arrange for his organs to help others after his death," Pringle said.

The attorney has proposed that the legislature change laws to let hospitals "accept the generosity" of Whitmore and other condemned men who volunteer for transplants.

State law presently requires that the prison system director arrange for immediate embalming of any executed convict, he said. "The legislature should specifically authorize hospitals to accept bodies bequeathed to them."

Pringle said he is uncertain whether an electrocution would damage organs to an extent where they would not be suitable for transplantation.

"He (Whitmore) was concerned because people would think it was some type of publicity gimmick," the lawyer said. "I'm sure some people will. But I'm convinced he is sincere. Although he denies emphatically that he is guilty, he says he holds no ill will toward society or the jurors who convicted him."

Whitmore received the death penalty in an unusual murder case.

Though a petit jury convicted Whitmore of hiring a security guard at an apartment complex to kill Mrs. Judy Carol Rummel, another jury found the guard innocent of a murder charge in the death of Mrs. Rummel. The shooting occurred Sept. 26, 1974.

State attorneys claimed Whitmore plotted the shooting after having an argument with Mrs. Rummel. They also claimed the plot called for the security guard to say the woman was attacking Whitmore with a knife and the guard shot her in defense of Whitmore.

The jury who heard the guard's trial concluded prosecutors failed to prove he was participating in a conspiracy instead of defending Whitmore, as the guard claimed.

Though Pringle contended Whitmore was sentenced for the "murder that didn't happen," the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals refused to set aside the conviction, saying each of the two took their chances with the jury.

The appeals court judges said the two juries could reach conflicting conclusions without violating state laws or constitutional rights.

Hall also denied reports that his bill would authorize law enforcement officers to arrest "alien-looking" persons as well as illegal aliens.

Moreno said Hall's bill discriminates against Moreno. Hall said it did not. As soon as Moreno puts a yes down by the question of citizenship in the United States on a job application form, he no longer is affected, Hall said.

Rep. Ralph Wallace, D-Houston, co-sponsor of Hall's bill, said an estimated 500,000 illegal aliens live in Texas. "They frequently are used as strikebreakers," he said. "Organized smuggling (of aliens) has become commonplace."

Part of the problem, Wallace said, is that "nobody gives a damn, since illegal aliens are nobody's constituents."

Six vocational office education students at Pampa High School will leave early Thursday for a three-day state competition in Fort Worth, Wanda Doughten, teacher, announced today.

Tammy Eads will compete in job interview. She placed first in that category during an area contest in Plainview, Mrs. Doughten said. Also competing will be Kim Hagerman, entered in the data processing, keypunch emphasis, contest. Mrs. Doughten said there was no data processing competition on the area level because of the complexity of the equipment required.

Attending as voting delegates will be Brenda Stedum, Julie Watson, Debbie Shearer and Patty Elliott.

The state meeting opens Thursday with the contests slated to begin Friday. Awards will be presented Saturday.

Nestle coffee up to $5 per jar also

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — The Nestle Co. says higher coffee bean prices and increased operating costs have caused it to become the latest wholesaler to send instant and freeze-dried coffee prices through the $5-per-jar barrier.

Nestle said, however, its new prices on freeze-dried coffees remain below competitive levels, while those on instant are at or slightly below competitors.

Nescafe instant regular will go up 10 cents a ounce to $5.45 for a 10 ounce jar. Nescafe decaffeinated will go up 12 cents to $5.28 per eight ounce jar, and Nescafe Decaf up eight cents to $4.67 per eight ounce jar.

Effective April 2, Nestle's Taster's Choice freeze-dried regular will be increased 12 cents per ounce, bringing the cost of an eight ounce jar to $5.28. A similar increase will boost the price of eight ounces of Taster's Choice Decaffeinated to $5.50 wholesale.

In a statement Monday the company said that "the continuing sharp advances in green coffee bean prices and higher manufacturing and packaging costs" necessitated the price hikes.

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A series of strong earthquakes killed at least 22 people and injured 18 more today in and around the Persian Gulf port of Bandar Abbas, officials said.

Fifteen of the dead were reported killed in the nearby village of Shahu, and other damage was reported to the villages of Chogan, Seyed-Abad, Ab-Pish and Gishan.

Iranian officials said several hotels and other buildings were damaged in Bandar Abbas, but there was no indication whether any foreigners were among the casualties.

The strongest quake in the series was measured at 7.0 on the Richter scale, considered strong enough to cause major damage in a populated area. A later quake was measured at 6.0 on the scale.

The government said the effect of the morning quakes was reduced because the epicenter of the tremors was beneath the waters of the Persian Gulf near the Hormoz Strait, the southern entrance to the gulf.

Ford recalls '68, '69 Mustangs

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. announced Monday the recall of more than half a million of its 1968 and 1969 Ford Mustangs and Mercury Cougars equipped with bucket seats because the driver's seat-back could collapse.

Ford said the recall includes 480,000 U.S.-made cars, 32,000 made in Canada and 1,000 assembled in other countries.

The recall follows a 1½-year legal battle between the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration and Ford. The automaker had refused to comply with a government recall order, arguing that the defect was not a safety-related problem.

Ford said on Monday it would recall the cars, although it still is appealing the NHTSA's order in court.

A bracket supporting the right-hand side of the driver's seat-back may break, possibly allowing the driver to fall back. Ford said owners may obtain replacement brackets at their local dealers. Replacement parts should be available beginning April 30, a spokesman said.

No deaths or serious injuries have resulted from the 57 reported collapses of the seat-backs, the spokesman said.

"We figured at that point that we might as well recall the cars under protest," the company spokesman said.

A Ford attorney said failure of the seat-back bracket does not create "an unreasonable risk of accident or injury" as the law requires for ordering a recall.

"We feel that the past history of these cars — which are getting to be nearly eight to 10 years old and have traveled over 60 billion miles — is evidence that no unreasonable risk exists," the attorney said.

W.O. "Dub" Adkins

In recognition of his scouting work for the past 10 years, during which time he helped 18 boys earn Eagles, W.O. "Dub" Adkins has been presented the Silver Beaver Award by the Boy Scouts of America, Adobe Walls Council. Adkins is a member of the Noon Lions Club, sponsor of Troop 416. He is also a member of the Salvation Army, the Red Cross, and the Hobart Baptist Church. He serves as district advisor for the Order of the Arrow and is a Vigil member. Adkins was presented the award along with three scout leaders from other area cities in a ceremony Saturday night.

"We feel that the past history of these cars — which are getting to be nearly eight to 10 years old and have traveled over 60 billion miles — is evidence that no unreasonable risk exists," the attorney said.

Iran quake kills 22

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A series of strong earthquakes killed at least 22 people and injured 18 more today in and around the Persian Gulf port of Bandar Abbas, officials said.

Fifteen of the dead were reported killed in the nearby village of Shahu, and other damage was reported to the villages of Chogan, Seyed-Abad, Ab-Pish and Gishan.

Iranian officials said several hotels and other buildings were damaged in Bandar Abbas, but there was no indication whether any foreigners were among the casualties.

The strongest quake in the series was measured at 7.0 on the Richter scale, considered strong enough to cause major damage in a populated area. A later quake was measured at 6.0 on the scale.

The government said the effect of the morning quakes was reduced because the epicenter of the tremors was beneath the waters of the Persian Gulf near the Hormoz Strait, the southern entrance to the gulf.

Police report

Four men were jailed on possession of marijuana after Pampa police obtained a search warrant for 411 Texas late Monday.

Officers Ken Minatrea and Don Engel and Det. Randy Stubblefield searched the house and found several bags containing suspected marijuana, a suspected marijuana plant, some white pills and other miscellaneous items.

Arrested in the raid and later charged with possession of marijuana were James "Wayne" Adams, 20, of Berger; Victor Paul Berquist, 20, and John Raymond McGee, 26, both of 411 Texas, and Phillip Keith Taylor, 18, of 1123 E. Kingsmill.

The four were to be arraigned later today.

Leo Thomas Samuel Jr., 20, of 405 Maple was charged with aggravated assault after Jay Knox Miller of 1001 S. Farley told police he had been stabbed by Samuel.

Miller said he was sitting in a car parked at 1064 Varmon Drive when the stabbing occurred. He went to the police department to sign a complaint against Samuel.

Samuel was to be arraigned later today.

Pampa police also investigated the theft of 30 birds from a pigeon coop at 818 E. Gordon.

A man told police a brick had been thrown through the window of his pickup parked at 1900 Fr. Damage was $30. A brick thrown through a window at 628 N. Starkweather caused 150 damage.

There was one non-injury accident reported to police Monday.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
 Chilly weather nipped much of Texas early today and, disregarding the official arrival of spring two days earlier, the mercury edged below freezing again at some Panhandle points.

Skies were generally clear except for a few clouds over the south third of the state.

Aside from a little warming in northern areas, no big changes were expected.

Temperatures near dawn sagged to 27 degrees at Dalhart and 28 at Amarillo while staying as warm as 60 at Brownsville in the Lower Rio Grande Valley. Monday's top marks went as high as 83 at Alice in South Texas and Presidio in the extreme west.

A calumet is the ceremonial pipe that American Indians smoked at peace ceremonies. Tobacco, native to the New World, was considered sacred.

Advice

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband drives a cab, and many times Mike has come home with names and phone numbers of women. He empties his pockets on the bureau every night and makes no effort to hide anything. When I ask him why he has these names and numbers, he says, "Oh, I meet a lot of tramps in my job who give me their names in case I run into guys who want a gal to show them the town."

I asked him how come he knows these girls are tramps unless he gets into personal conversations with them, and he says some people start pouring out their life history even before they tell him where they want to go.

Mike is good-looking and friendly, but he must give these tramps some encouragement, or they wouldn't tell him their life's history or give him their phone numbers, right?

CABBIE'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Not necessarily. If Mike had something to hide he wouldn't empty his pockets out on the bureau. Don't hassle him about the "tramps" he hauls, or how he comes to know their life histories. Some cabbies hear more confessions than a parish priest.

DEAR ABBY: How does one address mail to a married couple, both of whom are physicians? I know several such couples, and I never know how to address properly their invitations or Christmas cards.

Should it be: "Dr. and Mrs. John Doe" or "Dr. and Dr. John Doe"? Or is there some other form?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: They are addressed: "The Drs. Doe," "Dr. Jane Doe and Dr. John Doe," or "The Drs. John and Jane Doe."

DEAR ABBY: I recently joined the auxiliary of a civic club to which my husband belongs, and I was named to head the annual dinner and bazaar.

When the newspaper wrote up the story, they referred to me first as "Jane Jones" and thereafter as "Jones." They also referred to my position as "chairperson."

When I complained to the editor, I was told that it is the policy of most newspapers these days not to distinguish between the sexes. Well, I objected firmly. I resent being called "Jones" when I am "Mrs. Jones." Anybody can be a "person," but a woman is someone special and always has been.

MRS. JOHN JONES

DEAR MRS. J.: I, too, dislike the policy of some newspapers in dropping the woman's first name, or "Miss" or "Mrs." on subsequent mention. But the newspapers are in a crunch between those with our preference and other women who demand that no distinction between the sexes be made—a move (in their eyes) toward true "equality." So don't shoot the editor—he's doing the best he can.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I was interested in your column some time ago about jogging and varicose veins. I have been diagnosed as having chronic phlebitis and thrombophlebitis. What is the difference?

In your column you said that walking contracts the leg muscles and squeezes the deep veins in the legs to empty them. You said the superficial veins in the leg drain into the deep veins of the legs and walking helps to empty them.

Just the opposite happens to me. When I walk or stand my leg swells to about twice its normal size. I have worn an artificial leg for over 30 years but have just had this phlebitis condition for the last two years.

Can you tell me what causes the phlebitis? Could it have been brought on by favoring my artificial leg and straining my good leg? Or could it have come from falling and injuring the cartilage in my knee? I also have some foreign bodies retained from a bullet wound that went through my leg above the knee.

DEAR READER: Judging from other letters many people are confused about the difference between thrombophlebitis and varicose veins. Varicose veins are simply dilated veins, they are wide open but they are overstretched. I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-8, Varicose Veins, so you can understand what they are and what you can do about them. Others who want this information can send 50 cents for it with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing.

Phlebitis means inflammation of the veins. Thrombophlebitis means inflammation of the veins with the formation of a clot (thrombosis) in the veins. The clot may break off and send pieces through the veins to the heart and out to the lung. That is how a blood clot develops in the lungs from the leg.

Thrombophlebitis may block the veins and cause the veins below the obstruction to dilate. Exercising will not empty the veins in the presence of thrombophlebitis because the veins are blocked and have trouble emptying. It is true that being up on your feet, even with walking, may cause the leg to swell in this condition.

The location of the clot makes a great deal of difference. If the clot is in smaller superficial veins it is less likely to cause severe swelling. But the clot may involve the deep veins in the leg and the best treatment then is to be off the leg, usually keeping the leg elevated and immobilized. Anticlotting medicines are often used. This can be a very serious disease and if a clot goes to the lung it may cause sudden death.

In your long standing case the clot has probably been invaded with scar tissue inside the veins. This eliminates the immediate danger. The amount of disability depends upon how much residual obstruction remains and apparently you have some.

The causes of thrombophlebitis are varied. Injuries to a leg may cause it. Or it may occur spontaneously after such a simple operation as an appendectomy in a healthy young person. I can't say what caused yours but it may be associated with your old wound.

(Because of the volume of mail Dr. Lamb cannot answer your letters personally but he will answer representative letters of general interest in his column. Write to him in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.)

Polly's pointers

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY: A crayon that had been used to touch up scratches on furniture was left in the pocket of a permanent press shirt that went through the washer and dryer. Now all the wash has brown stains on it and I have no idea how to remove them and would appreciate some suggestions. — TENDY.

DEAR TENDY: The laboratory of a large soap products company suggest that when there are crayon spots throughout a load of wash that the clothes be washed with hot water using a laundry soap and one cup of baking soda. If spots remain, they say, dry cleaning is the only thing left to do. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY: It is much easier to mix a can of frozen orange juice if you remember to take it out of the freezer the night before and place in the regular refrigerator section. In the morning it will be defrosted and in a liquid form that is easy to mix with water and has stayed cold, too. — MRS. N.J.P.

DEAR POLLY: My Pet Peeve is with the companies that package cookies, potato chips and snacks so that one cannot see what they are paying for. It is like a grab bag. You take a chance you are getting what you pay for but often do not. If you open something to see the contents they get angry and abusive. I find many companies have such packaged things one cannot use and some even accuse you of breaking things that are already damaged. — ELIZABETH.

Begonia--the energy-conscious plant

Grow Some Energy-Conscious Begonias

By ELVIN McDONALD

I've had it with this winter, right up to my frozen Adam's apple, but acute energy consciousness has given me one happy thought: if we're going to be keeping temperatures in our homes between 55 and 65 F. during cold weather, we can also grow some fabulous cool-loving plants we couldn't before.

Angel-wing begonias, for example. These old-fashioned plants first became popular in the late 19th century, well before central heating. People who grew warm-loving tropicals in those days more often than not were also wealthy enough to have heated greenhouses in which to cultivate their "stove plants," which is what they called them.

But almost everyone could grow angel-wing begonias then, as we can now, because these cane-stemmed begonias grow wild in climates where spring and summer bring considerable heat and moisture, while fall and winter tend to be cool and dry. By "cool," I have in mind a range of 50 to 70 F. give or take 10 degrees either way.

In fact, without meaning to, I have just outlined the general care these begonias need: Warm temperatures and evenly moist soil in the spring and summer, coolness and soil kept on the dry side in fall and winter. Ideal light is morning sun with a thin curtain filtering it in the summer.

These begonias are called angel-wing because of the shape of the leaves—which vary in size from silver-spotted, pink-edged Medora (about three inches long) to those of the similarly colored leaves of Lucerna (to 12 inches long). They are also called cane-stemmed because of the bamboo-like joints along the branches which may either trail (Limminghei, for example) or grow upright to eight feet or more (Lucerna).

The good news about angel-wing begonias is that several breeders have been improving them lately. The results are a long flowering season, more colors and more hanging-basket types. Although these are available mostly from begonia

Barton, Gigi Fleetham, Jeanne Fleetham, Laura Englebert and Lenore Olivier.

I grow my angel-wing begonias in a growing medium made by mixing together equal parts packaged, all-purpose potting soil, sphagnum peat moss, sand (or perlite) and vermiculite. In spring and summer, I feed them on the first of the month with fish-emulsion and on the 15th with a well-balanced chemical fertilizer, 23-21-17, for example.

Spring is the ideal time to repot angel-wing begonias. Cut off any dead or weak growth at this time and prune back any stems that may be about to reach the ceiling. If necessary, insert a bamboo stake or two into the pot to give stability to any unusually tall or wayward branches.

An angel-wing begonia specialists, some are beginning to appear in local plant shops. Look especially for these variety names: Anna Christine, Apollo, Barbara Ann, Clara Elizabeth, Delphine Fosmo, Dorothy Plants in the Home...

Elvin McDonald

Angel-wing begonias are real diehards, but they do need some fresh air circulation to keep down mildew on the leaves. If excess water cannot drain freely from the pot and away from the roots, rot may attack; if this happens, root tip cuttings of healthy stems.

House Call

Q: I have just been given a begonia that grows upright and has large leaves shaped like the angel-wing type. However, mine has rosy pink hairs along the stems, on the leaves and on the outside of the white flowerbuds. Do you know the variety?

A: What you have is one of the hirsute begonias, possibly the variety Neeley Gaddis. These require the same care as the more common angel-wings.

The WEEDERS GUIDE

By EARL ARONSON

AP Newsfeatures

Each year there is a contest among 4-H club members to determine outstanding gardening projects. As 1976 ended, eight youngsters won $1,000 scholarships at the 55th National 4-H Congress at Chicago, responding to—What new projects can I start?... What can I plant and grow?...

Dean DuVal, 18, of Onawa, Iowa, conducted experiments with varieties of onions, melons and sweet corn to seek top-yielding, marketable types. He planted a Bicentennial potato patch that included red, white and blue spuds. He has assisted agricultural experts from Iowa State University, planted a 3 1/2-acre truck farm and kept detailed records about it.

Dennis Lane of Lafayette, Ind., developed a successful greenhouse operation, using newspaper advertising and highway signs to promote his business. This youth, state president of the Indiana Junior Horticultural Association, rented the greenhouse to a flower shop last winter to store poinsettias and other plants.

Ruth Haston, 18, of Sparta, Tenn., developed a fulltime business from a vegetable garden. It now includes 12 greenhouses and supports three families.

Frank R. Mesa, 17, of Fairacres, N.M., researched a new type of chili pepper and believes there could be a demand for a new hot bell pepper that would mature all pods at the same time. He says this could boost machine harvesting, or produce a pepper with more extractable red for food coloring. He worked with New Mexico State University.

Emma Jean Saathoff, 18, of Easton, Md., uses flowers from her garden to make arrangements and corsages for weddings and other events.

Kent G. Miller, 17, of New Iberia, La., sold garden produce to supermarkets and restaurants.

Randall Aebi, 17, of McMinville, Ore., who once grew a 209-pound pumpkin, provides nearly all of his family's vegetables (as do many 4-Hers).

Wendell Ulmer of Orlando, Fla., has his own 1,000-square-foot commercial nursery and works at a local nursery to help finance his work toward becoming a horticulturist.

Projects of club members may be lawn care, mini-vegetable gardens, forcing spring-flowering bulbs, circles of herbs, terrariums, or indoor mini-gardens. Other projects include container decorations from cans, cartons, jars, baskets or buckets, flower arranging, plant sitting for friends and neighbors, or identifying flowers and trees and helping with park flower gardens.

Project assistance is available from county extension offices across the country. The contest is sponsored by Ortho Division of Chevron Chemical Co.

New Garden Book

While intended for youngsters, the well-illustrated "My Own Herb Garden," by Allan A. Swenson (Rodale Press, Emmaus, Pa.) is a down-to-earth primer on more popular herbs. Swenson offers advice about where to plant, preparation of the soil, and planting of basil, chives, dill, mint, oregano, parsley, rosemary, sage, sweet marjoram and thyme. Not only are herbs easy to grow, they are hardy, and require little care and they're nice to look at, says Swenson. The illustrations are by Allianora Rosse.

Peach worms bother Pampans

The Extension Service agricultural agent for Gray County, Joe VanZandt, said that several gardeners in the Pampa area recently have inquired of him how to get rid of worms in peaches.

"Several sprayings may be needed to insure that the fruit won't have worms," VanZandt said. "We recommend using Malathion as a spray. The first spray should be made at the pink bud stage and the second spray when the petals have fallen off. Another spraying can be made about two weeks after petal fall."

The agent advised that some growers "may want to spray again in about two weeks."

He said that label directions should be followed.

"Mix two and a half tablespoons of a 50 per cent E.C. of Malathion in three gallons of water," VanZandt said. "If you have been having problems with brown rot on your fruit, then I suggest you add benomyl to the above mixture at the rate of one and a half tablespoons of a 50 per cent W.P. in the three gallons of water."

According to the county agent, now is the time to spray scale insects with a dormant oil if you haven't done so in the last few weeks. Scale insects get on many landscape plants in the area and last fall there were pine trees infested with them."

He said that the dormant oil should be applied before the new plant growth begins, when temperatures are between 40 and 65 degrees and no freezing weather is expected for 48 hours.

"Dormant oils kill the insects through suffocation," VanZandt said, "so all parts of the plant should be covered."

And again he advised that users "follow directions on the label."

Twentieth Century Culture Club

Twentieth Century Culture Club met recently in the home of Mrs. J.L. Chase Jr. with Mrs. Wyatt Lemons as co-hostess. Mrs. Rufe Jordan presented a program on the life of Sam Houston in which she portrayed him as a "courageous man with a magnificent personality who was both adored and despised but was undeniably great."

Sixteen members and one honorary member attended the meeting.

only had voting privileges for the past two years. While women ordained as ministers in the past served primarily as missionaries, she said, now they are seeking posts as senior ministers in churches.

Mrs. Bruce Riehart conducted the business session of the meeting, which was hosted by Mrs. W.R. Chafin of Pampa.

The Texas history event, on the capital building at Austin, was presented by Mrs. Glenn Dawkins.

The next meeting of the group will be March 22 in the home of Mrs. Richard Bray, 2223 Chestnut.

Pampa Garden Club

New varieties of flowers, plants and vegetables were featured in a program presented by Mrs. Georgia Holding for a recent meeting of the Pampa Garden Club.

Mrs. Elaine Houston, county extension agent, told members basics of drying fruits and vegetables. She said it was the earliest method of preserving food, although methods now used have been improved.

Mrs. Carlton Freeman, delegate to a recent district convention in Amarillo, said the club won first place ribbons in scrapbook, club history, president's report and horticulture. The yearbook won third place.

Blue ribbons in the district poster contest were Shelly Stout, Grade 2, Stephen F. Austin; Sabrina Parker, Grade 4, Woodrow Wilson; and Carol Cankin, Pampa Junior High, Grade 8. The contest is sponsored annually by the club. Posters were on environmental topics.

The meeting was held in the Pioneer Natural Gas Flame Room, 220 N. Ballard.

Varietas Study Club

Mrs. Lee Harrah was the hostess for the Varietas Study Club on Tuesday, March 8 with the president, Miss Anna Pierce presiding.

Members were reminded of the District Convention of Women's Federated Clubs at the Hilton Inn in Amarillo on April 1-2.

It was announced that the four federated clubs in Pampa would be hostesses for the district convention in the spring of 1978.

Mrs. J.E. Kirchman presented the program on "Historical Places and Court Houses in Texas."

Mrs. Harrah, the sole charter member of this 50-year-old club recounted tales of life in Pampa 50 years ago.

Theta Delta Chapter, Delta Kappa Gamma

A skit aimed at stimulating participation in appropriate programs of research to be better informed of current issues and affairs was presented at a recent meeting of Theta Delta Chapter, Delta Kappa Gamma Society.

The international honorary society for women teachers met March 12 in Lovett Memorial Library with 23 members present.

Mrs. Fidelia Hogge, president, was in charge of the business meeting. She presented a gift to Mrs. Exie Vantine honoring her retirement from teaching.

The research committee, Emmarie Lehnick as chairman, was in charge of the program, "Commitment to Research."

The committee gave a tribute to Claudia Everly, member of Theta Delta from Pampa, who taught school for 42 years before her 1962 retirement. The skit on research was presented by Kay Slate, Mary Dean Dozier and Mrs. Lehnick.

El Progreso Club

A program on the changing role of women in the church was presented by Mrs. Ralph Palmer for a recent meeting of the El Progreso Club.

Mrs. Palmer, an ordained minister, said only in the last decade have women been allowed to serve on church boards or to prepare for communions. She added that in some churches women have Constable Matt Bauler — enforcing evictions.

Evictions soared as fuel bills rose

By Tom Tiede

BALTIMORE — (NEA) — Mary Koppleman had gone out during the morning "to get some help." None was available. "I called the city, I called my church, but nobody would listen." When she returned to her apartment the moving men were already there, grim and impassive, putting the woman's belongings into the street.

"What are you doing?" she protested.

A man in a business suit introduced himself. Matt Bauler, city constable. He showed the woman a court order of eviction. He said the decision was final. She was being put out; no appeal.

"Don't touch that!" the woman shouted.

"It all has to go," the constable explained.

"I paid my rent," she said. "I'm sorry," he replied.

No doubt Constable Bauler was sorry. Evicting people from their homes is a sad business at any time, and particularly during one of the worst winters in history. Yet the law does not operate by Celsius. As many as 100 people a day are being thrown into Baltimore's streets; the figures are equally steep elsewhere in America.

Landlords say that the winter itself is responsible for many of the evictions. Fuel bills have doubled and lessors argue that the reduced profit margins will no longer allow the luxury of sympathy for tenants who fall behind. They point out that real estate is business, not good will, and it's too bad about the wind chill factor.

Tenants who are broke and facing the reality of the matter do have some recourse. In Baltimore a city-operated anti-eviction unit has been established to protect the renter's legal rights. Judges in most other towns and Middlesex villages are charged with doing the same. Yet the law is clear: no rent, no room, climate notwithstanding.

So it was for Mary Koppleman, a small, slight widow in her early 60s. Her rent payment was two months in arrears. The court gave her 30 days to make it up. A week from the deadline Constable Bauler tacked an eviction warning on her door. And then it happened.

"Don't look through my drawers," she told a mover. "We have to take it out," said the constable.

"You have no right to look at my things," she insisted.

The woman's apartment was small, and furnished only with a mattress on the floor, a chair and a metal bureau. Plastic flowers hung from the windows. Religious artifacts made of plaster stood on ledges. Some dresses and coats hung in a small closet and the rest of her clothing and papers were stuffed in boxes and shopping bags.

It was mostly junk, the constable said. "But not to her, to her it's treasure." He said it would be piled on the sidewalk and then taken by a city truck to a private warehouse. He explained to the woman that she would have to pay for storage. He knew she probably could not pay, and might never see the treasures again.

The woman stood by a window, watching her goods on the street. She said she was worried they'd be stolen. She said someone was always stealing from her. She talked incessantly, as if it somehow helped. Of money, and hard luck, and Joe DiMaggio. "They've been trying to get me on a farm," she said, "but I won't go to a farm."

As she talked she gathered up things in her arms. A piece of fake fur. A teapot. A crucifix. Yellowed papers. A roller from a tin table. When she had taken too much to carry the items began to drop around her. Still she grabbed for more, protectively, accusing the men in the room of trying to take the valuables from her.

As the apartment emptied, Mary Koppleman noticed the dirt. "See there," she said, "mice droppings!" The landlord said he wanted to exterminate, but she wouldn't let him in. Hair hung down her face. Lint and dust covered her coat. Her eyes were inflamed and tired. "You," she said, "are the rottenest landlord that I have ever known."

And then it was over. Her things were in the street and so was she. People passed by, not noticing. The door to her building closed.

"Where will you go?" she was asked.

"I don't know," she said. The temperature in the street that day was 12 degrees Fahrenheit.

Clubs set convention

"Dare to Dream — Work to Make it Seen" will be the theme of the formal opening of the 17th annual Top o' Texas District convention of the Texas Federation of Women's Clubs in Amarillo April 1-2.

Mrs. Bill Reed, district president from Stratford, will open the two-day convention at 1 p.m. April 1 at the Hilton Inn, following an 11 a.m. Board Buffet Brunch. Amarillo students will provide music at the brunch.

Milton Morris, representing the West Texas Opportunity Plan, will be featured in the afternoon program. Morris is responsible for the district's Lola B. Mundy Scholarship Fund.

A banquet at 7 p.m. April 1 will offer entertainment by a Shakespearean troupe from West Texas State University and Dr. Winfred Moore of the First Baptist Church in Amarillo. An informal open house will follow the banquet.

Activities April 2 will begin at 9 a.m. with Robert Wilson and girls from Berger Girlstown on the program. They will be joined by Judge Naomi Harney of Amarillo who will present information on child abuse. The Fashions for Fun style show and luncheon will begin at 1 p.m.

Pampa clubs affiliated with the TFWC are the Civic Culture Club, Twentieth Century Club, Twentieth Century Forum and Varietas Study Club. Also affiliated is the Lefors Art and Civic Club.

Cost of attending the convention is $17.30 (registration, $2; board lunch, $4.40; banquet, $5.90; lunch, $5). Checks to the Top o' Texas District, TFWC, should be sent to Mrs. H.H. Caraway, Box 686, Stratford, Tex. 79084 by Friday.

Persons wishing additional information may call Mrs. Caraway at (806) 396-2015.

At wit's end

By ERMA BOMBECK
I couldn't help overhearing a conversation in a department store the other day.

A woman was shuffling through a sale dress rack when she shouted, "If you're tired, just say so and we'll go home. It is no fun for me to shop when you stand back there and give me 'that look.' Why don't you go play in the drinking fountains or something?"

I looked down half expecting to see a pre-schooler, when a silver-haired man said mechanically, "I am not tired. Cora. Take your time."

May God forgive him for his lying mouth.

This will undoubtedly sound sexist, but man was never meant to shop. He doesn't have the physical stamina for it. After 15 or 20 hours on their feet, men tend to tire. Not women. I learned to shop at the feet of the Master — my mother. She could make the raid on Etebbe look like an impulse.

All you had to do was to put a card marked "CLEARANCE, ALL SALES FINAL" or "10 PER CENT OFF" under her nose to sniff. Then, hang on tight, because she was good for three days.

I have to admit, she brought a certain excitement to the exercise. She would stand outside of a department store waiting for the store to open. When she saw the manager approach the door she would take up the slack in her handbag strap, grab my hand and tuck it under her arm like a football (which explains why my right arm is three inches longer today than my left one), hold her body rigid in a blocking stance, and when the door opened, charge! (Literally. She was the only woman ever treated for credit card burns on 90 per cent of her hands.)

Men are too practical to shop. Whenever they spend a day in a department store, they feel they should buy something. They do not enjoy the challenge. To women every little item on every little shelf is screaming, "Choose me! Choose me!" and each one must be picked up and auditioned.

Men, on the other hand, tend to be overly cautious. They will pick up a shirt and really feel an impulse to buy it. Then suddenly they will ask themselves, "Do I really need this shirt?" What's that got to do with anything?

Study urges de-emphasis on nuclear energy

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States should change its official thinking about nuclear energy and realize it is unlikely to become a crucial power source until well into the 21st century, a panel of leading scientists and economists said today.

In a major new nuclear power study funded by the Ford Foundation, the independent panel urged a de-emphasis on civilian use of plutonium and said the country should realize "that the world is not running out of energy."

The panel, included former California Institute of Technology President Harold Brown, now secretary of defense.

In its 418-page report, the Nuclear Energy Policy Study Group said:

—President Carter should postpone indefinitely plans for reprocessing plutonium from spent reactor fuel because the material can be diverted too easily for use in atomic weapons.

—Development of the controversial $12-billion plutonium breeder reactor program should be postponed and a prototype model to be constructed at Clinch River, Tenn., should be abandoned entirely.

—Strengthened security is necessary at nuclear power plants because present safeguards do "not appear adequate to meet the potential threats of terrorism."

—The government should retain control of uranium enrichment technology rather than sharing it with private industry, as former administrations have advocated.

—Because supplies of uranium and other energy sources are greater than is normally realized, the government should drop plans for recycling spent nuclear fuel and should bury waste in permanent deep-storage sites.

—While nuclear power is one of the options that should be pursued, it is not as critical to future economic development as its advocates claim," said the study team, headed by Spurgeon M. Keeny Jr., director of policy for the MITRE Corp.

—Nuclear power is not crucial, at least not until well into the next century."

The report said gas and oil, although declining in supply, will continue to be the nation's largest energy sources through the end of the century. Beyond that time, coal will become the dominant fuel, it said.

Nuclear power has a "small economic advantage on the average over coal," especially in New England and parts of the South, but the margin is a close one, the report said.

It also said the nation's electric needs may be satisfied in the future by solar energy, although at a higher cost.

On the subject of reprocessing fuel, the study said the plutonium extracted poses a serious risk since it can be used to manufacture nuclear weapons.

"A highly organized terrorist group might have the capability to fabricate a crude nuclear weapon from stolen plutonium or highly enriched uranium," the study said. It also said plutonium reprocessing in this country would undercut international efforts to limit nuclear weapons proliferation.

Kent State file nothing new

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Almost seven years after National Guard gunfire ripped into a crowd of Kent State students, the FBI has released part of its investigative file.

The partial file — 1,060 pages of a total 5,000 — reveals little new about the shootings, according to Sunday's Akron Beacon Journal. Most significant information has been disclosed elsewhere — in two federal court trials, the Scranton Commission hearings and U.S. Justice Department memoranda leaked or released to the press.

But the file, released by FBI Director Clarence Kelley in response to a Freedom of Information request lodged by Knight Newspapers more than two years ago, reportedly provides a glimpse into how the FBI investigated the incident.

The shootings — which killed four and wounded nine — occurred during a campus anti-war demonstration on May 4, 1970, capping a turbulent week-end of disorders in the wake of the U.S. invasion of Cambodia five days before.

The first phase of the file covers the six-day period immediately following the shootings. Kelley said the rest of the information would be released "as it is processed."

Scores of files were ordered to Kent after the shootings, and from their interviews the bureau drew a rough picture of events.

That picture reinforces doubts about the accuracy of eyewitness accounts and shows again how terror and fatigue combined to distort the guardsmen's judgment and perception of the scene.

In the FBI's interviews, guardsmen recalled that they had had only two or three hours sleep after all-night duty before they were sent to break up the noon rally.

One guardsman told the FBI that he went deaf from fear as his unit's skirmish line withdrew up the hill to Taylor Hall, where the troops wheeled around, some kneeling, and opened fire on the students.

The report identifies almost all of the guardsmen who shot their rifles and pistols in the 13-second fusillade, but FBI censors routinely blanked out the names of almost all the guardsmen questioned by agents.

Kelley, in a letter explaining the censorship, said the Freedom of Information Act permits such deletions where disclosure would "constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy" or "reveal the identity of an individual who has furnished (confidential) information" to the FBI.

This concern for privacy was not, however, accorded to the number of campus "radicals" identified in the FBI file. Censors generally left their names untouched.

The 64-year-old chemical operator attracted attention from medical experts because some aspects of his treatment — devised through years of experiments with animals — had never been applied to injured humans.

McCluskey, who has declined to reveal the exact level of his contamination, has filed a $975,000 damage claim against the government.

The blast, which government investigators say was caused by failure to follow safety procedures, occurred on Aug. 30, 1976, in a see-through container holding a mixture of radioactive americium, nitric acid and resin beads.

It ripped off McCluskey's protective mask and knocked him down, peppering his upper body with the radioactive beads and slivers of glass.

Also contaminated was Marvin Klundt, a co-worker in the Atlantic Richfield Hanford Co. building where americium is extracted from nuclear reactor waste.

"He just took hold of me and lifted me out of there," said McCluskey softly. "He was on his lunch break."

Klundt was treated and has since returned to work.

McCluskey became the first patient to use the nine-year-old emergency decontamination facility at the Hanford Environmental Health Center in Richland. He was there until Feb. 9, leaving for a single Christmas trip home.

His physician, Dr. Bryce Breitenstein, obtained an emergency permit from the Food and Drug Administration to use zinc DTPA, an experimental drug for removal of radioactive chemicals from the body.

Coffee shortage 'rigged'

NEW YORK (AP) — A New York congressman says there is no worldwide coffee shortage and Americans are being taken if they think there is.

Rep. Fred Richmond, D-N.Y., returned from Brazil Sunday after a trip to look into reasons for high coffee prices.

He said he found "rigged" Brazilian coffee production figures and no shortage and said Americans were "being taken with malice aforethought by a government which wants to keep itself in power by keeping a positive balance of trade for this year."

"If we Americans understand that we Americans are going to take great pleasure in switching to tea."

Richmond called for Americans to "reduce personal coffee consumption by at least 50 percent."

Richmond, chairman of the House subcommittee on Domestic Marketing, Consumer Relations and Nutrition, said worldwide coffee production will reach 92 million bags this year.

But he said world demand is 60 million bags and the producing countries will consume 16 million bags themselves, leaving a surplus of 16 million bags.

Richmond said he told Dr. Camillo Calazans, president of the Brazilian Coffee Institute, which controls at least 30 percent of the export market, that Americans were cutting their consumption of coffee because of high prices.

He said Calazans had agreed to reopen discussion with the U.S. State Department about coffee import-export accords known as the London agreements.

Richmond predicted retail coffee prices would remain at about $4.50 a pound for the next few months, but would settle finally at from between $1.75 and $2.75 a pound when the effects of the boycott were felt.

The

Kemp clout lifts Tigers by Expos

By The Associated Press
It all fell apart for Steve Kemp on Aug. 29, 1976, and putting it back together has not been easy.
But Kemp continues to make strides along the road back, the latest a 10th-inning home run that gave the Detroit Tigers a 6-5 exhibition baseball victory over the Montreal Expos Monday.
"I've felt pressure from all over," says Kemp, a 22-year-old outfielder who is trying to come back from torn ankle ligaments which cost him the final month of the 1976 season.

"It's hard for me now. I can't do all I want because of this leg."
Kemp, a 6-foot, 185-pound left-hander, was considered the brightest pro prospect in the country in 1975 when he was belting home runs as a collegiate All-American at Southern Cal. The Tigers made him the first pick in the entire January, 1976, draft.
The Tigers are counting on a complete recovery from Kemp and have penciled him in for regular outfield duty. But he says he's not even sure of a spot on the Detroit roster.

Kemp certainly didn't hurt his chances of sticking with the Tigers Monday when he stroked Joe Kerrigan's first pitch in the bottom of the 10th inning over the fence for the winning run against Montreal. Kemp has now driven in 11 runs in nine games this spring.
In other exhibition games: Jim Wohlford drove in three runs and Von Joshua homered to lead the Milwaukee Brewers past the Seattle Mariners 10-3. The expansion Mariners have allowed nearly a run an inning, giving up 101 in 107 1-3 innings to date.

Jim Colborn pitched his second straight scoreless five-inning stint as the Kansas City Royals routed the Chicago White Sox 14-2. A two-run single by Gene Tenace highlighted a four-run eighth inning that carried the San Diego Padres past the Chicago Cubs 4-2.
First baseman Greg Ault belted two home runs to lead the Toronto Blue Jays over the New York Mets 5-1. Enos Cabell and Jose Gonzalez had three hits and scored three runs apiece as the Houston Astros defeated the Cincinnati Reds 10-8.

Dennis Walling's two-run triple in the eighth inning gave the Oakland A's a 7-5 victory over San Francisco. Reggie Cleveland worked six innings and Bernie Carbo stroked a homer and two singles as the Boston Red Sox beat St. Louis 11-6.
Bruce Bochte slammed two home runs and Danny Briggs one as the California Angels routed the Cleveland Indians 12-3. Ron Blomberg doubled home the tying run in the seventh inning and drove in the winner with a sacrifice fly in the eighth as the New York Yankees edged the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3.

Fernando Gonzalez' 10th-inning single drove in the go-ahead run and the Pittsburgh Pirates went on to beat the Philadelphia Phillies 6-3 in the first of a two-game exhibition series for the benefit of the Roberto Clemente Sports City in San Juan, Puerto Rico.
Jim Palmer pitched the first six innings and then Dyer Miller and Randy Miller finished up, combining on a four-hitter as the Baltimore Orioles beat the Minnesota Twins 4-0.

Steinbrenner: 'Nobody can buy a pennant'

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — George Steinbrenner III resents being pictured as a Mr. Moneybags on an ego trip — out to buy a World Series baseball championship for his New York Yankees.
"It's a false image," the jet-propelled owner of the American League titleholders said over the weekend during one of his quick stopovers here to attend to his ship-building business.

"No one can be sure of buying a pennant. I am willing to compare our expenditures the last four years with those of any club. I don't think many people are aware of what we are now doing in the college and minor league areas."
Steinbrenner, head of the syndicate which bought the Yankees from CBS in September, 1974, insists that he has adopted a long-range rather than a short-range view in blueprinting the club's future.

"We have more than doubled our budget for player procurement," he explained. "We now have a 20-man scouting staff. We have added 14 new scouts, paying top dollar."
"That isn't all. We now have two coaches with every one of our minor league teams. The purpose is to give the managers more time to manage and to see that all of our new players are exposed to top-flight instruction.

"Normally, the minor league manager drives the bus, picks up bats and sweeps the locker room floor. We don't want that. We want him to manage. We have got some of the top pitching coaches, guys such as Hoyt Wilhelm and Sammy Ellis."
"Our outlay is about $50,000 more per year for each of our minor league teams."

The Yankees who won the American League pennant last year were not a collection of high-priced and high-salaried super stars, an exception being pitcher Catfish Hunter signed New Year's Eve, 1974, for a reported $3.75 million.
They were instead pieces of an intricate jigsaw put together by Steinbrenner and his top command, Gabe Paul. They jelled magically into a winning unit.

"We took a club that the year before had finished in sixth place, 16 games out of the top in its division," the Yankee owner said. "It was a team that drew only 700,000 fans. We picked up Hunter because we felt he would give the team a new competitive drive."
"In four years, instead of 700,000 fans we were drawing 2 million. So what do we do? We could take the money and run or we could put the money back in the ball club."

Banquet today

Tickets for the Pampa High basketball banquet at 7 p.m. today in the Heritage Room of M.K. Brown Auditorium, are still on sale for $3.50 from Art Aftergut of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce.
The Hustling Harvester Award will be presented tonight in the highlight event of the banquet. Coach Robert McPherson also will talk about the team.
Seniors involved in their final Pampa basketball banquet are Don Hughes, Brian Bailey, Rayford Young, Winslow Ellis and Keith Fisher.

Namath headed for Los Angeles?

NEW YORK (AP) — Broadway Joe is on his way to Hollywood, Well, almost.
The New York Jets' controversial 33-year-old quarterback and the Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League have agreed tentatively on a renegotiated contract, the New York News reported today.
However, there remain two minor obstacles to be ironed out by the teams. First, a Namath deal must be approved by Rams' owner Carroll Rosenbloom, who at present is out of the country. Second, and more important for the Jets, there is the compensation issue for Namath's services.

The Jets would prefer a player to a draft choice for Namath. But General Manager Al Ward has said the Jets "will not be difficult" in any deal for the flamboyant signal-caller.
Don Klosterman, general manager of the Rams, confirmed Monday that discussions were "productive."
"We got the information we wanted and there is interest on both sides," he said.
The breakthrough in the long-rumored deal came when Namath and his agent Jimmy Walsh agreed to sign a contract calling for about $200,000 per season, some $250,000 less than Namath made with the Jets last season. It is believed Namath would be able to make up the difference through movie and television work.
Namath is in the option year of a two-year contract. If the Jets and Rams cannot conclude this deal, then the Jets would have the choice of picking up Namath's option year. If they did, they would have to pay their star of 12 seasons $495,000 for the 1977 season under the terms of the NFL's new player agreement. That does not appear likely, and gives added reason to the deal being finalized.

Pampa riders dominate Sunday races

Pampa riders dominated the overall running of the bi-weekly Top O' Texas Motocross Sunday 22 miles south of Pampa.
Pampa winners were Brad Houck in 250 and 125 cc classes and Ricky Garner in mini-man.
Clyde Barker won the open class, followed by Pampa's Kent Kelly and Randy Hinds, respectively. Following Houck in the 250 cc class were Rick Singletary of Amarillo and Kurt Kelly of Pampa. Pampa's Tommy Wing and Groom's Craig Howard were second and third in 125 cc.
Randy Black of Amarillo finished ahead of Marty Garner of Pampa and Hedley's Mark Brinson in 100 cc.
In the mini-man division, Garner won, followed by David Youree of Pampa and Wade Ramsey of Amarillo.

Something new in skiing-- it's called a braille trail

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer
MT. PROSPECT, Ill. (AP) — When Sam Skobel's skiers stand at the top of a hill they don't look down and shudder in their boots at the treacherous moguls. They can't see them. Skobel is founder and executive director of the American Blind Skiing Foundation, an organization aimed at breaking the blind out of their shells and teaching them an exciting activity.
"It has a great psychological and therapeutic value," says Skobel, 51, an ex-roller derby performer who lost 90 per cent of his sight at the age of four in a bout with scarlet fever.
"Many of them were ashamed they were blind and once they got into skiing it turned their personality around because they saw they can do things that other people can do.

How can a person who can't see succeed in a sport that trips up adventurers with the keenest eyesight?
Skobel, who learned to ski in 1972 when he founded the ABSF, says each skier has a guide who describes the run to him before he pushes off and accompanies him down to voice instruction and encouragement.
"There's no danger at all because once the blind skier has faith in his guide or in his instructor he will do anything that a guide or his instructor will tell him to do," says Skobel.
John Novotny, a 19-year-old Illinois State sophomore from Cicero, won a 14-gate slalom competition among totally blind skiers last month at Pine Knob in Michigan.

"The guide makes the whole difference in the world," says Novotny, who learned to ski in 1972 with ABSF. "It's kind of like a team feeling."
Novotny, who has conquered advanced slopes despite being blinded by cancer of the retina when he was two, says being blind does add to the element of fear in skiing and also shuts out the beauty of the scenery.
"From what I hear it's really pretty to go down a hill. I try to imagine it and kind of build a scene in my mind of what I'm going through. That's part of the fun, too. It's really enjoyable," he says.

Heiden now boy wonder

By TIM HARPER
Associated Press Writer
MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Sometimes when Eric Heiden is watching television or lying in bed at his parents' home, his mind wanders back over the last few incredible weeks.
"It doesn't seem real," he said. "All of a sudden I think I'm the best in the world. It's hard to think of yourself in those terms, but it's starting to sink in."
Heiden, the 18-year-old speed-skating Wunderkind, stunned the European sports world with an unprecedented sweep of three international championships, setting world records along the way.
Heiden, just a face in the crowd on the 1976 U.S. Olympic skating team, exploded this year with victories in the men's all-around, the junior and the world sprint championships in The Netherlands and Germany.

He was the youngest person ever to win the world sprint and men's championships, the only American ever to win any of the three and the first person ever to win all three in one year.
In American sports, it might be comparable to rushing for 200 yards in each game during the football season, or perhaps pitching three consecutive no-hitters in the World Series.
To put it mildly, the fans in Europe went crazy over the personable Heiden and his pixie of a sister, 5-foot-1, 88-pound Beth, 17.
She finished second, fourth and seventh in the women's world championships.
"Everybody in Europe knows and follows the skaters from all over the world," Eric said. "If I wanted to make a lot of money and be famous, I'd go to Europe to live. But it is just a nice place to visit."
Nice, indeed. No sooner had

Heiden stepped off a plane in Madison last week after capping his season with another world record in Moscow, than a businessman called from The Netherlands and offered to fly him back for the weekend to speak at a neighborhood skating club.
On the other hand, he was just another good-looking, healthy, long-haired youngster when he got together with his Madison friends and went to some high school basketball games last week.
He said he does not think his accomplishments will boost American speed skating interest the way Olga Korbut sent children flocking to gymnastics.
"I hope my success helps promote skating in this country, but I doubt it," he said. "Americans just don't know what speed skating is. But maybe it will keep some younger kids interested, knowing they can succeed."

Names in the news

HUNTSVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Former Arkansas Gov. Orval Faubus is working as a teller at the First National Bank of Huntsville.

"Inflation put me back to work," Faubus said Monday. He said his state retirement benefits, computed on 10 of the 12 years he was governor, came to "a little over $600" a month.

Faubus, who has been working as a teller about five days, said his 600-page book about the first four years of his administration probably would be on the market sometime in August.

He said the publisher wanted to release the book to correspond with the 20th anniversary of the desegregation crisis of Little Rock Central High School.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Juanita Castro, sister of the Cuban president, has branded President Carter's interest in re-establishing diplomatic relations with the country "immoral and foul play."

If the American people actually knew what was going on inside the country under the force of arms, they sure they would support the liberation of Cuba," Juanita Castro said in an interview with the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner Monday.

Miss Castro, 44, fled Cuba in 1964 and has since carried on a lecture and broadcast campaign against the policies of her brother and other Communist leaders in the Western Hemisphere.

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Former President Ford is keeping the door open to running for President in 1980, says Ron Nessen, who served as Ford's press secretary.

"I'm sure he'll have more concrete ideas on the subject in a year or two," Nessen told newsmen before a speaking engagement Monday.

After working with Ford for some time, I have learned how he goes about making decisions," Nessen said. "He waits until as late as possible before committing himself in order to weigh all factors possible."

However, I've been in contact with him frequently since he left office, and he has informed me he definitely is keeping the door open for running for president in 1980.

LSU football player stabbed accidentally

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Louisiana State University football player Russell Gray, Domingo pulled his knife during a fight on a crowded off-campus street last fall, but the stabbing which followed was accidental, Domingo's lawyer said.

Domingo is charged with attempted second degree murder of Richard Connelly, an engineering student at LSU. Connelly would remain in the hospital until the end of the year, Domingo's lawyer said.

Gray would face a maximum penalty of 50 years in prison. His trial began Monday, and the prosecution was expected to begin calling witnesses today.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Dennis Perez and defense lawyer John Sigafoos agreed to major details of the accident Monday as they mark their opening statements.

There was a carnival atmosphere at the off-campus hangout the night LSU beat Nebraska, 56. Traffic was bumper to bumper, and students were shutting boxes and carts to bars on one side of the street.

Domingo, who had been celebrating with his girlfriend and other companions, was attempting to cross a street he was blocked by Connelly's car.

Domingo, who had a knife in his pocket, pulled it out and stabbed Connelly. Domingo pulled his knife which he purchased two days earlier.

Connelly and Domingo fell to the ground struggling and Connelly suffered three stab wounds, one of which caused a lung to collapse.

But the lawyers disagreed on whether Domingo was provoked into kicking the car, who cursed whom, who swung the first blow.

The major area of disagreement was on the issue of intent. Perez argued that Domingo pulled the knife intending to stab Connelly while Sigafoos contended Connelly fell on Domingo when the force of a blow he delivered to the side of Domingo's head carried both men to the ground.

Domingo was suspended after he was booked in the incident and did not play another down for LSU last season. He was dressed out for a spring training session earlier this month.

SWCD to send teacher to workshop

Gray County Soil and Water Conservation District board members voted unanimously during a recent meeting to sponsor a teacher at an upcoming conservation education workshop later this spring at West Texas State University. They decided after discussing a new conservation course taught by Mrs. Joe Fisher at Pampa High School.

In other action the board heard a report on the Panhandle Association of SWCD meeting in Friona. The report was given by Robert Saylor and Milton Carpenter, district directors.

A letter on the activities of the Soil Conservation Service in Gray County was presented to the board by Perry Grubik, district conservationist.

Grubik also discussed a tour of lovegrass plantings and management this spring in cooperation with Joe VanZandt county extension agent.

Board members reviewed progress on McClellan Creek and Red Deer Creek watersheds.

Carter hesitates on aid for Zaire

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration faces a tough foreign policy decision in dealing with a new request from Zaire for military aid, including ammunition for U.S.-made weapons supplied to the African country in years past.

The State Department said Monday that Zaire, battling an invading force from neighboring Angola, has made "a supplementary request" to the United States for aid.

Last week the administration authorized shipment to Zaire of two planeloads of "non-lethal" military equipment, including spare plane and truck parts, uniforms and communications gear. The shipment was valued at under $2 million, the State Department said.

Although State Department

spokesmen refused to elaborate on the latest request from the African country, it was reported that Zaire is now pressing for ammunition for U.S.-made rifles, mortars and machine guns, as well as more spare parts.

There have been indications that the Carter administration is reluctant to meet Zaire's military needs and is looking for another way to provide the material. President Carter during last fall's campaign criticized the U.S. position as a major world arms supplier.

One possible method of indirectly moving U.S. military supplies into Zaire would be to transfer American-made equipment from a third country that already has received such aid. Another would be to press

France and Belgium to increase their military shipments to the government of President Mobutu Sese Seko in Kinshasa. Zaire is battling an estimated 2,000 troops who crossed into its Shaba province, formerly called Katanga, from Angola on March 10. The invasion force reportedly is comprised of exiled gendarmes driven out of Katanga after an unsuccessful secessionist movement in the 1960s.

Mobutu, who supported the U.S.-backed losing side in the Angolan civil war a year ago, is contending the invaders are being aided by Cuban troops who fought alongside the Marxist faction in Angola.

Mobutu's government is to get $30.2 million in U.S. military aid this year and $32.5 million next year.

TV newsmen 'game' victims

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Television news people are pawns in the ratings game, hired and fired in some instances on the basis of skin tests given to viewers to measure their reaction, says TV Guide magazine.

Psychological research firms have administered the tests, similar to lie-detector tests, for TV stations in Los Angeles, Seattle, Minneapolis, Denver and St. Louis, the magazine said today.

As a result of tests by San Francisco's ERA Research last spring, Los Angeles station KNXT, a CBS affiliate, fired anchorman Pat Emory and co-anchor Sandy Hill. TV Guide said.

"The next few weeks about two dozen on-air reporters and supporting players suddenly found themselves out of work," the article said.

"I'm sure if they showed Adolph Hitler up there on that screen the needle would jump right out of the glass," said George Putnam, a veteran Los Angeles anchorman. "But that's no reason to hire Adolph to anchor the 5 o'clock news."

For the tests, several hundred viewers are paid to watch videotapes of newscasters during a special screening session. The viewers' hands are smeared with surgical jelly and attached to electrical sensors.

"When people are calm, their palms stay dry. But when they get emotionally turned on — frightened, angry, guilty or just sexually aroused — their sweat glands open up," the article said.

Test viewers then fill out questionnaires to describe the newscaster. Friendly, cold, warm or distant? Shifty or believable? Attractive, plain, familiar, dull?

A CBS spokeswoman in New York said the network doesn't use such testing, but she described local affiliates as "fairly autonomous."

KNXT general manager Christopher Desmond was unavailable for immediate comment on the article.

Ms. Hill, now a field reporter for KABC-TV in Los Angeles, said, "It's ludicrous that they resort to skin tests, personality inventories and stuff like that as a judgment for who should be in television news. But as long as news is ruled by rating points, it is inevitable."

Emory, now an anchor for KSD-TV, the St. Louis NBC affiliate, said ERA Research "finished their final report and delivered it to KNXT at noon on June 8. By noon of June 9, I was fired."

"They said I wasn't right for the market because I hadn't set that ERA needle off. That tells you they're looking for box office, not news," he said.

Tax bill gets final polish

WASHINGTON (AP) — Technicians are putting the finishing touches on a bill approved by the Senate Finance Committee to cut taxes by $11.4 billion over the next 18 months, including a one-time $50 rebate for most Americans.

The one-week delay to give the staff time to put the bill on paper before Senate debate begins will give the Carter administration time to try to convince wavering Democrats that the President's tax proposal deserves a chance.

The bill, which would provide rebates for 200 million Americans and a permanent tax cut averaging $110 for 46 million couples or individuals, is opposed by the 38 Republican senators as wasteful and ineffective. The big question is whether Republicans can enlist enough Democrats to scuttle President Carter's chief economic initiative.

Republicans, who want a big permanent individual tax cut instead of the rebate, were in no such mood Sen. William Roth, R-Del., called the bill a boondoggle and "one of the most expensive April Fool's jokes ever played on the American taxpayers."

Women still missing

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Two Tulsa women missing since they were kidnapped last Thursday still have not been found.

Two charges of kidnapping for extortion in connection with their disappearance have been filed against Larry Eugene Chaney, 34, of Jenks, a Tulsa suburb.

A large search party combed a 14-square-mile area in south west Tulsa Monday for Kendal Gauthier, Ashmore, 36, and Kathy Anne Brown, 22.

Authorities say they have no idea where the women might be, or if they are still alive.

Miss Brown was a horse trainer employed by Mrs. Ashmore and her husband, Phillip, to care for their horses at the Ashmores home in Jenks.

After the women's disappearance, Ashmore received an anonymous telephone call on Friday demanding $500,000. He followed instructions to place the money at an abandoned rodeo arena in Jenks, but no one picked it up.

When a second call came late Friday night saying he had placed the money in the wrong place, police traced the call to Chaney's residence about four blocks from the arena.

He was arrested early Saturday morning without incident.

District Court Judge Raymond Graham set bond for Chaney at $500,000 on each charge Monday.
