

Panhandle may be atomic dump

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP) — Sites being considered by the federal Energy Research and Development Administration for dump sites for nuclear waste in the near future include the Texas Panhandle, the South Plains and East Texas, according to an ERDA report.

Nuclear dump sites require geologic formations suitable for storage of radioactive waste that must be isolated deep underground from man's environment for thousands of years.

ERDA spokesmen said this week the agency's National Waste Terminal Storage program involves studies in 36 states.

Two sites are expected to be selected by 1978 for operation by 1985 and Texas is among the prime candidates because it has the geologic formations required, ERDA said.

Joe Ventura, executive director of the governor's energy advisory council at Austin, said the council was contacted by ERDA several months ago. He said the information indicated that the sites would not be approved unless the governor approves them for such use.

Ventura said that although some core drilling has been done in East Texas as part of a survey of sites, "right now, they are just gathering information. They may even abort the project at any time," he said.

Clayton Zerby, a spokesman for Union Carbide, the principal contractor for ERDA out of Oak Ridge, Tenn., said contracts will be awarded within the next few months for detailed geological studies of the Palo Duro Basin and the Dalhart Basin.

ERDA said that based on preliminary results by Dr. Kenneth S. Johnson of the University of Oklahoma and Oklahoma Geologic Survey, the Dalhart and Palo Duro basins are "sufficiently promising to justify further investigation."

possibility of waste storage in the East Texas salt dome, ERDA said geological core drilling studies in the area would start in 1977. The dumps will be for use by commercial nuclear power plants in the state.

Zerby said the geological studies in West Texas would determine the underground stability of the area and the conditions of the salt beds several thousand feet underground that are considered ideal for nuclear storage.

Zerby said the salt beds have been found in an area stretching from North Central Texas west and north across Eastern New Mexico and the Oklahoma Panhandle and Kansas. Salt bed areas are also found in East Texas spreading into Louisiana and Mississippi.

ERDA said it has been working closely with state governments involved in the studies.

In Austin, John Barry, a nuclear studies specialist with the governor's energy advisory council, said the decision to build the dump sites will not be made without local and state consultation. He said there are bills in Congress aimed at giving state legislatures veto power.

And, he added, "no matter what the legislature does, I think it is assured that if the people of the state do not want the facility, it won't be there." ERDA has the responsibility to locate, construct and operate federal repositories for the disposal of radioactive wastes.

A draft "generic environmental impact statement on radioactive waste management" will be issued next spring by ERDA. The statement will be submitted for public review and comment before any final action is taken.

The Palo Duro basin is mostly under the southern Panhandle down to Lamb, Hale and Floyd counties. The Dalhart basin covers Hartley and Dallam counties.

For some of the Pride of Pampa band members, the most tearful part of the week in Ireland was winning the top prize in the St. Patrick's Day parade in Dublin.

For others, it was leaving. Sure, they were glad to get home to boyfriends and girlfriends and hamburgers. But many left a bit of their hearts on the Emerald Isle.

They won their share of hearts, too.

Students at the two Catholic schools where the stage band entertained will not soon forget the energetic Texans who left bright red bandanas tied around their young Irish necks.

Dubliners along the parade route on March 17 probably can still visualize the leggy sequined green and gold girls twirling batons and wearing shamrock-decked white cowboy hats as they led the Texas band down O'Connell Street.

Hotel and restaurant managers will look back with pleasure at the idealistic Texas group which left all the towels and minded its manners.

And those who just happened into the Ryan Hotel in Killarney on March 14 will tell their families about the loud but talented stage band which rocked the bar that night because it was the only place the Pampa group could rehearse.

But perhaps the Pampa students' greatest impact was on their tour guides, four charming Irish colleens who answered questions, pointed out sights and helped keep the buses on time.

"I'd like to keep ya," one told the sophomore bus as the travelers were about to depart for Texas. They promised to write, she promised to visit.

She said other nice things. "I've never gotten so attached to a group," she added before she quietly slipped out with a tear in her eye.

Dateline: Dublin, March 17. Newspaper: The New York Times.

On page 14, the Times headlined the story "Dublin's parade has a US flavor."

"The first blare of music was 'San Antonio Rose' from the Pampa, Texas, high school band," wrote Toy Reed in his not quite accurate report. The Pride of Pampa marched to "San Antonio Rose" in the third group, a California band was first.

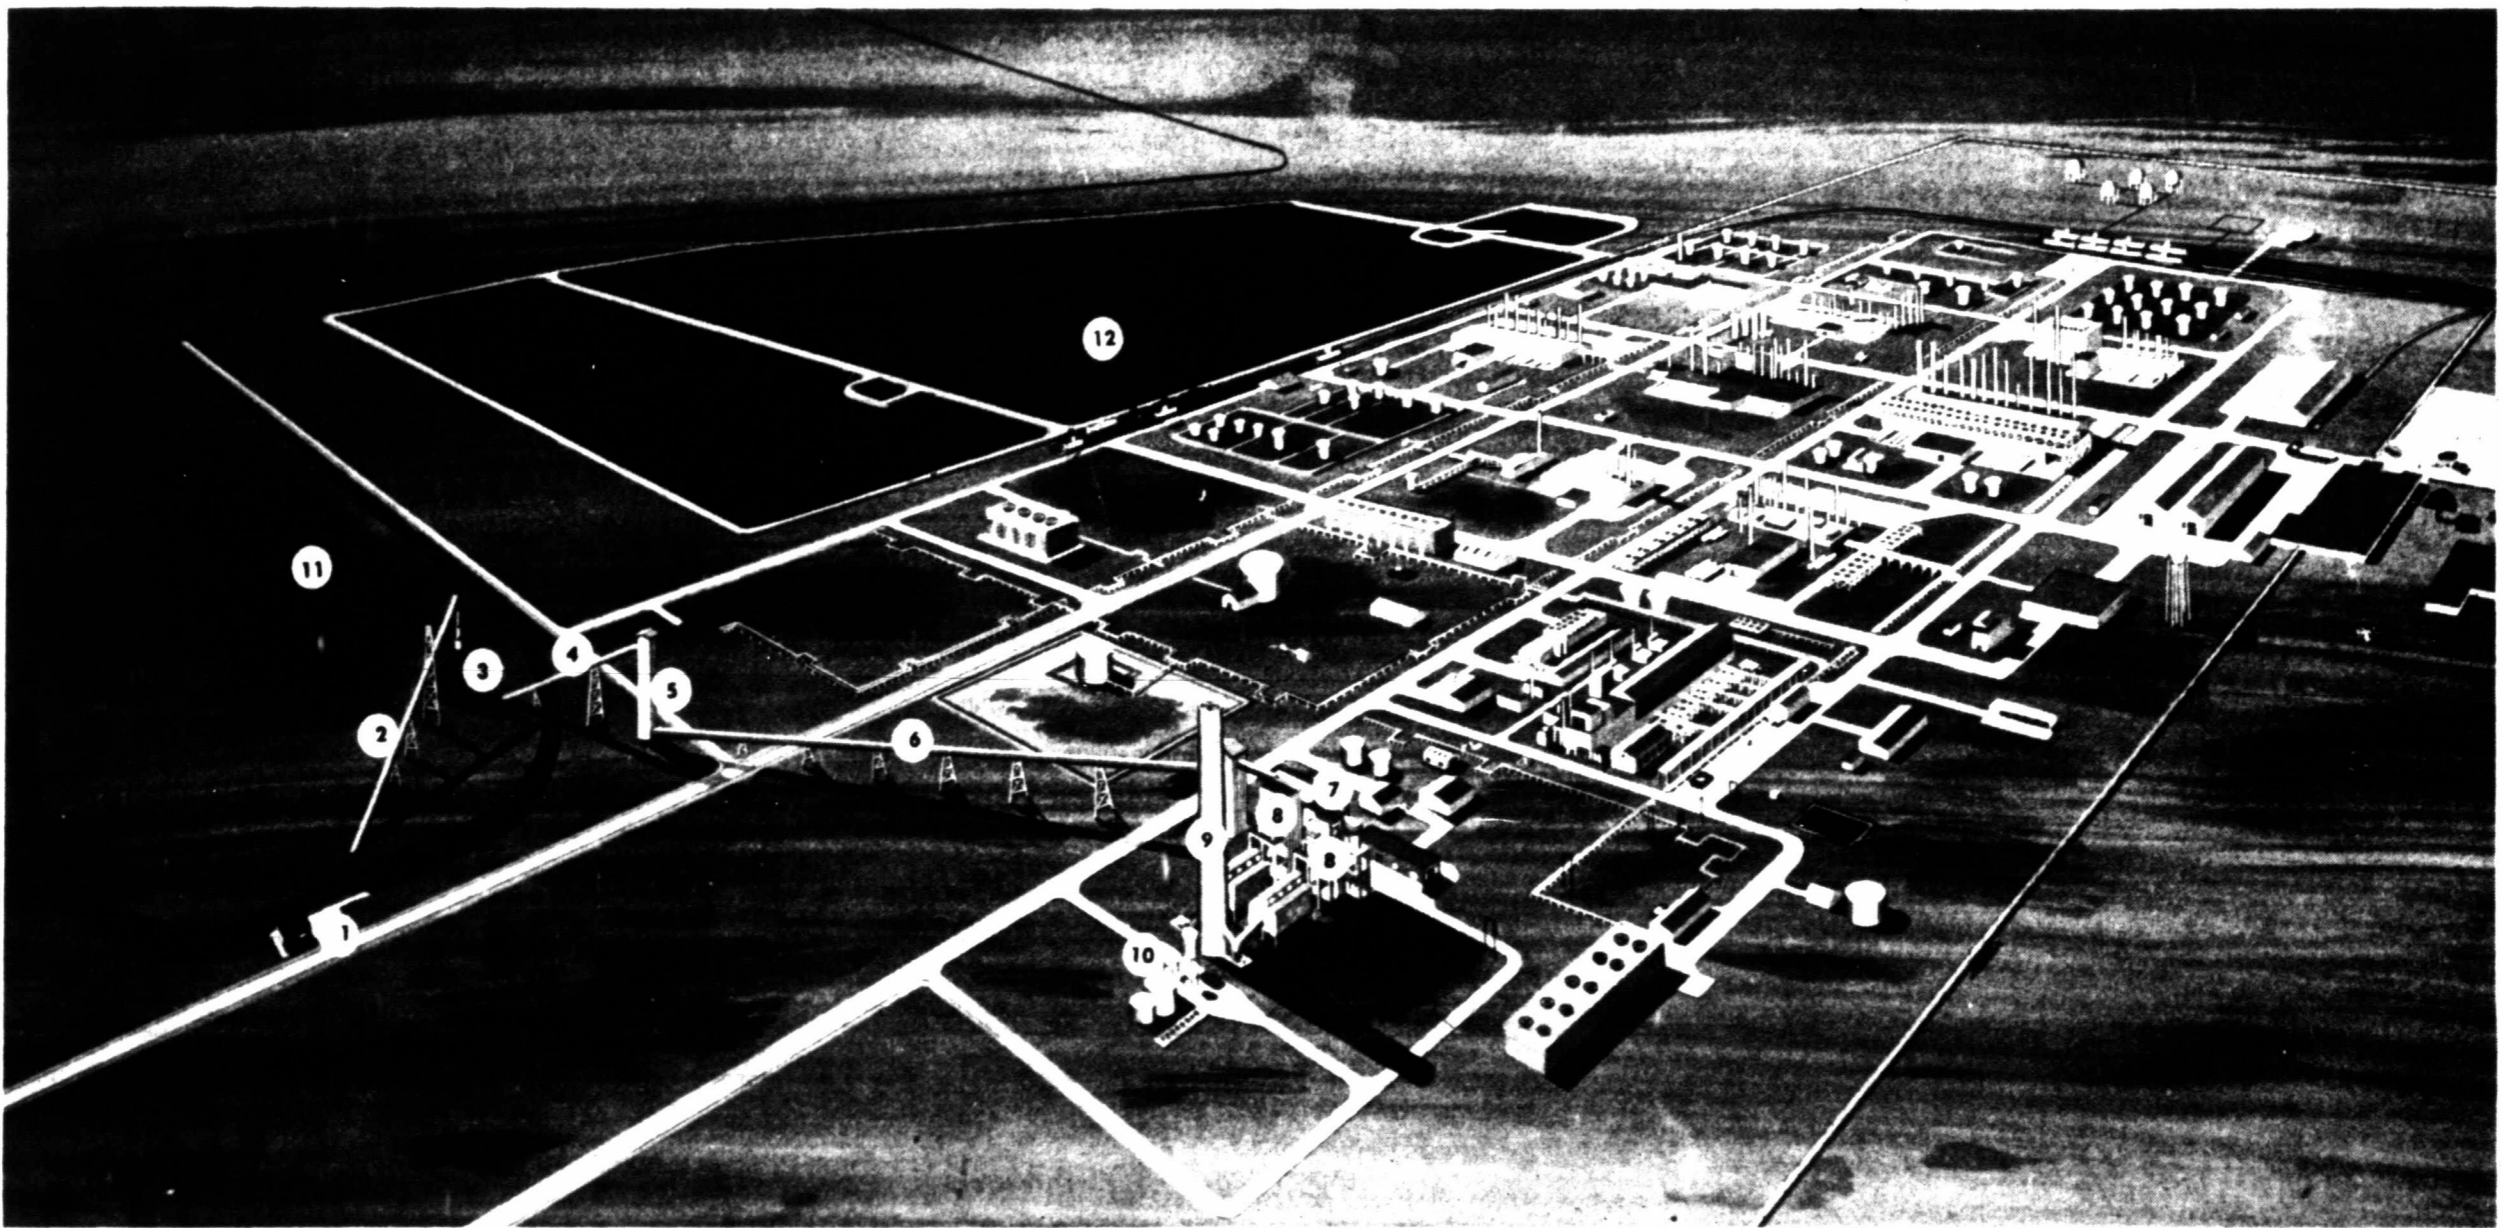

Tens of thousands lined the walks along O'Connell Street and St. Stephen's Green to cheer the Boston cops and the Texas majorettes swinging along in the rain.

Gene Steel sent the paper to us with the note "Not bad — making New York Times."

The US Congress now costs the taxpayers more than $1 billion a year — that is more than $1.8 million for each of the 535 members.

Weather

The mercury is expected to reach 74 degrees today and 78 degrees Thursday as generally fair weather continues. Low tonight will be 42 degrees. Today's winds will be southwesterly at 15-20 m.p.h. increasing to 25 m.p.h. and gusty Thursday.

The Celanese coal plan

This artist's conception of the coal fired boilers and coal handling facilities at the Celanese Pampa Plant was unveiled today at a Chamber of Commerce noon meeting. It shows the plant as it will appear upon completion of the project in mid-1979. As the train enters the plant and crosses the (1) receiving hopper, coal will be dumped from the bottom of the cars into the hopper and proceed by (2) conveyor to the (3) stacker. From there the coal will again be carried by (4) conveyor to the (5) crusher where the coal will be crushed to three-fourth inch size. From there the coal will proceed by (6) conveyor to the (7) surge bins. From there it will be pulverized to a fine dust and fed into the (8) boilers. Other points of interest associated with coal fired boilers: (9) exhaust stack and (10) bottom ash and fly ash facilities. Also a (11) dead storage pile of coal will be held in reserve and will contain approximately two months of energy for boiler use. The (12) solar ponds are located in the rear of the plant.

Celanese to burn 2,000 tons coal

By THOM MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff

When the switch away from natural gas is complete in mid-1979, Celanese will be burning about 2,000 tons of coal each day to fuel two new boilers now being fabricated in Kentucky.

At 100 tons per train carload, each day's fuel will require 20 cars to get the coal from the mine to be selected in Colorado or New Mexico or Wyoming to the Pampa Celanese Plant.

Actually, coal will be transported by a unit train of from 75 to 110 cars," said Gene Steel, plant manager.

Speaking at a Chamber of Commerce luncheon today, Steel explained that the coal-hauling train will be making continuous round trips between the coal mine and the Pampa plant, requiring from four to five days per round trip.

Steel told an audience of more than 200 that Celanese made the decision to convert from natural gas to coal based on three factors.

"At long term, we do not believe that natural gas is going to be available for industrial boiler fuel."

"We believe the cost of natural gas is going to be substantially higher than other alternate fuels such as coal."

"We support the concept that this valuable resource should be conserved and used as a basic fuel for residential home heating where applicable and as a raw material for further upgrading to provide us with the consumer goods we currently enjoy."

In order to get the coal to the plant, Steel explained that "arrangements have been made to cross Highway 60 twice each round trip — every four to five days."

He said the train would require three to five minutes to get across the highway and two to four hours to unload before re-crossing the road.

"All our coal will comply with all state and federal regulations," Steel said.

About five to six per cent of the coal will be ash, he explained, and the current tentative plans are to dispose of the five-ton-per-hour ash accumulation in a landfill operation.

A Celanese project team in Houston, which is being supported by Brown and Root Construction Company of Houston, visited 27 coal-fueled facilities in researching a system for Celanese.

Engineering by the team has been underway for about 14 months. Steel said, and field construction is expected to begin in late July or early August of this year.

"We still expect the peak employment for construction to come in mid-1978 with 400 to 450 construction workers on the project."

After the transition is complete 30 to 40 permanent employees will be added to the Celanese rolls and the plant manager said that half of them will be "operations personnel" and the other half will be "technical and maintenance support."

This year is the 25th year in Pampa for Celanese and Steel commented upon the company and its growth at the meeting.

Celanese was founded in 1924 in Cumberland, Md., he said.

when the first cellulose acetate yarn was manufactured. The second plant opened in 1939 on the banks of the New River in Narrows, Va., and the third in 1941 in Rock Hill, S.C.

Until 1945 Celanese exclusively was a fibers company but in that year chemical and plastics divisions were established and the first chemical company plant was built in Bishop, Tex.

The second chemical company plant was built in 1952 in Pampa.

Two others have gone up since then: 1961 in Bay City and 1967 at Clear Lake, near Houston.

"In addition to these four manufacturing plants," Steel said, "the chemical company has a research and development center in Corpus Christi."

Celanese currently manufactures between 20 and 25 organic chemicals which are used as intermediates in the manufacture of consumer goods, Steel said.

Some of the things Celanese chemicals eventually become a part of include a variety of man-made fibers, plastics from types used in toys to that replacing some metal on 1977 automobiles, coatings (paints), adhesives, pharmaceuticals, agricultural chemicals, printing inks (conventional) and a new variety cured by ultra-violet light.

Celanese chemicals also are found in tire cord, cigarette filters, synthetic lubricants, plumbing fixtures, recording tapes and X-ray film.

"There is hardly anything we use, we touch, we see, we feel that is not derived some way from the petro-chemical industry," Steel said.

Fight over coal slurry

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Backers of a coal slurry pipeline bill won an early victory in the House today, beating down an amendment that the sponsor said would kill the measure.

Senators, meanwhile, passed and sent to the House a bill giving legal recognition to the written wishes of terminally ill persons that their lives not be prolonged by artificial means.

A 77-65 House vote tabled an amendment by Rep. Joe Hubenak, D-Kosenberg, that would have prohibited condemnation of farm and ranch lands as right-of-way for coal slurry pipelines.

Hubenak said the lines could easily follow existing highway and railroad right-of-way.

Pipeline and power companies are pushing for passage of the bill, but railroads violently oppose it on the ground it would weaken them financially. Railroads are major haulers of coal.

The bill grants to pipeline companies that pump 50-50 mixtures of water and crushed coal the same power to condemn land for rights-of-way that oil, gas and railroad companies have.

Houston Natural Gas Co. has been the prime mover of the bill and hopes to build a line bringing water and coal from the Rocky Mountain West.

"The bill does not build a line. It doesn't give them water. It just makes them even with the railroads," said Rep. Joe Hanna, D-Breckenridge, the House sponsor.

Hanna said the need for coal in the future would be so great that "the railroads are going to have all they can handle."

Representatives also could take a final vote on a medical malpractice insurance bill that was tentatively approved Tuesday, 144-1, with only Rep. John Wilson, D-La Grange dissenting.

The real battles were fought over amendments, one of which failed by a single vote, drawn by the Texas Medical Association. The TMA claimed the compromise bill did not go far enough.

Statewide associations of several other medically related professions had agreed to support it, however, along with plaintiffs' attorneys.

The malpractice bill contains more than 20 features that backers hope will bring down the cost of insurance that protects the assets of doctors who injure patients through medical error.

Included are provisions that: —Base rates on the more favorable of either Texas or nationwide experience with successful malpractice claims.

—Place a $500,000 ceiling on malpractice judgments, with additional amounts to cover actual costs of medical and custodial care.

—Require malpractice suits to be evaluated by three-doctor screening panels before they can be taken to court. An effort to make the panels' findings admissible as evidence in a trial failed, 91-53.

—Prohibit insurance companies from increasing doctors' premiums merely because claims were filed against them. A claim would have to result in payment to a victim before a doctor could be charged.

—Give the State Board of Medical Examiners new power to discipline doctors for incompetence.

Rep. Tom Uher, D-Bay City, architect of the compromise, repeatedly warned the House that the measure was so fragile that any major change in the bill could result in defeat.

Senators passed to the House a bill limiting catches of redfish. Commercial boats would be restricted to 200 pounds daily for a year.

Grand jury meets here to hear more testimony

The Gray County Grand Jury was in session today and the hall outside the meeting room was filled with persons subpoenaed to testify.

Some of these observed waiting to be called indicate today's session continues the grand jury's investigation into alleged wrong-doings at Highland General Hospital.

Former administrator Robert Monogue has been indicted by the grand jury on a felony count charging him with "an intent to obtain a benefit for himself" by paying $76 to Mrs. Sharon A. Mack, "knowing the said Sharon Mack was not entitled to receive it."

Monogue also has been charged with two misdemeanors in connection with two incidents in which the administrator allegedly accepted an amount of carpet and an amount of liquor from companies doing business with the hospital.

Investigators from the attorney general's office in Austin had previously been requested by the grand jury and reportedly have been in Pampa working on the case.

Otis Shearer of Booker, an attorney with the Perryton law firm of Lemon, Close, Atkinson and Shearer, is serving as district attorney pro-tem in the hospital investigation.

Shearer was appointed by 31st District Judge Grainger Melihoney after District Attorney Harold Comer disqualified himself in the case.

Next in line was County Attorney David Martindale who also disqualified himself.

Both attorneys represent clients in their private practices who have been involved in the past in one way or another with the hospital.

The grand jury also has scheduled sessions for Thursday and Friday. More than 30 persons reportedly have been subpoenaed to appear during the three days.

Listen to the doctor

There is nothing in the package which will stimulate anything. How can the Government stimulate the economy by taking money out of one pocket of the public and putting it into another pocket? The rebate plan, for example, would distribute $50 apiece to most consumers. As a result those consumers will tend to spend more. But where will the Government get the money to send out the rebates?

It is Maestro Milton Friedman, the Nobel Prize winning economist, explaining economic fundamentals to the Carter administration. The advice and dissent comes in an interview with U.S. News & World Report. Where Carter is going wrong, Friedman tirelessly explains the consequences of economic policy in terms of common sense, he is never tedious.

Some Friedman samplers. — The plan fact is that the quantity of money has already been increasing faster than output. Chairman Burns of the Federal Reserve Board indicated in his recent testimony that the narrow money supply — M1 — would have to increase at only about zero to 2 percent per year to avoid inflation, and the broad money supply — M2 — at about 3 to 5 percent. Yet his announced targets are far higher than that — 4 1/2 to 6 1/2 percent for M1, 7 to 10 percent for M2 — and actual monetary growth has recently been even faster.

Translated. We are in for a strong surge of inflation to pay for administration spending.

— If the Treasury borrows from the public, there will be less money left in the hands of private investors to be loaned out and spent for building houses and creating new factories and machines. The result is to reduce private employment and increase publicly financed employment.

— There is a physical limit to our reserves. But remember that there was also a big scare in the 1920s, when it was said that reserves of oil would only last 20 years. Since that time, consumption has increased dramatically, and so have reserves.

— We have been granting subsidies to underdeveloped countries and the evidence is overwhelming that this has been hurting them, not helping them. What we have done is to strengthen the small clique which is in charge of the governments in these countries at the expense of the populace at large.

And finally — We are going down the same road as Great Britain. We are 10 or 20 years behind Great Britain, but if we keep on the way we are going we will be in the same state that Britain is in now. Forty per cent of our national income is being spent by the federal, state and local governments. Fifty years ago the proportion was 10 per cent. Are we getting our money's worth?

It is tonic reading for queasy times.

Time for baby boom?

The United States is due for another baby boom, thinks one observer. — The Pill more women working and concern over population control notwithstanding.

The very fact that the birth rate has fallen to 1.8 children per woman, less than replacement level, almost insures it will happen, says University of Michigan economist and demographer Prof. Donald D. Lee.

Today's children will comprise a relatively small age group when they become young adults during the 1980s and 1990s, he says. As a result, their job and income prospects will be improved. Feeling more prosperous, they will marry earlier and have more children. Families of three or more children will become common again.

He notes that during the Depression of the 1930s, the birth rate dipped to about 2.1 children per woman, exactly replacement level. Because there were so few children in that age group, they fared better with jobs and income when they reached maturity.

These young adults gave birth to more children during the postwar years. When the baby boom children in turn began coming of age during the 1960s and 1970s, this much larger population found itself faring worse economically and because of it elected to have fewer children.

As further evidence of the powerful influence of economics on the birth rate, Lee points out that the Depression-era figure of 2.1 was achieved long before many contraceptives used today were invented. The birth rate peaked in 1957 at 3.7, and then began a steady fall to the current 1.8 more than a decade before the environmental and women's liberation movements.

It isn't absolute income that affects a generation's birth rate, however, but how income compares with expectations. Because they are both fewer in number and are growing up in an era of economic uncertainty, Lee believes today's children will find themselves in better economic circumstances than they expect and will thus repeat the reproductive performance of the children of the '30s.

"MY PERSONAL PHILOSOPHY ON THE ENERGY SCARE THING IS TO JUST CROSS THAT BRIDGE WHEN I COME TO IT."

BUTLER D. SHAFFER

'And Now, He-e-e-re's Jimmy!'

Massah Jimmy's venture into show biz — his "Dial-a-Pres" radio call-in show — was hardly the opportunity for personal contact with elected officials it was promoted as being. Only forty — two out of an estimated nine million callers were able to get through (less than 0.0005 percent of those trying). With the chances of being able to actually talk to Mr. Carter being about 214,000 to 1, the experience should serve to confirm just the opposite of what was intended. How far removed each of us is from our supposed representatives. All in all, the undertaking reminded me of the practice employed in some ancient monarchies where one day each year, a number of peasants would be invited to the castle for a feast.

Anyone who has so much as dabbled in the performing arts knows how difficult it is to get rid of the fever, and I suspect that Jimmy Carter is no exception. Ham and grits, you might call it. Thus, I can imagine the day we open the television schedules to find the following program listings:

Welcome Back, Carter — Jimmy Carter returns for a visit to his old high school in Plains, Georgia, and spends the day teaching a history class.

Rosalyn Carter, Rosalyn Carter — Jimmy fractures his jaw while trying to outsmile Hubert Humphrey and Rosalyn must carry her own sacks of groceries from the A & P. Jimmy's sister conducts a tent revival in a city-owned park and alienates the ACLU. Jimmy's mother announces that she wants her own TV special. Billy Carter is arrested for selling a six-pack of beer to a minor, while Amy, in order to prove that she is "common" as any other child living in the White House, gets herself expelled from school for drawing derogatory pictures of her teacher.

Mister Carter's "Neighborhood" — a program for children, in which Master Carter bounces into the room singing "Oh, It's a Great Feeling to Be at the Top," while putting on his now-famous cardigan sweater. Mister Carter takes us on a union-operated "magic trolley" to the "Land of Make Believe," a setting that resembles Washington, D.C.

"Big House on the Potomac" — "Pa" Carter (who is dressed in blue jeans and a sweat shirt to convince White House tourists that he puts around the house and the yard just like any other suburbanite) is suddenly called to the Pentagon to stop World War III. On the way, his Nash Rambler breaks down and he must walk through two and a half miles of dangerous muggers to get to his destination.

Even the Saturday morning programs would be affected. Imagine, if you will, — "Super-Pres" — "faster than the U.S. Mail, more powerful than the Teamsters Union, able to jump to conclusions in a single bound... a strange visitor from the backwoods of Georgia who, disguised as Jimmy Carter, mild-mannered peanut farmer, wages a relentless fight for whatever 51 percent of the voters will support. In today's episode, Super-Pres must summon up all his strength to say "no" to George Meany."

And, perhaps, even "The Tonight Show." If you thought Johnny Carson's monologues were short on laughs, can you imagine ten minutes of Jimmy? Jimmy: "I flew over the drought area of northern California, and was it dry."

(Voice from the audience): "How dry was it?" Jimmy: "It was so dry that I have decided to ration all water."

And, as we are about to turn off our sets at the end of the broadcast day, we see our leader once again. Bible in hand, doing "Sermonette." "I want y'all to know that God favors a system of national health insurance. He told me so in one of our daily conferences, and you know I wouldn't lie. And now, before this day comes to an end, I'd like y'all to sing along with me as the Marine Corps Band plays our national anthem. God knows I love y'all, and our beautiful flag, and this great country of ours. I'll see you tomorrow, and be sure to have your kids' tune in the morning for "Captain Carteroo."

BATTIN' AROUND

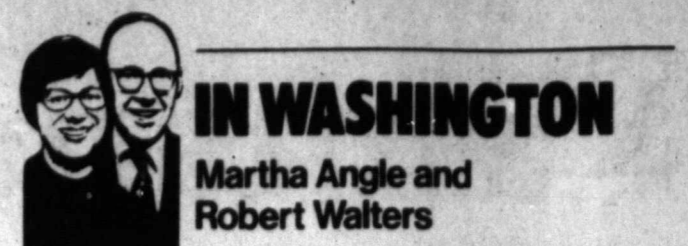

People oppose gun controls

By C.R. BATTEN
The people who are most insistent on "public involvement" in any decisions of government — who most insist on public hearings and meetings, public referenda and universal suffrage — are the quickest to try to circumvent public involvement and to seek legally questionable methods of imposing their collective will over others when it appears that the majority of the people disagree with them.

This appears to be happening in the area of gun controls. For example, after President Ford vetoed a bill to end the legal ownership of handguns in the District of Columbia, the City Council passed a similar law. The District of Columbia Superior Court issued a preliminary injunction suspending the law until a final ruling is made. Judge John D. Fautleroy found the DC Firearms Control Act to be in violation of the DC Home-Rule Act which prohibits the city council from enacting any amendments to the DC Code.

Across the continent, an attempt was made last year in the California legislature to pass a strict bill prohibiting the ownership of handguns by anyone except police officers. When that failed, the anti-gun crowd launched a petition drive to try to get the same law on the ballot for the November election. That effort also failed.

Now, in San Francisco, the Board of Permit Appeals has

IN WASHINGTON

Martha Angle and Robert Walters

Sham, hypocrisy, hyperbole

By Martha Angle and Robert Walters
WASHINGTON — (NEA) — "A bribe," charged Rep. Charles Thone, a Lincoln, Neb., Republican. "It galls my hide," chimed in Rep. Robert H. Michel, a fellow Republican from Peoria, Ill. "This is simply unconscionable."

Added an equally outraged Rep. Bill Frenzel, a GOP legislator from the Minneapolis suburbs: "We are buying purity for ourselves at a cost of $2.2 million to the American taxpayers."

All of that indignant talk on the floor of the House of Representatives recently could have had an innocent observer to believe that Congress was auctioning off whatever remained of the dignity of the Republic.

In fact, nothing quite that calamitous was happening. It was simply the Republicans' turn to engage in the sort of sham, hypocrisy and hyperbole which has brought disrepute to both major political parties.

The occasion was the House debate early this month on a major package of ethics reforms developed by a special commission headed by Rep. David R. Obey, D-Wis. Most of the public attention at the time focused on the controversy over a provision limiting the outside income of representatives.

But there also was a lively, although far less publicized, dispute over another section of the Obey package. It abolishes, effective early next year, all unofficial office accounts maintained by members of the House.

Some legislators have abused those accounts, turning them into secret "slush funds" to pay for personal expenses, but most congressmen have used the accounts as a "petty cash" fund to finance such quasi-official undertakings as the mailing of newsletters to constituents.

As a special inducement to representatives in the latter category, Obey's resolution coupled elimination of the unofficial office accounts with authorization for an additional $5,000 yearly for each legislator's official office account, to be used only for legitimate purposes in connection with their official duties.

To a man, the Republican insisted that they agreed with the goal of abolishing the clandestine "slush funds" — but they sanctimoniously insisted that the $5,000 bonus was unnecessary and outrageous, if not downright immoral.

The propriety of that payment is indeed open to question — but what the Republicans failed to mention at any time during the debate on the issue was the fact that virtually every GOP member of the House is a beneficiary of a special fund which annually has been doling out hundreds of thousands of dollars to their unofficial office accounts.

That money comes from the National Republican Congressional Committee, which last year poured more than $233,000 directly into often-secret office accounts to help House Republicans pay for mass mailings to their congressional districts.

Additional tens of thousands of dollars went to those same GOP legislators to pay for travel expenses, television tapes to garner free publicity, artwork for bumper stickers and a host of other items.

House Democrats have no similar arrangement, nor do either Republicans or Democrats in the Senate. The House Republicans apparently were concerned not about morality or propriety but rather the possibility that the proposed reform might bring an end to their exclusive and lucrative financial arrangement.

Their strategy was to make the reform highly unpopular by eliminating the "carrot" and leaving only the "stick," thereby attracting support from disgruntled Democrats for a move to retain "slush funds."

Republicans have contributed significantly this year to enhancing ethical accountability in the House, but the backdoor effort to thwart a badly needed reform was not the GOP's finest hour.

Secretary Vance is preparing for his meeting with Castro. He already has a three weeks growth of his beard.

Kingfish million in Venezuela?

By ROBERT HEARD
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A man who claims he was Huey Long's protegee says he's convinced the "deduct box," with more than $1 million for the Long presidential campaign in 1936, wound up in Venezuela.

Millions of Americans who watched "The Life and Assassination of the Kingfish" on television Monday night remember Long's top aide pleading with him before he died to tell where he put the deduct box.

Marshall Purvis, 70, who lives on a hill overlooking Austin, Tuesday told the Associated Press he is positive Long put the money in a bank in Venezuela so it couldn't be traced.

The deduct box — named for illegal deductions from state employees' salaries — also contained huge sums contributed by "Share the Wealth" clubs all over the country, Purvis said.

The television movie incorrectly depicted Long as having affairs with women in Louisiana, said Purvis, who can speak only in a whisper because of an automobile accident in Mexico more than two years ago.

"He never had affairs with Louisiana women," he said.

But he did at least once in Washington, Purvis rasped. "He said, 'Marshall, there's a gal in the Venezuelan embassy — boy, what a lovable — and some other things that a man would say about a woman that he was intimate with. Now that's the only woman in my life.'"

He and his wife had drifted completely apart. He only showed up with her once somewhere in Washington, in response to criticism, and walked down the street with her to show that they still were very compatible.

He knows these details, Purvis said, because "We were like brothers." Why did Long put the money in Venezuela? "Where it couldn't be followed, and he could get it when he wanted it (for the 1936 campaign), and his gang couldn't — (Franklin) Roosevelt, FBI, no one could trace it, catch it," Purvis said.

The only other person who may have known about the Venezuelan, Purvis thinks, was Long's bodyguard, Murphy Roden, known to everyone as "Murf."

Purvis said he never learned the woman's name or any other details about her.

Asked why he waited until now to discuss Long publicly, Purvis said he turned away from politics after the 1935 assassination and has spent most of the last 30 years in Mexico, where worked as an American big-game outfitter after opening up that country for foreign hunters.

The usual presentation of Long as nothing more than a dangerous demagogue makes him mad, Purvis said, and he wants to give a more truthful picture of him before he dies.

Purvis says he first met Long in an El Dorado, Ark., courthouse, where Purvis, then a Hot Springs, Ark., lawyer, represented a prostitute whose tail bone had been broken when she fled a bawdy house fight and was struck by a streetcar.

The streetcar company laughed at his lawsuit, he said, until he brought his heavily tattooed client into the courtroom dressed in a neck to the floor dress. The company's lawyers settled the case for more than $3,000, he said.

Purvis does not remember what business brought Long to that courthouse that day, but the Kingfish came up to him after watching the settlement and correctly guessed the occupation of his client.

Purvis said this became important after he met Long because he knew Long also disliked Robinson. The Purvis-Long connection cost Robinson much prestige later when establishment candidates lost a senatorial election to a woman.

Purvis claims it was he who persuaded Long to do an unheard-of thing for a U.S. senator: become involved in another state's senatorial race.

Hattie Caraway, widow of Sen. Thaddeus Caraway of Arkansas, had been appointed in 1932 to the seat to fill a brief unexpired term. She fooled Arkansas politicians by deciding to run for the office.

Purvis, then 26, agreed to be her state campaign manager. He called Long and asked him to come to Arkansas and speak for Mrs. Caraway, who would have no chance without his help.

"Damn if I won't," he quoted Long as saying. Long told Purvis to meet him at his Louisiana home, where the matter could be discussed with Long's top assistants and backers.

Twelve to 14 men sat at Long's dining room table when the Kingfish first mentioned the possibility he would campaign for Hattie Caraway in Arkansas, Purvis said. To a man, they objected strenuously, he said. They told Long they needed him to help in several close Louisiana races.

Long told Purvis to talk to them. "I get up to speak in the dining room, kinda watching him (Long) out of the corner of my eye. Told 'em how prominent Senator Long was in my state and wound up with saying, 'Now, we'll elect Mrs. Caraway with Senator Long's help, and that will make him a national figure and head him for the presidency, which in my opinion in time he can get.'"

Long immediately issued several orders about the Arkansas campaign and "Barn, the meeting was over," Purvis said.

In seven days, Long traveled 2,100 miles by car in Arkansas and made 39 speeches. Mrs. Caraway swamped six other candidates.

After that, Purvis said, he frequently went to Washington "at my own expense" and stayed with Long, who taught him the Long-style politics.

Long liked to talk national politics with him, Purvis said, once going to Arkansas accompanied only by Murf on the pretext of getting in shape chopping wood. But what they really did as they chopped wood, Purvis said, was discuss the presidential race Long would make in 1936, he said.

Purvis served as a lieutenant colonel in ordnance in World War II and was wounded in France.

He concedes Long frequently was brutal, but says, "People would come to scoff, to see it."

He concedes Long frequently was attracted to him because he was 1,000 per cent for the guy who had never had anybody for him.

Judge McIlhaney gives sentences

Annie Ruth Blanton was sentenced Monday to five years in the Texas Department of Corrections on a charge of acquiring a controlled substance by means of a forged prescription.

Other action in 31st District Court, Judge Grainger McIlhaney presiding, included a five-year probation sentence and a $250 fine for Buster J. Faggins on a charge of possession of more than four ounces of marijuana, first offense.

James Vernon Wells received two years probation on a charge of driving while intoxicated, subsequent offense. A condition of the probation is that Wells submit himself to the minimum security institution at the old Amarillo Air Force Base for alcoholic rehabilitation.

Manuel Cedillos Ortega, convicted Feb. 22, on a charge of involuntary manslaughter was formally sentenced Monday. He had previously been transferred to Huntsville but was denied admittance to the penitentiary because he did not have the correct papers.

Ortega, brought back to Pampa to hear the formal pronouncement of the sentence as prescribed by law, now will again be transferred to Huntsville.

Wigs wanted

A wig drive now being conducted by members of Pampa's Girl Scout Troop 76 will provide help for young cancer patients.

According to Troop Leader Ronae Woody, many children with cancer are being treated with chemotherapy on an outpatient basis at Santa Rosa Medical Center in San Antonio.

Chemotherapy, or treatment with drugs, is resulting in impressive statistics, Mrs. Woody said.

"Fifty per cent of these children are now surviving longer than five years, or they are cured."

But the drugs cause loss of hair, she added, and since the youngsters are treated on an outpatient basis, they wear surgical caps rather than go to school with severe loss of hair.

"Unless wigs are available to them," Mrs. Woody said, "That's the purpose of the drive."

She explained that wigs need not be new. The hospital has a full-time beauty operator on duty to adjust the wigs for size, and style and dye them for the youngsters.

Residents may donate wigs to the drive by calling Mrs. Woody at 669-2187 after 5 p.m. or Renee Bohaman at 669-2497.

Divorced to keep job

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A woman who claims she knows more about wigs than anyone in Texas got a Mexican divorce in order to retain her job on the Texas Cosmetology Commission.

Sally Cooney of Houston said she will marry her ex-husband, who owns a beauty school regulated by the commission, after the Senate approves her appointment by Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

The woman told her story to the Senate Nominations Subcommittee on Tuesday, and it recommended, 4-2, that the Senate confirm her appointment.

"I was scared to death," Ms. Cooney said later in retelling how divorce was the only answer to what she considered a crucial dilemma over a possible conflict of interest.

Her ex-husband Robert Harper owns the Pan American Academy in Houston and the subcommittee had earlier questioned the possible conflict of interest.

Ms. Cooney, who described Harper as a "very, very wonderful person, a good friend," said Harper agreed to the divorce after the question arose.

"My husband — my ex-husband —" she said, "knew how important it was to me."

The couple was divorced recently in the Mexican border state of Nuevo Leon after a 15-day wait.

Ms. Cooney identified her ex-husband's academy as an "accredited beauty school." She said he was selling the school but could not complete the transaction before June.

By then, however, the Senate would have acted on her appointment, and she feared it would have rejected her. Briscoe named her to the "wig position" on the six-member board Dec. 29, 1975.

Ms. Cooney, who has been serving on the commission pending her confirmation, said she desperately wants to keep the job.

"I probably know more about wigs than anybody in Texas," she said. "Probably not two people have had my experience."

She owned the first licensed wig salon in the state, according to her resume, and co-authored "Wigs, a Complete Guide for the Profession," which is used as a textbook in the United States, England, Canada, Germany, Japan and other countries.

A divorce from her first husband 12 years ago started her in the wig business, which is so lucrative, she said, that she made $100,000 "just servicing — teasing and curling hair — a couple of years ago."

Asked what her husband would do after he sells his beauty school, she said, "He is an artist, and we plan to do screenplays. He paints, sculpts and writes. He owned five beauty salons. He is not unsuccessful."

Connally says media smug

By ROB WOOD
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — John Connally, former Secretary of the Navy and of the treasury, says the news media of today has a certain smugness which seems to imply that "we are judge, jury and prosecutor, not merely the recorder of human events."

Connally, also a former Texas governor, told a Houston Press Club forum Tuesday,

"we recognize the ageless value of freedom of the press, but we should be concerned that this freedom carries with it the dangerous freedom to oppress."

"I assure you that anyone who feels he has been wronged by the press has never found a way to have the last word with a newspaper or a television camera."

Connally, still a powerful voice in the Republican Party, said the news media is "a giant financial and influential power center equivalent to the presidency, the congress or the supreme court."

"This private, profit-making enterprise has a greater right of confidentiality than a government elected by the people," he said.

Connally added, "Throughout American history there have been abuses of power in all branches of government and in business and labor. Mechanisms exist in our political system to deal with these abuses. No real mechanisms of this kind exist for checking possible abuses by the media, except the responsible attitude and self-discipline of those in the media."

Connally said the press can oppress with petty ways, such as "misleading or damaging headlines fashioned by some deskman taking out his bias or anger in bold, black letters; or by the technique of make-up which gives magnified attention to a story; or the quiet but deadly technique of neglect or burial of a story."

During a question and answer session, Connally said the news media "has the power to destroy any public official. Some members of the press would destroy an individual if they could. Some member of the press would destroy an individual. There are irresponsible newsmen as well as irresponsible lawyers or doctors. I'm not going to annoy newsmen with the holy water."

Connally also was critical of "the growing volume of news reporting on serious subjects by reporters and writers with superficial understanding of the subject."

"It doesn't take a great deal of knowledge and experience to report on an auto accident on the 10 o'clock news, but it does take knowledge and skill and judgment to write and report on the meaning of gas price to Texas," he said.

The press, Connally said, "is like a maverick passenger in a lifeboat. That lifeboat, which bears all of us, keeps us out of the tyrannical waters of lost freedoms, including freedom of the press. And yet, the press does precious little to help out in the rowing."

Water rationed in San Francisco

By TONY LEDWELL
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Surrounded by drought-stricken counties already rationing water, San Franciscans now will have to cut their use to face what the mayor calls "the most desperate matter facing this city since World War II."

Car washings and full swimming pools are banned in the regulations passed Tuesday by the Public Utilities Commission. The rationing "will be very demanding" for this city's 665,000 residents, Mayor George Moscone said at a commission hearing.

The water conservation policy, which goes into effect April 1, is designed to cut overall consumption by 25 per cent.

The plan allows each dwelling unit — single home or apartment — to use up to 70 per cent of the amount used in the same period last year.

Industrial customers, however, will be required to reduce consumption only 10 per cent from what they used a year ago, to avoid what water department manager Ken Boyd called "a can of worms leading to personnel layoffs."

The average four-person family in San Francisco last year used a daily average of 221 to 331 gallons, making a bi-monthly average of as much as 19,860 gallons.

A few households will use more than that, but once their consumption exceeds 22,500 gallons bi-monthly, they will be forced to cut back to just 50 per cent of what they consumed a year ago.

Boyd said consumers will be allowed one minor infraction and a second infraction will result in a written warning. But if the customer exceeds the limit a third time, a device will be installed on his pipes to limit how much water he can get. And he'll have to pay for the punishment: a minimum of $25 to install and another $25 to remove.

Residents were told at the hearing that every drop of water will have to count as the two-year drought that has parched the northern two-thirds of the state continues unabated.

With rainfall down 40 per cent from normal because of an offshore high pressure area which has blocked storms coming in from the sea, the city's reservoirs contain about 37 billion gallons of water, compared with 65 billion gallons in normal seasons.

Advice

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just slapped my son and realized it was because he looks like his father. I am trapped in a miserable marriage with three children (all accidents). I married more out of stubbornness than love. My parents and even friends told me not to marry him, but I wouldn't listen. When we were going together, he'd borrow money from me and "forget" to pay it back. Now all the money is "his" money. He never takes me out, saying he can't afford it, but he always has enough to entertain his buddies. My second baby was 3 and my third was on the way before I got a washing machine. (And then it was his mother's old one.) He used to twist my arm, now he hits me regularly. He tells me what to do, what to say and even what to wear. I wish I had listened, but it's too late now.

SORRY

DEAR SORRY: It may be too late for you, but it's not too late for girls presently involved with fellows who fit your husband's description.

A tip to girls "in love" with a man who everyone thinks is wrong for her: Listen and take a good long second look at him. And a third. And then a fourth.

(P.S. You didn't ask for any advice, but if you're interested in getting your head together, you're tired of being a punching bag and have had it with accidental pregnancies, write again. Have I got a letter for you!)

DEAR ABBY: Our granddaughter just completed her nursery school term at St. Edmunds Episcopal Church, and each parent was given a copy of some words of wisdom. I hope you will find it worthy of printing in your column.

MRS. S., SAN MARINO, CALIF.

DEAR MRS. S.: I do. And I shall pass it on to my readers:

CHILDREN LEARN WHAT THEY LIVE

If a child lives with criticism, He learns to condemn...
If a child lives with hostility, He learns to fight...
If a child lives with ridicule, He learns to be shy...
If a child lives with jealousy, He learns to feel guilty...
If a child lives with tolerance, He learns to be patient...
If a child lives with encouragement, He learns confidence...
If a child lives with praise, He learns to appreciate...
If a child lives with fairness, He learns justice...
If a child lives with security, He learns to have faith...
If a child lives with approval, He learns to like himself...
If a child lives with acceptance and friendship, He learns to find love in the world.
WITH WHAT IS YOUR CHILD LIVING?

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Very simply, I have bad breath. I brush my teeth four times a day, use mouthwash and see my dentist twice a year, but I still have this problem. I do have a sinus problem. They drain most of the time and both ears feel stuffed. I went to a doctor to relieve the stuffed ears, but decongestant pills did no good. I am really getting very nervous about this condition. Can you help me?

DEAR READER — Bad breath is a symptom. It can be caused by dental problems. The disease that may develop around the root of the teeth is really an infectious process and you can't brush it away. In your case, regular visits to the dentist suggests that you do not have dental disease or your dentist would have recommended treatment for it. Nevertheless, I want to emphasize that anyone with regular bad breath needs to see his dentist. He may see something you don't see.

Bad breath can be caused by an infection in any of the passages related to respiration. This includes the lungs, throat and nasal passages. Chronic diseased tonsils may be a constant source of bad breath. Removing infected ones may correct the condition but otherwise, removing normal tonsils will not cure bad breath.

You need to give your doctor a chance to cure your chronic sinus infection if that is what you have. Many kinds of organisms give off a bad odor. You can't eliminate these odors from infections around the teeth, in the tonsils or in the sinuses with mouthwash. The mouthwash only masks the odor for a while but does not cure the underlying cause. Anyone with chronic lung disease, with an infection in the bronchi, or even localized in the lungs, such as alcohol, will release chemicals into the air you are breathing out and cause a person to have bad breath. To give you a better idea of the ways bad breath can be caused I am sending you The Health Letter 9-4, Halitosis: Bad Breath. Others who want this information can send 50 cents for it with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Just send your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 328, San Antonio, TX 78292.

Many people do not know they have bad breath. If you know someone who needs help with this condition you may want to have a copy of The Health Letter sent to him or her. You can put his name on the self-addressed envelope if you wish to have it mailed directly to him or her.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My wife was just operated on for gallstones. Some of my friends tell me that if you drink a little vinegar now and then you can keep gallstones from forming. Is this truth or fiction?

DEAR READER — Pure fiction. People seem to forget there is such a thing as digestion. Everything you swallow is acted upon by the digestive system before it is absorbed into the bloodstream. Simple elements like the sodium and chloride ions in salt are unaltered but many chemical compounds are broken down before they can be absorbed. There is a national program to study the possible uses of medicines to dissolve gallstones that I have discussed before. However, the chemical is a bit more complex than vinegar.

Polly's pointers

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with the price stickers that are put on the face of plastic items. If there is a safe easy way to remove the adhesive left by these stickers I have not discovered it. Such stickers should be applied to the underside where they would not even have to be removed. — ANNA.

DEAR ANNA — Have you ever tried rubbing vegetable oil on this adhesive? — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — I need some advice on how to clean six beautiful needlepoint chair covers with a black wool background.

My Pointer is that I always store ice cream cartons in plastic bags to eliminate frost and retain the freshness. — BEA.

DEAR BEA — Many needlework and arts and crafts shop sell a spray cleaner that does not leave a powdery residue which would be important when the background is a dark color. The spray is left on for three minutes and then rubbed with a damp towel. Read directions on can. Do not brush as that might raise the nap and give a fuzzy look to the work.

We are assuming that the wool used was colorfast but do be sure. I once ruined a needlepoint piece that was not. Another method is to use only the foam on mild detergent suds. Apply with a sponge and rinse off the same way. If work is on chair seats do be careful not to saturate. — POLLY.

About books

Children's stories are for parents, too

Capsule reviews prepared by the American Library Assn.

By Denise Wilms

"A children's story that is enjoyed only by children is a bad children's story." That canny observation comes from author-essayist C.S. Lewis. Parents should take it to heart. If you are concerned about putting your children in touch with good, solid reading experiences, take the time to dip into children's books and see for yourself what's available.

A good place to start is the Newbery and Caldecott award winners — the year's cream of the crop. The American Library Association annually awards the Newbery medal to the author of the "most distinguished contribution to American literature for children." The Caldecott medal recognizes the most distinguished picturebook for children.

Good upper elementary readers can sink their teeth into Mildred Taylor's "Roll of Thunder, Hear My Cry," (Dial) this year's Newbery winner. Set in the depression, it's the story of a black family's struggle to hang onto their pride and their Mississippi farm in the face of white power and prejudice. Nine-year-old Cassie Logan is the narrator-protagonist and her child's eye view of the sometimes terrifying events is integral to the book's impact. Taylor has drawn on her own family's past, which gives her story further power.

The two runners-up for the Newbery award, Nancy Bond's "A String in the Harp" (Atheneum/McElderry) and William Steig's "Abel's Island" (Farrar, Straus and Giroux) are both fantasies, though similarities stop there. Bond's ambitious novel is a remarkable blend of realism and high fantasy. The Morgan children, in Wales where their father is a visiting professor, are confused by their brother David's ability to pass back to the time of the Welsh bard Taliesin via a harp tuning key he has discovered on the beach. David's increasingly frequent retreats from the present are symptomatic of family tensions generated by the recent death of his mother and personal identity clashes with his father.

As much a modern family story as a fantasy, Bond's vivid evocation of life in Welsh towns and countryside is not easily forgotten.

Younger fantasy fans will love Steig's graceful, tongue-in-cheek fable about a civilized mouse, Abelard Hassam di Chirico Flint, who is swept away from his genteel existence by a rainstorm and ends up stranded on a remote river island. Abel's survival and development during his enforced absence touches all ages and Steig's natty cartoons, which regularly punctuate the tale, are an added treat.

This year's Caldecott Medal goes to Leo and Diane Dillon for the elegantly stylized paintings of "Ashanti to Zulu." (Dial) an alphabetical album of African traditions. Warm, richly detailed scenes of tribal life enlarge on the text's bits and pieces of fact and lore about each tribe.

The unusually large number of Caldecott runners-up shows the problems award committees have in choosing winners from the many beautifully illustrated books with divergent titles and themes.

Beverly Brodsky McDermott's "The Golem" (Lippincott) pulses with color and emotion. Dark, dramatic paintings reflect the tension in this ancient story of a rabbi who created but couldn't control a formidable being intended to protect the harassed Jews of Prague. "The Golem" is for older picturebook readers who can fully appreciate the underlying themes of power and its consequences.

On a lighter note is "The Contest," (Greenwillow) an Armenian folktale retold and illustrated with rich crayon drawings by Nonny Hogrogian. Two robbers in love with the same "sweet deceiver" set out to prove which is the best thief but end up leaving the lady behind to jointly pursue their own fortunes.

Peter Parnall's clean, piercing drawings won him notice last year as a runner up for Byrd Baylor's "The Desert is Theirs." Here the team reappears with another winner, "Hawk, I'm Your Brother," (Scribner's) a strong, free verse poem about an Indian boy whose wish to fly is symbolized by the hawk he captures and then sets free.

M.B. Goffstein's "Fish for Supper" (Dial) features spare and elegant pen and ink drawings. An exercise in simple economy, this beguiling personality sketch introduces a grandmother who goes down to the lake each day and fishes for her supper.

Finally, an encore for William Steig, whose picturebook, "The Amazing Bone," (Farrar, Straus and Giroux) will woo the mind and eye of young and old alike. Pearl the pig is Steig's guileless heroine who discovers a talking bone that saves her from becoming the supper of a sinisterly dapper wolf. A harbinger of spring, this last picturebook is full of pinks, greens and other cheery pastels.

Jong writes new novel

SEATTLE (AP) — Erica Jong, the poet-novelist who summoned female daydreams into the open in her best-seller "Fear of Flying," says she's tired of writing about sexual fantasies.

A writer can get stale with a one-track pen, says Ms. Jong, whose 1973 novel sold more than 6 million copies. A sequel to "Fear of Flying," "How To Save Your Own Life," is scheduled for publication March 24. It tells how Isadora Wing, "Fear's" imaginative heroine breaks out of a bad marriage, wins independence and becomes a successful writer.

Tarkanian finally goes to NCAA championships

Sports

PAMPA NEWS Wednesday, March 23, 1977 7

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Nevada-Las Vegas Coach Jerry Tarkanian, one of the winningest active coaches in college basketball today, has never been accused of being unemotional or of underestimating an opponent.

It's no different this week. What is different is that after five disappointing losses in regional play over the past seven years, Tarkanian will finally take a team to the big time: the NCAA semifinals in Atlanta Saturday and a date with fifth-ranked North Carolina.

The fourth-ranked Runnin' Rebels have been accused of putting the ball up from the locker room or the arena's mezzanine, but the team shoots nearly 50 per cent from the floor, and has six men averaging in double figures. Two of them are substitutes.

Meanwhile Tarkanian, a stubby, balding Armenian, prowls the sidelines, growls at his players and chews on towels and his fingernails.

If UNLV and semifinalist Marquette meet in the NCAA finals, Tarkanian and Warriors Coach Al McGuire will be competing for the ranking and fidgeting title on the sidelines.

But Marquette will have to get past North Carolina-Charlotte, and Nevada-Las Vegas will have to defeat the ever-tough Tar Heels of North Carolina to produce the colorful coach matchup next Monday night.

Preparing for the Western sub-regionals two weeks ago, Tarkanian said the Rebels, 28-2, would have to play their best game of the season against the University of San Francisco. The Dons sat atop the ratings most of the year.

The Rebels responded with a 121-95 triumph.

The answer was the same last week as Tarkanian prepared his team for what he thought would be UCLA. The Bruins got upset, and after a slow start, the Rebels blew away Idaho State 107-90, to earn the trip to Atlanta.

Wuest clout lifts Pampa past Dumas

Sophomore Richard Wuest belted a two-run homerun in the bottom of the seventh inning to lift Pampa to a 4-2 non-conference baseball win over Dumas Tuesday at Optimist Park.

Pampa had tied the game, 2-2, when Mike Lancaster scored on an error with one out in the seventh.

The Harvesters scored an unearned run in the second to take a 1-0 lead before Dumas tied the game in the fifth, also on an unearned run.

The winning pitcher was Mike Knutson, now 1-3, who gave up two hits and two walks while striking out 11. The loser was Kent Hazen, who allowed four hits and one walk. He fanned five Harvesters.

In other area games, Amarillo High blanked Canyon 6-0 and Amarillo Tascosa blasted Hereford 12-5.

The Harvesters open District 3-AAAA play against Amarillo Caprock Friday at Pampa.

Basketball Queen Cindy Trollinger was crowned at the Harvester basketball banquet Tuesday night in the Heritage Room of M.K. Brown Auditorium. Runners-up were Erin O'Conner, left, and Angela Day. The highlight of the banquet was the naming of Donnie Hughes as Hustling Harvester for his effort on the court. Hughes, the No. 12 scorer in Pampa history, paced the Harvesters to a 25-6 record and the bi-district championship. Hughes was one of seven seniors honored at the banquet. The others were Brian Bailey, Mark Ebenkamp, Winalow Ellis, Keith Fisher, Donnie Hughes and Rayford Young. Other Harvesters were Rickey Bunton, Tim Reddell, Robert Sikes, James Schaub and Rusty Ward. The Shockers, who finished 17-8, also were honored.

Chicago bulls way past Lakers

By ALEX SACHARE AP Sports Writer

The Chicago Bulls continue their amazing surge, and part of the reason for their recent success is their early season success.

"We're not playing any differently now, except that we're a little more mature and the shots are starting to fall in," said Chicago Coach Ed Badger, whose Bulls beat the Los Angeles Lakers 102-86 Tuesday night for their sixth victory in a row and 17th in the last 18 National Basketball Association games.

"We have so much confidence now, it's hard to believe we lost so many games," said captain Norm Van Lier of the Bulls, who got off to a 2-14 start this season. "I think the difference is that we know what we want to do and if we goof up a play, we don't suddenly fall apart."

The Bulls did not goof up many plays against the Lakers, sending the crowd of 21,046 — the biggest pro basketball attendance in Chicago history — home happy.

Chicago pulled away in the third period when Wilbur Holland, Mickey Johnson and Scott May combined for 21 points, putting the Bulls ahead 76-63. Los Angeles closed the gap to 10 points, but Holland scored six points and Artis Gilmore added two stiffs, putting the game out of reach.

Holland led the Bulls with 24 points, while Johnson grabbed 21 rebounds. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Earl Tatum each scored 18 points for the Lakers.

Despite the victory, Chicago failed to gain in its bid to overtake Kansas City for the sixth and final playoff berth in the Western Conference as the Kings beat the Golden State Warriors 126-113. The Seattle SuperSonics, also in the scramble, were beaten by the Cleveland Cavaliers 108-104.

Elsewhere in the NBA Tuesday night, the Boston Celtics defeated the San Antonio Spurs 108-104, the New York Knicks topped the Milwaukee Bucks 125-115, the Houston Rockets stopped the Indiana Pacers 106-99, the Atlanta Hawks nipped the Buffalo Braves 86-84 and the New Orleans Jazz beat the Portland Trail Blazers 106-95.

Kings 126, Warriors 113
 Brian Taylor's 33 points and four steals helped the Kings beat Golden State.

 The Knicks scored the first six points of the game, grabbed a 37-21 lead after one period and never were in trouble against Milwaukee.

Rookie swings A's by Padres

By BOB GREENE AP Sports Writer

Mitchell Page is a realist. He knows that the gaudy 610 batting average he now has will not last a whole season.

But the Oakland A's rookie outfielder-first baseman feels he can hit at least half that during the 1977 baseball season.

"If I play, I know I can hit," Page said after driving in one run with a triple and scoring the winning run as Oakland edged the San Diego Padres 3-2 in an exhibition game Tuesday.

Acquired from the Pittsburgh Pirates in a trade last week, Page has 11 hits in 18 at-bats this spring. Five of his hits have been for extra bases.

In the fifth inning, with the score tied 2-2, Page walked, moved to third on Jerry Tabb's single and scored on a ground-out.

In other exhibition games

Tuesday, the Montreal Expos defeated the Minnesota Twins 12-8, the Philadelphia Phillies blanked the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-0, the Detroit Tigers stopped the Boston Red Sox 6-2, the Milwaukee Brewers crushed the Cleveland Indians 15-4, the Baltimore Orioles trounced the Chicago White Sox 12-4, the St. Louis Cardinals whipped the Cincinnati Reds 10-2, the Seattle Mariners downed the California Angels 10-5, the Houston Astros nipped the Los Angeles Dodgers 6-5, the New York Mets downed the Toronto Blue Jays 6-4, the Atlanta Braves beat the New York Yankees 7-5, the San Francisco Giants defeated the Chicago Cubs 7-5 and the Texas Rangers topped the Kansas City Royals 8-5.

A one-out double by Sandy Alomar in the ninth inning snapped a 5-5 tie and led Texas to its victory over Kansas City. Biff Pocoroba slammed a pinch-hit double in the seventh and scored the winning run on Barry Bonell's single as Atlanta won its fourth straight game.

John Montefusco hurled four hitless innings and scored San Francisco's first run after walking to lead off the Giants' three-run third.

Veteran Steve Carlton and rookie Randy Lerch combined for a three-hitter as Phila-

Gay issue turns violent

MIAMI (AP) — Violence is marring what was supposed to be a peaceful electoral solution to Miami's growing dispute over an ordinance that forbids discrimination against homosexuals in housing and employment.

The car of a Cuban-born gay activist was firebombed Tuesday.

Another activist committed suicide last week after receiving phone threats in response to a radio show he did.

Others, on both sides of the issue, report numerous threats.

Dade County's 1.5 million residents are scheduled to decide in a June 7 referendum whether the ordinance will remain on the books.

Now there are indications the referendum may not be held. County commissioners are being urged to vote to overturn the ordinance in their April 5 meeting.

Manuel Gomez, 38, a member of the Dade County Coalition for the Humanistic Rights of Gays, took part in a Monday news conference held by supporters of the ordinance. He later appeared on a Spanish-language television station.

His car was destroyed the next day.

"I know how anti-gay the Latin community is," Gomez said. "It seems I'm the first Cuban to talk openly about gayness. It (the firebombing) is a super-macho reaction. The community isn't talking about U.S.-Castro relations anymore. Now, they're just attacking homosexuals."

Gomez is mourning his friend, 28-year-old Ovidio Ramos, who killed himself last week after becoming depressed at response to the gay rights issue.

"We were on radio together and we received several injurious telephone calls from people ignorant and bigoted," Gomez said. "He got very depressed."

"I told him, 'Don't pay attention. It's incredible that people who call themselves Christians could say things like that.' The following day he didn't go to work and he killed himself Wednesday."

Ramos' body was found Friday. Police said he had shot himself. Friends said a suicide note mentioned family problems and the community's reaction to the ordinance.

The ordinance was approved by the county commission in January. Opponents, led by singer Anita Bryant, organized a protest group called Save Our Children Inc.

Claiming that homosexuals were trying to recruit children, the group collected enough signatures to force the referendum.

Dog mauls Amarillo boy

AMARILLO — Three-year-old Jimmy Whitfield is in satisfactory condition at St. Anthony's Hospital today after he was mauled by a large dog near his home Tuesday.

The boy's mother, a deaf-mute, flagged down a passerby who gave her and the injured boy a ride to the Amarillo Emergency Receiving Center. Young Whitfield was later transferred to St. Anthony's for surgery.

The boy reportedly received cuts around his eyes and mouth in the attack. Animal control officers have been trying to locate the dog, but have had to rely on the boy's description of the animal.

A spokeswoman at St. Anthony's said shortly after 8 a.m. today that she did not know when the boy would be released, adding that his doctor had not yet made rounds.

But critics charged that the referendum was a waste of $400,000 in taxpayers' money. That led gay activists to offer Monday to pay for the vote. They said they were sure they could raise the needed funds and were certain of victory in a referendum.

But Bob Brake, a spokesman for Save Our Children, said his group would try to persuade the commission to rescind the ordinance in April and hold the referendum in November, during the next regular election.

Job boils down to being Califano's cook

By MICHAEL PUTZEL, Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — There's a new job in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare that pays $12,763 a year and sounds pretty important.

"The nature of the assignment requires a continuing day-to-day association with the secretary and other high-level executives during high-level policy discussions involving plans and objectives," the official job description says.

But in plain language, he is Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr.'s personal cook.

The holder of the newly coined title of Personal Assistant to the Secretary (Special Activities) is Wiley Barnes, who recently retired from the U.S. Marine Corps where he managed the personal quarters of the commandant.

The job description that appeared recently in the Federal Register never came right out and said Barnes cooks Califano's lunch. It said he managed "the food supply service of the secretary's dining room."

It also said that the job demands "the utmost in personal discretion ... the nature of some of the incumbent's duties requires personal participation with the ongoing special activities and programs, thereby necessitating the need for an extremely confidential relationship with the secretary."

"He does much more than cook for the secretary," a spokesman for the department insisted Tuesday. "He manages the secretary's mess, handles the accounting and supervises the kitchen."

Barnes also plans meals for special groups, such as governors or members of Congress whom Califano invites over for working breakfasts or lunches, the spokesman said. In his first two weeks on the job, Barnes served meals to three VIP groups.

Califano and Hale Champion, HEW's undersecretary-designate, normally dine together in the secretary's dining room, which adjoins Califano's office, a special meeting room and kitchen.

When they aren't entertaining outsiders, the two pay out of their own pockets for the ingredients Barnes uses to cook their meals, the spokesman said. For official functions, Barnes is authorized to use the secretary's discretionary funds to pay for the food.

It was not known whether any other Cabinet members have personal cooks. But Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Patricia R. Harris recently turned her private dining room into a conference room. She eats in HUD's cafeteria.

At the White House, where President Carter's second cousin Hugh is in charge of cutting out frills, there was little discernible reaction to the Barnes appointment. "I don't know anything about it," said Press Secretary Jody Powell.

Hugh Carter could not be reached Tuesday.

Callaghan may make deal

LONDON (AP) — Indications that Prime Minister James Callaghan has made a deal for the support of the Liberal party improved his Labor government's chances of surviving a no-confidence vote in the House of Commons tonight.

Callaghan met three times Tuesday with Liberal leader David Steel in his search for votes to stave off a defeat that would force the Laborites into a general election they probably would lose.

Liberal sources described the third meeting, an hour-long, late-night session, as "detailed negotiations."

Political commentators said Callaghan was expected to conclude an agreement today giving the middle-road Liberals a say in formulating government policy in exchange for the third party's crucial 13 votes in Commons.

The 13 Liberal votes would give the government a safe majority of 17 and the promise of two and a half years more in office, until October, 1979.

The prime minister said in a television interview that he was willing to collaborate with any other parties "on a basis that preserves both our self-respect and their self-respect."

The modern Olympic Games, named after the athletic contests held in ancient Greece, began in 1896. The contests are held every four years.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court has told Congress it can pass laws that treat women differently from men — sometimes.

The test, the nation's highest court said in a pair of recent rulings on Social Security laws, is what purpose Congress has in mind.

Here's how a slim majority of the court's nine members sees it:

If the differing treatment is rendered to help compensate for past discrimination suffered by working women, it's constitutional.

If it is ordered "with no more substantial justification than the archaic and overbroad generalizations or old notions" about women's role in the family and on the job, it's unconstitutional.

The distinction is more than just words. It has meant and will continue to mean billions of dollars to millions of people.

Three weeks ago, the court struck down amendments to the Social Security Act that require a widower and the husband of a retired woman to prove he was dependent on his wife in order to collect benefits accrued during her working career.

No such requirement faced widows or wives of retired men. The court voted 5 to 4 that Congress couldn't justify the difference.

"To withstand constitutional challenge ... classifications by gender must serve important governmental objectives," the court's majority said. Women's right to equal protection under the law was violated because although they paid as much Social Security taxes as men, their taxes weren't buying as much protection for their spouses, the majority said.

However, in an unsigned unanimous decision handed down Monday, the court looked

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Chicken George and Kizzy didn't make it, but most of the other characters from "Roots" attended the reunion party for the people who created television's most-watched show.

The invitation for the dinner, hosted at The Bistro in Beverly Hills by executive producer David Wolper, said it was the "first opportunity for all of us and our friends to get together since that wild week we made television history."

Euphoria flowed with the wine well into the early hours

Tuesday. Leslie Uggams, who played Kizzy, and Ben Vereen, who had been Kizzy's son Chicken George, were absent, but everyone present from author Alex Haley to LeVar Burton, who played the young Kunta Kinte, shared the joy.

Before the dancing, Wolper conducted what resembled a witness session at a gospel meeting. Actors, writers and directors took the microphone to testify what "Roots" had meant to them.

The most moving speech was by author Haley, who told of his 12-year quest for his origins and how the TV dramatization evoked "a national, galvanic response." He concluded: "The Lord may not come when you expect him to, but he will always be on time."

A reporter asked several participants the question: "How did 'Roots' affect your lives?" Here are the responses:

Wolper: "I had expected to have an easy year after selling my company to Warner Brothers. Now I'm busier than ever trying to keep up with the response to 'Roots,' including thousands and thousands of letters. And I'm starting on 'Roots II.'"

LeVar Burton, Kunta Kinte: "It has assured me that I can do anything I want to do for the rest of my life — creatively or otherwise."

Chuck Connors, who played Massa Tom Moore: "After 23½ years in the business, producers are telling me, 'Hey, I didn't know you could act.'"

George Stafford Brown, Tom the blacksmith: "The fun was in the doing. I haven't felt the aftermath yet. They aren't writing parts for black actors yet."

Lloyd Bridges, Evan Brent: "It's sad but true: as long as you're part of a success, you're noticed. Producers are now looking at me as something besides an actor in action films."

Scatman Crothers, Mingo: "I suppose the show brought more notice to my career. I didn't see it. I was involved in a tragedy (the suicide of Freddie Prinze, his fellow actor in "Chico and the Man")."

Lorne Greene, Mr. Reynolds: "The show must have had an impact. For years I was known as good ol' Ben Cartwright (on "Bonanza"). After 'Roots,' people asked my housekeeper in the grocery store: 'Is he really that mean at home?'"

ARTS OF CHINA
GREENVALE, N.Y. (AP) — An exhibition of 170 objects, the Arts of China, will be on view at the C.W. Post Art Gallery at Long Island University through March 27. The exhibit spans 4,000 years of Chinese art and history, from neolithic artifacts to the delicate porcelains of the Ming and Ching Dynasties.

School bus crushes man

AMARILLO — A 28,000-pound school bus fell on an Amarillo man Tuesday morning, crushing his chest and killing him.

Sacarias Garza, 45, an Amarillo resident since 1963, was changing a tire on the bus when the jack slipped. Co-workers at Shook Tire Company said a torsion bar of the bus struck Mr. Garza on the chest. He had been working for the firm less than two months.

An emergency rescue unit of the Amarillo Fire Department was called to the scene to lift the bus and free Mr. Garza. He was taken to the Amarillo Emergency Receiving Center by ambulance.

He is survived by the widow, three daughters, six sons, his parents, six brothers and three sisters.

Funeral services are pending with Blackburn-Shaw Funeral Directors.

German bomber dies in propeller at Love

DALLAS (AP) — A man who flew bombers for the German Luftwaffe in World War II and spent time as an American prisoner of war in Italy died Tuesday when the propeller of an unmanned, runaway airplane struck him down at Love Field.

Bernhard Scharbus, 57, who told Dallas friends he once stood within two feet of Adolf Hitler, was trying to leap into the runaway airplane when one of the ship's whirling props hit him.

"It looked like it got his hips pretty bad but the rest of him was covered by his jacket. I didn't look after that," said Walter Parce, owner of a flight service at Dallas Love Field.

Scharbus was attempting to move the parked aircraft away from the wildly turning Cessna before it chewed into the tail section of a single engine, two seater airplane. The parked aircraft was demolished.

Parce said Scharbus was a frequent customer and liked to regale his friends with war stories.

"He talked a lot about the Luftwaffe and the Hitler Youth."

However, Scharbus' widow said he had no interest whatsoever in politics and seldom talked about it.

Parce said he tried to assist Scharbus. "I don't know whether he laid down or he tripped but he was down on the ground. And then it hit him." After the airplane collided with the parked aircraft Parce said he was able to scramble into the runaway plane and shut down its engines.

"He was a good pilot and he used caution. That's why I'm surprised he didn't put the brakes on," he said.

Wanda Hodges of Central Corp. said Scharbus was a "very colorful character" who had planned to write a book on his flying experiences.

Survivors include his wife, who lives at Fort Worth, and a son who lives in Berlin, Germany.

Tickets may be ordered by calling 669-2203 or 669-6182.

Foursquare Gospel sets chili supper

According to the Rev. Charles Moran, pastor, proceeds of the supper will go toward the purchase of new pews for the church.

Tickets may be ordered by calling 669-2203 or 669-6182.
