Two new city commissioners received briefings from Mayor R.D. Wilkerson and City Manager Mack Wofford during a special meeting today.

Rex McAnelly of Ward 1 and Everett Tarbox of Ward 2 were welcomed to the commission by city officials following a swearing-in ceremony in the city hall commission room.

"We don't want to give you any surprises, we'll make every effort to see you're well informed," Wofford said.

He suggested the possibility of study sessions between the two monthly commission meetings.

"As elected officials, you'll be making the decision. We want to be sure you understand every item on the agendas."

Mayor Wilkerson expressed gratitude to retiring commissioners Ray Thompson and Leo Braswell. "I feel sure we'll be calling on you — there'll be times we'll need your help."

Both Thompson and Braswell said they enjoyed their terms of office. "I feel we've accomplished quite a bit looking back," Braswell added.

The mayor explained city charter rulings concerning who serves as mayor pro tem in case of his absence. Commissioners one, two, three and four rotate in six-month terms, beginning now with number one.

He said that since he will be out of town during the second council meeting this month newly elected McAnelly is to act as mayor pro tem for the meeting.

Wofford briefed the commissioners on current matters including reconstruction of Highway 273, improvements to the waste water treatment plant, replacement of certain water lines, street improvement to a section of Sumner upgrading city ordinances.

He stressed importance of an ordinance to be submitted to the council within the next 30 days regarding annexation and subdivision regulations.

A lot of development outside the city limits has been proposed lately, Wofford said. "We need a subdivision ordinance and have nearly completed work on one."

The mayor said points of consideration in the ordinance include regulations to keep certain types of building in the same areas, keeping new streets and alleys in line with existing ones, and ascertaining that quality of new construction is adequate.

The city manager advised action be taken to comply with state regulations concerning the city dumping grounds. He said these rules require either an attendant at the gate to guard against scavenging or the gate is to be kept locked.

A former city employe has submitted a contract under which he would provide a gate attendant from 8 a.m. till 7 p.m. seven days a week for $700 monthly plus full salvage rights, Wofford said.

"It sounds like a bargain when you consider what it would cost to hire the attendants, including salaries and fringe benefits," he added.

The council expressed an intention to look into the matter of vandals turning on water hydrants around the city.

Wofford commented on recent criticism from a resident concerning seeing two men watching while a third city employe painted one lamp post.

"With 200 employes, we're bound to have slack at times, but we work constantly at being efficient," he said. "Some days we have too many people, other times not enough."

Mayor Wilkerson commented that he feels it is essential to keep sufficient employes to cope with emergency situations, adding the city uses as many part time and seasonal workers as possible.

The council will meet in regular session at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday in the commission room at city hall.

Price increases worse than expected

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said today that wholesale prices increased 1.1 per cent in March, the second big monthly increase in a row and much worse than expected.

The increase was sure to fuel demands that the Carter administration take steps to counter a growing threat of a new inflationary surge in the economy.

The March increase followed a wholesale price rise of nine-tenths of a per cent in February and was the largest monthly rise since October of 1975.

Although prices of farm products led the price surge with a 2.5 per cent increase, the most alarming danger signal in the price report was an eight-tenths of a per cent increase in prices of industrial commodities, up from a six-tenths of a per cent increase in February.

Economists look to prices of industrial goods as giving the best picture of underlying inflationary trends. There were sharply higher prices during the month for metals and metal products, textiles apparel and transportation equipment. The Labor Department said prices also turned up for lumber and wood products, rubber and plastic products following declines in February.

Price trends at the wholesale level are eventually passed along to the consumer at least in part, since they represent higher costs to businesses that produce the goods consumers buy.

If continued for a 12-month period, the March increase in wholesale prices would result in an overall increase of 13 per cent for the year, well into the feared double-digit range for inflation. Wholesale prices had increased 6.8 per cent for the 12-month period ending in March.

The Labor Department's wholesale price index stood in March at 191.9 per cent, meaning that goods priced at $100 at wholesale in 1967 cost $191.90 last month.

There is no question the March price report comes as a blow to U.S. Carter administration, which had been hoping for a downward trend in wholesale prices to reflect the improvement in the weather following the severe winter.

Wall Street analysts had predicted an increase in March similar to the February price rise of nine-tenths of a per cent, but several government economists said Wednesday they did not think it would be that bad. In fact it was worse.

In addition to the substantial increases in prices of industrial commodities and farm products, prices of processed foods and feeds also rose substantially at 1.9 per cent.

The 2.5 per cent increase in farm product prices in March compared with a 2.2 per cent rise in February. Sharply higher prices for green coffee, cocoa beans, tea and oil seeds accounted for most of the increase.

The Labor Department also said prices rose for cotton, grains and fresh and dried fruits and vegetables, but added these gains were smaller than in February. Prices declined for eggs, poultry and livestock.

It appeared that the winter weather was a factor in the continued rise in prices of farm products, but that it was less of an explanation for the surge of prices of industrial commodities.

Fuel prices, which had increased sharply in January and February, rose 1.4 per cent in March, which was less than half the February rise of 3.3 per cent, meaning that they were less a factor in the overall rise than they had been.

The Labor Department said prices of industrial commodities other than fuels rose seven-tenths of a per cent in March compared with only a two-tenths of a per cent gain in February and the same as the increase in January.

Worry over the future trend of inflation, especially by businessmen, apparently is responsible for a poor performance of stock prices on Wall Street in recent weeks.

Inflationary fears are also blamed for a reluctance by business and industry to invest in new plants and equipment.

The administration hopes to ease inflationary fears at least somewhat when it unveils its anti-inflation program next week.

Although wage and price controls have been ruled out, the program will contain some provision for business to notify the government in advance of major price increases.

The program also will focus on easing government regulations and reducing the paperwork burden on business to help it become more productive. Previous administrations have focused on these areas with limited success.

A government economist said Wednesday, "Over a period of a year, I think the results will show that inflation is not nearly so bad as people think."

The Wholesale Price Index in February stood at 190 per cent of the 1967 average of 100, meaning that goods which 10 years ago cost $100 had increased in price to $190.

A nickel cup of coffee?

Nowhere, of course

JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

180 EXIT 50 Iowa (AP) — At a time when a pound uncut has a street value of $4.21, where can someone hopelessly strung out still get a nickel cup of coffee?

Of course nowhere. We're out in the middle of nowhere, all right, said George Dasovich. But the coffee is a nickel and refills are free, all you want.

There is no doubt about the clientele George Dasovich caters to with his nickel coffee and his glad hand.

Lavender plates, hubcaps, hood ornaments and a '54 Chevy crankshaft decorate the walls, tire chains screen off the end of the counter. In a separate predominant section just inside the door, printed cards on the tables say "Reserved for Professional Drivers. An order sent to the kitchen from one of those tables is put ahead of the rest."

The place is called the Star Inn and is, as its manager said, in the middle of nowhere. We're 65 miles west of Des Moines, 45 miles east of Iowa City, five miles south of Victor and six miles north of Guernsey. You couldn't ask for a better location. I call it the heartland of the beautiful land. Has a nice ring to it.

So does George's cash register. Road Master passed the word to Gear Grinder. Gear Grinder told Denver Slick, pretty soon good buddies from one end of Interstate 80 to the other — which is coast to coast — heard about the Star Inn and its hospitality. Trucks crowd the parking lot 24 hours a day. The Star Inn doesn't close.

Truckers have a lonely life, the manager said. They like to act gruff and rough but they're not. They're really very sensitive. They're proud of being truckers and they ought to be. They're really professionals.

They like to stop and shoot the breeze with each other and tease the waitresses. The little one with the brown eyes is Joyce Hlanhart. She gives it back as fast as they dish it out and they love it.

This is their social life. It's a break in a long monotonous day, not just to eat but to relax and freshen up. Follow me.

Dasovich led the way down a corridor behind the dining room, past a bulletin board with news of road conditions, clips from trucking publications, personal messages, to a lounge where several truckers sprawled on couches watching television and snoring.

A shower room with five stalls was nearby. Next to the dining room a shop sold work gloves, caps, turquoise jewelry, sunglasses, girle magazines. A garage behind the filling station was stocked with auto parts.

We try to have everything they need, but I think it's the whole atmosphere that attracts them most. They know they're appreciated.

That and the food. It's all home-cooked, everything done right here, including the bread. We serve whole hog sausage, cornbread muffins, Iowa beef. The trick is in the cooking, though. If I do say so, I can do wonders with shallots and wine and herbs.

By some stroke of fate the green interstate sign that announces Exit 50 also bears the strange name of a town 21 miles south. Truckers find George Dasovich by turning off where it says

Exit 50. What Cheer

Carter kills nuclear reactors

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter announced today that he is deferring U.S. development of nuclear breeder reactors, the power plants that produce additional fuel but could help increase the spread of atomic weaponry in the world.

Carter said the risk of spreading nuclear weapons would be vastly increased by the further spread of sensitive technologies which entail direct access to plutonium, highly enriched uranium or other weapons-usable material. The breeder is powered by plutonium and is so named because it produces more fuel than it consumes.

The statement issued by Carter said the United States will study alternative designs of the breeder, but postpone their adoption for commercial use.

Without mentioning the project by name, the statement appeared to spell the end of the proposed Clinch River breeder reactor, a $2 billion demonstration plant planned near Oak Ridge, Tenn.

Carter said he would also defer indefinitely the commercial reprocessing and recycling of plutonium produced by U.S. nuclear power programs.

A reprocessing plant planned by industry at Barnwell, S.C., but now seeking federal support, will receive neither federal encouragement nor funding for its completion as a reprocessing facility.

Carter said the United States will shift its nuclear research money toward alternative systems of nuclear power that do not make available materials usable for nuclear weapons.

While cutting back the breeder program, which would have multiplied nuclear fuels, Carter pledged to increase U.S. production capacity for enriched uranium, the fuel used in conventional nuclear power plants.

This promise was a reassurance to both the domestic nuclear industry and foreign nations that fuel would continue to be available for conventional plants and they need not necessarily build breeder reactors.

Carter added he would propose legislation to permit the U.S. to offer nuclear fuel supply contracts and guarantee delivery of such nuclear fuel to other countries.

He said he would continue to bar exports of uranium enrichment and nuclear fuel reprocessing equipment and technology.

And Carter said he would seek establishment of an international program to develop alternative nuclear fuel cycles and measures to assure access to nuclear fuel supplies and spent fuel storage for nations sharing common nonproliferation objectives.

Sources indicated that Carter did much of the work on the policy statement himself and that it is a strong reflection of the President's personal view on the need to limit nuclear proliferation.

In his campaign for the White House, Carter promised to develop a policy that would halt the spread of nuclear technology and particularly the spread of plutonium, which can be used in the manufacture of nuclear bombs.

Carter's new policy will halt development of any commercial capacity in this country to reprocess plutonium from spent nuclear reactor fuel. This would be a basis for Carter to ask other countries to do the same.

A meeting of nations that supply nuclear material and technology to non nuclear countries is scheduled for later this month in London and U.S. officials are expected to press hard at that time for commitments from other nuclear powers not to produce plutonium or export plutonium production technology.

By deleting further federal funding, Carter could effectively end any efforts in this country to build a plutonium-powered plant in the near future. Private companies that have been pressing for the projects have been relying heavily on government money and support.

This would end any chance of a so-called breeder economy in the next century in which plutonium-powered reactors would supply most of the world's energy as oil and natural gas supplies run out.

In attempting to hold down the global spread of nuclear material, the administration has been negotiating with West Germany in hopes of halting that country's plans to sell plutonium reprocessing technology to Brazil. But attempts so far to convince Bonn to call off the sensitive aspects of the sale have been unsuccessful.

Unwed father wins

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — An unwed father has won permanent custody of his baby son after a year-long legal fight.

Harry T. Begg III, 28, had been keeping the boy since December, when a judge ruled that permanent custody would be granted if Begg proved he could give the child proper care.

Roxanne Duffy, 19, had the baby a year ago. She named Begg as father of the then-unborn child while she was staying at a home for unwed mothers in Fort Worth, Tex.

She agreed that, when born, the child should be put up for adoption. However, Begg refused to accept that arrangement. He went to court got an order blocking adoption proceedings and filed a petition for custody of the child.

In a countersuit, Miss Duffy withdrew her original statement that Begg was the father. A blood test resulted in the child being put in Begg's care. Civil District Judge S. Sanford Levy made it permanent Tuesday.

Student shoots, kills principal

WHITHARRAL, Tex. (AP) — The principal of the Whitharral High School in this West Texas city was shot and killed this morning by a student, police said.

The principal was identified as Malcolm Omar Tripp, 31. A spokesman for the sheriff's office at Levelland said a 17-year-old boy was taken into custody. The investigation is still going on. All I can tell you is that the principal is dead at this time," the spokesman said.

A school official said the shooting occurred in front of the school.

School officials said the student, a freshman, fired three shots and hit Tripp in the back twice.

School superintendent Louis McCormack said that after the shooting, the student walked across the street to a grocery store and laid the gun on the counter and told the attendant he had just shot and killed the school principal. He then asked him to call the police and an ambulance and sat down to wait.

Tripp had been in Whitharral for two years, having moved here from Richland Springs.

The school has 215 students and 20 teachers. Tripp was pronounced dead on arrival at a Levelland hospital.

School bond issue looming

By THOM MARSHALL
Pampa News Co-editor

Some of the schools are going to pieces for lack of proper maintenance in a community that just raised more than $113,000 to send a high school band to Ireland.

It's because people had a choice about the Ireland trip. Nobody forced anyone to pay for part of it against his will — no tax dollars were spent on it. It was easy to see where the money went and it has been easy to see that the investment paid off in many ways.

So in a community like Pampa, where such a thing as that big trip can be conceived, paid for and accomplished in a year's time, why is it that there has been no money to finance proper upkeep of the community's school buildings over the years?

It's as simple as private enterprise versus government. No matter how worthy the cause might be, people who are worth their salt and the quality of local drinking water keeps plenty of salt in Pampa people are going to buck up when they are told they have to contribute to some project via taxation.

Complaints and criticisms would have wiped out all the good will accomplished on the Ireland experience if it had been financed with a government grant of some kind or school funds or any other kind of public money taken from tax victims.

The government bodies which have operated our schools in recent years have continued to spend more and more tax money on teachers' salaries and benefits. Was it done because it was more necessary than keeping the school buildings fit or was it done because it was politically expedient?

The list of priorities was set by state and local governments. The demands of schoolteacher lobby groups won in Austin. Schoolteacher pressures in Pampa have kept salaries at $500 above state base requirements, even though the state base has climbed meteorically in past years. And it hasn't been too many months ago that a $201.72 per teacher per year insurance policy was piled on top of that by the local board.

A few vocal teachers have been bought off by the government bodies using our money. And when they ran out of the purchasing power they came after more by imposing new taxes.

Indications are they soon will be back wanting more funds — a bond issue this time — money from taxpayers by any name.

Yes, a bond issue does come a bit closer to giving folks a choice. One is in good shape if he wants to pay a portion of improving the school buildings and a majority of the voters agree.

But if one does not want to pay and he is outvoted in the matter his share of the cost will be extracted from him anyway.

Not like the Ireland trip project where a vote was taken by parents and Band Boosters. Those who voted for the project saw there were enough of them to make it work. Those who voted against — if there were any — could either go along with the majority and help raise the money or they could drop out of it and not pay anything toward the trip.

The state legislature is looking for a new manner of financing the mushrooming costs of education. Property owners are crying for some relief from the burden of school taxes. Maybe here in Pampa we could come up with a back to our roots kind of answer and make the needed repairs on our schools with time and money donated by interested, concerned members of the community.

It might be that such a thing would work. It might be that the results would make a stronger community out of Pampa. It might be we could teach the politicians of the state and nation something by such an unusual experiment.

Of course, work might progress a bit slower than floating the bond issue — it would have to be a pay as we go plan. But come to think of it, if we did none that in the past we did not have where we are in the present — looking at a big bonded indebtedness looming in the future.

Pay as you go plan

One of the more pertinent controversial subjects across the land in our times is the matter of pay toilets.

Thanks to American industries, notably the major oil companies — so often condemned — America has no shortage of sanitation facilities that are open to the public without charge. Nevertheless, amid such abundance, a significant number of individuals have been willing to spend an occasional dime to obtain the extra privacy and environment that pay toilets afford.

Basically, this arrangement between willing customers and a willing provider of service would seem to invite few objections. Unfortunately, state legislatures have shown a tendency to intervene. The Wall Street Journal pointed out that four states now ban this voluntary convenience. They are Alaska, Wyoming, Tennessee and New York. On reflection, the disposition of the state to involve itself in an apparently harmless and trivial transaction between private parties appears to have stemmed from a mythical grasp of the factual situation.

The myth is the image of an individual in desperate visceral circumstances, but without a dime, to trip the pay lock. The depiction indeed draws sympathy. No mind the probability that non-pay facilities are in the vicinity or that generous passersby traditionally are willing to spare a dime for a cup of coffee. Under the license of painful possibility, however remote, the lawmakers rush in with ban in hand. The net result is to decrease investment in public sanitation (by making same less profitable) and to disturb what had been a constructive relationship between entrepreneur and privacy-seeking client.

But wait! all is not lost. Having onto the horizon like the Lone Ranger comes a hero. Yes, we can recognize the white hat as he draws closer. It is, it is, old reliable, Human Ingenuity. For, according to the Journal, Nik O Lok Co. has come out with a token-operated lock to substitute for the coin ops. The Journal reports that merchants say the tokens at least let them retain some control over the use of their restrooms. That is, if you want to use the facility, you can ask the cashier for a token. Something like getting your parking stub validated.

Now, why didn't the lawmakers think of that? Instead of prohibiting semi-private toilets they might have decreed that the business establishment keep a few tokens on hand for the rescue of persons in distress. The fact that lawmakers in a number of states chose to prohibit a helpful facility rather than to mitigate a rare difficulty illustrates the characteristic limitation of remedies that are politically arrived at.

For absolute clarity the subject could be reduced to an aphorism:
But we restrain

On the average, American hunters shoot from six to 12 million waterfowl each year and more than two million deer.

Is Indira coming to visit?

By ROBERTS ALLEN

WASHINGTON April 7 — Former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi is available for a U.S. connection.

That's the discreet intimation conveyed to American friends.

While nothing specific was mentioned, apparently what the one-time imperious Indian ruler has in mind is some sort of association with a leading university research institution or foundation.

Also possibly doing something of an educational or historic nature for the media — electronic print or both.

As Gandhi is well to do, money is not her aim.

As friends understand it, her primary desire is to get away from her homeland for a time while the new government settles into office and grapples with the many domestic and foreign complexities facing it — without her iron handed dictatorial powers.

Particularly Gandhi is concerned about her free-wheeling son Sanjay, even more sweepingly defeated than she was.

A major opposition target, Sanjay's murky business and financial operations may undergo official scrutiny during the election battle it was widely charged that through his mother's influence he obtained large government subsidies for a disastrous automobile and other ventures.

Whether Sanjay would accompany his mother to the U.S. is not known.

It is assumed however, if she goes abroad he would most probably go with her — for his sake as well as hers. They seem to be deeply interdependent.

Throughout Gandhi's dictatorship, she leaned heavily on her son. In fact, he was extensively credited with being the mastermind behind the national emergency she suddenly invoked to take over autocratic control.

Everywhere she went to justify and defend it, not only was Sanjay prominently by her side but he arranged and stage-managed the affairs. Similarly, it was he who decided in the middle of the campaign to run for a parliamentary seat over Gandhi's objections and the strong misgivings of Congress party leaders.

Reportedly, Sanjay favors a stay in England rather than the U.S.

An important factor is his feeling they would be safer there. Also he has never been to the U.S. while he is familiar with England. Both have numerous personal and official ties there.

One place Gandhi is sure not to go is — Russia.

Once the Kremlin's darling, within a few days after her resounding election defeat, she was brutally belated in Izvestia for "inexcusable mistakes and irresponsible excesses."

The Soviet flip-flop was as unsparringly speedy as it was vicious.

Only last year, none other than Communist party boss Brezhnev during an official visit to India, acclaimed Gandhi as a towering world leader and historic figure. Glowingly he hailed India as Russia's best friend among the non-aligned nations.

It was a well merited accolade — albeit doubly ironic.

While the U.S. poured billions in food and other economic resources into India on occasion staving off outright starvation for millions there, Russia armed India largely on a cash-on-the-barrelhead basis.

Underlying reason for Gandhi's manifest hostility toward the U.S. was this country's insistence on pursuing and even-handed policy in relations with India and Pakistan. To Gandhi, that was covert hostility toward India, and the Soviet Union, making the most of this paranoia, courted her assiduously.

Also important for both was the menacing shadow of neighboring China — which has clashed militarily with them.

When Gandhi's father, Nehru was prime minister, China administered a severe trouncing to India in a bloody border dispute. That shelling is still vivid in Indian memory. Several years later, China and Russia fought large scale battles over Siberian border differences — which are still unresolved.

Thus India and the Soviets had abundant reason to establish "full understanding" in a 1971 friendship treaty as a strategic counterweight to China.

Under Gandhi, that collaboration grew and flourished. But no more.

A reader's right

And readers write

Open letter to Superintendent and School Board Members Pampa Independent School District Pampa, Texas Gentlemen:

Sunday's paper reveals that you are having a closed session on school salaries and it is indicated that the recommendation will be to continue paying the $500 above State salary levels for the ensuing year.

I wish to call your attention to what has transpired in our system in the matter of school salaries. Are you aware that the Superintendent of Schools in our School District today is receiving more compensation than many of the Governors of our States? Records will show that he is receiving more money than eight Governors which are from the States of Alabama, Arkansas, Nebraska, Idaho, Maryland, Montana, North and South Dakotas. In the case of Alabama with a population of nearly four million people, a land area of over 50,000 square miles, the Governor's salary is less than $30,000 per year. Statistics on the other states are comparable. Comparing the above with our School District of approximately 400 square miles, a combined population of approximately 26,000, a school attendance including all school personnel of less than 5,000 people, 180 day year school operation and 10 days a year inservice study for a salary of $32,000 and other benefits, it is certain a big RIP-OFF is being given the local taxpayer.

A low profile is established and executive session is the order when the Superintendent's salary was raised from $29,000 to $32,000.

I would welcome the opportunity to meet with you to discuss salaries of other personnel, or better still why not print the salary schedule in the local paper and let the taxpayer be the judge.

Yours sincerely,
E.C. Sidwell

Credit crisis coming?

Recently the "New York News" ran a "news item" asking: "Are you heading for credit problems?" In order to find out, the item advised, you should ask yourself the following questions:

1. Are you falling behind in rent or utility payments?
2. Are you spending more than 20 per cent of your take home pay on credit installments?
3. Do you meet emergency expenses with credit instead of savings?
4. Do you borrow from one credit card to pay off another credit card?
5. Are arguments over money a major cause of problems in your family?
6. Do you meet daily expenses by getting cash advances on your checking account or credit card?
7. Do you spend more per month than you earn?
8. Have you applied for a new loan before paying off your old ones?

The questions, obviously, were intended for individuals to ask themselves and answer but, just as appropriately, could have been directed to New York City whose near-bankruptcy can be laid at the door of profligate spending by past and present administrations.

Even so, those are excellent questions for both private individuals and public officials to ask themselves; a "yes" answer to any of which being a clear indication that trouble lies ahead. However, the list may be a bit too short. In order to stretch the eight questions out to a round dozen, may we suggest the addition of these?

9. Assuming that you answered any, or all, of the foregoing questions with a "yes," to what extent was the necessity for doing so brought about by the fact that governments at all levels today are expropriating approximately 40 per cent of your income in taxes?
10. If the federal government would cease increasing the money supply (inflation) and, thus, continually shoving up prices, would you find it easier to make ends meet and avoid abusing your credit?
11. With approximately half the population of the United States (not to mention innumerable foreign governments) living off the other half via unearned governmentally bestowed payments, benefits and subsidies, is it any wonder that more and more people look upon credit as a "painless" way of further enjoying that which they have not earned?
12. With the "public sector" taking more and more out of the economy; leaving the private sector less and less for productive endeavors and job creation, how long will it be before the whole structure comes tumbling down about our heads?

'Hi, Jimmy, any jobs?'

Jimmy Carter said he'd do something about joblessness, and, by golly, he has. At least indirectly.

Seems 21-year-old Leslie Pfenniger of Lanham, Md., called Carter during his radio phone-in March 5 to inquire about how she could get a job with the federal government.

And now she's on the payroll of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms as assistant curator of its new museum, which exhibits such inspirational items as an old whisky still and some machine guns employed in the St. Valentine's Day massacre.

Carter didn't order anybody to give her a job, mind you. Museum director Rex D. David apparently read last week that Ms. Pfenniger hadn't been able to get a job despite her call to the President, so he decided to give her a break.

And it didn't hurt that W.H. McConnell, assistant to the director of ATF, appreciates old-fashioned, front-line courage such as that displayed so boldly by Ms. Pfenniger in her successful attempt to achieve the Carter connection.

"I felt right from the first," offered McConnell, "that if anybody's got enough guts to call the President of the United States, that's the kind of party that I want working for me."

Hear, hear, but W.H. must have forgotten what a gutsy lot Americans are. He must have been wholly flabbergasted that several million telephone warriors screwed up enough courage to dial that special number. Of course some of us of cowardly character and negative interest continued to read our garden.

Lucky that all who called didn't get through the switchboard to converse with Carter. No telling how many wanted to use him as a personal employment agency, and taxpayers could ill afford it.

Ms. Pfenniger's job is supposed to last only four and a half months.

Alien problem like an iceberg

Step 1: counterfeit-proof ID cards

By ROBERT B. CULLEN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Acting as much from ignorance as knowledge, the government is preparing to deal with illegal aliens in ways that could affect not only the aliens and their employers but workers all over the United States.

The extent of the alien problem is unknown because, like an iceberg, the alien subculture in American society exists beneath the surface, out of sight of government surveys.

Nonetheless, the first major step in the government's campaign is beginning: the distribution of new "counterfeit-proof" identity cards to the four million aliens who are legally entitled to live and work in the United States.

The new card costs $15 million to develop. It will take five years before it completely replaces the current "green card," which the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service says is too easily forged.

The new card has a photo, a fingerprint and a signature. The photo cannot be peeled off and replaced. Characteristics of the signature and fingerprint are encoded in a 50-digit identifying number that can be read by the INS computers.

The new card, or something like it, may be required of every American worker, not just aliens, before long under programs that are germinating in both Congress and the Carter administration.

Rep. Joshua Eilberg, a Philadelphia Democrat who heads the House subcommittee on immigration, is sponsoring a bill aimed at penalizing employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens.

He says these employers systematically exploit illegal labor, paying substandard wages because the aliens are afraid to draw attention to themselves by complaining.

A broad coalition, including Secretary of Labor Ray Marshall, supports such a measure. Under current laws, employers have no liability at all.

Opposition comes from people like Rep. Edward Roybal of Los Angeles, a leader of the congressional Hispanic Caucus.

"People with Spanish surnames would be discriminated against because the employer would take the position that he just doesn't want to take a chance and wouldn't interview them for jobs," he says.

Marshall concedes the fear of discrimination "is a legitimate concern. But there are ways to handle it." His solution is a new counterfeit-proof Social Security card for every American worker. All an employer would have to do to stay within the law is check for the card.

The INS study found that to be foolproof, the card needed a fingerprint and a photo, but Marshall is not convinced it would have to be that elaborate.

"I don't have to have that on my American Express card, and they give me money for it in the lobby of Dulles Airport. If the bankers are willing to do that, I think you can count on them having figured out some way that's almost foolproof."

Marshall does not think there should be much resistance to the new card. "Every worker now has to have a Social Security card and the employer is supposed to require it. The only thing new is that we're going to make it so you can't counterfeit it."

But any proposal for turning the Social Security number into a mandatory identity system is bound to touch off a reaction from persons, like Eilberg, who "don't like a national identification system where Big Brother has all those names and all those numbers."

Roybal has introduced legislation to make it illegal to use the Social Security number for any purpose other than employment.

That may be impractical, however, in view of the large number of public and private agencies, ranging from the Internal Revenue Service to universities, which already use it for identification.

Roybal and the administration also are pressing for some form of amnesty for illegal aliens already in the country with clean records.

"There's no question that we will need an amnesty if this is to be an equitable program," says Leonel Castillo, the Mexican-American city comptroller of Houston whom the White House is preparing to nominate to head the INS.

No one knows how many people an amnesty might affect, because no one knows how many illegal aliens there are in the United States. The INS caught 750,000 last year, either at border points or in raids within the United States. Officials assume that for every alien who is caught, many more slip through.

Estimates of their number vary from 4 million to 12 million. Most, it is assumed, are from the Western Hemisphere and the largest number is from Mexico.

The migratory pressure from Mexico has increased since a law sponsored by Eilberg was passed last year. It restricted the flow of legal Mexican migrants, which had been about 60,000 per year, to 20,000 per year.

The migrants come, Roybal says, for the same reasons that most American's ancestors came here.

"They see an opportunity. They simply stay when their visas expire, ignoring the INS letters telling them to leave," he said.

"You see a waiter, a dishwasher, or a janitor who doesn't speak too well, the odds are 3 to 1 he's an illegal. I'll bet you that if we went to the Congressional Club right now, we'd find some on the staff."

The unanswered question is whether the aliens are significant contributors to unemployment because they take jobs that would otherwise go to U.S. citizens.

Some do have good jobs. Eilberg's subcommittee recently interviewed a witness who said he made $8.45 per hour working on the construction of Washington's subway. He was caught by the INS only after Virginia police arrested him for driving his motorcycle without a license.

But many more apparently are doing the work that most Americans will not do. They wash dishes, clean homes and offices, and pick crops. They are often paid less than

Woman, not Ferrari, buried

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Sandra Ilene West, who died last month leaving a will demanding that she be buried in her expensive Italian sports car, has been temporarily entombed at a mausoleum here.

The body of Mrs. West, eccentric widow of Texas oilman Ike West, had lain for several weeks at the Porter Loring funeral home here while her will underwent legal scrutiny in California.

Mrs. West died at her Beverly Hills home March 10.

Officials at the Sunset Memorial Mausoleum here said the body of the 36-year-old woman was entombed last Thursday after it was brought in by funeral home officials.

The body was accompanied by a California court order allowing the temporary entombment pending the outcome of what may become a lengthy and complicated court battle over two contested wills Mrs. West left.

The temporary crypt is identified only by a small, embossed plastic stick-on tape attached to the granite slab which says "Sandra West."

Robert Early, president of the mausoleum company, said the body was placed in a "suitable, appropriate, temporary container" and placed inside the crypt.

"This will not be the final burial place," he emphasized.

In one of her wills, Mrs. West left instructions that she be dressed in a lace nightgown, placed in her Ferrari automobile "with the seat slanted comfortably" and buried next to her husband in a San Antonio cemetery.

That five-year-old handwritten will names Mrs. West's brother-in-law, Sol West of Comfort, Tex., as the chief recipient of her estate, which has been valued at $3 million to $6 million.

To receive the money, however, Sol West was required to carry out the unusual burial request.

Another will surfaced about a week later. In the newer document, Mrs. West left the bulk COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Church of Sweden Bishop Alva Kaslund says the "state church" is an anomaly — it has survived past its time.

He told students at Lutheran Theological Southern Seminary that it is difficult to sever the ties between Scandinavian governments and Lutheran churches since they have been woven together from the start.

Names in the news

HILLSBOROUGH, Calif. (AP) — Bing Crosby is back home for the first time since he fell 20 feet from a stage March 3 while taping a television show to mark his 50th anniversary in show business.

The 72-year-old singer, sporting a golf hat and protected from the morning chill by a sweater, left Peninsula Hospital in nearby Burlingame on Tuesday accompanied by his wife, Kathryn.

Before entering his car, Crosby delighted the crowd that had gathered by singing a few lines of "Oh, What a Beautiful Morning."

Crosby damaged a spinal disc in the fall, but doctors at Peninsula are reportedly pleased with his progress since he began treatment there March 25. He plans to continue exercise and hot baths at home to strengthen the damaged disc.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — "Roots" author Alex Haley predicts that any improvement in race relations will "happen in the South before it happens in any other section of the country."

Haley, who was born in a Tennessee farming community, made the remarks Tuesday before addressing a joint session of the state legislature. The appearance heralded a three-day "Alex Haley Homecoming" celebration that includes appearances in several Tennessee cities.

Haley said he considers "one of the best things that ever happened to me" was growing up in a small town in the South. In the South, even during the strictest segregation, the people knew each other.

Haley's book traces his ancestry back to the birth of his great-great-great-great grandfather, Kunta Kinte, in an African tribal village.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Elvis Presley has been released from Baptist Hospital, but he is maintaining his two-room suite at the hospital in case he is readmitted.

Vernon Presley, the singer's father, said Tuesday that his son left the hospital before dawn and went to his Grace-land mansion.

Presley was hospitalized Friday with what his physicians termed intestinal flu and fatigue. The ailment forced cancellation of a concert at Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge.

MIDDLEBURG, Va. (AP) — Actress Elizabeth Taylor says she is still "very much myself," despite reports that Hollywood's onetime glamor queen has given up a chauffeured Rolls Royce for a pickup truck.

"Maybe a lot of people think that because I'm not wearing big diamonds anymore I've changed my lifestyle," Miss Taylor said Tuesday. "But I haven't at all. Your lifestyle is in your head."

The actress moved to a farm near here after her recent marriage to John Warner, former secretary of the Navy and an unannounced candidate for the U.S. Senate.

Observers report she sips sour-mash whiskey and eats chicken wings, types of nourishment not generally associated with members of the jet set.

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — The Massachusetts islands of Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard, both talking of secession from the Bay State, can now seek refuge in Vermont.

"There is no reason the natives of the mountains, the land of milk, honey and syrup, cannot dwell happily forever with the tidal tribes and catchers of cod," said a resolution adopted Thursday by the Vermont House of Representatives.

Trooper Geery called to USAF

A Pampa-based Texas highways patrolman has been called into active duty in the U.S. Air Force.

Trooper James Geery was a member of the Air Force inactive reserve in college, and was recently called for active duty.

"He has not yet been informed where to report but he expects a 48-month tour of duty," the spokesman said.

Geery became a member of the patrol in October, 1975, and came to Pampa in March of last year. A native of Austin, he and his wife, Dana Diane, live at 2104 Coffee.

The district office said Geery's replacement has not yet been selected, but will be named "probably before September."

Prostitution under fire

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Bills to put prostitutes and their pimps in such an economic squeeze that they leave the streets of Texas were set for a final House vote today.

One bill raises the maximum penalty for first-offense prostitution from a $200 fine to a $1,000 fine and 180 days in jail.

The other broadens the definition of pimping to include soliciting someone to engage in sexual conduct with another person for compensation. Present law requires proof that a pimp receives money for his services.

Both bills received tentative approval Tuesday.

"If a pimp has to pay $1,000 and face the loss of his girl for six months, he is going to get them off the street," said the sponsor, Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Salado.

The Killeen housewives in the gallery applauded. Schlueter's district includes Killeen, near Ft. Hood. On pay day, Avenue D in that city is lined with prostitutes, he said.

Rep. Jim Kaster, D-El Paso, offered — but later withdrew — an amendment making prostitution a capital crime, "punishable upon conviction by stoning to death."

"If it was good enough for the people in the Bible, it is good enough for us," Kaster said. He said that Schlueter was "a Baylor man and knows how to do research in this area." Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, asked Kaster if his amendment would "touch top-side or bottom of the prostitution that goes on on the floor of this House?"

"Well, you've got to be convicted of it," Kaster said.

Schlueter said prostitution is a $137 million-a-year business in Texas, with prostitutes making $20-$250 a trick and averaging $450 to $775 a week.

Pimps share the proceeds, he said, and one "has an $80,000 house and drives three Mercedes."

Texas prostitutes travel a "general circuit," hitting population centers on pay days, and a "major events" circuit, following conventions and the like, Schlueter said.

"They even come to Austin for Aqua Festival," he said.

Now, he said, there is "an alarming increase in baby pros," girls under 16.

"One high school teacher told me a pimp frequents the playground on a daily basis to select for the tricks they do the night before," he said.

Mrs. Carrasco emerges

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Rosa Gomez Carrasco, the widow of a notorious alleged drug kingpin who died in a spectacular prison escape attempt in 1974, apparently is on her way to freedom after nearly three years of hiding and uncertainty.

Dist. Atty. Jerry Sandel said Wednesday after a four-hour interview with Mrs. Carrasco that he will recommend that she not be indicted for helping her husband's attempted escape from prison.

"I will recommend to the grand jury that it not indict Rosa Carrasco for providing implements of escape to her husband because of insufficient evidence," Sandel said after the Huntsville meeting.

The district attorney said nothing to her," said Mrs. Carrasco on her return to San Antonio late Wednesday.

Asked about her reasons for leaving Texas, Sandel said, "She said she was afraid to stay in San Antonio because of all the publicity surrounding the escape attempt. She said she was afraid someone would hold her children for ransom, and she didn't have any money. She said she came back because she missed her children, who were staying with her mother."

Sandel said Mrs. Carrasco will remain free under $100,000 bond until the grand jury acts on her case. He said that Nicholas, her attorney, suggested she planned to seek employment with a nursing home.

From the White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has excused his foreign policy assistant, Zbigniew Brzezinski, from observing the ban on regular use of White House limousines by members of the senior staff.

Brzezinski is the first top Carter aide to get an exemption. One reason he merits special treatment is that he reports to work unusually early. As the first person who has a scheduled appointment with the President each morning, Brzezinski must get to the office in time to study all the latest overseas developments and incoming intelligence cables before entering the Oval Office.

Although the foreign affairs scholar has a car and driver available in good weather he often elects to walk to work.

Brzezinski and his spokesman, Jerrold Schecter, used a White House sedan to go to a luncheon meeting Wednesday — and it's well that they did, for a couple of reasons.

Even with the car, Brzezinski arrived at the White House gate a few minutes after the scheduled start of a meeting with Carter. Making matters worse, his sedan was blocked from entering the grounds by the much larger limousine of the Japanese ambassador, who was to participate in the same meeting but was having trouble getting in.

Brzezinski leaped from his vehicle and made a 100-yard dash toward the White House offices. His flight was so swift that he was out of camera range before he was recognized by news photographers, who were waiting in the driveway for AFL-CIO President George Meany.

Schecter, meanwhile, went to find out why the Japanese ambassador was being held at the gate. The White House police

Flood refugees begin to dry out

Thousands of Appalachia flood refugees began returning to their water-ravaged homes as government agencies set up to feed and assist them.

President Carter declared parts of southeastern Kentucky a disaster area Wednesday after a White House official toured the stricken counties.

Officials in West Virginia, Virginia and Tennessee also were seeking federal disaster declarations to make flood victims eligible for government assistance.

The U.S. Geological Survey said that although some rivers were still to crest today, waters have begun receding across the region. The agency said the flooding was the worst some of the areas could expect in 100 years.

Warmer temperatures also were to provide a respite from the cold and snow that followed the Monday downpour and resultant flooding, blamed for at least 14 deaths.

The National Guard moved water purification units to the Virginia communities of Gate City, Pennington Gap and St. Charles. Other communities reported that water for cooking and drinking was scarce.

The number left homeless in the state was estimated at between 1,000 and 2,000.

Virginia Gov. John D. Rockefeller IV estimated damages at $50 million with Mingo County the worst hit.

"An entire community was washed away," he said of the Mingo County town of Matewan, where only 25 serviceable houses remained. "I am deter-

OTTAWA, Canada (AP) — Pierre and Margaret Trudeau chatted for 35 minutes Wednesday, then he left on a business-pleasure trip and she went home to mind the children.

The meeting of the prime minister and his wife, whose apparent marriage difficulties have been making news lately, took place at Ottawa airport.

Mrs. Trudeau flew in from New York, where she had been on one of her mystery trips.

The airport conversation took place against the backdrop of at least one report — by a television commentator — that the 56-year-old prime minister and his wife, who is half his age, are to try a 90-day trial separation. They have been married six years.

Other reports have said she will join her husband in California. The prime minister said Tuesday he is going alone.

Gay league throws orange not softball

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — When the ceremonial pitcher tossed the first ball to open the 1977 gay softball league season, he hurled an orange instead.

It was a symbolic aim by this city's large and activist homosexual community against Miss America former contestant, Anita Bryant.

Miss Bryant, who is campaigning in Miami for the repeal of a law that bars job discrimination against homosexuals, has become the scorn of the 100,000 homosexuals that officials estimate live in this city of 665,000.

She has also become big business in the stores and bars that cater to homosexual clientele.

Marty Thomason, manager of The Town Squire, said he sells more than 70 white and gold T-shirts a week, at $6.95 each, that are inscribed with the anti-Bryant slogan "Squeeze a fruit for Anita."

Many bars exhibit placards proclaiming: "We serve only California orange juice."

The California orange juice promotion is another jab at Miss Bryant, who does television commercials for Florida orange juice.

House backs Carter in human rights stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives is taking President Carter's human rights stand seriously — so seriously that it inserted stronger human rights language than Carter wanted in an international aid bill.

Rejecting a written appeal from the President against taking "an overly rigid approach," the House adopted an amendment Wednesday that requires Americans on the World Bank and other international lending organizations to vote against loans for countries that violate human rights.

Exemptions would be loans going directly for the human need of citizens.

The House then voted 194 to 156 to approve the $5.2 billion, three-year international aid bill.

The administration wanted the bill to contain softer language that would have required the American bank representatives to promote human rights

WT offers $500 reward

CANYON — West Texas State University administrators put up a $500 reward Wednesday for information leading to the capture and conviction of persons who call in bomb threats to the university.

The action was taken after the university received the second bomb threat in two days.

A young man, possibly a college student, called the central switchboard at 9:20 a.m. Wednesday and reported six bombs had been set on the campus.

An elderly man called the university Tuesday to report he overheard a student talking about bombs. The man told While Officer David Hodges was patrolling, he observed a door standing open on a vehicle parked at 2513 Rosewood. He contacted the owner of the car, who reported a CB radio missing.

A non-injury accident occurred in the 500 block of W. Francis when a car struck a parked vehicle.

Another accident was reported when two cars collided at the intersection of Ballard and Browning. There were no injuries.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
South breezes warmed a cloudless Texas today.

And chances appeared better than ever that the state will escape what oldtimers call the usual Easter cold spell. Official forecasters looked ahead and promised it'll be clear to partly cloudy and warm in all sections through the weekend.

Occasional patches of fog in South Texas were the only blot on the weather pattern this morning as the south winds blew at 5 to 15 miles per hour.

Temperatures near dawn ranged from 44 degrees at Dalhart in the Panhandle up to 59 at Tyler in East Texas. Wednesday's top mark of 84 was shared by Dallas and Waco.

National weather

By The Associated Press
The central and southern Appalachians were cold overnight, and a high pressure system brought cold air to the Carolinas, Georgia and Kentucky.

Frost and freeze warnings were issued for parts of the East as temperatures dropped to the lower 20s.

Early morning readings were in the low to mid 30s in eastern Kentucky and western Virginia and in the low 40s in northern Georgia. Temperatures in the teens and 20s ranged over the Great Lakes region and 20s extended from Pennsylvania into northern New England.

A very special Easter dinner

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

The personal meaning of Easter changes each year for most celebrants as they absorb new experiences.

St. Paul believed this to be a loving time and that... "love never ends... faith, hope, love abide, these three; but the greatest of these is love." Thus the importance of sharing this special day with family and friends. And no matter how closely one guards his privacy, he wishes to share his feelings with others on this cheerful day of rebirth for Christians.

The celebration of Easter also heralds the coming of spring. Certainly, everyone looks forward to the joy of seeing the first blades of new grass and tiny buds on trees. This truly is a new beginning and what better way to mark positive hope for a new season than with a very special Easter dinner.

Coffee Tea

- BAKED HAM
ready-to-eat ham (about 13 pounds)
1 cup dark corn syrup
1 teaspoon grated orange rind

Whole cloves
Raisin Sauce

Trim ham, then place, fat side up, on rack in roasting pan. Heat in 325-degree oven about 1 hour and 15 minutes. Meanwhile, stir together corn syrup, orange rind and mustard. Remove ham from oven. Score, making cuts about one-eighth-inch deep, about one and one-fourth-inches apart across fat surface of ham. Brush ham with some of the syrup mixture. Bake in oven about 45 minutes, basting frequently, until ham is well glazed and heat thoroughly. Remove from oven. Stud surface with cloves. Baste once more and heat in oven 10 minutes. Serve with Raisin Sauce. Makes 25 generous servings.

- RAISIN SAUCE
2 cups water
3/4 cup raisins

Plains birds: aviary interesting subject

...15,000 slides over the past six years...

Fine feathered friends

Well-known nature photographers and lecturers Carolyn Stallwitz, left, of Dumas, and Roberta Currie of Amarillo were in Pampa Monday to present the program for a Pampa Garden Club tea. Many of Mrs.

Currie's slides are on file at Texas A&M and Cornell Universities. Mrs. Stallwitz, artist as well as photographer, is best known for watercolors of birds and wild flowers of the Panhandle.

Carolyn Stallwitz uses a special custom-made gunstock when she takes to the bird blinds — but when she shoots, she's taking pictures.

The Dumas artist-nature photographer, one of two speakers at a recent Pampa Garden Club Guest Day tea, uses a camera mounted to a gunstock when photographing wildlife.

"My camera equipment represents quite a large investment," she told her audience, "and my family understands that if I should start to fall for any reason in the fields, they are to grab the camera instead of me."

Mrs. Stallwitz teamed with Roberta Currie of Amarillo, another area wildlife photographer and president of Amarillo Photographic Society, to present a program on birds of the Panhandle.

Both photographers have ranch homes — Mrs. Currie's is in Palo Duro Canyon — and most of their work is done in the Panhandle.

"If you hear someone say there's nothing of interest in the plains country," Mrs. Stallwitz remarked, "just send him to me. I've taken 15,000 slides over the past six years in the Panhandle that will prove otherwise."

Mrs. Currie agreed. "I do nearly all my photography in the canyon."

A recent issue of "Accent West" magazine featured a cover picture and story by Mrs. Currie on the golden eagle.

"We've found as many as four nests some seasons on our ranch," she said. "The eggs — two of them — are laid in February. Usually one young eagle survives to leave the nest in June."

She added she's very careful to keep herself well-camouflaged in the area of the eagle's nest. "They're so keen-sighted they can see the slightest movement. We're cautious not to scare them away."

She explained since the filling of Lake Meredith, the Panhandle now has enough water to attract migrating geese. "Close to 25,000 Canada and snow geese winter here," she said.

America's national bird also pays annual visits to the Panhandle. "Bald eagles arrive at Lake Tanglewood in November, and they're leaving now," Mrs. Stallwitz said, adding that she has counted as many as 25 of the rare birds in the area.

"Last year I felt concern because there were only six, but this year I counted eleven," she said.

Young bald eagles are often mistaken for hawks, she said, because the birds are about four years old before the white head and tail feathers begin to appear.

Mrs. Currie has successfully photographed many wild turkeys, often males with tail feathers spread into fans during "courting season." She has seen as many as a hundred of the large birds roosting in Palo Duro's cottonwood trees.

"They're so bulky that flying is a chore," she said, "so they've learned to climb to the top of canyon walls, then fly down into the treetops — it's easier that way."

The two often work as a team. Some of their work was done on ranches near Wheeler and Canadian, where landowners invited them to photograph birds and wildlife.

Probably the most elusive bird — both to hunters and cameramen — is the ring-necked pheasant, Mrs. Stallwitz said.

"I can be driving along and see a dozen of them — if I don't have my camera with me. But when I'm trying to photograph them, it's a different story. I'm convinced they have spies."

The pair has observed male red-winged blackbirds have territories. "Once a bird claims his area, he perches there and sings loudly to drive other males away. No squatter's rights allowed," Mrs. Currie said.

They suggested wrens as photogenic birds, since they often nest in woodpiles. "A wren perched on a nest bough makes a charming picture," Mrs. Stallwitz remarked.

Raincocks are really yellow-billed cuckoos, and "kith and kin" to the roadrunner. Known for their secrecy, the timid birds have been known to peek around a branch to see whether an observer is still watching. "Roadrunners are very plentiful in the canyon," Mrs. Currie said. "But I was very surprised when I saw my first young roadrunner. It was such a sorry sight I couldn't imagine what sort of bird it was."

"Like a gawky teen-ager," Mrs. Stallwitz agreed.

The slide presentation included several pictures of shore birds. "Some of them call the Panhandle home, while others — on their way to the sea — are just passing through," Mrs. Currie said, adding that not all shore birds search out oceans, but content themselves with lakes and marshes.

"The killdeer — often called kill-dee because of its song — will put on quite a show. He'll watch you as long as you watch him," she said.

Mrs. Stallwitz finds fascination in watching large flocks of migrating sand hill cranes. "I once photographed a portion of a group of cranes totaling around 4,000," she said. "I often wonder how so many huge birds can fly together without colliding."

One of her photographs proved a point to naturalists. "I shot a picture of a long-billed curlew at the lake, proving that contrary to common belief, they do nest in the Panhandle."

Blue herons, unusual in the area, can be seen occasionally. She described them as five feet tall or more, with wingspans often reaching six feet. "They're spectacular in flight," she said.

Mrs. Currie told of a recent rare opportunity to photograph a white egret, a shore bird even larger than the blue heron. "He was just passing through, but he stayed a few hours, and I didn't leave until he did," she said.

"There is so much of nature's beauty here in the Panhandle to observe, paint and photograph," Mrs. Stallwitz concluded. "The wildlife, and the scenery. I personally believe a sunset on the plains is the finest in the world. And a promise of good things to come."

The tea was held in Lovett Memorial Library. Mrs. Rue Hestand is president of Pampa Garden Club.

Advice

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Shame on you for your non-answer to that 10-year-old girl whose pet cat, Sinbad, kept running off to be with his girlfriend.

You missed a perfect opportunity to tell all cat-owners to have their pets spayed and altered. Just a few words from you might have prevented the birth of thousands of unwanted kittens who might end up in a decompression chamber.

If you print this, lots of purrs to you from Benny, Toby and Phoebe who live with the Richards in Ridgecrest, Calif. GAIL

DEAR GAIL: I'll take 10 lashes with a cat o' nine tails for my sin of omission. Thanks to you and thousands of other readers who wouldn't let me get away with it.

DEAR ABBY: Have you ever heard of Meals on Wheels? It is a non-profit, privately operated service for the elderly and handicapped who live alone and cannot prepare meals for themselves, and consequently are reduced to a diet of tea and toast.

There are many such services scattered throughout the U.S. and Canada, but because they are independently operated we don't know where they are.

Abby, you would be doing a tremendous service if you publish our address so we can act as a clearing house for those who provide the service and those who need it. We will provide a national list of Meals on Wheels kitchens, and distribute it for the price of paper and postage.

Our address: Meals on Wheels
Capitol Hill United Methodist Church
421 Seward Square, S.E.
Washington, D.C. 20003
Gratefully,
NEIL SCOTT (FOUNDER)

DEAR MR. SCOTT: Indeed I have heard of Meals on Wheels and the wonderful service it performs. I consider it a privilege to help coordinate your efforts.

DEAR ABBY: Before long it will be graduation time again, and while I don't have time to keep up a correspondence with many friends, I would like to let them know that one of my children is graduating.

Please remind people, Abby, that an announcement is not a solicitation for a gift. I cringe at the thought of people feeling obligated (and many people do).

Should I state "No gifts please"? I do think it sounds dumb. Maybe if you just print this, people won't get the wrong idea when they receive an announcement.

FLORIDA MOTHER

DEAR FLORIDA: A graduation announcement is no more than that and can adequately be acknowledged by card or note of congratulations.

CONFIDENTIAL TO M.M.: I like the way Malcolm S. Forbes put it: "Anybody who thinks money is everything has never been sick. Or is."

Ask Dr. Lamb
Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR LAMB — My doctor says I have osteoporosis and I have a lot of pain in my back. I fear that I will get a dowager's hump since I have trouble keeping my back straight.

My question is would a shoulder support be beneficial? I am 61 years old.

Also my doctor does not prescribe calcium tablets. He says to drink a quart of milk a day which is not always convenient, especially while I am at work or gone from home.

DEAR READER — The purpose of drinking the milk is to give you 1000 to 1200 milligrams of calcium a day. If you are not going to drink the quart of milk or use an equivalent amount of cottage cheese then you should take calcium tablets. Remember the rule that you need to get at least 1000 milligrams of calcium a day. It doesn't matter how.

It is not always convenient to drink milk and some people can't tolerate it. Others want to use a limited calorie budget for other foods. You can get some suitable calcium tablets at your local drug store and if you are in doubt about which ones I'm sure your pharmacist will be glad to help you.

I'm not very enthusiastic about a shoulder support. Why? Because splints and supports do the work your muscles should be doing. They allow your muscles to grow weaker and make you dependent upon the support. I would prefer that you be on a program of exercise to strengthen the muscles between your shoulder blades. These are mostly the type of movement a swimmer uses for a backstroke.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 6-10, Osteoporosis: Bone Softening, to give you more information on what osteoporosis is and what you can do in terms of diet and exercise to help yourself. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it.

DEAR DR LAMB — I've had mild heart trouble for several years. Frequently I read that organ meats are bad for the heart. In what way and why? I keep my weight down and walk two miles daily. Also I quit smoking to save my health.

Wild game is one of my favorite meats. Is it true that it generates more body heat than other meats?

DEAR READER — The concern about heart patients eating too much organ meat is that many of them contain large amounts of cholesterol. Fatty-cholesterol deposits in arteries is the usual cause of heart trouble in our society.

Brains contain more cholesterol, ounce for ounce, than almost any other food. Fortunately few people eat many brains. Liver contains 300 milligrams in a three-and-a-half ounce (100 gram) serving but it is low in fat.

Sweetbreads are rich in cholesterol and fats. Tongue is fatty. Lean heart muscle is acceptable but is muscle rather than glandular tissue. Limit your cholesterol intake to 300 milligrams a day. Since there is some cholesterol in red meat, fish, poultry and dairy products it is best to save your daily budget for these essential items in your daily diet.

There is no important difference in wild game and domestic animals other than the relative fat content of the carcass. Wild game tends to be leaner.

Because of the volume of mail Dr. Lamb cannot answer your letters personally but he will answer representative letters of general interest in his column. Write to him in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Polly's pointers

Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — My Pointer is for those who may be putting down self-sticking floor tiles. We have just put them down in our bathroom and kitchen and would like to pass on some information that we learned for ourselves.

We had cleaned the floors and had them ready for laying the tiles the next day but neglected to read over the instructions until the next morning when we were ready to start work. We noted that the tiles were to be kept at 65 degrees for 12 hours previous to installation and since our thermostat is set at 55 degrees during the night the tiles were too brittle to install without breaking. Instead of waiting all day for the tiles to warm up we took them out of the box and laid them down, two at a time, on the sheet on our bed. Then we turned on the electric blanket to "High" and covered the tiles. In a very short time they were pliable and ready to be laid. Ours were the self-adhesive, peel-the-back-off tiles that come about 45 to the box. We thought this a great idea. — DIANNE.

Free sewing basics

Students in a basic sewing construction course from 2-4 p.m. on Mondays through May 16 will receive instruction in pattern, fabric and notion selection, use of pattern and pattern guide sheet, and care of the sewing machine, zippers, fasteners and hems. The course is being taught by Gray County Extension Agents Elaine Houston and Marilyn Tate. Women attending the first lesson on Tuesday were, from left, Mrs. Varden Searl, Mrs. Wynema Little and Mrs. Emma Cargill. Mrs. Houston said enrollment is still open and interested persons should call her or Mrs. Tate at 669-7429. The classes will meet in the Courthouse Annex meeting room. At wit's end

By ERMA BOMBECK
One of the biggest problems confronting women who go outside of their homes to work is guilt.

There is no doubt in my mind that if I gathered my children around my knee and said, "Dear hearts, next Tuesday, your mother will be sworn in as the first woman President of the United States. This means I will serve as chief of state, make sure federal laws are enforced, be commander-in-chief of our armed forces, direct U.S. foreign policy, shape my party's stand on foreign issues, urge Congress to act on my legislative proposals and preside over the 132-room White House," they would react as follows:

Son: "Does that mean you're not going to the store today?"

Daughter: "Don't forget you got baton-twirling car pool on Wednesday."

Husband: "What would you want with a house that big? You can't take care of the one you got."

The guilt is compounded by the frustration of not being able to complain about any part of your extra-curricular activity. If you do, you get, "You asked for it. No one is asking you to work. You can always quit your job."

I have a friend who is just going through the transition period that everyone who works has been through. The other night she came home to an open front door, a stove burner that had been on all day, liquid butter on the breakfast table, unmade beds, the dog eating peanuts from an ashtray and 15 kids in the hall bath showing movies in the commode that threw them into hysterics every time they flushed.

She pounded on the bathroom door and said, "Doesn't anyone care that the dog is eating peanuts from an ashtray?"

A voice came out, "We told him he'd ruin his supper, but he wouldn't listen." When she complained to her husband he retorted, "I don't know why you have to work anyway. You've got everything here you need — self-cleaning ovens, push-button stoves, ice makers, electric brooms, blenders, steam irons and wall-to-wall conveniences. It's a regular Disneyland."

"I've noticed," she said, "The kitchen is Adventureland; the plumbing, Frontierland; the garage, Tomorrowland; the bedroom, Fantasyland, and the bathroom, Main Street, U.S.A."

I don't think I'll ever forget the day I had written a column, lectured at a luncheon, come home, made beds, put in a load of clothes and started dinner when my son said, "Why don't you make some lemonade?"

"Why don't you make it?" I said.

"It's your job," he retaliated. I thought about that one for a long time and decided what did it profit me to be an expert lemonade maker — when I failed to raise a child who respected me as a person.

I've never felt guilty since.

Marine war games offer women combat training

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — They march like men. Shoot like men. Swear like men. Spit like men. Women Marines are moving out.

"A forced march to these guys is a fast walk," said Lt. Jennifer Martell. "For me, it's a run."

Lt. Martell, 25, of Guilford, Maine, stands five-feet tall on her tiptoes and weighs 110 pounds.

She is one of 22 women to have completed two days of combat training last week at Quantico Marine base. It was the first time in the 200-year history of the Marine Corps that women have been trained for fighting.

The women were not being trained for combat, but for support roles. Still, the corps wants them to have the experience with combat training.

The two-day simulated war began at 7 a.m. Thursday for the 266 Marines, all second lieutenants in a 21-week officer training program at the Basic School at Quantico.

The Marines spent the day practicing different combat situations — inching up thorny, brush-covered hills on their bellies, running through red-and-white smoke screens called "gas chambers" jumping across streams where some fell in, and wading through muddy partially frozen swamps.

They were all carrying M16 rifles, blanks for ammunition and packs weighing up to about 50 pounds. Some carried machine guns.

During summer training, ticks and mosquitoes are the menace. In winter, it's the cold which chills the body like an alcohol rub. Even some of those who covered their feet with plastic bags before putting their boots on had ice water seeping through their toes.

As the sun set over the rolling Piedmont plateau, the Marines settled in for the night to await the enemy — enlisted Marines who had planned a night attack.

With a cast on one leg and olive and black greasepaint smeared on her face for camouflage, Lt. Martell grabbed her M16 and settled into the soggy foxhole she had dug.

"I didn't have to come out here," she said, pointing to the cast which bound a torn ligament in her leg. "But I wanted to mean, I can still shoot."

Several yards away, Lt. Donna Manning of Gulfport, Miss., sat shivering in a four-foot-deep foxhole she and two male Marines had bailed out. They sunk up to their ankles in mud. The night wind cut through their field jackets. They argued that it must be colder than the predicted 28-degrees. The quarter moon was not quite bright enough for them to see the time. It was around 10 p.m. They had been sitting in the foxhole for three hours. Lt. Manning wanted a cigarette but knew that smoke would give their position away to the enemy.

"At first, the women had trouble carrying their gear because they had no experience with it," said the lieutenant, who stands a little over five feet and weighs 90 pounds. She was nibbling a hard, sweet piece of pecan cake she found in her box of C-rations, the canned food known in the military as "C-rats."

Suddenly, a box of TNT exploded in the distance. Incoming fire. The enemy was near.

"Fire," came the cry from the platoon leader. Lt. Manning grabbed her M16. "Bangedy-bang, bang, bang," she yelled, like a little kid playing soldier.

The ejecting shells from her buddy's rifle hit her repeatedly in the back. "Move over," she whispered.

Her rifle jammed. "Damn," she muttered. "If this were real, we'd all be dead."

Lt. Manning, 28, a graduate of the University of Southern Mississippi, a former second-grade school teacher, is divorced and has a 3½-year-old son. She joined the Marines "for some excitement," she said, adding that she would like to make it her career. But in the case of real war, she doesn't think women should go into combat.

"I'm the type who cries at movies," she said, her words punctuated by the sputter of a nearby machine gun. "Psychologically, I don't think I'm as strong. Emotionally, I don't think women could handle some of the combat situations as well as men. I couldn't."

Lt. Ron Picciotti, 22, who was in the foxhole with her, agreed.

"She's trying 200 per cent," said Picciotti, who comes from Indianapolis, Ind. "She's really working hard, but there are times when she can't keep up. But she tries, so I don't resent it."

Capt. Robin Austin, 30, of Pierre, S.D., is a staff platoon commander who has been in the Marines for seven years. She said the women would need an extreme conditioning program to be prepared for real combat.

Lawmakers study prostitution, paving

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas lawmakers met briefly today before taking off for a four-and-a-half day Easter holiday.

Both houses planned to quit about noon and not resume debate until next Tuesday morning.

On Wednesday, House members voted to spend more state dollars on highways and to tighten the economic pinch on convicted prostitutes.

The Senate whizzed through 12 measures in less than two hours and sent them over to the House.

A 116-22 vote in the House sent to Gov. Dolph Briscoe's desk — via Comptroller Bob Bullock — a bill providing $529 million more for highway financing than motor fuel taxes will raise over the next two years.

House members approved a complete rewrite by the Senate of the bill they passed earlier with a $674 million price tag.

Bullock must certify the funds are available before Briscoe can sign the bill — and they are. This is the first major bill to pass both houses that taps the $3 billion that some call a surplus and others a "balance" in the state treasury.

Briscoe originally wanted an $825 million program but says he accepts the Senate plan and will sign it.

The House passed, 114-26, and sent to the Senate a bill raising the maximum penalty for first-offense prostitution from a $200 fine to a $1,000 fine and 180 days in jail. Subsequent convictions could get a prostitute a year in jail and a $2,000 fine.

Also sent to the Senate was a bill widening the definition of pandering to include setting up a sexual date for pay, even if the pimp or madam receives no money.

A 129-8 vote sent to the Senate a bill giving the state banking commissioner the power to review and, if necessary, block acquisition of 25 per cent or more of a bank's stock.

Briscoe requested the bill, which was precipitated by two South Texas bank failures.

Sent to the governor was a Senate bill giving the Texas Public Utility Commission $368,013 to hire 24 new employees through the end of August and transferring $227,000 from travel to pay for salaries.

The measures approved by the Senate Wednesday included:

- A proposed constitutional amendment that would allow appointment of additional judges for Courts of Civil Appeals if future legislatures see the need in any of the current 14 districts. The vote on the amendment will come in November of this year.

- A bill authorizing honorably retired peace officers to carry pistols for five years after retirement.
- A bill allowing county judges who are not lawyers to be named juvenile judges.
- A bill allowing oil and gas well drillers to take water for use in drilling without getting special permits from the Texas Water Rights Commission.
- A bill that would allow Travis County commissioners to enact ordinances concerning building developments.
- A bill that would let the Department of Health Resources set up family practice residency training programs at East Texas Chest Hospital, Tyler; San Antonio Chest Hospital, and Harlingen Chest Hospital.

- A bill calling for fuller disclosure in applications for state bank charters.
- A bill that would let state colleges and universities pay travel expenses of prospective state employees. Currently, many schools list the job hunters as "consultants" in order to pay travel expenses when they appear for employment interviews.

The House defeated two bills Wednesday afternoon — an unusual occurrence.

A 73-59 vote 'knocked down' Rep. Mickey Leland's bill to create a four-acre Fifth Ward State Park on the site of a junk yard across the street from a ghetto school in Houston. It would have been the state's first inner city state park.

And Rep. Mike Ezzell, D-Snyder, saw his bill providing protective services for abused, neglected or financially exploited old people trounced 87-53.

Opponents indicated they feared the added power the bill would give the state welfare department, which would investigate reports and provide protective services for old persons who were unable to help themselves.

Texans still pushing Trinity

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — When Judge Nelson R. Link of Palestine, Tex., first came to Washington to get some federal money for his favorite water project, Jimmy Carter was just a peanut farmer from South Georgia.

And, if all goes according to his plans, Link expects to still be coming to Washington for his project long after Carter has returned to Plains.

Link is one of thousands of people who have come to Washington in the past two weeks on an annual pilgrimage to the federal pork barrel. His experience illustrates some of the problems Carter faces trying to cut back on the size and nature of the federal public works program.

Judge Link's project is the Trinity River project, the biggest single effort the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has ever undertaken.

If it is ever fully completed, it will create several massive reservoirs in East Texas and turn landlocked Dallas and Fort Worth into seaports by means of a 350-mile barge canal to the Gulf of Mexico. It will cost more than $2 billion.

The environmental lobby, which Judge Link tends to characterize as "a bunch of professional do-gooders from upstream," thinks of the project as a classic boondoggle that will destroy thousands of acres of natural habitat to enrich a few businessmen.

That's not what Judge Link wants Congress to think. So, on Tuesday, he and 161 other Texans boarded a chartered plane and flew to Washington.

The group included bankers, utility officials, newspaper publishers and other businessmen from the Trinity basin. It also had a full complement of local officials like Link.

The group leaders, over 15 years, have polished their Washington routines. They started off with a reception in the Rayburn House Office Building in a room provided for them by Rep. Olin Teague, D-Tex.

One by one, the members of the Texas congressional delegation whose districts abut the Trinity basin dropped by to have a drink and reiterate their support for the project.

They included powerful congressmen like Jim Wright, the administration's challenge to Trinity project. That opposition has been at least temporarily abandoned, thanks in part to Wright's intercession at the White House.

Nonetheless, the Texans were warmly received by the subcommittee chairmen, in the House and Senate. Rep. Tom Bevill of Alabama and Sen. John Stennis of Mississippi.

Very impressive. The best presentation we've had so far," said Bevill.

By contrast, the handful of Texans who have made their way to Washington to testify against the Trinity are a disgruntled and inconsequential group — a theology professor, a long-haired organic farmer, and John Henry Faulk, the television personality who was blacklisted during the McCarthy era and now lives in Madisonville, Tex.

Faulk, testifying a few days before the pro-Trinity group, managed to get into an argument with Stennis about the short amount of time allotted to the opposition — five minutes.

But he did say that the Trinity project was "the largest floating crap game in Texas," a "classic boondoggle designed to line the pockets of a small group of determined businessmen in Dallas and Fort Worth and landowners and bankers along the river downstream."

Link doesn't dispute the contention that the businesses of many Trinity backers will indirectly profit if the project is completed. But, he says, "basically, that's the American way." He personally has no financial stake, he said.

The voters in the Trinity area so far seem to agree with Faulk. In 1973 they rejected a bond issue that would have provided the local share of the canal cost.

Link doubted that his brief appearance would do much to counter the presentation of the project backers and the momentum they have built over the years.

"Once these people run their snouts into public trough, you can't knock them away with a branding iron," he said.

Bevill, who feels that without dams, the United States would be "like an undeveloped South American country," corroborated that assessment.

The subcommittee, he said, has heard nothing so far to change the favorable judgment it has given the Trinity and other projects in years past.

to line the pockets of a small group of determined businessmen in Dallas and Fort Worth and landowners and bankers along the river downstream."

Gov. Edwards plans gas attack

By ROB WOOD
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards says he will wait until President Carter announces his energy program April 20 before deciding if it is necessary to halt the flow of natural gas to the northeastern states.

Edwards told the Houston Press Club forum Wednesday he is convinced there is a deliberate effort by some Atlantic coast states to use all of our natural gas at federally-regulated prices and then they will begin drilling.

"And you can bet the gas won't flow south at any regulated prices. All we are doing now is subsidizing the energy bill for people on the east coast," he added.

The governor said Louisiana, Texas, and Oklahoma have been getting a raw deal for several years "and maybe this is the time to form a combine to call to the attention of the rest of the nation what we have done in supplying energy."

Asked what steps he may take if the president's proposal appeared to be detrimental to the oil and gas producing states, Edwards said he could and he would stop the flow of natural gas from Louisiana to the Northeast if necessary.

"And, if it is so bad for the environment to drill off the Atlantic coast, then maybe it is too bad to drill anymore wells off the Louisiana coast.

"If it is so bad to drill in Lake Erie, maybe we should no longer drill in Lake Pontchartrain. And, maybe we should slow down our production to preserve our reserves of oil and gas."

During the past five years, he said, there has been a lot of talk, a lot of rules and regulations about energy "and it hasn't provided one barrel of oil or one cubic foot of natural gas. It's about time people realized this is a national problem, not just one for the energy producing states."

"States with coal supplies should produce coal; those with nuclear plants should produce energy and those with known undeveloped supplies of natural gas and oil should begin drilling."

He said the Eastern states are concerned about off-shore drilling spoiling the environment "but their environment is far more threatened by dilapidated tankers bringing in oil from other nations than off-shore drilling."

The governor said the energy producing states are told "to take the environmental risks in drilling. Alright, we will take it, but we should be able to keep our own oil and gas."

FBI nabs air scufflers

HOUSTON (AP) — Two men were in custody here today after they allegedly caused a disturbance on a Delta Airlines flight.

The FBI said the two men were arrested Wednesday when the plane made an unscheduled landing at Houston Intercontinental Airport.

Robert Robinson, 34, of New York City, who allegedly scuffled with a number of persons aboard the flight, was charged with interfering with a flight crew.

Royce Ralph Creed, 36, of Downey, Calif., was charged with crime aboard an aircraft in connection with the alleged theft of $1,800 from Robinson.

Robinson was being held under $10,000 bond and Creed was being detained by local authorities on theft charges, the FBI said.

The plane was met by airport police who turned the two men over to federal marshals. The plane continued on to Atlanta after the stop here.

The investigative journalist

Tip leads reporter to killer

By James H. Dygert
(Third in a series)

(Editor's Note: In 1967, the daughter of Sen. Charles Percy was murdered in the family's Kenilworth, Ill. home. As late as 1973, the police had been unable to find the killer. But the following year, Art Petacque, a reporter for the Chicago Sun-Times, was contacted by a member of the Chicago underground who was dying — and who wanted to get "the Percy thing" off his chest. The result was a Pulitzer Prize-winning story by Petacque and fellow reporter Hugh Hough.)

Art Petacque knew who had killed Valerie Percy, but he couldn't publish the man's name. For 18 months he'd been hunting for a person he believed could provide the additional evidence he needed, but in November, 1973, seven years after the 21-year-old daughter of U.S. Senator Charles Percy had been stabbed to death in the family's 17-room suburban mansion, Petacque had exhausted all leads.

From the book "The Investigative Journalist" by James H. Dygert. (c) 1976 by James H. Dygert published by Prentice-Hall, Inc.

He had learned the killer's name early in 1972. A Chicago crime syndicate loan shark and fence named Leo Rugendorf, whom Petacque had met in his early days as a Chicago Sun-Times reporter, called to say he had information on a case.

"The last time I tried to talk to you," Petacque said, "you got pretty abusive."
"Wait a minute," said Rugendorf. "This is about the Percy case. That big enough for you?"

"Why do you want to talk about that?"

"I'm dying," said Rugendorf. "I want to get it off my chest. Ain't you got ten minutes?"

Hurrying out to the mobster's home, Petacque found him ailing with diabetes and heart disease. The killer, said Rugendorf, was one of four men who had broken into the Percy home. The men had belonged to a Mafia-backed gang of burglars who preyed on wealthy suburbs across the nation. Rugendorf had helped plan many of the burglaries and dispose of the loot. One of the men, said Rugendorf, the same one who had squealed on him in a federal case, had killed the Percy girl.

His name was Francis L. Hohimer, a 44-year-old career burglar whom Petacque had identified in 1970 as a prime suspect in the case.

Hohimer, said Rugendorf, had come to him after the Percy slaying and said he wanted to "go straight" because he couldn't "take the corroborate this?" Petacque asked.

"Yeah," said Rugendorf. "Hohimer's brother."
Harold "Wayne" Hohimer's whereabouts were unknown, however. And the most determined manhunt of Petacque's long newspaper years had failed to track him down.

During his search, the 49-

"He was talking about the Valerie Percy thing," said Wayne.

year-old veteran reporter made contact with many of Wayne Hohimer's friends and acquaintances. Word eventually reached him that Petacque was looking for him. He asked around about the reporter, wanting to know what kind of man he was. Among those he asked was an agent for the Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Division of the U.S. Treasury Department who had once done him a favor and who knew Petacque. Yeah, said the agent, talk to Petacque.

Petacque got the call in November, 1973. Wayne Hohimer came to the office for a taped interview by Petacque and fellow Sun-Times reporter Hugh Hough.

Wayne said he had seen his brother in a tavern the day after the murder and Frank had been "real nervous and uptight." Frank told his brother he had killed a girl because she had "made a lot of noise and they got in a fight." Wayne asked what burglary he was talking about, and Frank said, "It's all in the newspapers and on the radio today."

"He was talking about the Valerie Percy thing," said Wayne.

The reporters took Wayne to confront his brother in an low prison where Frank was serving a 30-year term in an unrelated case. Frank denied any part in the break-in or killing, or ever telling his brother he had taken part. Frank said Miss Percy had been killed by Frederick Malchow, another member of the gang who had died in 1967

VA won't pay leukemia victim

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Paul Cooper is dying of leukemia. His doctors say it's because he stood unprotected about 3,000 yards from a nuclear test blast in the Nevada desert nearly 20 years ago.

But the Veterans Administration says the disease — which his doctors say will kill him any day — was not caused by radiation from the blast. It has turned down Cooper's request for $820 a month in disability pay.

He said he wants the disability rating so he can ensure education benefits for his wife and three children after he dies.

Cooper, 43, was one of 1,104 troops assigned to the test on Aug. 31, 1957, at Yucca Flats, Nev.

An Army report says the purpose of the exercise, dubbed "Smoky," was to test soldiers' reactions to the blast, which was equivalent to 44,000 tons of TNT, about twice the size of the nuclear devices that devastated Hiroshima and Nagasaki in the waning days of World War II.

The Army report also says that none of the soldiers involved was closer than eight miles from ground zero. But an Atomic Energy Commission news release issued prior to the test said the troops would be stationed in protective trenches as close as 4,500 yards to ground zero.

Cooper, a 20-year Army veteran from Emmett, Idaho, was told he had the disease in early 1976, and has since been treated for acute myelogenous leukemia at a VA hospital here.

The VA says his radiation exposure was slight and even if it had been sufficient to cause leukemia, it would have occurred long ago.

Then a sergeant with the 82nd Airborne Division at Ft. Bragg, N.C., Cooper said in an interview Tuesday that he was in a company of 250 men who were marched to a trench which Atomic Energy Commission monitors told them was 3,000 yards south of a 700-foot steel tower containing the nuclear device.

But a shift in wind direction forced the monitors, clad in white protective clothing and masks, to move Cooper's company to a hillside about 3,000 yards west of the tower. There was no protective trench at the new location, he said.

Dressed in fatigues and without protective masks, he said, they were told to face away from the tower with their hands over their eyes.

When the device was detonated, Cooper said, he could see the bones in his hands "like an X-ray," even though his eyes were closed.

"The heat was quite intense and almost unbearable for 10 to 20 seconds. We were then told to turn around. We did, and watched the fireball rise into the sky," he said.

The resulting shock waves knocked Cooper and most of the others to the ground.

Easter egg hunt Sunday

The Pampa Jaycees annual Easter egg hunt will be at 2 p.m. Sunday in Central Park, according to Charles McKinney, committee chairman.

McKinney said there will be two divisions — ages six and under and ages 7 to 12.

The event is open to the public at no charge. Eggs and prizes are donated by local merchants, McKinney said.

Cheerleading camp in June on PSU campus

Area cheerleaders are eligible to attend a cheerleading camp slated for Panhandle State University.

The National Cheerleader Association of Dallas recently announced the clinic, scheduled for June 26-30 at the Goodwell, Oklahoma college.

According to Lawrence R. Herkimer, director, qualified instructors will teach latest cheerleading methods, new yells and tumbling.

Total cost of the clinic is $60 per person with housing in dormitory-type rooms at the university. Students desiring to commute will be charged $35. Cheerleaders will be chaperoned by university staff members. Meals will be served in the college dining room.

Further information and brochures may be obtained by writing the Office of Public Relations, Panhandle State University, Goodwell, Okla. 79309.

USDA predicts higher cattle prices in fall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Market prices of grain-fed cattle may rise to their highest levels in almost two years by this fall, according to Agriculture Department livestock experts.

The department said Tuesday that in the third quarter of this year prices for choice-grade steers on the Omaha, Neb., market are forecast to market $42 to $44 per 100 pounds, up from $39 to $41 now expected during the April-June quarter. That would put prices next fall at their highest average since the fourth quarter of 1975.

Hog prices were projected to average $39 to $41 per hundred weight in the third quarter, up from $35 to $37 this spring. However, hog prices still will be less than they were during most of last year.

New technique fights cancer with blood cells

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — A safe, simple, inexpensive method of harvesting white blood cells needed to save the lives of thousands of cancer patients has been developed by a Pennsylvania doctor.

The technique can get billions more of a donor's white blood cells than the previous method and can be used safely in any hospital or blood bank, said its originator, Dr. Isaac Gjerassi, a blood specialist with Mercy Catholic Hospital in Darby, Pa.

It is a development of "the first order of significance" said Dr. Frank J. Rauscher Jr., senior vice president for research of the American Cancer Society.

Some persons undergoing treatment for cancer need white blood cell transfusions because anti-cancer drugs often disable a body's machinery for making the cells, which fight infections.

Current harvesting of the cells requires machines costing $17,500 to $40,000. A donor is hooked to the system, which can separate white cells and return the red blood cells to the donor.

Perhaps 100,000 cancer patients a year need this white cell protection, but only a small percentage get it, Gjerassi said. Easy availability of the cells also could permit wider use of effective anti-cancer drugs, he added.

In addition, the process could be important for persons whose white cells were depleted by other diseases or for persons receiving transplanted organs and taking drugs that affect natural defenses against infections.

Gjerassi explained the system this way: A pint of blood is taken from a donor. The blood is spun in a centrifuge that pulls out plasma and the platelets that help make blood clot.

Then the remaining red and white cells are suspended in a saline solution along with a starch that acts as a plasma expander. This mixture is let alone for 10 to 15 minutes. Red cells gravitate to the bottom of the container, while white cells float to the top.

The red cells are drained and mixed with the plasma, previously recovered, and transfused back into the donor. This person, enriched again with red cells, immediately can donate another pint of blood.

This process, which doesn't need a doctor's supervision, collects about 80 per cent of the donor's white cells, compared with 20 to 40 per cent efficiency in the automated machines, said Gjerassi.

Fit for a queen

Royal touch-up is applied by Mrs. Winnie Mills to a life-size glass fiber model of Queen Elizabeth II. Created by a London firm, the models are being produced for local government units and other organizations for use in celebrations of the sovereign's silver jubilee. Basic models carry a price tag of $391; full costume complete with tiara runs the bill up to $1,071.

Rent-free print show 'shocks' GOP leader

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republican Leader John J. Rhodes says he is "shocked" to find that two congressional clerks, including one technically appointed by him, are running $1-million-a-year print shops rent-free on the Capitol grounds.

"This is one of the archaisms around this place that need to be re-examined and changed," Rhodes said through a spokesman.

"It's clear that some other arrangement is necessary because I don't approve of Congress subsidizing these people," Rhodes was reacting Wednesday to disclosures that clerks Thomas Lankford and David Ramage reap substantial profits and salaries from their privately owned print shops, in addition to the nearly $15,000-a-year salaries they each receive from the taxpayers.

Their print shops, which grind out millions of newsletters, press releases and political handbills at bargain rates for members of Congress, get free space in the basement garage of the Rayburn House Office Building. They also get free utilities, delivery service and local telephone service.

Taxpayers' funds are used to pay a large part of the congressmen's printing costs. Each House member is allotted $5,000 to communicate with constituents, and in 1976 the House paid a total of $1.25 million to the clerks' firms for members' private printing bills.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill made no negative comments about the subsidies when questioned by reporters. He said he had used their services himself. "I'll look into it," he said, after a reporter pointed out that Lankford got a bigger salary from his business than O'Neill's own $75,000 yearly House salary.

Rhodes said he would meet with the House GOP leaders after the Easter recess "to decide what our alternatives are."

Rep. William Ketchum, R-Calif., said he favors throwing the print shop concessions open to public bidding.

To challenge RR commission

WICHITA FALLS, Tex. (AP) — The authority of the Texas Railroad Commission to set certain rates that Lone Star Gas Co. can charge to the cities will be challenged, according to the North Texas Utility Advisory Board.

The board made the Wednesday after a meeting here with representatives of six cities served by the Dallas-based utility company. The cities are Wichita Falls, Wellington, Iowa Park, Electra, Vernon and Dodson. There was no indication of when the motion will be presented in Austin.

Reason for crash unknown

BORGER — The pilot of a Cessna crop dusting plane which crashed on take-off from the Hutchinson County Airport Wednesday was listed in serious condition in the intensive care unit of Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo this morning.

George Ferris, 43, owner of the Ferris Flying Service in Memphis, reportedly had taken the plane to Borger for repairs, had picked it up and was on his way home when the crash occurred.

Hutchinson County Sheriff

Lon Blackman said it was his understanding that "he (Ferris) had his aircraft over there to a new motor put in."

The sheriff said the plane crashed "about 8:58 a.m."

Ferris' mother-in-law, contacted in Memphis, said Ferris had taken his plane to Hutchinson Aircraft Inc. for repair work.

"They were replacing an engine for him," she said. "Just as he took off, they heard it quit, but they didn't see it fall."

T.B. Potter, spokesman for Hutchinson Aircraft Inc., said this morning he "really didn't know" why the Ferris plane was in Borger.

"He was picking the airplane up and was going home in it," Potter said. "None of us saw it (the crash)."

Ferris was taken to North Plains Hospital in Borger for treatment before he was transferred to Amarillo.

Federal Aviation Administration investigators are expected in Borger today to determine the cause of the crash.

Ferris' plane was totalled in the wreck.

Dairy judges place third

Two Pampa High School Future Farmer of America placed in a district break-down of a livestock judging contest at West Texas State University Saturday, but failed to finish near the top in area tabulations.

The three-member dairy judging team ended the competition with 648 points to place third among teams from this district. Team members were Marvin Daugherty, Regina Benyshek and Vickie Burke. The area's winning dairy team was Plainview with 791 points.

Livestock judges Chris Skaggs, Kevin George and Ronnie Hill had 1,157 points for a fourth place finish in the district listing. District and area winner was Gruver with 1,313 points.

Towns in this district include Allison, Booker, Briscoe, Canadian, Darrowzett, Follett, Gruver, McLean, Mobeetie, Pampa, Perryton, Shamrock, Spearman, Wheeler and White Deer.

The contest at WTSU attracted 106 livestock teams, 80 dairy teams and 56 meat teams. A Pampa FFA meats team failed to place in area or district competition.

The teams were accompanied by Bob Skaggs and Randy Williams, agriculture teachers, and Steve Anderson, student teacher from Texas Tech University in Lubbock.

The next judging competition will be April 23 at Texas Tech University.

Palestinian guerrillas claim win in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Palestinian guerrillas said today they have captured another major Christian stronghold in southeast Lebanon behind a heavy barrage of rockets and artillery.

A communique said guerrillas and their Lebanese Moslem allies stormed into the town of Kham, four miles from Israel's northeastern tip, in a surprise attack before dawn. "Dozens" of Christian militiamen were killed or wounded, the communique said.

The fall of Kham threatened the last two Christian strongholds in southeast Lebanon, the garrison towns of Qlaiaa and Marjayoun.

"Total control was established over Kham. All pockets of resistance have been mopped up," the Palestinian communique said.

Kham, a town of 5,000, was taken by right-wing Christian forces in December in an Israeli-backed campaign to clear the Lebanese-Israeli border region of Palestinians. The region was the main base for guerrilla operations against Israel until the Lebanese civil war in 1975 pulled the Palestinians north to fight alongside the leftist Lebanese Moslems.

Palestinian sources said the guerrillas launched a three-prong advance on Marjayoun, six miles north of the Israeli panhandle and three miles northwest of Kham. The communique said Marjayoun was "under intense bombardment."

Yasir Arafat's Fatah guerrillas were reported getting artillery support from the Saiga Palestinian guerrillas whom Syria controls.

Witnesses reported that Saiga units moved artillery and multiple rocket launchers by truck convoy into the town of Nabatiyeh.

Soviets weren't surprised

WASHINGTON (AP) — Suggesting the Soviets should not have acted so surprised, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said Wednesday they had at least a week's advance notice of the U.S. arms curb proposals they rejected last week.

Vance made the comment to reporters after giving a secret briefing to the House International Relations Committee.

"The Soviets had advance notice of at least a week on the essential details of our proposals," he said, "and on the general over-all shape of our proposal they had notice well in advance of that."

Some members of Congress have praised the U.S. arms proposal for U.S.-Soviet equality in numbers of nuclear weapons, but questioned the tactic of confronting the Soviets with the proposals in public last week.

Two members of the House committee said Vance told them U.S. negotiators supplied the Soviets with essential details on what the proposals would be through Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

The U.S. proposals were to cut nuclear missiles, bombers and multiple warheads to equal numbers for both sides and put a freeze on any further development of nuclear weapons.

The proposals also would have limited the greater destructive power of Soviet missiles and limited the range of U.S. cruise missiles.

Vance said the Soviets offered no specific objection during the talks except that they considered the U.S. proposals "one-sided," a characterization Soviet leaders have been making publicly since.

Match play causes fire

Children playing with matches were believed to be the cause of a fire in a small house behind 823 E. Kingsmill Wednesday.

A Pampa Fire Department spokesman said there was light damage to the floor.

Names in the news

LONDON (AP) — Jamaican reggae star Bob Marley, fined for possession of marijuana, said he has smoked it for four or five years "because I don't drink."

Marley, 31, and his lead guitarist, Aston Barrett, were charged with possession of marijuana March 10. Barrett, 31, was charged after police found a marijuana cigarette in his sock when police searched the musicians.

Marley was fined $85 Wednesday and Barrett $42.50.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sandy Hill, a former beauty queen and television news-woman for 7 1/2 years in Seattle and Los Angeles, will be the new co-host of ABC's "Good-Morning America" program April 25.

Miss Hill, 30, a native of Centralia, Wash., won a Miss Washington state beauty contest in 1966. She entered television in Seattle in 1969, moved here to become the first woman to co-anchor a nightly news program and joined KABC-TV last year.

Miss Hill, married to a banker, replaces Nancy Dussault, who is resigning to resume her theatrical career.

NAPLES, Fla. (AP) — The local chapter of the American Cancer Society said Wednesday it doesn't want the $100,000 that a promoter said would be raised in a race featuring the President's chain-smoking brother Billy.

D.L. Stoneburner, a local businessman, said he paid $10,000 to have Billy Carter attend a swamp buggy race for the cancer society during Carter's visit here April 21-23.

"Because of the political overtones of Carter's scheduled appearance, it was felt best to withdraw cancer society recognition," said David Shanard, president of the Collier County chapter.

Billy Carter said during a recent interview that he smokes six packs of cigarettes a day but doesn't worry about the hazards.

NEW YORK (AP) — Steven Ford, son of former President Gerald R. Ford, will serve as an analyst when CBS airs the Professional Rodeo Cowboy's Association "Rodeo Invitational" from Red Bluff, Calif.

The network announced Wednesday that the program will be telecast April 30.

Ford, who studies animal husbandry at California Polytechnic State University, has studied with Casey Tibbs, nine-time world championship bronco rider. Ford has limited experience as a rider.

16 major league teams open today

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The first hit of John Montefusco today will not be a blow to his ego, but to his pride as well. The San Francisco pitcher who believes he can do anything will try to do something only one person has ever done in baseball — pitch two consecutive no-hitters.

"I'd really like to pitch another no-hitter because I may never get the chance again to throw two in a row," Montefusco said as he prepared to pitch the Giants' opening game against the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Montefusco, a swaggering right-hander who pitches as good a game as he talks, hurled a no-hitter against the Atlanta Braves in his final appearance of 1976 — losing a perfect game by walking a batter in the fourth inning.

If Montefusco manages to hold the Dodgers hitless in today's game at Los Angeles, it will match Johnny Vander Meer's golden accomplishment of 1938, when he pitched consecutive no-hitters against the old Boston Braves and Brooklyn Dodgers.

Montefusco, a 16-game winner last season, is matched against Don Sutton, the Dodgers' 21-game winner of 1976. A year ago in their opener at San Francisco, the Giants beat the Dodgers with the same pitchers starting.

The game is one of eight baseball openers on the second day of the major league season.

Elsewhere, it's St. Louis at Pittsburgh and New York at Chicago in National League inaugurals. In the American League, Chicago will be at Toronto, Kansas City at Detroit, Texas at Baltimore, Milwaukee at New York and Cleveland at Boston.

In Wednesday's traditional opener at Cincinnati, the Reds defeated the San Diego Padres 5-3. In the American League season opener Wednesday night, the California Angels spoiled the debut of the expansion Seattle Mariners with a 7-0 victory.

Cesar Geronimo smashed a two-run homer and Ken Griffey drilled three hits as Cincinnati roughed up 1976 Cy Young winner Randy Jones. The chilly season opener attracted 51,937 at Riverfront Stadium despite a three-inch snowfall prior to the game and temperatures which dropped to 14 degrees with the wind-chill factor.

Veteran left-hander Woodie Fryman, the National League's oldest starter at 36, survived a shaky start to win his first outing with the Reds.

Fryman walked six in 5-1-3 innings, while giving up three runs and seven hits.

Southpaw Frank Tanana scattered nine hits and Joe Rudi drove in four runs with a home run and a double, leading California over Seattle. The record Kingdome crowd of 57,762, which welcomed big league baseball back to Seattle, included Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and American League President Lee MacPhail.

The 23-year-old Tanana, a 19-game winner in 1976, was in trouble only in the eighth inning. Rudi, one of three high-priced free agents acquired by California during the off-season, collected three hits for the Angels.

Rookie managers will be starting on both sides in the Los Angeles-San Francisco game. Tom Lasorda has replaced Walter Alton as the new Dodgers' field boss and Joe Altobelli is the new Giant manager, taking over Bill Rigney's job.

Two new pilots and some new styles are featured in the St. Louis-Pittsburgh contest.

Vern Rapp has taken over for Red Schoendienst at St. Louis and has brought a new face to the colorful Cardinals with his orders to remove all beards and mustaches. Chuck Tanner, replacing the late Danny Murtaugh at Pittsburgh, is managing in the National League for the first time and his Pirates are billed as "Lumber and Lightning" — a tribute to their hitting and speed.

Rapp has nominated John Denny, the NL's earned run average king last year, to pitch against Pittsburgh's Jerry Reuss.

Tom Seaver makes his 10th straight opening-day start for the Mets. The New York ace has never lost in that role, with five victories and four no-decisions. Herman Franks, making his debut as the Chicago manager, nominated Ray Burris to face Seaver in the Wrigley Field opener.

Major league baseball makes its debut in Toronto with the Blue Jays hosting the White Sox before an expected crowd of 45,000, among them Kuhn and MacPhail, who flew overnight from Seattle for the opener.

Bill Singer, leader of the Toronto pitching staff, has the opening-day assignment against Chicago's Ken Brett. The game will be played in Exhibition Stadium, home of the Canadian Football League's Toronto Argonauts. The stadium was refurbished for baseball at a cost of nearly $18 million.

Kansas City, the defending American League West champion, opens with Paul Splittorff against Detroit's Dave Roberts at Tiger Stadium, where a crowd of 54,000 is expected. No doubt many of those tickets were sold anticipating the appearance of Detroit's Rookie of the Year Mark Fidrych, but Fidrych tore knee cartilage in spring training.

Texas Manager Frank Lucchesi, recovering from a beating administered by second baseman Lenny Randle, rejoins his Rangers for their opener at Baltimore. Bert Blyleven starts for Texas against Baltimore's Cy Young winner, Jim Palmer.

The New York Yankees send Catfish Hunter against Milwaukee's Jim Slaton. Both teams have expensive free agents in their lineups — with Reggie Jackson ($2.9 million) patrolling right field for the defending AL champion Yankees and Sal Bando ($1.4 million) at third base for the Brewers.

Ferguson Jenkins has been nominated to pitch the opener for Boston against Cleveland's Dennis Eckersley. A crowd of 35,000 is expected at Boston's Fenway Park.

Besides the openers Thursday, California will play the second of its five-game series at Seattle with Nolan Ryan going for the Angels against Mariners rookie Enrique Romo.

Weight entrant

Charles Copeland will be among Pampa's entrants in Friday and Saturday's North Plains Relays in Dumas. Copeland will throw the shot put and discus in the field events, which begin at 12 noon Friday. The running event preliminaries also start at 12 noon. (Pampa News photo)

Rockets nab title

By The Associated Press

This season, when someone asks Rudy Tomjanovich, "What's wrong with the Houston Rockets?" he can finally answer, "Nothing!"

"Every season I listen to 'What's wrong? What does the team need? Who will you draft? What are the problems?'" Tomjanovich said. "This year we're on top."

And a good share of the credit goes to Tomjanovich, who scored 28 points as Houston defeated the Boston Celtics 104-83 Wednesday night and clinched the National Basketball Association's Central Division title for the first time.

"It's like coming out of a cave for me," Tomjanovich continued. "It's a great team. We've had no problems all year. It's just all the guys put together. We go out and play tough. I can remember 10 or 12 games we've been out of and come back and win."

This wasn't one of them: the Rockets led most of the way. When the Celtics, led by John Havlicek, pulled within three points with just under nine minutes remaining, three points by Mike Newlin and Moses Malone's two free throws broke it open. Newlin finished with 21.

Havlicek, playing in his 14th pro season, broke the 25,000-point barrier with a lay-up midway through the second quarter. He entered the game with 24,994 points and scored 21 to become only the fourth NBA player to score 25,000 points. Wilt Chamberlain, Oscar Robertson and Jerry West are the others.

Houston had to win to clinch the title because the runner-up Washington Bullets edged the Chicago Bulls 97-96. Elsewhere, the San Antonio Spurs walloped the Philadelphia 76ers 131-109. The Denver Nuggets trounced the Atlanta Hawks 119-95 and the Buffalo Braves downed the New Orleans Jazz 107-102.

Bullets 97, Bulls 96

Dave Bing came off the bench to score 19 points and spark a fourth-quarter Washington surge that handed Chicago only its fourth defeat in the last 22 games. The Bullets overcame an 80-76 deficit and built a 97-90 lead with 48 seconds to play, but Chicago scored the game's last six points. Elvin Hayes, who also had 19 points for the Bullets, missed three free throws with four seconds to go, giving the Bullets the game's last shot, but Norm Van Lier missed an off balance 15-footer at the buzzer.

Spurs 131, 76ers 109

Larry Kenon scored 31 points and grabbed 14 rebounds to lead San Antonio. Kenon helped the Spurs to a 35-26 first-period lead with 12 points and was assisted later by Billy Paultz, who had 21 for the game.

Nuggets 110, Hawks 95

David Thompson scored 28 points as Denver won its fourth straight game and tied a 31-year-old NBA record with a 36-5 home mark. The Nuggets took the lead for good at 9:41 of the first quarter on a three-point play by Bobby Jones. By halftime it was 51-36.

Braves 107, Jazz 102

Randy Smith scored 13 of his 25 points in the fourth quarter as Buffalo erased an 11-point third-period deficit. Smith's jump shot with 23 seconds to go put the Braves ahead to stay.

ing champion Raymond Floyd, Hubert Green, Al Geiberger, Tom Watson and Hale Irwin. Young phenoms such as Ben Crenshaw, Bruce Lietzke and Mark Hayes. Foreign stars such as Gary Player of South Africa and David Graham and Graham Marsh of Australia. Even players battling nagging injuries, such as Johnny Miller and Jerry Pate. And, of course, four-time Masters champion Arnold Palmer, in a class by himself.

But none of the players was ignoring Weiskopf. Although he hasn't made much noise this season, he's been playing pretty well — third at Doral, in the top 12 four other times. And he plays very well at Augusta, having finished second a record four times — to Nicklaus in 1972 and 75, to Player in 1974 and to George Archer in 1969.

Also, it doesn't hurt to card scores like the 30 he shot on the back nine Sunday or the 31 he scored on the front side Monday in practice.

"I don't pay any attention to practice," he was quick to point out. "This is a completely different golf course when the tournaments start."

At age 34, the native of Columbus, Ohio, has won 11 tour events plus the 1973 British Open and accumulated $1.4 million in earnings during his 12 years on the tour. Those are star statistics.

At a lean, ramrod-straight 6-foot-3 with possibly the finest swing in the game, he projects an almost regal presence on the golf course. Those are star qualities.

But he's a slightly tarnished star, due to being labeled temperamental. He says the tag is undeserved. He says he's merely forthright.

Stock contractor is W.R. and Bill Hext of Canadian and judges will be Ed Jessup and Steve Patterson, both of Amarillo. Ernie Messer of Amarillo will be the rodeo clown.

Pampans placing in a Tri-State rodeo in Happy over the weekend were Donna Baggett with a second in steer riding, Lesa Stewart with a fifth in breakaway roping, Regina Benyshek with a fifth in barrel racing and Jim Morrison with a sixth in bull riding.

Rangers to test vet Palmer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Jim Palmer, a 20-game winner in six of the past seven seasons, was in his familiar role as opening day pitcher when the Baltimore Orioles launched their American League season against the Texas Rangers.

With temperatures in the 50s, some 30 degrees cooler than last week, a crowd of 35,000 or more was expected at Memorial Stadium today for the 2 p.m. EST contest.

Palmer sought his fourth straight opening-day victory in a game involving two teams which had undergone major changes since last season. The Orioles finished 10½ games behind New York in the Eastern Division and Texas trailed Kansas City by 14 games in the West.

Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver begged off making any predictions about where the Orioles would finish — except in Boston on Oct. 2, as decreed by the schedule makers.

"We have seven rookies," Weaver said, "and we'll have to find out what they can do. But I think they proved in spring training that we'll be very competitive."

Weaver named three newcomers to the starting line-up, including rookie second baseman Rich Dauer, left fielder Pat Kelly, and rookie designated hitter Eddie Murray.

Dauer replaced Bobby Grich, a Gold Glove fielder who along with slugging outfielder Reggie Jackson and 20-game winner Wayne Garland were lost in the free agent bidding war following the 1976 season.

But despite the influx of rookies and a total of 14 players who were not on the 25-man roster at the start of last season, Baltimore still had a nucleus of veterans who figured to stabilize the club.

They included first baseman Lee May, the league's runs batted in champion of 1976, Gold Glove shortstop Mark Belanger, outfielder Ken Singleton, and Palmer, the league's Cy Young award winner in three of the past four seasons who was 22-13 last year.

Palmer's mound opponent, Bert Blyleven, was starting his first full season with the Rangers. The right-hander, obtained in a trade with Minnesota last June 1, had a combined 13-16 record despite a fine 2.78 earned run average.

Texas also has undergone a major upheaval since last year. The Rangers have 12 new players, including pitchers Darold Knowles and Roger Moret who currently are on the disabled list.

The only rookie on the roster is Bump Wills, a son of former National League star Maury Wills who has knocked Lenny Randle out of his starting job at second base.

Randle has been fined $10,000 and suspended 30 days by the Rangers for attacking Manager Frank Lucchesi last week during a dispute over his reserve role. He will be given a hearing in Baltimore Friday by a baseball arbitration board.

Cubans win 2nd game

HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — South Dakota basketball players representing the United States lost a two-game series with Communist Cuba but have made their mark in diplomatic history by leading the way to peace.

Their losses, 91-72 in Tuesday night's opener and 88-69 in Wednesday's farewell game, won the applause and respect of the Cubans who twice filled the 15,000-seat Coliseum and those who saw the game on national television.

"You've made a great contribution in the relations between two countries," Sen. George McGovern (D-S.D.) told coaches Gene Zulk of the South Dakota State Jackrabbits and Jack Doyle of the University of South Dakota Coyotes. "I saw the crowd's reaction."

The athletic exchange originated during a meeting here two years ago between McGovern and Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro. The two men saw the sports arena as a way to renew the relations which came to an end between the two countries on Jan. 3, 1961.

President Carter lifted a travel ban to Cuba last month and rescinded prerequisites before the U.S. could normalize relations with the country that lies only 90 miles from Florida.

A trade embargo still exists against Cuba, but McGovern said he looks "for a lifting of it in the near future. The embargo makes no sense."

Now it will be the Cubans turn to visit the United States.

Nicklaus tabbed Masters favorite

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Tom Weiskopf says he doesn't worry about how he plays, what the media thinks of him or the sudden emergence of challenging young players all around him on the pro golf tour.

It sounds almost as if the talented, outspoken Weiskopf isn't much concerned about how he fares in the Masters. But he is, and his fellow competitors are well aware of it.

Jack Nicklaus, a five-time winner here, was favored as the first of the season's four major golf championships opened today on the par-72, 7,030-yard Augusta National Golf Course. The 72-hole event concludes Sunday.

There were other top contenders in the field of 77, too. Proven winners such as defend-

Machine could detect cancer-prone cells

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
AP Science Editor
SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Automated cell-analyzing machines now under development may one day be able to tell you if you're being exposed to something that could lead to cancer, a California researcher says.

The machine would analyze body cells in blood or urine samples for any signs they were becoming cancerous, Dr. Mortimer Mendelsohn told an American Cancer Society seminar for science writers Tuesday.

A physician and biophysicist, he is associate director for biomedical and environmental research of the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory of the University of California.

Amnesty for illegal aliens a possibility

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top officials of the Carter administration, looking for ways to stop illegal aliens from entering the United States, are recommending amnesty for those who have been in the country for several years.

"There was universal agreement that we won't have a roundup," Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said Tuesday after a Cabinet committee met privately to discuss immigration proposals to present to the President.

Marshall said the group made no decisions on the length of residency it will require for persons receiving amnesty. He said aliens' employment history and record of tax payments would also be considered.

Other administration officials at the meeting were Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell, Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. and Undersecretary of State Warren Christopher.

Marshall said after the meeting officials don't know how many of the nation's estimated six million to eight million illegal aliens would qualify for amnesty under the proposal.

On the topic of preventing still more aliens from entering the country illegally, many of them from Mexico, Marshall said alternatives include a bigger budget for enforcement of immigration laws and "doing something" to prevent their employment.

He and Bell said the Cabinet committee reached no decision on whether to endorse possible legislation making it a crime for an employer knowingly to hire an illegal alien.

Keeping pace in the rat race

British break for fitness, not tea

EDITOR'S NOTE — Al Murray, a former Olympic coach, has turned his talents to the most unfit of all, the beleaguered British businessmen, and claims he can shape 'em up in less time than it takes to break for tea. And all that without undue demands on middle-aged flab. By HUGH A. MULLIGAN, AP Special Correspondent LONDON (AP) — What the ambitious, aggressive, anxiety-ridden businessman needs most this year, even more than a tax break, is just 40 minutes of exercise a week to keep pace in the rat race. "The typical time-addicted, successful executive is what we call an A-type person, a do-er and a go-getter and a prime candidate for a heart attack," said Al Murray, proprietor of the City Gym in the bowels of London's financial district where high-powered bankers, high-pressure American businessmen, puffing Members of Parliament and the likes of Sir Lawrence Olivier, Peter Sellers and John Fields, associate director of the Royal Ballet, turn up three times a week for 15-minute workouts.

Denis Howell, Britain's Minister for Sport and a former soccer referee, also is a regular at this sweat shop dedicated to reducing gray flannel flab with a minimum of time and effort.

Seven years ago, with research grants from the British Heart Foundation, the Sports Council and the Medical Research Council, Murray, a former Olympic coach and trained physiotherapist, and Dr. Malcolm Carruthers, a renowned biochemist, embarked on a study of unfit middle-aged business executives with the aim of determining the least amount of exercise needed to help them avoid a coronary.

The result is "f-40" — fitness on 40 minutes a week, a series of minimal exercises that can be done at home, without equipment, but designed to produce the maximum measurable results in lowering blood pressure, blood fats, cholesterol count and coagulating factors.

The British have been interested in executive blubber since a study of Her Majesty's civil servants some years back showed that those who participated in any kind of vigorous sports for even as little as a half-hour a week suffered one-third fewer heart attacks than their chairbound colleagues.

Research by the British Heart Foundation proved that anger, anxiety, aggressiveness, mental stress, frustration and similar emotions boiling under the executive bowler give the body a powerful shot of a hormone called noradrenaline. The hormone leads to the production of blood fats and eventual hardening of the arteries.

There are more cases of high blood pressure and heart condition among the executive class than any other," says Murray, who spent most of his life training Olympic athletes before opening his gym for sedentary office types in 1963. "It's not what they eat but what's eating them does the real damage."

The f-40 exercises, as performed at the City Gym and now outlined in a paperback booklet that has become a best seller, are vigorous enough to make the over-pressured management type work up a sweat and raise his pulse rate above 100.

Research on more than 300 brokers and bankers who pay $150 a year to attend the City Gym brought the happy news that beneficial effects of a brief but vigorous workout lasted for several days, even weeks.

Those who turned up twice, or preferably three times a week for the 14-to 20-minute sessions began to feel better and show marked reductions in blood pressure and blood fats in as little as six weeks. There also was a cutoff point beyond which too much exercise did more harm than good.

The program begins with simple mobility exercises, which cover the major muscles and joints, repeated 10 times in a quiet, unhurried manner. Keeping track of his pulse rate, this A-type exerciser moves on to a series of strength exercises, done with weights made at home by filling plastic detergent bottles with water or sand, and then to some light endurance exercises to strengthen the heart and lungs.

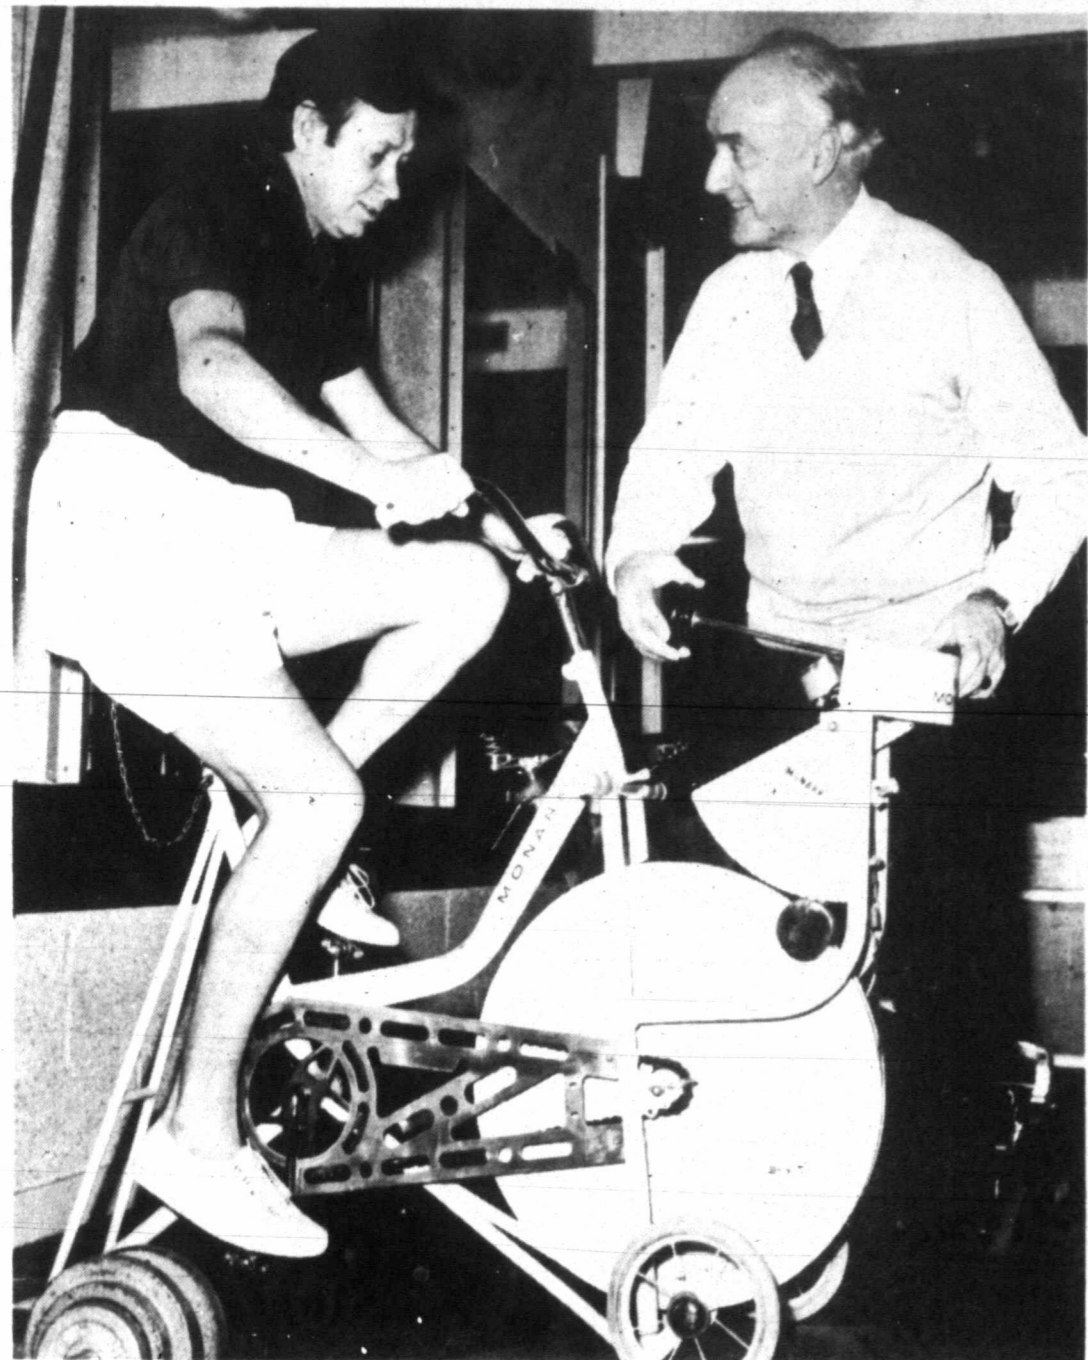

"Begin as if you were an unfit old lady, it's easier and safer to speed up as your level of fitness increases," advises the 62-year-old Scot, who for 20 years coached British national and olympic weightlifting teams. He starts off most of his charges with "a tire check," using "flab calipers" he designed to measure the rolls of fat around the executive middle.

Murray, who describes himself as an A-type person, "a driver and a work addict," was Scottish weightlifting champion at 19, no mean feat in a land where the laddies toss telegraph poles about the glens to work up a sweat. At 21, he set a British weightlifting record, then became a stage acrobat. He turned to physical education in the army when as an instructor he devised a program of exercises that made the ammunition handlers strong enough to pass the 56-pound shells for the newly-invented Vickers gun.

Now he has devoted his life to what he calls "keeping people medium fit." Women, including a lady M.P., come to the gym two days a week.

There is a sauna on the premises, but neither Murray nor Dr. Carruthers are sold on the rugged Finnish approach to fitness. "Research carried out at the City Gym," they warn, "has shown that the rapid heart rate and profound fall in blood pressure which result from prolonging a really hot sauna for much more than five minutes may well place a considerable strain on an unfit heart."

Workouts for executives

With the encouragement of gymnasium proprietor Al Murray, right, a client at the City Gymnasium in London works out on an exercise bicycle. Murray, a former Olympic coach, promotes exercise as a defense against heart attacks for middle-aged businessmen. And some high-powered disciples attend his gym — a unique sweat shop dedicated to reducing gray flannel flab with a minimum of time and effort.

Tire warranties changing

By LOUISE COOK, Associated Press Writer

If you slash your new tires on a broken soda bottle or a pot hole, you will find you're no longer protected by the road hazard guarantees which used to get you a replacement free or at reduced cost.

The major U.S. tire manufacturers have eliminated those guarantees, along with mileage guarantees for some types of tires. There are variations in policy from company to company.

Now the warranties include expanded guarantees against damage due to defects in workmanship or materials.

"We are assuring the quality of the tire, rather than insuring against what might happen to it," said a spokesman for Goodyear, the nation's biggest tire manufacturer.

Note: some companies still offer road hazard guarantees on some of their tires. A spokesman for Michelin, the French manufacturer, said the company still offered a road hazard guarantee on some models. You will have to read warranties carefully before you buy — to determine just what you are entitled to.

The road hazard guarantees used to apply when you struck an object in the street, tore open a tire against the curb or damaged it some other way. You paid only for mounting and balancing the replacement.

If you damage a tire now, you must have the tire repaired at your own expense or buy a new one.

The revisions involving workmanship and materials generally provide free replacement of radial tires and free mounting and balancing during the first 25 per cent of tread wear or the first 12 months of ownership, whichever comes first.

Bias-belted and bias-ply tires found defective will be replaced, mounted and balanced free during the first 10 per cent of tread wear.

Previously, the time limit on

The Congressional Medal of Honor, the nation's highest award for valor, was established during the Civil War. The first medal was awarded retroactively, to Army Lt. Bernard J. D. Irwin, for action in the Indian Wars.

Domestic airline fuel consumption will jump from 8.9 billion gallons in 1976 to 15.6 billion in 1980, according to a recent report by the Federal Aviation Administration.

defects was 180 days for all kinds of tires, with mounting and balancing cost extra.

The changes, which generally took effect Jan. 1, come as the government prepares to implement a program that would require manufacturers to attach to each tire the results of government tests on tread wear, traction and temperature resistance.

The program, proposed by the Department of Transportation, had been stalled by court challenges, but the U.S. Supreme Court ruled last month that the system should not be further delayed. Manufacturers will be required to comply sometime late this year.

The government estimates the plan will cost manufacturers $46 million a year and add 23 cents to the price of each of the 200 million tires bought every year. The manufacturers say the cost will be closer to $150 million a year.
