

City fears drinking water may not pass

By SHIRLEY ANDERSON
Pampa News Staff

City officials today expressed concern that Pampa's drinking water might not meet proposed state regulation revisions. City Manager Mack Wofford said his office recently was notified of new — and more stringent — standards to be preliminarily enforced in June.

It's the chloride regulation that concerns me, he said. The new standard is to be no more than 250 milligrams of chloride per liter of water. We're running more than that now.

He said lowering the chloride content of Pampa's city water would be financially impossible.

Revisions in standards are a result of a new law called the Safe Drinking Water Act. The national law calls for the Environmental Protection Agency to establish regulations, and these rules are to be enforced by state governments.

In Texas, enforcement is to be handled by the state Department of Health Resources.

Ron Freeman, TDHR regional engineer in Canyon, attended a recent public hearing in Lubbock concerning the new regulations.

Purpose of the hearing was to consider drinking water quality, Freeman said.

He described the hearing as uneventful. One speaker talked on compliance with the revised regulations, he said.

The American Water Works Association has prepared questions and answers to help consumers understand the new law and its provisions.

—What if a citizen doesn't like the odor or appearance of his water?

Answer: That's up to his state. The law's primary regulations are concerned with public health and are mandatory. But the rules about odor and appearance of drinking water are called "secondary regulations" and have to do with esthetic characteristics. These are only suggestions which the states can enforce if they want.

—Suppose a system runs up against shortages of necessary chemicals, such as chlorine?

Answer: EPA is authorized to issue certifications of need and to direct suppliers to deliver needed chemicals to water systems.

—Suppose a system wants to comply with the law but can't?

Answer: The law provides for two exception circumstances called "variances" and "exceptions."

—What's a variance?

Answer: It's official permission from the state or EPA to be out of compliance with some of the regulations so long as this doesn't result in "unreasonable risk to health."

For instance, if a water source is so good it doesn't need all the treatments that may be required, the system can apply for and receive a variance so it won't have to do the things that aren't really necessary.

On the other hand, the raw water may be so poor that even the best available technology won't bring it up to snuff. That can earn a variance ruling too, until scientists are able to figure out new methods or materials that solve the problem. Systems will be required to notify customers of variances at least every three months as long as they remain in effect.

—What's an exemption?

Answer: This can be granted to systems finding themselves unable to meet contaminant level or treatment technique requirements because of compelling reasons, including economic factors. No exemption can be granted that might result in unreasonable health risks. Exemptions carry a specific time limit. The state must prescribe a schedule to correct the situation and public hearings are required.

Wofford said that if Pampa's drinking water should fail to comply with revised chlorine content regulations, the city will ask for a variance or exemption.

Our water passed EPA preliminary standards a year ago, he said. Whether it will meet requirements of the revisions, we'll just have to wait and see.

Trustees buy insurance for PHS football team

By JANE P. MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff

Ed Lehnick, Pampa school district athletic director, fought to breathe life into an addition to the football program Monday.

He won the battle for football insurance which will cost about $3,500, but not without disagreement among the seven board members.

The group met at 4 p.m. in Carver Center, 321 W. Albert.

"Why don't the players buy their own insurance? It's not required," Bob Lyle asked.

"Insurance is a social service and we're in the education business," Al Smith commented.

"What if we bought insurance and said the school district is not responsible for any costs above what the insurance pays?" Paul Simmons questioned.

Curt Beck reported that schools are not liable for athletic injuries according to state law.

In previous years, the school had paid costs of injuries not paid by parents' insurance. Lehnick said this year the cost will be more than $6,000 because of three players who were completely uninsured. The school currently carries $500 deductible major medical for football players.

Several board members questioned whether buying $30 insurance for football players at Pampa High School would eliminate the problem.

"I think this is the only sensible thing for the school district to do," Lehnick answered. "I don't think you can afford not to do this, but I don't see where it would be fair to make students in football pay $38 when all other athletic students pay $8."

It is buying the school district protection against medical bills.

Buddy Epperson moved to buy the plan. Voting with him were David Crossman, Beck, Lyle and Bill Arrington, board president.

Opposing the plan were Simmons and Smith.

The request was to offer accident insurance to all students at a cost of $24 for 24-hour coverage all year or $8 for at school and school-sponsored activities coverage. This cost would be paid by parents.

A third option would include $30 for varsity football coverage. This would be paid by the school.

The plan would replace the school's major medical insurance.

Lehnick reported to the board that the additional cost of the new plan could be paid from the athletic budget because "I plan to ask the school to get out of the physical exam business." Previously the school has paid for the exams for athletes.

In other action before retiring to executive session to discuss personnel, the board —agreed to pay the City of Pampa $2,000 toward an aerial photography project which will cost $6,200. The photography would be used by the tax office.

—spent $3,506.80 for materials and equipment for the basic mathematics program in the elementary school. Thirty cassette recorders with headsets and other accessories will be purchased.

—okayed the purchase of a programmable calculator and accessories for $2,995 for the new computer math program which will affect 27 teachers.

—tabled a bid for more than $5,000 worth of equipment for metal trades. Cost to the school district would have been close to $2,000.

Simmons criticized the bid request, asking that a little more thought go into the presentation.

"Metal trades is one of the more applicable vocational programs we have for the community," Smith commented.

"We're doing a good job in training but I think that in presenting these things (bids) we need to have things in a way so we'll know how they are used in a program. I'm not willing to be rushed. I want to be able to make a decision correctly from a business standpoint."

—buy $9,385 in cafeteria equipment. Items include six heated mobile cabinets, a 40 cubic foot holding freezer, a gas range, a gas fryer, utility dish truck, bake table with bins, dishwasher and stainless steel cabinet top.

—accept all budgetary amendments. "We can make this adjustment and still be balanced budget," Dwan Walker, business manager reported.

—adopt section B of the revised policy manual dealing with local school governance.

Walker, reporting on the status of the budget, said no unexpected categories were overspent at present.

Board members approved bills which included $60 for post holes, $96.21 for junior high school maps, $1,276.76 for drafting equipment, $14,102.12 for IBM typewriters and other equipment, $150 for physicals, $291.79 for ENMU drama festival, $11,374.91 for February gas bill, $6 for Spudnuts for cafeteria meetings, $1,478.25 for student scheduling data processing and $272 for golf balls.

A new basketball coach was the topic of the executive session. The board is developing a list of those to be interviewed. Bob Phillips, superintendent, said that no time limit has been set on applications.

Twenty-one men have applied for the job. All trustees attended the meeting in Carver Center, 321 W. Albert. The next meeting will be at 7 a.m. May 2 in the center.

House bolsters three Rs

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A "back to basics" or "three Rs" amendment cleared the House today as legislators entered their fifth day of debate on a bill increasing the state's share of Foundation School Program costs.

Representatives approved 73-70 an amendment by Rep. Al Brown, D-San Antonio, ordering the Texas Education Agency to set proficiency standards in reading, writing and arithmetic for graduating seniors as well as younger pupils. Brown said his amendment would do away with social promotion.

The fact of the matter is a high school diploma in many cases is nothing more than proof of an attendance record, Brown said.

The school finance bill already has an "accountability" section directing the Texas Education Agency to develop goals, and Brown said his amendment would "put teeth in it." Rep. Dan Kubak, D-Rockdale, objected that the way to improve Texas pupils, showing on standardized tests was to lower teacher-pupil ratios and eliminate some of the subjects mandated by past legislatures.

In Monday's floor session, representatives rejected, 80-66, an amendment by Rep. Luther Jones, D-El Paso, that would have shifted the bill's emphasis from tax relief to equalization of poor with rich districts.

Johnson convicted in marijuana case

John Andrew Johnson II was convicted Monday afternoon of possession of more than four ounces of marijuana, sentenced to five years, probation, and fined $500 by 31st District Judge Grainger McIlhenny.

In other district court proceedings Monday and this morning, William D. Powell entered a plea of guilty on a delivery of marijuana charge. He was sentenced to five years, probation, 15 days confinement, and a $500 fine.

Dean Albin Smith and Charles Kent Romines entered guilty pleas to burglary of Pampa High School and the judge took into consideration two other burglary charges against the two men when passing sentence. Romines and Smith each were sentenced to seven years probation, $750 fine, and 15 days confinement to be served after school has been dismissed for the summer.

Julian Victor Gaona pleaded guilty to carrying a prohibited weapon on a premises licensed for the sale of alcoholic beverages. He was sentenced to five years in the Texas Department of Corrections.

Conley Bowles was sentenced to serve 90 days confinement in the Gray County Jail and fined $750 after pleading guilty to a charge of burglary of a vehicle.

Three persons charged with crimes did not appear in court and Judge McIlhenny ordered their bonds forfeited: James Otis Williams, Jimmy Wayne Cook, and Dollie Dorman Dement.

A jury trial is set to begin on Thursday for Chris Ward Kelly who is charged with burglary. Judge McIlhenny said.

The state was represented in all cases by Harold Comer, district attorney.

In Judge Don Hinton's Gray County Court today, five persons each were sentenced to 30 days in jail, probation to six months, and fined $200 and costs on charges of driving while intoxicated.

Entering pleas of guilty to the DWI charges were Ray Valdez Sanchez, 30, of Canadian; Bobby Gene Ensor, 42, of Skellytown; and Gary Dean Jones, 18, of Pampa.

Pleas of no contest were entered by Mark Elliot Curtis, 18, of Pampa, and R. y Newman, 65, of Amarillo.

County attorney David Martindale represented the state in the county court cases.

Court okays school spankings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Corporal punishment in public schools, no matter how severe, does not violate constitutional protections against cruel and unusual punishment, the Supreme Court ruled today.

In a 5-4 decision, the court said schoolchildren have no legal recourse when spanked or paddled by teachers and school administrators, even when the punishment is proven to be excessive.

The court majority said the Constitution's Eighth Amendment protection against cruel and unusual punishment applies only to those persons convicted of a crime.

The prisoner and the schoolchild stand in wholly different circumstances, separated by the harsh facts of criminal conviction and incarceration, the majority opinion written by Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. said.

"We adhere to this long-standing limitation and hold that the Eighth Amendment does not apply to the paddling of children as a means of maintaining discipline in public schools," Powell said. Powell was joined by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Potter Stewart, Harry A. Blackmun and William H. Rehnquist.

Justices Byron R. White, William J. Brennan Jr., Thurgood Marshall and John Paul Stevens dissented.

The court's decision upheld a ruling by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals which handed a legal defeat to two Miami schoolboys who claimed their rights were violated during a "reign of terror" by school officials.

James Ingraham and Roosevelt Andrews, both 14-year-old students at Miami's Drew Junior High School in 1970, sued school officials after being spanked with a two-foot-long wooden paddle.

The two boys, represented in court by their parents, claimed the paddlings inflicted serious injuries and that the school officials illegally denied them some type of hearing before the paddlings.

The Supreme Court's decision said such hearings are not necessary before spankings are administered.

Powell's opinion noted the long history of corporal punishment's use in public schools, listing examples dating back to colonial days.

Today the court holds that corporal punishment in public schools, no matter how severe, can never be the subject of protections afforded by the Eighth Amendment. White said in writing for the dissenters.

White said he could not agree with the ruling "because I believe that these holdings are inconsistent with the prior decisions of this court and are contrary to a reasoned analysis of the constitutional provisions involved."

IRS and legal boundaries

Tucked away in the Tax reform Act of 1976 — which, more accurately, would be titled a "tax raise act" — is an obscure provision that by some imponderable twist of Potomac providence, works out in favor of the put upon folks who are squeezed turnip — dry every year by the IRS.

The helpful provisions of the latest law require IRS investigators to follow due judicial process, specifically, they require IRS sleuths to obtain court ordered subpoenas in order to snatch taxpayers' financial records.

Moreover, under the law the IRS is legally bound to give notice to individuals under investigation. Heretofore, the federal tax collectors have been able to seize papers and property merely on their own say so.

A few bold souls objected, and in a number of instances, received the backing even of tax-supported judges, so great was the outrage against the veridictums of Anglo-American legal heritage. Even so, the IRS using provocation and intimidation, was triumphant in most such encounters.

The extent of such high handed practices came to light in Senate hearings prior to passage of the 1976 "reform" — the consequence of which was that provisions were enacted that made government investigators subject to civil suits by taxpayers in certain instances. Among these is the situation wherein a federal prober reveals the contents of an individual tax return to an unauthorized person. In addition, the 1976 act set up a criminal penalty against federal agents for unauthorized disclosure — a fine up to $5,000 and a prison term up to five years.

So, guess what happened when the Carter team ascended to the four-year throne? Yep, newly installed Attorney General Griffin Bell wrote a letter to the House Ways and Means Committee in which tax legislation originates. He addressed another letter to Senator Russell Long of the Senate Finance Committee. In both letters he asked that the taxpayer protective provisions of the new law be repealed.

The real capper came however, when Bell's associate attorney general, Michael Hagan, suggested that the repeal should be accomplished by tacking an amendment onto President Carter's proposed $50 rebate. Pending outright repeal, the Justice Department asked for a delay in enforcement of the protective provisions so that the IRS could keep on doing what it had been doing all along — that is, seizing papers and property at its own discretion.

At any rate, the moves pretty well explode the theory that the IRS can be contained within the bounds of co-existence with a free society. The alternate theory remains the IRS goes or freedom goes.

Cancer scare tactics hurt

Coming on the heels of a rash of governmental bannings of various drugs and other products — saccharin, cyclamates, laetrile, beta blocker heart disease treatment drugs, aerosol sprays, and tris treated fire retardant children's sleep wear, to name six that have been much in the news recently, a speech by Dr. E. Cuyler Hammond, vice president of the American Cancer Society and a cancer research expert comes like a breath of long-awaited fresh air.

No doubt sensing that irresponsible scare tactics with respect to cancer are beginning to adversely affect contributions for cancer research, as well as public enthusiasm for such efforts, Dr. Hammond warned a seminar of science writers gathered at Sarasota, Florida, that scare tactics, too often based on little more than theory, could hurt the real war on cancer.

Pointing out that scare tactics have caused people to fear and avoid products later provided to be not guilty of causing the dread disease, Dr. Hammond said that "Some people are alarmed to a far greater degree than is warranted by evidence that is now at hand, about possible cancer causing agents in the environment. They fear to eat anything but natural food grown without man-made fertilizers and insecticides, and with nothing added later."

Continuing in the same vein, the American Cancer Society executive noted that persons taking scare campaigns at their face value tend to think air pollution will cause them to die of cancer, will contact with manifold products of industry. Consequently he said, they do not ask, "What is harmful?" they ask, "What if anything is safe?"

Suggesting that the American Cancer Society would have nothing to do with irresponsible scare tactics, Hammond told the assembled writers that "We will get nowhere in overcoming cancer without long-term public support, not just in money, but in attitudes. With numerous warnings being issued about things deemed unsafe, the cancer research specialist said, a growing number of people are becoming annoyed, if not angry, about the whole affair. They ask, 'What are they going to prohibit next, sex?'"

It is not our object to frighten people," Hammond emphasized in conclusion, "it is not our object to put people out of work, and it is certainly not our object to take all pleasure out of life. Our object is to reduce the risk of cancer insofar as it is feasible to do so. The best way to develop realistic attitudes is to frankly admit the limitations in our present knowledge and our present methods to distinguish between what we know and what we only suspect. And when we speak of risk, express the degree of risk in terms which are meaningful to the average person."

Hear, Hear! That was a long time coming, and oh so welcome! Let's hope that the fear mongers in the FDA and EPA for instance, are listening.

The turkey most Americans enjoy today comes from a breed we got from England, which got it from Spain which got it, originally, from the Aztecs.

Costs of fed forests treetop high

In a recent column I quoted forest economist Barney Dowdle as saying that the present management of the national forests is a fugitive from the feudal system.

Dowdle believes that the general public is convinced that the Forest Service and other public agencies manage forests the way they ought to be managed. This is unfortunate, Dowdle says, because "It is my opinion that the public forests are managed very badly."

He asks the question "If society knew what its national forests were costing, would it even want to keep them?"

Dowdle points out that the assets in land and timber now tied up in the national forests have been estimated to be worth about $40 billion. This is considerably larger than the assets of Exxon, which ranks highest on the Fortune 500 list, he says. It is also larger than Number 2 General Motors, and Number 3 Texaco, put together.

The national forest is spending $300 million a year more than they take in from the sale of timber and other receipts from their land management activities.

Doesn't Dowdle point out. This doesn't count the capital costs that are associated with the management of those particular resources? At a mere six percent interest rate, the capital investment costs would increase the losses to about $2.5 billion annually.

This would clearly put the national forests in a category of Lockheed or Penn Central or New York City as the leading candidate for American dinosaurs," Dowdle says.

Some will ask, "Why should we charge interest to the national forests when most of them, at least, were part of the public domain and didn't cost us anything?"

Dowdle answers that there is an opportunity cost associated with holding any assets — what opportunities could we take advantage of by converting that resource to something else?

The value of a stand of timber, he says, "is determined by how many houses you can build from it, or perhaps how many automobiles or motorcycles you can get from the Japanese if you trade it to them."

Environmentalists will object to Dowdle's economic analysis of the national forests, on the grounds that the national forests also provide a lot of "amenity values," such as water, fish, wildlife, and scenic beauty.

This is true," replies Dowdle, "but it is not at all evident that in private ownership you won't get those same benefits." He cites the eastern states, where nearly all forest land is in private ownership, "and you find that the creeks haven't dried up, and there are fish, there is game, and the forests produce a many visual amenities."

"To some extent," he continues, "people are confusing the issue by suggesting that some of these non-marketable benefits are a result of public forest land rather than a result of forest lands whether they are in public or private ownership."

One reason for the high opportunity costs is the recent reduction of timber sale offerings on many national forests because of demands for more wilderness areas, delays for land use studies and law suits.

Dowdle points out that "all users are also owners, but not all owners are users." Some people that are using the national forests "have been exploiting flaws in the political processes, in order to benefit themselves at the expense of everyone."

The environmentalists are very quick to point out how bad the timber barons were in the 19th century," Dowdle explains. "But the value of timber that is being taken out of production in the 20th century by political processes is much higher than the value of the timber that was exploited by the people in the 19th century."

"If the guidelines were changed," Dowdle believes, "there is no reason in principle that you couldn't have considerably more efficient management in the public forests, and the contributions they would make to society would go up."

Food stamp inflation

The Carter administration is moving awkwardly to come to grips with the food stamp situation. Food stamps are widely acknowledged to be rather promiscuously handed out to people, even by the most liberal standards. Plus, economists have determined that food stamps are inflationary because, as an artificial currency, they expand the money supply significantly.

What to do, then? In another perfect stroke of being all things to all people, and embracing all sides of a controversy, President Carter Tuesday asked Congress to hold food stamp allocations at current levels. But in order to show his great good heart, he also requested that the government stop making any recipients pay for food stamps.

Now, few people pay for food stamps anyway, the object of the program being to aid the needy in their grocery-buying habits. But there is some sort of provision whereby recipients do pay for some stamps at face value in order to get extra stamps. Carter wants that procedure eliminated. Recipients will get the extra stamps anyway.

Sen. George McGovern, who has been holding bleeding heart hearings on food stamps for years now, hailed the president's move as a welcome commitment to serve the nation's poor in the most equitable and efficient manner possible. If McGovern's previous bits of wisdom are any guide, the nation is in for even more inequities and inefficiencies.

The consequence of the freeze — if anybody seriously is looking for a good anti-inflation plan — will be negligible. It is not a cutback of food stamp allocation, after all, but merely a freeze at present levels. Together with the increased federal spending, the plan is still part of the same government program that catalyzes inflation, of which we are in for much, much more.

Still, the freeze looks like something, and, sloppy and half minded as it is, it lets Jimmy Carter give the impression of doing something about food stamp giveaways. We do not mean to be nasty, and Lord knows we were not fans of Gerald Ford's either, but we are absolutely certain that, were Ford in the White House proposing a similar measure and Carter on the campaign hustings preaching love and light, the author of Tuesday's proposal would have had the heavens rain on the former's high forehead.

Mr. Carter would have called it a "national disgrace" or such fitting, moderate and love-draped criticism. Right?

AP man, Haley win Pulitzers

NEW YORK (AP) — Walters Mears of The Associated Press, one of "the boys on the bus" in every presidential campaign since 1960, has won the 1977 Pulitzer Prize for national reporting.

Mears' rapid-fire writing under pressure of newspaper deadlines through 32 presidential primaries and the national campaign was praised by the Pulitzer jury, which said more people throughout the world probably read his words than those of any other political reporter.

"In the Associated Press, nobody works solo," said the 42-year-old AP Special Correspondent after he learned of the honor. "Our coverage of the 1976 presidential campaign was the work of many people, all of whom own a share of this award."

Mears was one of several political reporters highlighted in Timothy Crouse's book, "The Boys On The Bus." The book chronicled the press coverage of the 1972 presidential campaign between President Richard M. Nixon and Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D.

Alex Haley was in Gambia and Michael Cristofer was sitting under a tree in Ohio when they were named Pulitzer winners Monday. Haley is in a special category for his best-seller "Roots," and Cristofer in drama for his play, "Shadow Box," which just opened on Broadway.

Haley was visiting his ancestral home of Juffure this week, a village that has become a mecca for black Americans since publication of his partly fictionalized account of the descendants of the slave Kunte Kinte. A television movie of his book was rated the most watched show in history.

Cristofer's play, which scans the lives of eight persons who deal with the impending death of three of them, opened here March 31, the last day to qualify for this year's Pulitzers.

The Lufkin, Tex., News won the Public Service Award for its series on the death of a recruit at a Marine Corps training camp. The series triggered a congressional probe and reform in training practices.

The annual Pulitzer Prizes in the Arts and Journalism are awarded by Columbia University from an endowment of the late Joseph Pulitzer, publisher of the defunct New York World. A $1,000 cash prize accompanies each award except the Public Service Award, which is a gold medal.

For the first time in the 61-year history of the awards, no prize was given for international reporting, and no award was given for fiction for the 10th time.

A Pulitzer official said it was "a thin year, not a banner year" for fiction and international reporting.

Sources told the AP that the jury for international reporting had recommended three candidates to the advisory board but the board decided to give no award.

The candidates were James Markham and Henry Tanner of the New York Times for their reports on the Lebanese civil war; William Woo, editorial page editor of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, for a series of articles after a trip to China; and Larry Heinzerling, Associated Press bureau chief in Johannesburg, for coverage of the Soweto rioting in South Africa. The New York Times reported Tuesday that the jury had unanimously recommended Markham and Tanner for the prize.

Neal Ulevich of the Associated Press shared the prize for spot news photography with Stanley Forman of the Boston Herald-American.

Ulevich won for his photos of a student uprising in Bangkok, including one showing a rightist about to slam a chair into the lifeless body of a hanged student following demonstrations. Forman's prize-winner, taken during the antibusung furor in Boston, showed a white man attacking a black lawyer with a flagstaff bearing the American flag.

Other prize-winners in journalism included:

—Margo Huston of the Milwaukee Journal, general local reporting, for investigation of local nursing home conditions.

—Acel Moore and Wendell Rawls Jr. of the Philadelphia Inquirer, special local reporting, for exposing conditions at Pennsylvania's Farview State Hospital for the Criminally Insane.

—Warren Lerude, Foster Church and Norman Cardoza of the Reno, Nev., Evening Gazette and Nevada State Journal, editorial writing, in a campaign against a local brothel keeper.

—Paul Szep of the Boston Globe, editorial cartooning.

—Robin Hood of the Chattanooga News-Free Press, feature photography, for a photo of a legless Vietnam veteran in a wheelchair holding a child in his lap at a parade.

—George F. Will of the Washington Post Writers Group, commentary, for his nationally syndicated column.

—William McPherson of the Washington Post, criticism, for his book reviews.

Other winners in the arts categories:

—David M. Potter, a professor of American history at Stanford who died in 1971, won the history award for "Impending Years," which deals with events from 1848 to 1861 leading to the Civil War.

William Warner, chief fundraiser for the Smithsonian Institution, won the general non-fiction award for "Beautiful Swimmers: Watermen, Crabs and Chesapeake Bay." The book depicts the bay as an irreplaceable natural resource, the life cycles and seasonal rhythms of its blue crabs and the men and women who harvest them.

The poetry prize went to James Merrill for his book, "Divine Comedies."

John E. Mack, Harvard professor of psychiatry, won the biography prize for "A Price for Our Disorder: The Life of T.E. Lawrence," a historical biography, with psychological insights, on the Englishman known as Lawrence of Arabia.

Joy and Elsie Green urge friends to hear the Gospel at Central Church of Christ, April 17-22 at 7:30 evenings. Maurice Barnett, preaching.

Pampan charged after accidents

A 26-year-old Pampa man was arrested Monday for driving while intoxicated after a series of accidents. Douglas Lee Melear of 329 S. Finley was the driver of a car that struck two other vehicles and sheared off a utility pole before coming to a stop on Tyng Street. Officers issued several citations including the DWI charge. Police also investigated three other non-injury accidents Monday.

Galveston hotel burns

By ROB WOOD
Associated Press Writer
GALVESTON, Tex. (AP) — Fire destroyed an old five-story brick hotel in the downtown section of this Gulf of Mexico island city today. Police said 28 persons were unaccounted for and feared 10 to 12 people died. At least 14 other persons were taken to John Sealy Hospital.

The fire started shortly after 1:30 a.m. near a narrow entrance of the Central Hotel located about two blocks from the docks in a rundown section of downtown. Police said the flames blocked the only exit to the building.

Lt. John Jennings of the Galveston Police Department said one person was being held for questioning.

Jennings, one of the first men on the scene, said the fire in the area was so intense that it melted and warped parking meters across the street.

He said when he arrived at the scene, "Men were hanging by their fingertips from the windows and many attempted to escape by leaping to the pavement below. Some made it, some didn't."

"It was a terrible damn thing to see, those men hanging from the windows. One man hung there for at least three hours. He is dead now."

Jennings said there was only one escape route for the persons inside and it was ablaze shortly after the fire started. "There was no way they could escape," he said.

The first two bodies brought out of the fire were those of a 13-year-old boy and of a 40-year-old man, firemen said. The bodies were pulled out in sacks.

Three of those taken to the hospital were reported in critical condition.

Firemen brought the fire under control just before dawn. Only the front wall remained standing. The rest of the building was a pile of bricks and burning timber.

A heavy pall of smoke hung over a four-block area. The fire also damaged a drugstore and a furniture store.

Jennings said the man held for questioning "once threatened to burn down the place."

A spokesman for the Sheriff's Office said, "the whole place went up."

Firemen received the first alarm at 1:57 a.m.

Amarillo cops charged

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — Attorney Charles Fairweather charged police here with "sweating" a confession out of his client, convicted slayer Don Crawford by promising not to seek the death penalty, then welching on the deal.

Crawford, 20, a resident of this Panhandle city, pleaded guilty to a charge of capital murder last Thursday. The next day a jury decided he should die in the electric chair.

Fairweather said his court-appointed client has no record of prior convictions and should not have received the death penalty.

Crawford and David Mabra, 19, also of Amarillo, were charged with the Oct. 22, 1975 robbery slaying of convenience store clerk Edith Whitfield, 43. The defendants were granted separate trials. Mabra has yet to go to court.

"What makes me mad is the police took this boy in and sweated a confession out of him after 10 hours," Fairweather said. "They told him all he had to do was confess and he wouldn't have to ride or 'sparky. He wouldn't have to fry. Well, of course, once they get the confession, all bets were off."

Fairweather said Crawford was the subject of three polygraph exams that confirmed his client did not shoot the clerk.

H.E. & Florence Saunders welcome all to attend evening services at Central Church of Christ. Maurice Barnett is preaching.

We owe our success to Xerox.

The best customers for the Savin 770 plain paper copier have proven to be former Xerox users. In fact, one out of every two copiers we place--replace a Xerox. We're not surprised. We make the most reliable copier on the market--it's practically jam proof! That's because of our simple paper path. In our machine, a copy travels a mere twelve inches from beginning to end. In some of our competitor's machines, copies twist and turn a distance of over four feet, and often end up not surviving the trip at all.

Another reason for our success are the copies themselves. The Savin 770 plain paper copier has a mind. An electronic brain reads every original first, and then automatically makes whatever adjustment it thinks necessary to give clean, clear, needle sharp copies every time, whether you copy on one side or two. Our competitor's copiers are brainless--they just do what they're told. Whatever the reasons, the results are clear. This is the most successful period in our history, and we would like to acknowledge the help we've received in achieving it. Thank you Xerox. We couldn't have done it without you.

'Income' heads list of farm problems

By THOM MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff

If he were to list problems facing the American farmer in general and the Panhandle farmer in particular, Jay Naman of Waco, president of the Texas Farmers Union, said he would "need a big piece of paper."

Over breakfast this morning at the Coronado Inn, Naman told The News that he would put "income" at the top of the list.

"If the farmer could get a fair price for his production many of the rest of his problems would be solved," he said.

Naman was in Pampa to speak Monday night at a meeting of the Gray-Roberts County Farmers Union.

He told the area agribusinessmen that the Carter administration's $2.25 support level for wheat "spells ruin for the American farmer just as it inhibits negotiations between wheat-producing countries jointly seeking a fair return on their crops."

Naman and other farm leaders met recently with President Jimmy Carter to discuss farm problems. Tying that meeting to Carter's talk on energy Monday, Naman said today that "we feel agriculture is unique in that what we spend on energy has to be absorbed by the farmer as a cost of production. It can't be passed along to the ultimate consumer as it is in other businesses."

The farm leader said his group told the President of the farmer's energy problem and "the President says there will be an IRS provision permitting farmers to deduct taxes paid on fuel... I don't know what the situation will be on natural gas... But we're talking about a farmer having to wait a whole year to get some help."

Naman said the biggest complaint the Farmers Union has with the current administration concerns the unchanged support level of $2.25 which was continued after efforts to persuade the Canadian, Australian and, if possible, the Argentine governments to raise their marketing boards' price accordingly. Those countries together produce about 86 per cent of the world's wheat.

"Carter's decision to leave U.S. wheat at a low level essentially sets the world floor and throws those efforts into disarray," Naman said.

He said it is the President's intention "to reduce the national budget, even if it is at the expense of farm programs. The very survival of the farmer, therefore, is left in the hands of Congress."

Asked why he could expect a Democratic Congress to offer more help than the Democratic Administration, Naman said "the Republicans are going to be very helpful."

He indicated that many congressmen from both parties have shown "a great deal of receptiveness to rejecting the Carter proposal and coming up with something else."

Educating the congressmen is the key to getting the kind of farm program wanted by the Farmers Union, Naman said.

"We have to convince them that without help the producer won't make it... The Eastern congressmen will remember the beef shortage a few years ago," he said.

Commenting on world production prospects, Naman said, "I don't see anything indicating a shortage of anything in the world, unless something unforeseen happens... And it's a poor policy for American farmers to have to depend on a disaster somewhere in the world to get a fair price on what he produces."

In his speech Monday evening, Naman commented on state issues, noting the lack of "meaningful" reform of public school finance in the Texas legislature; of its "unwillingness to look at superior sources of revenue" other than the homeowner and the farmer; and "inability to change the unfair ad valorem system because of the fear of confronting the powerful energy lobby and the threat of veto."

The Texas Farmers Union worked more than a year between sessions on the school finance issue, Naman said.

"Our representatives in Austin have obviously ignored their responsibility for better education and equitable taxation and the people of the state should not ignore that fact in the next election. Even before that time we are likely to see some serious litigation against the state over the failure to provide equalization aid or enforce the state constitution as it addresses equal taxation."

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
Savage thunderstorms pummeled parts of Texas anew today, dealing some of the heaviest blows near the northeast corner of the state and in the Panhandle.

Showers fell in other areas as rivers in nearly every section stayed out of banks in low areas with runoff from downpours of the past week.

No respite was in sight. Official forecasts promised additional thunderstorms in most areas would grow heavier by tonight and rage into Wednesday.

Particularly fierce storms swept past Daingerfield and Texarkana near the northeast corner of the state in early morning. Showers at the same time dotted areas from Tyler and Longview into Arkansas, between Corsicana and Dallas, and around Greenville.

Heavy storms also swept through a corridor 50 miles wide from Amarillo to the Canadian River and into parts of Oklahoma and New Mexico.

Still other showers popped out in South Texas around San Antonio and between Corpus Christi and Eagle Pass, and in far West Texas near Sanderson.

Several tornadoes whirled threateningly close to inhabited places as heavy rains, often loaded with hail, late Monday and during the night. The National Weather Service reported the twisters — none apparently inflicting serious damage — appeared near Bonham and Wolfe City in Fannin County, between Bells and Ambrose in Grayson County and east of Cleburne in Johnson County.

Temperatures were springlike, ranging near dawn from 53 degrees at Amarillo up to 73 at McAllen in the Lower Rio Grande Valley. Top marks the day before went as high as 90 at Presidio in far West Texas.

National weather

By The Associated Press
Thunderstorms were decreasing over the Central United States today, while snow was on the increase in Wyoming.

The forecast called for showers and thunderstorms likely over the Gulf Coast states except Florida and across the Mississippi Valley, the Middle Atlantic Coast, the Appalachians, the Ohio River Valley and the Great Lakes.

Rainshowers were expected from the Upper Mississippi Valley across the Northern and Central Plains into the Rocky Mountains, with snow at the higher elevations. Cool weather was on tap from the Pacific Northwest across the Northern Intermountain Region, the Northern Rockies and the Northern Plains, with mild or warm weather expected elsewhere.

Skies today were generally clear over the North Atlantic

Car prices may rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Owning and operating an automobile will cost you far more in the coming years if Congress enacts President Carter's proposals to conserve energy and protect the environment.

The Carter administration acknowledges that its just-unveiled plan to tighten auto emission standards could increase car sticker prices by as much as $330 by 1985.

That's in addition to the plan for a standby gasoline tax of up to 50 cents a gallon and the proposal to add hundreds of dollars to the price of fuel-efficient "gas guzzlers" that Carter is expected to announce in his energy message to Congress on Wednesday.

The administration on Monday proposed delays of one to three years in enforcing tougher auto emission standards.

Although the plan was applauded by legislators who have been working on a similar measure, it was criticized by the nation's largest automaker.

Thomas Murphy, chairman of General Motors, said in Detroit that the proposal would mean more gasoline consumption and would "increase the price of new cars with no added value to the buyer and almost unmeasurable added benefit to the environment."

The Carter plan would delay tougher hydrocarbon standards for one year until 1979 and new carbon monoxide standards for three years until 1981.

Under existing law, 1977 model cars cannot emit more than 1.5 grams per mile of hydrocar-

DA says both officers lied

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Palestine Dist. Atty. Billy Ray Green has testified he identified himself to police only as an attorney after his arrest Jan. 18 on a charge of public lewdness.

Green's trial before a three-man, three-woman jury resumes this morning.

Travis County Atty. Jim McMurtry asked Green Monday if he showed police a driver's license or any identification that would show he was a district attorney after they took him to jail.

"I just gave my name and address," Green said.

The defendant said police officers who testified they saw him performing an oral sex act "were either lying or they were confused."

"We have two eye witnesses that are lying," McMurtry asked.

"Yes, sir," Green replied.

McMurtry pressed Green on why he failed to yell, "Help me! Help me!" when he ran into a downtown hotel after fleeing the plainclothes officers he said he thought were thugs.

"Mr. McMurtry, I was out of breath. I simply went to the elevator," Green said.

The defendant added, "The whole scene was pretty scary. It was pretty startling. A man burst in there saying, 'You're under arrest, when you know you've done nothing wrong.'"

McMurtry finished his cross-examination of Green after keeping him on the stand for a total of six hours Friday and Monday.

Public lewdness is a misdemeanor punishable by one year in jail and a fine of $2,000.

Officers testified they witnessed the act in a curtained peep-show booth at the rear of an adult book store.

Green testified he observed "oral sex going on in there" in "one or two" of the booths he visited on what he called his investigation of pornography standards in Austin.

On re-direct examination by his lawyer, Green testified he expected the same privacy when he entered the peep-show booth as when he uses dressing booths in clothing stores or voting booths at polling places.

McMurtry then asked Green if he intended to remove his clothes in the peep-show booth, as he would in a clothing store booth.

Green said no.

With the jury excused, Bankston testified Danny Parrish, who ran Dist. Atty. Richard Handorf's campaign last May, asked him which part of the county had the largest concentration of blacks.

Earlier testimony showed a handbill calling Green a racist was distributed in black areas hours before the May primary.

Sophia Loren flees from fire

PARIS (AP) — Fire broke out early today in the 10-story apartment building where Sophia Loren lives, and the film star said she spent 2 1/2 hours on the roof in her nightgown and bare feet with her two young children until firemen rescued them.

Miss Loren, who occupies a triplex on the seventh, eighth and ninth floors of the Residence George V near the Champs Elysees, said she thought the fire broke out on the fourth floor. Other witnesses said it was on the first floor.

"I awoke about 4 a.m.," Miss Loren said in a telephone interview. "I couldn't open the front door so I broke a window and went up on the fire escape with my children. There were about three other people on the roof when we got there."

"Eduardo, my youngest, wasn't able to walk down the stairs so the firemen put an oxygen mask on him and carried him down. Carlo, my oldest, and I were able to make it down by ourselves."

Eduardo is 4 and Carlo Jr. is 8.

"We're all right but I swallowed a lot of smoke and I'm half intoxicated," Miss Loren said. "I'm planning to go to a hospital for a checkup but I don't think it's serious. None of us were really frightened."

Miss Loren said the fire was extinguished in several hours.

Her husband, film producer Carlo Ponti, was in Switzerland on business but telephoned as soon as he heard of the fire to see if she and the children were all right, their housekeeper said.

Pampa initiates work on new city code book

Work is underway on a new city code book for Pampa's 793 municipal ordinances.

City Manager Mack Wofford said Monday preliminary copies of the new book should be in the hands of city officials for review and inspection sometime this week.

He explained that city ordinances currently are listed by numerical order in a book. "If we have an inquiry into building codes, for example, we may have to look up 14 ordinances to find one."

The new code book will be indexed, with all rules pertaining to a particular topic grouped together, he said.

The city is cooperating with Panhandle Regional Planning Commission in the project. PRPC has commissioned Dr.

Charles Spencer of Ada, Okla., a retired college professor, to prepare the book. The city will pay expenses of printing and binding only.

"If printing fees don't go up drastically, the cost of 50 copies will be about $2,500," Wofford said.

Completion date of the project likely will be in November or December.

"It's a ton of work cross-referencing and categorizing the ordinances," he said, adding that new additions added to the city code between now and completion of the manuscript will be sent to Dr. Spencer for inclusion.

City Secretary S.M. Chittenden is charged with duties of keeping the city ordinance book. Wofford said

$50 rebate killed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee voted today to strike from its tax bill the $50 rebates and payments, which President Carter has dropped from his plan to stimulate the economy.

The committee acted by voice vote with little debate after chairman Russell B. Long, D-La., said that there was general agreement and that the payment provisions for 200 million Americans would have been dropped earlier had it not been for the Carter administration's support of them.

The committee went on to discuss remaining portions of the bill, aiming at sending a revised version to the Senate by the end of this week.

The committee has at least two problems in salvaging Carter's stimulus package: how to handle a Republican drive for permanent tax cuts to substitute for the $50 rebates and payments and how much tax relief for business should remain in the reduced bill.

Carter has said he will veto any bill containing further permanent tax reductions.

Long predicted no such provisions will become law, however hard Republicans try.

"I don't think they've got the votes in the committee," he told reporters. "I don't think they've got them in the Senate. If it should get through the Senate, it wouldn't get through conference with the House. And if it did, the President would veto it."

Republicans were not predicting success. Minority Leader Howard W. Baker Jr. of Tennessee said, "I personally still favor permanent reductions, but I don't know whether they should be in this bill or a later one."

Virtually everyone agreed that Carter's change of heart had killed any chance that the Senate would approve the $50 payments, but there was some doubt about his accompanying recommendation to delete $2.5 billion in tax breaks for business.

Carter originally proposed an increase in the investment credit that allows businesses to recoup some of their spending for equipment. The House substituted a credit based on increased hiring. The Senate committee wrote in an option between versions of the two plans, an approach more to the administration's taste.

Long said he could not predict what the committee will do — "that's just something it will have to pass judgment on."

Long said he would push also for retention of a new proposal to simplify income tax filing for those who do not itemize their deductions.

Advice

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You recently ran a letter from a woman who said she lost her 74-year-old boyfriend whom she had gone with for eight years because she refused to "commit adultery" by having sex with him.

She said, "I'm about his age, but to me, adultery is adultery whether you're 16 or 70."

Abby, if this woman had agreed to have sex with her boyfriend, she would NOT be committing adultery! Adultery can be committed only by a married person who has sex with someone other than his (or her) spouse!

Since neither she nor her boyfriend is married, there is no adultery involved here. However, if they did have sex, they would be guilty of fornication, the definition of "fornication" being having sex without marriage.

So please tell that lady immediately that she would not be committing adultery if she had sex with her friend. Knowing this, she might change her mind.

HELPFUL READER

DEAR HELPFUL: A woman who refuses to commit adultery would probably also refuse to commit fornication, although on a scale of 1 to 10 (10 being the worst), I'd give adultery a 10 and fornication a 9.

DEAR ABBY: I would like a straight answer. In order for a person to get places in this world, is it WHAT you know or WHO you know?

D.C. IN TULSA

DEAR D.C.: It's neither. It's WHOM you know.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the Pennsylvania mother who wrote: "I just found out that my 13-year-old daughter is on the Pill, and I am nearly crazy with heartbreak, disappointment and shame."

I am an Ohio mother who is also nearly crazy with heartbreak, disappointment and shame because my 18-year-old daughter was NOT on the Pill. Now, I wish with all my heart that she had been because she is now seven months pregnant. Soon she will give birth to her first baby (my first grandchild)—and it will be put up for adoption.

Because of circumstances I can't go into here, my daughter has decided that adoption is the best solution for all concerned, and there is nothing I can do to change her mind.

At least the girl who's on the Pill will never have to live with the guilt of having given up her own flesh and blood. She won't have to miss those Friday night dances, football games, movies and dates with all her friends. She won't have to worry about going back to school to face her classmates who know why she missed six months of school. And her reputation won't be ruined.

Please, Pennsylvania mother, don't be upset with your daughter for being on the Pill. Just be grateful that she had sense enough to use birth control instead of risking an unwanted pregnancy. I wish my daughter had.

HEARTBROKEN MOM IN OHIO

Ask Dr. Lamb
Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I was attracted to your column on coffee and its effect on the human body. For several years I had the symptoms you mentioned. I did not know the cause of my problem.

I felt nervous, nauseated and was in very poor health. In fact, I went through the Mayo Clinic and Scripps Clinic without finding out my problem. I was on Valium when I read your column.

I quit coffee six years ago and feel like a new person although I am 69 years old. Had I not read your column I know I would never have reached age 69. Could you send me a copy of The Health Letter on coffee nerves?

DEAR READER — I am glad that stopping coffee has enabled you to feel so much better. You might have lived anyway but enjoyed it less.

The caffeine in coffee and in other drinks is a stimulant to the nervous system. You might call it a "liquid go pill." Certainly anyone who needs a tranquilizer should not be drinking coffee, tea or colas.

No, I am not surprised that you were seen in two good clinics and the possibility that coffee was causing you trouble was ignored. When I was professor of medicine at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, I saw many cases in the clinic of patients who had burning in the pit of the stomach and indigestion with a similar problem. Often X-rays of the stomach and gall bladder would be normal and the patient would be given tranquilizers. No one bothered to find out the patient was drinking from six to 12 cups of coffee a day. So, the patient went home and washed down the tranquilizers with cups of liquid go pills — coffee.

Simply taking away the coffee and throwing away the tranquilizers did wonders for many of these people. Stopping coffee and other caffeine containing drinks would do wonders for our overworked, anxious society.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-1. Coffee, Tea, Cola, Cocoa, that you requested. Others who want this information can send 50 cents for it with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Just write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Can you live without sugar? I am allergic to alcohol and all alcoholic beverages. I do not eat sweets except at mealtime when I have other foods to counteract the sugar. If I eat sweets between meals I have an upset stomach and a headache. My mother says I "need sugar for energy."

Please answer my question so she will stop telling me I need sugar for energy. I am 66 years old, 4 feet 11 and weigh between 85 and 90 pounds.

DEAR READER — No, you don't need any sugar at all, even at mealtime. You do need some carbohydrates for a balanced healthy diet. You can get those from fresh fruits and vegetables and cereals, including bread. You should have a minimum of 50 grams of carbohydrate a day plus enough to provide all the vitamins and minerals you need. You also get carbohydrates from milk.

There is energy in all your foods. The important point is to get as many calories as your body needs for normal health and energy from carbohydrates, fats and protein. If sweets between meals make you sick don't use them.

Polly's pointers
Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — Do you have any suggestions for cleaning varnished kitchen cabinets? My cabinets have a film on them from gas heat and cooking so are sticky to the touch. — T.P.

DEAR T.P. — You might use a good furniture cleaner to remove the greasy build-up. Follow directions on the can. If greasy film does not wipe away with a cloth you could try using the FINEST steel wool LIGHTLY with the cleaner, then wax or polish as desired. Always read directions carefully as some cleaners that one might be tempted to use are not to be used on varnished surfaces.

DEAR POLLY — To make a good hanger for knit tops and sweaters I cut nylon net in strips approximately one inch by three inches and knot several of these strips on the top of the hangers. This prevents any hanger marks on the garment as well as keeping it from slipping off the hanger. I have several of these and like them very much. I have even used them for drip dry articles. — MRS. K.A.B.

DEAR POLLY — My tips are for car owners. Put a brick in the trunk to put under the wheel when changing a tire. Also carry a board to put the jack on in case you are in loose sand. Keep a flashlight in the glove compartment. Women should use a long wrench that has four ways to turn nuts and put a piece of tape around the one that fits your car. You can then feel it at night if you have no light. Carry extra fuses as you may not be able to find the proper size when needed. Be sure car is in "Park" when changing a tire and write down what to do if your car stalls, etc. — HERB.

Polly will send you one of her signed thank-you newspaper coupon clippers if she uses your favorite Pointer, Peavee or Problem in her column. Write POLLY'S POINTERS in care of this newspaper.

Plants in the Home...

Growing house plants in water

ELVIN McDONALD

A couple of years ago, I left my apartment in the care of a friend and went off on an extended business trip. From the looks of the plants, I think my friend forgot to water them until I called from the airport to announce my return.

When a few months later, I had to go away on a similar jaunt, I asked another friend, who is more into plants, to do the watering. And I called home every few days just to be sure there were no lapses of memory.

This time, I returned to plants that looked healthier than ever, with the exception of a big heart-leaf flowering anthurium. It had been growing in a pot filled with a mixture of osmunda fiber, sphagnum peat moss, sand and charcoal chips.

Now I found it looking as well as before, but with the roots washed clean and suspended in a 20-inch glass bubble bowl almost filled with water; in the bottom there were a few chunks of what appeared to be charcoal. Well, I couldn't imagine what would possess my friend to deal so drastically with the anthurium until I found a note which said, in part, that I should go look at the plants growing in water at Tiffany's.

The next day, I took my friend's advice and sure enough, I found a display of beautiful foliage plants, all growing in vases, bowls and bottles of various sizes filled with water. Among them was an anthurium exactly like mine, which made me feel considerably better.

Since then, my anthurium has continued to thrive in water and I've been trying the same kind of culture on other plants of course. I've been rooting cuttings of all kinds in glasses of water since I was a child, but this has been my first experience in actually growing plants this way. I am constantly amazed at how well some of them do with virtually no care for months on end.

Here's how my system works: I use almost any glass container that holds two cups of water or more and has a neck large enough to accommodate a stem fibrous-rooted (as opposed to tuberous-rooted) members of the Aroid Family in water; these include Chinese evergreen or aglaonema, anthurium, dumbcane or dieffenbachia, monstera, syngonium (also called nephthytis or Trileaf Wonder), philodendron, scindapsus or pothos and spathiphyllum.

To prepare a soil-grown plant for water culture, remove it from the pot, crumble away most of the soil and wash the roots as clean as possible, without breaking or bruising them, in tepid water. Now submerge the roots in a water-filled container, being certain that no leaves are below the water line.

Place the plant in the kind of light it requires normally and that's all there is to it. Ideally, the water should be changed once a month, at which time you can add a little chemical fertilizer mixed at about one-sixth the strength recommended for soil-grown plants. In practice, I get around to changing the water and adding fertilizer about every three or four months and my plants have grown well enough to satisfy me. Of course, I do add water occasionally when I notice that an inch or two has evaporated from the container.

If you travel frequently and don't want to depend on a plantsitter, growing your plants in water can solve the problem—provided you select the right kinds, many of which I have already suggested. My anthurium, for example, is growing in a two-gallon jug which I find can go for as long as three months without requiring additional water.

The final step is to add the plant. Aside from coleus, wandering Jew, sweet potato, dracaena, and Swedish-ivy, I've had the best luck growing for polishing the leaves of plants? A. Yes, it will make leathery, smooth leaves shine, but no, I don't recommend milk for this purpose. The grease in it clogs leaf pores and attracts dust and grime. If you water-mist your plants frequently and give them a shower in the sink or tub occasionally, the leaves will have a far more natural shine than from any commercial product or home remedy.

Then I fill the container with water that has been allowed to stand overnight in a pail so that some of the chemical purifiers can evaporate.

The final step is to add the plant. Aside from coleus, wandering Jew, sweet potato, dracaena, and Swedish-ivy, I've had the best luck growing

The WEEDERS GUIDE

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures
Along with charts showing record vegetable sizes in the United States and England and a seed catalogue from Grace's Gardens came a note from Jane Grace saying:

"It seems our specialty will be the gigantic vegetables and those used for home crafts." And as a footnote, she said "broom corn was one of the most popular seeds" they offered in 1976.

But, she explained, she also had seeds to:

Make your own sponges (Luffa): make your own molasses (Sugar cane sorghum); make your own cigarettes (burley tobacco); coffee substitute (Chicory); flax for linen; sugar beets for "spicing and sugaring up" canned red beets; bottle and bird house gourds.

Jane also sent along from Hackettstown, N.J., a story about Clarence Dailey of Monona, Wis., who raised a 6½-pound tomato and some other big ones. There was an affidavit signed by the Dane County (Wisconsin) coroner attesting to the size of the giant tomato. The coroner also said "we consumed this tomato in two separate meals and one slice weighed eight ounces."

Jane and her husband Gene offer cash prizes for record size vegetables.

Of his tomato, Dailey, a retired carpenter nearing 70, said, "You could set it on a dinner plate and you couldn't even see the plate." Dailey, who has been gardening for 40 years, said his wife found the tomato named Delicious in a gift catalogue.

I've heard there are some chemical granules on the market that may be mixed with potting soil to keep bugs off plants. Is there such a thing?

At wit's end

By ERMA BOMBECK
There are three four - word expressions that give me stomach cramps.
One is, "One Size Fits All," one is "Have a good day," and the other is, "You can't miss it."
The latter usually accompanies a 15-minute set of directions, a fold-out map, and a series of a list of emergency numbers on how to get to someone's house.
It has been my experience that most people know exactly where they live. They just don't know how to get there. Most of them overtrain you for the trip.
Who among you has not received directions from Mister Rogers, who talks to you like you are the poster child for Mental Health Week?
He begins by asking, "Do you know where you are now?"
When assured you are at home he says, "Fine, go to the end of your driveway and turn right. That is the hand you write with and then go to the traffic light at the end of your street. When it turns green, signal for a left turn. That is the hand nearest the window and get into the middle lane so other cars can pass you as you will be going slow," etc.

There's a Charles Kuralt breed who not only give you directions on how to get to their house but throw in just enough history to confuse you.
"You'll be turning left at the little church on the corner, which incidentally had half of its structure burnt to the ground in 1936. Don't confuse this with the structure on the previous corner that also burnt. That was rebuilt in '43, but the architecture on that one is strictly Doric, so watch it!"
The directions I love are the ones given by a Rowan and Martin team where a man is on one phone and his wife is on the extension and together they tell you how to get there.

"I'd take the freeway and exit at ramp 34," says the husband.
"Are you crazy? They'll be driving half the night," his wife interrupts. "Take Northern all the way to the Gooney Golf Course, then make a right."
"That road is torn up," says the husband, "and they'll have to backtrack. Come to think of it, they could use Miller Road and that way when they miss the turn - off, there's an all - night station open with a phone to call us for directions."
Our house is a doozie to find. The street changes names three times on you, comes to three forks and doesn't go all the way through, but if you turn where the road narrows, bear right, and go two doors past the barking dog, you can't miss it.

New Norman Lear creation switches roles of sexes

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Having produced "Mary Hartman" and a genre called Deadpan Outlandish, Norman Lear is starting another bag — "The Raised-Consciousness Switcheroo" — in about 40 cities.
It's "All That Glitters," a daily syndicated series about what happens if sex roles are reversed and women, not men, dominate life, love and business. It may cause a bit of comment in coming weeks.
For starters, it postulates that God is a woman, that she first created Eve and, learning Eve was lonely, relieved her of a rib and created Adam. And that women have been first ever since.

At dawn, we see Andrea (Louise Shaffer), a young lady lawyer, waking in bed with her lover, Michael (David Haskell). He's a secretary who complains all she desires is sex. He desires a home and marriage.
He shares his apartment with another secretary, Dan (Gary Sandy), a sexually voracious hustler who, like Andrea, has no eyes for a home and marriage. Michael suggests that she fall in love with Dan.
"He's much too aggressive and competitive," she sighs.
Then we see a married couple, played by Anita Gillette and ex-Dodger Wes Parker. She's fretting about a big advertising campaign she's planned, he's an ex-actor planning to resume his career.

"I'm not just some slob of a husband who all of a sudden decided to get out of the house and become an actor," he says at one point. "I had a very good career before I married you."
Another married couple is Bert (Chuck McCann), an overweight househusband who nags at his lovely wife, Christine (Lois Nettleton).
Frank and Norma Morrison urge friends to hear the Gospel at Central Church of Christ, April 17-22 at 7:30 evenings.

Thank You!

I wish to express my sincere thanks to the voters for my re-election to the board of trustees, Pampa Independent School District. I pledge to work for constant improvement of education and efficient use of tax dollars.

Baby born despite vasectomy, abortion

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The parents of a child conceived despite a vasectomy and born despite an abortion have asked a Superior Court to rule that they may sue two doctors for damages.
Frank and Dorothy Speck decided against having any more children after their first two daughters were born with neurofibromatosis, a rare crippling disease which forms tumors on the nerves.
Their third daughter, Francine, was born with the same disease.

Their original suit against the doctors who performed the vasectomy and the abortion was thrown out by an Allegheny County judge.
But the couple's attorney, Thomas Hollander, argued that the ruling ignored the issue involved in the litigation and has asked the Superior Court to reinstate the suit.
"Each doctor breached his agreement with the Specks, each was negligent and each misrepresented the success of their respective services," argued Hollander.

"We are not saying they are bad doctors. We are saying that in this case they made a mistake."
Three years ago, the couple decided their limited income and the risk that they might produce a third sickly child made permanent birth control necessary.
Speck had a vasectomy in April 1974, and Dr. Richard Feingold allegedly assured him no further contraceptive measures were necessary.
However, Mrs. Speck became pregnant a few months later.

The Specks decided she should have an abortion and it was performed in December by Dr. J.J. Schwartz, who allegedly said it was successful.
It was not. Francine was born four months early — afflicted with neurofibromatosis. The suit seeks damages for Francine's pain and suffering as a result of the unwanted birth and the cost to her parents of her medical care.
Common Pleas Judge Silvestri Silvestri, in his ruling last July, held that such damage claims could not be permitted.

If the Superior Court overrules Silvestri, the suit will go to a jury, which will rule on the facts of the case and determine damages, if any.
Linoleum was first manufactured in 1873.
Harry and Elma Gordon invite friends to hear Maurice Barnett preach the Gospel at Christ at 7:30 evenings Sat. Central Church of Christ.

Court to review OSHA

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today agreed to review the constitutionality of the federal law authorizing Labor Department inspectors to make unannounced visits to factories and other work places to check health and safety hazards.

The justices voted to hear the government's appeal of a decision by a three-judge federal court in Idaho striking down the law as a violation of the Fourth Amendment protection of privacy.

The lower court ruling "would seriously impair effective implementation of federal legislation designed to protect the health and safety of the nation's workforce," warned attorneys for the Labor and Justice departments.

Barlow's Inc., a plumbing and heating installation business in Pocatello, Idaho, filed the suit challenging the statute after a court ordered the firm to admit an inspector for the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

The three-judge court declared the OSHA law unconstitutional on grounds that inspections conducted without court warrants violate the constitutional ban on unreasonable searches of private premises. The judges ordered the government to suspend inspections at the Idaho firm and every other business in the country. But Supreme Court Justice William H. Rehnquist last February blocked the national aspect of the injunction. He allowed the ban against inspections of Barlow's to stay in effect.

In other action, the court refused to hear an appeal charging that Pennsylvania discriminates against whites in the hiring and promotion policies of its state police. A lower court said claims of "reverse discrimination" cannot be considered because the policies adhere to a 1974 legal agreement aimed at ending past discrimination against blacks.

Agreed to decide whether a medical school can dismiss a student without giving him a chance to defend his academic record. A lower court said the University of Missouri School of Medicine in Kansas City must reinstate the student and grant an administrative hearing.

Said it will review a Massachusetts law barring corporations from spending money to oppose any proposed law not "materially affecting" them. The Massachusetts Supreme Court ruled the law is valid.

Agreed to decide whether public officials must pay substantial sums, a token dollar or nothing at all when they deprive citizens of their civil rights but cause them no clear financial harm. A lower court said victims of civil rights violations are entitled to collect reasonable money damages from the officials who violated their rights.

The justices let stand a Colorado Supreme Court decision that the state legitimately may prohibit aliens from voting in school elections as well as in elections for local government officials.

Taxpayers foot bill for lobbying teachers

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Taxpayers footed the bill for 37 teachers from this Rio Grande Valley city to lobby for higher pay in Austin last week.

The teachers traveled the almost 300 miles in a Brownsville Independent School District (BISD) bus accompanied by four students, which made the trip "legal," said BISD Supt. Raul Besteiro.

"We couldn't have used the bus if the students hadn't gone," noted Besteiro. "Buses were in Austin from other school districts also but when you get down to it, you have to transport a student on a bus."

A Sunday column in the Brownsville Herald pointed out the teachers could have chartered a bus for $670 or about $18.50 per teacher.

"Even on teachers pay ($160 per week to start with no experience in the BISD), that wouldn't seem to high a price to pay," stated the column.

When asked if the students were sent along only to pave the way for the teachers' free ride, Besteiro replied: "That's right. It also gives the students a chance to see the legislature in action. I'm very interested in letting them see what our teachers are going through. This is just government in action."

He added the four students were student council officers.

AIRLINES USING LESS FUEL
NEW YORK (AP) — America's airlines used less fuel to carry more passengers in 1976, says the Air Transport Association, which reports a passenger increase of 10.4 per cent since 1973 and a fuel consumption decrease of 7.5 per cent during the same period.

In 1976 the United States, scheduled airlines carried 223 million passengers and four million tons of freight and mail, while using less than four per cent of the petroleum fuel consumed by the nation, says the report.

Airlines have conserved fuel by cutting back on the number of flights, reducing speed, and using more fuel-efficient airplanes as well as expanding the use of flight simulators for flight training, computer flight planning and conserving fuel while the aircraft is on the ground.

Parks except crowds

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer

The National Park System expects crowds this year to top the record bicentennial turnout. It's time to plan if you expect to be among the millions visiting federal sites this summer.

Ninety-nine areas in the national park system, including 37 national parks, have campgrounds. In all, there are 293 sites in the system, such as monuments, memorials, historic houses and battlefields, according to spokesman Duncan Morrow.

Morrow said there were 238 million visits to the national park system in 1975 and 267.8 million in 1976. The service ex-

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — "This is more nerve-racking than any performance of any opera," said operatic tenor Placido Domingo when he stepped out to home plate to sing "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Domingo had come to Shea Stadium on Sunday to honor his sports idol, baseball superstar Tom Seaver.

"I have seen you pitch 22 times," Domingo told Seaver as the two exchanged warm embraces in the dugout before the game. "This makes the 23rd."

"I haven't seen you that much," Seaver replied, "and I hate to tell you it's because my wife and I don't have the time to get to the opera as much as we'd like."

Domingo sang the tenor lead in "The Girl of the Golden West" in Miami, Fla., on Saturday night, caught an 8 a.m. plane to New York and rushed into the stadium to keep his date with Seaver.

It was worth it. About 30,000 fans watched Seaver shut out the Chicago Cubs, 6-0.

DETROIT (AP) — Vice President Walter Mondale says he's got a better job than President Carter.

"Just think about it. On Inauguration Day, I rode all the way ... the President had to walk," Mondale said in a tongue-in-cheek speech at the Michigan Democratic party's annual Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner.

"And you notice when I get off a plane, I'm not carrying any luggage. I've got a man to do that. The President has to carry his own," the Vice President said.

"And look where we travel — I go to Paris, Rome, London. He goes to Pittsburgh, Springfield and Charleston, W. Va."

"When I went to London, I stayed with the queen at Buckingham Palace. He went to Clinton, Mass., and stayed with beer distributors."

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Joan Mondale is here to meet with artists and arts officials as part of a trip to find out "how government can assist the arts."

The Vice President's wife, who arrived on Sunday, said she plans to be a "lobbyist and an advocate" for the arts.

She also has visited Kansas City, Chicago and Los Angeles.

SKOKIE, Ill. (AP) — Former Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld has been elected president and chief executive officer of G.D. Searle & Co., an international health care company.

Rumsfeld, 44, an ex-Illinois congressman and chief aide to former President Gerald Ford, will assume his new positions June 1. No salary was announced.

Rumsfeld, who is teaching at the Northwestern University Graduate School of Management, was elected on Sunday pects about 280 million visits this year.

The most popular period at national parks is from mid-June to Labor Day. Morrow said. He said the Park Service more than doubles its staff during the busy months, adding 10,000 employees to the permanent staff of 8,000.

The familiar parks such as Yosemite, Yellowstone and Grand Canyon will be crowded as usual, Morrow said, but many lesser-known facilities offer equal attractions with more elbow room.

Great Smoky Mountains National Park in North Carolina and Tennessee, for example, gets more than 10 million visits a year. Eighty miles away, the Cumberland Gap National Historic Park, which includes a section of wilderness trail cut by Daniel Boone, draws only half a million visits.

Visiting national parks involves two fees — one for entrance, another for camping. Entrance fees per carload of visitors range from nothing at some spots to $3 at Yosemite and Carlsbad Caverns. If you arrive by other means, such as by bicycle or bus, the charge is 50 cents per person.

Camping fees also start at zero, although Morrow warned: "If you're paying nothing, you're getting just about what you're paying for — a space." Most camping fees range from $1 to $4 a day per campsite, depending on such items as restrooms, electrical connections, water and security forces.

There are ways to cut costs, particularly if you plan to visit more than one park or site in a year.

The Golden Eagle Passport costs $10 and is good for admission to all national park system areas during the calendar year in which the pass is issued. One passport admits a carload of people to drive-in attractions such as parks or a family to walk-in sites such as historic houses. Write to the National Park Service or the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation (both in the Interior Department), Washington, D.C. 20240. Make checks or money orders payable to "Golden Eagle."

Persons 62 and older can get free Golden Age Passports entitling them to free admission to park system areas and 50 per cent discounts on camping fees. You must apply in person at a national park, supplying only proof of age.

Advance planning can help you avoid crowded areas, but there is not much you can do in the way of reserving a campsite. Only four national parks — Acadia in Maine, Grand Canyon in Arizona, Mt. McKinley in Alaska and Chickasaw (formerly Platt) in Oklahoma — accept reservations.

Several low-cost government publications offer help to would-be park visitors. All are available from the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

There were even two police departments investigating," she said, explaining that the car rolled from the city limits of Decatur across the street

No mail on Saturday?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mail delivery should be cut to five days a week and taxpayer subsidies of the Postal Service should be increased, a federal study commission said Monday. The Commission on Postal Service concluded that the mail agency faces a foreboding financial future if it continues on its present course. In a report to Congress and President Carter, the commission said it found the public willing to forego some postal services in order to reduce rate increases and limit congressional appropriations. It estimated the reduction of delivery services to five days a week, probably by eliminating Saturday delivery, would save $412 million per year. The commission said a public opinion survey it ordered showed that 80 per cent of those sampled said they would accept five-day delivery in place of higher postal rates or appropriations. The commission also urged the Postal Service to join at once with private enterprise in utilizing existing electronics communications for mail. The commission said the Postal Service should decide within two years whether to offer electronic message services. The study commission made no proposals for changing the structure of the Postal Service, which is headed by a board of governors that in turn names the postmaster general. It also suggested retaining the Postal Rate Commission, a body which holds hearings and makes recommendations on proposed increases in mail rates. The commission recommended permitting private companies to carry mail in competition with the government "in cases where the Postal Service cannot provide the needed expedited service." The report is expected to touch off a debate in Congress on what to do about the debt-ridden mail agency, which has lost nearly $3 billion since it was created in 1971.

Arthur and Maxine Cox urge friends to study the Bible with Maurice Barnett at 7:30 evenings this week at Central Church of Christ.

Pollution controls may be delayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration proposed that tougher controls on air pollution from automobiles be delayed a year or more, declaring that environmental requirements must be related to economic and energy goals. Douglas M. Costle, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, proposed the delays in imposing standards for the emission of hydrocarbons, carbon monoxide and nitrogen oxides that were scheduled to go into effect when 1978 automobiles roll off assembly lines later this year. "Clean air is not an aesthetic luxury; it is a public health necessity," Costle said in a statement at the White House. But, he said, "environmental issues do not exist in a vacuum. Environmental requirements must be carefully examined and related to our economic and energy goals."

He said the Carter administration "is fully committed to the principle that our nation must have a strong environmental program as a necessary prerequisite to future progress in solving our energy and economic problems." Costle said President Carter recommended that: —The statutory standard for hydrocarbons of 41 grams per mile be met beginning with the 1979 model year. Under current law, this standard would have been imposed in the 1978 model year. —The standard for carbon monoxide should be set at 9.0 grams per mile in 1979, with the statutory standard of 3.4 grams per mile in effect beginning with the 1981 model year. Under current law, the 1978 standard would be 3.4 grams per mile. —The standard for nitrogen oxides should be set at 2.0 grams per mile in 1979 and 1.0 grams per mile in the 1981 model year and would remain at that level in the future unless the environmental agency decides by 1980 that health requirements dictate a standard of 0.4 grams per mile beginning in 1983. Under current law the nitrogen oxide limit would be set at 0.4 grams per mile beginning with the 1978 model year.

Divorces sharing custody

BOSTON (AP) — More divorced couples are sharing custody of their children, resulting in a preservation of the sense of family and satisfying fathers' needs, researchers say. Psychological and legal specialists believe the pattern may influence divorce court procedures throughout the nation. "Most joint custody parents do not like each other, do not get along with each other," said Melvin Roman, a professor at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York City. "But they are doing a terrific job with their kids, often at great personal sacrifice," he said Sunday. "For example, they have built in geographical restraints to their agreements. If they remarry, they agree to stay in an area near the children of their previous marriage." "It seems to be working," said Norman Rosenberg, a Buffalo, N.Y. lawyer and law teacher at the State University of New York at Albany. "Despite the divorce, the family remains curiously intact." The panelists at the annual meeting of the Eastern Psychological Association said 90 per cent of custody decisions in this country award the children to the mother. "The fathers are depressed, some seriously, some quite suicidal," said Roman. "They go through periods of serious maladjustment, more specifically related to the loss of their children than to the loss of their woman." "Under joint custody, the divorced parents are equally responsible. It doesn't mean that a child has to move from parent to parent." Roman said some couples keep their children in one home, and the parents alternate between living there and at a separate residence. Rosenberg said joint custody may reduce the incidence of non-support by fathers. "The monetary unit of Finland is the markka.

commission said the Postal Service should decide within two years whether to offer electronic message services. The study commission made no proposals for changing the structure of the Postal Service, which is headed by a board of governors that in turn names the postmaster general. It also suggested retaining the Postal Rate Commission, a body which holds hearings and makes recommendations on proposed increases in mail rates. The commission recommended permitting private companies to carry mail in competition with the government "in cases where the Postal Service cannot provide the needed expedited service." The report is expected to touch off a debate in Congress on what to do about the debt-ridden mail agency, which has lost nearly $3 billion since it was created in 1971.
