Wade wins Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Virginia Wade, the vicar's daughter from England, won the women's singles title at Wimbledon today, beating Betty Stove of The Netherlands, 4-6, 6-3, 6-1.

With Queen Elizabeth and a packed center court looking on, Miss Wade became the first British woman to win the title since Ann Jones beat Billie Jean King eight years ago.

As Miss Stove netted a volley on the last point of the match, the crowd rose in excitement to applaud Miss Wade, who has been trying for 16 years to win a Wimbledon title.

The cheers grew as Queen Elizabeth came down from the royal box to present Miss Wade with the giant silver salver. After the presentation, the crowd broke into song. "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow," they sang as Miss Wade held up the salver for all to see.

Miss Wade, who gained the final by beating top-seeded Chris Evert, started off shakily

Miss Stove broke service three times in the first set, once in the ninth game to love, and served for the set.

But in the second set, Miss Stove's service began to falter. She already had double-faulted—and got away with it—in the 10th game of the first set, and by midway through the second set, she had double-faulted seven times.

Miss Wade got off to a 3-0 lead with a quick break in the second set. A couple of backhand volleys—plus a disputed line call in which the umpire overruled the line judge and ordered a let to Miss Stove—gave the Dutch woman her first break of the set and brought her back to 2-3.

Miss Stove, the first Dutch woman ever to gain Wimbledon's final, served for 3-3. Miss Wade, however, held service and broke back again in the crucial eighth game to go up 5-3 with a cross-court backhand past Miss Stove. She served out to win the set.

A successful combine-ation

The know-how of Panhandle farmers, co-operative weather, and modern machinery once again have produced a big wheat crop in the Pampa area. Henry "Hawk" Harnly, silhouetted behind the wheel of a combine, described the 1977 crop as "average...not as good as last year." Some of the area's amber waves took a beating from spring hailstorm and some blew out in the high winds and dry weather that came not long after planting. However, a wet spring coaxed as many as 40 bushels from an acre from some dryland wheat, Harnly said.

Jury awards no damages

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

A 223rd District Court jury awarded no damages this morning in a $1 million products liability case in which Dale C. Burns contends he lost his left eye in 1971 because a Lewis Supply Co. salesman sold him a masonry nail instead of a concrete nail.

He was laying outdoor carpet when the accident occurred. The jury pondered the case for four hours.

Lewis Supply officials contended that masonry nails and carpet nails are the same.

Deliberations began after 3 p.m. Thursday and the jury recessed until 9 a.m. today after no verdict had been returned in two hours.

John Warner, attorney for Burns, described the accident that occurred when Burns was 24.

He said his client went to Lewis Supply to get concrete nails — received masonry nails and no warnings to the dangers.

"He starts hammering nails, a few went in, some bent, and then that terrible incident more quickly than you can blink an eye his eye is gone. He will live the rest of his life with no sight in that eye," Warner said.

"Your verdict should pass the warning on," he told the jury.

He pointed out the disadvantages of having only one eye, calling attention to his client's inability to make as much money as he probably could have with both eyes.

Richard Stokes of Amarillo, attorney for Lewis, told jurors they have the greatest power in this judicial system.

"Anybody can be brought into the courthouse the way our system works, but it should be on right grounds," Stokes commented.

During the trial Burns testified that he would not have worn goggles had he been issued instructions.

In his final plea Warner said, "This is no game. When I came to the courthouse I came searching for truth."

Stokes earlier had commented that Warner was on the case almost before Burns was out of the hospital.

"Your verdict is forever Dale (Burns) can't come back 20 years later and say 'look what inflation has done to me.' I'm praying you have the courage to render a just verdict," he concluded.

The verdict was 10 to 2. Under rules of civil procedure a jury may return a 10-2, 11-1 or unanimous.

A 9-3 verdict is a hung jury, according to the rules.

Judge Yarbrough indicted

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas Supreme Court Justice Don Yarbrough has been indicted on forgery and aggravated perjury charges, adding the threat of prison to the legal burdens facing the young jurist who claims God told him to seek the office.

The Travis County grand jury returned the indictments Thursday.

The indictments came one day after Harris County Dist. Atty. Carol Vance said he had tapes of conversations linking Yarbrough to a plot to kill Victoria banker Bill Kemp, a witness against him in another proceeding.

If convicted, Yarbrough could go to prison for 2 to 20 years on each of two forgery counts and 2 to 10 years on the perjury charge.

Dist. Atty. Ronald Earle said he had not decided which case to prosecute first.

A former justice says Yarbrough probably is the first member of the state supreme court to be indicted for a crime.

Yarbrough, 36, already is the target of a disbarment action and more than a dozen civil suits.

The State Judicial Qualifications Commission, which can investigate alleged misconduct of judges and recommend their removal by the supreme court, meets Saturday to discuss Yarbrough.

Also, two state representatives from Houston said Thursday they are preparing a removal resolution for possible submission to an upcoming special session of the Texas Legislature. The removal could take place during the July special session, according to Reps. John Whitmire and Herman Lauhoff.

Yarbrough was silent and grim — though dapper in a dark blue suit, white shirt and blue tie with white polka dots — as he arrived at the county courthouse to be booked, fingerprinted and photographed.

He was released on personal recognizance bonds totaling $10,000.

The indictments allege that Yarbrough —Forged an Alabama auto registration and license tag receipt that bears the signatures of Billy Ray Waller as licensee and Roger J. Conway as one to whom a 1974 Chevrolet was transferred.

—Dated the document Dec. 10, 1976, when the grand jury alleges — it actually was filled out on May 16, 1977.

—Lied to the grand jury when he allegedly testified on Tuesday that he did not meet with John William Rothkopf in Austin on May 16.

Yarbrough told reporters Tuesday that he sold the car in April 1975 to Rothkopf, a business associate, because he no longer needed it in his law practice.

Rothkopf told the Houston Post that Yarbrough gave him the car in return for Rothkopf being unavailable to testify in civil suits against the jurist. He said Yarbrough furnished Alabama plates.

He claimed that Yarbrough supervised forgery of an auto title — presumably the Alabama document — in the justice's Austin motel room, wearing gloves so his fingerprints wouldn't be found.

Vance says Rothkopf had a tape recorder fastened to his body at the time, and Earle said he had listened to the tapes.

Earle said he was ready to go to trial immediately but expected a delay of at least a month.

Vance, while claiming he has tapes of Yarbrough talking seriously of hiring a hit man to kill Kemp, says he cannot prosecute because there never was an overt act, such as an exchange of money.

A Houston television newsman said Thursday that Yarbrough told him Wednesday night that he had lied to the grand jury at Austin.

Don Shelby, special correspondent for KPRC-TV, recalled the Yarbrough conversation during the station's evening newscast. Shelby said Yarbrough called John Holmes, an assistant district attorney at Austin and told him he would like to appear again "to correct some statements."

Shelby also said Yarbrough told him he had talked with Rothkopf and remembered planning to have Kemp killed.

But he added that his heart he really didn't want the man dead," Shelby said.

The newsman said Yarbrough also discussed alternatives open to him including resignation, surrendering his law license and even suicide.

Yarbrough could not be reached Thursday night for comment on the report by Shelby. One newsman talked to Yarbrough's wife, who said she had been instructed by one of her husband's lawyers, Waggoner Carr, not to discuss any of the pending legal matters. Later, no one answered the telephone at Yarbrough's Houston home.

Former Justice James Hart, a student of the court's history, said he thought Yarbrough was the first sitting justice to be indicted.

"Since I was on the court 27 years ago, nobody has been indicted. I have tried to study the history of the court, and I don't recall it ever happening before," Hart said.

Yarbrough is the highest state official to be indicted since Speaker Gus Mutscher was accused of conspiracy to accept a bribe in 1971. Mutscher was convicted, served some probation time and is now county judge of Washington County.

Earle said Yarbrough called him and John Holmes of the Houston DA's office about possibly reappearing before the grand jury today. But lawyer Charles Hineman later called back and said there would be no reappearance.

Hineman shares an office suite with Yarbrough's lawyer, former Atty. Gen. Waggoner Carr, who was out of town.

If Yarbrough had recanted the alleged perjury that would have made no difference, Earle said.

"It's like running a stop sign. Once you run it, you can't un-run it," he said.

While the forgery indictment says Yarbrough did "knowingly and intentionally, and with the intent to defraud and harm another, make and execute a writing," Earle said that doesn't conflict with Rothkopf's story that Yarbrough supervised the alleged forgery.

Arkansas marshal shot

FBI joins in manhunt

MAGAZINE, Ark. (AP) — Dark clouds hampered the air search today for two gunmen who killed a town marshal, wounded a park ranger and apparently abducted the ranger's partner.

But a ground search continued. A 125-man posse using pickup trucks and four-wheel drive vehicles scoured the Ouachita National Forest for the men. The search concentrated on a 50-mile radius of this western Arkansas village.

A light mist filled the air at dawn and thunderstorms were expected. A helicopter and two airplanes were on standby in case of a break in the weather.

John Kelly, the FBI agent in charge of the manhunt, said late Thursday night that if there are no new leads in the case today there would be an "adjustment" in the search for the men. He did not elaborate.

The search was suspended at dark Thursday, but roadblocks were maintained through the night at 14 points. In addition, all-point bulletins have been issued in Oklahoma, Texas and Louisiana.

"They are real killers. These are real bad folks," Kelly said. The FBI released composite sketches of the two that were prepared from information provided by the wounded ranger.

Marvin E. Richie, 42, the marshal of this town of 677 persons, was shot to death Wednesday in the trunk of his police car. He was handcuffed to wounded part-time U.S. Corps of Engineers ranger David Small, 27, who is a high school principal at Plainview.

The ranger's partner, Opal James, 58, was apparently abducted by the two men and the three left in the Corps' pickup truck. Authorities said the rangers were unarmed.

The wounded ranger was listed in stable condition with a gunshot wound to the right shoulder. The marshal was shot once in the back of the head.

The link with the Louisiana fishermen was made through a car found abandoned here on Wednesday. The marshal had gone to investigate the car and the two men in it. He was not heard from until he was found shot to death in the trunk.

The car was registered to Alton Wilson, 66, of Franklinton, La. Wilson and his companion, Ray Jones Sr., also of Franklinton, were last seen Tuesday when they left to go fishing, Washington (La.) Parish Sheriff Willie Blair said the Bogue Chitto River area was being searched for bodies.

The rangers were patrolling an area of Blue River Reservoir when they noticed the marshal's car and went to investigate, authorities said. The U.S. Corps of Engineers operates water recreation areas across the country, including eight in Arkansas.

Authorities said the two were believed armed with .357-magnum pistols and a .44-magnum pistol. They were described as in their early 20s and wearing blue jeans.

Here is an account of the events leading up to the abduction of the marshal. The sequence was pieced together from a series of interviews.

A thunderstorm had blown through Magazine Tuesday night, and Wednesday dawned with the town filled with talk of the weather.

About 9 a.m., Earnest Hart, who lives just outside this Logan County town, was traveling down a dirt road taking his daughter to a babysitting appointment. Hart noticed two men fixing a flat tire.

He stopped and asked them if they needed help or a ride into town. Although the man apparently had no spare tire, they told Hart they didn't want help.

Later Hart saw Richie and told him about the men. As strangers to a small community, the pair aroused suspicion.

Hart had copied the Louisiana license plate number from the car. Richie telephoned the Booneville Police Department with the information and requested a routine check for outstanding warrants.

One of the shots struck Richie in the back of the head and the other struck Small in the right shoulder. Small was alive but badly injured when he was found by deputies four hours after the shooting.

Funeral services for Richie are planned here Saturday. Survivors include the marshal's widow and two daughters.

Congress backs bomber decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is expected to go along with President Carter's decision to halt production of the B1 bomber, but not without a fight from supporters of the costly plane.

"I believe Congress will uphold my decision," Carter told reporters today. He said he thought the reaction to his decision was "pretty good."

Democratic leaders in the House and Senate quickly expressed support for Carter's surprise decision to scrap the B1, but proponents of the bomber said they would resist attempts to cut funds for production of the aircraft.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown said today production of the B1 bomber would have been a more attractive alternative than the cruise missile if the plan had been about 30 per cent cheaper.

Brown told a news conference that Carter's decision to scrap the B1 in favor of the cruise missile will save "many billions of dollars."

He said the precise saving can't be determined now because it will depend on the cost of outfitting B52 bombers to carry the cruise missile.

Brown said he was convinced the B1 could penetrate Soviet defenses but that he was "even more convinced we can penetrate Soviet defenses with the cruise."

He said the cruise missile would be an effective weapon into the late 1980's, adding that he doesn't rule out its effectiveness beyond that date. As Soviet defenses improve, he said, so will the cruise missile.

Rape suspect held

An Amarillo man arrested Thursday in connection with several rapes and two murders in the area has been charged with one of those rapes. Other charges are pending.

A team of Amarillo police officers and deputies from Potter and Randall Counties arrested Samuel Christopher Hawkins, 33, in connection with a burglary.

"Subsequent investigation produced evidence connecting the suspect with at least two murders and 13 rapes in the area, plus similar offenses in Colorado, Oklahoma, and Florida," Amarillo Police Chief Lee Spradlin said this morning.

Area law enforcement officers have been searching for the past two years for a man believed to be involved with a murder in Amarillo, a murder in Borger and several rapes in Amarillo, Canyon, Hereford, Borger and other area locations.

Twelve-year-old Rhonda DeAnn Keys was abducted from her Amarillo home and found murdered several days later in February 1976.

Mrs. Dawn Hamilton, 19, was found dead in her Borger home last May. She was pregnant.

The Texas Rangers and the Department of Public Safety Intelligence Unit have assisted area law enforcement officers, including officers from Gray County and the Pampa Police Department, in the search for the man suspected to have committed both murders and the rapes.

Proxmire straining at gnats

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., has made a name for himself as the lord protector of taxpayers' money. His "Fleece of the Month" award for ridiculous bureaucratic spending is a nice touch, especially when the senator wants a good public image.

Yet there is ample evidence Senator Proxmire is straining at gnats. Granted, it is a public service to demonstrate that taxpayers have lost nearly all voice in determining government expenditures, and the "Fleece of the Month" publicity serves that purpose.

Senator Proxmire cancels out that success a thousand times, however, when he proposes such legislation as the Community Reinvestment Act of 1977. The objective of the legislation is to substitute political allocation of credit for private determination.

This is a blow to the solar plexus of the free enterprise system; it would be the achievement of a long-time socialist goal. What the bill proposes is that federal bureaucrats could compel a savings and loan institution or a bank to lend money for a politically popular program, thereby cutting severely the amount of money available for private loans. That is no way to revivify the lagging economy.

Senator Proxmire seems to forget that the only money banks have to lend is that brought to them by depositors. Depositors must feel confident their money will be invested in productive enterprises, not that it will go into the development of another HUD slum or pay the salaries of more bureaucrats.

If the senator really wants to put more cash in the hands of his constituents, he would promote, rather than hobble, the private credit market.

Moderate stand on clean air

President Chamber of Commerce of the U.S.

How clean should "clean" air be? Perfectly clean? (That might be hard to arrange, since Mother Nature throws more pollutants into the air every year than man has since his creation.) Or clean enough to safeguard human health?

The choice between these two alternatives is really what underlies all the current fuss over clean air rules.

Extremist environmentalists want to restrict the introduction of any additional pollution into specified "pristine" — or clean air — areas of the country. No matter that the new emissions would not constitute a health hazard.

The practical effect of such a policy would be to prevent the establishment of new industrial plants in vast stretches of the U.S.

Industry has cleaned up a great deal in recent years, and industry is willing to go as much further in that direction as attainable technology permits. But there will always be some pollution associated with a new factory, even if it's only the exhaust from the cars in the employees' parking lot.

Why not ban new pollution? A good question. But there are two good answers.

First, paralyzing the country with plenty of clean air and not enough jobs may reasonably conclude that economic and social needs are more important than "pristine" air. They should have that right.

Second, short of shutting down the entire economy, we have to live with the amount of pollution we cannot eliminate through sophisticated filters and recovery systems. That being the case, it might make more sense to spread out the sources of pollution, rather than concentrating them all in a few overloaded industrial cities.

These were the issues involved in the fight over amendments to the Clean Air Act which recently passed the House.

The House bill permits a very small increase in pollution in pristine areas. For example, the amount of sulphur dioxide in a cubic meter of air would be limited to one millionth of a gram — that's about two ten-thousandths of an aspirin tablet. And the bill compels industry impinging upon these areas to use the "best available control technology."

These stringent standards are hardly a "sellout" to industry, as some elements of the news media have portrayed them. Rather, they represent the minimum amount of "slackening" necessary to permit any industry at all. Industry can just barely live with them, and will make an honest effort to try. But very few plant managers are turning cartwheels in celebration of a great "victory" in the House.

America's business people must breathe, too. The same air that you breathe. They are not anxious to poison themselves or their families. Or you. The need to reduce pollution is accepted throughout American industry.

Definitions of the 'Isms'

The "Isms" survey is not new, but we ran across it again recently, and so — in case you've forgotten — we are repeating it. With variations it goes something like this:

Socialism You have two cows, the government takes one and gives it to a neighbor, then controls the production, price and distribution of the milk.

Communism You have two cows, the government takes two and gives you some milk.

Nazism You have two cows, the government takes both and shoots you.

Great Socialism You have two cows, the government takes both, shoots one, milks the other and throws the milk away.

Mixed Economyism You have two cows, the government regulates their care, feeding and milking to the point that they both nearly stop giving milk, whereupon the bureaucrats tell you there are no easy solutions and that milk is, after all, a limited resource — and that you'll just have to lower your expectations.

Capitalism You have two cows, you sell one and buy a bull.

Declaration of freedom

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

In several English-speaking countries, July 1 is being celebrated as International Free Enterprise Day. This observance is an effort to provide a counter celebration to the communist-socialist May Day observance which is marked by protests and demonstrations.

The International Free Enterprise Day celebration was started in Great Britain through the initiative of the Aims For Freedom and Enterprise organization. It has enjoyed a remarkable success there, and is catching on rapidly in the United States.

This year, anticipating Free Enterprise Day, prominent Britons signed newspaper advertisements captioned "Declaration of Freedom — 1977."

The words of this Declaration have meaning on both sides of the Atlantic.

We, the undersigned, declare that free enterprise is the essential basis of the prosperity of our country.

That freedom and prosperity emerged from this nation because we led the way in democracy, the industrial revolution, and in free enterprise.

That liberty, which stands on the unique foundations of democracy, freedom of choice and expression and free enterprise, is being eroded by state interference.

That this has resulted in massive, increased state spending which leads to extravagance and an impairment of liberty. We pay for this extravagance in high taxes and a depreciated currency.

That a halt must be made to nationalization, state control and excessive bureaucracy.

That prosperity needs free enterprise, and that without free enterprise there can be no liberty.

In order to safeguard our liberty we pledge ourselves to strive with all our power to preserve democracy and free enterprise in this country.

The fight for freedom and enterprise in Britain is grim. Not only does the huge, political union apparatus engage in work stoppages almost every day, but sit-in terror tactics are frequently utilized.

For example, the Association of Polytechnic Teachers recently appealed to the government for protection because of assaults on teachers, telephone operators, and school staff members.

A recent 50-day occupation of the North London Polytechnic was ended only by a High Court order, and at the Northeast London Polytechnic sit-ins were conducted in protest against the imprisonment of a Trotskyist student leader. Anyone who objected in any way at recent sit-ins were immediately branded as "racist," according to the London "Daily Telegraph."

In the United States, there is more lip service to free enterprise, certainly on the part of the federal government. In fact, however, the Carter administration seeks to increase the measure of government control over the citizen. Its response to the energy crisis has been to propose new large-scale government intervention in the economy. Early promises of decontrol of natural gas have been scrapped in favor of more extensive control measures.

Ashley Cooper, a columnist for the Charleston, S.C., "News and Courier," recently cited the growth of bureaucratic power.

"The bureaucrats in the Dept. of Justice, the U.S. Attorney General's office and the judiciary," he wrote, "also tell local governments how they elect their local officials, how

Here's one for dad

During the Great Depression, my mother was a famous stretcher. She won fame by stretching food money further than any other mother in the neighborhood.

My father gave her the money, a few dollars every week. Mother had to feed from four to seven mouths with that money, depending upon the year. We were a growing family during the Depression, but the food allowance was not increased every time Mother had another baby. Mother simply squeezed harder on the dollars.

At least, that's what she claimed.

Our family ate well, and Mother's friends often asked how she could possibly provide so much food on so little money. She would take a modest bow and admit it wasn't easy. It took careful planning and exhaustive shopping, she said.

This was not true, according to my father. He said Mother stretched her food dollars so far by using the "skip-in method" of shopping.

"She phones me at work every day and tells me to skip into the grocery store on my way home and pick up a loaf of bread, a peck of potatoes and a roast of beef," he said. "Every time I skip in to the store, I pay for the food out of my weekly allowance. I never get paid back."

"That is how my wife stretches her food money so far. Actually, she spends her food money on trips to Europe. I skip in and buy all the food," he said. "If more American wives shopped the skip-in way, there would be more American wives in Europe, which

Your Birthday
July 2, 1977

Some interesting changes are likely for you this year, and they could come about unexpectedly. For instance, you could begin to move with a new crowd that has entirely different interests.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's best you don't gamble at all today, but if you can't resist the urge, confine your wagers to things you know something about.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Usually when you make up your mind, you stick to your guns. Not so today. Another can turn your decisions off and on like a light switch.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you're in a do-it-yourself mood today, don't play with expensive material. You could use it incorrectly and ruin it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Treating those you're fond of generously is commendable, but it can also be foolish as the extremes you're apt to go to today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Don't break a promise to a family member at the last minute if something more appealing comes up today. This person will be bitterly disappointed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're not the best at keeping secrets today. With minimal probing, a nosy neighbor could find out everything you know.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Ordinarily you're very selective about buying only what you need. Today gadgets could find their way onto your shopping list.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) The world may not be quite ready for your avant-garde ideas today. Hold those far-out schemes in abeyance until it catches up with you.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Hunches could take precedence over your logic today. You may operate more by feel than by thought. You'd be better off to reverse the procedure.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your springing sudden changes in social plans today could cause consternation and take the edge off everybody's good time.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You have a tendency today to switch objectives just when the goal is within reach. This could deprive you of the brass ring.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

There's likely to be a multitude of unfinished projects in your wake today. After you drive a few nails, you suddenly lose interest.

Lamprey Pie
Sea lampreys, abhorrent to most people, were considered delicacies for centuries. The parasitic fish was a favorite dish of Roman Emperor Vitellius. A medieval French recipe called for stewed lampreys marinated in wine and England's King Henry I reportedly died from eating too much lamprey pie.

Tanzanians warm to Pampanans

By TIM PALMER
Pampa News Staff

Things are changing for the better, in Tanzania, a nation where things have nowhere to go but up.

The country is motivated toward progress, Glen Walton noticed on a recent visit to the African nation. Walton, pastor of the Mary Ellen-Harvester Church of Christ, and church elder Kermit Rasco visited church missionaries there early this month.

"You go there with some misgivings," Walton said of the politically stormy African continent, "but there was no hostility at all towards Americans. The people were warm and friendly."

Walton noted some insecurity, however, on the part of the government. Visitors are forbidden to photograph aerial views or any landmarks in the country. "They do have, for some reason, a fear of sabotage, so you have to be pretty careful," Walton said.

The nation is poor, and when threatened with mass starvation last year, the president initiated a "life and death program."

"They're using all the people to plant food — in vacant lots, any place that can produce food is cultivated," Walton said.

Walton visited the home of a Tanzanian worker. A four-room building houses four families; cooking is done in a hallway.

Each room, Walton estimated, was little larger than an American bathroom.

"But he was very proud of it," Walton added.

The Tanzanians people are struggling to improve their lot. "The thing that impressed me," the Pampa minister said, "was the fact that the people are so responsive to religion."

The colonization of the former German possession of Tanganyika brought the Lutheran religion to Tanzania, so that now almost one million Tanzanians are Lutheran.

The Church of Christ, Walton said, has been involved in a mission effort there since 1955. The Church sponsors a hospital and a Bible school in Chimala, a village north of the capital city of Dar es Salaam.

The 56-bed hospital cares for 275 in-patients and 1,300 out-patients. Two American missionaries, Mr. and Mrs. Dale Dennis of Amarillo, work with a Tanzanian staff and teach seven Bible classes.

"One of the things they're really trying to overcome is illiteracy," Walton noted. "Education is compulsory for all children and parents were warned that they would be fined if they did not cooperate."

Tanzanian children begin a study of English in the third grade, and Walton said many persons have some knowledge of the language.

The Chinese have a tremendous political and social influence in the developing nation. "Their presence is quite evident," Walton said. "There are Chinese technicians and advisors there. The Chinese built their railroad. There are Chinese products and Chinese trucks on the streets."

Trucks and equipment are constantly on the move in Tanzania. The nation is growing, Walton concluded, "and things are changing."

Clayton reveals compromise bill

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — House Speaker Bill Clayton today presented a new school finance plan that he claims "softens the philosophical differences" that produced a fiasco on the final night of the regular legislative session.

The $900 million bill will be introduced in the next day or so, and the House Public Education Committee will hold hearings on it July 7-8.

Lawmakers convene in special session July 11 to have another go at the school finance problem — one on which ride local taxes, teachers' hopes for better incomes and poor districts' chances to provide better schools.

Clayton indicated that major lobbying groups — teachers, the "Big Seven" school districts and the Texas Farm Bureau — all support the concept of his plan while not necessarily adopting all its details.

He also quoted Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, presiding officer of the Senate, as saying "at first blush" that he liked the concept.

The plan would enable each district to choose between two options in setting its local fund assignment (LFA), the cost of the Foundation School Program paid by local taxpayers.

The choice would be between full market value of taxable property and "agricultural use values," which evaluate undeveloped land according to its ability to produce crops, forage and timber.

A district's LFA would be determined by applying a 19 cents per $100 tax rate against full market value or 20.5 cents against agricultural value.

In the conference committee report that failed in the closing minutes of the regular session, a 21-cent tax rate was applied to a mix of market and agricultural values, with one-family homes discounted by 20 per cent.

The bill also makes minor changes in the teacher pay raise plan, providing more for second and third year teachers than the conference report. It also provides $120 million in added state funds to "equalize" rich and poor districts, compared with $108 million in the conference committee bill.

Clayton's plan would reduce LFAs by a total of $310 million, compared with $318 million in the conference report.

Coffee leads prices up

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Coffee takes the blame for sharp price increases for supermarket shoppers, who found grocery bills rising at a much faster rate in the first six months of 1977 than in the same period a year earlier, an Associated Press marketbasket survey shows.

The one encouraging sign was an indication that spiraling coffee prices for the brew may be easing.

The AP drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and nonfood items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and since has rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month.

The latest survey showed that prices for the marketbasket at the checklist stores increased an average of 9 per cent from Jan. 1 to July 1. When coffee was removed from the totals, however, the six-month increase was only 1.4 per cent.

In 1976, the AP survey showed the marketbasket totals at checklist stores went up 1 per cent during the first six months of the year. Not counting coffee, the marketbasket totals dropped 1 per cent.

The government has predicted that retail prices for food purchased at the grocery store and eaten away from home will rise about 6 per cent this year, compared to an increase of 3.1 per cent last year.

Officials said much of the increase will be due to higher prices for imported items and products not produced on U.S. farms, including coffee, cocoa and seafood.

Wholesale coffee prices, which had topped $4.50 a pound, have been declining recently, reflecting lower prices for unroasted beans. The drop has been credited partly to a cutback by consumers who have switched to other beverages.

Retail prices never caught up to wholesale levels and the cuts by the major roasters are not expected to have any major impact at the supermarket. The AP survey showed, however, that the price of coffee decreased slightly during June at two stores and increased in only four. There were no increases and no decreases during May.

The overall price picture improved during June. The marketbasket total at the checklist store was up in nine cities and down in four, for an overall average increase of about one-third of a per cent.

During May, the marketbasket total at the checklist stores increased in 12 cities and decreased in only one, for an overall average rise of just over 3 per cent.

Mozambique seeks aid

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The Security Council unanimously passed a resolution calling on U.N. members to give "material assistance" to Mozambique's defense against Rhodesian border attacks.

The African resolution adopted Thursday also asked U.N. members to provide financial and technical aid to compensate Mozambique for the severe economic losses it claims to be suffering because of the Rhodesian raids.

One U.S. diplomat said the measure amounted to only "a statement of moral support."

"In terms of actual contributions of weapons or funds, I wouldn't put too much stock in it," he said.

The Security Council in March, 1976, pledged $385 million to compensate Mozambique for economic hardships resulting from its closing its border with Rhodesia in accordance with U.N. sanctions. But less than a fourth of the total, about $100 million, was contributed, and most of it came from the United States and Britain.

U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young, expressing U.S. support for the resolution Thursday, called on each U.N. member to "redouble its efforts" to meet Mozambique's request for aid. But he did not indicate how much more the United States might give.

The council resolution resulted from charges from Mozambique that well armed Rhodesian forces had made "massive, escalating attacks" on its territory in the 15 months since President Samora Machel closed the border.

Bodies found in Dallas field

DALLAS (AP) — Officers were attempting today to identify one of two bodies found Thursday in a hay field in the Oak Cliff section of Dallas.

The body of a man found there has been identified as Mario Alvarado Garcia, 28, a native of Zacatecas, Mexico, who had been living in Dallas. The woman's body was not immediately identified.

Officers theorized Thursday that both had been shot to death in the field, but there was no immediate ruling from the medical examiner's office.

One of the bodies was found by a field hand who earlier in the week had found some shoes while mowing hay in the field. The second body was found by investigating officers.

A Dallas police spokesman noted that the bodies were found in the same general area as the bodies of two persons who were found shot to death last September.

Cars to require air bags

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is expected to approve a Transportation Department decision requiring automakers to build air bags or automatic safety belts into new cars, beginning with the 1982 models.

By 1984, all new cars sold in this country should be required to have the devices, which Transportation Secretary Brock Adams says could save 9,000 lives a year.

The key to the program's chances is that Adams is giving the companies plenty of time, phasing in the program over three years.

Congress has 60 days to review the plan. Unless the program is then rejected, it will become law. The secretary told his news conference Thursday he was confident the plan would be sustained.

There appeared to be no general opposition on Capitol Hill. Within an hour of Adams' announcement, however, Rep. Bud Shuster, R-Pa., an outspoken opponent of air bags, introduced a resolution to overturn the decision.

Shuster said there is "no hard evidence that air bags will save lives and it could cost

American consumers over $20 billion.

Sen Robert Griffin, R-Mich., introduced a separate, opposing resolution and told the Senate "Secretary Adams' decision will put Big Brother in the front seat of every American automobile. It's both ironic and appropriate that his target year to finish the job is 1984."

Adams estimated the air bags will cost $100-$300 per car, installed, with the seat belts adding less than $100.

Sen Donald Riegle, D-Mich., called the decision reasonable and said it provided sufficient time for the automakers to add the equipment.

The automatic seat belts, in use for several years on various models, wrap around passengers and lock into place in the event of a crash. The balloon-shaped air bags, designed to inflate at the moment of a collision, keep passengers from hitting the steering wheel, dash or windshield.

Even the response of the automakers, who have fought vigorously against the passive restraints, seemed comparatively mild.

Only Chrysler responded angrily, charging that Adams' decision "will force the American people to pay triple the cost for a second-best system."

The No. 3 automaker accused Adams of ignoring "his own agency's data, which show that present belt systems will save 50 per cent more lives than air bags." The company urged Congress to overturn the decision.

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader criticized the staggered plan, saying Adams did it to avoid a congressional veto.

"This is the first time the federal government has phased in an auto-safety standard,"

Nader said. "This is a very bad precedent."

"This says to the public, if you can't afford a large luxury car, you're going to have to wait for safety protection," he added. "While we have one government agency telling us to buy small cars to save fuel, we have another telling us we cannot yet have safety devices in those cars."

Insurance companies hailed the decision. Allstate Insurance said it "will save more lives and prevent more injuries than any other single decision made in the development of the automobile."

Names in the news

VAIL, Colo. (AP) — Former President Gerald Ford and his wife Betty are vacationing for two months here at the home of Texas oilman Dick Bass.

Ford's personal aide, Maj. Bob Barrett, said the Fords will lunch Saturday with Empress Farah of Iran. Accompanying her will be the Iranian ambassador to the United States, Ardeshir Zahedi.

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger also may visit on Saturday, Barrett said.

The Fords arrived here Thursday and plan to stay through Labor Day. For security reasons, they have stayed at Bass' home on their Vail sojourns since Ford became president in 1974. A condominium they own two blocks from the Bass home has been unused for years.

DEL MAR, Calif. (AP) — Country singer Buck Owens and his estranged wife, Jana Jae, are back together on stage, that is.

The former Miss Grief, a fiddler in Owens' band, left him two days after their wedding May 2, when the singer filed for an annulment.

Owens, who blamed "cold feet," placed newspaper ads begging her to forgive him, but she stayed away. He was hospitalized briefly during their honeymoon after being tossed and stepped on by a horse.

They are here through Saturday on a four-day stint at the Southern California Exposition.

VANCOUVER, Canada (AP) — England's Prince Andrew is on a seven-day tour of British Columbia to coincide with Canada Day celebrations.

He arrived at Vancouver International Airport in nearby Richmond shortly after noon Thursday and was met by several dignitaries, including Lt. Gov. Walter Owen of British Columbia.

Among his activities are a citizenship ceremony at the HMCS Discovery in Burrard Inlet, a tour of the city, and a private party hosted by the lieutenant governor.

BERLIN (AP) — Prison authorities are trying to make life a little more pleasant for Rudolf Hess, the 83-year-old former Hitler deputy who is serving a life sentence.

For the first time, Hess has been allowed to watch color television on a regular basis, informed sources said.

In addition, Hess is now allowed two visits instead of one from his immediate family each month and more leeway in picking the time he may spend in the prison garden, the sources said.

Hess, the only remaining prisoner in West Berlin's Spandau prison, was sentenced at the Nuremberg war crimes trial in 1946.

White House isn't laughing at Amy ad

WASHINGTON (AP) — The ad looks legit. Peering out at you is Amy Carter, carrying her Siamese cat. She is striding off somewhere, looking, if not exactly pathetic, at least concerned.

"You can Save Amy," the copy says. "Or You Can Turn The Page."

The ad in the July issue of Washingtonian magazine was a joke, but the White House wasn't exactly convulsed with laughter.

It looks like the Save the Children Fund ads, the ones with the little child in tatters clutching his empty rice bowl.

"Amy is smiling here, but there is sadness in her eyes," says the text, detailing how Amy's father works long hours and how Amy is faced with "the constant glare of flashbulbs, with men in suits lurking nearby carrying loaded guns."

At the bottom of the page is an appeal from "Overprivileged Kids, Inc.," for money so that children like Amy can spend two weeks among real people.

Editors of the magazine, which appeals to an upper-middle class audience in the Washington area, say the joke ad was just an attempt to amuse.

But tell that to the White House.

Amy's mother's press secretary, Mary Hoyt, called it "a very questionable public relations gimmick."

"It's different," she conceded, adding that she thinks "the Washingtonian is overestimating its readers if it thinks everyone will take it as a joke."

At 1625 Massachusetts Ave., N.W., the address on a coupon in the ad, a number of envelopes containing checks and coins have been received by the occupant at that address — the Democratic National Committee. The letters, some addressed in crayon with a childish scrawl, are being returned by the Postal Service.

DNC administrator J.D. Nelson says his funnybone hasn't been tickled.

Jaws from the prairie

W.D. Thomas of Pampa knows to handle a prairie dog with care; the animals' long front teeth can bite through a leather glove. Thomas discovered this animal, nicknamed the Foam Rubber Bandit, Thursday morning at Pampa Tent and Awning, 317 E. Browning. The prairie dog was attempting to escape from the building and in the process tore up a piece of foam rubber against the lower wall. When employees found the foam scattered about the floor Thursday morning, Thomas began searching for rats. Instead, he came face to face with the prairie dog. He estimated the animal to be approximately 6 months old and, at five inches in length, is only half grown. Thomas said people do keep prairie dogs as pets, and unless the animal he found Thursday came to town from one of the fields outside of town, he suspects the prairie dog is a runaway pet. This pet may have a new owner; Thomas said he may find a steel cage for the animal and give it to eight- or nine-year-old Susan Graves, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Graves. Mrs. Graves is one of Thomas' co-workers.

Charlotte found safe

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Charlotte Grosse, who was dragged screaming from a Girl Scout campground two days ago, was found safe today and a suspect was arrested, sheriff's officials said.

Screaming, "Please don't take me!" the 15-year-old girl was dragged from her tent at the camp on Wednesday. Today she called the sheriff's office about 10 a.m. to say her abductor had kept his pledge and set her free on Siesta Key, the beach area off Sarasota. Sheriff's Cpl. Ray Pilon said.

Charlotte had been allowed to make her first call to her parents on Wednesday night to tell them the kidnaper "just wanted to get rid of her," Pilon said. Officers rushed to pick up Charlotte, and shortly afterward apprehended a suspect in the case in the same beach area, he said.

There were no immediate details of where the girl had been held or the identity of her abductor.

Her parents, Richard and Carol Grosse, had heard from her 17 hours after the abduction and had been told that she would be freed. She promised another call shortly, but that call did not come.

The abduction came two weeks after three Girl Scouts were found sexually assaulted and murdered in their sleeping bags at a campground near Locust Grove, Okla.

A prison escapee, Gene LeRoy Hart, has been charged with the murders and the FBI has entered the search. Agents said they think Hart was in the area before the June 13 slayings but a widespread search that included door-to-door interviews and circulation of Hart's pictures have failed to turn up any trace of him.

Today's Sarasota Herald Tribune quoted an unidentified witness who told the FBI of seeing Charlotte Wednesday night at the telephone booth in Bradenton, about 30 miles to the north. The witness said the kidnaper may have had a pistol or knife pressed to the girl's abdomen, and that he gripped Charlotte's shoulder with one hand and pressed his other hand against her abdomen as

The girl made no sound and looked as though she had been crying, the witness was quoted as saying. The witness later helped the FBI draw up a composite drawing, the newspaper said.

The drawing showed a man with a fleshy face and a shock of dark, wavy hair.

FBI agent Jack Gaffney said through a sheriff's spokesman that the report "appears to be factual." Gaffney declined further comment.

Sheriff's Cpl. William Stookey said that "statistically, the longer the time goes, the less the chances are for the victim."

Gray commissioners give ballot boxes back again

The Gray County Commissioners Court today restored Precinct 6 (Laketown) and 4 (Alaneed) to the original boundaries which existed in 1973.

At that time Laketon was consolidated with Lefors with voting in Lefors. Alaneed and McLean were consolidated with voting in McLean. The voting now will be in all four places. County Clerk Wanda Carter said the resolution must be approved by the U.S. Justice Department.

The court gave Mrs. Carter permission today to have only four voting places — Pampa, Lefors, Grandview and McLean — for the constitutional amendment election in November.

"It is usually a light election," she said explaining that the fewer voting places the less the cost to county taxpayers.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press A tornado funnel dipped into the far West Texas hamlet of Coyanosa and inflicted damage during the night. Some of the almost nightly rounds of black thunderstorms banged through other areas from the Big Bend country northward into the Texas Panhandle.

State police found a mobile home wrecked and part of a store's roof ripped off at Coyanosa, in Pecos County. Electric power and telephone service were knocked out in the town, which is between Fort Stockton and Pecos. There apparently were no injuries.

Heavier thunderstorms continuing this morning battered areas around Alpine, Fort Davis and Marathon, in the same general area with Coyanosa; and around Wichita Falls and Vernon in the northwest part of the state. The unruly weather was churned up by a summertime cold front which eased southward through the Panhandle-Plains sector while south breezes herded damp and warm air inland from the Gulf of Mexico.

Moisture amounts included 2.05 inches of rain at Alpine and more than an inch in a rural area west of Lubbock.

Measurements at most other points were skimpy. Top temperatures Thursday went as high as 100 degrees at El Paso and Wichita Falls, and 101 at Presidio. Readings early today sank no lower than the 70s and 80s generally.

Forecasts promised no relief from the heat greeting July's arrival. Scattered thunderstorms were expected to dot all sections again by evening.

By The Associated Press Tornadoes and thunderstorms across the Midwest have caused some damage and at least one person has been killed.

Audrey Lighty, 45, of Hodgenville, Ky., was killed Thursday evening when a tornado overturned her mobile home.

Tornadoes were recorded in six states. Illinois had seven, Indiana six, Ohio five, and Ken-

Canada celebrates 110th birthday

OTTAWA, Canada (AP) — The Canadian government is spending $3.5 million to celebrate Canada's 110th birthday today in hopes it will help to undercut the growing movement in Quebec to secede.

A $500,000 national birthday party, televised nationwide tonight from Parliament Hill in Ottawa, will include entertainment by leading Canadian performers, the unfurling of a 145-foot Canadian flag on the clock tower of the Parliament building and a giant fireworks display.

A crowd of 100,000 is expected on the hill while millions watch on television.

Local celebrations range from a mule derby in Miami, Manitoba, to a flag-waving demonstration in Vancouver at which Prince Andrew, second son of Queen Elizabeth II, was named "heir of the world" by the Algonquin Indians. That ceremony was taped Thursday for broadcast today.

It is the first time the federal government has spent heavily for celebration of the national day since the 1967 centennial of the British North America Act, which united Canada.

Last year a Parliament Hill celebration was canceled as an austerity measure. But since then the separatist Parti Quebecois has taken over the Quebec provincial government. Last week it spent $2.5 million celebrating the feast day of St. John the Baptist, the patron saint of French-Canadians, which Premier Rene Levesque proclaimed the province's "fete nationale," or national holiday.

The Parti Quebecois majority in the Quebec legislature blocked a resolution Thursday to send birthday greetings to the rest of Canada, and the opposition walked out.

Bernard Ostry, the federal government official in charge of promoting Canada Day festivities, reported "a grassroots feeling." People are "celebrating something together and not tearing everything down," he said.

Ostry said the government spent $1 million on radio and television advertising and contributed $1 million to voluntary organizations promoting the celebration. It is spending $600,000 for the Parliament Hill program, $500,000 to pay performers in other towns and cities and $500,000 to start organizing next year's celebrations, Ostry reported.

Public opinion polls show that up to 40 per cent of Quebec's residents would favor independence as long as it includes an economic association with Canada. However, the premiers of all five provinces to the west have ruled out any kind of economic association with Quebec if it becomes independent.

Advice

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I was recently wed to a wonderful man in all respects except one. He insists on keeping the pictures of all his previous girlfriends, and he has had quite a few. He has them all neatly mounted in a large picture album, which he insists on leaving on our coffee table, along with our wedding album.

When we have friends over, to be sure they don't miss it, he starts going through the albums, bragging about all the chicks he's had.

I voluntarily destroyed all the pictures I had of myself and previous acquaintances, and I think he should do the same.

He knows how I feel because I've mentioned it several times. He says I am being childish—that there is nothing wrong with recalling a few memories.

His keeping and showing that album hurts me deeply. How can I get him to stop, Abby? Should I destroy them myself and put an end to it?

HURT

DEAR HURT: No, but tell him that his recalling those memories hurts you deeply and to please put them out of sight. A married man who needs to brag about the "chicks" he's had is an insecure little boy whose "manhood" needs constant reassuring. He also has a touch of cruelty.

DEAR ABBY: A neighbor boy and I are pretty good friends, but he's never asked me for a date. He's 19 and I'm 18. He is quite handsome and by no means shy, but he hasn't dated much. I'm a little bit overweight, but have been told that I have a pretty face and good personality.

The other night we were sitting on my front porch, and he asked me to get him a date with a good-looking girl. He said he could take a girl to the movies, hold her hand and talk sweet to her as well as any other boy.

Now, here's what I want to ask you. If I were to tell him that I could be taken to the movies, my hand could be held, and I would enjoy sweet talk more than some good-looking girl who hears it every Friday night, would he get the wrong idea?

CINDY

DEAR CINDY: No, he'd probably get the RIGHT idea.

DEAR ABBY: How does one forget someone he loves? I can't seem to get over her. It's not true that time heals. The pain seems to be getting worse as the days and weeks go by.

I have even thought about moving to another city, but no matter where I go I'll see the kind of car she drives, and every time I turn on the radio I'll hear the songs we both liked. I'll still think of her when I see her favorite color, or actor, or television program. She is on my mind constantly, even though there is no hope of reviving the relationship.

I know it would be best to forget her, but as long as there is still love (and there is, as much now as ever), is it possible to forget? Can you kill love? If so, tell me how.

PIECES

DEAR PIECES: You can't "kill" love, but you can let it die quietly from malnutrition. Don't permit yourself to dwell on thoughts of her. The moment they come into your mind, drive them out with another thought about something else. The less you allow "her" to live in your memory, the sooner you'll get over her.

Ask Dr. Lamb
Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I have a stomach problem. The X rays showed a slightly herniated diaphragm and no active ulcers. I get heartburn and sour stomach after meals on some occasions and especially if I lie down after meals. I also get burning in bed at night if I roll and change positions.

My most pressing problem is a burning sensation while I am eating as the food enters my stomach. Some foods such as citrus fruits and juices, tomatoes, sauces made from tomatoes and foods containing vinegar will cause this at all times. Other foods will do this also on some occasions.

I have been told that a sensitive stomach and spasms give me this burning sensation as I eat. Does this sound right for the cause of this?

DEAR READER: Your doctors are telling you that you have a hiatal hernia, a hernia of a small part of your stomach through the hole in your diaphragm. This is often associated with leaking the contents of your stomach backward into the lower esophagus (the food tube between your mouth and stomach). The normal closure mechanism prevents the leak but your closure mechanism is not working right.

The stomach is protected from the acid digestive juice with a thick mucus layer. The lower esophagus is not and the acid digestive juice burns and irritates it. It can cause an ulcer in that location as well. This may cause the burning sensation you complain about, just under the tip of your breast bone.

There are a lot of things you can do. Eat small meals, do not lie down after eating. You have already found out that causes burning. Don't eat fats or meaty dishes for your evening meal as that will delay stomach emptying.

You will do better if your bed is propped up and you will find that sleeping on your back or right side helps.

To give you the information you need I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-8, Hiatal Hernia, Esophageal Reflux. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB: Can you explain what causes a person's blood to be very thick and need to have a pint of blood removed every month or sometimes twice a month? The blood can't be used for anything and is simply thrown down the drain. If the blood isn't removed twice a month the year around he becomes very sick.

DEAR READER: You are probably describing a condition doctors call polycythemia vera. Which means simply a true overproduction of red blood cells. It is distinguished from known causes for increased red blood cell production such as exposure to altitude.

No one knows what causes polycythemia vera. The usual treatment is removal of the excess blood that is formed. If that is not suitable for management some patients are treated by chemically damaging the bone marrow so it will stop producing too many cells. As long as he does well simply from the periodic removal of blood that is probably the best approach.

(Because of the volume of mail Dr. Lamb cannot answer your letter personally but he will answer representative letters of general interest in his column.)

DEAR POLLY: Sometimes I am called away or get busy doing something else after I have baked round layers for a cake and they completely cool in the pans. I found that setting them on top of a pan of boiling water for two or three minutes loosens them and they pop right out of the pans with no cracks in the bottom or sides. They are then ready to frost; the short time over the boiling water does not heat up the cake part. This is especially nice if I am cooking something that requires boiling water. — GLORIA.

DEAR POLLY: When making ladies slacks I press the creases in before sewing them together. I find this makes it easier to get, or make, a nice straight crease. I fold each piece in the center—the front crease is straight up and the back is slanted toward the top of the slacks. I do hope this proves as easy for others as it has been for me. — MRS. M.O.

DEAR POLLY: My teenager is a great little cook but after a while I discovered we had accumulated a drawer full of rubber spatulas with broken handles. I remedied this situation by buying five-eighths inch wooden dowel sticks at the hardware store. Then I shaved the end that is inserted in the rubber top for a good fit and sanded the other end to make a round handle. These are even better and stronger than new. One dowel makes three handles. — MARY C.

Houses add porches for cool

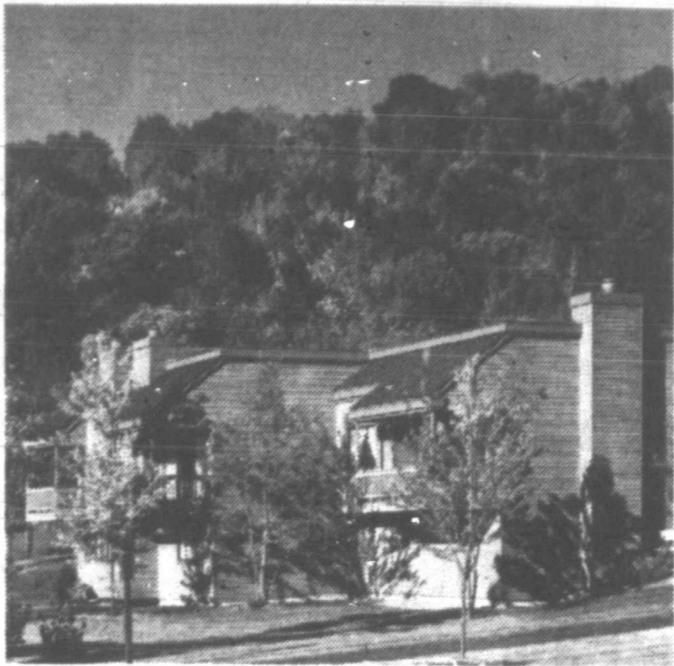

By Norman Nadel

NEW YORK — (NEA) — "Summer is in" sang some otherwise unremembered bard in mellifluous Middle English, centuries ago, and the coming of summer still merits celebration. But warm weather also poses problems of keeping cool, rendered more acute now and in the future by the energy shortage.

With the curtailment of air conditioning as real a prospect as last winter's cut-back on heat, an old architectural compromise is beginning to look good again: Porches.

Front porches. Back porches. Side porches. Breezeways. Balconies. Also windows—the real kind that open, admitting cross-breezes that can take down the temperature of a whole house, especially at night.

What this means, in terms of aesthetics, is a new-old look in residential architecture—houses and apartments—that could be very attractive, if employed tastefully. Look at any moderately well designed home dating from the early decades of this century. Without windows and porches, it would have been a big box with an angled roof. Windows make it appear accessible. Porches make it hospitable, while camouflaging the boxy appearance.

The fuel crisis may well stimulate more architects to design porches for contemporary houses. The effect should be to strengthen, rather than fracture, the clean diagonal of the principal roof. This example of contemporary porch design comes from Heritage Hills in Westchester County, N.Y.

Porches were part and parcel of most houses through the 1920s and into the following decade. For half the year in most areas they functioned as extra sitting rooms as well as respites from indoor heat. Screened, they were and are even better; back porches are

A MINIMUM OF GRADING is required for this split level with its front door at grade level. A sense of spaciousness—totaling almost 30 feet between the kitchen and recreation room—is created by use of a balconied railing that separates the two areas. Plan HA988Y by Herman H. Antique stickpins charm collector

By Jean Barnes

The really good old stickpins are few and far between, according to collector Karl B., a native Kansan and retired engineer. Karl's collection is small as numbers go, but each stickpin is a choice piece. These days he considers himself fortunate to find more than one or two in a year's time.

"I wasn't that careful when I first started," he said. "My first one was a gold nugget that my wife had a jeweler mount for me." That was 15 years ago and after receiving it he started looking for others.

"I bought almost everyone I found," he explained. "Now I've weeded out the collection and used those I didn't want to keep as trading material. Now I have 42 but every one is special."

He took one stickpin from a soft suede case and showed it to me. It was a small cube of ivory with a carved design on the front of it. The cube was set between pins so that it could rotate from side to side. In one side of the cube you could see that it had been hollowed out leaving a scene of a native man standing before a thatched hut with a tree in the background. It was all done in nearly microscopic proportions. Seen through a magnifying glass the carving is amazingly detailed. Karl said that several years ago he showed it to a mining engineer friend who had spent many years in Burma and was knowledgeable about oriental art.

great for breakfast or any informal meal.

They were the principal aesthetic feature of a home, just as the garage door has become in most houses built in the past 30 or more years. The house has become an accessory to the car.

While air conditioning just about wiped out porches in new construction, their decline had begun earlier. In the depression, dropping or diminishing the porch to a sheltered stoop meant economy in construction. With radio, then TV, people no longer needed the entertainment of watching neighbors pass by on the street. Privacy began to outweigh neighborliness. And finally, electrical air cooling did in the porch as an escape from summer swelter.

In recent years they have been replaced by token porches, or tiny balconies—the latter especially in apartment construction. Frequently these tiered balconies, along with making an otherwise grim structure look somewhat homey, are pleasant enough to sit on.

But look around. In Florida, New England, the Southwest, the West Coast, anywhere I've traveled, I've checked these little balconies. Rarely are they occupied by living creatures other than household pets.

Today electricity is more expensive than ever before. Energy supplies are depleting. Air conditioning isn't going to end in the summer season just starting, but it will start to change from a necessity to a luxury. It will be turned on less often.

We're lucky. Sixteen years ago we bought a home on Staten Island, N.Y., almost within sight of Manhattan's towers across Upper New York Bay. Its architecture is 1920 Ordinary; a square wooden box.

But with porches, front and back. Although we air conditioned, we've never ceased to enjoy the porches. Also, there are the two dozen trees, which are good for a few degrees of cooling, as they shade the outer walls and, in the case of the two tall pin oaks, shade the roof as well.

If we were to move, and build, the first step would be to find an architect who appreciates long roof overhangs, as did the late Frank Lloyd Wright, and who would enjoy the challenge of incorporating porches into a contemporary design. Figuratively and sometimes literally, a porch roof is a long extension of an overhang, and can strengthen rather than fracture the clean diagonal of the principal roof.

If the porch has glass windows, preferably louvers, that can be opened and shut, it provides insulation against winter's cold as well as relief from summer's heat.

Nobody enjoys conditioned air more than I do, and I'm not about to give it up just to illustrate a point. But if—maybe, when—it becomes either too scarce or too expensive, the front porch and the back porch will become the alternatives.

They might even come back in fashion.

UNITY

"There is one body and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling, one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all and in you all" (Eph. 4:4-6).

Here is God's platform for unity among those who believe on Him and seek eternal life through Jesus Christ.

1. The body is the one church or kingdom founded by Christ (Eph. 1:22-23; Col. 1:18). Christ is its Savior (Eph. 5:23.) It was purchased with his blood (Acts 20:28).
2. The Spirit is the Holy Spirit; a part of the Godhead (Matt. 28:19). Jesus told Nicodemus that to enter the kingdom one must be born of water and the Spirit (John 3:5).
3. The one hope is that of eternal life in the presence of God, which, of course, is to be obtained at the time of judgment (1 Peter 1:3-5).
4. The Lord is the one Lord, our Savior, Jesus Christ. He was made Lord or master, when he returned to the Father having obeyed the Father's will. Jesus NOW has all power and authority in heaven and on earth. He is NOW a KING! (Matt. 28:18; Acts 2:36).
5. The one faith is the New Covenant revealed by the apostles whom Jesus selected and to whom he sent the Holy Spirit to guide them in the revelation of it. It is a complete and perfect law (John 3; Gal. 1:23). It is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth. It tells the sinner what to do to be saved (Rom. 1:16-17.)
6. One baptism, is that which Jesus commanded (Matt. 28:19-20); that which the apostles preached (Acts 2:38); it is a burial in water (Rom. 6:3-5; Acts 8:36) and is for or in order to obtain the remission of past sins (Mark 16:15-16; Acts 2:38; 1 Peter 3:21).
7. One God; the Heavenly Father, the Creator, He whom Jesus called Father; He in whom we live, move and have our very being (Acts 17:22-28).

These are God's terms for unity, the basis or foundation upon which the unity for which Christ prayed in John 17, and that which is taught in 1 Cor. 1:10, can be attained. There is no other way in which men can please God. Consider what God has said about it.

ATTEND CHURCH

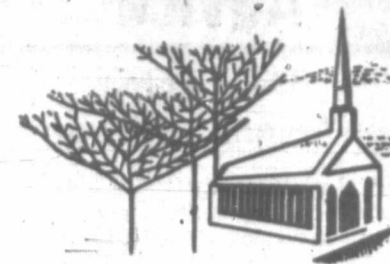

EVERYONE LOVES A PARADE

To hear the band, to see the uniformed soldiers, to see the might of our tanks, to see the strength of our country, these things stir the heart and make us proud to be an American. Our God has made us strong and blessed us greatly, however our greatest strength is in the Lord. "GOD is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble." In these unsettled times we need to show our faith in the Lord, and speak with the courage of one whose father can do all things. Renew your strength each week by attending services in the Lord's house.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Woman says her loan went to bank owner

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — A Mexican woman says she borrowed almost $140,000 from the now-defunct Citizens State Bank of Carrizo Springs and gave most of the proceeds to her cousin, Enrique Salinas, who was principal owner of the bank.

Blanca Alicia de Aldaco gave the testimony in a sworn deposition taken Wednesday at the federal courthouse here.

She said she never saw any of the money she signed notes for, although at least $16,000 of the total supposedly went to pay for a house she purchased in Eagle Pass.

Mrs. Aldaco is among 13 persons indicted last month for alleged banking law violations at the Citizens State, which was closed in June 1976 by the state banking commissioner. Salinas is also charged in the case.

Mrs. Aldaco, in about four hours of testimony, detailed three loans she received from the bank.

Mrs. Aldaco related the following story in her testimony:

She moved to Eagle Pass from Mexico in 1975 because of marital problems. Salinas helped her find a home and arranged financing through the Citizens State Bank where he was a stockholder.

She signed a blank promissory note from the bank, which later was filled in for $9,400. But she said she never received the money and that the signature on the back of a $9,400 cashiers check made to her was a forgery.

In November 1975 she signed another blank promissory note, also brought to her by Salinas. The note was later made for $40,000. She said she received a $40,000 cashiers check from the bank and endorsed it to buy two new cashiers checks — one for $16,000 to pay for her house and the other for $24,000 to Salinas' Bensal Corp.

In March 1976, Salinas came to her with a cashiers check made to her for $88,000. She and Salinas took the check to a bank in Eagle Pass where Mrs. Aldaco opened a checking account and deposited the $88,000.

She then withdrew $87,500 in a cashiers check and took it with Salinas across the border to Piedras Negras to a Mexican bank.

Mrs. Aldaco said she endorsed the check and Salinas took it. She said the money was supposed to purchase the Mexican ranch of one of Salinas' brothers, but she never received any ownership papers and never saw the $87,500.

The day after cashing the check, she said Salinas brought her a promissory note to repay the $88,000 to the Citizens State Bank and she signed it.

Mrs. Aldaco, who has been in the Bexar County Jail here in lieu of bonds totaling $100,000 since her arrest, said she has never repaid any of the loans.

She said she allowed Salinas to handle her finances because "he was a banker and I trusted him."

The indictment against Mrs. Aldaco alleges she misapplied bank funds by giving a portion of the loan proceeds to Salinas.

Trial of those charged in the case is scheduled to begin here July 11 in federal court.

Honda cars exploited?

DETROIT (AP) — You may have to wait up to a year for delivery of Honda's Accord, the hottest foreign car to hit the U.S. market in two decades, and then you may pay $400 over list price for the privilege of waiting.

As a result, the Japanese car, which this month celebrates its first birthday here, has been the subject of charges that dealers are exploiting its popularity through price gouging.

Industry observers say they haven't seen anything like it since the 1950s, when the Volkswagen Beetle was short in supply and long in demand.

The national sales manager for American Honda Motor Co., the U.S. distributor, says he can't remember such eager buyers since the end of World War II. "I'd say there's a four- to six-month wait on the average," said Cliff Schmillen.

A salesman at a suburban Detroit Buick dealership which also sells the Accord said he has received phone calls from would-be buyers in California, where they said the wait is up to a year.

Honda has doubled last year's monthly import total of 2,500 Accords. Company officials say they can't raise shipments again until 1978, and then they expect only a 20 per cent boost.

Why is the car so popular? The consensus is that the Accord is a good buy for the money. It also has received rave reviews from car and consumer magazines.

The Accord was introduced last year with a manufacturer's suggested retail price of $3,995.

The "base" price included such options as a rear window wiper-washer and defroster, side window defroster, five-speed transmission, tachometer, electric clock, coin box and AM-FM radio. Such amenities are added-cost options on American cars.

The price has gone up to $4,265 since then, and it will go up again to $4,465 as of July 15, because of a strengthening of the Japanese yen relative to the dollar.

Texas-London flight set

DALLAS (AP) — Braniff International has offered a reduced "skytrain" rate from Texas to England and asked the Civil Aeronautics Board to convene hearings on the reduced rates.

The Dallas-based airline offered a $250 one-way fare from the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport to London.

Braniff asked for expedited hearings on its request.

In its motion to the board Braniff asked for separate hearings for the three United States cities named in a bilateral agreement with Great Britain.

Service has been proposed from Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston and Atlanta. Braniff vice president Tom Robertson said separate hearings would be the quickest way to determine which airline could best serve the routes.

"For example, there is no need for Braniff to participate in or delay the Atlanta-Europe proceeding and no need for Delta to participate in or delay the Dallas-Fort Worth or Houston to Europe cases," Robertson said.

Under the terms of the British bilateral agreement reached last week, U.S. carriers can begin non-stop service between Dallas-Fort Worth and London and one-stop service between Houston and London.

Board suggests insurance rates be reduced

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The staff of the State Board of Insurance recommended today that property insurance rates be reduced 3.7 per cent statewide.

The recommendation goes to the board which meets Friday for a rehearing of the board order issued in March which called for a 2.8 per cent cut. The rehearing will continue on July 6.

The rehearing was asked by the insurance industry which had asked for a 6.6 per cent increase in rates.

Rates set by the board following the rehearing sessions and presentation of evidence will take effect in November or December.

Board officials said the 3.7 per cent reduction would cut premium payments in Texas by an estimated $25 million. The industry-proposed increase would have raised premium payments by $45 million.

Her water bill was $2,945

GRETNA, La. (AP) — Henrietta Guidry has a small garden to tend at her home, and it has needed extra water because of the long dry spell.

But when she received her water bill the other day, she was certain she couldn't have used the seven million gallons the city said.

Besides, she didn't have the $2,945 charged.

Off she went to City Hall, where they quickly found an error in the computer billing system. The correct bill: $4.24.

Wimbledon dream final

Connors to face Borg

WIMBLEDON (AP) — Fittingly, the men's singles final in the centenary Wimbledon has come down to Jimmy Connors against Bjorn Borg.

They are considered the two best players in the world.

They are the top seeds, Connors at No. 1 and Borg No. 2.

They are former Wimbledon champions, Connors in 1974 and Borg last year.

And they do not like each other much.

But they offer the finest tennis in the game today, and their title match Saturday on Wimbledon's famed center court should provide an appropriate climax to the 100th anniversary of the sport's most prestigious tournament ... a tournament that this year has been packed with excitement and drama.

The women's final, between Virginia Wade, trying to become the first Britisher to win the title since 1960, and Betty Stove, the first player from The Netherlands to reach the last round, was to be held today, with Queen Elizabeth II among the spectators.

While the women's championship match was a battle between two steady, consistent veterans — Miss Wade is 32 and Miss Stove 31 — the men's final was expected to be a classic between two, hard-hitting, flawless youngsters — Connors is 24 and Borg 21.

The controversial Connors, from Belleville, Ill., playing with his fractured right thumb heavily bandaged, needed 2 hours, 40 minutes to beat gritty, 18-year-old phenom John McEnroe of Douglaston, N.Y. 6-3, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4 in Thursday's opening men's semifinal.

Then, the thin, cat-quick, long-haired Borg outlasted tough Vitas Gerulaitis of Howard Beach, N.Y. 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, 6-6, 8-6 in a sizzling 3 hour, 10-minute duel that was considered one of the best matches on the All-England Club's center court in years.

The results set up the eagerly awaited Connors-Borg confrontation, the 10th meeting between the court masters, but their first ever at Wimbledon. Connors leads the series 7-2, including a victory in last year's U.S. Open final at Forest Hills.

Borg, seeking to become the first man to win two consecutive Wimbledon titles since Australia's John Newcombe did it in 1970-71, called his match against the game Gerulaitis the best he had played since beating Rod Laver of Australia in five sets in the 1975 World Championship Tennis final at Dallas.

McEnroe, the youngest player ever to reach the semifinals and the first to make it from the qualifying ranks, was unhappy about not making the final, although he had proven the sensation of the tournament.

"I didn't go out there to be respectable," he said after losing to Connors, the world's top-ranked player. "I went out there to win."

Even Connors acknowledged the teenager's tenacious play. "He made shots from impossible angles," he said. "I think he has a very good future if he works at his game."

Foul!

Pampa Pizza Hut second-base man Mark Smith fouls off a bunt against Berger Fish in the recently-concluded Panhandle - Caprock Senior Babe Ruth Tournament. Fish catcher Jeff Yarbrough rises in anticipation of a

Centre Court awes McEnroe

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Brash and brassy John McEnroe said the center court at Wimbledon awed him more than the world's best tennis player, Jimmy Connors.

"It looked so big," he said of the hallowed enclosure where British royalty has applauded the great stars down through the ages.

"It seemed so much bigger than the others. I was nervous at first but settled down. I didn't go out there to be respectable. I went out there to win."

think he has a very good future if he works at his game.

"I thought I should have won in three sets, but I missed an easy high volley in the third set that would have given me a 5-3 lead.

"It was hard for me to get up psychologically for the match. I'd rather be into a match mentally rather than physically any day."

McEnroe, whose attorney father John McEnroe Sr. flew in from the states to watch from the stands, added a light post-match touch when he described his first meeting with his famed opponent.

"I saw him in the dressing room," McEnroe said, "but we didn't speak."

"Did you introduce yourself?" someone asked.

"No, one of the officials introduced us," the boy replied.

"What did you say to him?" A reporter pursued the line of questioning.

"I got down on my knees and bowed to him like this," McEnroe said, mimicking a Muslim paying homage to Allah.

Everybody laughed.

McEnroe was asked again whether he planned to continue schooling or dump the idea to pursue the riches on the pro tour. He has planned to enter Stanford University.

"I'll wait and see what I do at Forest Hills," he said. "I may get in the semifinals there, too."

Connors, who quit college to turn pro, said he wouldn't dare advise another person but that many players who chose the tournament career had found disappointments.

McEnroe's father, standing in a corner of the interview room, said: "Personally, I'd prefer he continue his schooling."

Sox steamrolled

The Associated Press
Larry Grobner pitched a six-hitter and Tony Pepper hit a grand slam home run in the third inning as Midland steamrolled Amarillo 19-2 Thursday in a Texas League game.

Steve Davis and Duane Gustavson both socked two-run homers as Midland charged to victory. Grobner is now 3-3 while losing pitcher Galen McSpadden slipped to 5-5.

In other Texas League games, El Paso whipped San Antonio 12-2 and Shreveport beat Tulsa 6-2.

El Paso's Bob Ferris, 6-3, pitched a five-hitter to San Antonio with relief help from Jerry Quigley, Joe Beckwith, 1-1, picked up the loss as El Paso scored six unearned runs.

Shreveport's Rick Honeycutt went the distance and gave up only four hits and two unearned runs to Tulsa for his sixth victory against three losses. Larry Littleton led the Shreveport attack with a two-run homer. Danny Darwin, 5-2, took the loss for Tulsa.

"The Bird" packs 'em in DETROIT (AP) — Everyone in the Motor City loves Mark "The Bird" Fidrych — except the guards at Tiger Stadium.

"The guards come to me and say: 'Please, Mark, we want to go home, you've got to get out there,'" says Fidrych of the now standard practice of taking curtain calls following his mound appearances for the Detroit Tigers.

The largest crowd of the season, 51,745, demanded Fidrych's reappearance on the field Wednesday night after he scattered nine hits to post a 7-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox. The triumph was his sixth straight following two losses after a late start caused by a spring knee injury.

The loss was Boston's sixth in a row and gave the Red Sox only a one-game lead over New York in the American League East Division race.

"If the people come to see you and get a few autographs and all, that's the least I can do," Fidrych says of his post-game ritual. "After all, they pay my salary, you gotta give 'em what they want."

What they want is every glimpse possible of the 22-year-old righthander from Northboro, Mass., now in his second season in Detroit.

"I think I'm getting a little more mature," he says. "I'm the same pitcher I was a year ago (when he went 19-9). I'm throwing the same stuff. But in your first year in the majors you're way out there, you know. In your second year, you get your head together a little more."

In his last three outings, Fidrych has drawn an average of more than 45,000 fans to Tiger Stadium, where people shout and cheer and stomp their feet during the game and then reach new crescendos afterwards until "The Bird" makes his customary appearance outside the Tiger dugout.

"We help each other," he says. "When I heard everyone yelling for me in the ninth inning, I think I was throwing my fast ball harder than ever. It gets my blood flowing."

"But it does something for the people in the stands, too. They get to go home with a win. If they have to drive for two hours, they're still high and talking about winning. If they see us lose, then they think, 'Aaah, let's not go all this way again.'

"So you see, we help each other."

Fidrych, however, is his own best helper. He throws strikes.

Wednesday night, only 45 of his 126 pitches missed the strike zone.

But he cares only about one statistic — wins.

McEnroe, a schoolboy and an amateur, was the youngest player ever to qualify for the men's semifinals and play on the center court in the 100 years of this tournament.

Connors admitted the youngster showed a lot of poise under the most trying conditions.

"I remember how I felt when I first played here," Connors said. "The pressure, the crowd of 14,000 seeming to sit right on top of you and all that open space up above."

"The birds are flying around up there."

Connors said he found it hard to play against McEnroe's go-for-broke abandon.

"He tees off on his shots and made shots from impossible angles," Connors added. "I think he has a very good future if he works at his game.

"I thought I should have won in three sets, but I missed an easy high volley in the third set that would have given me a 5-3 lead.

"It was hard for me to get up psychologically for the match. I'd rather be into a match mentally rather than physically any day."

McEnroe, whose attorney father John McEnroe Sr. flew in from the states to watch from the stands, added a light post-match touch when he described his first meeting with his famed opponent.

"I saw him in the dressing room," McEnroe said, "but we didn't speak."

"Did you introduce yourself?" someone asked.

"No, one of the officials introduced us," the boy replied.

"What did you say to him?" A reporter pursued the line of questioning.

"I got down on my knees and bowed to him like this," McEnroe said, mimicking a Muslim paying homage to Allah.

Everybody laughed.

McEnroe was asked again whether he planned to continue schooling or dump the idea to pursue the riches on the pro tour. He has planned to enter Stanford University.

"I'll wait and see what I do at Forest Hills," he said. "I may get in the semifinals there, too."

Connors, who quit college to turn pro, said he wouldn't dare advise another person but that

Angels dropping with battle scars

ANAHEIM (AP) — The California Angels are, in the words of General Manager Harry Dalton, "dropping like flies." And things don't figure to get much better in the near future.

The Angels, who were among the most active major league teams in the off-season free-agent bidding war, will be without the trio of celebrated stars they signed following the 1976 campaign when they open a five-game series against the Oakland A's tonight.

It was to be determined today if shortstop Bobby Grich, who signed a five-year, $1.5 million contract last fall, will require surgery on his ailing back.

Should that be the case, and it is expected that Grich will need an operation, he will probably be sidelined for the rest of the season.

Outfielder Joe Rudi, who signed a five-year, $2.1 million contract, is on the Angels' supplemental disabled list because of a broken bone in his hand suffered when he was hit by a Nelson Briles pitch last Sunday.

Don Baylor, the third of the talented trio signed by Angels' owner Gene Autrey, has a pulled hamstring muscle. His availability is on a day-to-day basis.

And that's not all. Pitcher

Gary Nolan, acquired from the Cincinnati Reds June 15, is expected to be out at least two more weeks with a pulled muscle in his neck.

Rookie shortstop Rance Mulliniks has a hamstring injury and is on a day-to-day basis.

Meanwhile, infielders Dave Chalk and Mario Guerrero, outfielder Gil Flores and pitcher Gary Ross have minor assorted ailments and probably shouldn't be playing now, but are seeing action because of the team's near-desperate situation.

"It's the worst injury wave I've seen in the 17-year history of the Angels," added Frederico, the American League's senior trainer.

Despite the Angels' ills, the team was only 4½ games behind Minnesota in the American League West entering play tonight.

Babe Ruth won or shared the American League home run championships 12 times. He won it outright on 10 occasions and shared it twice.

Trevino tries again

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Lee Trevino is a godsend to sponsors of the Greater Milwaukee Open Golf Tournament. Trevino hopes the tournament is just as good to him—but the struggling superstar isn't counting on it.

Hard rain and a forecast of more, forced postponement of Thursday's start of the $130,000 tourney. The revised schedule calls for 18 holes both Friday and Saturday, followed by a 36-hole finale starting at 7 a.m. CDT, Sunday.

Trevino, onetime U.S. Open, British Open and PGA champion, is the biggest single draw in this tournament, skipped by most of golf's top names who are preparing for next week's British Open.

He still is troubled by a sore back and ranks only 73rd on the 1977 earnings list with $22,765 in 11 tournaments.

Trevino entered last year's GMO, but withdrew the day before it began because of the back ailment. He underwent surgery for a herniated disc in November. Some think he has rejoined the tour too soon.

Tough fight for survival

By VIRGINIA WORTHINGTON

National Wildlife Federation
For nearly 200 years, the proud bald eagle has been a symbol of America. Ironically, as the nation enters its 201st year, our national symbol is being threatened with extinction. In addition, the golden eagle, while not endangered, is suffering substantial losses in its populations.

Alarming reports from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's (FWS) Division of Law Enforcement (the division responsible for the enforcement of federal wildlife laws) indicate that the incidence of illegal shooting and trapping of bald eagles last winter more than doubled over the previous year. Because many such incidents are never reported, biologists fear that even these numbers are only a fraction of the total mortality.

What is the reason for this increased mortality?

Obviously, there is no single explanation. Unusually cold weather this winter expanded the eagle's non-breeding range much further southward, subjecting the bird to increased pressure from human occupation.

In the Southeast, where record numbers of eagles were sighted this year, the FWS's New Orleans District Office reports confirmation of 24 eagle slayings since October, 1976: 13 in Arkansas, 8 in Mississippi and 3 in Louisiana. Again, there is no indication of how many more unreported incidents may have occurred.

Trapping has become another important source of mortality, accounting for more than 40 percent of the eagle killings in the West and Midwest. A troubled economy, coupled with the high price of furs, has led to increased trapping of furbearing animals, with some pelts such as the bobcat and coyote selling for as much as $300.

The most commonly used trap for this purpose is known as the "sight bait" trap; a trap in which dead bait is suspended above an exposed ground trap. As a scavenger, the eagle, as well as other raptors, is attracted to the bait and inadvertently caught. While some states have enacted laws prohibiting the use of exposed bait, in many others, it is still a common practice. In addition, poisoning, power line electrocution and roadway collision are all taking their toll on the birds.

In 1940, all bald eagles, and later all golden eagles, were granted federal protection under the Bald Eagle Protection Act. Currently, the act provides for criminal penalties of up to $5,000 and one year imprisonment for first offenses and up to $10,000 and two years imprisonment for second offenses. But federal protection of raptors goes far beyond the Eagle Protection Act.

In 1972, under a provision of the Migratory Bird Treaty Act, protection was extended to all wild species of raptors, including kites, hawks, caracaras, falcons, owls, and ospreys, found in the U.S. and Mexico. In addition, 24 species of raptors, including the southern subspecies of the bald eagle, were granted added protection under the Endangered Species Act of 1973.

These federal laws make it unlawful for anyone to kill, collect, possess, buy, sell, barter, trade, ship, transfer, import or export any raptor, including feathers, parts, nests or eggs, without a permit or other special authority.

Despite the protection afforded raptors, many individuals fail to understand that the killing of any raptor is a violation of federal law. In many areas, hawks and eagles are still considered "nuisance birds." Tales of giant, taloned birds swooping down from the skies snatching up livestock still carry a note of fact rather than fantasy to certain individuals. While massive educational problems. The task of the enforcement official is further compounded by the difficulty involved in obtaining incriminating efforts have helped to dispel many of these misconceptions, in regions where eagles are not commonly found, misidentification and unfamiliarity pose additional evidence. Only about five percent of the cases investigated ever result in prosecution. Often there are no leads, no witnesses and only a partially decomposed eagle to work from.

Because of the problems encountered during an investigation, officials rely heavily upon public cooperation in the apprehension of violators. To this end, the FWS is stepping up its educational efforts to inform the public that all raptors, as valuable birds of prey, are protected by federal law. Under the Eagle Protection Act, rewards of up to $2,500 are available for information leading to the conviction of an eagle killer.

A widely publicized investigation into the shooting of a bald eagle on Long Island last November resulted in the arrest of a local resident. At the time of the arrest, Lynn Greenwall, director of the FWS, observed, "We believe that the apprehension of this individual was a direct result of the tremendous cooperation of concerned citizens in the area and the massive publicity which came out when the bird was discovered."

In addition to its education efforts, the FWS is also expanding its program to rehabilitate injured raptors. Currently there are over 300 raptor rehabilitation permittees across the country and more than 30 major rehabilitation centers at zoos and universities.

Unfortunately, in most instances, successful rehabilitation and ultimate return to the wild is the exception rather than the rule.

Because most of the birds go into shock immediately after receiving such injuries, keeping the birds alive in the first few days can be the most critical phase of rehabilitation. Again, public input is essential in alerting authorities to the location of an injured bird and expediting rescue attempts.

What can be done about raptor mortality in the future? Dr. Jeffrey Lincer, director of NWS's Raptor Information Center, indicates that "in the long run, we'll have to depend heavily upon the education of our children, the decision-makers of tomorrow, as well as preserving critical habitat for the bald eagle and other raptor species."

Summer brings bluefish fever

By MICHAEL B. McPHEE

Associated Press Writer
CHAPPAQUIDDICK ISLAND, Mass. (AP) — Summer brings a slow change to the New England seacoast. Sailboats slip one by one into the sea and an occasional sunbather stretches onto the sand.

Suddenly one day — no one knows when — the pace quickens. Word passes swiftly: "The bluefish are in!"

This goes to the veins of salt water fishermen. The bluefish, the savage in the sea who runs in mad schools like a dog in his pack, is once again boiling these chilled Northeast waters.

It's this time of summer when fishermen are struck with "Bluefish Fever." They leave their paint brushes to harden and their lawns untrimmed. In dune buggies and chest waders, they march to the sea. Day and night they fish, heaving graceful monofilament arcs from the line of their 10-foot poles.

"Look for the gulls," says Bill Reynolds, a fisherman on Cape Cod. "They follow the blues."

Bluefish are labeled marauders of the deep, killers and wolves in the sea. Their Latin name, Pomatomus saltatrix, means a sheathed, leaping, cutting edge. They're cannibals. Feeding at a frenzied pitch, they will chew blindly into one another.

Their schools are so great that when they feed you can smell fish in the air. They chase the smaller fish, often the young of their own species. These young, running two pounds or less, are called "snapper blues."

Large blues — they can go over 10 pounds — are tagged "slammers." The name comes from the way they hit a lure. "Like a car wreck," says Reynolds.

The blue, looking sleek like a large minnow and having oversized eyes that stare daggers, migrates to these waters each summer from below the Carolinas. In the fall, he returns south.

By then, Bluefish Fever has subsided. It's only in the creature's first, frantic days here that fishermen are so stricken.

"People go bananas when they arrive," says Larry Yacubian, a native of the southern Massachusetts seacoast town of Westport.

It hurts to catch a bluefish. They're relentless fighters and a fisherman's back and forearms wear sore. Lures are removed with pliers. One snap and the blue can steal a finger.

"I had to quit," says a fisherman from New Jersey. "My arms were killing me."

Bluefishermen have a jargon. When one says, "I got into the blues," the phrase is literal. If they're "running," an angler can be up to his knees in fish.

Three men from Nantucket Island once hauled 119 in one afternoon. Reynolds says he has caught 100 pounds worth in two hours. When the blue schools, he doesn't swim. It's more of a stampede.

Fishing report

Here is the current fishing report for area lakes as compiled by the Canyon Fisheries Lab of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Greenbelt Reservoir — Channel catfishing is very good with several fish in the 10, 11, and 12 pound size being caught. Fishing for bass remains good for fish in the 1 to 3 pound size and a few bigger fish are occasionally taken. Crappie fishing has slowed some though several fish up to 1 1/4 pounds have been caught in 15-20 ft. of water. Fishing for sunfish is very good, particularly for bluegills to 1/2 pound. A few white bass to 2 pounds have been caught. Several small walleyes, and a couple up to 4 pounds, have been caught during the period. Water temperature is in the mid-70s.

Lake Meredith — This year has proved to be the best ever for nice walleye in Lake Meredith. Nearly everyone who fishes with nightcrawlers along the sunken points has been catching limits or near limits. Fish nearing 10 pounds have been reported. Channel catfishing is very good for trotliners and one 17 1/2 pound flathead catfish was caught on a rod and reel in Bugbee Canyon. White bass fishing is fair with occasional good strings being caught. Fishing for crappie, largemouth, and smallmouth bass is slow. The lake water temperature is 71 degrees F at 5 feet.

Lake Pauline — Bass fishing has been very good the past 2 weeks. Some good strings of bass in the 3, 4, and 5 pound class have come in. Channel catfishing has been improving with some fish weighing up to 5 pounds. Fishing for crappie and drum has been slow. The lake is still full and the water temperature is in the mid-70s.

Lake Theo — A few bass have been caught early and late. The lake is clear and the water temperature is around 70 degrees F.

Lake Marvin — The lake is still near spillway level. A few bass up to 3 pounds have been caught. Channel catfishing has slowed.

Lake McClellan — The water temperature is 74 degrees F and the lake is full. Some crappie to 1/2 pound are beginning to show again. Bass fishing is slow with just a couple of fish to 2 pounds caught. Catfishing is very good. Channel catfish in the 3 1/2 to 7 1/2 pound sizes are biting well and bullheads are excellent.

Lake Rita Blanca — Catfishing remains very good particularly for fish in the 4 and 5 pound sizes. Bass fishing is starting to pick up again and should continue to improve as the lake clears. Two rainbow trout were reported, they were approximately 12 inches in size. Bullheads are biting well.

The meat is soft. Stripped from the fish, it is a pink-tinged gray that turns white in baking.

The Nantucket Cookbook, which to some New Englanders is the Bible of seafood cooking, suggests spreading three pounds of the fish with salt, onion flakes and butter; broil until brown; pour three shots of gin onto the fish, and light with a match. Return the fish to the broiler. Four minutes later, after the flames sputter, the feast is ready.

WEATHER MAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — There's a new factor in climate change, reports National Geographic. For the first time, say scientists, man and his activities may be beginning to affect the weather.

One expert, Dr. Reid A. Bryson of the University of Wisconsin, says man may even be the decisive factor in the climate equation. He calls the over-all effect of man's activities "the human volcano," citing his smoke, tractor dust, jet exhaust and smog.

Many scientific efforts are under way to assess man's impact on the climate. Whatever the studies show, climatologists agree that man is a new factor in the game of climate change.

Senate prepares vote on neutron bomb

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is preparing to vote on a measure that would furnish money to produce neutron warheads, designed to kill people by radiation without damaging buildings or other weapons.

The Senate put the item on its agenda for today as it continued work on the $10.3-billion public works bill containing funds for nuclear research and several controversial water projects.

President Carter is still studying whether to approve the new generation of nuclear weaponry, but an administration official said Carter wants Congress to approve the funds to give him "maximum flexibility" in making his decision.

The neutron-bomb warhead is designed to kill without inflicting widespread destruction. Its supporters say it is sufficiently small, safe and controllable so as not to risk starting a general nuclear war.

It would kill people with massive doses of radiation, just as conventional nuclear weapons operate. Death could take as long as several weeks, although anyone within a half-mile of the explosion would die within a day or two.

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., said the matter would be taken up in closed session. Other Senate sources said this was being contemplated.

Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, the Oregon Republican, made a move to eliminate the neutron warhead in a public works subcommittee meeting two weeks ago. The bid was rejected.

Hatfield said Thursday he would again take his motion to the floor because the weapon poses an unacceptable risk of nuclear devastation.

"Given the added psychological impact of being attacked by a nuclear weapon, I do not believe a country's response to a nuclear attack can be predicted accurately," he said.

If an enemy retaliated with a larger nuclear warhead, he said, "we would find ourselves in the position of trying to decide whether to raise the stakes and show our determination with a still more powerful weapon."

The Washington Post in today's editions quoted an Army study as saying that people within a half-mile of the bomb's detonation "will become incapacitated within five minutes of exposure and for physically demanding tasks will remain incapacitated until death ... in one or two days."

Copper miners strike today

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Picket lines went up at copper mines throughout the country early today as a consortium of 26 unions, representing 45,000 workers struck seven of eight major copper producers.

The first 10 picketers showed up at midnight outside the U.S. Metals Refining Co. in Carteret, N.J., the easternmost firm affected. Strikers soon followed suit in Maryland, New Mexico, Nevada, Utah, Montana and Arizona.

The strike was called by 400 union representatives at a meeting of the National Non-ferrous Industry Conference meeting here.

Frank McKee, international treasurer of the AFL-CIO United Steelworkers of America, the largest of the labor groups representing the copper workers, said there was no discussion among the union men of extending the contracts.

The union said the number is lower. Coors has said all but one of the striking workers' positions have been filled, and the replacements are considered permanent.

Coors strike to continue

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — Workers at Adolph Coors Co. have voted overwhelmingly to continue their nearly three-month-old strike against the nation's fifth largest brewery.

At a meeting Wednesday night, members of Brewery Workers Local 908 decided not to return to their jobs. A spokesman said the vote was "nearly unanimous."

The union's 1,472 members walked off their jobs April 5 following a dispute over language in a contract the company put in effect despite union objections. The company said 960 later returned to work, but Around 300 union members and their families attended Wednesday night's meeting.

As union attorney Don MacDonald announced the election results, many in the crowd chanted "Boycott Coors" and toasted television cameras with cans of Olympia beer. The union has mounted a nationwide boycott against Coors beer.

Scout murders stump FBI

LOCUST GROVE, Okla. (AP) — The FBI has drawn a near-blank in its search for an escaped convict who is charged in the sex murders of three Girl Scouts, it has been learned.

Source said the number of agents assigned to the case was reduced Friday to about eight they were unable to develop "positive information" in the case.

The sources said, however, that there was "no indication that he (Hart) has left the area."

Federal agents have been going door-to-door showing photographs and drawings of Hart to residents, asking if he had been seen. The FBI entered the case on a large scale shortly after a ground and air search was called off last weekend.

"I have never been lied to so much in my life ... just absolutely no cooperation from the people we interviewed," one agent said.

Officials have search the residence of Ella Mae Buckskin, 51, Hart's mother, and have kept it — and others in the area — under surveillance.

The FBI believes Hart was in the area the day before the June 13 murders near here and within several days later.

Federal agents said Hart was on his mother's front porch

June 4 as several friends tried to persuade him to go to church with them.

"My boy didn't do it," Mrs. Buckskin said Thursday.

Medicare payments up

Monthly premiums on the medical insurance part of Medicare increased today, according to Howard L. Weatherly, social security branch manager in Pampa.

The basic premium will go from $7.20 to $7.70 per month, he added. At the same time the 5,129 persons living in Gray County who receive Social Security checks received a 5.9 per cent cost of living hike today.

The new hike boosts annual benefits in Gray County to $11.5 million.

Medicare insurance helps pay doctor bills and other medical expenses and is funded by individual premiums and federal general revenues.

Weatherly explained the Medicare law requires an annual review of the cost of the medical insurance program. Based on this review, an estimate is made of the cost of this coverage for the following year.

Social security payments increased 6.4 per cent in 1976 — limiting the Medicare medical insurance basic premium rate to 6.4 per cent starting today or to $7.70 per month.

The premium is about one-third the cost of this protection since the federal government pays the remainder from general revenues.

Information in regard to Medicare may be obtained by calling the Pampa office.

51 may die in traffic this weekend

With 51 persons expected to die in traffic accidents this weekend in Texas, local public safety officers will increase surveillance of highways with special emphasis on apprehension of drinking drivers and speeders.

All available uniformed officers will be on duty during the Fourth of July holiday, said Major O.W. Bell, Region 5 commander of the Texas Department of Public Safety in Lubbock.

The DPS will count traffic fatalities state-wide and will announce the totals three times daily to remind drivers to be safe.

"Most traffic accidents are made more tragic by the fact that they could have been avoided. Too often the best driver lets his attention wander, and the result is a fatal accident," Bell said.

Deaths on Texas highways so far are running higher in 1977 than during the same period last year, officials said.
