

100 units planned for local elderly

By THOM MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff

Pending final approval by the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), construction may begin in early autumn on a $2.7 million 100-unit single-story apartment complex in Pampa for elderly persons.

Ronald R. Friedman of Friedman and Associates in Houston told The News today that "I'm ready to start now" and construction will begin as soon as HUD approves the project.

Approval from the federal agency will mean that qualifying elderly persons may live in one of the one-bedroom apartments at a cost to them not greater than one-fourth of their monthly income.

The complex will be constructed on 8.4 acres of land adjacent to Pampa Nursing Center, Friedman said. His company will be the developer, builder and owner of the complex and National Living Centers Inc. will manage it. Pampa Nursing Center is a National Living Centers facility.

Friedman explained that one feature of the new apartments will be an emergency communications system

"In case of injury or illness, an elderly person can push one of the buttons located in his bathroom and bedroom," Friedman said. "When he pushes it, it lights up a light over his door and on an emergency call board in the nursing home."

Friedman has been involved in developing similar projects from the east coast to Nevada — "several thousand of these units," he said.

Explaining why he selected Pampa as a site for the development, Friedman said, "There is no facility of this kind in Pampa. We have found in communities of that size that there is always a need for senior citizens housing designed specifically for them at a price they can afford."

Friedman said that other features of the project will include a community building for activities like club meetings, bridge games, and other social gatherings. The community building will include a demonstration kitchen," he said.

There also will be a coin-operated laundry facility, an office for management, and a maintenance area.

Friedman said that when construction does begin, "We will use our own general contractor" but local subcontractors will be used as much as possible.

Before application for a project such as the one proposed for Pampa gets submitted to HUD, it first must pass through a "clearing house" for reviews and comments.

The Panhandle Regional Planning Commission serves as the clearing house in this area, said Billy Taylor of Amarillo economic development administrator with PRPC.

Speaking of applications by developers seeking federal approval, Taylor explained first they go through a committee meeting. Then they are passed to the board of directors for review and comment.

The next PRPC board of directors meeting will be June 23, Taylor said. Following action at that time, the application will be forwarded to HUD which will either approve or disapprove it," Taylor said.

He would not estimate the time HUD will require to reach a decision in the Pampa project.

"It will vary in these federal programs," Taylor said. "You never can tell. Some of them are real quick and some of them drag out."

How to foil a burglar

By JEANNE GRIMES
Pampa News Staff

Foiling burglars is as much the citizens' job as the police's, according to Pampa Police Chief Richard Mills.

The police chief, announcing June as burglary prevention month in Pampa, said good cooperation between the public and law enforcement officers is the prime ingredient to successful crime prevention.

The dangers of being burglarized, the chief said, are increased when residents are lulled into a false sense of well-being by inadequate security measures. The best way to prevent a crime is by eliminating the opportunity, the chief said.

"(Burglary) happened to more than a million persons in the United States last year," Mills said. "It can happen to you."

"Although most people don't intentionally invite intruders to ransack their homes, they might as well hang up a sign saying 'No one's home, burglars welcome,'" Lt. J.J. Ryzman, Pampa police detective and crime prevention officer, said.

"A stroll around the neighborhood any day will tell you at a glance who's away — their porches will be cluttered with circulars, and unkempt lawn, an empty garage with the door open or a bulging mailbox. All these are tip-offs that'll broadcast no one is at home to anyone canvassing the neighborhood," Ryzman said.

But by learning — and practicing — a few simple home protection hints, Mills said, "residents can keep their homes from falling victim to a burglar."

Ryzman said this year is the first time Pampa has participated in a burglary prevention month, though the International Association of Chiefs of Police Inc. have had an annual burglary prevention month for 21 years.

"We have our share of burglaries in Pampa," Ryzman said. Commercial and residential burglaries are one of the most frequent crimes in Pampa.

"Just about everything you can think of has been ripped off at one time or another," the detective said. "We've had wall paneling taken off the wall and hot water heaters and bathtubs have been stolen in burglaries. We have some pretty good burglars around."

The detective added a great deal of the items taken in burglaries "are recovered right here locally."

But, Mills stressed burglars can be discouraged from committing a crime.

"It is a known fact that light is one of the best deterrents to crime," he said. "yet most homeowners go out for an evening and leave their houses completely dark. Or they'll go off for a weekend or vacation and leave the same light burning day and night."

"No light at all or a light burning continually is a good giveaway no one is home."

Ryzman said connecting an automatic timing device to one or two lamps will turn a lamp on early in the evening and turn it off several hours later.

The lights turning on and off during the evening hours will give the appearance of someone at home and may avert a possible burglary attempt.

Ryzman said.

"Most burglars pick the easiest targets they can find," Mills said. "They want to get in, get the loot and get away as quickly as possible. Therefore, if you put several obstacles in a burglar's way, he is less likely to try and break into your home but will seek easy pickins elsewhere."

The chief said the most elementary burglary prevention steps call for residents to protect their property by locking all doors and windows.

Use pin-tumbler cylinder (deadbolt) locks on the outside entrances and install safety latches on the windows," Mills said.

Since noise is an added deterrent to crime, the police chief advised connecting a radio or television to the same automatic timer used to turn lights off and on.

Protect all doors and windows with an inexpensive portable burglary alarm which sounds whenever someone attempts to break in and light up your porch and yard with outdoor lights to increase the likelihood an attempted burglar would be seen," he said.

Ryzman said loosely guarded possessions are good burglar bait.

"Never leave valuable lying around," the detective said. "Keep them in a safety deposit box."

"Cancel all deliveries, such as milk, laundry, cleaning and others. Either discontinue your newspaper or have it sent to a vacation address. Have the post office hold all your mail or ask a neighbor to pick it up for you and arrange with a friend to mow the lawn weekly while you're away. Have someone keep your porch free of circulars or handbills."

Mills said residents should plan to leave shades and blinds in normal positions.

"Closed blinds keep the sun out," the chief said, "but also make an effective screen for burglars."

"Never advertise your departure with an item in the newspaper," Ryzman said. "Give the story about your vacation after you return home."

Residents can further protect their property by participating in Operation Identification. An engraver may be checked out from the police department and used to inscribe the owner's social security number on household goods, appliances and other possessions.

Ryzman said window stickers are available from the police department which warn potential burglars that property inside the house has been marked as a part of Operation Identification. The crime prevention officer said the warnings appear to deter burglars in Pampa.

If you are planning to be gone five or more days, Pampa police will make periodic checks of your property, Mills said. All it takes is one phone call to the police department.

And detectives will inspect your house or business, pointing out flaws in security and ways to make your property harder to steal.

"There is no such thing as a burglar-proof home," the chief said. "But following these suggestions will help protect your home whenever you are away."

Pampa Mayor R.D. Wilkerson doesn't want to give burglars the chance to steal anything at his business, Builders Plumbing Supply at 535 S. Cuyler, so he makes sure all the property is securely locked up. The mayor signed a proclamation Wednesday which made June Burglary Prevention Month in Pampa. After Wilkerson signed the proclamation, Lt. J.J. Ryzman, crime prevention officer at the Pampa Police Department, and Det. Michael Hartsock made a security inspection of the premises and offered the mayor tips on how to make his property safer from burglars.

Von Braun, rocket pioneer, dies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Werner von Braun, the German-born rocket pioneer whose talents helped the United States put men on the moon, died Thursday after a long bout with cancer. He was 65.

Von Braun had been in poor health for sometime. He died in 1975 for removal of a malignant liver tumor and had maintained a sharply curtailed schedule since that time. He died at Alexandria Hospital in suburban Virginia.

Last year, he had a recurrence of cancer, coupled with an infection that developed following surgery. He spent long stretches in the hospital, including a final stay beginning last October.

Even while hospitalized he continued limited work on his job as vice president of engineering and development for Fairchild Industries. He joined Fairchild in 1972, and worked mainly on space projects until he retired last Jan. 1.

Von Braun spent much of his time in the hospital reading, visiting with family and friends and selecting papers for a permanent collection that will be exhibited at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala.

Once bitterly hated by the Free World, von Braun became its top rocket expert after he and 129 other German rocket experts surrendered to the United States shortly before the end of World War II.

The man who once helped design the dreaded V-2 rocket for Adolf Hitler designed the U.S. Army's Jupiter C rocket that allowed his new country to recoup some of the prestige lost when Russia launched the first space satellite in 1957.

Von Braun told President Dwight D. Eisenhower well before the Russian Sputnik launch that his team had the capability of putting a satellite into orbit around the earth. But Eisenhower wanted to use a rocket developed for nonmilitary uses for the first effort to emphasize the peaceful uses of space and von Braun was turned down.

Sputnik and the subsequent failure of the Vanguard rocket, America's much publicized first attempt to rocket a satellite into space, forced Eisenhower to turn to von Braun.

On Jan. 31, 1958, the Jupiter C lifted off, carrying a 30-pound satellite called Explorer into an elliptical orbit and giving the U.S. program its first success.

Von Braun also was instrumental in designing a long-range Jupiter rocket, the Saturn I booster and the massive 36-story-tall Saturn 5 rocket that powered men beyond the earth's gravity and sent them to a soft landing on the lunar surface.

Von Braun came to the United States in September of 1945 under contract to the U.S. Army. He and his men spent five years at Ft. Bliss, Tex., working on the V2 rocket they had developed in Germany. They were transferred to the Army's Redstone Arsenal at Huntsville, Ala. in 1950 to develop the Redstone missile, the forerunner of the Jupiter C.

In 1955, von Braun became a U.S. citizen. He and his team, now grown to 4,000 engineers and technicians, were transferred from the Army in 1960 to the newly formed National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

He finally left his laboratories in 1970 to come to Washington as NASA's deputy assistant director for planning. Two years later, he resigned his government job to join Fairchild Industries, a private firm that was developing scientific satellites, as a vice president for engineering.

Until his death, he continued to push the government for increased efforts in space. He was instrumental in forming the National Space Institute, a nonprofit organization that promoted the peaceful use of space.

Police link juvenile to burglary

A 15-year-old juvenile was detained by Pampa police Tuesday in connection with the June 4 burglary of Jumbo's Ice Cream Parlor, 1935 N. Hobart.

Pampa Police Chief Richard Mills said Det. Travis Rowland recovered items taken in the burglary when he detained the juvenile.

"Det. Rowland also recovered accessories from five auto parts thefts," the chief said, "including a CB radio antenna taken from an official state car."

The juvenile has been referred to juvenile authorities for further disposition.

May income up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' personal income rose six-tenths of a percent in May, a smaller increase than the month before, the Commerce Department said today.

Income received last month for working, savings, investments and other sources totaled $1,507 billion, when projected over an entire year. The increase for May was $9.5 billion, compared with an increase of $11.1 billion, or eight-tenths of a percent, in April.

Government economists said the increases are not measuring up to the average $15 billion increases in the first quarter, but said the economy was making up for losses in previous quarters.

They said the increases in wages and salaries appeared to be formidable and that declines in other areas reduced the monthly total.

Wages and salaries increased $9 billion in May, compared to $8.2 billion in April. Manufacturing payrolls went up $3.5 billion in May, compared with $2.3 billion in April. The increase reflected gains in employment, average weekly hours and average hourly earnings, the report said.

Increases in payrolls in the durable goods industries accounted for the gain, non-durable goods payrolls were virtually unchanged.

Transfer payments declined by $2.8 billion in May after increasing $800 million in April. The decline partly reflected a reduction in benefit checks received by veterans.

Farm proprietors' income declined $600 million in May, the same as in April. Rental income increased $1.2 billion after declining $600 million because of flood damage.

If spread out among the entire population, the personal income figures show an average of $7,110 for each adult and child.

Watergate-five years after

WASHINGTON (AP) — On the rear stairwell door of an office on the sixth floor of the Watergate building is a plaque commemorating a "pip-squeak" burglary that occurred five years ago today.

The plaque is one of the few tangible reminders of the June 17, 1972, break-in at the Democratic National Headquarters that eventually forced Richard Nixon out of office and his chiefs into prison.

Now the Institute of Medicine of the National Academy of Sciences occupies the offices. For the many curious visitors who want to peek at the famous spot, the institute installed the plaque and hands out pamphlets.

Although the Watergate office complex remains one of the big attractions in a capital city that has many, the event has become so passe to those who work there that few could say who now occupies the offices.

"We're not holding a celebration," a desk clerk said when asked Thursday night about the fifth anniversary.

Neither are H.R. Haldeman, Nixon's chief of staff, or former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell, who surrendered to prison officials next Wednesday for their roles in the Watergate cover-up, ending finally the Watergate criminal cases.

Some Watergate figures became rich. Two reporters who tracked down the nation's biggest political scandal and several congressmen who picked up the ball at the impeachment hearings became heroes. Some once-promising careers were shattered, and many new authors were born. A president on the brink of impeachment resigned and was pardoned, an historical first.

The special prosecutor's office, which itself had a tumultuous history, went out of business recently after winning 61 convictions and seeing six other persons acquitted of criminal charges.

Counting Haldeman and Mitchell, 25 will have been locked up.

John Ehrlichman, the third major lieutenant of the Nixon administration, already is behind bars. The three kingpins drew 2 1/2 to 8 year terms after their convictions for conspiring to impede a grand jury investigation into the break-in.

Besides Ehrlichman, only G. Gordon Liddy, one of the actual burglars, is spending the fifth anniversary of Watergate in jail. Liddy, who masterminded the White House "plumbers" unit, has refused to make any public statement about the scandal.

Four other men, all from Miami, were arrested with Liddy inside the Watergate offices of the Democratic National Committee. Bernard Barker, Eugenio Martinez, Virgilio Gonzalez and Frank Sturgis were convicted of conspiracy, wiretapping and burglary. They pleaded guilty and all served more than one year in jail.

James McCord Jr. and E. Howard Hunt also were part of the original seven Watergate defendants. Hunt, who demanded hush money from the White House for himself and his fellow defendants, pleaded guilty to conspiracy, wiretapping and burglary and served 30 months in prison. McCord, convicted of eight counts, was released after four months.

Carterism not conservatism

It would seem that Jimmy Carter suddenly got religion, judging from his latest promises to curb spending. The president piously criticized the Congress for voting for such programs as will make his goal of balancing the budget all but impossible. Why, he even promised to veto any more of it.

What does not ring true of the pieties is that Jimmy Carter is fresh from pushing through Congress a massive economic "stimulus" program (which will stimulate nothing but politicians' appetite for more) to the tune of some $30 billion. Moreover, the Carter administration has pledged to work for a socialized medicine program, the costs of which will be astronomical.

to become reality next year.

A jaundiced look at all the White Houses' protestations of fiscal conservatism, therefore, is inescapable. The truth is not so much that Jimmy Carter wants to save the taxpayers money (in fact, he has done nothing but propose new taxes since coming to office), but that he wants the money spent on his programs alone.

What the tussle with Capitol Hill is about, and nothing less, is who is going to be in charge of spending working Americans' money. Congress or the president.

Surely society would be healthier, wealthier and wiser if people could keep their own money, spending it according to their own designs?

Politics pays...and pays

It's no wonder people go into politics. It pays. And even if you get the old heave ho, as did Gerald Ford, the dollars keep rolling.

Former presidential press secretary J.F. terHorst put the finger on his former boss, the president, when he documented some of the goodies coming Jerry's way in the months ahead.

Such as:
—$1 million from the National Broadcasting Co. for Ford's participation in programs during the next five years and for first chance to broadcast portions of his memoirs.
—$500,000 from NBC to Mrs. Ford for participating in programs during the next two years.
—$1 million from Reader's Digest and Harper & Row to publish memoirs of Ford and his wife.
—$35,000 to $40,000 per year in salary from the American Enterprise Institute, a Washington, D.C. think tank.

—$100,000 for 10 campus and lecture appearances.
—$50,000 a year in salary as president of Eisenhower Fellowships.

It was Mr. terHorst, we recall, who had a slight disagreement with his boss. When President Ford pardoned Richard Nixon for Nixon's part in Watergate, terHorst resigned his press secretary's job in a bad case of huff.

The president got him a new press secretary, and that was the last most people heard of terHorst.

Until now.
It is apparent that the former press secretary doesn't like what Mr. Ford is doing. He didn't call Ford's actions the rape of the Presidency, but he did come close.

Ford says that he is merely being a free enterpriser. That's what the system is all about, he said.

Other people will agree with terHorst and figure that Ford is strolling all over the sacred office of president. That ought to be good for a chuckle.

Meanwhile, if it hadn't been for Ford, how would his former press secretary have collected for the article he wrote about Ford?

Panama treaty wrangling continues

By ROBERT S. ALLEN
WASHINGTON, June 11 — Now that Mrs. Rosalynn Carter is back, the wraps will shortly be taken off the long-negotiated Panama Canal Treaty.

Setting the stage for that in the U.S. and abroad was a principal purpose of the First Lady's goodwill tour. Both she and the White House and State Department made the most of it.

While the latter aggressively intensified pro-treaty propaganda and pressuring operations at home, Mrs. Carter took every opportunity to earnestly assure Latin American leaders that a treaty with the Republic of Panama will definitely be concluded this year.

When one high Central American official politely but skeptically pointed out the issue has been pending since 1964, and that three Presidents had unavailingly tried their hand at it, Mrs. Carter replied firmly:

"This time will be different. My husband is leaving nothing undone to bring about a treaty, and he is sure to succeed. You can count on that."

Similar emphatic word is being put out by the State Department.

Ambassador Sol Linowitz, chief U.S. negotiator on the secrecy-shrouded pact, told a briefing of American Legion authorities, vigorous opponents of relinquishing control of the canal, that not only is a new treaty certain but "absolutely essential."

"The Panama Canal situation is one of the most dangerous and explosive we face anywhere," he contended. "The Joint Chiefs of Staff have told us it is in our interest to write a new treaty; that we can't station enough troops in the Canal Zone to defend it."

That is flatly denied by Rep. Daniel Flood, D-Pa., and Sens. James Allen, D-Ala., Dewey Bartlett, R-Okla., and Jesse Helms, R-N.C., leading treaty opponents.

Time Schedule
Under unannounced administration plans, the treaty is to be concluded and submitted to Congress by August 1 when it shuts down for the usual summer recess.

When the session resumes after Labor Day, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee presumably will begin consideration of the agreement.

Although certain to be intensely controversial and vehemently opposed, the administration is counting on the bipartisan internationalist-minded leaders of this key committee to clear the way for speedy approval. Rated as definitely favoring that are:

Democratic Sens. George McGovern, S.D., former dove and champion of a Panama treaty; Hubert Humphrey, Minn.; Frank Church, Idaho; Dick Clark, Iowa, Republican Sens. Jacob Javits, N.Y., and Charles Percy, Ill.

This bloc of six, with at least three other probables, constitutes a majority of the 16-member committee. With Congress slated to quit sometime in October, there is no likelihood the treaty can be put through the Senate this year. The administration may well try to pull that off, but the odds are overwhelmingly against it.

Check before tugging

By JIM FITZGERALD
Before Michigan's Genesee County lawmen begin tugging a drowned body in opposite directions, I hope they make certain the body is really drowned.

Doctors continue to discover more ways to retrieve a life that seems lost. Just as politicians continue to discover more ways to make life a bigger pain to live. Genesee Sheriff John O'Brien has threatened to arrest a township cop for recovering the body of a drowned boy from a township reservoir. O'Brien claims the body was his to recover and the township cop had no business dragging in the holler's water.

The accused township cop is Sgt. Edward Stevenson. He said O'Brien was upset because a television crew filmed the recovery of the drowning victim. "The sheriff likes publicity," Stevenson said.

It is an absurd fact of life that our county sheriffs are elected by the voters, thus making it politics for them to smile for the camera when they might better be somewhere else, growing at criminals. I used to work in a county where the sheriff took bows at every fender bender and brought along his own cameraman. Photographs were distributed to area newspapers within hours.

But Sheriff O'Brien denied that he wants to queue publicity out of wet corpses. He said state law requires the sheriff to recover persons drowned outside corporate city limits. If someone else does the job, "I could be charged with neglect of duty," O'Brien said.

"I'm not talking about rescue — that's different," the sheriff said, thus declaring it legal for Sgt. Stevenson to beach any drowning person still able to holler for help.

It is this difference between recover and rescue that intrigues me. If Sgt. Stevenson thinks he is dragging a dead body into his boat, but is surprised by a slight pulse, should he throw the body back in the lake?

It is not an impertinent question. The same week I read about the O'Brien-Stevenson hassle, I also read about a youth who was under water 38 minutes and was pronounced clinically dead.

Even if the apparent pro-treaty majority in the Foreign Relations Committee turns on the heat and steamrolls the pact to the full Senate by Oct. 1, which would be quite a trick in itself, that still wouldn't leave enough time to win ratification this year.

Into the Jaws
A putch of that kind would be certain to trigger a last-ditch filibuster, and the administration does not have the votes to silence it without a protracted struggle.

In fact, it's a toss-up whether a Panama treaty can be put through this Congress at all.

With the likelihood of Senate ratification this year remote, that means the issue goes over to 1978. That is a congressional election year, and the prospects of gaining approval of a TNT-loaded accord of this kind are extremely iffy — if not outright nil.

What Ambassador Linowitz didn't tell the Legionnaires when he noted that treaty consideration has been underway 13 years is that everytime a draft neared completion, an election came around and that was the end of it.

An unpublicized Legion poll lists 19 Senators unequivocally "committed" against a Panama Canal treaty; 28 "strongly leading" that way — total 45.

Ratification requires a two-thirds vote (66) — 34 to block it.

In 1975, 38 Senators signed a resolution opposing a treaty that would relinquish U.S. sovereignty over the Panama Canal Zone.

Hot Air
Under Legionnaire grilling, Ambassador Linowitz came up with some intriguing opinions as to why the great mass of American people are adamantly against giving up control of the waterway.

To hear him tell it, it's chiefly due to misplaced pride and misconceptions, such as:

—The canal is of inestimable strategic value — which Linowitz maintains is short of the facts, as follows: "Our aircraft carriers can't use it, neither can super-tankers. Only 8 per cent of our foreign trade goes through the canal; only 1 per cent of our gross national product does that. The canal is important but not overwhelmingly so. It is of strategic value, but not vital."

—Panama strongman Omar Torrijos is a "buddy" of Fidel Castro, and he does talk too much and too blusteringly. On the other hand, he has held on for nine years and if overthrown would "most likely be replaced by someone more difficult than he is."

—To most Americans, building of the Panama Canal was the "moon shot of the turn of the century." It's something this country did after others failed; we own the waterway and are mighty proud of it. So why give it up? To which Linowitz argues, "We never got sovereignty under the original treaty, and still don't have sovereignty. We are not giving up anything under the new treaty. People don't understand that and that's why they're against the treaty."

That's the administration's argument, and you'll be hearing a lot more along that line from now on. Also the plea with which Linowitz wound up his briefing of the Legionnaires:

"If we fail, conflict could well erupt. I suggest that we Americans be magnanimous and compassionate because, as William Buckley aptly said, 'That's the way a great nation should act.'"

Tough Guy

Gen. Torrijos, ever the bully-boy, took a quite different tack. At about the same time, the Panamanian dictator, who seized power by armed force and has held onto it the same way, staged a press conference in Mexico City while on an official visit. Mexico has long clamored for the U.S. to get out of Panama.

At this press conference, Torrijos frankly admitted he's a dictator, throws political opponents into jail, maintains iron censorship over the media, and wound up threatening all sorts of dire consequences if he doesn't get control of the canal.

"Sure, my government is a dictatorship," he said, "but it's a friendly one. We try to be nice about it. Political parties were dissolved, but what of it? They were just the tired leftovers of old oligarchist regimes. Now we have a national assembly made up of representatives who live in their own communities, are known to the people in those communities and serve them. We maintain tight censorship for the very good reason that there is a big difference between cosmetic freedom and fundamental freedom. In Panama, people aren't muzzled. You can hear plenty of complaints and grumbling. We don't object to that. But we do not permit any dissent about how we go about getting things done and getting the canal. That embarrasses me and I don't tolerate it."

"Because of distortions in the international media, people have gotten the idea I'm a sort of Latin Idi Amin. Well I am tough, but not that way. We want the canal because it belongs to us and we never gave up our rights. If the U.S. doesn't turn it over, I can assure them the canal and the zone will be without water, without lights, without a canal and without gringos in very short order."

As newsmen left the conference, one of them remarked laughingly, "The mouse that roared."

Spending up, dollar value down

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The Tax Foundation, a publicly-supported, nonprofit, tax-exempt organization that hates to see money spent by the biggest nonprofit institution of all — government — has just published its biennial admonition.

"Government expenditures for 1977 are projected at $9,807 per U.S. household," writes chairman Willard Rockwell in the 1977 edition of Facts and Figures on Government Finance.

The chairman relates that the comparable figure for 1960 was only $1,815, but that comparison isn't quite cricket. In another part of the book you learn that the 1976 dollar stands for less than half the value of the 1960 dollar.

Nevertheless, the point is made: Government spending is rising like June temperatures. It takes close to half of household income.

Rockwell asks: Do we as citizens want our government units to spend that much? Do we know where all this spending is leading us? Is the money being raised in ways that best promote our national goals?

The Tax Foundation's answers to these questions are not provided, but based on past declarations we might assume them to be negative. Government spending, it feels, is often mindless, directionless and opposed to free enterprise goals.

But government spending also is misunderstood. True or false: Each year the federal government takes an increasingly larger percentage of total tax receipts, and state and local governments less.

The fact, as computed by the foundation, is that federal tax receipts in 1976 amounted to 63.7 per cent of the total, the lowest percentage since 58.1 was recorded in 1942.

At the same time, the percentage taken by state governments rose to 21.7 per cent, highest since 1942. Local governments took 15.1 per cent, a figure exceeded as recently as 1971, 1972 and 1973.

Ah, but that's not the full story. In fact, the recent trend of states to acquire an almost imperceptibly larger part of the receipts is almost insignificant when matched against the big change.

And what is that? Let some figures tell: In 1902, the percentage distribution of tax receipts was federal 37.4, state 11.4, and local 51.3.

As recently as 1940, local government received 31.8 per cent of receipts, but since then the numbers have seldom reached half that level. The low point was in 1944, at 9 per cent. Match that against 1932's 53.6.

Since World War II, the federal percentage of receipts has ranged from nearly 80 per cent at the close of the war to the 1976 figure, falling by small amounts in an irregular pattern. State receipts have inched higher, while local figures have ranged around 10 to 15.

Contained in those figures are many stories: The marked change in the relative power of local versus central government, the federalization of services, the international power balance that requires huge sums for defense.

THINK OIL
LOMBARD, Ill. (AP) — Think of dripping oil every time you see a dripping water faucet, advises the Water Quality Association.

"It takes the energy equivalent of millions of barrels of oil a year to pump water into our homes," Richard Weickart, technical director of the association, said, "so every water-wasting faucet is also an oil waster."

Pointing out that a single small faucet leak can amount to as much as 50 gallons of water a day, over 18,000 gallons a year, Weickart said, "The waste is all the more disgraceful when we consider it usually takes only a ten-cent washer and ten minutes' time to stop."

There are some questions, too. For example: Does the sharply lower percentage of local tax receipts explain in part the plight of cities? You'll get an argument from those who note, low percentage notwithstanding, that local tax receipts have continued to rise in dollar amounts.

Bailey blasts lawyers

HOUSTON (AP) — A noted defense attorney says too often attorneys view litigation as a game of roulette and are more concerned with winning than how they play the game.

"We are damned with a Perry Mason syndrome," F. Lee Bailey of Boston told delegates to the State Bar of Texas convention Wednesday.

He said the present U.S. criminal court system lacks standards and a measuring rod for sound litigation.

He said the military system is much fairer because most of the jurors are college educated. And he said that with a maximum of 11 jurors and a two-thirds majority to get a guilty verdict there is never a hung jury.

He also said military attorneys have a discovery method where both sides get to see all the evidence before they go to trial. He said this system saves time because it often results in out-of-court settlements.

James Hampton's miracle happened

EDITOR'S NOTE — He was born in the South to a poor black preacher family. He migrated to Washington and died in the service of the federal government as a night janitor. Few knew him. But his legacy has stunned historians of American folk art. From castoffs he created "The Throne of the Third Heaven of the Nations Millennium General Assembly."

By KENDAL WEAVER

Associated Press Writer
MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — James Hampton, born poor and black in the South, was a gentle, reclusive janitor who believed in miracles. Upon his death, one happened.

It wasn't the sort of awesome spiritual resurrection he had envisioned.

Instead, it was the slow, quiet revival of a life's work, powerful in its human proportions. James Hampton, it turns out, had the gift of transforming janitor's junk into artist's gold.

The miracle is that we know of it.

When he died of cancer 13 years ago in Washington, D.C., no one was around to say he knew James Hampton well. A bachelor janitor on the night shift, he was by all appearances one of this nation's obscure figures destined for oblivion.

Then his landlord, told of the death, opened the door of Hampton's rented back-alley garage.

Within was a stunning assemblage of altars, chairs, tables, wall pieces, tablets and crowns. There were 180 objects, each incredibly ornate, gaudy, elaborately hand-crafted. They were coated in gold and silver foil that gave the look of a radiantly bejeweled throne room.

Indeed, the centerpiece was a majestic throne with wings.

All of the objects were made from the refuse of a floor-sweeper's life: Discarded furniture and cardboard, burned-out lightbulbs, jelly glasses, cigarette boxes, desk blotters and aluminum foil retrieved in part from the bottles of wines.

Hidden away for the long years he worked on it, the shining work — considered by specialists a treasure of 20th century folk art — still is virtually unknown to the American public.

But that may be changing. Three years of research by an art historian, Lynda Roscoe Hartigan, have begun to shed light on some of the mysteries of this janitor-artist and have taken his work from the shadows of a museum warehouse.

Last year the melange was exhibited in New York and Boston, and currently it's on display at the Montgomery Museum of Fine Arts through Sept. 4. A permanent home is being prepared at the National Collection of Fine Arts in Washington.

The title of the work was scrawled on a garage blackboard by Hampton: "The Throne of the Third Heaven of the Nations Millennium General Assembly."

Mrs. Hartigan was an intern at the National Collection in 1974 when she first saw fragments of "The Throne" in several crates, but what she saw persuaded her that "it was what I wanted to work on."

Mrs. Hampton is now assistant curator for 20th Century Painting and Sculpture at the National Collection, part of the Smithsonian Institution. The "Throne" is one of its prize possessions.

As Mrs. Hartigan unraveled the story of James Hampton, she found at its heart a deeply spiritual man who had visions.

Divers search waters for 20-30 shipwrecks

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, Tex. (AP) — State archeologists are out in strength this summer, searching the sea bottom for shipwrecks, probably remnants of ships that went down in the last century.

Twenty to 30 possible shipwreck sites are under examination near the point where Laguna Madre empties into the Gulf of Mexico, says Barto Arnold.

Arnold is director of the Texas Antiquities Committee's Underwater Archeological Research Section. Fifteen professional and student archeologists are at work under his supervision in the TAC's summer operation, which began June 1 and continues through mid-August.

A machine sucks in clear water from the surface and shoots it at the selected location on the sea bottom, gently cleaning an area from 10 to 30 feet across. Divers then work the area in 30-to 45-minute shifts. They bring up the small objects and attach buoys to the heavy ones, which will be raised by lifting machinery.

Sites were located with magnetometers that register the presence of metal.

Justice may probe Gulf, cartel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department may be asked to investigate whether Gulf Oil Corp. violated U.S. antitrust laws by joining an international uranium price-fixing cartel, says the chairman of a House investigations unit. It's "quite possible" that the committee will decide to turn its evidence over to government prosecutors, despite Gulf's contention that it did nothing wrong, said Rep. John Moss, D-Calif. The commerce investigations subcommittee, headed by Moss, continues hearings on the cartel today with testimony from former and present Gulf officials who attended meetings of the cartel around the world. Gulf admits participating in the cartel through its Canadian uranium-producing subsidiary, but says it was compelled by the Canadian government to join the organization.

It contends that one of the witnesses scheduled to testify today, L.T. Gregg, a former official of Gulf Minerals Canada Ltd., participated in cartel activities at the specific request of the Canadian government.

But some members of the subcommittee disputed his contention that the cartel's action had no effect on the U.S. market. Rep. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., said a number of utilities, including the Tennessee Valley Authority, South Carolina Power and Light and Duke Power Co., had entered into long-term contracts with cartel members for uranium to be delivered once the embargo was lifted.

He said there was overwhelming evidence that Gulf violated U.S. antitrust laws. "It's the kind of case that a jury would spend about 30 seconds on," he said.

A U.S. embargo, established in 1964, prohibited U.S. utilities from using imported uranium in their nuclear reactors at the time. The embargo, now being lifted, will be removed entirely by 1978.

McAfee claimed that sharp rises in U.S. uranium prices are the result of factors other than the cartel's price-setting activities.

Gays protest Anita

HOUSTON (AP)—Anita Bryant, whose appearance at the Texas Bar Association convention prompted about 4,000 supporters of gay rights to stage a downtown candlelight march Thursday night, was to speak today at lawyers' prayer breakfast and then meet with newsmen.

While Miss Bryant sang a medley of religious songs at the State Bar's annual presidential dinner, gay right backers paraded in front and in the rear of the hotel where the singer performed.

A few blocks away at the city hall mall about 300 persons listened to the Rev. Joe West, a Baptist minister from San Antonio and organizer of a group called Save Our Cherished Kids, speak in support of Miss Bryant.

The protest march ended at the mall, minutes after the conclusion of the prayer meeting. Policemen in riot gear stood by, but there was no violence as leaders of both the pro and anti-Bryant groups called for peaceful demonstrations.

The Rev. Mr. West said, "display no violence or they may hit you with their purse or a powder puff."

Gary J. Van Ooteghem, chairman of the Texas Gay Political Caucuses, told the gay rights supporters to do nothing to incite violence.

Ooteghem said the protest endorsed Anita Bryant and that is not the case. Among the speakers at the gay rights rally was Ginny Apuzzo, co-chairman of the Gay Rights National Lobby and a professor at Brooklyn College in New York. She said the repeal of the Dade County, Fla. (Miami) ordinance giving equal housing and employment rights to gays was "the first real evidence of perversion in this nation."

Miss Bryant led the successful fight to repeal the Dade County ordinance.

Suarez concentrates on Spain's economy

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Bolstered by the prospect of a near-majority in Spain's first elected parliament in four decades, Premier Adolfo Suarez gave top priority today to meeting the nation's deepening economic crisis.

A spokesman for Suarez' Democratic Center Union (UDC) said the economic situation would be the primary problem for the new government the 44-year-old premier will form. The fight to solve the crisis must have "the support of all Spanish political forces," he declared.

Political sources said devaluation of the peseta was being considered to make Spanish exports more competitive. Spain's annual inflation rate is more than 20 per cent, one of the highest in Western Europe.

Unemployment is also high, increased by the return home of Spanish laborers laid off in France, West Germany and Switzerland. This has also cut off an important supply of foreign currency and of funds for the workers' families. Industrial development has been stalled by uncertainty over the political future.

The cabinet, most of whom Suarez inherited from Francoist Premier Carlos Ari Navarro last July, is expected to resign this weekend so the premier can form a government reflecting the outcome of the election Wednesday.

Final official results of the voting were expected tonight. But the Interior Ministry said it appeared that Suarez' moderate coalition would get 170 of the 350 seats in the Chamber of Deputies, only six short of a majority in the lower house of the new Cortes. The ministry figured the Socialist Workers party headed by Felipe Gonzalez would get 116 seats, the Communists would have 20, dictator Francisco Franco's disciples in the right-wing Popular Alliance would get only 17, and Catalan and Basque regional parties would each get 10.

Regional parties in Galicia, Valencia and the Canary Islands were shut out, along with the Maoists, the Trotskyites and the Christian Democrats.

The 248-member Senate probably will include 106 UDC members, 60 Socialists, 8 Communists and 1 member of the Popular Alliance, the Interior Ministry said. Most of the 41 senators appointed by King Juan Carlos also are expected to support Suarez, giving him a solid majority in the upper house.

Good buddy helps police find wreck

WICHITA FALLS, Tex. (AP) — A North Texas citizens band radio operator received a long-distance emergency call Thursday night — from Wyoming. It led authorities to the scene of an accident.

Retired plumber Floyd White, who monitors CB channel 9 all night for the local "Texoma REACT" club, got a call about 2:30 A.M. from a motorist who reported seeing an accident, authorities said.

The mobile unit said he was westbound on Highway 80 at the 67-mile marker, and had just seen a car run off the road and tumble down a bluff.

There was no such location in the Wichita Falls area, White responded.

But the man at the scene, who said he was a tourist and not too sure of his location, did know that he was in Wyoming — right in the center of the state.

White then realized he was receiving a "skip" broadcast, with the signal bouncing off the ionosphere.

So he contacted the Texas Department of Public Safety, which in turn teletyped Wyoming authorities.

Within minutes, two Wyoming state troopers and a deputy were on the scene of the accident, which luckily did not involve any serious injuries. And the officers also reported finding a wrecked stolen car while on the way to the mishap.

Later, the Wyoming Highway Patrol sent a thank-you note back to Wichita Falls, saying that they also had received another call on the wreck, from a Wyoming CB'er who had been able to hear the Texas station, but could not copy the motorist at the scene down the road.

Teacher polishes diary

REDMOND, Wash. (AP) — A chance meeting with the son of a 97-year-old Sioux Indian chief brought author Cash Asher one of the most successful ventures of his long writing career.

Asher, then 75, was teaching creative writing at Del Mar College in Corpus Christi, Tex., in 1969 when a graying, 50-year-old Indian student approached him one day at the end of class.

"My father is Chief Red Fox of the Sioux tribe," the man said. "He's 97-years-old and has been keeping a diary for 50 years. I thought it might be of interest to you."

A background in publishing and newspaper work made Asher leap at the opportunity for a meeting with the old Indian. The two agreed Asher should polish the diary into manuscript form and they would split any future royalties. McGraw-Hill, a New York publishing firm, quickly snapped up the manuscript titled, "The Memoirs of Chief Red Fox."

In addition to hardback sales of the book, a recent paperback edition has added to the royalties.

Asher, a resident of this suburban community east of Seattle for the past four years, is 83 now and continues to write. With six books and numerous magazine articles already to his credit, he has completed two books on poetry, plus two other volumes, "Life in a Rocking Chair," and "Down River."

He spends much of his time visiting local elementary schools where he talks to pupils about poetry.

20 vetoes pondered

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe neared the end of his review of the work of the regular session of the 65th Legislature today with a little black cloud floating over about 20 measures.

"I would guess there would be a total of about 20 vetoes," Briscoe told a news conference Thursday.

He has approved and signed into law close to 600 new pieces of legislation sent to him by lawmakers.

Sunday is the deadline for Briscoe to act on measures that become law without his signature.

Thursday, the governor signed into law three controversial measures that were not settled until the final days of the 140-day regular session.

One of the measures was the "sunset bill," which requires periodic review of most state agencies by the legislature.

"I sign this with great pleasure and I think it is a step in the right direction," Briscoe said.

The bill, sought both by fiscal conservatives and Common Cause, would subject 175 agencies to a life-or-death review in the next 12 years, about 30 each legislative session.

Another bill signed Thursday would merge the state's three powerful water agencies — Texas Water Development Board, Texas Water Quality Board and Texas Water Rights Commission.

July 11 session set

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe says he believes House and Senate members are close enough to agreement on public school financing that he can call a special session for July 11.

"I think we should be able to accomplish the work of the session in a week or 10 days," the governor told a news conference Thursday.

The formal call for the special session — only the second in Briscoe's five years as governor — will be issued later, detailing exactly what he wants the 181 legislators to consider.

"Right now the only subject I have definitely decided to include in the call is public education financing," Briscoe said. "I have not decided on the other matters which have been discussed with me."

He said the other possible issues for the special session include repeal of state sales taxes on residential electric and gas bills and revision of property taxes.

Briscoe said he planned to complete his review of all the work of the 65th Legislature's regular session, including the $1.5 billion general appropriations bill, by Friday afternoon.

The governor said he planned to be in Houston Friday and Friday night and Amarillo Saturday for a luncheon.

Sunday, he and Mrs. Briscoe, with their daughter, Cele, plan to fly to Vienna where Cele will be among those presented at an international debutantes' ball. Briscoe said they plan to return to Texas by July 7.

Briscoe was reminded that his original announcement for a special session said he would not call the 181 legislators back to Austin until he was sure they could agree promptly on public school financing.

The property tax revision bill and the repeal of utility taxes passed the House in the regular session but died in the Senate.

"I think we have enough agreement now where it would be possible in a relative short period of time to work out a reasonable public education financing bill," he said.

Earlier, Briscoe said he had said he might call the lawmakers back on July 8 in order to let committees work over the weekend. Speaker Bill Clayton, who recommended the July 8 date, said he thought the session could be over by Friday, July 15, unless Briscoe opened the debate to subjects other than public school financing.

The special session became necessary when the regular legislative session quit May 30 without acting on a $600 million public school financing bill, including $308 million in school teachers' pay raises.

"The property tax revision bill and the repeal of utility taxes passed the House in the regular session but died in the Senate."

Texas weather

By The Associated Press Sunny skies began reclaiming most of Texas today as thundershowers slipped out of the state under cover of darkness. The heavy rains that left East Texas waterlogged crossed state lines into Louisiana and Arkansas late Thursday night, leaving some clouds hanging over East Texas and clear skies over the rest of the state.

Advice

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 15-year-old girl with lots of friends, and my problem is that guys are always hassling me because I don't want to have sex. Some of my girl friends say if I don't do it before I'm 16, I'll wind up being a lesbian. I can't say I'm afraid of getting pregnant because I could get the Pill or I could use some other method. Please give me some reasons that they will listen to. Thank you.

HASSLED

DEAR HASSLED: What's wrong with the truth? Tell them you do not want to get into sex now. And please don't feel that you have to explain or make apologies for your decision. MANY girls your age and older choose NOT to indulge in sex because they feel ill-equipped to handle it emotionally. I say, good for them. The poorest reason for doing something is because you're afraid of what others might think. (P.S. And your friends who say, "If you don't have sex before you're 16, you'll wind up a lesbian" don't know what they're talking about.)

DEAR ABBY: I saw an ad in a New York newspaper that read as follows: "Marijuana cannot be sold through the mails, but 'grass' can. Send $5 for a full quarter-ounce." I sent a $5 bill together with my name and address, and I received in return a quarter-ounce of LAWN CLIPPINGS! This is clearly a fraudulent scheme. How can I get my money back?

"HAD": FIRE ISLAND

DEAR HAD: I think you would be wise to write it off as a "cheap lesson." Don't expect to find an honest dealer in a crooked deal.

DEAR ABBY: Our 14-year-old son is our problem. He has always been a good boy and a good student, but he is an introvert. He has no friends and claims he doesn't want any.

He is sarcastic and arrogant, shows no affection and seems to want none.

He could be very good-looking, but over the years he has gained so much weight he now refuses to weigh himself. He pretends he doesn't care how he looks, and he continues to grow fatter.

We have begged and bribed him, but he doesn't listen. He's an only child, and it's breaking my heart. Please help me.

DETROIT

DEAR DETROIT: An obese child is an unhappy child who is asking for help. He's built a wall of fat around himself to keep others from getting close enough to discover his imperfections (We all have them.) He needs professional help. Start with your family doctor, and don't put it off.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "PLEASELY PLUMP AT THE BANK": Your normal weight at age 25 should be your weight for the rest of your life. How does that grab you?

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box, No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Ask Dr. Lamb
Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Is there any cure for a skin ulcer, which is the result of poor circulation. The ulcer is on the top of my husband's foot at the ankle area. He is a victim of strokes.

DEAR READER — What needs to be done depends entirely on what is causing the ulcer. I suspect from its location that it is caused by varicose veins, not from inadequate blood flow through the arteries to the foot. If it is arterial disease the bottom of the foot or the toes are more often affected first.

Varicose ulcers of the ankle area are a complication of varicose veins. The best approach is to decrease the pooling of blood in the lower part of the foot by using support stockings or elastic bandages. Another solution is to get the foot up above the heart level so that the veins drain down hill toward the heart. If a person can stay in bed enough that will sometimes help heal such an ulcer. The problem is that the bed rest can be harmful too.

A good compromise is to wrap the foot or put on effective support hose before getting out of bed and then when sitting up keep the foot elevated as much as possible. To give you more information about the treatment of varicose ulcers and the role of surgery in varicose veins I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-8. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it.

DEAR DR. LAMB — What exactly is cancer? What actually causes it?

DEAR READER — Our cells are capable of reproducing themselves. Your skin is a good example. The skin cells constantly produce new cells. The older cells migrate to the surface and are flaked off. The reptiles shed the old skin. A cancer is nothing more than the normal cell growth gone wild. Let's say it is a cancer of the liver. The liver cells involved become abnormal in that they rapidly reproduce and the new cells are different from the original cell structure of liver cells. Usually the greater the difference is the more malignant the cancer will be.

This cancer would be a primary cancer of the liver. If some of the abnormal cells are carried by the blood or lymph to distant parts of the body they can start another area of cancer growth there. The cells in this new area will be similar or even identical to the cancer cells in the liver. This is a metastasis or spread of cancer. When a pathologist looks at the cancer tissue, regardless of where the tissue comes from he can usually tell where the original or primary cancer started.

We know there are many different things that can cause normal cells to become abnormal and start the wild growth pattern. Tars as found in cigarette smoke is one example. Radiation is another example. At least in some animal experiments virus infections can be a factor. Apparently anything that upsets the cell's normal reproduction cycle is capable of triggering cancer growth. That is why cancer may be several different diseases and may be caused by many factors.

Because of the volume of mail Dr. Lamb cannot answer your letters personally but he will answer representative letters of general interest in his column. Write to him in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, New York 10019.

Polly's Pointers
Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — There is a ring of salt on the carpet in my car that goes around the brake and gas pedals. I have tried to remove this with soap and water and upholstery cleaner but to no avail. Can you suggest something, I do not want the salt to eat through the carpet. — SUE.

DEAR SUE — I suggest that you try a strong solution of white vinegar and water. This is most satisfactory for removing salt rings from boots. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — I find that washing walls is much easier when done with a sponge mop. This saves climbing on chairs and ladders and the job is done much quicker without a lot of scrubbing. — CAROL.

DEAR READERS — Do remember to start at the bottom rather than the top just as when washing with a sponge or cloth. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — I am answering M.D. When I made a long-distance move and my furniture was to be stored for three months the mover told me to put charcoal pieces, such as you use in an outdoor grill, in both my refrigerator and freezer so they would stay smelling sweet. I did this and there was no odor. Now I keep one or two such pieces in them all the time. I think they work better than soda. — F.H.

Olivia sticks with country

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures

Olivia Newton-John, wearing a bright green velvet jogging outfit, her blonde hair in two pigtails, looks younger than 28, shorter than 5 feet 6 and smaller than 110 pounds. Twice during an interview she reacts to questions by rolling over on a couch and kicking her legs gleefully up in the air like an adored child. Her smile flashes frequently, as bright as Debbie Reynolds, making her face suddenly quite beautiful.

She's in New York for her first-ever performance in the city and it was her decision finally to play there. "I just didn't think the time was right for New York for me. I was apprehensive. But nothing is decided without my okay." A classy hall was chosen for the concert — the Metropolitan Opera — and each person attending was handed a long-stemmed rose.

The New York Times review is headlined "Olivia Newton-John Conveys Her Niceness" and the review, thoughtful, with some flattering things to say, some not, describes her as blending "images of the crinolined, antebellum South with the buoyancy of a modern-day Texas cheerleader."

In her teens, Miss Newton-John just sang, naturally, without working at it. Later she had some good advice which steered her toward country-flavored songs and now she says she has the experience to know what's best for herself. It's still ballads and the country-flavored.

She was born in Cambridge, England, where her Welsh father taught in a college, moved to Melbourne, Australia, when he accepted a job there. She lived in Australia from 5 to 16.

At 15 she won a talent contest, which led to offers to sing on TV. The prize was a trip to England, which she didn't want. Her parents had been divorced when she was 10 and her German mother thought she should sample some of England's culture.

"She encouraged my singing career and made me work hard and realize I wasn't going to get anywhere being lazy. I was no different than any other kid of 15; you resent your mother. Now I look back, I see she was very important to me."

"When I went to England I had a boyfriend in Australia. I intended to stay three months; all I wanted to do was go back and get married and settle down. Eventually I went home after a year and I heard myself saying, 'No, I don't want to get married. I want to go back to England.'"

She now lives in Malibu, Calif., with a cat, dogs and horses which she rides in the hills behind her home. In New York she walks a friend's dogs in Central Park.

The New York performance is the last of three weeks of one-nighters which followed a week each in Las Vegas and Lake Tahoe.

Miss Newton-John toured as a duo with Pat Carroll, another Australian, until Miss Carroll's visa ran out and she had to go back. "I had an English passport. My mother again. I wanted to be like everyone else and have an Australian one but she said someday I'd be pleased to have an English one and she was right again."

At wit's end

By ERMA BOMBECK

The T-shirt craze has clearly gotten out of hand.

The other day, I encountered three propositions, four declarations, two obscene suggestions, and a word so bad I stopped the car and covered the wearers' body with a road map of Phoenix's downtown area.

Maybe I'm a prude, but T-shirts are not for everyone. I saw one the other day worn by your basic full-figured woman. I nudged my mother. "Why would anyone wear around an aerial view of the graduation class of midshipmen at Annapolis?"

"It's not an aerial view of the graduation class of midshipmen at Annapolis," she said. "It's a pizza."

"I guess I've never seen pepperonis that size before."

"The trouble with you," she said, "is that you do not have the figure for it."

"Oh, c'mon," I said. "Is that what you think? Why, I could walk into any store in the shopping center and get dozens of T-shirts that would look stunning on me."

"Try it," she said dryly. When I told the first salesperson I wanted a T-shirt, she said, "What do you want it to say?"

"Something clever," I said. "How about, 'IRONED SHEETS ARE A HEALTH HAZARD'?"

"Your chest can't handle that many words," she said. "I told you so," said mother.

"Then, how about your standard, 'HAVE A GOOD DAY'?" I pressed.

"Your arms would cover HAVE A DAY, and the GOOD would wrinkle."

"How about 'VOTE'?" said mother. "You could handle that."

"Here's one that's popular."

said the salesperson. She held up a T-shirt with one word on it — "BABY" — with an arrow pointing downward.

"That's ridiculous," I said. "I'm not expecting."

"No problem," she said. "This one comes with an infant T-shirt for the newborn that reads, 'RIGHT' or after nine months you can buy a new arrow that points to your head."

"I don't believe this," I said. Later, as mother and I headed for the car, we saw a large blonde with jeans so tight her hipbones looked like towel hooks. Tucked inside was a T-shirt that read in big, black letters, "SPACE FOR RENT."

"You can say what you want," said mother. "But she's certainly well read."

"There is, unfortunately, a rift between the professions of law and medicine that too often catches the general public in the middle," Dr. Lee said. "In some small way, I hope to do something to bring the focus of both professions back on the person they both deal with, the patient and client."

Dr. Lee said he intends to specialize in medico-legal problems and serve as a legal consultant on medical issues in San Antonio if he graduates in 1979.

Dr. Lee said his retirement from medicine was pre-planned but he felt like he had 10 or 15 years of useful life left and wanted to do something with them.

He chose law school because, he said, like Mr. Everest it was there.

All six of Miss Newton-John's albums on MCA Records and four singles have been certified gold. She also has received three Grammy awards, best country female vocal, in 1973, for "Let Me Be There," and best pop female vocal and record of the year, in 1974, for "I Honestly Love You."

After Pat Carroll went back to Australia, Miss Newton-John joined TooMorrow, "which looked like a sure shot. It was going to be the new Monkees, in a series of films rather than TV. There was a black guy, a Cockney boy, a handsome cowboy from Georgia and me. We made a film and it died. For two years we were being flown around and introduced to people and we didn't work at all. I think we were a tax writeoff, actually."

Only after that did Miss Newton-John's career get going. Her manager then, Peter Gormley, liked country music. He picked "If Not for You," her first single, which became a hit in England. Some Nashville folk didn't like this foreigner's success with country music, a brouhaha which she says has blown over. "Anyway, you can't put music in a suitcase and shut the lid."

"I always wanted to be a ballad singer. My biggest record has been 'I Honestly Love You.' It's the sort of ballad I always dreamed of finding. My producer rang me up and said he'd found this incredible song in a box of demos. I heard it and flipped. Helen Reddy tells me she'd heard it and told them to send it to me. I didn't know that; it was just amongst a pile of junk. Now we listen to everything that comes in, just in case it happens again."

The demo was sung by its composer Peter Allen, an Australian, as is Miss Reddy.

She thinks she has always been ambitious, Miss Newton-John says, though that word meant ruthless when she was growing up, so she denied it in herself. But she thinks it's probably what kept her going, through years like TooMorrow.

Withdrawal gets 'no'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Expressing its own views on foreign affairs, the Senate is unwilling to endorse President Carter's proposal to withdraw U.S. ground troops from South Korea.

Senators also don't want to impose preconditions on talks which could lead to normalized relations with Cuba, and are making it clear they are not prepared to accept any administration proposal for aid or reparations to Vietnam.

The Carter administration has not recommended any such assistance for the communist government in Vietnam.

The Senate made its views known on foreign affairs on Thursday during a 10-hour debate on a $6 billion State Department authorization bill. The measure passed 64-21.

The Senate dropped from the bill a provision recommended by the Foreign Relations Committee endorsing the timing and wisdom of the proposed pullout of ground forces from Korea.

Instead it voted 79-15 that any reduction or withdrawal should be ordered only after a "joint decision by the President and Congress." The provision was written by Majority Leader Robert Byrd.

The vote made it clear that the Senate wants to be consulted on any withdrawal, a concept on which it is still sharply divided.

Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker said the vote was a defeat for the President. Baker and other senators said that withdrawal over four or five years, as Carter is proposing, could tempt North Korea to invade the South and could lead to a possible war involving the United States.

Baker and other senators said that besides the possibility of a possible invasion, the troop withdrawal proposal could upset the military stability of much of Asia. They said it could encourage the resurgence of Japanese militarism by posing a military threat to that country's security.

Carter has said the troop withdrawal he proposes would involve ground forces only. He has said the United States remains firm in its commitment and will defend South Korea from attack and intends to maintain air and naval forces equipped with nuclear weapons to carry out that commitment.

Earlier, Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., tried to defuse what he predicted would be a "long and vitriolic" debate on Cuba. He deleted an amendment he was backing which would have permitted Cuba to buy medical supplies and farm produce in the United States.

McGovern sought originally to have the 16-year trade embargo against Cuba lifted.

Abortion funds considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House is preparing to reconsider the federal government's role in funding abortions after voting to prevent the use of tax money to finance cross-town busing of school children.

By a margin of 235-157, the House sought Thursday to prevent the use of federal funds to pay for busing in school districts that merge, pair or cluster their schools under desegregation orders from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Amendments on abortion, affirmative action and other sensitive issues were likely to come up today as the House resumed consideration of a $61.3 billion appropriation bill for the departments of Labor and HEW.

The busing amendment, proposed by Rep. Ronald Mottl, D-Ohio, strips HEW of the power to enforce the 1964 Civil Rights Act provision barring discrimination on the basis of race, religion, color or creed.

It prevents the use of funds to bus pupils to any school other than the one nearest their home.

Opponents of the amendment argued it would not affect court-ordered busing. They also said the subject was an inappropriate topic for debate during discussion of a funding bill.

The expected debate on abortion centers on whether federal funds should be used to pay for such operations. The bill calls for prohibiting the use of federal money for abortions except when a woman's life is in danger, a position opponents say denies poor women abortions. Last year's bill contained similar language and is being appealed in court to test its constitutionality.

The affirmative action amendment would bar hiring or admissions quotas based on race or sex. Opponents claim it would undermine guarantees against discrimination contained in civil rights legislation.

In addition to the questions on social issues, the appropriations measure is controversial because of differences over money.

The House Democratic leadership has President Carter's support for the bill, despite Carter's opposition to two programs.

The President at one time had suggested he might veto the bill if it called for more spending than he favored.

But under a compromise arranged between the White House and the House leadership in recent days, Carter has agreed to drop his threat to veto the House bill if no costly amendments are added and if the House works toward phasing out programs he opposes.

The programs opposed by Carter call for aid to school districts in areas with large federal installations and for a national direct student loan program.

Including the programs in the bill raised the measure's cost to $740 million above Carter's request, but $10.8 billion below last year's appropriation.

Third scout buried

LOCUST GROVE, Okla. (AP) — The chances that tracking dogs can find the killer of three Girl Scouts will decrease unless the dogs pick up the scent of the slayer soon, authorities say.

Meanwhile, officials are awaiting evaluation of evidence gathered at Camp Scott, where the girls' bodies were found Monday. Two of them were beaten to death in their sleeping bags and one was strangled. All were sexually molested.

Nine-year-old Michelle Guse, of Broken Arrow, was to be buried today. Funerals for the Lori Lee Farmer, 8, and Doris Denise Milner, 10, both of Tulsa, were held Wednesday and Thursday.

The dogs' trainer, Don Laken of Philadelphia, worked the rugged, scenic area 45 miles northeast of Tulsa most of the day Thursday, beginning at 5 a.m.

He said the dogs — two German Shepherds and a German cattle dog — have been successful on tracking assignments 100 times in 100 attempts, and that they could pick up a three-day-old trail. But he told reporters at Camp Scott that if the dogs don't pick up anything in 48 hours, the odds for their success decrease.

Mayes County Dist. Atty. Sid Wise expressed impatience at the pace of the investigation, particularly at evaluation of evidence at the Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation crime lab in Oklahoma City.

"It's getting beyond the point of patience," Wise said. "They were the first ones on the scene, and this is Thursday."

The wooden base of the 12-foot by 14-foot tent was airlifted to the lab on Tuesday. Authorities were also checking a 6-volt flashlight and footprints believed to belong to the killer, along with three clear fingerprints obtained from the victims' bodies.

Officials were hoping for a light rain early today to help the dogs by bringing any scent back to ground level, but there was no rain in the area by late Thursday.

Nazis may march

SKOKIE, Ill. (AP) — Concentration camp survivor Sol Goldstein says a Supreme Court ruling clearing the way for Nazis to march in a July 4 parade protects the spread of hatred rather than free speech.

"We have 6,000 to 7,000 survivors of the holocaust living in Skokie, and they're not going to sit by idly while Nazis march in the street," Goldstein said Thursday.

"This is not a matter of free speech. This is a matter of protecting somebody's freedom to spread hatred, something we don't need," said Goldstein, who lives in this Chicago suburb and is president of "Remnants of the Holocaust," a group of 16,000 concentration camp survivors.

The National Socialist Party of America plans to have members from across the country gather here on July 4 for the parade and a "white supremacy" rally. Skokie is Chicago's most heavily Jewish suburb.

"The idea that we shouldn't have free speech rights in Skokie because of some holocaust is just Zionist propaganda hogwash," said Frank Collin of Chicago, the national coordinator of the National Socialist Congress.

On Wednesday, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled 5-4 that Skokie could not permanently bar the Nazi organization from holding a rally in the city after the group appealed a lower court ban of the demonstration. The high court said free-speech rights could not be adequately protected if the Nazi group were barred from demonstrating during a long legal battle.

Despite the high court ruling, Harvey Schwarz, Skokie village attorney, said he expects three recently passed ordinances that bar marches in military uniforms to prevent the Nazis from coming to Skokie.

"This was a major victory for the First Amendment," said David Hamlin, executive director of the Chicago American Civil Liberties Union, which represented the Nazis in court. He said he expected the three ordinances to be declared unconstitutional.

"It showed that no matter how unpopular a cause is — and it was very distasteful to most of us here — the First Amendment still works."

Hamlin said Thursday he hoped that the threats of a counter-demonstration by anti-Nazis wouldn't occur.

Pentagon mum on general

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon officials refuse to say what consequences are in store for an American three-star general being called on the carpet for his unauthorized warning that the United States might wind up in the middle of a Soviet-Chinese war.

Lt. Gen. Donn Starry is the second Army general to face discipline for controversial public statements within a month.

Starry, a 52-year-old West Point graduate nominated for a fourth star, was to meet in private at the Pentagon today with Army Secretary Clifford Alexander and Army Chief of Staff Gen. Bernard Rogers.

The general, who voiced his warning in a speech to a class of American high school graduates in Germany, had not complied with the required policy of submitting remarks to the Pentagon in advance for review. "It should have been cleared," Pentagon spokesman Thomas Ross said Thursday.

By mid-afternoon, the Pentagon had sent a message worldwide to all commands reminding members of the military of defense policy that they not speak out of line or contradict administration policy.

Starry seemed in good spirits Thursday as he prepared to leave Germany after 16 months as commander of the Army's 5th Corps. He smiled and shook hands at a farewell reception attended by about 200 American and German guests at the headquarters officers' club.

Starry already had been scheduled to return to the United States to take a vacation before reporting to his next assignment as head of the Army Training and Doctrine Command at Ft. Monroe, Va. After the controversy arose over his speech, he was told to postpone the leave and report to Army superiors.

Military to decide Slovik's fate—again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five military officers will decide whether the Army was wrong more than 32 years ago when it ordered a firing squad to kill Pvt. Eddie Slovik, a self-confessed deserter who was terrified of the sound of guns.
Antoinette Slovik, the soldier's crippled and indigent widow, asked the Army Board for the Correction of Military Records on Wednesday to pay her insurance benefits stemming from her husband's death.
The widow also asked that her husband's body be removed from the dishonored section of a small cemetery in France and placed in a more hallowed part of that graveyard.

Religious days not required at all times

WASHINGTON (AP) — Employers are not required to give an employee certain days of the week off because of his religious beliefs when a union seniority system stands in the way, the Supreme Court ruled today.

The decision is a legal setback for the millions of workers in the nation who observe Saturday as a religious holiday or workers whose religious beliefs dictate that they cannot work on one or more particular day during the week.
The decision reversed a lower court's ruling that Trans World Airlines had violated the Civil Rights Act of 1964 when it refused to let Kansas City mechanic Larry Hardison, a member of the World Wide Church of God, have Saturdays off.
The case had been viewed as a potential major test on the constitutionality of the Civil Rights Act but the justices did not rule on that issue.
By a 7-2 vote, the court said TWA had made reasonable efforts to accommodate Hardison's Sabbatarian beliefs.
The court also said that companies are not required to accommodate the religious beliefs of one worker at the expense of other workers who may have to cover for the "favored" employee.

The decision reversed a lower court's ruling that Trans World Airlines had violated the Civil Rights Act of 1964 when it refused to let Kansas City mechanic Larry Hardison, a member of the World Wide Church of God, have Saturdays off.

To release the $68,000 in GI insurance payments and interest sought by Mrs. Slovik, the board must find that Slovik's execution was a legal mistake or unjust. The board is expected to take several weeks to reach a decision.
"This is a case without parallel in the history of our government, a case which has resulted in an error and an injustice," Bernard Edelson, Mrs. Slovik's lawyer, told the panel.
Edelson said he found several technical errors that occurred following Slovik's court martial, but he conceded that Mrs. Slovik's claim would succeed or fail on issues of conscience.
With Mrs. Slovik sometimes weeping quietly in her wheelchair, Edelson recounted Slovik's life, presenting five witnesses who traced his life from his native Detroit to the U.S. Army and his final moments before a firing squad in the French countryside.
Slovik was a depression-era delinquent with a ninth-grade education, Edelson told the panel. He served time in reformatories for several petty thefts, the lawyer said.
Slovik's criminal record automatically classified him unfit for military duty, Edelson said, but he was reclassified as fit and drafted in 1943 when the Army needed infantrymen.
The Sloviks had been married 15 months when the induction notice arrived.
Arnold Shaw of Lufkin, Tex., Slovik's commander during basic training, testified that Slovik had a paralyzing fear of weapons and during training was never allowed to use live hand grenades.
Shaw said he tried to have Slovik discharged as unfit for combat or transferred to a non-combat unit. Neither request was answered by Army superiors, Shaw said.
Once overseas, Slovik first left his unit for 40 days, then again for 24 hours. He confessed voluntarily to two counts of desertion and wrote in his confession that he would flee again if returned to battle.

There were 48 men sentenced to death for desertion at the time. Only Slovik was executed. He was picked to set an example for other would-be deserters at a time when morale was extremely low, Edelson said.

The decision is a legal setback for the millions of workers in the nation who observe Saturday as a religious holiday or workers whose religious beliefs dictate that they cannot work on one or more particular day during the week.

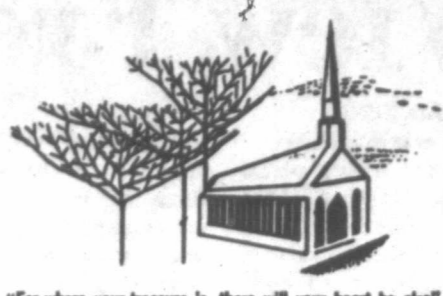

The decision reversed a lower court's ruling that Trans World Airlines had violated the Civil Rights Act of 1964 when it refused to let Kansas City mechanic Larry Hardison, a member of the World Wide Church of God, have Saturdays off.

FOUNDING FATHER

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The first known Father's Day "card" was written in Babylon about 2000 B.C. It was in the form of a clay tablet which asked the gods to grant good health and long life to the father of the individual named Elmesu, reports Hallmark historian Sally Hopkins.
Later, the ancient Romans, though not known particularly for their sentiment, celebrated Feb. 13-22 as the Feast of Parentalia, honoring departed fathers and mothers.
This year, some 75 million Father's Day cards will be mailed, says Ms. Hopkins, many of them carrying sentiments similar to those of Elmesu — whose name was honored on such a card.

OUTMODED EQUIPMENT

This young man certainly won't get much real cleaning done with this broom. A modern street cleaning machine would do the job so much better. His straw broom makes us think of how we try to get along without God, without spiritual values, without church. Our life would be so much better if we would exchange this life for one that knows God and practices His precepts. Without church and God we have little or no spiritual equipment. Hearing God's word preached, being with his people, working in His church, helping others through the church all give us the spiritual equipment we need for meeting life. We invite you to attend this week and make a habit of coming to God's house.

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH
THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

View From the Plains

By J.D. PEER, Texas Parks & Wildlife
A three year waiting period has finally ended as Lake Mackenzie near Silverton received a substantial raise in water during the recent rainy period.

"The lake has received a 30.9 foot raise and most of it came in one day," said Jim Green, lake manager.

"We finally have enough water to use the boat ramp," Green continued.

The lake rules have been changed to allow all boats except house boats on the lake. All Texas rules and regulations concerning water safety and fishing license requirements are in full force at the lake.

One new lake regulation surpasses the state law as all boaters and skiers will be required to wear their personal flotation devices at all times while underway on the lake. (state law requires these life preservers be available for each crew member and skier).

The lake is over 80 feet deep at the earthen dam and water stretches nearly three miles up the Tule creek bottom.

Fishing opportunities for largemouth bass, channel catfish and walleye should improve as the water clears from the runoff. Future fishing prospects will include smallmouth bass which were stocked prior to the influx of water.

Camping, hiking, picnicking and all water-related sports are in full swing at the newly-filled lake.

More information about daily or seasonal permits and other outdoor activities is available by writing Lake Mackenzie, Rt. 1 Box 14, Silverton, Tx. 78257 or by phoning (806) 633-4318.

Texas game wardens were busy in May in northwest Texas as over 470 water safety and fishing cases were taken to court.

"Wardens in region VI which includes Amarillo, Abilene and Lubbock, contacted 15,704 persons during May and approximately three per cent of them were in violation of one or more of our department's rules and regulations," said Ted Wheelis, regional director of law enforcement.

"Fishing violations lead the list over water safety but we still had a fatality from a boating accident," Wheelis continued.

The most flagrant violation was fishing without a license as 281 cases were taken to court. Wardens working the lakes heard every excuse in the book from "I left the license at home" to "I could not find a place to buy one."

The number of fishing licenses sold in Texas is down this year and indications suggest anglers are going fishing hoping they will not be checked by a warden.

Texas has one of the lowest-priced fishing licenses in the United States but, it is apparent the first item left off the list for the vacation or trip is that $4.25 piece of paper. A newly purchased license will not expire until Aug. 31, 1978.

Court fines vary from $10 to $200 for each infraction of the regulation and most embarrassed anglers have been paying a $27.50 fine.

Every major lake in the South Plains - Panhandle region must be surveyed by fisheries personnel of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department before a management plan can be completed.

A complete survey using gill nets, cove rotenone samplings and electro-fishing gear spans several months and the first phase has been completed at Buffalo Springs lake near Lubbock.

Gill nets, which are used to pickup catfish and other bottom species, brought in some good eight - to - ten pound channel cats for study. The catfish were in excellent shape according to Roy Bamberg, fishery biologist, coordinating the operations on the lake.

The catfish will be classed or aged and checked for growth rates over their life span by studying a cross-section of the dorsal spine under a microscope.

The next step in the lake survey will be a cove rotenone sample taken in July. This chemical sample works best in warm water and furnishes a complete list of fish species in the cove study area.

Later in July or August, electro-fishing gear will be brought in and a sampling of largemouth bass and other scale fish will be taken across the lake.

Texas Toad gets critical habitat

Critical habitat has been proposed for the Houston toad, a small and endangered brown toad inhabiting central Texas, by Interior Department's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. The proposal was published in the May 26 Federal Register. Interested persons have until August 24 to comment on the proposal.

Critical habitat designation means that all agencies of the government must ensure that none of their actions impinge on the needs of an endangered species.

The Houston toad is among the rarest and most critically endangered amphibians in the United States and has been officially listed as endangered since 1970. Much of the hope for the survival and recovery of this species depends upon the maintenance of suitable, undisturbed habitat. For several years, the Fish and Wildlife Service has recognized the plight of this species and has provided funds for a survey of the few remaining populations.

The Houston toad is threatened with extinction due to loss of habitat because of agricultural and urban expansion, particularly in suburban Houston (Harris County) where two of its major habitats occur. Also, man's destruction of the Houston toad's habitat has invited the intrusion of other toad species resulting in genetic swamping through hybridization with the invading species.

Survey finds tasty Bluegill is No. 1

Some sport fishermen scorn it as too little or too tame. Others call it a "bulldog with fins" or a "pygmy powerhouse" as feisty as fish, ounce for ounce, as any found in American waters. But however it's described, the humble bluegill is probably America's favorite fish, according to the current (June-July) issue of National Wildlife magazine.

This tiny, colorful species of sunfish may lack the snob appeal of pike, bass and trout, "but it outshines them all in numbers caught, pounds eaten, and hours of enjoyment," the bimonthly publication of the National Wildlife Federation reports. Among young and old, expert and neophyte, cane pole and flyrod fishermen alike, the bluegill is "a sport fish for all people."

The reasons for its popularity are many, says National Wildlife Field Editor George Harrison, who writes that he has "fished for bluegills all my life and can report they are scrappy."

One reason is the fact that the bluegill is the first fish ever caught by millions of Americans. Another is that, once hooked, "this small fry among gamefish... turns its flat side toward the fisherman and swims off at right angles to the pull of the line" a maneuver that will bend "even a fairly stiff fishing rod." A third reason is that bluegills (Lepomis macrochirus) are plentiful, they are caught under different names (sunny, sunfish, shellcracker, perch, pond perch, bream and brrin) in thousands of ponds and lakes across the country.

But perhaps the best reason, according to author Harrison, is the fact that bluegills, with their firm, white, and flaky flesh, are good eating. "The best tasting of all fishes" when filleted and cooked right.

To test their popularity, Harrison conducted a survey of state officials for National Wildlife. He found that 29 state fish managers ranked the bluegill among the top five in popularity as a species to catch and eat and that 15 rated it first or second—placing it ahead of such battlers as trout and bass.

As an example of a state whose citizens "are crazy about bluegills," the magazine cities Alabama, where on 17 state-owned lakes 158,089 anglers caught 380,865 bluegills weighing a total of 108,166 pounds in a single year.

Alabama has responded by scientifically propagating and stocking every year nearly five million "bream," as Alabamians call their favorite panfish. Not surprisingly, Alabama holds the world's record for big bluegill—a four-pound, 12-ounce male monster caught in Ketona Lake in 1950. In a species where anything over a pound is considered "a trophy," the National Wildlife survey showed that record bluegills in 45 other states averaged only two pounds, five ounces.

The bluegill's rate of growth depends upon the food available, the temperature of the water, and the number of competing fish in a pond. They start out eating tiny microscopic plants and animals and then become indiscriminate eaters—hitting such bait as earthworms, crickets, grasshoppers, moths, spiders, trout flies, imitation bugs, spinners, plastic worms, houseflies, frozen or even canned shrimp, mealworms, and grubs.

The bluegill's omnivorous appetite "affords everyone an opportunity to catch it," Charles Kelley, Alabama's director of game and fish, has observed, "and with all the action you could want."

Aqua blue streaks on its gill flap apparently inspired the bluegill's name. Other physical characteristics include purplish-black "ears" (opercular flaps) extending from each gill cover and an irregular black-fish spot located at the back of the top fin. It also has a relatively short head and small, pugged mouth.

Bluegills were originally native to the Mississippi, Great Lakes, and Eastern Seaboard waterways. They may now be caught from New York to California and Hawaii and from mid-Canada to Mexico. And they have been introduced in Africa, Europe, and South America.

Speaking from first-hand experience, Harrison reports that "bluegill fishing is at its best when the fish are on their spawning beds. During this early summer period, they are in the shallows and will strike at almost anything that hits the water." This practice, he argues, is not unsportsmanlike because bluegills "are among the most prolific of all freshwater fish."

Overpopulation and stunting become serious problems when there are too many bluegills in a body of water. It is nearly impossible, according to fish managers, to fish out all bluegills from a pond or lake. Limits and seasons are thus quite liberal, and some states don't impose either.

In order to keep bluegills in a pond from becoming so stunted that none grow to more than five inches long, the predator largemouth bass is often introduced in order to keep down the number of bluegills. The result is a greater number of large, catchable fish of both species.

Interviewing bluegill anglers, Harrison found that many go for the small sportfish as a means of obtaining relief from tension.

"Everytime I need a break from the pressures of my job, I take my kids to a farm pond to fish for bluegills," Frank Black, a stockbroker, told him. "My doctor says that pond fishing is good for my high blood pressure," said Ollie Donald, an 82-year-old great-grandmother. "I just sit here and look into the water and don't think about my troubles."

Tech students become mountain men during 15-month big-game study

LUBBOCK — Home, home on the range — where mule deer and Rocky Mountain elk play. The line may not fit the tune as well as the original, but it will be more appropriate for two Texas Tech University graduate students during the next 15 months.

The intrepid pair, under direction of Texas Tech range and wildlife management professor C. David Simpson, will be spending that time studying the ecology of Rocky Mountain elk, mule deer and other large animals in the Guadalupe Mountains National Park. "Home" will be temporary camp and the packs of on their backs.

John Moody, a wildlife graduate student from Houston, will attempt to find out everything possible about the park's Rocky Mountain elk.

These elk from Colorado were introduced into the Guadalupe area early this century in an attempt to replace the extinct Merriam elk that had been indigenous to the region, according to Simpson. The Rocky Mountain elk are not desert-conditioned but survived because of man-made water supplies.

When the national park was created in 1906, the man-made water supply was eliminated in keeping with the National Park Service's policy of leaving wilderness areas in their natural state.

The Texas Tech research project will endeavor to determine how well the elk are doing now with only natural water supplies available. "We want to know whether they are surviving, even if just barely, or whether they are in danger of dying out completely," said Simpson.

Moody will track the elk herds throughout the 15 months to record numbers and movements. He will attempt to attach radio collars to some elk as tracking aids, but he cannot rely on that technique completely. "The method has some drawbacks," said Simpson. "Since radio transmission is 'line of sight' and the terrain of the Guadalupe area is very, very rugged, there may be difficulty caused by radio waves bouncing off obstacles and giving misleading information about locations of collared elk."

Bill Perry, wildlife graduate student from Itasca, Ill., will be surveying the park's large game animals and observing competition between them. Mule deer, bear and feral goats, in addition to elk, are also known to live there.

However, there is little knowledge about how many of each species are in the park and how much competition exists between species. "We're going to try to find out what is really happening," Simpson commented. "For instance, we will try to establish how many mountain lions there are, how they are distributed in the park, and what animals they kill."

The Guadalupe Mountains National Park is located on the Texas - New Mexico border some 55 miles southwest of Carlsbad, N.M. It encompasses approximately 77,500 acres.

The studies are funded by grants from the National Park Service. The investigation of elk received $14,500, with an additional $4,000 allocated for study of large animal ecology.

Falcon silhouettes deter songbirds from windows

Falcon silhouettes taped to large window expanses can prevent smaller birds mistaking the window for open space and injuring themselves.

The reproduced shape of the falcon was found by ornithologists to stimulate an instinctive fear. The Fish and Wildlife Service, which is responsible for the protection of songbirds, felt the idea was of value for the safety of birds and is making a folder incorporating the falcon pattern available to the public free of charge. Cut out from the folder and placed at an angle on the window, the falcon silhouette will cause small birds to veer away.

Current spring bird migrations, upcoming nesting, and spring gardening with its seed temptations make the new folder an safety-repelling birds of special interest.

The folder outlines a way of constructing a life-size owl image and describes other scare devices ranging from aluminum pie plates to balloons on a string to frighten birds from gardens. Hints are also included on how to prevent woodpeckers from hammering on the house and methods of preventing birds from nesting in undesirable places.

Details are in the folders which can be obtained upon request from National Wildlife Refuges, Fish and Wildlife Service Field Offices or the Public Affairs Office, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Regional Office, P.O. Box 1306, Albuquerque, New Mexico 87103.

Whooping Crane found dead

One of the six surviving whooping crane transplants which had been raised by foster sandhill crane parents has been found dead alongside a highway near Lyman, Wyo., the Interior Department announced. The year-old bird had a three-inch gash on the upper inside of its left leg.

The dead whooper, discovered by a local resident on May 28, was identified by the yellow plastic band with the code A-07 on its leg. It was hatched on June 8, 1976, at Grays Lake. The bird weighed about 11½ pounds and had a wingspan of almost 7 feet.

Seven tied at Tulsa, Nicklaus, others kayoed

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Arnold Palmer provided the electricity. Jack Nicklaus was happy to get out alive, and the brutal 18th hole at Southern Hills scored a clear kyo of the field Thursday with defending champion Jerry Pate its prime victim in the first round of the 77th U.S. Open.

Seven players who have never captured a major championship shaved a stroke off par over the 6,873 yards of one of the toughest par-70 courses in America.

Rod Funseth, Terry Diehl, Larry Nelson, Hubie Green, Grier Jones, Tom Purtzer and Argentina's 38-year-old Floren-

tion Molina struggled to 68 in pleasant 80-degree weather that featured gusty, tricky winds. Never in Open history had so many players been clustered in first place.

There was a logjam of 10 players at par including the 46-year-old Palmer, who had to qualify to get here and sent his "Army" into a frenzy by holing a wedge for a birdie on his roller coaster round of four birdies and four bogies.

Nicklaus shot 74, Masters champion Tom Watson, looking for the Grand Slam, also floundered to a 74, and Pate suffered an agonizing six on the unforgiving final hole for 72.

"The best thing for a man to do is come to that hole Sunday with a three-shot lead," said Al Geiberger, who bogied it for a 70.

The 449-yard, dog-leg right last hole was strictly X-rated by the 153-man field which fired and fell back in headlong retreat against the monster.

Only Molina had a kind word for the hole—a backhanded compliment since he parred it.

The hole averaged 4.9 strokes Thursday with par out-numbered 2-1 by mini-disasters.

Palmer, using only 29 putts, charged up a large majority of the total crowd of 14,818 with the some of his old magic. He made three putts longer than 15 feet.

Nicklaus, the dreaded giant of the game with 16 major championships, bogeyed two of the first four holes.

Pate played the last hole like a 16-handicapper. He plunked his second shot into the sand, hit the green with a wedge, dubbed a chip and two-putted.

Tommy Bolt, the 50-year-old who won here in 1956 and was given a special exemption, shot a creditable 75. Sam Snead, 64, who has captured more titles than any golfer but always let the Open escape his grip, fired a 74.

There were 53 players within four shots of the lead.

The usually fiery tempered Weiskopf made one of the classiest comebacks of the day. He went double bogey-par-triple bogey then rallied for 71.

Arnie's Army mobilizes for Open

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
TULSA, Okla. (AP) — At age 47 and wearing the scars of 24 U.S. Opens, Arnold Palmer can still send electrical sparks flying in a golf gallery.

"Excuse me, excuse me," a silver-haired, grandmotherly woman said, shoving her way to the edge of the 18th green. "I want to see Arnold Palmer."

The broad-shouldered man they once called "The Charger" was hunched, characteristically knock-kneed, over a 15-foot putt. He gave the ball a gentle nudge. It rolled resolutely toward the cup, spun around the high side, appeared to drop and then hung precariously on the lip.

What started out as a wild, ecstatic cheer turned into a thunderous moan.

"They thought I had dropped it—so did I," Palmer said afterward, talking about his even par 70—the near 60—which put him up among the leaders in the opening round of the 77th Championship.

"It's amazing," an older man in the gallery commented. "There is something about a Palmer cheer that distinguishes it from all other cheers. It's just as if the crowd is holding its breath while Arnie is putting, the lets it all out when the ball goes home."

Asked about it afterward, Palmer, his thinning hair bleached by hours under the sun, his strong face still boyishly impish, remarked:

"The complete silence—I've noticed it just before I shoot. It weighs on me. I can feel them pulling for me to make it. It charges me up. I like it."

Palmer remains a phenomenon in the mad world of sports. His is a rare, intangible and inexplicable quality reserved for precious few. The modern word for it is "charisma." In the Roaring Twenties—in Clara Bow's day they called it "it."

You either have "it," or you don't. Greatness isn't the gauge.

Palmer has it, Jack Nicklaus doesn't. Muhammad Ali has it, but not George Foreman. Joe Namath has it. Fran Tarkenton and Roger Staubach don't. It radiated around Joe DiMaggio but not Ted Williams, a superb or hitter. Robert Redford has it, but not Rock Hudson.

Jack Dempsey had it, Gene Tunney didn't. Judy Garland had it, a thousand better singers and actresses could never capture it. Babe Ruth, with his beer barrel belly, pipestem legs and reputation for gluttony, captivated the baseball world but the daring, talented Ty Cobb, maybe the best of all-time—people kept pulling for him to break a leg sliding into second base.

There is a sexual magnetism attached to the quality. Men admire Arnold Palmer, just as they do Nicklaus, but women adore him. They gush and get downright slobbery every time he wrinkles his nose, jerks at a glove or stops to watch the flight of an airplane overhead.

If the question, "Whom would you like to see win the Open?" were put to the thousands of spectators here or to the millions watching on TV, the answer almost certainly would be overwhelming:

"Palmer."

An injury time-out
First Baptist shortstop Max DuBose calls time-out to aide First Assembly's Mike Shannon who sprained his ankle sliding into second in a Church League softball game Thursday night. Second baseman Cary Smith waits for help. Despite the injury, the First Assembly of God trounced the Baptists, 15-5, in the season opener for both teams.

Rodeo dominated by Himes brothers

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — Second go-round action in the 1977 College National Finals Rodeo concludes tonight, with a family trio and a man-and-wife team putting on quite a show as they head for Saturday night's finals.

The Himes brothers from Beulah, Colo., are monopolizing the bareback bronc riding competition, riding neck-and-neck toward the finals. Terry Himes holds the lead in the women's breakaway roping event.

Riding out of Colorado and Texas schools, the brothers are one-two going into the final phase of second go-round action. Jack Himes of Howard College in Big Springs, Tex., is just three points ahead of brother Jay, who rides for Southern Colorado University.

Jay scored 66 Thursday night on a bronc named "Watergate," giving him a two-ride point total of 131. Jack's two-ride score is 124. The brothers seem assured of winning mounts for a featured ride-off during the finals.

Jack Himes also holds second place in the calf roping event. Jack's wife, Terry, moved into the breakaway roping lead Thursday night with a 4.7 second time. She has caught, flipped and tied two goats in a total time of 6.27 seconds.

The husband-wife team of Steve and Kay Bland also is setting a torrid pace. Steve held first in calf roping while his homestate and teammate from Southeastern Oklahoma State held the second go-round lead in the barrel racing with a two-ride time of 32.41 seconds.

Chris Lybbert of Cal Poly at San Luis Obispo, Calif., won the first go-round steer wrestling with a time of 4.9 seconds and got the hard-luck crowd award Thursday night when things went wrong. His steer kept falling the wrong way, but the determined cowboy stayed with it and finally downed the animal in 62.1 seconds. That time threw him out of the competition, but he walked from the arena amidst a roar of applause.

When all the scores are averaged after Friday night's round, the top 10 winners in each event will advance to the finals. There are 297 participants.

Arizona State do-it-all Jamie Allen doesn't talk to the ball like Mark Fidrych of the Detroit Tigers but it seemed that way as he kept the top-rated Sun Devils alive Thursday night in the College World Series by preserving a 6-2 victory over South Carolina.

"I'm not showing off out there," said the enthusiastic Allen, "it's just something that helps me get ready. Most of the time, I'm more subdued. But I really bring it out for big games."

The freshman right-hander wiggled out of a bases-loaded jam and pitched three innings of one-hit relief to hand South Carolina its first loss of the series.

He stalked around the mound, jumped up and down after strikes, frequently backed off the mound and taunted batters to get in the box.

"Allen really put on quite a show," said Arizona State Coach Jim Brock. "Coming in and throwing fast balls after Mitch (Dean) had thrown so many breaking pitches kept them off balance."

Southern Illinois staged the biggest comeback of the series and up-ended California State-Los Angeles 9-7 in the night's elimination-round game.

Southern Illinois, 41-11, is matched against top-rated Arizona State, 55-12, in an elimination game Friday night with the survivor facing South Carolina for the series crowd Saturday night.

South Carolina, 43-11-1, received a bye into the finals by beating Southern Illinois 5-4 Wednesday night in a meeting of then series unbeaten.

Although the crowd of 10,193 seemed to delight in Allen's performance, South Carolina Coach June Raines didn't like what he saw.

"I thought Arizona State made a joke of the game with all that stalling and delay tactics," said Raines.

He had mixed emotions as he cleared out his locker at Shea Stadium one last time. "It's happy and sad," he said. "It's all over. It's done. It's sad because you leave memories and people you've worked with for 12 years. Buddy Harrelson ... Jerry Kosman ... Jerry Grote ... people you have loved and respect for."

When Seaver was asked if he had any last words for Met fans, he lost his composure. He dropped his chin to his chest and became glassy-eyed as he tried to formulate an answer to the question. But emotion overcame him and he asked for a break in the locker room news conference.

After about 10 minutes, Seaver returned and tried again to answer the question. But he choked up twice.

"If I can retain enough composure to talk for about 60 seconds, I'll have it made," he said.

But he could not. He managed only a few words. "I've given them a great number of thrills and they've been equally returned ..." he began. But again, emotion took over.

Seaver bids farewell

Finally, simply unable to speak, he borrowed a reporter's pad and pencil to write a few final words to the fans who had cheered him on during his career and had swamped the Stadium telephone switchboard with calls of protest when rumors of his impending trade spread through the city this week.

... And the ovation the other night, after passing Sandy Koufax (in career strikeouts) will be one of the most memorable and warm moments in my life."

WHA Aeros choose Campbell

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Aeros Coach and general manager Bill Dineen says its not who you draft in the World Hockey Association that counts, it's who you sign.

The Aeros, with the first and 10th picks in the first round of Thursday's WHA draft, took defenseman Scott Campbell, 6-2, 205 first and then used the 10th pick for center Dwight Foster, 5-10, 175.

The Aeros now must complete the task by signing their top choices, who also are first round picks in the rival National Hockey League. Campbell went to St. Louis and Boston took Foster.

Midland nips Gold Sox

By The Associated Press
A one-run combined pitching effort by Ted Power and reliever Don Standley in a Texas League game held West Division leader El Paso at bay while San Antonio racked up a 6-1 victory Thursday.

Power pitched five scoreless innings until he injured an elbow while hurling the ball in the sixth. El Paso's Ken Landreaux swatted a solo homer off relief pitcher Standley in the ninth. Power is now 5-4 while losing pitcher Bob Leslie fell to 3-5.

In other Texas League action, Midland edged Amarillo 4-3. Games between Tulsa at Arkansas and Shreveport at Jackson were both postponed due to rain.

Karl Pagel went 3-for-4 with two homers and a single to lead Midland down victory lane. Pagel hit homers in the fourth and the eighth while Tony Pepper had a solo homer in the sixth for Midland.

It keeps you cool. Without keeping you broke.

McGraw-Edison Company engineers have succeeded in reducing home cooling to its simplest, most natural, and most cost-efficient terms. Compared to air conditioning, you get summer cooling that not only costs far less to buy, but, more important, far less to operate ... about 1/4 as much to operate!

And with electricity prices so high — they've risen as much as 50% over the past two years — that's a big consideration. So much so that many people who have air conditioning are finding it beneficial to add The Miser to save money.

Finley upset

NEW YORK (AP) — The voice of Charles O. Finley, owner of the Oakland A's and self-acclaimed "staunchest enemy" of baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, cracked yver the telephone.

The long-standing battle between Finley and Bowie Kuhn, conducted in and out of the courts over the past few years, was in motion again.

Finley was incensed over the trade of pitcher Tom Seaver by the New York Mets to the Cincinnati Reds. Finley, involved in several legal skirmishes with the commissioner and pledged to more, could not understand why the Seaver deal went through since Kuhn had voided his sale of pitcher Vida Blue to the New York Yankees last year.

"The trade of Tom Seaver ... without a whimper from Bowie Kuhn, confirms his perverted, selective and political use of his office to favor his friends and punish his enemies," Finley said.

Sun Devils whip So. Carolina, advance to NCAA semifinals

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — College baseball has found its answer to The Bird.

Arizona State do-it-all Jamie Allen doesn't talk to the ball like Mark Fidrych of the Detroit Tigers but it seemed that way as he kept the top-rated Sun Devils alive Thursday night in the College World Series by preserving a 6-2 victory over South Carolina.

Budget Terms We Appreciate Your Business

It keeps you cool. Without keeping you broke.

McGraw-Edison Company engineers have succeeded in reducing home cooling to its simplest, most natural, and most cost-efficient terms. Compared to air conditioning, you get summer cooling that not only costs far less to buy, but, more important, far less to operate ... about 1/4 as much to operate!

And with electricity prices so high — they've risen as much as 50% over the past two years — that's a big consideration. So much so that many people who have air conditioning are finding it beneficial to add The Miser to save money.

Perfect attendance at 82

Always goes to church

By LEIGH WILSON

DALLAS (AP) — Procrastination is a vice for some, and many people find it easier to stay in bed Sunday morning than to charge out to Sunday school.

like this!" he beamed. The Presbyterian church and some others award Sunday school attendance medals through the Cross and Crown system under which a person gets a medallion for attending 50 out of 52 Sundays in a year.

the U.S. Navy in World War I.

But he says he attended as often as possible, even during the war. One Sunday, he rosted out a service in Brest, France. "I couldn't understand a word they said, but I recognized the tunes they sang," he said.

He's been doing it for the past 65 years straight. In fact, the sprightly silver-haired gent says he can only recall missing one day of Sunday school during all of his life and that was when he was growing up in Abilene around the turn of the century.

Each subsequent year is recognized with a numerical pendant that hangs in succession from the wreath. McDaniel has 63 such pendants. He didn't start forming the year-pin chain until he was 17, when the Presbyterian church in Abilene started using the system, so the childhood miss didn't count, he said.

Another time, he and his mother were on their way to South Texas from Abilene, and stopped at Bradshaw for Sunday school. It was during in the depression of the 1930's, and McDaniel got some curious looks when he dropped a silver dollar into the collection plate.

Instead of going to church, his mother left early one Sunday in the horse and carriage to visit her sister at a hospital.

McDaniel recalls the astonished usher asking him: "Do you want some drag back?"

McDaniel will discuss "Challenging Christ" at the Saturday service at 11 a.m. Bible School begins at 9:30 a.m.

McDaniel recollects his mother phoning from the hospital and telling her children: "Your aunt has just died, you won't be going to Sunday school this morning."

At first, he wore the medal and chain on his coat lapel. As it grew longer, he made a watch fob of it.

McDaniel is now a deacon of the Highland Park Presbyterian Church in Dallas and works every Sunday as an assistant treasurer.

His 65 years in attendance total 3,380 Sundays. In retrospect, McDaniel says he "should have gone ahead and walked."

The chain is nearly a yard long now. McDaniel says he keeps it now tucked it away in a dresser drawer.

And if the rest of this year is as full of Sunday school as the past 65 have been, McDaniel will receive his 66-year pendant January 1, 1978.

"I never anticipated making a record of this kind," he said.

McDaniel makes an exception in his attendance record for the year he spent in Cities fear gas quota

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP) — Officials of some West Texas and Eastern New Mexico cities say federal natural gas consumption quotas set to go into effect in two weeks will stifle growth of the municipalities.

The town leaders met in Lubbock this week to discuss the rates, which are based on consumption figures from 1974 and include a penalty charge for overconsumption, with officials of the El Paso Natural Gas Co.,

the supplier for the towns involved. The comments of the spokesmen for the cities and the gas company were included in a copyright article in the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal on Thursday. According to an El Paso Natural Gas Co. spokesman, the Federal Power Commission has said the towns would have to pay $5 per thousand cubic feet (MCF) of natural gas used above their quota limits. El Paso's normal interstate rate is $1.50 per MCF.

Tom Clark eulogized

DALLAS (AP) — Former U.S. Supreme Court Justice Tom Clark was eulogized Thursday as a man who "walked with kings, yet kept the common touch" in services attended by about 150 mourners.

Clark said of his father, "He was a doer. He was driven—a driven human being, in his devotion to his work as Attorney General of the United States and on the Supreme Court."

Although Supreme Court justices are appointed for life, Clark stepped down when then-President Lyndon Johnson appointed his son to the U.S. Attorney General's post to prevent a conflict of interests.

The native Texan died Monday in his sleep while visiting his son, former U.S. Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark, in New York. He was 77.

Clark was eulogized in Washington Thursday by Chief Justice Warren Burger at the start of the Supreme Court's morning session. Burger called Clark "a literal missionary for the improvement of judicial administration."

Following his early retirement, Clark toured the country assisting federal judges in reducing their caseloads. In 1968, he was named the first director of the Federal Judicial Center in Washington, D.C. and served until 1970.

And that character is reflected in traditional Texas virtues: frontier spirit, courage, integrity, warmth and hard work," the Rev. Dr. Zacharias said.

The chief justice said Clark apparently was the only judge or justice ever to sit on every federal court of appeals after his formal retirement from the Supreme Court in 1967. Clark was appointed for life, Clark stepped down when then-President Lyndon Johnson appointed his son to the U.S. Attorney General's post to prevent a conflict of interests.

Billy Graham calls for war to win souls for Christianity

By ROBERT MACY

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Calling for an all-out war to win souls, evangelist Billy Graham closed the annual Southern Baptist Convention Thursday night by challenging Christians to stand up to mental, possibly physical persecution.

God has not called us to a sports arena or a playground—but to a battleground," he said. "We're in a war—a great, gigantic spiritual war. The devil is after their souls and so are we."

County, Fla., law that made it illegal to deny housing and job opportunities to homosexuals. But he said he does not feel God has called him to join particular groups to oppose certain kinds of sins.

Earlier 16,000 delegates reaffirmed their position that homosexuality is a sin, passed a resolution praising singer Anita Bryant for her stand on the issue, and heard U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young Jr. describe the world as divided in a "balance of terror."

The resolution praised Miss Bryant for her "courageous stand against the evils inherent in homosexuality."

The resolution praised Miss Bryant for her "courageous stand against the evils inherent in homosexuality."

An estimated 20,000 persons were on hand for Graham's speech, the concluding event of the three-day convention for the nation's largest Protestant denomination. Southern Baptists claim some 13 million members nationwide, including Miss Bryant and President Jimmy Carter, who addressed delegates opening night via videotape.

Congress passed a measure requiring church agencies that are not integrated auxiliaries to file reports on income and disbursements. The IRS ruled that hospitals, schools, homes for children and the elderly and similar institutions are not integrated auxiliaries.

The resolution praised Miss Bryant for her "courageous stand against the evils inherent in homosexuality."

Graham, in a news conference earlier in the day, said he admires Miss Bryant for heading the effort to repeal a Dade

The convention maintains it is for churches, not the government, to decide which institutions are integrated auxiliaries. The convention, after 50 minutes of debate, also approved a resolution directing agencies of the church to disclose salaries and fringe benefits for their executives to "any inquiring Baptist."

Young, who is a minister of the United Church of Christ, said "There is something wrong when the people of the world, because of differences in ideologies, will spend $350 billion annually to have the capacity to destroy one another as a means of keeping peace."

Texas GOPs eat for money

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Republicans will be carving up the Carter Administration Friday along with beef tournedos at the GOP's $125-a-plate fundraiser at the Apparel Mart here.

Ward said he expects Texas Republican Party boss Ray Hutchison to toss his hat in the ring against Gov. Dolph Briscoe, with several blessings from the podium.

Justice of the Peace Jay Williams pronounced Patricia Ann Fourn, 18, dead at the scene. Her body was found more than 100 feet from the wrecked car.

Besides taking dainty nips at dinner, a host of Republican notables can be expected to verbally tear into the Democratic regime.

But Hutchison said he did not care to add to speculations about his own gubernatorial aspirations.

Officers said the two females were en route to Hobbs, N.M., to visit a brother. The vehicle was traveling around 100 miles per hour at the time of the crash, police said.

The gala affair is being billed as a "Salute to Great Americans" — excluding, of course, Democrats.

"No, I won't even be mentioned," said non-candidate Hutchison, who will be introducing the speakers. "I don't think they will say anything, but if they do, I will accept them (endorsements) of course."

Republican planners admit early summer is less than perfect timing for a fund raiser, but Hutchison said the money is needed now so organizational efforts can proceed next year with a minimum of financial headaches.

Besides U.S. Sen. John Tower, scheduled speakers include former CIA Director George Bush, former Deputy Defense Secretary William Clements Jr., former Under Secretary of Commerce James Baker and Edward Vetter, and former U.S. Ambassador Anne Armstrong.

Hutchison played down any suggestion that a sizable slice of the dinner profits would be used to finance a Republican race for governor. He said the money will be used to bolster Republican legislative races.

In the United States, "the 400" is an expression used for the inner circle of higher society. It is said to have originated when Mrs. William Astor asked Ward McAllister to help her cut her annual ball guest list down to 400, since her ball room would not accommodate more.

Adventists to collect mission money

Members of the Pampa Seventh-Day Adventist Church will give a special offering at services Saturday to assist in the work of North American missions, said Pastor Franklin E. Horne.

Guest speaker will be Pastor Nathan Merkel, superintendent of schools and youth ministry director of the Seventh-Day Adventist churches in West Texas and New Mexico.

Merkel has spent 14 years in Bolivia and Ecuador in educational and administrative work. He currently is planning a free camp for blind children from the Pampa area. The camp will be near Carlsbad, N.M. Merkel will discuss "Challenging Christ" at the Saturday service at 11 a.m. Bible School begins at 9:30 a.m.

USDA names Weddington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Austin state legislator and women's activist lawyer may become the first woman to be named general counsel in the U.S. Agriculture Department. Sources indicated Thursday that President Jimmy Carter intends to nominate Sarah Weddington to the job in the near future.

One source said that her nomination papers are in the final clearance stage at the White House but that "no official announcement date has been set."

Ms. Weddington, as she prefers to be called, is working in the department's Office of General Counsel as a consultant. Ms. Weddington, 32, successfully argued against Texas abortion laws before the U.S. Supreme Court four years ago.

Names in the news

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles acted as an impromptu mediator for a group of black pickets complaining about police brutality, but got little thanks from the blacks for his efforts.

The incident Wednesday during Charles' visit to a community center arose when he encountered a chanting crowd waving placards over the recent arrest of 24 black youths on mugging charges.

Kim Gordon, the 21-year-old leader of the protest, told Charles that black youths in the area faced constant police harassment. But he conceded they had not discussed the complaint with police officials.

"I am sure there is some truth on both sides, but couldn't you come together and discuss it?" asked the 28-year-old prince. "You cannot go around like this."

Gordon, whose parents are from Ghana and who is an official of the Socialist Workers' Party, later described Charles as "naive."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Groucho Marx is reported in good spirits after undergoing surgery to repair a dislocated artificial hip joint.

Mr. Marx is up and he is eating well, Cedars-Sinai Medical Center spokesman Larry Baum said Wednesday. "His spirits are good and everything seems to be going along well."

The 68-year-old comedian probably will be released by the weekend, according to his conservator, Nat Perrin.

Marx was admitted to the hospital Saturday after the joint slipped out of place. The surgery was performed Sunday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Transsexual Renee Richards plans to quit playing professional tennis and return to Newport Beach, Calif., to resume practicing eye surgery, says the New York Post.

The 42-year-old Dr. Richards, formerly Dr. Richard Raskind, recently signed with the Cleveland-Pittsburgh Nets of World Team Tennis. But the Post said Wednesday that she has told friends she has decided to quit after failing another sex test.

Dr. Richards was barred from the French and Italian opens after failing chromosome tests and is being kept out of Wimbledon.

The Post quoted sources as saying World Team Tennis Commissioner Butch Buchholz, fearing a walkout of women in the league, ordered Dr. Richards to take another chromosome test after she had passed one. The second time, she failed.

Nightclub will pay for Ruby trial sketches

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas City Council has agreed to pay $7,500 for a series of sketches made during the Jack Ruby murder trial here in 1964.

Ruby, a Dallas nightclub owner, was convicted of the murder of Lee Harvey Oswald, the man the Warren Commission said assassinated President John F. Kennedy in Dallas. Ruby died in custody at Parkland Hospital of a blood clot. He was also suffering from cancer.

Oswald was shot to death by Ruby while being moved from the Dallas City jail. Television networks were covering the transfer live, and their cameras recorded the Oswald shooting.

The 130 sketches were done by John Groth, who did illustrations for such books as "Gone With The Wind," "All Quiet On The Western Front," and "Exodus."

Money for the sketches will come from the budget of the Dallas Public Library System, which will put them on display.

The council decision was not unanimous. Councilmen Bill Blackburn and William Cothrum strongly opposed the expenditure.

"The assassination of President Kennedy was not our fault," Cothrum said, "and I don't see why we should do anything to continue the mystique of this incident."

"I feel like this reflects a morbid fascination with this aspect of our city," Blackburn said.

Councilman Richard Smith said the sketches' value will increase with time. "I am surprised there would be any question about the importance of adding this to our library collection," he said.

No photographers were allowed in the courtroom during the trial, and sketches of the proceedings are the only visual records.

Included in Groth's portfolio are sketches of Ruby's defense attorney Melvin Belli and an overall view of the courtroom.

Zale executive leaves firm

DALLAS (AP) — Zale vice president and board member Marvin Rubin has resigned his position with the mammoth jewelry firm.

The brief announcement was made Wednesday by corporation president Donald Zale, who said Rubin "plans to pursue a new direction in his career."

Rubin, one of the highest ranking, non-family executives in the family-controlled company, could not be reached for comment.

Rubin's replacement was not named.

He started at Zale in 1947 as an errand clerk. In 1960, he was named vice president for purchasing. Nine years later, Rubin was promoted to senior corporate vice president.

Lawyer tests ink on will

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The attorney for former Howard Hughes aide Noah Dietrich says he has new information to support his client's claim that the Hughes "Mormon Will" is authentic.

Harold Rhoden said Wednesday that information he received from Nevada Atty Gen Robert List shows that the ink used to write the will was manufactured between 1958 and 1966 and again from 1972 to 1974.

"We feel with the use of common sense this new information makes the forgery theory untenable," said Rhoden, whose client was named executor in the will.

He said a forger would have had to make an ink analysis to be certain of using the correct ink. Noting that the will was dated March 19, 1968, he said pens with ink manufactured in 1966 could have still been in Hughes' possession.

Rhoden said the will was written with a type of ballpoint pen that Hughes aide Lavar Myler said the millionaire used exclusively in 1968, the year of the will. He said Myler said he bought the pens for Hughes by the dozens.

Local Scouts will attend 1977 Jamboree

Three openings are still available for the 1977 National Scout Jamboree at Moraine State Park, Pa.

Interested scouts should contact the Boy Scout office at 669-6845 for reservations. Thirty-three boy scouts from the Pampa area are already planning to attend.

A shake-down campout for pre-jamboree training will be Saturday and Sunday at M.K. Brown Boy Scout Camp, said jamboree scoutmaster Tom Dunn of Pampa.

The jamboree troop leaves for Pennsylvania July 28 and returns Aug. 18.

Scouts signed up for summer camps can receive free medical examinations June 26 at the National Guard Armory beginning at 1 p.m.

Providing the examinations is the 628 Station Hospital from Amarillo.
