

Pampa Packerland for sale: $2 million

Packerland Packing Company's Pampa plant is for sale for about $2 million. However, it won't be available for shoppers still trying to find the just-right gift for that business executive on the Christmas list.

was assigned by Packerland to find someone to buy or lease the Pampa plant. "We're not going to be in a position to market it until the middle of January," Henderson said. "We expect to be marketing it on a free and clear basis."

The State of Texas currently has a lawsuit pending against Packerland Packing Co. of Texas, Inc., for alleged violations of the Texas Clean Air Act. There are $250,000 in potential penalties being sought in the case which is scheduled for court Jan. 9 in Wheeler.

He said if the state loses the appeal route is open to him even if the decision goes against Packerland but the amount of penalty assessed is considered by him to be too low. Henderson, however, expects all legal matters that could present problems in a sale of the property to be cleared up by mid-January.

He was in Pampa recently to scrutinize the Packerland property and expects to return sometime in January. The real estate man estimated that the $2 million asking price represents about 40 percent of the "reproduction value" of the plant, equipment and land.

and "everything basically is intact," Henderson said. He said the Frankenthal family originally wanted about $4 million for the Pampa plant. The facility has not been in operation since February when Howard Frankenthal, part owner and former general manager of the plant, said a "limited supply of live cattle as well as termination of the USDA school lunch programs" necessitated the closing.

who built the Packerland meat packing empire, died of a heart attack Dec. 3, 1976, just after FBI agents arrested him and his daughter on charges of wiretapping some competing meat packing plants. The Pampa plant is the smallest of the Packerland operations. Other facilities are in Green Bay, Wis., and Chippewa Falls, Wis.

and hamburger processing continued until the final closing in February. The number of employees dropped from about 250 to about 80 when operations were cut back. Henderson said that his "specialized real estate business" is working with George Gillette of Packerland and indicated that Gillette now has controlling interest in the company. He said he did not know where Gillette lives.

Mrs. Churchill dies

LONDON (AP) — Lady Spencer Churchill, widow of Britain's wartime leader Sir Winston Churchill, died today at her home in London after a heart attack. She was 92. Her grandson, Winston Churchill, announced her death. He said she was lunching with her secretary when she was stricken.

dominal surgery at King Edward VII hospital in London. The reasons for the operation was never made public. Shocked Britons had suggested special legislation or an appeal to provide for her needs, but she said she deplored any such idea and it was dropped. Lady Spencer Churchill was born April 1, 1885 to Sir Henry Hozer and Lady Blanche Hozer. Her mother was descended from a long line of British earls, as was Sir Winston — a grandson of the Duke of Marlborough.

Churchill proposed soon after in the gardens of Blenheim Palace, his family's 16th-century estate. They wed on Sept. 12, 1908 at St. Margaret's church, London, with sight and sound of Big Ben. "I married and lived happily ever after," Sir Winston recalled 22 years later in his autobiography. Their marriage produced one son and four daughters. Randolph Churchill, a politician and writer who died in 1968, aged 57. Diana Churchill, twice-married, who died in 1963 from an overdose of sleeping pills. Sarah Churchill, an actress. Mary Churchill, who married prominent British politician Sir Christopher Soames, and Marigold Frances Churchill, who died at age 2.

Bob Gilchrist used to have his own sign painting company but now it is just a sideline to his job with Coca Cola in Pampa. During the Christmas season, however, the spirit moves him to get out his paintbrushes and write Christmas greeting on store windows and even a Coke truck. (Pampa News photo by Ron Ennis)

Simpson seeks recount

Bob Simpson said Sunday he would seek a recount in the wake of his loss to Bob Price for the 31st Senatorial District seat in Saturday's special runoff election.

complete canvas of votes by each county commission in the district, and a change of only five votes in each county would reverse the outcome. The official results will be announced within two weeks by an election canvass committee composed of the governor, the secretary of state, and one other person. Simpson commented that because the voting was conducted via paper ballots, "there's always the chance for a mistake." The vacancy in the district was created when Max Sherman resigned the seat to assume appointment as president of West Texas State University. The unofficial count in Saturday's election gave Price 15,197 votes to 14,963 for Simpson.

Nearly 400 callers report need for doctors

A total of 384 callers participated in the Chamber of Commerce four-day community survey on Pampa's physician shortage and 327 of them said they have had a personal experience which indicates there are not enough medical doctors in the city.

were asked by some physicians considering a move to Pampa for proof that they are needed here.

Eight band members win all-area

Eight Pampa High School band students and one alternate were named to the all-area band during try-outs Saturday, and will go to Lubbock Jan. 21 to compete for places on the all-state band.

Eighty callers said they do not have a specialist in the city. The average family size of callers was 2.72. Average family size for those who reported having no local family physician was 2.94.

There were 108 callers who mentioned a need for specialists in the city, Sackett said. "People would like to have specialists here so that their local physician would not have to refer them out of town for treatment," he said.

They were Judy Bridwell, Cheryl Birkes, and Katrina Whitmarsh on clarinet; Mary Bridwell, alternate on clarinet; Kari Guinn, cornet; Sam Gilbert, baritone; David Lee, trombone; Teresa Taylor, french horn and Lonnie Phillips, baritone saxophone.

Floyd Sackett, manager of the Chamber of Commerce, said that the purpose of the survey was to obtain information to be used by the chamber, the Pampa Industrial Foundation, local physicians, and the board of managers of Highland General Hospital in their efforts to determine and obtain the number of physicians needed in Pampa.

Longer waiting periods for appointments and in doctors' offices were seen by 81 callers as an indication that a shortage of physicians exists. Fifty-six persons reported they cannot get a family doctor because "physicians are so busy that they are not taking new patients."

Vance urges Hussein to talk

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance arrived in Jordan today to try to persuade King Hussein to send a representative to the Cairo talks between Israel and Egypt.

that time on the overall Mideast conflict, he may agree to negotiate a separate peace settlement with Israel — something he repeatedly has said he does not want to do.

Vance goes from Jordan to Damascus to try to get Assad to moderate his opposition to Sadat. But Khaddam rebuffed him in advance, saying Syria refuses to respond to "current international efforts" in the region.

had been a success because none of them showed an "inclination toward cooperation with the enemy." But none of the three gave any indication of taking sides with Assad against Sadat.

But he disclaimed any intention of reaching a peace treaty with Egypt alone. "There is no intent to have our countries signing peace treaties and leaving the other countries out," he said. "Our intent is to do our best to have treaties with all of them."

Vance said his talks in Israel showed the Jewish state was dedicated to peace and "working energetically toward that goal." His aides exuded optimism after their visits to Cairo and Jerusalem.

Dayan did not say what kind of concessions, if any, Sadat could expect from Israel. But he said Israel was prepared to discuss any subject. The Cairo talks are "not a birthday party where you go to give gifts," Dayan said.

Assad has been touring the oil states on the Persian Gulf trying to get them to put financial pressure on Sadat. Khaddam claimed his visits to Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and the U.A.E.

Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin told a news conference he hopes Israel and Egypt will work out principles of a peace treaty that "will be a sample for the peace treaties to be signed with all our neighbors."

Reporters were told Vance found both Sadat, who he met Saturday in Cairo, and Begin considerably more flexible in private conversation than in their public positions.

Forced retirement upheld under age discrimination law

Deadlock on gas plan

The forecast for today calls for partly cloudy skies and mostly fair weather through Tuesday. The high for today and Tuesday will be in the upper 60's (19 degrees C.). The low tonight will be in the upper 30's (4 degrees C.). Winds will be from the southwest at 15 to 25 m.p.h. becoming northwesterly at 10 to 15 m.p.h. tonight.

The continuing deadlock has jeopardized conference committee agreement not only on natural gas policy but on the rest of the Carter energy plan. Sources said the plan, supported by Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, would include a concession by the House eliminating any federal control over the allocation of natural gas produced and consumed in the same state.

Such federal regulation is included in the version of the Carter energy plan approved by the House. The House also approved the president's formula for continued federal controls, although the ceiling would rise from the present $1.46 per thousand cubic feet to $1.75, a price the administration says is high enough to encourage exploration for new reserves.

The senate has approved a two-to five-year plan for deregulation of natural gas prices, which critics say will give windfall profits to the industry and raise consumer heating and cooking costs to unair levels. Sources said the House compromise would keep the $1.75 price.

But they noted that the House and Senate recently passed amendments specifically prohibiting forced retirement of under-65 employees simply because of their age. Thus, they said, "the mischief the court fashions today may be short-lived."

The decision came in a case involving Harris McMann of Alexandria, Va., who brought suit contending that United Airlines had no right to force him to retire when he reached age 60 in 1973. He was a technical specialist in aircraft systems and had worked for the firm since 1944.

McMann based his argument on the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, which took effect in 1968 and prohibited employers from firing workers or otherwise discriminating against them because of age. The act covered persons between the ages of 40 and 65. It

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Monday, Dec. 12, the 346th day of 1977. There are 19 days left in the year.
Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1642, the Dutch navigator, Abel Tasman, discovered New Zealand.
On this date: In 1792, 22-year-old Ludwig van Beethoven paid 19 cents for his first music lesson — from Franz Joseph Haydn.

In 1894, Japanese troops invaded Korea.
In 1937, the U.S. gunboat Panay was sunk by the Japanese on the Yangtze River in China.
In 1944, Tokyo was partially evacuated because of fire-bombing by American planes.
In 1963, Kenya became an independent republic within the British Commonwealth.
In 1970, a state of emergency was declared in Britain because of a power slowdown due to labor discontent.
Ten years ago, Republican Sen. Charles Percy of Illinois and a party of four who were visiting South Vietnam escaped an enemy attack upon them at Dak Son.

Five years ago: The Apollo 17 astronauts, exploring the surface of the moon, drove their electric vehicle to an ancient avalanche to search for the oldest lunar rocks.
One year ago, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger returned to Washington after talks with British officials in London on the future of the white-ruled African country of Rhodesia.
Today's birthday: Frank Sinatra is 62 years old.

CRIME One virtue of the computer is that you can program it to recognize patterns in masses of seemingly unrelated information. This ability has resulted in a fascinating experiment at the San Diego Police Department, whose computer was loaded with data about 700 crimes. Because of its ability to digest this information and determine patterns, the computer was able to predict with 70 to 95 per cent accuracy whether certain types of cases could be solved. Next year, the police will actually use prediction generated by the computer to decide whether it's worth trying to solve a particular crime. Experts say smaller police departments can use programmable calculators just as successfully.

FUEL Last fall, Nobel prize winner Melvin Calvin caused a bit of a stir when he said we could ease our oil shortage if we went into gasoline tree ranching in a big way. By this he meant that it is possible to extract liquid hydrocarbons from the euphorbia bush, which now grows wild on worthless land and needs little water. Well, chemist Calvin has studied the matter further and concludes that an acre of euphorbia will yield 20 barrels of unrefined oil, worth about $270 at current prices. He's cultivating three acres and working on yield and extraction methods.

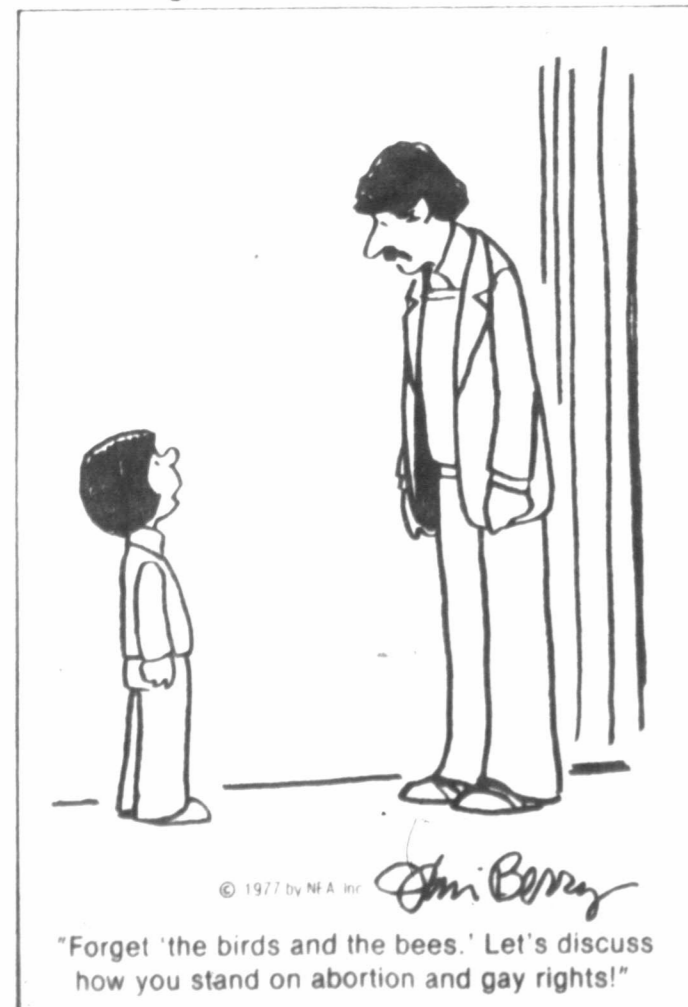

WOMEN While with one thing and another, it has taken mankind a while to come up with an intelligent response to the fact that a woman's hand is a bit shorter than a man's. An Air Force survey found that using "male" tools tends to be a gripping ordeal for the handymen. Thus, you'll be pleased to know that a manufacturer plans to introduce tools tailored for the average woman's hand. We'll have "His" and "Her" tools, so to speak.

FOOD For many years, whey—which is left over when milk curds are converted into cheese—has been dumped in rivers or given away as animal feed. But the food engineers are beginning to figure ways to use the whey. Example: If it's pasteurized, inoculated with a yogurt culture, flavored, and then bottled, it becomes a fruit-flavored drink. Other possibilities: whey fortified macaroni, an ingredient of ice cream, an inexpensive "pop" wine, tortillas, and even fertilizer. Whey has a high protein content, which now can be extracted from the rest of the whey solids.

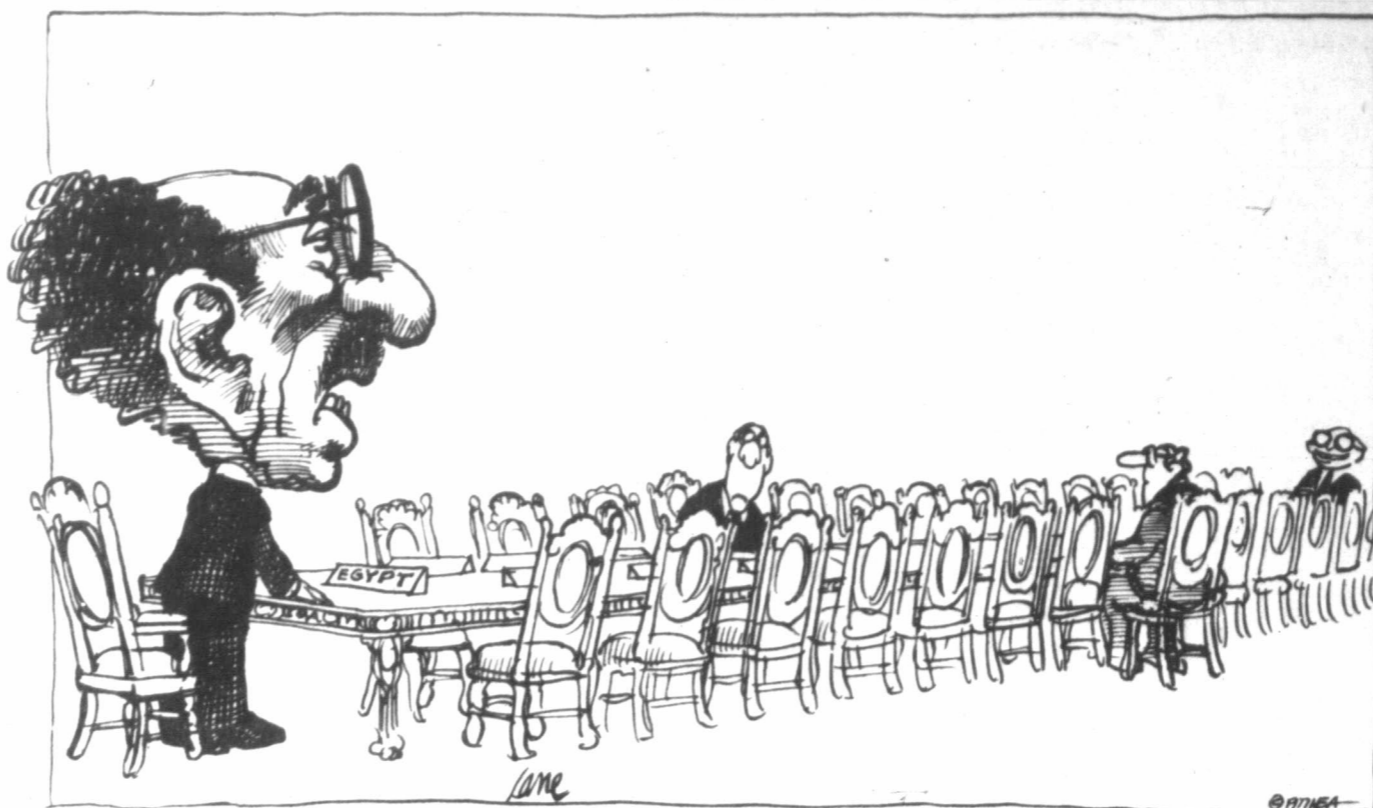

CAREERS Industrial hygiene, in case you were wondering, is the scientific discipline devoted to protecting the health of people at work, and what we have here is a shortage of people to work in the field. Only a relatively few schools turn out graduates, nowhere near enough to fill the need created by passage of the Occupational Safety and Health Act. You can get more information from the American Industrial Hygiene Assn., 66 S. Miller Rd., Akron, Ohio 44313.

RESTAURANTS This fair land, it sometimes seems, is going to be paved with fast-food outlets in the years ahead. So you ought to know what one of the bigger chains figures is essential to success (just in case you've always had a hankering to go into the restaurant business). Set up shop in the suburb of a metropolitan area of more than 100,000 people on a site that is at least 150 feet wide. The place should face the street (or streets) and at least 20,000 cars should pass each day. Ideally, median income within a three-mile radius should be about $12,000.

Private work costs taxvictims

Orange County (Calif.) Register

There is a paradoxical trend in government to contract out work to private enterprise while government employees sit idle. Two reasons are routinely cited: 1. Private enterprise gets the job done more cheaply. 2. Private enterprise gets the job done better. In this, the makings of a hotly debated controversy.

Robert J. Wagman, the Washington bureau chief of the North American Newspaper Alliance, gives the example of the Veterans Administration awarding a $38 million contract to an outside computer firm "while the Defense Department cannot find enough projects to keep its large staff of computer specialists busy."

This trend has been written about, approvingly, by Robert W. Poole Jr., president of the Local Government Center in Santa Barbara. Poole, a partisan of the market economy, believes that municipalities save taxpayers money when farming out jobs to private enterprise. Which in most cases is doubtless true.

So people of the limited government persuasion look at the trend as either (a) a happy indicator of a model society, in which private enterprise plays the dominant role, or (b) a confirmation of the irksome practice of bureaucrats to resist work, contributing to waste. It depends on your optimism quotient which — if you're libertarian — side you take.

Michael Caine: latest to flee British socialism

As with printing press moneys, which drives good money out of circulation, socialism, by penalizing the competent . . . efficient, acts in the same way with respect to human beings of superior talents and accomplishments. Discouraged, tired of being used as the means to someone else's ends, they begin "voting with their feet."

And even love of country won't hold them, an article in the current issue of "Human Events" points out, once the decision has been reached that the game is no longer worth the candle.

So it is with Michael Caine, internationally known film star, who very reluctantly has decided to become the latest in a stream of talented people — actors, writers, singers, musicians, not to mention professionals such as doctors and business entrepreneurs — who have left socialist Britain during the past few years.

"I love England," Caine told Human Events' Anthony LeJeune. "I even love the weather, which shows how English I must be, but there comes a time when your head must rule your heart. I don't want to go, but I care about the future of my little family unit."

Caine's decision to leave his homeland came about as the result of Britain's tax structure and inheritance laws. Although earning in the neighborhood of a million dollars a year, he explained, little was left after the government got through with it. On most of his income from film making the government imposed a tax of 83 percent, plus a further tax of 98 percent on income derived from anything he had managed to save. And, to make matters even worse, he added, the government is presently considering a "wealth tax," deliberately designed to wipe out private capital.

Accumulating money in Britain today under such circumstances, Caine said, is almost impossible, and still another levy, called the "capital transfer tax," renders it equally difficult to hand any wealth at all, including a family business, on to the next generation.

Caine's problem has still another facet. The international film industry is being driven out of Britain. Several American film directors and producers have lately stated that they can't work there anymore, partly because of the penalizing taxes and partly because of the unions. British film technicians are as good as any in the world, Caine noted, but every attempt to get things done is bedeviled by restrictive practices and a truculent unwillingness on the part of union members to work. Not surprisingly, under such conditions, it has become very difficult to raise money for making films.

As a result, Caine said he had been sitting around doing nothing for seven months waiting for money to finance a film in which he was to star. Finally, he had to make the decision to bid his homeland goodbye. Now in Hollywood, he has four pictures lined up and more in the offing.

And, Caine adds, his decision is final. Why, he asks, should I return to Britain and say, "Here's 98 percent" of my earnings leaving me "twopence in the pound" to "a government that has destroyed the industry I'm in?"

What he would like to say to the socialist British government, Caine told Human Events, is: "Bring back the people you are driving away, and collect 50 percent of their incomes in taxes instead of trying to take 98 percent and ending up with nothing. Stop confiscating things out of jealousy."

Caine, fortunately, could take refuge from a confiscating government by coming to the United States. But, if we in this country continue to follow Britain down the socialist path to ruin by penalizing the competent and efficient for the benefit of the indolent and wasteful, how long will it be before what is happening there begins happening to us?

making certain they are never allowed to play in the traffic or otherwise endanger my qualifications to be adopted."

"You are almost as dumb as that loudmouth," Pat said jerking her head toward the man at the next table.

That brought us back to her original gripe, the one that threatened to cause an international incident.

It was a Wednesday night and we were dining at the Top Hat Supper club in Windsor. Not many husbands take their wives out to dinner on Wednesdays, but I am a special case. I am married to a woman who can't remember to melt.

When I get home from work every evening, Pat always asks what I want for dinner — steak, pork chops, ground beef or whatever. It doesn't matter which I pick, for the result is always the same.

"It will be ready in 10 hours," Pat always says. "I have to wait for the meat to melt."

"Why didn't you take the meat to the freezer this morning?" I ask.

"How could I? I didn't know what kind of meat you wanted," she says. "If you can't wait 10 hours for dinner, I guess we'll have to go out and get something."

On this particular Wednesday, Pat had suggested that we tunnel to Canada. She had heard there was an excellent Irish tenor singing at the Top Hat, and she loves Irish tenors. If I were a tenor, I could possibly sing for my supper at home once in a while.

It turned out that the tenor, Barry O'Hara, really was excellent — when you could hear him over the noise that made Pat steam and made me wonder about seeking political asylum at the American Embassy.

"You should go over there and hit that big loudmouth over the head with his bottle of wine," Pat said after he told a dumb joke while O'Hara was singing "Danny Boy."

After 15 minutes of listening to the loudmouth ruin the floor show, I dubbed him "Ike" because, so help me, he was wearing an Eisenhower jacket. It was the first one I've seen since V-J Day.

Ike was sitting with several other people who were obviously his employees and in fear of their jobs. Otherwise they couldn't have laughed so hard every time the big jerk hollered an inane remark toward the stage.

"There is nothing in the world more annoying than a drunken loudmouth who ruins the show for everyone else," Pat said. "You have got to tell him to shut up."

"Not me," I said. "Any man who still wears his Army jacket 32 years after the war ended has probably got an M21 carbine in his pant leg. And if he killed me, you'd have an awful time explaining my blank look to the immigration officer when we go back through the tunnel."

"Then we might as well go home," she said, and we did. As we were leaving the country, Pat wondered aloud what she was ever going to do with such a sissy husband.

"You might put me up for adoption," I suggested.

Onward and Upward.

New places, new faces and new things will have a special fascination for you this coming year. Travel is in the picture and you'll delight in it, so be on the go as much as you can.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Ribbing or kidding others may seem innocuous to you today, but be careful who you put on the pan. Someone could take your joshing seriously.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In financial matters you're normally very disciplined. You'll do well today unless you permit someone less prudent to influence your thinking.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Indecision could be your undoing today. You may postpone a decision so long you have to make a snap judgment. Such things rarely turn out well.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) There's so much you want to do for others today you could be upset because you can't accomplish it all. Be grateful you can help when and where you can.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) The request of a demanding friend will more than likely get under your skin today. Normally, you can tolerate or at least cope with him.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you're involved in something competitive, don't let your guard down. If you relax for even a minute, the opposition could win.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Subdue a tendency today to contradict others just for the sake of argument. All you'll do is trigger needless, futile debates.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be wary today in joint ventures lest the lion's share of the expense fall upon you. You may be operating from a weak position.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't be watching your own interests so guardedly today you don't recognize the needs of associates. You might be surprised when they desert you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You know you've been putting off certain duties. Someone else does, too. Better get after them. He's ready to remind you in a very offensive manner.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It's best not to yield to social pressures today. Giving-in against your better judgment could spoil the fun for all.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) That little green-eyed monster may sit on your shoulder today when you compare your status with the people next door. It's not a good game to play.

Socialist Slowdown

Population growth is expected to slow in Socialist countries during the last quarter of the 20th century. The Conference Board observes. Eastern Europe, the Soviet Union, China and other Communist nations — which currently account for about a third of the world's people — are forecast to increase their population by 34 percent between 1975 and 2000, down from 50 percent in the 1950-1975 period. Family size in the U.S.S.R. and Eastern Europe has been limited by the fact that most women work and by inadequate housing. Also, government policy in China sternly discourages early marriages in large families.

Jordan claims 'no hidden agenda'

HOUSTON (AP) — While rumors swirl about Congresswoman Barbara Jordan's future, Miss Jordan, who has said she will not seek re-election, says, "I trust there will be something for me to do, but I honestly don't have a hidden agenda."

Miss Jordan, the first black woman to be elected to the U.S. House from the South since Reconstruction, announced Saturday that she will not seek re-election.

Some speculated that Miss Jordan, 41, was in poor health. Others speculated that she would seek a federal judgeship or a post on the U.S. Supreme Court.

"The longer you stay in Congress the harder it is to leave," she said. "I didn't want to wake up one fine sunny morning and say there is nothing else that Barbara Jordan can do."

The woman whose oratory highlighted the 1976 Democratic National Convention and the impeachment proceedings against then President Richard Nixon said she wanted to clear up the rumors concerning a judge's position.

"Some of you already have me slotted to the Fifth Circuit (Court of Appeals at New Orleans) or the Supreme Court. This statement really speaks for itself. I have never said to anyone I have a desire to become a judge," she told newsmen Saturday.

Appearing somewhat drawn and limping on her right leg, Miss Jordan joked about a knee ailment, but gave no clue to her future plans.

"My health is good. I've got a bum knee which assures that I wouldn't join the cast of a chorus line or become a running back for the Houston Oilers," she quipped.

When asked if she had talked to President Carter about her future, Miss Jordan replied "He doesn't consult with me about my future but I need to consult with him about his."

Miss Jordan served in the Texas Senate where she became president pro tempore and was the first black elected to preside over the state senate.

From there, she went to Congress in 1972, representing the newly created, predominantly black 18th District in Houston.

After her keynote speech at the convention, Miss Jordan was interviewed by Carter and there was speculation that she would be considered for a cabinet post. The appointment never came.

FFA sweetheart wins

Teresa Harkrader, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Quillen, was named the FFA Sweetheart for this district recently. She will go to Lubbock in the spring to compete for the area FFA title. Miss Harkrader represented Pampa High School as FFA sweetheart.

'Black Like Me' author still gets hate mail

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — After 15 years, the hate letters — and the accompanying nightmares — still turn nights into a hellish marathon.

The last one nearly killed John Howard Griffin, who darkened his skin through medical treatments in 1959 and journeyed through the South as a black man, recording his thoughts in the classic "Black Like Me."

Griffin, who has lived quietly here for 11 years, awoke from the nightmare last Tuesday in the dark morning hours with "a devastating attack" from his beleaguered heart, chronically weak from a major attack last year and plagued by diabetes and a bone disease that has kept him in a wheelchair for several years.

The nightmare had not visited Griffin for many years. But the horror, triggered by the letter, returned — the dream of being overtaken and lynched by a mob.

Even though the threats, hate mail and chilled friendships had long since passed, the letter — "one of the most vicious I have ever received" — inexplicably had come.

"I guess those things are still too close to the surface," said Griffin, 57, in the plant-choked living room of his small brick home near the Texas Christian University campus.

Even more painful than the ravages of disease is Griffin's belief that the tentative "understanding" he witnessed between whites and blacks in the 1960s is sinking back into the swamp of prejudice.

"What we've got now is a turn-around," said Griffin in his thin, reedy voice. "And you don't know how incredibly disheartening that is to people who struggled so hard for civil rights."

Certainly blacks can eat at any restaurant and ride on any bus.

"But those physical things are not the most dangerous things," said the author, scholar, civil rights activist, theologian, photographer and lecturer. "It's the psychological damage that is so utterly killing. The soul-killing, energy-killing frustration is still there."

A tape recorder sits by Griffin's bed, the repository of thoughts for several works in progress. "There are weeks when I can do no work at all," he said with a helpless smile.

Life, he said, has become a contest of getting through each day without upsetting his heart. It was in 1959 that Griffin left his wife and two children, had his skin darkened with the drug oxorosen, and for six weeks traveled through the South as a Negro.

"I went into it thinking it would be a highly educational experience, but I never thought it would be such a transforming experience," said Griffin, who says he never regretted the book despite the threats.

"I was living in a land where there were so many myths and racial stereotypes, it sinks into the blood. And I would never have gotten them out of my blood unless I lived them."

It was in the small town of Mansfield, Texas, where Griffin lived when he wrote the book, that an effigy, half-black, half-white with Griffin's name scrawled on it, was hung from a downtown signal light shortly after the first installments appeared.

Canadian lights to win cash prizes

CANADIAN — Cash prizes totaling $150 will be paid by the Chamber of Commerce for the Christmas lighting contest. Winners will be chosen in three categories: home, business and mobile home. The first prize in each category will receive $25, second prize is $15 and third place will receive $10.

The outdoor decorations will be judged Thursday and winners will be announced Dec. 22 in the "Canadian Record."

New fringe benefit: legal advice

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
More and more Americans are getting a new fringe benefit with their jobs: legal advice.

Prepaid legal plans, similar in operation to health insurance programs, are growing in popularity and experts say they will continue to increase in the years ahead.

"It's inevitable," said Philip Murphy, a Santa Barbara, Calif., lawyer and the American Bar Association's expert on prepaid legal insurance.

The programs are designed to provide legal advice for middle-income Americans who cannot afford high lawyers' fees but have too much money to qualify for public defender services. The existing system, the "one-to-one approach," has not helped these people, Murphy said.

Murphy describes group legal insurance as "a plan in which there is payment in advance, by the individual or by someone in his behalf, for legal services that he may need or use in the future."

Consumer watch

There are two types of group legal arrangements — those providing a minimum of service, such as advice and consultation, and those offering comprehensive and substantial benefits in both civil and criminal cases.

Murphy estimated that there are several thousand group legal arrangements, but only about 300 comprehensive, prepaid plans. These plans cover about 3 million people, including employees and their dependents. Participants include construction and auto workers, teamsters and public service workers. Because most of the plans are relatively new — the oldest one still operating did not start until 1971 — there are no complete statistics available on legal insurance, who uses it and what it costs.

In an effort to get some specific figures, the American Prepaid Legal Services Institute, an arm of the ABA, is working on an actuarial study of major prepaid legal plans. Murphy said the results are expected early in 1978.

Murphy said about 90 per cent of the plans are linked to labor unions and have been negotiated as part of collective bargaining agreements. Surveys have shown that about 15 or 20 per cent of those covered by the plans use some legal service during the year, Murphy said.

The amount of coverage provided, the type and the cost varies from plan to plan. Some include only civil cases, others provide legal services in criminal cases as well. Some provide a specific dollar amount on the value of services that an individual can get in a year; others do not. And some allow a participant to pick his or her own lawyer while others restrict the choice to a selected panel.

Group legal plans not only provide people with services they otherwise could not afford, they also offer them access to a service they otherwise might not be able to find.

Murphy said that many people simply do not know how to go about finding and choosing a lawyer and added the legal profession itself has not worked out a way to help.

Canadian to remodel school

CANADIAN — The Hemphill County School Board met recently and accepted the resignations of two teachers, Diane Baccus, a 5th grade teacher at Baker, and Renee Colbert, music instructor at the elementary and middle schools. Mrs. Baccus's resignation will be effective Jan. 12 and Miss Colbert's on Dec. 12. No replacements have been named yet.

The school board toured the middle school with architect Tom Moore and reviewed plans for remodeling the building. The school board and Moore will meet at 5 p.m. Tuesday at the middle school to talk over plans

In other school board action, Nancy and Larry Schilling, auditors, told the board members that the financial statements presented a fair picture. The auditors and tax collectors recommended adopting a policy placing a limit on the number of years personal property will be carried on tax rolls. The board accepted the proposal.

The new bus barn has been formerly accepted by the contractors as being ready.

Utah will extradite deputy murder suspect

PRICE, Utah (AP) — Two Oklahoma jail escapees await extradition back to Oklahoma today following their capture here Sunday after a hitchhiker heard a description of them on their own radio.

The two men were being sought in the killings of an Oklahoma sheriff's officer and a Kansas man.

Carbon County Sheriff Albert Passic said James Earl Lewis, 29, and David W. Richardson, 21, were captured after a Price couple was briefly held hostage.

More than 90 highway patrolmen were in the Price area, sent by the governor last week to quell disturbances during the coal strike.

Passic said Sunday night both men indicated they would waive extradition proceedings. He said they may be turned over to Oklahoma authorities today.

They escaped from a county jail in Wagoner, Okla., Nov. 24 and were the subjects of a ground and air search after the slayings Saturday.

Passic said the hitchhiker, Bryant Graham, who said he was from Texas, was picked up by the pair near Green River, 62 miles southeast of Price.

He said Graham heard over the radio a story about the search for the two men. They stopped the pickup and let him out, saying "You'd better get out of here."

Graham was let out near Green River about 11 a.m. He contacted the highway patrol there and the vehicle's description was broadcast.

Graham also reported seeing rifles in the car.

The two were sought after the bodies of Beaver County Undersheriff Kenny Miller, 50, and Danny Cambern of Liberal, Kan., were found beside a highway near the Kansas-Oklahoma border.

U.S., Japan dispute trade, tariff

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Japanese official in Washington to try to settle the U.S.-Japan trade dispute, which Tokyo's foreign minister today said was an emergency situation that could lead to political chaos.

The United States buys about $8 billion a year more in goods from Japan than Japan purchases from the United States. Critics of the trade imbalance say it contributes to U.S. unemployment.

Japan's minister for external economic affairs, Nobuhiko Ushiba, begins a four-day mission in Washington today to explain the tariff reductions his country's cabinet approved last week for goods imported by Japan.

He was to meet with U.S. trade negotiator Robert Strauss, the secretaries of Commerce, Treasury, Labor and Agriculture and other officials. Japanese Foreign Minister Sunao Sonoda said the economic proposal carried by Ushiba "represents the maximum possible package the Japanese government has come up with." He declined to say if any further concessions would be made by Japan.

Ushiba is believed to be offering a wide range of tariff cuts on foreign goods sold in Japan, plus increased quotas on some products and an increase in import financing. U.S. officials in Washington and Tokyo have called the package inadequate.

Oil in Soviet Union abundant

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has nearly as much undiscovered oil in a single deposit as the United States has altogether, the U.S. government estimates, but the Russians will have a devil of a time getting the precious liquid out of the frozen earth.

The deposit, known as the West Siberian Basin, covers an area twice the size of Alaska. But it lies hundreds of miles from Soviet industry and refineries and nearly half of it sits above the Arctic Circle, the U.S. Geological Survey said in a report Sunday.

Even if there were pipelines to carry the oil west to populated European Russia, drillers would have large problems with the delicate soil that covers the permanently frozen Siberian subsoil.

Survey estimates show the Siberian deposit holds at least 48 billion barrels of oil and 300 trillion cubic feet of natural gas. Best estimates of total U.S. undiscovered reserves are 56 billion barrels and 377 trillion cubic feet respectively.

"The rate of (Soviet) development and production will depend on a variety of factors ... including how long it will take to develop transportation systems and to overcome difficult problems of hostile terrain and long distances from market and refinery points," said O.W. Girard Jr., author of the estimate.

"Some of these vast resources may, in fact, be as far away from the market place as our own huge hydrocarbon resources tied up in oil shale deposits," Girard concluded.

The U.S. is struggling to develop technology to free oil from shale, an abundant commodity but so far unusable on a large scale.

In August the CIA predicted the Soviets will be importing oil by 1985, putting them in the same supply crunch with the U.S., which now relies on OPEC nations for much of its supply.

The CIA said in its August forecast that the USSR is counting on large new supplies of oil, such as the Siberian deposit, and other energy sources by the mid-1980s.

But most of these sources are located far from major industrial and population centers. "Their development would take years and require massive capital investment," the CIA said.

The effects of the Russians entering the oil import market could sharply intensify U.S.-Soviet political rivalry in the Mideast, the CIA predicted.

The diminished supply would hurt Russia's eastern European allies, especially Hungary, which is paying its oil import bill with the U.S.S.R. by contributing heavily to building the Soviet pipeline under construction from the Urals to Siberian fields.

The Soviet satellites depend on the Soviet Union for 75 percent of their supply, with Romania the only one with any oil production of its own.

Russia's dwindling supply also will affect some western European NATO countries that draw on Soviet refining, currently the largest of any country in the world.

CIA experts also predict the oil supply dilemma will create problems for Soviet leaders as they attempt to maintain the current level of military spending. Part of that money may be diverted to pay the fuel bill for the world's largest and coldest country, the CIA predicted.

Temperature detects cancer

NEW YORK (AP) — A new form of breast cancer detection that uses temperature measurement instead of radiation has been found 80 percent accurate in detecting malignancies at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center.

The technique was described by Sloan-Kettering on Sunday as combining complete safety with high accuracy.

If the findings are confirmed, the new technique could be a substitute for mammography, which uses radiation. Mammography could be reserved for further testing on women who are found to have suspicious lesions with the new method.

There has been controversy over the use of mammography in mass screening programs. Critics say the radiation may actually cause cancer, while supporters say it has found early and otherwise undetected breast cancer.

To determine if an area of higher breast temperature is benign or malignant, the woman's hands are plunged into a bucket of ice water for 15 seconds. The body contracts and there is a drop in temperature, measured in tenths of a degree.

The temperature is checked again. If a lesion is benign, it begins to cool. But if the tissue is malignant, the temperature remains at a constant and higher level.

In tests on 282 patients, 23 of 29 known breast cancers were detected. Nearly all of the benign lesions in other patients were detected, giving an 80 percent accuracy rate for malignant and close to 100 percent for non-cancerous tissue. No specific figures were given for the benign lesions.

The test was developed by Graphic Stress Corp. in Bolingbrook, Ill., which Sloan-Kettering officials said was a small company that offered the tests to the cancer center for study.

Television show aired tonight

More than 150 area residents will be intensely watching "Sunshine Christmas" tonight at 8 p.m. on Channel 4 for glimpses of themselves.

The movie, written by Carol O'Brien Sobieski, is a sequel to the original television feature film, "Sunshine." Ms. Sobieski is the daughter of Frank T. O'Brien and sister of Mrs. Stanley Marsh III.

Scenes from the picture were filmed last summer in Amarillo, Claude, Cliffside and Bushland. Residents of those towns have seven minor speaking roles in the film, which is a holiday love story in which windower Sam Hayden (Cliff DeYoung) brings his daughter (Elizabeth Cheshire) to his hometown in Texas for the holidays.

There has been controversy over the use of mammography in mass screening programs. Critics say the radiation may actually cause cancer, while supporters say it has found early and otherwise undetected breast cancer.

"I hope we're not being premature in announcing this," said Dr. Ruth Snyder, the principal investigator, but she said she was confident the findings were valid.

The test is based on the heat patterns emanating from tissue, called thermography. The test — Graphic Stress Thermometry or GST — also can detect benign or non-cancerous breast lesions and distinguish them from malignant tissue, she said.

The test measures the difference between the temperature of breast tissue and temperature of the forehead. Areas of the breast that show a higher temperature than the forehead are considered suspicious.

 LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Wayne glanced at Jane Fonda and cracked, "I'm surprised to find you at the right of me."

The two met at the annual awards of the Hollywood Women's Press Club. The conservative actor presented the politically radical actress with the club's award as "Star of the Year."

Jenkins, who also has announced plans to run for governor in Ohio, is busy supervising construction of a $15 million spiritual center near the Painted Desert area of Arizona, said Betty Forbush, Jenkin's campaign manager.

The facility, due for completion by mid-1979, will include a medical center, a university, motels, a cathedral and other shops, Mrs. Forbush said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin told American Jews on Saturday that his government and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat had "created a climate for peace-making efforts."

"We shall conduct negotiations directly face to face with the Egyptian delegation in Cairo," he said in an address prepared for delivery via telephone from Jerusalem to a fund-raising dinner here.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cuban President Fidel Castro has invited U.S. Reps. Richard Nolan, D-Minn., and Fred Richmond, D-N.Y., to return to Cuba for deep sea fishing, Nolan says.

Nolan, who returned from a trip to Havana last week, said no arrangements had been made for the future fishing excursion.

Libel decision stands; media can tell charges

The justices refused to review a ruling by the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals characterized as "in every way a landmark" on the right to report serious charges against public figures.

The court's action sets no legal precedent, but courts in the 2nd Circuit, encompassing New York, Connecticut and Vermont, and elsewhere in the country, may rely on the appeals court reasoning in deciding future libel suits. If so, public figures could find it more difficult to succeed in such claims.

Grass fire threatens Canyon homes

CANYON — A grass fire east of here burned across two hundred acres and threatened homes on the east side of the city before being brought under control Sunday.

The fire resulted in only minor damage to property, according to Deputy Fire Chief Joe Rice, who said it started when a picnic fire on the east side of town went out of control. The acreage involved is owned by the Taylor-Foster Development Co.

Famous pavilion burns

CISCO, Texas (AP) — The famous Lake Cisco dance pavilion and clubhouse — where Guy Lombardo, Henry Busse and other Big Band-era musicians played to hundreds dancing on the smooth hardwood floor — was destroyed Sunday by fire.

There was not another place like it in all the state in the Thirties and early Forties. Now its gone forever," said Truman Kirk, who held a lease to the clubhouse and grounds.

Coal strikers attempt to close non-union mines

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — Even as union and industry negotiators reported progress, some of the 100,000 striking members of the United Mine Workers announced increased efforts to close non-union mining operations in Appalachia.

"Today's the best day we've had," UMW Vice President-elect Sam Church said Sunday after a bargaining session in Washington was adjourned for the day. "We're making progress."

Police report

Pampa police responded to 35 calls during the 24 hour reporting period which ended at 7 a.m. today.

Hubert Solon Welch Jr. reported to police that sometime Sunday night an unknown person broke into his 1972 Ford pickup by breaking the window. A 22 caliber semi-automatic Marlin rifle equipped with a 3x7 scope was taken.

A 17-year-old Pampa boy was arrested and charged with driving while intoxicated, no Texas drivers license, speeding and unsafe change of direction after he was involved in a one-car accident.

Charles H. Nelson of 1148 Varnon Dr. reported to police that someone threw a rock through a window at his house.

Randy Paul Stubblefield of 1103 Duncan stated that while his vehicle was parked in front of 2101 N. Faulkner, someone entered his vehicle and took a CB radio.

Joe H. Wheeley of 2100 N. Faulkner reported a rifle was taken from his pickup parked at his residence. Entry was gained by breaking a window.

Russell F. Brown of 1336 Hamilton reported that someone entered his house and took an 8-track tape player and tapes.

Randy T. Mabbs of 337 S. Finley reported his CB antenna was stolen from his vehicle parked at his residence.

Kathryn R. Newton advised police she had left her vehicle parked on the north side of the 600 block of W. Brown and when she returned the vehicle was gone. The vehicle is a white 1961 Ford with an Oklahoma license plates.

An accident occurred in the 1200 block of E. Barnes Sunday. Both cars sustained moderate damage.

An accident took place in the 1200 block of N. Hobart Sunday, with minor damage done to both vehicles.

Advice

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Christmas is soon here, so take a tip from me and do your Christmas shopping early. If you're wondering what to give Aunt Matilda or Great Grandpa, who don't get out much, let me tell you what NOT to give them: no dusting powder, after-shave or cologne. (They probably have several unopened boxes gathering dust on their closet shelves.)

Grandpa doesn't need another necktie, and Grandma doesn't really want any more brooches, necklaces or bracelets.

With the price of groceries up so high, folks who live alone on a fixed income would probably be delighted to receive a basket of assorted groceries. Include small cans of salmon, chicken, ham, tuna, vegetables, fruit, instant coffee, tea bags, crackers, cookies and instant soup mix.

Old folks can always use lined stationery with envelopes and a generous supply of postage stamps. (And enclose some new felt-tip pens, too.)

Shut-ins would appreciate a box of greeting cards for all occasions so they can send birthday, anniversary, graduation, get-well and condolence cards to others. (And be a sport and stamp some envelopes.)

Don't give anyone a gift of clothing unless you're absolutely sure the size is right. And that goes for the color and style, too.

If you're tempted to pass along a scarf, purse, wallet or some useless little doodad you received for Christmas three years ago, please don't. It's a pretty fair bet the recipient will find it just as useless as you did. (Besides, YOU might get it back the year after next.)

If someone on your gift list is living on a pension, a check for any amount would be much more appreciated than a frivolous little trinket. Or give someone who's counting his pennies a year's subscription to the daily newspaper or to a magazine you know he'll enjoy.

Don't give anyone a pet unless you're absolutely sure he wants one and is able to care for it properly.

Don't give gifts of wine or liquor unless you're sure the recipients imbibe. Candy, nuts and fruitcake make wonderful gifts for those who aren't counting their calories, but have compassion for those who are, and lead them not into temptation.

Resist giving toddlers stuffed animals and dolls that are bigger than THEY are. And parents will thank you for not sending their children horns, drums, sirens or whistles. If you give a child a game or book, be sure it's in the right age range.

Instead of giving someone a gift with permission to "take it back and exchange it if it's not what you want," why not save yourself (and them) much time and effort by giving them a gift certificate in the first place.

DEAR ABBY: A reader signed PEDANTIC PUNDIT took you to task for having made a "grammatical error." Pundit should know that there is no such thing as a "grammatical error," but there may be an "error" in grammar!

EIGHTY-ONE AND STILL AT IT

Getting married? No matter how little you have to spend or how unconventional your lifestyle, it can be lovely. Send for Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Enclose $1 and a long stamped (24 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Ask Dr. Lamb

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB—My husband and I get into arguments over whether or not I can become pregnant. He says no and I'm afraid I may still become pregnant.

I am not taking the pill and am 56 years old. I haven't had my period in more than three years but I believe I am still going through the change as I get very nervous at times and still get estrogen shots. How long must I get shots? It's over 18 years now.

DEAR READER—If you get pregnant you are likely to set a new record. Published accounts say that the oldest woman to have a child was 56 at the time of the birth. Some of my readers have brought to my attention at least two instances of women who were 57 who gave birth. Since you must be past your 56th birthday and it will take nine months to have a child you will be at the top of the record if you achieve that rare distinction.

Many doctors believe that if a woman in her 50s goes through the menopause and doesn't menstruate for one year she is not likely to get pregnant. Others prefer to wait two years after menstruation has stopped before saying that a woman is no longer fertile.

The symptoms you have may not be from menopause. It is very likely that your ovaries have not been functional for nearly all of the three years since you have stopped menstruating. There is a lot of the confusion about what symptoms are caused by menopause. Put simply, a lot of people get nervous who are not going through the change of life, including men.

To give you a better understanding of the change in life and what symptoms it really causes I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-12, Menopause. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long stamped self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Whether or not a woman needs estrogen after menopause is an individual matter. Some women produce enough female hormones from the adrenal gland to get along quite well and others do not. Only an examination by your physician can answer the question of whether or not you need it.

For women who need estrogen support it is really replacement hormone therapy to help do part of what the ovaries used to do. In these women the female hormones help to prevent changes in the vagina cells that cause dryness and may lead to chronic infections. The hormones are specific for controlling hot flashes caused by lack of estrogen.

There is some evidence that adequate amounts of estrogen help to protect against osteoporosis (dissolving bones) but less indication that they stop the process once it has begun.

There are good studies that show that women taking female hormones after the ovaries stop functioning, or have been removed, have a much lower death rate from a variety of medical conditions, and live healthier and happier lives. Women who take estrogen after the menopause should have careful regular medical examinations to be certain there is no evidence of breast cancer and there are no signs of malignancy of the uterus if a hysterectomy has not been done.

Polly's pointers

Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — I would like to tell Regina and other dog lovers of my sad experience with a ring shaped bone used as a dog's toy. Such a bone got stuck around my dog's teeth, she had to be rushed to the vet's as she could not breathe for her tongue was also caught and then she had sedated for the bone to be sawed off. — ROSALYN.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with the pattern manufacturers, mail order catalogs and anyone who uses models to advertise their clothing. The pictures are pretty but they are of no help to the chubby ladies when trying to decide which style will suit us best. — MRS. P.R.

DEAR POLLY — During these days of inflation we must recycle everything possible. Wash and wipe dry all aluminum foil and plastic bags. I do all my own redecorating and save much time in preparing for a painting job and also in the clean-up by using masking tape. Put such tape close down to the wall on top of the rug. If you wish, or if the tape is narrow, finish off with a row of paper. When finished lift it off and there is a perfectly clean edge and carpet, too. Less tape is used if one moves it from area to area as the painting progresses. Aluminum foil is very useful for covering fixtures while painting. — ANN.

Polly will send you one of her signed thank-you newspaper coupon clippers if she uses your favorite Pointer, Peeve or Problem in her column. Write POLLY'S POINTERS in care of this newspaper.

Buyers vote on top fashions

Elegance is the statement made by Christian Dior in this exquisite design in lingerie. Ecru satin trimmed in fine lace makes this gown and robe resemble an elegant way to approach an evening.

Jerry Silverman's pale crepe de chine is framed with lace.

The strapless frock in bronze gauze is from Young Edwardian.

The clothes American women like best were honored with the 1977 B.A.M.B.I. "Flying Colors" Awards during the Women's and Children's Spring Apparel Market at the Dallas Market Center recently.

The awards, co-sponsored by the Dallas Apparel Mart and Braniff International, were determined by more than 18,000 votes of apparel buyers at the Dallas mart. Buyers were able to vote in ten categories for the line, manufacturer or designer appeal during the first four 1977 Women's and Children's apparel markets in Dallas.

The winners of the 1977 B.A.M.B.I. (Buyer - Apparel Mart - Braniff International) "Flying Colors" Awards were: Applause, Inc. (Dresses); Jerry Silverman (Designer Dresses); Collegian Sportswear, Inc. (Sportswear); Bill Haire for Friedrichs (Designer Sportswear); College Town, Inc. (Junior Sportswear); Young Edwardian (Junior Dresses); Checkpoint (Outerwear); Christian Dior (Lingerie); Billy the Kid, Inc. (Childrenwear); and Christian Joss Imports.)

A total of 17,314 apparel buyers attended the October Spring Apparel Market at the Apparel Mart, one of six buildings in the Dallas Market Center.

Get-a-way together

By Karen Blaker, Ph.D.

DEAR DR. BLAKER — My husband and I have reserved a room in a secluded country inn for the weekend. After 15 years of marriage, we still feel uneasy stealing time from the children for ourselves, so we decided to get away for a "self-directed marriage encounter experience." If you think this is a good idea, please advise us on some techniques to get us started. We have never done anything like this before but we think it might help us to communicate better and to be better parents.

DEAR READER — Hey, what is this — "stealing" time for a get-a-way to a secluded weekend hideout? Are you really "bad guys" just because you want to spend a weekend together away from the children? Of course not. You shouldn't have to steal time — you should be able to take it and use it however you want.

So on this particular weekend, try using the time strictly for yourselves — not for your children. Since this may be a new experience for you, some guidelines might help.

Make a rule: for two days we will not mention the children! This will help keep the weekend focused on your relationship. If your life has revolved around children for many years, you may have to endure some painful moments when you think you have nothing to say to each other ... but it will be worth all your effort and patience if you can truly discover each other again.

My husband and I have invented a "game" that is fun and revealing. You may want to try it. Make a list of "important" issues such as busing, abortion, marijuana, gay rights, the Panama Canal, capital punishment, Vietnam, psychoanalysis. To begin with let him guess what you believe about each item. If he is correct, give him a kiss; if he guesses wrong, think of a proper punishment (keep silent?). Then you guess what he thinks on each issue. ("No opinion" is an acceptable guess if it's correct.)

At the end of this "encounter," each person expresses how he or she felt when listening to their spouse's guesses. Common responses are: "I can't believe you know that much about me;" "We've talked about that so many times, and you still don't know what I think;" "I'm not surprised that you couldn't guess my opinion, I guess I really have never been very open;" or "I never realized I just don't have many opinions." The feelings expressed at this time can be a springboard for further discussions.

Clear communication is essential to a good relationship. And if you try this next exercise, you will realize how misunderstandings can result from faulty listening. You begin. Talk for 15-20 minutes about the pros and cons of your marriage. The rule is that your husband cannot interrupt to explain or defend himself. He must listen. After you have finished, he repeats what you said and you correct any misunderstandings. Then reverse things, with him talking first. Being understood is a satisfying — although infrequent — experience.

You will know the encounter weekend has been a success if you plan your next weekend together without the aid of an agenda!

PAMPA NEWS Monday, December 12, 1977 9

Rupp succumbs

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Adolf F. Rupp, whose 42-year coaching record at the University of Kentucky is unparalleled in college basketball history, was a driving force in the sport's transformation from football stepchild to international pastime.

Rupp, 76, died Saturday night in the university's medical center, where he had been hospitalized since Nov. 9 and had received treatment for cancer of the spine for more than a year.

His death prompted an outpouring of tribute from coaching rivals and former players and came minutes after top-ranked Kentucky's 73-66 victory over Kansas, his alma mater.

Gov. Julian M. Carroll proclaimed Tuesday a day of mourning and flags will be at half-staff when Rupp is buried in Lexington Cemetery.

"Coach Rupp was a legend when I was playing college basketball," said Tennessee Coach Ray Mears, one of Rupp's long-time adversaries. "I played against the Fabulous Five (in 1949). He was one of the greats. I mean really greats in the game."

"Basketball is a game that was started in the United States and he's one of the men who got it off the ground," Mears said.

Rupp was a 28-year-old high school coach in Freeport, Ill., when the university beckoned him to be its sixth basketball coach in eight years. Forty-two years and 874 victories later, he was forced to retire as the winningest coach of all time.

Five years before, an 81-73 victory over Notre Dame had given him 772 career wins, pushing him past his mentor at Kansas, Forrest C. "Phog" Allen.

It also left him far ahead of UCLA's John Wooden, who retired in 1975 after winning 667 games and 10 national titles.

Oilers 19, Browns 15

"This wasn't football, this was survival," said Houston cornerback Willie Alexander after the Oilers had handed the Browns their third straight loss in 7-degree temperature and icy gusts in Cleveland.

Ron Coleman ran for two touchdowns for Houston and Billy Johnson scampered 72 yards on a punt return for another score.

Seahawks 34, Chiefs 31

Seattle's victory marked the fifth straight loss for Kansas City and jeopardized the job of Tom Bettis, the Chiefs' interim coach. The Seahawks scored all five of their touchdowns in the first half, while Kansas City's Gary Barbaro tied an NFL record by returning an intercepted pass 102 yards for a touchdown.

Patriots 14, Dolphins 10

New England's victory over Miami, coupled with Detroit's upset over Baltimore, threw the AFC East race into a three-way tie for first place among the Patriots, Dolphins and Colts, each with 9-4 records. A Baltimore victory over New England Sunday would make the Colts division champions. If the Patriots win and Miami wins, the Dolphins would be champions. And if New England wins and Miami loses, the Patriots would be alone at the top.

Eagles 17, Giants 14

Rookie Wilbert Montgomery returned the second-half kickoff 99 yards for a touchdown and quarterback Ron Jaworski ran 1 yard for a score with 20 seconds remaining, lifting Philadelphia over the Giants.

Bills 14, Jets 10

Joe Ferguson's second touchdown pass of the game to Bob Chandler — an 11-yarder with 40 seconds remaining — carried Buffalo to its victory over the Jets. The scoring play capped a 92-yard drive in 1:17.

Dolphins cruise to win

Pampa Dolphin swimmers garnered 34 ribbons, including 13 firsts, to win the Pampa Dolphin Open "B" Meet by a wide margin over eight other teams in the Youth Center Pool Saturday and Sunday.

Lawton (491), West Texas (418) and Amarillo Aquatic (410) trailed the Dolphins' point total of 927.

Other teams entering were the Lubbock WYCA (320), Lubbock YMCA (160), Lubbock Swim Club (85), Maverick Aquatic (80), and Mariner Swim Club (56).

Cindy Raymond paced the Pampa swimmers with three first-place finishes in the 13-14 first and one in the open division. Kim Campbell took three medals in the senior girls division and Richard Steger won three in the 13-14 boys. Amy Raymond (open), Renita Hill (eight - and - under), Reid Steger (11-12), Shane Ethredge (11-12), Mark Lebeck (senior), Chris Alexander (senior) and Carla Cogdill (senior) won two ribbons each.

Pampans won both open 200 freestyle relays, the boys 11-12 freestyle relay, and swept the girls and boys 200 open backstroke events.

Undoubtedly, Archie Manning has learned to keep his mouth shut.

The Tampa Bay Buccaneers only wish there were more outspoken players like him in the National Football League.

Manning, the veteran quarterback of the New Orleans Saints, infuriated the hapless Bucs last week by saying that raceful to lose to Tampa Bay.

The downtrodden expansion team, which had lost 28 consecutive games since joining the NFL last season, made Manning regret his comments Sunday.

Rising to the greatest heights in their brief history, the aroused Bucs physically blasted the Saints 33-14, then verbally tormented Manning.

"It's disgraceful! It's disgraceful!" the Tampa players jeered at Manning as the clock ticked toward the Bucs' first precious victory.

"We just read the article to them where Archie said it would be disgraceful to lose to Tampa Bay," relieved Coach John McKay said with a smile in the joyous Bucs' dressing room. "Whatever Archie Manning said, I agree with him. He said it would be a disgrace to lose, and it is.

"Archie must have been looking at our offense," McKay added. "Our defense has never been disgraceful."

Tampa Bay had scored only 53 points in 12 games before Sunday. Against the Saints, their defense was outstanding. The Bucs intercepted six New Orleans passes and scored on three of them, with Mike Washington, Richard Wood and Greg Johnson getting the TDs.

"If we can get some more guys to make statements like that," McKay said.

While the Bucs were reveling in their first victory, the Oakland Raiders, last season's Super Bowl champions, also were celebrating. The Raiders clinched the American Football Conference wild card playoff berth with a 35-13 victory over the Minnesota Vikings, their victims in last January's Super Bowl.

Raiders 35, Vikings 13 Oakland, capitalizing on Minnesota mistakes, scored three times in the first 8 minutes and romped to their 10th victory in 13 games.

The loss dropped Minnesota into a first-place tie with Chicago at 8-5 in the National Football Conference Central Division. However, the Vikings can win the division title by beating Detroit Saturday night.

Bears 21, Packers 10

The running of Walter Payton and the pass catching of James Scott keyed Chicago's victory over Green Bay, the fifth straight triumph for the Bears. Payton, the NFL rushing leader, ran for 163 yards and two touchdowns and returned two kickoffs for 95 yards. He needs 199 yards rushing in the final game against the Giants to break O.J. Simpson's single-season record of 2,003 yards.

Loss 13, Colts 10

Detroit overcame Baltimore with 9 seconds remaining when Leonard Thompson blocked David Lee's punt, recovered the ball at the Colts 2 and ran for a Lowenhaupt's 16 points. The winners took an early lead and never lost it, although Montana cut their advantage to 46-44 at one time with the help of a full-court press. But Montana tripped over its turnovers near the end.

James George came off the bench in the final seven minutes to score 13 points and lead North Carolina-Charlotte over La Salle. Harry Davis scored 22 points and grabbed 22 rebounds as Florida State beat Seton Hall. Matt Mitchell's 31 points led Auburn past Oklahoma State. Wayne Cooper and Ardit Warren combined for 29 points to power New Orleans past Stetson. Pepperdine defeated Loyola behind Raymond Knight's 35 points and Derrick Jackson's 18 points led Georgetown over Georgia.

Mike Phillips and Kyle Macy scored 14 points apiece and sparked a second-half surge that carried Kentucky past Kansas Al Wood scored 18 points and North Carolina jumped to a 20-0 lead in taking an easy victory over outgunned Rochester.

Dave Batton scored 22 points, 18 of them in the first half, to lead Notre Dame over UCLA at the Bruins' Pauley Pavilion.

Marquette's victory over Florida was sparked by 26 points from Butch Lee and 16 from Bernard Toome. Sidney Moncrier's game-high 25 points led Arkansas over Oklahoma.

Nevada-Las Vegas beat Tulsa on Earl Evans' two free throws with 24 seconds left in the second overtime. Larry Bird and Harry Morgan combined for 61 points to pace Indiana State over Evansville. Bob Landsay and Mike Zagardo teamed for 48 points as George Washington upset Maryland. Rutgers defeated St. John's behind a 26-point performance by James Bailey.

Utah had a hefty 59-43 lead with 10 minutes left in the game when Long Beach made a comeback behind two mercurial guards, Rickey Williams and Donnie Martin. Three minutes later, the score was tied at 64. With just over a minute to play, Williams scored a field goal to give the 49ers an 80-77 lead and their eventual winning points.

Tournament upsets mark college cage weekend

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer

The hosts usually have the most on the ball in college basketball's innumerable home-grown tournaments, but that wasn't the case in the state of Utah over the weekend.

In both the Utah Classic and in Salt Lake City and the Cougar Classic in Provo, the hosts were treated rather rudely.

Utah, the nation's 14th-ranked team, lost an 80-79 decision to Long Beach State Saturday night in the Utah Classic and Brigham Young wasn't even in the finals of its own Cougar Classic. William & Mary, one of the nation's surprise teams, won that one with a 61-60 decision over Montana.

"I feel really rotten about the loss," said Utah Coach Jerry Pimm. "We broke down on offense. We just lost momentum in the second half and missed a lot of free throws."

Long Beach State Coach Dwight Jones, who prior to the game had expressed a fear of Utah's speed, counted the victory among the most cherished in his life.

"It was probably the biggest win of my coaching career," said Jones.

Cougar host Brigham Young suffered the double indignity of losing the consolation game as well as the opener. The Cougars, who had shown well earlier in the year at UCLA, dropped an 80-75 decision to California-Fulton in the consolation game.

Bruce Parkhill, whose William & Mary team shocked second-ranked North Carolina last week, was just happy to be in the finals of the Cougar Classic — no less win it.

"In my mind at least I wanted to get into the finals," Parkhill said. "I felt like after that anything else would be icing on the cake."

In other tournaments, North Carolina-Charlotte captured its first Union Invitational at Charlotte, N.C., with a 68-67 decision over La Salle; Florida State crushed Seton Hall 94-63 in the finals of the Big Sun Tournament at St. Petersburg, Fla.; Auburn routed Oklahoma State 112-94 in the Marshall Memorial Invitational at Huntington, W. Va.; New Orleans tripped Seton Hall 84-61 in the Hatter Classic in Deland, Fla.; Pepperdine won its Malibu Classic in Los Angeles by defeating Loyola, Calif., 79-76 in overtime and Georgetown won the Hoya Invitational in Washington, D.C., Sunday night with a 66-60 decision over Georgia.

Elsewhere in college basketball over the weekend, top-ranked Kentucky defeated No. 19 Kansas 73-66; North Carolina crushed Rochester 101-43; No. 3 Notre Dame edged No. 5 UCLA 90-66; fourth-ranked Marquette defeated Florida 81-67; No. 6 Arkansas beat Oklahoma 64-53; No. 8 San Francisco topped Cal-Santa Barbara 63-57 in overtime; No. 9 Michigan trimmed Dayton 71-61 and 10th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas took a 104-103 double-overtime victory over Tulsa.

Indiana State, the nation's No. 11 team, whipped Evansville 102-76; George Washington upset 12th-ranked Maryland 101-90; Rutgers surprised No. 13 St. John's 72-61; No. 15 Holy Cross trimmed Yale 67-62; No. 16 Louisville routed Robert Morris 104-68 and No. 18 Syracuse blasted St. Bonaventure 107-81.

Meany sets tough tast for Carter

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business ANALYST
NEW YORK (AP) — George Meany has set a difficult and perhaps unattainable goal for the Carter administration: the creation of four million jobs a year for four years, and a balanced budget as well.

Speaking in Los Angeles, the AFL-CIO president urged an expansion of public works programs by an infusion of $5 billion of federal funds, while declining support for a business tax cut.

Critics will quickly pounce on what they see as contradictory goals: More government spending and perhaps less vitality in the private sector, and somehow a balancing of the government's books as well.

A formula that might be proposed by businessmen would also seek more jobs and a balanced budget, but it would almost certainly call for a business tax cut and incentives to capital investment. That's how jobs are created and federal revenues increased, they'd say.

In either case the goals are huge. The economy this year was stronger than we have tended to credit it with being, and the increase in total employment was deemed "very impressive" by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Still, this unusual performance resulted in a 12-month increase — through November — of 3.9 million workers, or less than the number sought by Meany for 1978, a year that is expected to be weaker than 1977.

Thus, in fact, has been an extraordinary year for employment. The ratio of employed people to the total population reached an all-time high of 57.8 last month.

If there were more people employed than ever before, and a greater percentage of the population employed than ever before, why then didn't the jobless rate fall well below 7 percent?

The answer lies partly in the increase of the civilian labor force. Annual labor force increases in recent years have averaged a little more than 2 million, but in the past 12 months the number jumped to 3.2 million.

Said Julius Shiskin, commissioner of labor statistics: "The labor force growth for women and teen-agers was considerably larger than the population growth." Some 1.7 million women 20 years or over joined the labor force.

"As is well recognized, there are a great many people on the margin of the labor force who will, when opportunities present themselves, take available jobs," Shiskin told the Joint Economic Committee of Congress on Dec. 2.

In November, if not for the entire year, that shift from outside the labor force was fairly heterogeneous, said Shiskin, including not only women and teen-agers, but semiretired persons, the voluntarily idle and seasonal workers.

Catch 22. When the problem improves it gets worse. When employment opportunities seem more abundant, more people join the labor force and thus prevent the jobless rate, which is a percentage of the labor force, from falling.

Mired in the 7 percent range since April — the rate for November was 6.9 — unemployment in 1978 is expected by most economists to show only little downward movement, at best to 6.5 percent.

Curtis says head Demo 'lousy job'

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — Kenneth M. Curtis is a nice guy with a lousy $48,000-a-year job. He's quitting.

Which may show that nice politicians don't win pennants, even when they work for presidents who preach the politics of loving kindness.

Curtis is pleasant, soft-spoken, open, a former governor of Maine and an early supporter of Jimmy Carter for the Democratic presidential nomination. And so he was installed as chairman of the Democratic National Committee on the day after Carter's inauguration. That's the way it always works. The president is the boss of his party, and the national chairman is his man at headquarters.

On Friday, two months after telling Carter that he wasn't happy in his party post, Curtis announced that he's had it, although he said he would stay on to help find a successor and get him started.

It all sounded like a divorce made in heaven.

Curtis said Hamilton Jordan, the real heavy hitter in the White House political lineup, never evidenced any unhappiness about his management of Curtis said those two, and the president himself, were his main contacts at the White House.

But it was no secret that Mark A. Siegel, a Jordan deputy and a former executive director of the Democratic National Committee, didn't think much of Curtis' performance.

Siegel was supposed to be a liaison man between the White House and party headquarters. "I was frankly never informed that he had a role," said Curtis.

Carter himself doesn't seem to have been very dismayed at the prospect of losing Curtis' services. Curtis told him about it on Oct. 13, and said he couldn't recall whether the president had asked why he was going to resign. Nor, by the chairman's account, did Carter try to dissuade him.

Curtis said the president remarked that the chairman seemed to have given his decision a lot of thought. "He said 'Do you think that you might reconsider?'" and I said 'I doubt it.'"

That's hardly the message of a president interested in keeping a man on the job.

"Is this just a lousy job?" Curtis was asked Friday.

"That's one way you could put it," he said.

He said it wasn't much fun trying to meet the payroll in a bankrupt operation — the Democrats are still $2.5 million in the red — or answering to 384 bosses.

That includes the state politicians who make up the national committee and who had taken to complaining that they were not getting enough support or service from headquarters in preparation for the 1978 campaign. Curtis said that was for lack of money and added that he didn't think the dissatisfaction was very widespread.

Then there were the rest of the bosses — the real ones, at the White House. There are few more promising paths to obscurity than service as the national chairman of the president's party.

"The president is the political leader of our party," Curtis said. "I think in the final analysis it's the president who has to give direction to the party."

The job carries some clout when the White House is in opposition control. That's when people like Republican Ray C. Bliss and Democrats Robert S. Strauss and Lawrence F. O'Brien came on to take charge of parties in need of rebuilding.

While Lyndon B. Johnson was president, he just about dismantled the Democratic National Committee.

AP analysis of Mideast

Israelis delighted with Arab chaos

EDITOR'S NOTE — The writer, now based in Paris, covered the 1975-76 Lebanese Civil War and more recently the Jerusalem visit of Anwar Sadat and the Tripoli summit meeting of anti-Sadat Arabs.

By EDWARD CODY
Associated Press Writer

The tortuous search for Middle Eastern peace, accelerated into a headlong dash by Anwar Sadat, has entered a decisive week with Israel's Arab enemies plunged into disarray by the rush.

The Egyptian president and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin approach historic peace talks this week with Israel having declared its willingness to accept a two-party settlement.

Sadat has sought to allay Arab suspicion that he wants such a deal but has hinted that a continued Arab boycott of his efforts may force him to look for a separate settlement.

Sadat's solitary diplomacy has realized overnight a long-standing Israeli desire to negotiate with Arab states one at a time. With Syria standing off, Sadat enters the discussions in Cairo Wednesday deprived of the credible threat of a joint two-front attack against Israel, such as that of October 1973. Israeli leaders were reported delighted at the chaos in the Arab camp. But Tel Aviv sources said Israel's satisfaction was tempered by a growing realization that the time has come for tough decisions on how much it is willing to give for a try at peace.

Syria's President Hafez Assad has remained convinced Sadat is racing toward a sellout settlement that would return the occupied Sinai Desert to Egypt but neglect Palestinian rights and Syria's own occupied Golan Heights, Syrian officials report.

Sadat "will not wait for a package deal," predicted Nayef Hawatmeh, leader of the Popular Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a Marxist guerrilla group within Yasir Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization.

Syrians and Palestinians agreed that Begin looks ready to give up most of the Sinai. But they noted his renewed pledges to block return of the occupied West Bank and creation of a Palestinian state, irreducible Arab conditions for peace on which Sadat insisted in his historic speech to the Israeli parliament Nov. 20.

"What did he get from his trip to Jerusalem?" asked a top Assad adviser during last week's anti-Sadat summit in Tripoli, Libya. "Nothing, not even a gesture. It was clear that Begin is giving nothing. He is not a man of peace."

Sadat's breakoff of diplomatic relations with Syria and other Arab critics seemed to fuel Arab fears of a bilateral settlement. The tension heightened when he closed Soviet and allied Eastern European consulates and cultural centers outside Cairo, claiming Moscow had encouraged his Tripoli opponents.

"I bend only to the Egyptian people and I kneel only before Allah," Sadat later told a roaring crowd in Cairo, adding that his Arab critics were "stupid and ignorant dwarfs."

King Hussein of Jordan and Secretary of State Cyrus R.

Vance both have undertaken mediation trips in the Middle East, but official radio in Syria — key nation in the Arab dispute — said Assad rejected "all methods of political and diplomatic action" to heal the rift.

The Syrian leader embarked on his own trip to Persian Gulf nations, including oil giant Saudi Arabia, where conservative King Khaled is poised to act as an influential arbiter.

The Saudi attitude toward the Sadat-Assad quarrel seems an important guide to the future. Reports from Riyadh say the Saudis are ready to back Sadat despite their pique at his de facto recognition of Israeli control over the holy city of Jerusalem.

Apparently with this in mind, the United States has urged and Sadat has agreed to keep this week's preliminary talks with Israel in Cairo "open-ended" in hopes Syria, Jordan and Lebanon will attend.

President Carter has said that an overall Mideast settlement is the only real solution to the dangers of war, and comments from him and the Vance party indicated American efforts will focus on pulling Jordan and Syria into Egypt's wake.

Vance was reported resigned to Sadat's isolation in the Cairo talks this week but hopeful they could be expanded and resumed elsewhere.

"I cannot speak for Assad, but I think that logic will dictate a closing of ranks," Hussein told Newsweek. "If we can achieve this, the venue is not important."

Arafat's PLO is under the military sway of Syrian soldiers keeping peace in Lebanon and appears wedded to the Syrian line, despite dissension that expressed itself after Arafat closeted himself with Assad at Tripoli and agreed to a notably moderate anti-Sadat stand.

When Arafat emerged from the Tripoli conference hall and made a victory sign toward photographers, one of his top lieutenants on the sidelines made a vulgar sign toward Arafat.

Chances for energy dim

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional leaders are trying to come up with a compromise energy plan before Christmas but the nation may start 1978 without new laws aimed at conserving dwindling fuel supplies.

Top House-Senate energy negotiators say that if no agreements emerge by Friday on oil and natural gas pricing, the major remaining elements of President Carter's energy program, then there probably will be no energy bill this year.

Most of the recent crucial bargaining on the two issues has taken place behind closed doors. And energy conferees say these private talks will find the solutions that have long eluded them in public sessions.

In efforts to break an impasse between the House and Senate, lawmakers have floated a host of compromise schemes during the past few days. But most of the schemes wound up defeated before getting off the ground.

Carter last April declared that the need to make the United States energy self-sufficient was "the moral equivalent of war." But congressional energy conferees for months have been stymied over disagreements on the president's bid to keep price controls on natural gas and to impose a tax on crude oil.

The House passed both proposals. The Senate rejected both, voting to deregulate gas prices and to substitute $40 billion in energy tax credits for businesses and individuals for the crude oil tax.

Natural gas conferees go back to work Monday to try to break a stalemate created by a 9-9 split among Senate negotiators. The Senate conferees are divided between keeping price controls on gas, as Carter wants, and lifting the controls.

The president's proposal would lift the price ceiling on natural gas from $1.46 per 1,000 cubic feet to $1.75 in 1978, then allow it to rise gradually to about $2.40 by 1985. It would also extend federal regulation for the first time to the intrastate market within producing states like Texas and Louisiana. Currently, only gas transported in interstate pipelines is subject to federal price controls.

Senate negotiators have been meeting privately to try to work something out. But there has been little sign of progress.

"This is very much like a game of chicken, with both sides in autos heading for each other at 100 miles per hour waiting for the other to swerve," said Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., leader of the nine senators favoring gas deregulation.

"The other side thinks our group is spineless and is going to swerve first. Well, we're ready to negotiate a compromise but we're not ready to lay down and let that car run over us."

A majority of House conferees favors the administration plan for continued controls. They are expected to back off that stand somewhat on Monday and offer a compromise designed to break the Senate deadlock.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House energy and power subcommittee, said, "I would say the prospects for compromise next week are not good."

Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Texas, has proposed a compromise that would lift price controls after five years — but then allow either the president or Congress to re-impose them if gas prices skyrocket.

However, Wilson said even though his measure is supported by conservatives and some moderates on the panel, he has yet to sell the idea to conference leaders.

Wilson said the eventual agreement approved by conferees may be something "close to this."

Liberals on both House and Senate sides have said, however, that consumers would be better served if no bill were passed than any form of deregulation. If no bill were enacted, the federally regulated interstate price would remain at $1.46 per 1,000 cubic feet.

This is the wholesale price charged to gas pipeline companies.

Another asbestos worker at the plant, Arthur B. Bearden of Tyler, said he has been hospitalized periodically for mesothelioma and other asbestos-related diseases. He called the settlement a "mixed blessing."

"We deserve something. But it's a little late now. I've been a mighty sick man. Asbestos workers, well, we're just like a time bomb — liable to blow up at any time," Bearden said.

The suit also claimed that while the General Services Administration was shipping asbestos in unmarked burlap bags, other federal agencies were mandating danger warning labels on asbestos shipments.

Asbestos workers win money for health damage

TYLER, Texas (AP) — After four years of legal struggling, employees at a Tyler asbestos plant may finally receive some compensation for damage to their health caused by working with dangerous material.

Total settlement figures discussed by some participants in the suit run as high as $20 million. The federal government figure alone has been put as high as $5.7 million.

The workers claim they were not told by government and private officials of health hazards at the plant.

"Offers and counter-offers have been made," U.S. Attorney John Hannah said Friday. "The details are being worked out."

The case was filed by 445 asbestos workers here who claimed federal inspectors and officials at PPG Industries agreed not to warn workers of possible health dangers.

PPG co-owned the Tyler plant with the Corning Glass Works until 1972 when it closed.

The workers say they were exposed to amosite, a substance that has been shown to cause lung cancer in humans.

A federal judge here has sealed information about the settlement offer until next Thursday.

The suit, tried in a four-year court battle, also claimed the asbestos came from federal supplies in unmarked and unsafe burlap sacks.

The action was filed after mesothelioma, a rare form of cancer, showed up in unusually high numbers of plant employees.

The plaintiffs included survivors of a plant worker who was killed by the disease.

A Marshall attorney who represents about half of the workers declined to confirm details of the proposed settlement.

"I've been hearing that the case has been settled for two years," Scott Baldwin said. "The case has not been settled. There's been no final agreement. It won't be settled, as far as I'm concerned, until I get my money."

Several former employees said they had been told a settlement had been offered.

Herman Yandle, leader of a union committee at the plant, said Dallas attorney Scott Henderson told him of the settlement. Henderson was unavailable for comment Friday.

"They told us there had been a settlement," Yandle said. "And they talked in the neighborhood of $50,000 (each). It's not that much, when you consider some of the medical bills these fellows have to pay."

Fertilizer prices stable

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says fertilizer supplies are abundant and that farmers can expect fairly stable and possibly lower prices through next spring's planting.

One of the reasons is that government programs for wheat and corn are aimed at reducing 1978 acreages. Also, supplies of some kinds of fertilizer are much larger, meaning more competitive prices in the months ahead.

The department already has announced a program to reduce next year's wheat acreage by requiring farmers to set aside crop land equal to 20 percent of their actual 1978 wheat plantings.

A conditional 10 percent set-aside program has been announced for next year's corn crop, subject to review next spring.

Meanwhile, the department's Outlook and Situation Board says that "relatively low" market prices for major commodities, including wheat and corn, will have an effect on how much investment farmers will be prepared to make in fertilizer for 1978 crops.

The board said in a recent review that fertilizer inventories "are abundant this fall, with nitrogen inventories well above" a year ago. Nitrogen is one of three basic fertilizer ingredients, with phosphate and potash being the other two.

The report said that U.S. production of anhydrous ammonia — a major source of nitrogen — is up 16 percent this year to 22.7 million tons. Production of phosphoric acid for phosphate is about the same as in 1976 at 9.3 million tons.

The supply of potash involves mostly imported ingredients from Canada, and this demand is expected to continue to exceed domestic production of about three million tons, the report said.

In reviewing fertilizer use by farmers the past season, officials said farmers applied a record of 51.6 million tons for their 1977 crops and that prices were "relatively stable" compared with the previous season.

Nitrogen use increased about 2 percent, phosphate 8 percent and potash 12 percent.

"Fertilizer use by regions reflected drought conditions in the mountain states, generally favorable price prospects at planting time in the southeast and Appalachian regions, and increased cotton acreage in the southern plains," the report said.

Looking at the world situation, officials said fertilizer use is expected to continue to increase but that supplies are generally large enough to meet demands.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government hopes to have a report ready by next September on the management of water used for irrigation of farm crops.

Officials say a joint task force will look into water problems in hopes of making recommendations on how to help farmers be better managers.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland says that "irrigation is by far the biggest single user of water in the United States — averaging more than 100 billion gallons daily."

Bergland said the task force will involve his department, the Interior Department and the Environmental Protection Agency.

The project will involve an "interdisciplinary technical work group" located in Denver, Colo., which will gather information and analyze it. Bergland said that it will hold public hearings before developing recommendations.

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Agriculture Department analyst said today that world trade in oilseed products, including U.S. soybean meal and oil, is likely to rebound sharply next year.

Alan E. Holz of the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said that the 1978 outlook is characterized by "relative abundance and rebounding demand" for oilseed products.

Holz's comments were in a weekly issue of "Foreign Agriculture" published by his agency.

World production of meals and oil — which include fishmeal, cottonseed and other sources — is up primarily because of larger soybean harvests in the United States and Brazil.

Legalization affects Laetrile little

By JAN CARROLL
Associated Press Writer

More than a dozen states have legalized the use of Laetrile as a cancer treatment. But the new laws have produced neither a convenient supply of the substance nor an overwhelming increase in demand.

Supporters acknowledge that the laws have had few visible effects, but they say their main goal was decriminalization — not manufacture.

"We're exceedingly pleased," said Dean Burk, a retired official of the National Cancer Institute and leading spokesman for Laetrile supporters. "Any person, and in particular any doctor, can use it."

Medical associations and state health officials say there is no evidence of increased Laetrile use because of the new laws.

Burk said the number of persons using Laetrile nationwide has increased from less than 1,000 in 1970 to about 50,000 today. However, he said little if any of that increase is due to new legislation.

In fact, Burk said, the widely publicized opposition to Laetrile by the Food and Drug Administration and medical groups has done more to spur its use than the new laws.

Laetrile, also known as amygdalin and produced in 27 foreign countries including Canada and Mexico, is found in many foods, but in especially high concentrations in peach and apricot pits. Its supporters say it is a vitamin that has relieved cancer patients' pain, improved their appetites and promoted weight gain. In some cases, they claim Laetrile has even caused tumors to shrink.

The medical community says Laetrile amounts to quackery which could raise false hopes and lure patients away from more traditional methods of treatment.

The state laws in some cases pose a dilemma — legal to use Laetrile but illegal to obtain it because of the FDA's ban on interstate shipments of Laetrile and the ingredients used to make it.

So far, Indiana, Louisiana, Texas, Nevada, Delaware, Arizona, Oregon and Washington have legalized manufacture as well as use of Laetrile. Alaska, Florida, Oklahoma and New Hampshire and Illinois allow the use of Laetrile but not the manufacture of it. Oklahoma's law ignores importation.

In states allowing manufacture, there are no firm plans to do so. Potential producers either have been discouraged by fear of federal retaliation or delayed by the mechanics of state bureaucracy.

In Indiana, the first state to legalize the manufacture, distribution and sale of the substance, Gov. Otis R. Bowen, a family physician, expressed fear of Laetrile clinics "popping up like mushrooms." Not only has that proved untrue, but two groups which considered producing it have since abandoned their plans.

Indianapolis-based Eli Lilly & Co., the nation's largest pharmaceutical firm, has flatly declared it's not interested in Laetrile.

Dr. William Paynter, Indiana's state health commissioner, said investors apparently have shied away because the risk of federal intervention doesn't justify the expense.

In Washington, a company located near the Canadian border has said it will manufacture Laetrile but it must wait until state pharmacy board rules take effect.

In Arizona, the law has yet to be implemented pending action by the state health department and the University of Arizona's medical school and pharmacy college to set standards for production. The same is true in Delaware and Nevada. The Oregon Board of Pharmacy says it will have to seek money from the legislature to establish standards and regulate sales if anyone applies for a permit. So far none has.

Laetrile supporters scored a major victory when U.S. District Judge Luther Bohanon of Oklahoma City ruled that any terminally ill cancer patient who had a doctor's affidavit attesting to his condition could legally import Laetrile for his own use. The order enjoined FDA and Customs officials from interfering with the importation of Laetrile.

In New Hampshire and Illinois the substance may be used only by persons with terminal cancer. Elsewhere, Laetrile users taking advantage of the Oklahoma court decision face possible investigation by the FDA to verify that they are, in fact, obtaining the substance for themselves and not for sale to others.

National leaders of the Laetrile movement had predicted the flurry of action in state legislatures would force the FDA to change its position. Instead, it seems to have strengthened the FDA's resistance. The government is mounting a renewed assault against Laetrile, distributing posters calling it dangerous and worthless.

Your money's worth Small claims -- winners may not win

Sylvia Porter

If you win a claim in small claims court, that may not always mean you win. In fact, in a startlingly large percentage of cases, a successful suit has not led to a successful collection.

A sampling of small claims cases in the New York City borough of Queens last year found a hefty 40 per cent of those surveyed had not recovered a penny of the money awarded in their judgments. An earlier survey in Manhattan disclosed that only 50 per cent of the litigants had been able to collect after winning small claims judgments.

The obvious explanation is, of course, that many defendants do not pay because they don't have the resources. The administrative judge of the District Courts in suburban Nassau County, N.Y., attributes most failures to collect judgments to debtors who don't have any assets left to seize. A New York City court official who holds a similar view points out that many defendant companies were either bankrupt or defunct.

In Nassau County, for instance, 1,436 winners of small claims cases turned to marshals for aid in securing payment — but in 32 per cent of these cases, the marshals couldn't collect.

To help plaintiffs collect awards won in small claims court, many moves have been made or are under way. For instance,

New York City's Department of Consumer Affairs launched a program this past summer to assist plaintiffs in tracking down assets on a debtor's assets by instituting an information subpoena and restraining notice — from the clerk of the Civil Court of which the small claims courts are a part.

This notice to third parties — including banks, insurance companies and utilities — would reveal a defendant's assets and their location and tie them up until a sheriff could seize them. Previously, you had to hire a lawyer, often at a cost exceeding the award.

66 arrive from Mexico on Saturday

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Sixty-six Americans returned to the United States from Mexico on Saturday for reunions with their families, the experience of imprisonment in Mexican jails behind them.

They joined 61 Americans who arrived Friday in the first phase of a prisoner exchange program between the United States and Mexico.

The chartered jet touched down to a loud cheer from the flag-waving and tearful crowd at the airport in this border city. Prison buses and federal guards hung briefly in the background while hugs and kisses were exchanged by the 66 returnees — one woman and 65 men — and their loved ones.

The prisoners then were taken to Metropolitan Correctional Facility in downtown San Diego for processing.

Almost to a person, the returning Americans have told of harassment and torture during their imprisonment in Mexico, all of them expressing gratitude to be back in the United States.

But for Mexican nationals imprisoned in the United States, the story was a different one. The 36 Mexicans flown back to their country on Friday were the only ones of about 1,200 Mexicans jailed in this country who were willing to return to Mexico, said James Meko, a U.S. Bureau of Prisons official.

Who accepted Korean money, why?

WASHINGTON (AP) — House investigators are probing the toughest question in the South Korean influence-buying scandal: Who accepted money and why?

And congressional leaders say they won't accept any deal in which South Korean businessman Tongson Park, accused of passing out some of the money, returns to the United States to testify for the Justice Department but not before congressional committees.

"I don't think the executive can waive the subpoena power of the Congress and the investigative power of the Congress," Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd said Saturday.

Leon Jaworski, special counsel to the House ethics committee, and its chairman, John J. Flynn, D-Ga., also said they will not accept any deal that does not include testimony before the committee.

They issued that statement Friday in reaction to press reports that U.S. and South Korean negotiators are working on an arrangement for Park to return to testify in Justice Department proceedings but not before congressional committees.

Jaworski said in a television interview last week that the South Korean influence-buying scandal may wind up involving "several dozen" present and former congressmen.

Jaworski indicated his investigators already have evidence of wrongdoing in some cases but won't get the full story without testimony from Park.

Most of those named so far acknowledge taking campaign and other types of contributions from Park but say it was legal and they had no reason to suspect at the time that he might be a South Korean agent.

Jaworski said many of them just used bad judgment, but that some went beyond that.

Former Rep. Richard T. Hanna, D-Calif., has been indicted on charges of taking some $100,000 in bribes from Tongson Park, and former Rep. Otto E. Passman, D-La., has denied allegations he got from $190,000 to $500,000 from the South Korean rice dealer.

Park and another Korean-born businessman, Hancho C. Kim, face criminal charges of conspiring with the Korean Central Intelligence Agency to try to buy influence in Congress for the South Korean government.

According to congressional testimony, former Korean Ambassador Kim Dong Jo tried to bribe congressmen with $100 bills and by last year the KCIA had a plan to try to buy collaborators in the White House, Congress and top federal agencies.

Six staff members of the House subcommittee on international organizations, which also is investigating alleged Korean influence-buying, arrived in Seoul Friday hoping to interview members of the KCIA.

Japan's Kyodo news agency said four Japanese trading firms paid $900,000 to the U.S. offices of a South Korean company in 1973, and that the House staffers suspect the money may have been used by Korean agents to fund their activities in the United States.

Rep. Larry Winn, R-Kan., and a secretary, Nan Elder, say former Korean ambassador Kim paid a call in September 1973 and left an envelope they later discovered was full of thousands of dollars in $100 bills.

Mrs. Elder testified to Flynn's committee that she understood the former ambassador visited other congressmen that day but she did not know if he offered stuffed envelopes to any of them.

Former Rep. Thomas E. Morgan, D-Pa., onetime chairman of the House International Relations Committee, says Kim visited him about that time but left no money and did not offer any.

Wives of two other congressmen, Reps. E. de la Garza, D-Tex., and John T. Myers, R-Ind., testified that during a trip to Korea, the former ambassador's wife offered them envelopes stuffed with $100 bills.

Both women testified they refused to take the money. The other congressmen who took the trip say neither they nor their wives were offered money although they were offered gifts of various kinds.

The federal grand jury indictment against Hanna portrays him as Tongson Park's operative inside Congress.

A former KCIA director, Kim Hyung Wook, testified that Hanna proposed the original influence-buying scheme to him, promising that if Tongson Park was made Korea's exclusive rice dealer, the commissions would be used to influence congressmen.

The ethics committee said Park got $9 million in rice commissions out of the deal and Jaworski said auditors are now trying to trace how much of it he spent on congressmen.

The New York Times reported last week that Park has told investigators he gave $500,000 to Passman, former chairman of the House foreign operations appropriations subcommittee.

The newspaper said Park told the investigators the money was connected with Park's rice dealings in Passman's home state of Louisiana.

The grand jury said Park also gave $10,000 to former Rep. and now Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards plus a $10,000 gift to Edwards' wife.

House Democratic Whip John Brademas has acknowledged getting $5,000 in cash and the use of Park's George Towne Club.

Former Democratic Whip John J. McFall says Park contributed $4,000 to his office account, a type of account that did not have to be disclosed publicly and which now has been outlawed.
