Tax cost heavy for disabled care

By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of helping disabled Americans has become a massive but mostly invisible hemorrhage of dollars from the pockets of the nation's taxpayers, workers and businesses.

From Social Security disability insurance to federal Civil Service pensions, the burden of providing for those who cannot work is growing, with no end in sight.

The problem has largely been hidden by concern over the stability of the whole Social Security system and of private pension plans — much like an infection in a patient who hurts so much from another disease that he doesn't notice the second debilitating illness.

Experts say there are no simple explanations for the soaring costs of disability nor any easy means to halt the rise.

The most visible cost is the disability insurance program run by the Social Security Administration. Its checks to 2.8 million Americans will total an estimated $11.6 billion this year.

The cost is expected to be $26 billion by 1983, when an estimated 35 million people will be drawing benefits.

The exploding costs of this program have depleted the trust fund set aside for it. This pending bankruptcy is one of the principal reasons Congress raised Social Security taxes and allotted more of the revenues to disability programs. Without congressional action, the trust fund would have gone broke late next year.

The disability insurance program suffers from many problems: inequities, arbitrary rulings and molasses-slow administrative processes.

But factors outside the program, such as the nation's economy and a greater willingness to apply for all the benefits that one can get, are apparently also at work on this and other disability programs.

More and more companies are offering some type of disability protection to their workers. A Conference Board study found 74 percent of the companies surveyed had long-term disability insurance for at least managerial employees. In a 1975 Bankers Trust study, 80 percent of the pension plans surveyed included disability retirement provisions.

Industry experts say more disability claims are being filed and people are drawing benefits longer.

This shift has cost private insurance companies that write disability insurance policies millions of dollars in recent years. By one industry estimate, companies lost $100 million on disability policies for individuals in 1974 and 1975.

Other than Social Security, the disabled cost the federal government billions in other ways. There are veterans' pensions based on disability, some veterans' medical costs and disability benefits for federal workers, including Civil Service disability pensions.

By one estimate, the overall cost of taking care of the disabled in 1975 was $11.4 billion. That was more than double the money spent on disability by government and private firms five years before.

This estimate, by Monroe Berkowitz and Jeffery Rubin of Rutgers University, includes medical costs of about $65 billion.

The researchers said the costs of disability could be $21.9 billion in 1980 if the rate of increase between 1970 and 1975 does not slow.

Arabs call plan 'dagger'

By The Associated Press
Syria and Saudi Arabia denounced Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin's peace proposals today, saying they would perpetuate Israeli occupation of Arab land, which the Saudis called "a dagger in the heart of the Arab nation."

The Egyptian-Israeli peace conference resumed in Cairo, meanwhile, and spokesmen for the two countries reported "marked progress." But the negotiators seemed to be awaiting major decisions by heads of state, particularly at the upcoming meeting between Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

The official radio of Saudi Arabia, an important financial backer of Egypt and the other Arab "confrontation" states bordering Israel, said there is no justification for optimism "as long as Israeli occupation of Arab territory and Jerusalem continues."

"This occupation is a dagger stuck in the heart of the Arab nation... the dagger must be removed through Arab unity and cooperation," it said.

Syria's official radio said the Begin plan "actually is designed to retain Israeli occupation of the West Bank of Jordan and the Gaza Strip." It also blasted the proposals for not allowing for the creation of a Palestinian state.

In Beirut, Lebanon, opponents of Sadat's peace overtures to Israel apparently tried to blow up the Egyptian Embassy. Police said an embassy guard spotted a 13-pound dynamite bomb near the entrance to the building, and police experts defused it 45 minutes before it was set to explode.

Begin's proposals, which also have been denounced by the Palestine Liberation Organization, would provide civil autonomy for the Palestinian Arabs of the West Bank and Gaza but would continue Israeli military occupation there and Israeli control of Jerusalem. Other details have not been disclosed.

Begin presented the plan to President Carter in weekend talks in Washington, and U.S. officials said afterward the proposals put the Mideast "on the road to peace."

Egyptian officials say they are awaiting a report on the plan from Carter. A statement by a "high authority" said Egypt believes the first step must be total Israeli withdrawal from war-won Arab lands, a step Israel appears unlikely to take.

Dan Pattir, the Israeli spokesman at the Cairo talks, refused to say whether the Begin plan would be introduced at that conference.

But he and Egyptian spokesman Morsi Saad el-Din, at their first joint news conference, said progress had been made at today's meeting.

Winding up a visit to Washington, Begin said Carter "considers the proposals I brought to him a fair basis to achieve peace." But he conceded that "the American endorsement couldn't be complete, of course. There will be many problems."

The prime minister's comment on the CBS television program Face the Nation appeared to contradict a more optimistic assessment in Jerusalem by Israeli Cabinet Secretary Arieh Noar.

"For the first time since the establishment of the state," Israel and the United States "have an identity of views on the content of a peace agreement," Noar said.

Begin said his proposals call for "self rule" for the one million Palestinian Arabs now living under Israeli occupation on the West Bank of the Jordan River and in the Gaza Strip. He said they would be entitled to settle in Israel and "Palestinian Jews" would have the right to live freely on the West Bank, an area Israel has dotted with Jewish settlements during the 10-year occupation.

The Palestine Liberation Organization rejected Begin's proposal, saying it "aims at the rejection of the right of the people of Palestine to form their own state, under PLO leadership."

Despite repeated questions, Begin refused to divulge other details of his peace proposals, saying he had a "moral obligation" to discuss the plan first with President Sadat.

Anti-inflation plan studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, placing a heavy emphasis on the economy, canceled today's regular Cabinet meeting to confer with economic advisers and congressional leaders on the package of tax, employment and anti-inflation measures he will unveil in January.

Administration officials, working under Vice President Walter F. Mondale and Stuart

E. Eizenstat, Carter's assistant for domestic affairs and policy, are in the midst of an effort to complete a master domestic policy agenda for 1978.

Eizenstat said Sunday that top priority would undoubtedly be given to the economy, although "we don't have the priorities all set."

Beginning a day-long series of economic policy meetings, Carter planned to sit down first with the Cabinet officials most directly involved in economic policy, along with senior White House officials, and then with House and Senate leaders and several committee chairmen.

Then he was to meet with the 15-member executive committee of the National Governors Association to discuss the fiscal 1979 budget.

Carter also planned to spend two hours listening to officials from the Energy Department, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the international affairs section of the State Department appeal for increases in their allotments under the budget, which goes into effect next Oct. 1.

Today's schedule represented an unusually concentrated study of economic issues for Carter, who begins a six-day Christmas vacation on Wednesday in Plains, Ga. Besides calling off the Cabinet meeting, he canceled his attendance at the weekly meeting of his senior staff members and his weekly lunch with Vice President Walter Mondale.

However, he had dinner Sunday evening at Mondale's official residence about one mile from the White House.

During the weekend, Carter attended a family reunion and wedding in Fayetteville, N.C.

After returning to Washington, he met for nearly two hours on Saturday night with Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin. On Sunday morning, the president taught the adult Bible class at the First Baptist Church and attended the morning worship service there.

The economic package, to be made public sometime around Jan. 19, the day Congress returns from its year-end recess to hear Carter's State of the Union address, will set out economic goals for 1978 "and thereafter," Eizenstat said.

The attempt to set the administration's priorities for 1978 stems to some extent from congressional criticism that the House and Senate were overloaded with Carter's proposals during his first year in office.

Carter has pledged "substantial" tax cuts in 1978, although the extent of tax revision has been in doubt. The cuts would counter the higher payroll taxes that will be imposed by the legislation designed to make the Social Security system financially secure through the end of the century.

Crash cause probed

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Federal investigators are trying to figure out why a United Airlines DC-8F cargo jet with three crewmen aboard left a holding pattern near Salt Lake International Airport before crashing into snow-blanketed mountains 26 miles north of here.

A team of 15 to 20 rescue workers located the wreckage of the jet Sunday but was unable to find any survivors or remains in snow up to four feet deep. The search was recessed at sundown and was to resume today.

The plane crashed at about the 7,300-foot level of a peak on the north side of Bear Canyon, officials said. The wreck was some 2 1/2 miles from the nearest road, and rescuers had to hike in on snowshoes.

Davis County Sheriff Dub Lawrence said the plane hit just below the mountain top, scattering wreckage a quarter mile up the peak and down the other side. "I don't see how anyone could survive," he said. United identified the crew as Capt. John Fender, 49, First Officer Phillip Modest, 46, and Second Officer Steve Simpson, 34, all of the Chicago area.

The plane was attempting to land in Salt Lake City early Sunday to pick up Christmas mail. The pilot had reported landing gear trouble and was ordered into a holding pattern.

William Lovett, chief controller at the air route traffic control center, said that just before the crash the plane left the holding pattern without explanation, headed east and could not be raised on radio by the tower.

It was the second commercial aircraft crash in the United States within a week. Last Tuesday, a chartered DC-3 crashed just after takeoff at Evansville, Ind., killing all 29 aboard, including the University of Evansville basketball team and head coach.

United spokesman Jack Gamble said the jet was loaded with about one-third its 90,000-pound cargo capacity. Another United spokesman said the cargo was "non-hazardous" and included 1,200 pounds of mail.

Schools no longer give free shots

Free immunization shots will no longer be available at school from school nurses.

Instead, students may take required shots at the "free shot" clinic from public health nurses.

The clinics are set for the second Thursday of each month at Carver Center, 321 W. Albert.

If a student does not have all of the required shots, he will be given the choice of going to the doctor or the next "free shot" clinic before he is suspended from school.

These new changes will not affect students already enrolled in school now if his records are complete. The students now enrolled have already been notified if shot records are incomplete. Students have until the Jan. 12 clinic to get records complete.

As student records become outdated, the school nurse will send out a notice with a date of the "free shot" clinic. The student will have that much time to get records up to date.

GM settlement could be biggest in US history

CHICAGO (AP) — State prosecutors announced today the settlement of the General Motors engine-switch fracas and said the $40 million the company may have to pay makes it the largest consumer victory in the nation's history.

Illinois Attorney General William J. Scott said each car owner who got a Chevrolet engine in a different make of GM car will receive $300 cash and a two-year warranty under the settlement.

Scott and the attorneys general from Michigan and Ohio said this could cost General Motors as much as $40 million.

The automaker had been sued by public officials in about half of the nation's states after consumers who had purchased new Oldsmobiles, Buicks and Pontiacs discovered some contained Chevrolet engines. Many other suits were filed by private individuals.

Scott said the warranties can be transferred if the car is sold and are valued at $200 each.

"We are here to announce a $40 million Christmas present for over 100,000 people," Scott said at a news conference. "It is the largest consumer protection settlement in history."

Also at the news conference were Attorneys General William J. Brown of Ohio and Frank J. Kelley of Michigan, both of whom were instrumental in the six-month negotiations with GM.

Scott said the agreement was "extremely fair" and binds GM in the future to "telling people exactly what engine they are getting."

The settlement is subject to approval by Judge Frank McGarr of U.S. District Court. A hearing with the judge was scheduled for later in the day.

The settlement was accepted by attorneys general in 45 states, Scott said. States not accepting terms of the agreement were California, Louisiana, Iowa, Kentucky and Tennessee, said a consumers attorney fighting the settlement.

The fracas began in January when Joseph Siewek of Chicago was told by an Oldsmobile dealer he could not replace a fan belt because the Olds Siewek had bought had a Chevrolet engine.

Scott and other attorneys general sued when they discovered a nationwide pattern of engine switching.

School board renames Junior High school

By JANE P. MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff
Pampa Junior High School will phase out of existence in the fall of 1978 to become Pampa Middle School.

Trustees of Pampa Independent School District changed the name at a 7 a.m. meeting today to "cause people to realize there is a change in the grades and a change in school philosophy."

The change is that the school will house sixth, seventh and eighth graders in the fall. This year only eighth and ninth grades make up the junior high.

Houston Middle School will be closed.

Several board members questioned the need for a name change but the vote was unanimous.

The board also voted to purchase a 71-passenger bus which will cost about $16,000. The school district had planned to spend $26,000 this year on two smaller buses but decided the need for one large bus was greater.

In other action, trustees voted to participate in group unemployment insurance through the Texas Association of School Boards.

A plan whereby the school district would establish a fund and operate its own insurance was discussed.

1978 will mark the first year which school districts have been forced to participate in unemployment insurance.

The TASB plan will cost $45 per employee but Pampa will be able to withdraw the funds, minus any claims, would be returned.

Other action included the final reading of revision in the policy for jury service and definition of full-time personnel and accepting the resignation of Beth Huggan who teaches at Baker Elementary School.

Trustees reviewed a budget report and approved payments of bills. Some include: $449.70 for duplicator, $50 for rodent control, $29.18 for homemade band records, $32.78 for glasses and cake pan, $200 for consultation for students to Dr. William Klempeter, $380 for choral risers, $559.58 for sewing machine and sewing tables, $2,559.28 for gas bill, $338.25 for laundry services for Sam Houston, $43,159 for 1-year insurance policies on schools and contents, $589.35 for basketball and athletic department laundry services, $144 for travel bags for swim team and $700 for game contract with Dallas Carter.

Several trustees question the policy of paying $13 fees for bus drivers' chauffeur's license. Another suggested cutting expense by not paying for meals for traveling school athletes.

The next board meeting has tentatively been set for Jan. 9 at Carver Center, 321 W. Albert.

Trustees are Bill Arrington, Bob Lyle, Al Smith, Curt Beck, David Crossman, Buddy Epperson and Paul Simmons.

Mental patients become prisoners

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Some operators of unregulated boarding homes called "halfway houses" are turning former mental patients into virtual prisoners and making healthy profits from the patients' social security money, the Austin American-Statesman reported in a copyright story Sunday.

The story said the operators become official recipients of the social security funds, giving back only a few dollars a week for cigarettes, candy and other incidentals.

A social worker estimated that profits from such operations can run into the thousands of dollars a month for one small facility.

The story said operators threaten to send the patients back to state mental hospitals if they complain.

An Austin psychiatrist was quoted as saying, "People are being dumped out of hospitals so they can say they're not warehousing. So they're still being warehoused, but in deficient facilities with no medical care."

Another social worker said, "The question we're having to face regularly now is whether to let one of these former patients sleep under the Congress Avenue bridge in downtown Austin or send him to a place we know is overcrowded and dirty."

The newspaper said social worker Betty Huffman, who weighs 90 pounds, visited one of the East Austin homes and nearly fell through the rotted boards of the front porch.

Ernest McKenney of the Department of Human Resources said Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation (MHMR) "is saying that these people have got to go out of the institutions. The Department of Human Resources is saying 'We have no place to put them.'"

The paper said virtually no case law has been written that would establish a state's obligation to release patients who cannot be "cured."

The paper said most professionals interviewed agreed that licensing of halfway houses is imperative.

Corrupt service commission

By CLARK R. MOLLENHOFF
WASHINGTON D.C. — The Carter Administration is crippling an FBI investigation of corruption in the Civil Service Commission that includes the deliberate destruction of important records that were evidence of perjury and other personnel frauds.

While the frauds and records destruction were perpetrated under the Nixon and Ford administrations, the Carter White House is approving or condoning actions at the Civil Service Commission and the Justice Department that represent a cover-up comparable to the Nixon administration's Watergate cover-up.

Officials in the Carter White House, including White House political boss Hamilton Jordan, have permitted the cover-up to continue in the face of warnings from Representative John Moss (Dem., Cal.), Consumer Advocate Ralph Nader, and Robert Vaughn, lawyer-author of an expose of Civil Service Commission frauds.

The Carter Administration actions are interpreted by congressional critics and others as either gross stupidity or conspiracy to obstruct justice. The cover-up of crimes is being accomplished by the following devices:

1. Unconscionable delay of months in asking for an FBI investigation of evidence of corruption of the Civil Service Commission's merit system which was documented in congressional hearings and in an internal Civil Service Commission report.

2. Justice Department assignment of too few agents to the FBI investigation of the evidence of complicated Civil Service Commission crimes, and resistance to requests for assignment of more FBI agents to the job.

3. Orders sharply limiting the FBI investigation to the destruction of Civil Service Commission records, and rejection of FBI recommendations that the inquiry be broadened to include other crimes.

4. Permitting Civil Service Commission personnel, including some of those with potential criminal responsibility, to arrange an in-house investigation that effectively bars the FBI from the broad investigation that is needed.

Pushing for so-called "reform measures" at the Civil Service Commission that would legalize some of the most criticized illegal actions of the Nixon Administration's steps to politicize the merit system.

Vaughn's well-documented 1974 study of Civil Service Commission frauds entitled "The Spoiled System" described the manner in which the commission engaged in arbitrary actions and permitted perjury and the rigging of records to fire truth-telling whistle blowers, including Air Force Cost Analyst A. Ernest Fitzgerald.

The Watergate investigations revealed the Nixon White House politicization of the Civil Service Commission through an infamous manual produced by White House personnel boss Fred Malek.

The Civil Service Commission, under heavy criticism, set up its own investigation task force under Milton I. Sharon, a retired regional director of the Civil Service Commission.

The Sharon report, anticipated as a whitewash, documented frauds and "widespread and systematic abuses of the Civil Service appointment system" even though it did not attempt to zero in on those Civil Service commissioners and employees responsible for the frauds, perjury and destruction of records.

Sharon reported his investigation "disclosed the existence of politically oriented employment practices" that were "organized and systematized."

The report noted that when the Civil Service Commission took steps in 1974 to file charges against 19 officials in three agencies, the defense was that the Civil Service commissioners themselves had engaged in the practice of making personal referrals of applicants and had sought preferential treatment not in accord with merit principles.

Sharon said that his investigation had been handicapped by the destruction of records by the Bureau of Recruiting and Examining and by a commission policy change that had shortened the schedule of record disposal.

Representative John Moss in 1976 declared a federal grand jury investigation should be impeded to probe evidence of fraud and cover-up at the top level of the Civil Service Commission.

The California congressman declared that Sharon's report "confirmed our worst fears of widespread corruption of the merit system." Democratic Presidential Candidate Jimmy Carter made corruption of the Civil Service Commission a campaign issue and promised reform.

In the early weeks of the Carter administration, Ralph Nader and Vaughn met with Hamilton Jordan to reiterate the importance of action against Civil Service crimes they said were undermining the integrity of entire Civil Service system.

Despite encouraging rhetoric from the Carter White House, the Justice Department sat on the case through the spring, summer and fall without even authorizing an FBI investigation. The Justice Department did not authorize an FBI probe of civil service corruption until the last week in November — only a few weeks before the statute of limitation will run on some of the crimes.

Even then the restrictions have frustrated the FBI agents, and there has been such a lack of cooperation by the White House, Justice Department and the Civil Service Commission that critics have likened it to the stonewalling conspiracy of silence the FBI faced in its 1972 probe of Watergate.

President Carter's only hope of avoiding a charge of cover-up is to broaden the probe, assign more agents, give it the high priority it deserves, and bar any role by Civil Service officials who may be involved in the corruption in any manner.

IN WASHINGTON

Martha Angle and Robert Walters

One test for all?

By Martha Angle and Robert Walters

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — His name is Matthew, and he is 17 years old. His occupation, on official records, is listed as "student."

What that really means, at this stage of his life, is that Matthew is in the test-taking business.

The high school senior from suburban Long Island, N.Y., wants to become a dentist. To achieve his ambition, he must first go to college.

And to gain admission to college — almost any college — Matthew and millions of other youngsters his age must compete for good scores on the national Scholastic Aptitude Tests, the exams which increasingly determine who shall enter the halls of higher education.

So Matthew has been taking the SATs — over and over again, aiming for scores that will please the admissions officers.

Before long, millions of Matthews throughout the country are likely to find themselves taking similar standardized achievement tests at a far younger age. And that could have enormous ramifications for public education in America.

Alarmed by a 14-year decline in SAT scores, parents, politicians and educators are currently clamoring for a renewed emphasis on the fundamentals of reading, writing and arithmetic in the public schools.

At the same time, they are seeking reassurance — through standardized achievement tests — that the "back-to-basics" movement will pay discernible dividends.

A total of 26 states have already created "basic competency" tests to measure student achievement, while all the rest — except for Montana — are planning such programs.

The big question now looming is whether such tests should be national in scope, devised and distributed by Uncle Sam, or whether each state should develop its own.

It is tempting to opt for national exams, for uniform yardsticks that would permit parents in South Carolina to compare scores in their school system against those of students in, say, Massachusetts.

But there are some serious pitfalls to such an approach, as HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. warned in a recent speech in San Francisco.

This is a big country with an incredible diversity of cultures and lifestyles. How do you write test questions that would be equally comprehensible to a sharecropper's kid in rural South Carolina and an urban tenement dweller in Boston?

Can a test which is useful in measuring individual student progress over a period of years also help pinpoint the strengths and weaknesses of the curriculum in a particular school system?

And most of all, what would federally imposed national achievement tests do to our cherished local control of schools?

It seems inevitable that every school in the country would soon be gearing its curriculum to the national exams, "teaching to the tests," as the educators say, if such a uniform testing program were instituted.

"In its most extreme form," Califano has warned, "national control of curriculum is a form of national control of ideas. We should be very wary of treading in that direction."

Parents and teachers, politicians and taxpayers have every reason to be concerned about the apparent decline in academic achievement of American youngsters. It is a national scandal that our high schools are granting diplomas to students who cannot even read the "help wanted" ads, let alone fill out a job application.

But unless we want Big Brother deciding what our children should study, and how they should be taught, all of us should think twice about the wisdom of national achievement tests. There are better ways of learning why Johnny can't read.

Flying out of the closet

Scientists have uncovered the first solid evidence of homosexuality among wild birds. Jonathan Livingston Seagull may have been Jon.

United Press International recently reported that a university research team had found that 14 percent of the female sea gulls on an island off the California coast are lesbians.

"They are queer birds," said an ornithologist in announcing the startling discovery.

The cause of this deviant lifestyle has not yet been discovered, but it is not believed to be the result of the birds sticking their beaks into Florida oranges.

A female gull assumes a male role and pairs off with another female. They act the same as heterosexual sea gulls, going through the motions of mating and laying sterile eggs, the researchers report.

"The results of this remarkable research reaffirm that a bird in the hand can be more productive than two in the closet," another ornithologist said.

"We were absolutely astounded," said Dr. George Hunt of the University of California at Irvine. He and his wife studied 1,200 pairs of Western sea gulls for three years on Santa Barbara Island, about 40 miles southwest of Los Angeles.

Upon hearing about the California sea gulls, the New York Daily News immediately assigned a task force to investigate the sexual habits of New York's sea gulls. The newspaper said its study concentrated on "known sea gull gathering spots, including a Staten Island landfill."

This survey of 73,000 sea gulls found "the incidence of gull homosexuality in New York is absolute zero," the Daily News reported. "If any of the subject gulls had done anything funny, our people would have recorded it."

The New York report is encouraging to those of us who recognize the most crucial question raised by the discovery of the homosexual sea gulls in California: Are they recruiting?

Of course, the fact that there are no gay gulls in New York doesn't prove the problem is confined strictly to the West Coast. It doesn't prove the homosexual sea gulls of Santa Barbara Island have no ambitions east of the Mississippi.

It could well be that the California homosexual gulls have not yet been organized to the point where they can afford to proselytize in other states. But this doesn't mean they won't open recruiting birdbaths in the basements of Midwestern post offices at some later date. Caution should be the heterosexual byword.

As their opponents have often pointed out, homosexual people are forever trying to "freshen their ranks." Dr. Hunt's research offers us no reason to believe gay gulls don't want to freshen their feathered ranks in an effort to promulgate their creed.

Dr. Hunt should spend some of that $62,000 finding out why it is only now that the existence of lesbian sea gulls has come to public notice. Have they suddenly begun to flaunt their sexuality?

No one cares what gay gulls do in the privacy of their own nests. But they should not hold wings on park statues, or swoop together in public aviaries. Innocent young starlings should not be exposed to this type of conduct.

Probably the wisest precaution would be to forbid all suspect sea gulls from flying closer than 25 miles to any shore.

Naturally, the bleeding beaks will protest any action taken to protect young birds from the influence of gay gulls. The protesters will quote statistics indicating that more baby canaries have been molested by heterosexual sea gulls than by homosexual sea gulls.

And it will also be claimed that there are millions of frightened gulls who hide their gay lifestyle and so have not been discovered by Dr. Hunt. The bleeding beaks will insist it is a violation of civil rights to force any birds to fly in a closet in order to survive.

This is nonsense, of course. There is nothing wrong with keeping like birds offshore, or in a closet. If birds of a feather shouldn't flock together, what good are cliches?

Mixture of wood yields best fireplace blazes

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Millions of Americans are warding off the chill of long winter nights with roaring log fires. Consumers will find it pays to know something about the wood they burn.

Fireplaces seem to be growing in popularity. A spokesman for the National Association of Home Builders said Census Bureau figures show 58 per cent of all new homes built in 1976 had at least one fireplace, compared to only 37 per cent in 1972.

A growing number of people also are using firewood in wood-burning stoves. Since stoves are more efficient than fireplaces the price of the wood burned in them becomes competitive with that of other fuels.

But it is also important to realize that fires in fireplaces waste energy. As much as 20 per cent of the air in your house can be pulled up the chimney in an hour when a fire is burning.

Unless you install special equipment, more than three-fourths of the heat produced by the fire will go up the chimney.

To select the right firewood, you must take into consideration the size of your fireplace and the type of fire you want.

The best fires come from a mixture of woods. Softwoods like pine, spruce and fir catch fire easily and burn quickly with a hot flame. They are good to use to start your fire, but a blaze made entirely of this kind of logs needs constant replenishment or it will burn out rapidly. Your expensive woodpile also will disappear quickly.

For a long-lasting fire, you should choose denser hardwoods like ash, beech, birch, hickory, maple and oak. They burn with a shorter flame than softwoods but last longer. Oak gives the most uniform flame and provides steady, glowing coals.

Logs from fruit and nut trees such as apple, cherry, hickory and pecan give off a pleasant aroma when burned. Add some of these after you've got your fire going.

Most wood will not burn well unless it is dry. The easiest way to make sure the wood is properly seasoned is to buy it several months before you use it. If this isn't practical, look for wood with cracks in the end pieces; freshly cut wood will have tight, solid ends with visible sawmarks.

The most common measure of firewood is the standard cord which measures eight feet by four feet by four feet or 128 cubic feet. A standard cord of dense, dry hardwood generally weighs about two tons and provides as much heat — assuming none of it is wasted — as a ton of coal, 150 to 175 gallons of heating oil or 24,000 cubic feet of natural gas.

Few people burn eight- or four-foot logs so most dealers cut the wood into smaller lengths and sell it in something called a face cord. A face cord of 16-inch lengths is one-third the size of a full cord. Look for a cord that is tightly stacked without large gaps between the logs. If you buy according to weight instead of volume, look for the driest wood. Don't pay for extra water.

Prices — and the amount you need — vary widely depending on where you live and how often you have a fire going. If you buy a hard wood and light a fire only once or twice a week, a face cord equal to one-third a standard cord should be adequate for a season.

Oklahomans stand behind Anita

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — An Oklahoma City minister says he has been "astounded" by the favorable response to a plan to let the country know Oklahomans stand behind Anita Bryant.

Robert L. Wise, pastor of Our Lord's Community Church, and Larry Jones, a Southern Baptist evangelist, placed advertisements in metropolitan newspapers here Sunday asking for signatures and $1 donations for a message backing Miss Bryant's stand against homosexual rights.

"What she has stood for has not been fairly represented," Wise said Sunday. "We feel her right to speak has been very much violated."

The catalyst for the advertisements, Wise said, was a decision by the National Broadcasting Co. to not invite Miss Bryant to participate in the Orange Bowl parade Jan. 2, prior to the football game between Oklahoma and Arkansas.

NBC spokesmen said the network wished to avoid possible demonstrations.

"She has paid a tremendous price for her stand," Wise said. "We are asking sponsors of the Orange Bowl parade if they concur in NBC's action."

Miss Bryant is a former Miss Oklahoma and an inductee of the Oklahoma Hall of Fame. She led a recent campaign in Dade County, Fla., to overturn an ordinance prohibiting discrimination against homosexuals.

Along with her husband, Bob Greene, Miss Bryant has toured the country amid increasing controversy in a campaign opposing homosexual rights.

Wise said he has seen television news film showing Miss Bryant being struck in the face with a cream pie, and has heard her made the subject of jokes on national television programs.

"We just felt like it was our duty, that our opinion was that of the majority," Wise said of the signature collection effort.

The advertisements note that Miss Bryant has been selected the most admired woman in the world by readers of Good Housekeeping magazine.

"Anita exemplifies the faith and convictions of many of us," the ad purchased by Wise and Jones reads. "Let's tell the world and the media that we stand with her and believe in her right to have convictions and the right to differ without media harassment."

Wise said he has already heard from "an awful lot of people" about the ad, and said he was "astounded by the response throughout the state."

many signatures and donations had already been received. The $1 donation is to cover the cost of a "mail-a-gram," publicity and to "bring Anita to Oklahoma to let the nation know where we stand," according to the advertisement.

Three escape jail

RUSK, Texas (AP) — Texas law enforcement agencies searched Sunday night for three men who escaped from the Cherokee County jail in Rusk.

A Department of Public Safety spokesman said the men overpowered a guard with a homemade weapon and fled on foot.

A sheriff's deputy identified the men as Aubrey Lee Abbott, 35, Billy Carl McGowan, 22, and John Claude Earwood, 18.

The deputy said Abbott had been jailed in connection with a jewelry store robbery in Cherokee County and the other two men were held on out-of-state burglary warrants.

231 post offices set to close

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eagle City, Okla., may not be such a high flier soon.

Such towns as Eagle City may be without their money-losing post offices shortly as result of regulations taking effect today. The new rules allow the Postal Service to close offices again after a moratorium that had been in effect since July 1, 1976.

The Eagle City Post Office serves 14 customers. Last year it took in $708, but cost $11,972 to operate. The American public made up the difference through their postal rates and income taxes.

This rural post office is one of thousands that are losing money. The Postal Service has been eyeing them for years, but rural congressmen have pressured the agency to keep the facilities open, leading to the 17-month moratorium on closings.

Under a law passed by Congress, the Postal Service cannot close a rural office merely because it is losing money. The law mandates that a list of procedures be met before any office is closed and that service as good or better be maintained afterward.

In the case of Eagle City, the Postal Service previously found it could keep the current level of service without an office in the town. "All customers are on the present line of travel of a rural route and can be served at virtually no additional cost," a report this year to the Postal Service's ruling board said.

The Eagle City facility was one of 231 scheduled for closing before the moratorium was imposed. The Postal Service had said the annual savings from those closings would be $2.3 million.

Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar has repeatedly said there would be "no wholesale closing" of post offices and that each closing would be considered separately.

In the new regulations, the Postal Service has guaranteed that local residents will have a chance to register their views before any action. In addition, appeals on any closing decision will be allowed before the Postal Rate Commission, a separate agency.

The process is expected to take four to eight months before any office can be closed.

The Postal Service will allow residents to keep the community mailing address when a post office is closed. Thus, mail will still be addressed to such places as Smile, Ky.; Chicken, Alaska; and Zap, N.D., even if those towns no longer have their own post offices.

This was done because of complaints that a town loses its identity when its post office closes.

One Postal Service staff study found that $490 million could be saved by closing 17,000 of the nation's 30,000 post offices without hurting service. This compares to a postal deficit of $662 million in the last fiscal year.

President forgives kidnappers

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Chanting "Death to the kidnappers..." 50,000 Greek Cypriots jammed Freedom Square in downtown Nicosia today to demonstrate support for President Spyros Kyprianou following the release of his son by right-wing extremists.

The president repeated he has "forgiven" the kidnappers of his 19-year-old son Achilles. "For those who have repented, there is still a place among us. For those who have not there will be punishment," he said.

Schools, shops and offices were closed for three hours during the rally. It was the largest demonstration seen in Nicosia since the late Archbishop Makarios, Kyprianou's predecessor, returned to Cyprus after five months in exile following the 1974 coup.

Achilleas Kyprianou, who was freed at dawn Sunday, stood with his father, mother and 17-year-old brother Marcos on the speakers' platform. The brothers wore uniforms of the National Guard, the Greek Cypriot army in which Achilles is a second lieutenant.

Released after the president promised not to punish the kidnappers, young Kyprianou reported that he was kept blindfolded in a chilly underground hole that was 6 feet long and 6 feet wide but only 19 inches high.

The youth was kidnapped last Wednesday from outside a commando training camp in the Troodos mountains southwest of Nicosia. The kidnappers, who were believed to be members of the EOKA-B underground, demanded amnesty for all political offenders.

"At the beginning, I was almost sure they would execute me," young Kyprianou told a news conference. "and I asked them, as a reserve officer of commando forces, to be executed... with open eyes and my hands untied."

He said they did not reply. Kyprianou said he was treated better than he expected, but "conditions of my captivity were rather bad."

Jet plunges into sea

FUNCHAL, Madeira (AP) — Rescuers searched Atlantic waters with dwindling hope today for 17 persons missing in the crash of a chartered Swiss jetliner off this resort island.

Nineteen persons were killed and 21 survived when the plane, carrying tourists on a Christmas vacation trip, plunged into the sea on Sunday.

The charter operator said 56 of the 57 persons aboard were Swiss and one was a Portuguese woman just married to a Swiss.

The twin-engine Caravelle jet from Zurich and Geneva, bound for Santa Caterina Airport here, crashed about six miles off the beach at the village of Porto Novo. Witnesses said the plane stayed aloft about five minutes.

The twin-engine Caravelle jet from Zurich and Geneva, bound for Santa Caterina Airport here, crashed about six miles off the beach at the village of Porto Novo. Witnesses said the plane stayed aloft about five minutes.

Swiss investigators were flying to Madeira to investigate the crash. There was no immediate indication of the cause.

Hospital officials in Funchal, the island capital, reported the survivors in generally satisfactory condition. The plane's pilot and two of the other four crew members were among those rescued.

"It was very cold and the rescue took too long — 2 1/2 hours in the sea," said Yolande Thierrin, who came through the crash alive with her two children and later was reunited with her survivor husband at the hospital.

Robbers hit hotel boxes

NEW YORK (AP) — Police say five men entered the ritzy Hotel Carlyle early today and handcuffed several people, but fled after ripping open less than a dozen of the safe deposit boxes they had come to rob.

It was not known how much loot they got. Police theorized that the robbers, described as five white men, fled when they heard a broadcast over their police radio that a patrol car was headed for 76th Street and Madison Avenue to check out a burglar alarm.

Actually, the alarm was coming from a building across the street from the hotel. There were no injuries, police said.

The Portuguese survivor, Maria Luciana Oliveira Pult, was on her honeymoon. She said after the pilot announced they were about to land, she heard a strange noise in the wings.

"Suddenly I felt the plane hit something and the roof split open," she continued. "Someone handed me a lifebelt. I asked for another for my husband and it was passed over."

The judge said he ordered the new trial because of "numerous improprieties" by the prosecution in a 13-week trial.

The government "prevented the defense from preparing for the trial effectively and presented improper suggestions of fact and law to the jury," the judge said.

The nurses, Leonora Perez, 33, of Ann Arbor, and Filipina Narciso, 31, of Ypsilanti, were convicted July 13 on charges of poisoning three patients in connection with a string of mysterious breathing failures at the Ann Arbor Veterans Administration hospital in the summer of 1975.

Names in the news

CHOLAME, Calif. (AP) — This tiny community of five residents has a $15,000 memorial to actor James Dean, killed nearby in an auto accident 22 years ago.

The memorial, erected around a tree a mile down the highway from where Dean died Sept. 30, 1955, was built by a wealthy Japanese businessman, Seta Ohnishi, who said he was an admirer of Dean.

Dean was 24 and had made three films — "East of Eden," "Rebel without a Cause" and "Giant" — when he was killed while going to an auto race.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Hubert Humphrey will spend his first Christmas in more than 20 years away from his Waverly, Minn., home, and his spirits are as high as ever, his aides and friends say.

Humphrey's top aide, David Gartner, said the 66-year-old senator, who has inoperable cancer, and his wife, Muriel, had considered going to Waverly or to Florida for Christmas but, for now at least, have decided to spend a quiet holiday in their Washington apartment.

"He's all settled in here," Gartner said. "The weather back there is kind of bad and he feels comfortable right where he is. There's no problem with his going places as far as his health is concerned. It has nothing to do with his physical well being."

DETROIT (AP) — It was a baggage mixup to end all baggage mixups — $9 million in registered securities and cash was missing.

The FBI mobilized agents in three cities Sunday to find the loot, missing during a flight from New York to Chicago.

Fire guts four black churches

WASHINGTON, Ga. (AP) — Three white teen-agers are being held in connection with fires that broke out within minutes of each other and gutted four black churches in rural east Georgia.

The wooden frame churches were unoccupied and there were no injuries in the blazes Sunday night.

The fires were all within 20 miles and all in the same direction. Wilkes County Sheriff Cecil Moore said "They started from the east out of Lincoln County and went west into Wilkes County."

Moore said there has been no trouble between blacks and whites in the area.

Albert Rucker, a deacon of the Mulberry Baptist Church, said that the burning of his and three other churches had nothing to do with race.

"It had none whatsoever to do with that," he said. "It's the same reason other things happen in the world. There was just no point in it."

The Georgia Bureau of Investigation and state fire marshal's office reportedly were investigating.

The suspects, unidentified because they are juveniles, were all about 16 years old, Moore said. All are from Lincoln County and were arrested there.

Steelmakers hike price

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The nation's ninth-largest steelmaker says it will raise its prices early next year, and it may be only a matter of time before other producers follow suit.

Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel said Sunday it will raise prices on flat-rolled and galvanized sheet steel products an average of 7 percent effective Jan. 3.

The affected products are used in the automobile and appliance industries, and price increases generally filter down to consumers.

"No steel producer in the free world can afford to ignore the inadequate profitability for sheet products emerging during recent years," President Dennis J. Carney said in a statement accompanying Wheeling-Pittsburgh's price announcement.

The White House, which traditionally has opposed steel price increases, declined comment.

President Carter has endorsed a plan to aid the ailing steel industry. His plan would cut import competition and permit domestic producers to raise prices to meet rising costs.

Other steel producers also declined comment. Some, including U.S. Steel, the nation's No. 1 steel company, have indicated higher prices are needed.

The industry raised prices on flat-rolled products in May by an average of 6 percent.

Steelmakers hike price

CHICAGO (AP) — Cyril Ritchard, whose stage career spanned six decades but who is most remembered for his television portrayal of Captain Hook in the musical version of "Peter Pan," will be buried Wednesday beside his wife, actress Madge Elliott.

Ritchard, whose 79th birthday was Dec. 1, died early Sunday of heart failure at Northwestern Memorial Hospital. He had been in a coma since Nov. 25, when he collapsed on stage during a performance of "Side by Side by Sondheim."

His foster son, David Bean of Chicago, said Ritchard would be buried in a private service at Ridgefield, Conn., where he maintained one of his homes.

The Australian-born actor was especially noted in the United States for three Broadway performances — as the delightfully devilish Captain Hook in "Peter Pan" in 1954, in Gore Vidal's "Visit to a Small Planet" in 1957, and in the musical "The Roar of the Greasepaint, the Smell of the Crowd" in 1965.

It was his role as Hook, with Mary Martin as Peter Pan, that brought Ritchard his greatest fame in the United States.

Born Cyril Trimmell-Ritchard in Sydney, Australia, in 1896, he began medical studies at Sydney University but dropped out to go into the theater. He made his stage debut in 1917 as a chorus boy in "A Waltz Dream." He made debuts in New York and London in 1925.

Ritchard married Miss Elliott in 1935 after what he once called "a whirlwind courtship of 15 years."

Beginning in the 1920s the couple reeled off a series of successes on the London stage that prompted Noel Coward to dub them "the musical Lunts." They reigned as stars of English musical comedy until her death in 1955.

Farmers gather in Lubbock

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — The mayor of Lubbock was to meet with representatives of the American Agriculture movement today to find out what striking farmers want from him.

A source within the movement said his group would put "as many tractors as we can lay our hands on" into the city on Tuesday as the kickoff to what he called phase two of farmer demonstrations in support of a national strike.

Texas farmers have used tractors as symbols of their quest for parity, a term meaning a return to prices at least equal to the costs of producing their products. Most demonstrations have taken the form of tractor caravans, parades, or "park-ins."

Some 250 farmers parked their vehicles at Lubbock's biggest shopping center Saturday in a peaceful protest that lasted nine hours. American Agriculture representatives said that demonstration was "spontaneous."

Mayor Roy Bass said he had been contacted by the farmers group and agreed to the meeting today.

"We want to see what the situation is... what they really want," Bass said.

What they want, the source said, is for Bass to declare Tuesday American Agriculture day.

Told of that, Bass said: "I don't feel like a proclamation that would encourage people to shut down their businesses as a mayor. My opinion is that the people around here are about 106 percent in support of the farmers already. My hope would be that they wouldn't do anything to alienate that support they already have."

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
A cold front was flying through Texas today, bringing cooler temperatures and blowing dust.
During the early morning hours, the front was located on a line from near Childress to Lubbock to Guadalupe Pass.
At 5 a.m. today, temperatures ranged from 43 at Amarillo and El Paso to 57 at Beaumont-Port Arthur, 65 at Corpus Christi, 47 at Del Rio, 46 at Midland-Odessa, 49 at Wichita Falls, 48 at Dallas-Fort Worth and Wink and up to a balmy 70 at Brownsville at the extreme southern tip of Texas.
Skies over the state were clear with the exception of some low clouds over Corpus Christi and fog along the Gulf Coast.
It will be cooler and windy over much of the west and north sections of the state by tonight, according to the forecast. Blowing dust will blanket Texas by tonight.
Highs will range from near 50 in the Panhandle to the low 80s in the south, while the remainder of the state will experience 60s and 70s.

National weather

By The Associated Press
Urban flooding, scattered power outages and slippery roads have socked the East, with lighter weather patterns drifting over the Western part of the nation today.
Flash flood watches were up in Washington, D.C., parts of Maryland and Delaware, with travelers advisories issued for the mountains of Pennsylvania and areas of New York.
About 2,500 Northern and Central New Jersey residents were without power early today as freezing rain, sleet and snow brought down power lines and trees.
"We've got isolated cases all over the system because of trees falling down and things getting wet," said a spokesman for the Central Power & Light Co., one of the companies involved.
Continuous heavy rain pelted much of Maryland over the weekend, causing the evacuation of nearly 60 persons in Baltimore and flooding of low-lying roads. More than three inches fell on Baltimore in a 24-hour period, ending at 11:30 p.m. Sunday. The weather service said.
Baltimore City police officers began routing families in a three block area of South Poca Street Sunday morning because of flooding. The families were expected to return to their homes today.
Rains and high winds hit much of Delaware Sunday. There were no reports of injuries or major damage, but "substantial" beach erosion was reported by the Delaware Department of Natural Resources.
A broad low pressure system from Canada across the Great Lakes kept the skies cloudy Sunday over Ohio, Michigan, Iowa, Indiana most of Minnesota and wide areas of the Dakotas.

Advice

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter (I'll call her Beth) has been going steady with Rick since school resumed last fall. Beth is 15 and Rick is 17.

Rick's people are way out of our class financially. Today I received a telephone call from Rick's mother asking if Beth could go to Hawaii with their family over Christmas. Beth had never mentioned that she was invited, so I was shocked. I said I'd talk to my husband and we would let her know.

Beth is begging us to let her go. Her father says he doesn't like the idea because Rick has his parents wrapped around his little finger and seems to have no supervision whatsoever.

I don't want to insult Rick's parents, but I agree with my husband.

We trust Beth but think she is a bit too young to be in Hawaii with doubtful supervision.

How should this be handled?

DELICATE PROBLEM

DEAR DELICATE: Don't feel that you must justify your decision. Tell Rick's mother that you and your husband agree that Beth is too young for that type of vacation.

DEAR ABBY: I received a call from a family member today who suggested that we should all stop giving Christmas gifts—except to the children.

That's fine, but my husband and I have no children and this relative has four. In other words, she's telling me that we should buy her kids Christmas gifts, but we shouldn't expect any.

I think she should have said, "Please don't buy our kids anything this year because you don't have any kids." Or else, "If you buy our kids Christmas gifts, we will buy you and your husband something in return."

What do you think?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: I think all gifts should be voluntary. If one expects to be repaid in kind for a gift, it ceases to be a gift—it becomes a trade-off.

DEAR ABBY: Ever since I was a small child, I've loved dogs. I'm 23, and I still love dogs.

My parents never cared for dogs, so I was never allowed to have one. I always dreamed of the day when I was grown and on my own so I could have a dog.

I've been happily married for a year, and my husband and I are renting an apartment upstairs from my parents. Would you believe it, they still refuse to let me have a dog? They won't even discuss it. No dogs on their property, period!

I feel bitter and angry, but there's nothing I can do except move, which would be foolish because we never could find a place as nice as this for what we're paying.

It's been a year now and I've built up a terrible resentment against my parents. Am I wrong to feel this way? Or are they wrong to continue to treat me like a child?

BITTER IN N.J.

DEAR BITTER: It's your parents' property, and if they don't want dogs it's their privilege. Don't take it personally. If you can't accept their decision with grace and maturity, move.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "SWINGING IN CLEVELAND": Your suggested Eleventh Commandment, "Thou shall not get caught," is very catchy, but if you obey the first Ten, you won't need an Eleventh.

Getting married? No matter how little you have to spend or how unconventional your lifestyle, it can be lovely. Send for Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Enclose $1 and a long stamped (24 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Ask Dr. Lamb

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am on a low fat diet. Are peanut butter and soy bean oil harmful to a low fat diet? What is the difference between saturated and unsaturated fats? And oils? How do these oils figure in the manufacture of cholesterol?

DEAR READER — You are not on a low fat diet if you are eating much peanut butter or are using much of any oil, including soy bean oil. Low fat means restriction of all kinds of fat, saturated and unsaturated (both mono- and poly-unsaturated).

Fatty acids (which is what we are interested in) are chains of carbon atoms. When these contain all the hydrogen they can hold they are saturated. When there are spots on the chain that could hold more hydrogen it is unsaturated. If there is only one spot it is monounsaturated fatty acid, and if there is more than one spot it is a polyunsaturated fatty acid.

Many scientists believe the saturated fatty acids are more likely to cause the liver to form more cholesterol and relatively large fatty particles that are associated with a higher risk of heart and vascular disease, as compared to the unsaturated fats. Some scientists think the polyunsaturated fats may offer some protection, but the majority opinion is that any more than 10 percent of your total calories as polyunsaturated fat is not useful.

The fat in foods contains different amounts of saturated, monounsaturated and polyunsaturated fats. This includes the oils, such as soy bean oil, which is 15 percent saturated fat, 20 percent monounsaturated fatty acid, and 52 percent polyunsaturated fatty acids. The rest of its weight is from glycerol and unidentified fatty acids.

Clovis-waistless; Blass-femininity

By BERNADINE MORRIS
(c) 1977 N.Y. Times
News Service

NEW YORK — The music was rhythmic, but reasonably gentle as background music for fashion shows generally goes. The dresses were loose, sweet and gentle, too, and it was fascinating to mark the difference in style from the first show Clovis Ruffin presented exactly five years ago. Then the clothes were based on T-shirts and fairly hugged the body. Now, they almost ignored it. If there was a waistline, it was set around hipbone level and stood away from it. The colors were mild, the fabrics soft, and the dresses flowed across the black-painted stage of the Edison Theater were "Oh! Calcutta" is performed at other hours.

Suddenly the lights dimmed. The mood shifted. A girl in black pants, a black plastic jacket and chains darted across the stage. A bare-chested man in jeans grabbed the chains and threw her to the floor. A matron pulled a whip from a plastic grocery bag and proceeded to snap it.

The knowledgeable members of the audience recognized the matron as Harriet Wright, the designer's mother, who always attends his shows.

After the leather-and-chains interlude came waltz music, and even gentler dresses. Flowers this time on floating voile dresses. Some loose jersey dresses in pale tones. It's the collection called "Clovis," slightly higher priced than his usual designs, starting at around $100. And as far from tough chic as it is from leather jackets and whips.

"It's the end of punk rock," the designer said after the show, referring to the startling vignette in the middle. "My mother exorcized it."

The Ruffin show introduced a packed schedule of spring fashion openings in New York. It was followed by new collections from Bill Blass and Pauline Trigere, and both suggested that, compared with the Paris ready-to-wear showings last week, Seventh Avenue is a class operation.

The Blass collection is undoubtedly one of the best he's ever shown. Absolutely modern and contemporary, it emphasizes thin silks and some wools that are so light they seem airborne. They float around the body in such combinations as soft skirt, matching coat, blouse and vest, all of which can be worn together without a trace of bulk. This is a new kind of daytime dressing, layering if you will, that is quite different from anything that has gone before.

Tiny lace borders, ruffled necklines, gathered waists and shoulders contribute to the look of supreme femininity. Because of the basic simplicity and fluidity of the clothes, they avoid the pitfall of looking too gussied up.

For evening, the Blass suggestions include georgette in myriad pale colors including a medley of pastels in the same style, flower-printed cotton voiles and some bouffant taffeta dresses, often in black and worn with big hooded matching cloaks. The collection is a treat, from beginning to end.

Blouses and skirts are an appropriate and attractive way to dress for spring, Pauline Trigere told an audience that included personal friends as well as store buyers.

They listened raptly as Miss Trigere explained that sometimes the blouses and skirts were sheltered by a jacket or coat, but it wasn't obligatory to wear them all the time. All women appreciate such hints, especially when they make life easier.

Miss Trigere is determined to make life, or at least dressing, easy. She leans to basic colors, such as navy, sand or dove gray.

She provides a coat, or occasionally a cape, that will go with a blouse and skirt, a print dress and a solid color one as if it were made for each of them.

She adds big, puffy sleeves to the blouses so they look important when they stand on their own. Sometimes she repeats

Plums and port suit each other. Poach the fruit in water, sugar and port with a vanilla bean. The result will be a lovely dessert.

Super sweater coat matches pull-down hat.

Crochet a coat

By Judy Love

Can you sit in front of TV and do nothing but watch? Of course not, if you're a needleworker. Put your looking time to work? In a few short TV sessions, you'll have a lot to show for your time: stop, look and crochet. Here's a wonderful sweater-wrap that's fun to do and handsomely warm to wear. The look is right in fashion today — soft, a bit bulky, with a flattering cardigan neckline you can turn up to frame your face or tie it closed with a long knitted scarf. There's a dandy little pull-down matching hat you can crochet, too.

Work this smart, warm cover-coat in your favorite shades of beige and browns or choose a dark tone for the main color, then two contrasting shades for the second colors, A and B. This cold weather winner requires a 7-00 mm (k) crochet hook, and you'll use Bernat Danish bulky and Berella Germantown yarns. You'll find the yarn in the needlework sections of department stores or yarn shops in your area.

The design is a simple chest for the body, and the smart little pattern is easily worked according to the clear instructions.

Dorsett reaches 1000 in 'Poke win

Sports

12 Monday, December 19, 1977 PAMPA NEWS

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) — Craig Morton's early exit Sunday put the Denver Broncos in the unenviable position of trying to beat the Dallas Cowboys with two second-year quarterbacks.

winningest teams with 12-2 records.

The American Conference Western Division champion Broncos will meet Pittsburgh Saturday while the National Conference Eastern Division champion Cowboys host the wild card Chicago Bears Monday.

Dorsett gained 50 yards to earn his 1,000-yard badge by seven steps. He was only the eighth rookie ever to accomplish the feat — something that escaped such great runners as Payton, O.J. Simpson, Jim Brown and Gale Sayers.

"When Craig went out, it took luster off the game," said Landry. "But I don't blame him (Denver Coach Red Miller). I would have done the same thing. The whole season is now."

Morton said of his hip, "It's okay. I wasn't going to play much today. I didn't want to take any risks on hurting it worse. I aggravated it just a little bit right off the bat."

close to being the leading scorer in the NFL... I think I was thinking more in those terms when I should have been thinking about kicking."

Bears, Colts eke into playoffs

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer
First Bob Thomas kicked Chicago into the playoffs. Then a couple of coaches kicked a bit about the way Baltimore got there.

Baltimore to win the American Conference's East Division title. For more than two periods, things looked fine for them, because New England led the Colts 21-3.

Linebacker Sam Hunt recovered what appeared to be Jones' fumble at the New England 6-yard line — but the play had already been blown dead, the Colts kept possession and, moments later, Don McCauley scored the winning TD from the three with less than three minutes to go.

Dorsett, the collegiate football all-time leading ground gainer at Pittsburgh, said, "If I hadn't surpassed 1,000 yards it wouldn't be something I could be proud about, considering that we are winning... but late in the third quarter it did pass through my mind."

Dallas charged to a quick touchdown after the opening kickoff on a 22-yard pass to Preston Pearson from Staubach, who had a banner day of 15 for 20 for 160 yards.

Dorsett said he hadn't thought much about a matchup between himself and Payton.

Thomas' heart-stopping field goal, Bert Jones' extraordinary passing (and his bit of good fortune on a controversial "quick" whistle) and Billy Johnson's dazzling speed and moves filled in the final division titles and wild cards Sunday After 14 weeks, 28 teams have become eligible for the start of the National Football League's second season, the road toward Super Bowl XVII Jan. 15 in the Louisiana Superdome.

Then Jones struck for three touchdown passes and the Colts, aided by what some felt was a questionable call, roared to a 30-24 victory that kayoed the Dolphins' playoff plans.

The quarterback was in the grasp of the tackler and I blew the whistle," said referee Fred Silva. "The ball came out. That's it."

Dallas triumphed against Denver. Each team finished at 12-2.

Fourth-ranked Arkansas, the last of the Southwest Conference unbeaten, rejoins the crusade against non-conference basketball opponents tonight after a week of idleness then faces a big test against tough Kansas Thursday night.

Dorsett thought much about a matchup between himself and Payton.

On Saturday, Washington beat Los Angeles, the NFC West champion, 17-14 and kept alive its hopes of a playoff berth. On Sunday, Thomas' 28-yard field goal, kicked in a brutal freezing rainstorm with nine seconds left in sudden-death overtime, gave Chicago a 12-9 victory over the New York Giants, gave the Bears the National Conference wild card and kicked the Redskins' hopes down the drain.

Thomas very nearly was the goat instead of the hero. In the first period he missed a field goal when the ball hit an upright. In the fourth quarter, after rookie Robin Earl ran four yards for the game's only touchdown, Thomas' extra-point try was batted down. And with less than 2 1/2 minutes gone in the overtime he was wide on a field goal attempt that could have decided matters.

The victory put the Bears in the playoffs for the first time since they beat the Giants in the 1963 NFL championship game.

Steve Bartkowski threw for two TDs and Haskel Stanback ran for two against the Saints. Meanwhile, Atlanta wound up allowing only 129 points all season, four fewer than the 14-game record set by the 1969 Minnesota Vikings.

Texas Tech and Texas A&M were ambushed out of the unbeaten ranks over the weekend in tournaments down South.

On Tuesday, SMU hosts Ohio University while Texas entertains Coach Abe Lemons' old team, Oklahoma City.

The Bears had to settle for the wild card because Minnesota clinched the NFC Central Division title Saturday night with a 30-21 victory over Detroit.

Bert Jones showed what a great quarterback he is," Baltimore Coach Ted Marchibroda said after Jones' 19-for-30 passing game, his 340 yards gained and his touchdown passes covering 14, 78 and 12 yards — but a few folks thought "a lucky quarterback" might have been more appropriate.

Running back Sidney Thornton scored from a yard out and Roy Gerela kicked a 27-yard field goal in the third period to give Pittsburgh the victory over San Diego.

Cornerback Willie Buchanan intercepted a pair of passes, setting up a field goal with one of them and running 29 yards for a TD with the other in Green Bay's victory over the 49ers.

Other Pampans placing were: Rusty Rice, second, (71-pound elementary); David Burns, second, (78-pound junior high); and Ted Cain, fourth, (165-pound junior high).

High school grapplers, who decided against a trip to Carrollton's R.L. Turner Tournament because of injuries, will return to action Jan. 3 with a dual meet against Boys Ranch.

Lawyer will run for 1982 office with $1 million

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — James Baker III, who directed Gerald Ford's presidential campaign last year, said Sunday he has made up his mind to run for attorney general if he can do it "right" — which means with plenty of money to campaign.

Democrats Price Daniel Jr., former House speaker, and Mark White, former secretary of state, already are campaigning for the job. Baker told interviewers on the weekly television show "Capital Eye" that a "credible statewide race" would require at least $1 million.

To run, said Baker, a Republican lawyer from Houston, he would need approximately $250,000 in pledges. He said he has about $200,000.

"I'm getting close," he said, "to making a decision." Asked if he had heard one GOP theory that Baker was being "prepped" for the 1982 governor's race, Baker said he had not.

"I have heard some people say," added Baker, "that they think I should have perhaps thought about running for governor, maybe friends, people like that. But the truth of the matter is, I want to be attorney general. I think that's an extremely important office, and I think I'm uniquely qualified to be attorney general."

Little things are important

Small in size, but performing an important function when needed... what would we do without razor blades?

Classified Ads are like that too! In fact, they do more things for more people at lower cost than any other form of advertising!

Buying... selling... hiring... finding... renting... or just telling, a small, low-cost Classified Ad will do a big, important job for you.

Karen Blaker Ph.D.

Back to work

DEAR DR. BLAKER — It has been 13 years since I gave up a very satisfying job as a social worker to raise my three children. While I enjoyed being a mother and housewife, I always wanted to return to my career. Three months ago I finally took the plunge and now I am absolutely miserable. I have terrible headaches and trouble catching my breath.

My husband and children do help me around the house but that doesn't help relieve the pressure. My husband tells me to quit, that I was happier when I was at home. I want to keep my job but I can't stand the stress.

DEAR READER — It sounds as though you are ready to quit your job. Clearly that would give you immediate relief from the pressure. But don't do it — not yet. Your career was rewarding 13 years ago and it still might prove to be. If you quit now without understanding the reasons why you are upset, you may handicap yourself with the feeling that you are no longer employable. Change itself induces stress and you certainly have made a dramatic change in your life in the last three months. Why not give yourself six more months before deciding how well you have adjusted?

In the meantime, these suggestions may help. 1. Have a physical examination. Find out what is causing your headaches and shortness of breath. Don't assume it's just stress. There is a direct but complex relationship between stress and many serious diseases. One doctor who treats people undergoing life crises suggests monthly checkups for a year following a stressful change in lifestyle.

2. Hold a family meeting. Explain to your husband and children that you need a lighter load. Accept their help. 3. Abandon the role of supervisor. As a full-time housewife, you probably made certain that everything got done. But now you should try to overlook — not oversee — household chores. 4. Act like you are definitely going to continue working — despite your inner doubts. This might help your family accept your new career and stop any efforts to get you "back home."

5. Identify specific stresses in your life. Break them down into resolvable — or at least manageable — components. For example: If you are troubled because you are behind in social work literature, spend one evening a week in the library for the next two months. If you arrive home too late to have dinner ready on time, teach the children to cook — or go out for hamburgers once a week. If you are too tired to help your children with their homework, ask your husband to get progress reports from their teachers. Maybe they don't need help.

Remember that it's exciting — as well as stressful — to resume a career. Remember too that you are now preparing your own future for the time your children leave home to build their own lives.

Write to Dr. Blaker in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies, but questions of general interest will be discussed in future columns. — NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

By DENNIS REDMONT
Associated Press Writer
SIRACUSA, Italy (AP) — Terrorists soon may use nuclear blackmail, poison water supplies or take over power plants unless new ways are found to combat such acts, American participants warned at a world crime seminar that ended Saturday.

"Terrorist targets are now going to change," said Ved P. Nanda, director of international legal studies at the University of Denver. "Nuclear blackmail, poisoning of water works, takeover of energy and power sources — these are the things that no one knows how to deal with."

"It's no longer a question of if, but a question of when," he told the conference, entitled "Perspectives on Terrorism."

Sheriff to pay $2,500 suit

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A youth who sued Sheriff Raymond Frank and jail officials for $400,000 after he was allegedly gang-raped in jail has settled his suit for $2,500, the Austin American-Statesman reported Saturday.

The youth, identified only as "John Doe," was 17 when the alleged attack by four men occurred in September 1976.

He filed suit, contending that officials were negligent in putting him in the tank with the men and in not responding to his cries for help.

Frank's lawyer, Bob Gibbins, said the sheriff would pay the $2,500 out of his own pocket — not county funds.

"We felt that there was no liability on the part of the sheriff," said Gibbins.

He said it was a "nuisance-value type settlement" to avoid spending more money defending the charges.

It was held at the International Institute of Higher Studies in Criminal Sciences in this Sicilian city.

Cherif Bassiouni, a law professor at Chicago's De Paul University who advises the State Department on international crime, drew up a list of the most dramatic and harmful actions terrorists could take.

He pointed to targets of "high vulnerability, not adequately protected and with a high emotional and terror-inspiring effect."

Bassiouni mentioned water pump and filtration systems, nuclear reactors, offshore drilling platforms, fuel storage facilities, dams and government headquarters. He also listed the theft or use of nuclear weapons.

Most of the experts were at a loss to outline successful countermeasures against politically motivated criminals. One participant acknowledged: "One man's terrorism is another man's heroism."

Participants from Western countries rejected a suggestion that the death penalty automatically be imposed for terrorist crimes.

"It tends to make martyrs of the executed persons and this brings sympathy to the deceased and to his or her government," Bassiouni said.

Yet attempts at rehabilitation are doomed since most terrorists are anarchists who want to destroy the society they are fighting, the experts said, and the effectiveness of imprisonment is limited.

Participants noted a surge of interest in finding ways to combat terrorism in the Soviet Union and other East European nations who are beginning to admit their own problems with terrorists.
