His "Good Earth" Is Precious To The Ukrainian Peasant

By PAUL ROSS
NEA Service Staff Writer

The Ukrainian peasant is a true individualist. He sets his house in his own way on his land—preferably on a hill—has an orchard, grows crops and domestic animals on his fertile black acres.

There is only one thing which the Ukrainian peasant acknowledges as qualification to own the all-important land—working on and for it. Once he has it, he regards himself as complete master of it. Although for three centuries peasants in Great Russia were limited in their right to dispose of land, Ukrainian peasants lived in a privately-owned homestead which they disposed of as they saw fit. And Communist Russia found it had caught a Tartar when it decreed collectivization of Ukrainian farms.

His wife is his complete equal, not his subordinate. So are his children, when they have grown, for by custom he cannot dispose of the things they produce without their consent.

In the household the wife practices domestic arts such as embroidery. The whole world knows her beautifully worked garments and linens as "Russian" but they are pure Ukrainian.

The man works in metal, leather, stone and wood, chiefly in the latter. He carves ordinary household things into art objects, and even decorates his butter-churn and plow.

Both man and wife weave "kilims" or carpets. They raise the wool, spin it, color it with natural dyes and weave it on a loom. The kilim is beautiful, patterned, and which many regard as the equal of Persian carpets.

Holidays and weddings provide relaxations. The peasants sing the old songs which have come down from ancient times.

Along with these old songs go old melodies and old dances. The famous squatting dance step which is regarded as so typically Russian is really a Ukrainian Cossack step. To the casual onlooker the Ukrainian peasant may appear stolid. But underneath he is a deep observer of life and his observations break out in pithy humor. Typical peasant characterization: "Oh, mother, how people praise us," says the conceited girl. "What people?" answers the mother. "Well, you praise me and I praise you," responds the girl.

Though the Ukrainian peasant is an individualist, he long ago learned to cooperate. Today, he sets up his cooperatives to market his goods, buy his wares, handle his money.

As evening drifts over the Carpathian Mountains, a Ukrainian farmer summons his sheep to the fold by blowing on the "trembita," a long horn also used for music in folk-dancing. At left, a Hucul (among the purest-blooded of Ukrainians) and his daughter ride near their Polish-Carpathian home. The tomahawk, moccasins and Navajo-like homespun fabrics are remarkably suggestive of American Indian crafts.

And, though he lives close to the land, he is forever fired by the old dream of a united Ukraine. He has heard countless times and in numbingly clear words of how Ukraine was once a flourishing nation with its own commerce, industries agriculture and arts.

He knows how the country was overrun many times by Asiatics until it lost its strength fighting them and was conquered by Poland. How the Cossacks came along as knights errant to defend the people, how they set up a free government, how the Ukraine was again conquered by Russia. How the Czars tried to destroy all Ukrainian culture and identity, how the people struggled by devious ways to preserve it, how finally after the World War a united Ukraine was proclaimed, only to fall once more. He has a great longing to see his beloved, severed country made whole again.

To do this, Ukrainian nationalists are busily engaged everywhere on earth. Abroad, they publish an extensive press, they organize emigre Ukraine, they agitate for freedom.

But in Rumania, Poland and Soviet Russia—the three countries which among them now divide the Ukrainian "nation"—they are working in different ways.

V. S. Dushnyck, editor of a Ukrainian national publication, told the writer of how in Soviet Russia the Ukrainian nationalists have organized a secret army among peasants, young people and men who got their training in the Red army. When the time comes they will rise against the Soviet.

In Poland and Rumania they are also organized, but more or less openly. As sports bodies, as cultural groups, even in cooperatives, they are preparing for "the day" and keeping alive the nationalist spirit.

These nationalists make no bones about it. If it is necessary to help destroy the governments under which they live in order to build a united Ukraine, the Ukrainians will do it.

motor industry. Year after year Ford turned out better and better cars at a lower and lower price—due to his increased efficiency in production. Other motor makers had to follow suit. Wages were increased; investors received bigger dividends; and consumers had better cars and more money to spend on other goods and services.

Taxes Sopping Up Economies.

This is a crude pattern of the progress in all industries that has given the United States the greatest materials wealth of any civilization in any age. Now, what is happening? The savings in the cost of production are no longer being passed along to the consumer. Instead, they are being sopped up by taxes. Some of the President's "Princes of Privilege" would add that they are being absorbed by labor, too, especially where efficiency is being hamstrung by labor rules. Hence, retail prices now tend to go up even with producing costs going down. The politicians are spending so much money that they are sponging up the benefits of increased productive efficiency which formerly went to the consumer.

What does this mean? Unless this trend is stopped, it means that the American standard of living of September, 1929, or even of March, 1937, may represent the all-time high for the nation. Of course, certain individuals, certain companies, and certain investors will forge ahead as they always have. But the nation as a whole has already seen the peak of America's living standards—unless the political spenders and wasters are driven to cover. I may sound like an old-line republican when I say this—but it is just as true as day follows night.

Capitalism Sound System.

Capitalism is the soundest economic system the world has thus far had; but many of the things that have been done by some capitalists have been very bad. The capitalistic system is still sound and is still producing good profits. Moreover, profit margins should continue good this year. Consequently, after this latest European trouble clears away, stock prices and dividends should be considerably better. We all are learning as we are getting older. This even applies to congressmen!

Some of the smallest comets are much larger than our own earth.

Company G Reunion To Be Held In May

Following the custom established five years ago, men who served in Company G, 142 Infantry, 36th Division, will hold their annual reunion on the first Saturday in May at the American Legion building in Amarillo. The date of the reunion this year falls on May 6.

Major General John A. Hulen of Fort Worth and Captain T. D. Barton of San Antonio are expected to be special visitors at the reunion. Wright Armstrong of Denver is the present commander of the veterans association.

Company G was formed in Amarillo and had its early training at a place near that city.

Later the company with other units of the division was trained at the camp near Fort Worth. The place where Company G received its initial training near Amarillo is now the location of an orphanage.

The oldest extant Sanskrit play, "The Toy Cart," dates from the end of the second century.

These lower costs are particularly important in the baking, food, copper fabricating, tire, and similar businesses.

One particularly important industry which is experiencing excellent profit margins is steel. Many people felt that with the advance in costs of labor since 1929 the industry would have to operate at 60 per cent of capacity or better to show a profit. Fourth quarter reports of the big steel organizations show that they can still make money at a much lower rate of operations. Their prices, which marched smartly higher in 1936 and 1937, have come down only part way, while their material costs have dropped and their big new plants have cut the labor cost per ton of rolled steel.

Babson Says Industry More Efficient Than Ever Before Profit Margins Good

PALM BEACH, Fla., March 24.—Profit margins of many companies are very good. In view of the sharp increase in wages and taxes in recent years, many people will be astonished to discover how good profit margins are when first quarter reports are printed. This, of course, is not true of all companies. In some concerns, margins are about as low as they have ever been, but these are special situations. In this connection, readers may recall that one-third of all companies lost money even in 1929!

The reasons for improved profit margins are two-fold. First is the gain in industrial efficiency through the wider use of labor-saving machinery and processes. It is estimated that the output of goods for one man in one hour has jumped 12 per cent since the end of 1935. (It has gone up more than 50 per cent in 15 years!) Higher wages and union activities have spurred managements into combing every possibility where they could install a new machine or a new process to save on labor costs. Insofar as union activities and higher wages have caused this, the unions have only hurt their less efficient workers.

Raw Materials Cheap.

Second major reason for better profit margins is a lower cost for raw materials. The following figures show this clearly:

	2 Yrs. Ago	Today
Copper	$ .17	$ .11
Lead	0.075	0.048
Iron	23.25	20.60
Rubber	0.25	0.16
Wheat	1.37	0.75
Cotton	0.15	0.09

These lower costs are particularly important in the baking, food, copper fabricating, tire, and similar businesses.

Their prices, which marched smartly higher in 1936 and 1937, have come down only part way, while their material costs have dropped and their big new plants have cut the labor cost per ton of rolled steel.

Finished Prices Have Held. Finished prices of steel, motor cars, bread, shirts, etc., have been marked down 11 per cent according to the department of labor's index. Why, with the cost of making products less, have these finished prices not tilted downward more sharply? Well, one reason is that wage rates have absorbed some of the savings. Another reason is that taxes have galloped up to new all-time highs. Higher wage rates may represent an increase in national purchasing power; but higher taxes represent a dangerous trend. Taxes do not add to the nation's purchasing power or standard of living in the same proportion as do wages because most taxes are used for non-productive purposes.

Before business regulated—when there was free competition among industries—the saving in production costs was passed along to the consumer. A prime example of this principle is Henry Ford and the

All speculations about "the coming World War" eventually switch around to a discussion of the role to be played in it by Ukraine and the Ukrainians. Yet the average American knows little about the people of this now vital nation.

Here are some of the things to which Ukrainian nationalists point with great pride, sidelights on the spirit with which any conqueror would have to contend.

Yes, U. S. Foreign Policy Can Really Be Defined

EDITORS NOTE: This is the first of five special columns by Bruce Catton, Pampa News Service correspondent in Washington, dealing for the first time, just what U. S. foreign policy is today—and why.

By BRUCE CATTON
Pampa News Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The American ship of state sails through perilous seas these days—seas full of hidden rocks, treacherous currents and dense fogs.

For guidance, the ship's pilots have a body of doctrine known as American foreign policy. And because the course America takes in international affairs today is determined by principles which that policy is based on, every American ought to understand precisely what that policy is.

It can be defined easily enough, for it is not vague or indefinite, a mere matter of expediency or unwritten law. The definition which will be made in this and succeeding articles is based on a careful study of recent trends and developments within the state department.

Broadly speaking, American foreign policy today can be summed up as follows:

We stand for the maintenance of peace, renunciation of the use of force as an instrument of national policy, and the peaceful settlement of international disputes.

We stand for the strict observance of all treaties, and for the modification of treaties only by processes of orderly negotiation.

We stand for the removal of barriers to international trade and for the principle of equality of commercial opportunity and treatment.

We stand for the reduction of armaments.

And we stand for international co-operation to uphold these principles.

So much for the broad principles. What do they mean in actual practice?

COMPLETE ISOLATION IS OUT

The basic factor is that—as Secretary Hull sees it—today's crucial issue is whether international law and order shall prevail, or anarchy and brute force.

Because that issue is dominant, America cannot waive her rights or fail to protect her interests abroad—in such a situation as the one now prevailing in China, for instance—because to do so would be to encourage the disregard of law and order. That being true, America must be fully armed.

All of which means that America cannot be completely isolationist. The administration has no intention of "policing the world" and it insists upon retaining complete freedom of action; but a return to the era of international law and order implies a degree of international co-operation. That co-operation will not, the administration insists, lead to "involvements" and entanglements abroad but it must include efforts to restore peace and to rebuild the kind of international order in which enduring peace is possible.

Furthermore, the administration sees the widespread trend toward economic autarchy and self-sufficiency—with the innumerable trade barriers which that trend creates—as a fruitful source of the world's unrest. Hence the emphasis which it puts on Secretary Hull's trade agreements program.

This program, as a fundamental part of American foreign policy today, is, of course, primarily designed to increase the volume of our own foreign trade. But it is also designed to benefit the countries with which the agreements are negotiated. By leading to a general expansion of international trade, it is designed to raise world living standards.

WORLD TRADE A NECESSITY

The State Department's argument on that point goes like this: Without the economic security which a healthy movement of international trade tends to create, the world is not going to have a political stability. Without political stability there cannot be any permanently orderly or peaceful relations between nations. Consequently, one of our greatest contributions to recovery and world peace would be a contribution to the revival of world trade, and a removal of trade barriers.

But there is more to it than that. The alternative to seeking a revival of world trade and a restoration of the old era of international order is to turn our backs on the whole foreign scene and become as self-contained as possible. This, in the State Department view, would compel us to reorganize our entire social and economic structure. It would mean a lower living standard, lower wages, permanent and steadily-increasing unemployment problem.

The administration has rejected that solution, and its foreign policy today reflects that fact.

All that has been discussed so far:

Corpus Christi Pelicans Start Night Work As Fishing Drops Off

Special To The NEWS
CORPUS CHRISTI, March 24. (AP)—Fishing over at Port Aransas, commercial fishermen say, has been so bad in late weeks even the weary old pelicans have had to put in a few hours of night work to keep body and soul together. But the silver lining to this black cloud is a few trout and pompano and, with the tasty little pompano selling at 20 cents a pound, fishermen are becoming more optimistic and think everything will work out all right, even for the sad-looking pelicans.

All Corn Hybrid, Farm Expert Says

Special To The NEWS
COLLEGE STATION, March 24. (AP)—All corn, in a strict sense, is hybrid corn, says A. D. Jackson of the Agricultural Experiment Station at A. & M. College, in analyzing the adaptability of corn belt hybrids now being offered Texas farmers, to the climate and soil of southwest.

"The Texas station has made rather extensive tests of corn belt hybrid corns, but in no case have the fields been sufficiently high to justify the widespread planting of corn belt hybrids in the south. Texas the most productive hybrids have been about equal in yield to the best native varieties," he says.

Reviewing the tedious methods of producing hybrid, Jackson defines the word as "usually applied to the first generation hybrid of inbred strains, sometimes two, but in the case of field corn, usually four."

Corn belt hybrids planted in Texas, he explains, "have been characterized by loose, open shucks, excessive ear worm, and weevil damage and poorly filled, poorly-colored seed. This is not surprising for Texas farmers know, from long experience, that northern varieties are not adapted to Texas, and the corn-belt hybrids though more productive than ordinary corn-belt varieties have the same general characteristics. Hybrid corn for the south must be developed by utilizing inbred strains isolated from adapted southern varieties."

The question is frequently asked: Why has not Texas developed hybrid corn adapted to Texas conditions? It has. An extensive program with the most productive Texas varieties was initiated in 1927 under the direction of Dr. P. G. Mangelsdorf of the Texas experiment station and satisfactory hybrid combinations have now been found.

The identification of the best hybrid combinations is more difficult in Texas than in the corn-belt for Texas weather is more variable, Jackson says. Several hybrids which have given large increases in yield in one season have yielded much lower than ordinary varieties in other seasons. The best hybrids now available are producing 35 to 40 per cent higher than those of ordinary varieties and have given increases in yields in all tests in four different parts of the state over a period of eight or nine crop years. Seed of the better inbred strains is being increased so that commercial production of hybrid seed can begin in Texas in 1940. The first commercial hybrid seed adapted to Texas conditions will be available to farmers in 1941.

6 White Convicts Die In S. Carolina

COLUMBIA, S. C., March 24 (AP)—Six white convicts were executed at the state penitentiary early today for the slaying of J. Olin Sanders, the prison guard captain, in an escape attempt, Dec. 12, 1937.

The executions took just 48 minutes.

The youngest of the sextet, George Wingard, 21, of Columbia, was the first to go, at 6:31 a. m. He was followed in order by William B. Gentry, alias Woods, 25, Biloxi, Miss.; Roy Suttles, 29, Simpsonville; Herbert Moorman, 42, Detroit, Mich.; Clayton Crans, 29, Rochester, N. Y., and J. V. Bair, 29, Sumpter.

Bair took his seat in the chair at 7:15 a. m.

Shamrock To See Laubins' Indian Dance

Special To The NEWS
SHAMROCK, March 24.—"Old Buffalo Days" a highly colorful dance interpretation of Indian customs and events, will be presented by Reginald and Gladys Laubin at Clark auditorium Friday night, March 31, under school sponsorship.

The Laubins are recognized as the foremost exponents of American Indian lore and dances. John Martin, dance critic of the New York Times, invited the Laubins to open his course, "The Dance in the Social Scene," at the New York School Social Research in New York in the fall of 1936.

At the Century of Progress, Chicago, the Laubins were chosen to give the authentic Indian dances at the famous Colonial Village. They have danced at the Art Institute of Chicago five times. Dudley Crafts Watson, official lecturer for that famous institution, declares they have the finest Indian material and dance program and the most beautiful Indian costumes in America.

"Old Buffalo Days" is a program featuring the lore, music and dances of the Western Indians before the disappearance of the buffalo herds upon which they depended for their livelihood.

During the first nine months of 1938, a total of 1,344,171 new passenger cars were registered in the

SERIAL STORY

MRS. DOC BY TOM HORNER

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

The characters and situations in this story are wholly fictional.

Yesterday, Eric arrives to find Emily in her bedroom. He faces a dilemma since he wants to be fair to Alan, but he loves Emily. Then Dr. Farrell rushes in, asks what Emily has done to Alan!

CHAPTER XIV

"WHAT have you done to that boy?" Farrell repeated, as Emily did not answer. "There's nothing wrong -- he hasn't!" Fear shattered Emily's calm.

"Of course he hasn't done anything wrong," Farrell answered shortly. "He came to the hospital, went to the delivery room. Outwardly he was the same. But he's been hurt, terribly hurt, Emily. He can't hide that from me. He's been like my own son. I could see it in his eyes. Now, what is it?"

Emily told him briefly, covering in terse, clipped sentences Alan's refusal to meet Dr. Peterson, her own intention to get a divorce. When she had finished, Farrell slumped into a chair, sat with bowed shoulders, staring before him. No one spoke.

For a long time they sat there -- Emily, Eric and Farrell -- thinking and all afraid to voice those thoughts. Finally, Farrell rose, jammed his hands in his pockets and stood, his back to the mantel, facing Emily. Eric was forgotten.

"Do you really want a divorce, Emily?" the doctor asked kindly. "Don't you love Alan?" he continued as Emily did not answer. "Could you go through life happily, without ever seeing him again?"

"I know what I'm doing," Emily's muffled answer came to him. She was sobbing again. Farrell stooped himself against her tears. He loved the child, too. If he gave in now, everything would be lost. She must be made to realize fully all the consequences of her divorce, and he, alone, could do it.

"But it's not mine! I can't stand it. Doctor, I can't. Alan's life. My life. Entirely separate. It can't go on."

"You're right, Emily. It can't go on. But before you give up, before you smash both your life and his, see if there isn't another way. You may think you could be happy without Alan, but you never will. Nor can he be happy without you."

"You want to blame Alan. Don't. Let's not blame anyone. But consider this: when you came to Sumner you were a bride -- a gay, happy young bride, ready to begin a new life as a doctor's wife. The honeymoon lasted for a while. Then --" quite the city it is now, and there were few amusements for the daughter of a senator. She could go to church, do her marketing and that was about all. People's tongues were pretty sharp then, too.

"But Sarah Warren wouldn't admit defeat. When she found medicine was crowding her out of her husband's life, she became an important factor in that medicine, and working with her husband, she was with him constantly.

"She suffered many of the same hardships he did; she had a part in his successes; she was hurt by his failures -- because they were her successes and her failures too."

"I've known Sarah Warren to get up in the middle of the night, walk half a mile across town through snow, to send Dr. Warren to another call, when she could not reach him by telephone or messenger. She has sat for hours at the bedside of a sick child so that the sleepless mother might get a little rest. She went with her husband on obstetrical cases, driving miles over country roads, taking charge of the house and other children, if there were any, assisting when she was needed.

"She learned to calm hysterical mothers, even to advise emergency treatment -- until she could send Dr. Warren.

"You were hurt when Alan couldn't get home Christmas. Did you know that when Alan had pneumonia, as a baby, his mother sat alone with him while he passed the crisis, with her husband ten miles away? She sent him on that call, too."

"But I can't do anything like that now, Dr. Farrell," Emily said. "Times are changed. Alan has the hospital, nurses. There's no place for me."

"Yes, there is, Emily. Times change, but patients do not. You can still lend a bit of comfort, taking care. Admitting that a switchboard operator can. And, what is more important, you can stop hating his patients and start being interested in them, so that he can talk to you about them. You can respect the confidence he places in you. You can encourage him when he needs it; you can learn when he is worried that he must not be annoyed by trifles. You may even have opportunity to help. You might have been needed up at Carroll's the other night."

"In short, Emily, you have to be just what Alan's mother was to Sumner -- Mrs. Doc."

They were all startled as Alan strode into the room. His face was pale and drawn. His eyes were dark, yet gleaming with hidden fire. He did not greet them.

"Kane," he said. "I want to talk to you."

Rumania Signs Trade Treaty With Germany

BERLIN, March 24 (AP)—Incorporation of Memelland into Greater Germany and negotiation of a Rumania trade treaty have clinched the last links in a band of friendly neighbors along Germany's eastern frontier as a buffer against her potential foe, Soviet Russia.

For the first time since the World War Germans held today they had only friends in the immediate East, from the Baltic to the Black Sea.

Adolf Hitler, Fuehrer of 80,000,000 persons in 245,000 square miles of territory, thus had ingorged Germany's central European position not only by solidifying his empire in the last year but also by diminishing the old German worry about a possible sudden destructive attack from the East.

The cession of Memelland, formerly under Lithuanian sovereignty, brought little Lithuania into Hitler's arms through a non-aggression pact and an economic understanding. Rumania plugged a hole to the southeast through a far-reaching economic tieup with Germany.

As for the other and older links, the Polish-German non-aggression treaty still has several years to run, while Hungary has been working closely with the Rome-Berlin axis and has joined the anti-Comintern pact.

of its Germanic population of 150,000 was expected here by nightfall. In informed quarters it was thought likely he soon would take an extended rest.

Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop and Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels were expected to go vacationing. Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering has gone back to resume an Italian sojourn.

Behind him in Memel, Hitler left a deepening mystery regarding his meaning when he told Memellanders that German wrongs now had been rectified "in the main."

The official text of his brief speech omitted these words and observers sought in the omission and the words themselves a key to future intentions.

German editors said Hitler carefully read official reports of his talks before their release by the government news agency.

In a decree issued aboard the Deutschland, the chancellor formally incorporated Memelland into the province of East Prussia. The decree further provided that Memellanders who lost their citizenship when the territory was detached from Germany in the World War settlement now regain their citizenship, provided they reside there or in Germany on March 22, 1939.

German federal and Prussian state laws will be introduced in the territory May 1.

T. U. Engineer Makes Special Rocket Study

AUSTIN, March 24.—A wide study of rockets was finished here by Harold Crockett, University of Texas student engineer, last week; but the adventures of Orson Welles and Flash Gordon have made the now-skeptical public leary of his findings, he admitted today.

The youthful senior from Austin, in a thorough survey of the rocket field, has found: A rocket motor that weighs 157 pounds, claims 1,000 horse power; a propellant fluid of liquid oxygen and gasoline that has a per weight power of ten times that of gunpowder; that Germans are using rockets successfully for mail flight; that an American designer has had much luck with secret test flights in New Mexico.

"We can't conceive of that," has often been the reaction to a presentation of his findings, Crockett reports.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

PETER INTERPRETS CHRIST'S SUFFERINGS. Text: I Peter 1:17-23; 2:20-25. By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D., Editor of Advance.

Impulsive Peter who, like the other early disciples, had followed Jesus in the belief that He was going to set up on earth a kingdom in which they would have place and power, discovered that the plans and purposes of God are not always revealed or manifested by fulfilling the ambitions of men.

Through the suffering and death of his Master, Peter came to see more deeply into God's purposes and into the meaning of life, and in his messages of comfort and inspiration to the disciples the theme of suffering occupies an important place.

Here he is interpreting for the early disciples the meaning of Christ's sufferings and death. He points out that the redemption of these Christians has not come easily, but it has been bought with a price, and above all with the precious blood of the crucified Christ.

But this crucified Christ has risen again. He is a living Lord, and He has the power to purify the souls of those who believe in Him and who seek the way of life in obedience to the truth and in unfeigned love of the brethren.

Here again he returns to the theme in the last lesson, suggesting that if man suffers it is better that he should suffer for well-doing than for evil-doing. What glory is there in a man's endurance of suffering patiently if he has sinned and brought that suffering upon himself? But where a man is called, following the example of Jesus Himself, to witness to God's grace through suffering, he is more powerful than the eloquence of words in the quiet, consistent life of a pure, true Christian. What a man has more influence than what he says. It is our character and experience that determine our influence upon others.
