

British Press Hits Germany

LONDON, March 16 (AP)—The British press assailed Germany today for breaking up the Czecho-Slovak republic and found in Germany's emergence as an imperialist power further reason for vigorous preparedness.

British Prime Minister Chamberlain stuck to his policy of appeasement and simultaneous rearmament but emphasis was on the latter.

The prime minister angered many newspapers by his mild statement in the House of Commons yesterday—that Reichsfuehrer Hitler's action was inconsistent with "the spirit of Munich."

Generally the press called on the government to "keep your powder dry" and characterized Germany as an "undisguised" enemy of all Europe.

It was believed General Jan Syrovky, former premier and more recently Czecho-Slovak defense minister, and Premier Rudolf Bernik might have been among the group of refugees from Prague which flew to London Tuesday night and went into seclusion.

The average Briton felt the full impact of Hitler's triumph in these figures: Germany at the outbreak of the war had an estimated population of 68,000,000 and an area of 208,780 square miles. Today Germany dominates a population of 90,000,000 and an area of 268,000 square miles.

In the loss of friendly Czecho-Slovakia, Britain and France saw disappearance of 40 army divisions and their modern military equipment passed into German hands—tanks, heavy artillery, munitions, an air fleet and the factories that produced them.

They saw Germany gain timber, iron, coal, graphite, lead, copper, silver and other mineral wealth along with thousands of industrial units.

Ninety-seven Guernsey heifers were shipped early in 1939 from South Carolina to stock a plantation in the Bahama Islands.

Faced with a cotton problem of its own, Egypt formed an advisory council of cabinet members, growers, merchants and spinners.

U. S. Will Show Displeasure Of Hitler Conquest

WASHINGTON, March 17 (AP)—The United States government will make every effort, it was learned today, to indicate its displeasure of Adolf Hitler's action in extending a protectorate over Czecho-Slovakia.

Wilbur J. Carr probably will remain as American minister in Prague until the Czech minister here, Vladimir Hurban, receives written orders from retiring President Hacha directing him to turn the Czech legation over to the German embassy.

Hurban refused to do so yesterday when Dr. Karl Resenberg of the German embassy read him an order called by the German foreign office. Hurban said he must have written "orders from my government in Prague which appointed me."

It appeared likely the state department, in closing the American legation at Prague, would follow the procedure adopted in the case of Germany's absorption of Austria last year.

German Ambassador Dieckhoff had informed the department of the fusion, but President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull refused to act until after Austrian Minister Edgar L. G. Prochnik relinquished his legation here nearly a month later.

The United States will have to act not only with regard to its Prague legation, but with regard to the war debt of $165,000,000 owed the treasury by Czecho-Slovakia; $22,000,000 in Czech dollar bonds, and the trade agreement with Czecho-Slovakia.

According to scientists, airplanes, as we now know them, will not be able to ascend much over 60,000 feet, speed much more than 500 miles an hour, nor travel more than 8,000 to 9,000 miles.

SERIAL STORY

'MRS. DOC' BY TOM HORNER

Copyright, 1939, NEA Service, Inc.

The characters and situations in this story are wholly fictional. Yesterday, Eric takes Emily to a party when Alan is called on an emergency case. An Alan leaves her drops a letter. It is from St. Louis and Dr. Peterson. It is four days old!

CHAPTER VIII

THE letter burned Emily's fingers, seared her heart. Mixed emotions of anger, disappointment, and surprise surged through her, leaving her trembling. She fought down an impulse to scream, strove valiantly to keep back her tears. Without a word she turned, placed the letter on the mantel, resting it against Alan's pipe rack so that he would be sure to see it. Then she faced Eric. "That's all he thinks of the greatest opportunity he'll ever have," she said bitterly. "He doesn't even read it!" "Don't be too harsh," Eric said. "He's been busy, night and day. He probably stuck it in his pocket hurriedly and forgot all about it."

"Don't try to defend him. There's no excuse for absolutely ignoring an offer of a job that will pay him twice as much as he earns here. It's just that he doesn't care. He doesn't care about his future, he doesn't care about me!" "Now, now, Emily," Eric's tone was soft and soothing. "I'm sure as soon as Alan has a little more time, he'll consider the offer, probably accept it, if it would make you happy."

"Oh, no he won't. He's perfectly content to stay right here in Sumner, being just a country doctor. It doesn't matter to him that I have to go to parties alone, sit here at home alone for days and nights, never seeing anyone, never knowing anyone, never doing anything but answering that telephone and sending him away from me."

"I don't matter. I'm just his wife," Emily's chin was quivering. "The only thing he ever thinks about are his precious patients. I hate every one of them. I hate Sumner. Sometimes—Oh, Eric!"

She could keep back the tears no longer. Sobs shook her. Eric's arms were around her and she was crying, her face pressed into the yielding blackness of his coat. "There, there," he said. He stared over the soft curls that crowned her head into the dancing flames. He wondered if she could feel his heart pounding, if she could sense the electrifying thrill the nearness of her sent coursing through him. Gently, as if consoling a child who had bruised a finger, he talked, until the sobs grew fainter and fainter. At last she raised her face to him. Her lips were close to his. Tears shone in her eyes. There was an instant of tense silence, then— "You're a darling, Eric, and I'm just a spoiled brat, and I—I need a handkerchief!"

"Eric, if you insist on giving away tricks, Dr. Farrell and I just have to beat you." Alan's laugh was hearty as he added up the score. The four—Emily, Alan, Eric, and Dr. Farrell—were seated at the bridge table, the night after the Maddox dinner party. "Eric's not keeping his mind on the cards tonight," Dr. Farrell broke in. "What's wrong, son? Worried?"

"Frankly, yes, Dr. Farrell," Eric answered. "About the weather." "What's wrong with the weather? Forecast says warmer," Dr. Farrell replied. "After this snow, a little warm weather should be welcome."

"It probably is, to everyone but me," Eric said. "Personally, I'd like to have it stay cold for a while longer." He noted the unasked question in their eyes and went on to explain.

"It's about the dam. We had a heavy snowfall here, but farther north was a record breaker for this time of year. Now, if we get rain and warm weather, all of this snow will run off, rather than soak into the ground, as it would do if the thaw was gradual."

"And what has all this to do with your dam?" Emily asked. "It may make, or break it," Eric said simply. "You see, we built a diversion dam about a half mile upstream before we started work on the main dam. This diversion dam is little more than a pile of rock and earth. Right now it is backing water a mile upstream. It's taking about all the pressure it can stand, and if the river starts to rise, it may go out."

"If it does, and all that flood comes pounding down the gorge, the new dam may go out too. We've got crews working day and night—24 hours a day—pouring gravel into that diversion dam, sandbagging the top; we're doing everything we can to save it. Every available man in the county has been put to work. If the thaw will hold off for 10 days more, we'll make it."

"Summer and the lowlands are in no particular danger, right now," he added, noting Emily's alarmed expression. "The river, below the dam, is low, and can carry a good-sized flood without much trouble. Some of that low country right around the dam might get a few feet of water, but no one lives in there, so there's little danger. We antici-ated that." "But you didn't anticipate a flood?" Farrell asked. "We thought we had," Eric said. "We checked data on the river for years back and built accordingly—but we had no idea that there might be such a blizzard in March, or that it might be followed by rains and warm weather. Not in 50 years of weather records did we find anything that parallels it."

"But don't let me bother you with my troubles—you have enough of your own. And anyway, we're going to beat this river, snow or no snow, thaw or no thaw. We'll have that diversion dam sound enough to take 10 times all the water this snow can give us. All we need is a little time—and a little more cold weather."

ALONE in his hotel room, Eric Kane gazed at his reflection in the mirror and cursed it, softly but fervently. "You can't even play bridge with her. She bids hearts—you do a flip flop. She plays a diamond, and you stare at the one on her finger. You fool!"

He stretched full length on the bed, stared at the ceiling. He could close his eyes and see her face. That funny little grin that started at the corner of her mouth, then spread over her lips. Her lips—lovely, perfect, kissable. The way she included him in her retinue—Alan, Farrell, and him. Her slaves. The way she wrinkled her nose. The way—the telephone bell jangled him out of his reverie. It was Baker, his assistant engineer, calling from the dam.

"Yes. Got more gravel on the track, should be there by morning. Well, damn it, man, keep them doing something. You've got 10,000 sacks up there. Fill 'em up. Throw them over on the far side where the water will hit first. How's that treatise holding? Keep those gravel trucks rolling over it. Get men with shovels in there. Don't let that stone pile up on it. It'll never hold it. Pull at the men off the concrete and steel and put them in there too. I'll be up first thing in the morning. Okay. Hell, you can sleep tomorrow. Goodnight."

He undressed slowly, crawled into bed. The dam was enough of a worry without adding Emily. Why should he be worrying about Emily Warren, she was another man's wife! "You're a fool, Eric Kane," he told himself. "That was all over years ago." But was it? "You're crazy, all right. And you're in love with Emily Warren!"

Hitler Leaves Misery, Death In His Wake

BERLIN, March 17 (AP)—The "German island" city of Brunn, alive with swastikas and a hailing population, greeted triumphant Adolf Hitler today in his heavily-guarded sweep through the Moravian section of his new protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia.

The newly made citizens of Germany who form 30 per cent of the city's population cheered wildly as the fuhrer arrived from Prague by train at 11:30 a. m. (4:30 a. m. CST) en route to Vienna.

Behind him Hitler left secret police engaged in a clean up of "undesirable elements," arresting Czech leaders, social welfare groups and citizens in the proud old city which, until Tuesday, was the capital of the Czech-Slovak republic. Dr. Emil Hacha, president of the republic, last night with "complete trust" in Hitler, took the responsibility for placing "the destiny of the Czech nation and Czech state in the hands of the fuhrer of the German nation."

Jewish Stores Seized. Under the anti-Semitic restrictions, Jewish-owned stores were being taken over by administrators pending the time when they could be sold to non-Jews. In Berlin, meanwhile, Wilhelmstrasse circles said Hitler and his advisers were planning an entirely different kind of protection for Slovakia than they have established in the protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia. Hitler assumed protection over Slovakia yesterday but officials, while not giving any details, said there was a vital difference between the "protection" the fuhrer agreed to give Dr. Joseph Tiso, premier of Slovakia, and the protectorate he invoked for the Czechs.

Orthodox characteristics of a protectorate, such as the taking over of foreign affairs and military defense, were visible in the case of Bohemia and Moravia.

Hungary's occupation of Carpatho-Ukraine, the third element of the Czech-Slovak republic, was regarded as accomplished. Hitler was expected in Vienna between 3:30 and 4:30 p. m. (8:30-10 a. m. CST) today and crowds already were gathering in the streets there at noon.

There were some doubts whether he would go to Bratislava, Slovak capital. A Berlin spokesman denied there were any German troops or SS (black-uniformed elite guard) units in that city although German soldiers entered other parts of Slovakia earlier in the week. Hitler left Prague with his aides yesterday by automobile but transferred to a special train for the final phase of the trip to Brunn.

The fuhrer's movements from town to town were shielded in secrecy and by a corps of black-shirt elite guards. Armored cars conveyed him when he used his big touring car. The Nazis did not want to risk any Slavic displeasure in the path of the protector of the Slavs. Hitler slipped out of Prague last night, from Bohemia into Moravia, motoring over roads covered by his army of occupation.

Four years and a day after the Czech army corps which he told the Versailles treaty, he was on a tour of bloodless conquest—the second since he rode into Austria last March.

The fuhrer was looking over Germany's new elbow room—the "lebensraum" or living space which he told the reichstag Jan. 30 Germany's millions had to have unless they could increase exports and imports in great measure.

This elbow room, putting Nazi Germany almost within arm's reach of the Soviet Union's "breadbasket," the Ukraine, became part of greater Germany yesterday.

Babson Sees Continued Low Interest Rates For Bank Depositors Banking Revolution

PALM BEACH, Fla., March 17.—Few people realize the terrific changes which have taken place in the commercial banking business since 1929. If Babson had Rip Van Winkled himself in 1929 and awakened today, he would scarcely recognize the industry. Commercial banking has been revolutionized.

The spectacular decline in interest rates symbolizes this transformation. In 1929, New York banks charged their regular customers 5.88 per cent; today the rate is only 2.24 per cent—the lowest on record. The same trend has taken place in banks throughout the east and north of the country where current rates are 3.23 per cent against 6.04 per cent in 1929; and 4.09 per cent in southern and western districts against 6.14 per cent in the "good old days."

"Squeeze" on Depositors As a result of the drop in rates which banks charge, the squeeze has been put on depositors. No interest is now paid on checking accounts, which formerly received two per cent. Savings deposits now get a paltry two or two-and-a-half per cent against three-and-a-half to four-and-a-half per cent in 1929. The less of billions of dollars of commercial loans raised havoc with bank earnings. There are two reasons why this loan business passed out: First, business men have not wanted to borrow new money; and second, banks have been too timid about making loans. In not seeking intermediate and long-term business loans on the one hand and turning them down on the other, both the business men and the bankers are probably wise. Checking account depositors naturally want to be able to use their money when they need it. If the bank lends it on a long-term business loan, it may be tied up in a pasteurizing plant for a dairy farm, a new wing for a factory, or a new department for a store. Naturally, those borrowing the money for such purposes cannot repay it in three months, or a year, or maybe in five years. Certainly, they cannot repay it at a moment's notice when depositors suddenly want their money. So this type of loan, no matter how necessary it is to the nation's prosperity, is now turned down by the banks.

Second Major Blow The decline in good real estate mortgage was Blow Number Two. Formerly, a big portion of a bank's earning power came from real estate financing. The collapse of the real estate market from 1930 to 1934, plus errors in loan judgement, showed the folly of commercial banks financing a building boom. Recently, the F. H. A. insured mortgage plan has created new interest in home financing by banks, but many bankers are still wary and are taking only the choicest risks. Personal loans, once scorned by bankers, are avidly sought. Yet, these can never replace the once profitable commercial business and only offer competition to instalment credit loans.

Both savings and commercial banks have always owned some public and corporate securities. Never were they emphasized as they are now, however. The watchword of today's banking philosophy is liquidity. It is stressed first, last, and always. While corporate bonds may not be the last word in liquidity nor yield a very good return, they certainly are easier to turn into cash than a pasteurizer, a factory wing, or a store addition. This is one section of the mystery of why three per cent corporate bond issues have been going over with such a bang. Bankers, however, are not so familiar with bond investments as they might be.

'Loaded With Governments' Some bank examiners urge the purchase of U. S. Governments, declaring they are the safest bonds a bank can hold. Bankers like them, too, because they can be exchanged into dollar bills almost at a moment's notice. Illustrating this trend is the fact that over two-thirds of Member Bank investments are in "Governments" today, compared with about one-third in 1929. Meanwhile, deposits are steadily increasing—are about 100 per cent higher than in 1933 and are above the 1929 high. The bankers are just sitting tight, however, with the greatest reservoir of idle cash in history in their vaults.

The R. F. C., the Commodity Credit Corporation, the Farm Credit Administration, the Home Owner's Loan Corporation, the F. H. A., and others have gobbled up some of the most profitable business the banks formerly had. We have gone a long way toward complete nationalization of credit! The private banks are fast becoming merely service organizations running the nation's huge checking business, caring for securities, operating a trust business, and buying government bonds. The gigantic credit agencies are now doing the loan job the banks once did.

New Angle For Uncle Sam The immediate future does not look too hopeful either. The demand for intermediate and long-term business credit on an instalment basis must be met. We must have such credit to stimulate recovery, to create new jobs, to make new products. Hence, the government may be in this branch of the credit business before long with an Intermediate Credit Bank. The private banks will be financing this new set-up just as they are all the public credit agencies by their vast but the actual okaying of the credit will be done by Uncle Samuel.

So, with the outlook for more government credit, I see no hope of people receiving a better return on their deposits in the immediate future. Eventually, of course, general interest rates are bound to rise and at least savings deposits should yield a greater return. Despite this gloomy outlook for interest rates, depositors never had better protection for their dollars than they have right now. But if the government does not do a better job on the budget, no one will dare to forecast what the buying power of these dollars may be.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

PETER EXHORTS TO CHRISTIAN LIVING.

Text: I Peter 3:8-18. By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D. One recalls in connection with this lesson the words of Jesus to Peter, "Simon, Simon, Satan hath desired to have thee that he may sift thee as wheat, but I have prayed for thee that thy faith fail not. When thou art convinced, strengthen thy brethren." Here we have a strengthened and regenerated Peter, fulfilling this admonition of his Master, bringing his word of exhortation to Christian living to the sorely pressed and tempted disciples in the early church, and telling them how they may find the strength and help which he himself has found. The religious experience that he urges upon them is a common experience of those who are "illuminated, compassionate, loving as brethren, tenderhearted, humbleminded." Christians, he reminds them, do not render evil for evil or reviling for reviling. On the contrary, they render good for evil, and it is for this that God has called them out of His own infinite grace and mercy. From this major exhortation he turns to suggest some things in a practical philosophy of life. If one would live well and happily, let him restrain his tongue, let him turn from evil and do good, let him seek peace and pursue it. The Christian is living under the watchful eye of the Lord, whose ears are open unto their supplications. Nothing can harm a truly good man, for even if suffering comes to him, for righteousness sake, there is blessing. The way of attaining this good life is to sanctify Christ as Lord in the heart, for thereby one can give a reason for the hope that is in him and he can have a good conscience, even when there are those who revile him. Peter does not promise these disciples immunity from sorrow or suffering. He points out that Christ has suffered, and that His followers are in the way of the cross. But he says that it is better that we should suffer for well-doing rather than for evil-doing. Here is a plain, practical Christian philosophy of life by one who had himself gone through a great deal of trial and temptation, strain and suffering. Peter had found the way by which weak men may be made strong, and by which impulsive and hasty men could attain to stability and persistency of life and purpose. His words come to tried and sorely tempted men with the authority of experience and with the power of faith. Perhaps it is worth while to point out how essentially the apostles agree when they present the nature of the Christian life and the exhortation to live it. Paul and Peter may not always have agreed on questions of law and discipline, but there is no difference between Paul's exhortation to Christian love and Peter's when it comes to defining Christianity in terms of character and conduct.
