

Chamber backs school bond issue

By JEANNE GRIMES
Pampa News Staff

In a unanimous vote of approval Wednesday afternoon the Pampa Chamber of Commerce directors pledged the chamber's support to passage of a $2.2 million school bond issue Aug. 18.

"I'm familiar to this (school situation) after 20 years," Floyd Sackett, chamber manager, said. "It's a shame the way our schools look and the shape they're in. I think this (support) would be something you'd want to do. This is a community issue and it would be in the interest of the chamber to support it."

Chamber president Melvin Kunkel called the bond passage "a necessity" and Darville Orr said "schools are the biggest selling point we have."

J.L. Markham, formerly with the Littlefield Chamber of Commerce, said schools in that community were a "disgrace."

"We wine and dined new industry and lost every one of them because of our schools," he charged.

"Driving up and down the streets, I could not imagine the poor repair of those buildings (Pampa High School) inside," Dr. Kenneth Royse said. "It doesn't matter now where the blame came from, it needs repair now and I sure think we need to push it. Our students deserve better than this."

The directors also agreed the chamber should act as a clearing house for physician recruitment in Pampa.

Sackett told the group "We won't get doctors over night."

"It is a matter of an individual doing it and not expecting anyone else to do it," Dr. Roy Braswell said. "You're it. As a chamber you have to know what facilities you have to offer. There's a pecking order among doctors and you can't put specialists in with general practitioners."

Dr. Braswell accepted appointment as chairman of the chamber's physician recruitment committee.

The panel voted down motion that the chamber join the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce in opposing a proposed four per cent rise in truck rates. According to the Amarillo chamber the new rates would reflect a 28 per cent increase in 24 months with only a 12 per cent increase in expenses.

"I think we're getting into an area that will get us in trouble," Dudley Steele said. "I think it's our duty as a chamber to let our members know, but not to take a stand."

"I don't know if being a vet, I can tell someone else to go out of business," Dr. Royse said, adding he knows of two truckers in Pampa who have been forced out of business because they were not able to make any money. "I don't know how much they've gone into the expenses of truckers."

The directors, hearing that the welcome sign west of the city on U.S. 60 is in violation of the highway beautification act, voted to sell the sign to the state at $6 per square foot less depreciation. The state will dispose of the sign, Orr said.

Money from the sale of the sign and donations from civic clubs and organizations will be used to purchase new signs to be placed on U.S. 60 west, U.S. 60 east, Texas 152 west, Texas 70 south and Texas 70 north.

Kunkel appointed Dona Cornutt to head a committee for the chamber's annual meeting Oct. 27. Serving on the committee will be Tim Houles, Warren Hassey, Bill Horton, Clotilde Thompson and Don Bigham. Appointed chairman of the investment (dues) structure committee was Luther Robinson. He will be joined by Gene Steele, Bill Hite, Jim Ward, Art Aftergut, Vic Raymond and J.L. Markham.

The directors heard Robinson tell them the 4th of July fireworks display went into the red more than $400.

"I'd encourage the board to take a long look at the fireworks display next year to see if there is some way to justify the expense," Robinson said.

The meeting included reports from Ramona Hite on the Miss Top of Texas Pageant and from Art Aftergut on the Tri-State Seniors Golf Tournament. Dudley Steele told the directors "about 50" guests are expected to attend a Continental breakfast for new teachers Aug. 23 at the Pampa Country Club.

The chamber's next membership meeting will be a breakfast at 6:45 a.m. Sept. 27 in the Pampa Country Club.

School superintendent predicts lower taxes

By JANE P. MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff

Lower school taxes a decrease of 12 cents if the Aug. 18 school bond issue fails and a decrease of 15 cents if voters accept the bonds were predicted Wednesday at an afternoon meeting of the Pampa Independent School District in Carver Center. J. W. Albert, Superintendent Bob Phillips, comes from the new school finance legislation, Senate Bill 1. Pampa's windfall is estimated at $337,000. Local fund assignment has been reduced by $434,972.

Phillips said he would recommend a 9.25 per cent reduction in taxes if the bond issue fails. The rate would drop from the current $1.62 to $1.47 per $100 of assessed valuation.

The $2.2 million from the bond election would finance repairs to all school buildings. Phillips said Houston Middle School would be closed after the coming school year whether the bonds passed or failed.

Voting will be from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Pampa High School music building.

Of the $1.47 to be requested, $1.33 will be for maintenance and 14 cents for debt service to pay off the new bonds.

If the bonds fail, Phillips said he would recommend to keep the tax rate for maintenance at the maximum of $1.50 with no debt service rate since the district's bonded debt has been retired.

"We'll get as much as we can to take care of repairs," Phillips said. The $1.50 rate would raise about $340,000 to take care of the more critical renovation and add six to eight classrooms at Pampa Junior High to prepare for the middle school shutdown.

Phillips pointed out other effects of SB 1 on the Pampa schools.

1. Reduced school year by five days.
2. Raised teacher salaries from $460 a year for beginning teachers with a bachelors degree to $1,040 for masters degree teachers with maximum experience.

3. Allowed equalization pay for districts such as Pampa where the property value per student is lower than the state average of $91,309. Pampa's value is $86,414.

4. Authorized charging fees for such programs as driver's education.

Board members set a budget study meeting for 4 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 11. They will canvass bond election returns at 8 p.m. Aug. 18 and have a public budget hearing and regular meeting on Aug. 19.

Another report came from Ed Lehnick athletic director.

He recommended that football tickets be sold from the two Pampa banks on alternating years. Season tickets and student tickets still will be available at the business office.

The city of Pampa has agreed to split the cost of between $6,000 and $7,000 a year to maintain the school tennis courts, he said.

In other business, the board awarded bids for canned food, accepted the first reading of Section A of the policy manual on basic district foundations and accepted the resignation of Lorri Chambliss special education at Lamar.

New teachers hired are Donna Dixon, sixth grade at Wilson, Cheryl Robbins, second grade at Baker, and Mary Sturgeon, English at P.J.H.

The board heard grievances from R.T. Watts, 1111 Kiowa, who insisted that the valuation of his house was raised to make up for tax loss through the new $3,000 homestead exemption.

After a lengthy, and sometimes angry, discussion, Bill Arrington, Board president, "I don't think there is anything I can do to help you. We've treated you like any other taxpayer."

Dwain Walker, school business manager, explained that values were purchased from the city and each property is re-assessed every three or four years.

Arrington explained that he and Walker had spent a great deal of time with Watts trying to explain the taxing system to him.

"Why did you not meet with the board of equalization. That is your recourse?" Phillips asked. Watts was told the board was meeting this morning and he could question them about the value placed on his property.

"I guess all you men remember about Don Yarbrough losing a job by fixing a title on a car," Watts commented as he left the meeting room.

Those present for the public meeting were Arrington, Dr. Bob Lyle, David Crossman, Buddy Epperson and Paul Simmons.

Al Smith and Curt Beck were absent.

Phil Cates won't run

SHAMROCK — State Rep. Phil Cates, D-Shamrock, will not seek a fifth term in the Texas House of Representatives.

Cates made the announcement in a news release. He has represented the 68th Legislative District which includes Armstrong, Briscoe, Childress, Collingsworth, Donley, Floyd, Gray, Hall, Motley and Wheeler Counties for eight years.

"Many have expressed disappointment that I would choose to leave the position of service that I have held for four legislative terms, and for their trust and this high compliment they have given me, I am very grateful," Cates wrote.

"The decision is mine alone. There are simply more important tasks for me at this time," he added.

"I must make certain that my family is the kind of strong and healthy environment that I want for my sons. This we would do if we stayed in politics, but it would simply be much easier in the business field.

"There are major important goals, issues and needs for good services which I have left unfinished. In this regard, I would support the very best person seeking the position of state representative. I would never seek to name my successor, but rather to fulfill this responsibility by supporting the best possible person."

Cates stated in the release that his wife has encouraged him to seek re-election to the House or another higher office.

"Someday, I would hope to again hold this or other offices of the public trust," the release said.

Cates could not be contacted today for additional information.

Simpson seeks state senate seat

State Rep. Bob Simpson, D-Amarillo, said today that he will seek the soon to be vacated seat of State Sen. Max Sherman.

Simpson made the announcement at an afternoon news conference at the Randall County Courthouse Annex. He is the fourth candidate and the third democrat to announce his candidacy.

Simpson has served two terms in the state legislature. During the last session, he worked on the State Affairs Committee, the Natural Resources Committee and a number of subcommittees.

"It has been an honor for me to be a member of the House of Representatives in the past two sessions," Simpson said, "but that honor carries with it a responsibility to serve in the most effective way I can. It is this responsibility which has prompted me to seek a higher opportunity and challenge in the Senate."

Simpson cited state spending as a major topic of concern in the legislature. "We must plan for the future," he said, "when revenues from our depleting oil and gas reserves begin to decline. We must begin setting aside a portion of our surplus, and we must not allow state government to grow unchecked. I am committed to making sure our tax dollars are used wisely."

Simpson, 33, currently represents Carson and Randall counties and portions of Potter county. He is an Amarillo attorney and businessman, with farming and ranching interests and family investments.

He graduated from the University of Texas at Austin in 1966 with a bachelor of arts degree in government. He received his juris doctor degree from the UT School of Law in 1970.

His father, the late J.M. Simpson, served in the state legislature from 1962 to 1968.

Simpson is married to the former Linda Lee Andrick of Amarillo. They have two sons, Robbie, 6, and Lee, 3.

Simpson was first elected to the legislature from the 65th district in 1974 and was reelected in 1976. "I believe I can utilize the experience I have gained in the House to provide an even more effective voice in the Senate," Simpson said.

Simpson joined Democrats Mack Whittenburg and Mel Phillips, both of Amarillo, in the race for the Senate seat. The only announced Republican candidate is Jim Brandon of Amarillo.

The special election is expected to be set for Nov. 8. Sen. Max Sherman, D-Amarillo, plans to resign his Senate seat to assume the position of president of West Texas State University.

All the better to hear you with

Workers with Amarillo Tower Service were atop the Pampa City Hall this week installing a new communications tower for the Pampa Police Department. Pampa Police Chief Richard Mills said the old tower which was "at least 25 years old" had become "rotten" in the middle. "Because the tower was rotten," the chief said, "they were not able to place antennas for the different types of police radios in the proper locations. The new tower will allow the antennas to be placed in the proper position and relieve the blockage of signals we have experienced when the antennas were so close together." The tower cost $3,200 and Mills said 75 per cent of the cost was paid for by a Criminal Justice Department grant. The chief said the new antennas are already in position and operable. Gasoline tax could hike five cents

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposal to raise the federal gasoline tax by five cents a gallon appears doomed in the House, a victim of opposition from the folks back home, says the chief backer of the tax hike.

Rep. James J. Howard, D-N.J., says the provision apparently will fail by about 100 votes when it comes to a vote today in the House. The proposal is being debated as lawmakers plow ahead with debate on the 980-page energy bill.

House leaders hope to have the measure passed and sent to the Senate by the end of the week when Congress is scheduled to begin its month-long summer vacation.

In a major victory for President Carter on Wednesday, the House voted 227-190 to continue federal price controls on natural gas.

But Howard blamed voter opposition for the lack of support for the proposed higher federal tax on gasoline, which Carter sought as a way of forcing conservation efforts.

Carter's energy program taxes "take money out of people's pockets 18 ways, but they only understand the gasoline tax: ding, ding, ding," he said, mimicking a gas pump.

Other tax provisions in Carter's program could add up to another nickel, tacking on 10 cents by 1980. The current tax is four cents.

The bill also would end the income tax deduction for state and local gasoline taxes.

The tax hike is important since the revenue would be earmarked for money-starved federal mass transit programs and badly needed state road and bridge improvements, Howard said.

House leaders and the administration want the gasoline tax hike to prompt the public to reduce consumption.

The nickel tax is all that is left of Carter's original request for authority to impose a tax of up to 50 cents per gallon of gasoline, a request killed in committee earlier this year.

Tributes and treasures

The flow of the first oil into the Alaskan pipeline should have brought more of a celebration than it did. After all, this monumental engineering project invited comparison with digging the Panama Canal, or putting a man on the moon. The pipeline is finished, finally, and that should set bells ringing in a country worried about running out of oil and gas.

Laying a ribbon of 48-inch steel pipe across frozen tundra and over mountain ranges for almost 800 miles deserves some genuine hurrahs. If they're muted it's because the Alaskan pipeline isn't solving our energy problem, and in many ways has simply demonstrated how serious it is.

Our increasing dependence on foreign oil attached great urgency to the pipeline project when Congress authorized it in 1973. The Arab embargo late in the same year increased the pressure to tap the estimated 9.6 billion barrels of oil buried under Alaska's North Slope as quickly as possible.

The pipeline has been finished on schedule, but with staggering cost overruns and amid charges that the consortium of eight oil companies building the line had been lax in keeping promises to minimize damage to the environment. Some engineers are still skeptical of the quality of welds along the line and think it will be plagued with leaks. Others still doubt whether the plan to heat the oil to keep it moving through the pipe in sub-freezing weather will work. The oil industry hasn't convinced many environmentalists that it can manage the traffic in oil tankers in and out of the port of Valdez at the southern terminus without intolerable spillage. Time will answer all of these questions, but one thing is obvious already. The doubts, controversy, waste and reported misuse of funds were typical of "crash" programs involving big money, big labor and big tasks. And that's what we can expect the more we have to scramble under pressure to keep energy supplies in pace with demand.

As it is, Alaskan oil will not reduce our current dependence on foreign oil, but simply keep our imports from accelerating as fast as they otherwise would. Nor will Alaskan oil reach the U.S. market any cheaper than what comes from the OPEC countries. With the inflated cost of the pipeline, the consortium is asking a fee of $6 a barrel for oil passing through it in order to amortize the investment. If that figure sticks, the final price will work out to as much as OPEC's $13 or $14 a barrel.

Since West Coast refineries cannot handle high-sulfur crude from Alaska, and there is still no pipeline to ship it from California eastward to refineries that can, the first oil from Alaska may wind up being sent to Japan in order to make more Middle Eastern oil available to U.S. refineries that need it.

The Alaskan pipeline stands as a tribute to engineers faced with huge obstacles in tapping the treasure of Prudhoe Bay. But it also stands as a warning of what it can cost for a nation like ours to keep giving more lip-service than action to energy conservation and send oil companies to the ends of the earth to keep us supplied with fuel.

The latest lunacy

A Labor Department official has warned federally contracted employers that they are in violation of the law if they do not hunt for and hire alcoholics and drug abusers — the latest wrinkle in affirmative action. Thus a new interpretation of the Civil Rights Act, one not even imagined by its supporters back in 1964, seems to be working its way into government policy.

Don't tell me about the grades you got in college — you can hear employers informing job applicants — I just want to know how many martinis you knock down in a day. Or I don't care if you made the Harvard Law Review — how often do you snort coke?

So this is how government contributes to the good society — incentives for misfits? And this from the Carter administration, which proposes to eliminate legal roadblocks to marriage and other virtues. Two observations: 1. In 1964 Senator Humphrey, who with Senator Driscoll led the Civil Rights Bill through Congress, explicitly promised that the legislation would not result in reverse discrimination, quotas, affirmative action. 2. The people who wanted help from the government in alleviating the pain of discrimination — blacks, Latins, et al — are now lumped together with alcoholics and drug addicts.

That a political promise was broken is not surprising. But that the government fails to make the distinction between people who were profoundly wronged by racism and mere drunks and junkies is moral coldness of the most disheartening sort. It is incomprehensibly reprehensible.

Nation's press

By BOB WIEDRICH (The Chicago Tribune) Fidel Castro is on the ropes and only Uncle Sam can save him.

That is why he is desperately striving to normalize trade relations with the United States so that American technology and dollars can bail him out of serious political and economic difficulties.

That is the conviction of Cuban-born Marcelino Miyares, a successful Chicago advertising man who fought and was captured at the Bay of Pigs in 1961 and moved to the Midwest after being ransomed with other prisoners.

According to Miyares, a leader of the Cuban exile community, Castro has been on a downhill slide since 1970 and now is frantically fighting Cuban Communist Party efforts to reduce his personal power. "We are about to see some changes in Castro's power in the next five years," Miyares told us in an interview.

"I do not believe that he can remain in power unless he is given a massive infusion of economic and technical help by the United States. That is all that can save him.

"Communism is not the way of the Cubans. It is an inhuman system and the temperament of the people is working against him.

Miyares maintains that Castro started hitting the skids politically in 1970 when he was unable to deliver on promises of a 10-million-ton sugar harvest.

Miyares is convinced that the Soviet Union and domestic economic problems are forcing Castro to negotiate with the U.S. "The U.S.S.R. can't afford to continue supporting him at a rate of $4 million a day," Miyares declared. "The Russians buy wheat from the U.S. and give it to Cuba. Technically, it is a waste they cannot afford. So Castro needs the help of the United States. Otherwise, he would never ask for help."

Actually, Miyares said, it is the Cuban exiles who finally will be the winners unless Washington decides to help bail out Castro from his difficulties. "We left Cuba because we wanted freedom and now we have it here," he said. "And we can help Cubans in the future by being good, productive American citizens."

Inside Washington

Self-inflicted wounds

By Martha Angle and Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) — If there is one lesson every politician in America should have learned by now, it is that he who sits on a hot potato is destined to wind up with a singed fanny. You would think, from the acrid stench enveloping Capitol Hill, that the House of Representatives comprised the world's largest class of slow learners. And you would be right.

Nothing that has transpired since special counsel Philip Lacovara quit the House Ethics Committee in disgust at the pace of its Korean influence-peddling probe can heal the political wounds House members inflicted upon themselves by trying to sit on this sizzling spud.

Speaker Tip O'Neill, in an eleventh-hour attempt to limit the damage, has hastily drafted Lacovara's old boss, former Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski, to take over the probe and has loftily promised to guarantee Jaworski's independence.

But where was O'Neill 18 months ago when allegations of widespread Korean largesse to members of Congress first surfaced in the press? He was hunkered down with the rest of the House, hoping the whole thing would burn itself out — that's where.

And no wonder. O'Neill, who now expects the public to trust his pledge of support for Jaworski's independence, was himself a beneficiary of the generosity of Korean businessman Tongsun Park. On two separate occasions, the speaker was the guest of honor at parties thrown by Park.

Even after the Lacovara resignation stripped the Ethics Committee probe of its last shred of credibility, O'Neill stubbornly refused to oust the chief foot-dragger, Ethics Chairman John Flynn, D-Ga., who continued to insist that he alone would decide the speed and scope of the investigation. Their plea, which President Carter and Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell have flatly rejected, stems from pure panic at the possibility that the voters next year may decide to punish all House incumbents indiscriminately unless someone of impeccable stature and integrity will issue the innocent a clean bill of health.

They are grasping at straws. Like the Justice Department, a special prosecutor would be limited to the pursuit of criminal indictments. And from the little which is known about the Korean scandal, it is apparent that much of the alleged misconduct falls short of outright criminality.

It is one thing to establish that past and present members of Congress accepted campaign contributions, free trips, dinner parties and other favors from Tongsun Park or the South Korean government. It is quite another matter to prove, in a court of law, that they were influenced in their official conduct as a result of these gifts and hence guilty of bribery.

Voters are entitled to expect more from a member of Congress than the mere absence of criminality. And they have a right to know who has done what in this Korean mess.

But without some drastic procedural changes, it is obvious that House and Senate members will never voluntarily launder their dirty linen in public.

The new charter granted Jaworski by the Ethics Committee is a step in the right direction, but it doesn't go far enough. He should be both authorized and required to investigate every aspect of this case and to disclose the evidence publicly — with or without permission from the House.

Furthermore, both the House and Senate should establish permanent internal "special prosecutors" to handle future allegations of congressional misconduct.

It is true that under the Constitution, the power to discipline members of Congress rests solely with the House and Senate. But even if they fail to punish the miscreants in their midst, the voters will usually do the job for them if some mechanism can be found for getting the facts to the public.

Deregulation defeated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Congressman Bob Krueger said he has no doubt that the GOP expects the Carter price control policy to fail and will use it as a campaign issue in the 1978 congressional elections and against the President in 1980.

Krueger, a New Braunfels Democrat, said the 227-199 vote that killed his amendment to stop federal price controls over new interstate gas was caused by excessive partisanship by both parties.

Last year the then-freshman lawmaker introduced a similar proposal that was narrowly downed, 205-201.

Krueger said Wednesday that the House probably would have gone along with a plan to raise the price of gas gradually and deregulate it some time in the future, perhaps five years hence.

But when that idea was broached to Republicans in the House, they refused to go along. Liberal Democrats, sensing they could defeat an outright deregulation proposal, refused to back down. Krueger, who needed Republican support to buck the Carter administration and the Democratic leaders, said he was stymied.

Krueger's Republican cosponsor, Clarence Brown of Ohio, denied partisan motives. He placed the blame for deregulation's defeat on Rep. Jim Wright of Fort Worth, the House majority leader.

Wright did not support deregulation this week. Instead, he and Reps. Charles Wilson and Bob Eckhardt engineered a compromise that Brown condemned as "a hokey fake."

In return for supporting Carter's price control policy, Wright won a more liberal definition of "new gas," which gets higher prices, and an assurance that the Democratic leadership would resist efforts to repeal a tax preference for independent oil men.

Wright, in debate, said he still favored eventual deregulation. But he said sudden deregulation would have a severe inflationary impact on the economy. His compromise position, he said, allowed the House to reach a position acceptable to all regions of the country.

The Senate has yet to act on the energy proposals, and it has been more sympathetic to deregulation in the past. But if the House version of the natural gas bill becomes law, it would have a major impact on Texas.

It would, for the first time, place the state's gas supply under federal control. In an emergency shortage, the federal government could order the diversion of supplies from Texas to the rest of the country. Most likely, this would affect Texas industrial users.

Residential consumers might notice a slight, short-run price decrease for gas as existing intrastate contracts were replaced with new contracts at the federally controlled price. That price would be $1.75 in 1978 and is expected to rise about 10 per cent each year thereafter. The intrastate price is now about $1.85.

"That allocation provision really worries me," said Rep. Jim Mattox, D-Tex.

Federal allocation policies favor residential users and work to the detriment of states like Texas which have a high percentage of industrial users.

In the event of a severe winter, Mattox said, he fears that Texas factories might have to curtail operations or shut down.

Administration officials have consistently said they do not plan to use the allocation authority but they have been adamant about wanting to have it.

Although the gas industry's association in Washington issued a statement — an hour before the vote was taken — deploring the House action, Mattox said producing interests should not be unhappy with what the House has done.

"Despite what they say, they know they've won three-fourths of what they wanted. When you consider that two years ago natural gas was selling interstate for 54 cents, it's a helluva compromise," said Mattox, who waited until nearly all of the votes had been cast before committing himself. He voted in favor of deregulation.

Texas who voted against deregulation were Wright, Wilson, Eckhardt, Barbara Jordan, and Henry Gonzalez.

The rest of the Texas delegation voted for the Krueger-Brown proposal, except for ailing Rep. Olin Teague, who missed the vote.

Orlando hospitalized

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Tony Orlando, confused and emotionally shattered, is being treated at a private hospital for stress brought on by the deaths of his sister and his pal Freddie Prinze, says a friend of Orlando.

"I was fortunate enough to get him where he is now without anyone knowing," said Orlando's press agent, Frank Lieberman, on Wednesday. "He is physically and emotionally exhausted. He's under a doctor's care in a hospital outside Los Angeles. His wife is with him."

Orlando surprised the entertainment world last month by announcing he was quitting. Lieberman said many pressures led to the decision.

"It's like a balloon," he said. "You can fill it up and fill it up and finally it pops."

When the balloon popped for Orlando, he was working the summer theater circuit. On July 23, he was a little late coming onstage at Cohasset, Mass.

When he did appear, he told a stunned audience that he was "quitting show business in the name of Jesus Christ."

"All the shows I do from now on will be with a guitar beside a hospital bed," he said.

Orlando also canceled a booking at the Warwick (R.I.) Musical Theater.

Buster Bonoff, owner of the Musical Theater, said he planned to sue the singer for the $200,000 in advance tickets he had to refund.

"We're probably not going to end up with anything," Bonoff said, "because the reason for his quitting is going to be that he was temporarily insane, or a nervous breakdown, or something. I can see it coming."

Orlando began singing professionally in New York at the age of 16. He had a hit record in 1961, "Half Way to Paradise," but his singing career sputtered. He then worked several years as a promoter for a division of Columbia Records.

He returned to the performing side of the business in 1970, recording two big sellers — "Candida" and "Knock Three Times" as part of a group called "Dawn." It was composed of Orlando and two female singers named Teina Hopkins and Joyce Vincent Wilson.

But after the two hits, they became "Tony Orlando and Dawn" and went on to an even bigger song — "The Yellow Ribbon" — and a TV variety special for CBS. Things were golden for Orlando.

Then, in early 1976, Orlando's sister, Rhonda Marie, died. She had been mentally retarded and stricken with cerebral palsy, and Orlando had cared for her since she was a year old.

His TV show was canceled in December. A month later, his personal world was shattered by the suicide of comedian Freddie Prinze, who, like Orlando, had known the opposite worlds of New York's Hell's Kitchen and glamorous Hollywood.

"When Freddie died, he was there," said Prinze's mother, Maria Pruetzel. "He was there all 33 hours. He was there at his bedside, he was there at the funeral. He was really a gorgeous, gorgeous, human being."

Prinze's death apparently haunted Orlando.

"The time I spent with him afterwards, there was a lot of rambling, a lot of things said," Lieberman said. "What happened, why it happened...

Vance meets with Assad

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance met President Hafiz Assad today, beginning the toughest round of talks so far in his effort to win approval of a new plan for preliminary Middle East peace negotiations.

The talks opened against a backdrop of skeptical comments in Syria's state-controlled press on the proposal — arranged by Vance and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat — that Middle Eastern foreign ministers gather in the United States to prepare for a resumption of the Geneva peace conference.

Press reaction contrasted sharply with the warm reception Syrian newspapers gave Vance on his first visit to Damascus last February.

"It is not a secret that discrepancies are still very wide between the Syrian and American points of view on the basic issues concerning the Middle East conflict," the government newspaper Tishrin said.

"The issues have become very clear and there is no need for all these complications and discussions over marginal is-

PR bomb blamed for killing man

NEW YORK (AP) — A Puerto Rican independence group whose bombings have frustrated authorities for three years has struck again, this time killing a man and forcing thousands to flee Manhattan skyscrapers.

The pandemonium that ensued — with police and fire vehicles screaming to buildings where additional bomb threats sent almost 100,000 persons streaming into rain-soaked streets — knotted a city already shaken by the attacks of a killer known as "Son of Sam."

Two bombs planted by a cabal that calls itself the FALN exploded an hour apart in two midtown office buildings Wednesday.

The first blast, at 9:37 a.m. in the U.S. Defense Department office in the Christian Science building at 43rd Street and Madison Avenue, injured no one.

The second explosion, at 10:44 a.m. in the Mobil Oil Corp. building at 42nd Street near Grand Central Station, killed 26-year-old Charles Steinberg of Manhattan.

Seven persons were injured, two of them seriously.

Almost 200 bomb threats telephoned to various locations —

many of them hoaxes, police said — caused massive traffic jams as about a dozen skyscrapers were evacuated.

Estimates on the economic losses caused by interruptions of services throughout the city ran as high as $5 million. The Long Island Rail Road started rush-hour service in mid-afternoon for home-bound workers forced from their offices.

Department of Energy born

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, with flourishing pen and abundant praise, today signed into being a Department of Energy, the first new Cabinet agency in 11 years.

He said it will help him to cushion "the impending crisis of energy shortages."

Born in one of the biggest government shuffles ever, the new energy agency raises the number of Cabinet departments to an even dozen.

As expected, Carter nominated James R. Schlesinger, his top energy adviser, to be the nation's first secretary of energy. In anticipation of the nomination, the Senate energy committee has already begun confirmation hearings on Schlesinger, and his nomination seems assure of Senate approval.

In a ceremony in bright sunshine in the White House Rose Garden, Carter signed legislation establishing the department, which absorbs nearly all of the federal government's energy programs. They number about 50. He called it "extremely complicated" legislation.

The new department will have 20,000 employees and a budget of $10.6 billion. It will be run by James R. Schlesinger, presently the President's chief energy adviser.

Asked whether Schlesinger will become an "energy czar," White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said Carter aides are avoiding those words.

Schlesinger said he hopes to put the department into operation by Oct. 1, the start of the new fiscal year.

"An outstanding job," Carter declared Tuesday when Congress approved the new department. He had asked that Congress create it to administer his comprehensive energy program, the details of which are now before the House. The program is surviving relatively intact.

In a major victory for the President, the House refused Wednesday to remove federal price controls on natural gas. Carter praised that as "a courageous action," and Powell told reporters the President was "extremely pleased" with Congress.

The Senate energy committee held a confirmation hearing for Schlesinger even before Carter formally submitted his nomination to head the department. Schlesinger, who headed the Defense Department, the CIA and the now-defunct Atomic Energy Commission under past Republican administrations, is expected to be approved overwhelmingly.

Schlesinger's credentials have been applauded even by critics who say legislation creating the department puts too much power in the hands of a single person. Senate leaders plan to put his expected nomination to a vote before the end of the week.

Praising Congress for "giving us the tools" to carry out a national energy policy, Schlesinger told the committee that dismantling existing energy programs and transferring them to the new agency will be a difficult job. But he said the task is already under way.

Carter had asked for the secretary of the new department, the first to be created since the Department of Transportation in 1966, to have broad powers to set energy prices. But Congress gave this power to a new five-member commission. Its members also require confirmation.

As a result of the reorganization, three existing agencies — the Federal Power Commission, the Energy Research and Development Administration and the Federal Energy Administration — will be abolished and the Interior Department will lose most of its power over energy matters.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
Thunderstorms and thunderstorms appeared in the El Paso area during the night, but by early today most of the state had clear to partly cloudy skies and quite warm temperatures.

The only cloudiness reported was in the form of patchy, high clouds over extreme Southwest Texas and along the lower portion of the coast.

Early morning temperatures remained quite warm as the readings in the 90s and near 100 Wednesday kept temperatures from dropping rapidly during the night. Most readings were in the 70s although extremes ranged from 57 at Marfa in Southwest Texas to 83 at Galveston on the coast. Some early morning readings included 75 at Amarillo, 76 at Wichita Falls, 72 at Texarkana, 80 at Waco, 76 at San Antonio, 71 at Houston, 75 at Corpus Christi and Brownsville, 80 at Del Rio, 79 at San Angelo, 73 at Lubbock and 70 at Dalhart.

Forecasts called for continued hot temperatures today with most readings in the 90s and some readings near 100 in Central and South Texas. There will likely be some afternoon and evening thunderstorms and thunderstorms in the Panhandle, the mountains of Southwest Texas and along the coast, forecasters said.

Senator has garage sale

MECHANICSBURG, Ohio (AP) — Bill Saxbe, former state legislator, U.S. senator, attorney general, ambassador to India and world traveler, is having a garage sale.

He's cleaning out his house this week and preparing to sell thousands of items — like souvenir wood-en nickies, hand-carved inlaid teak screens, a bouquet of peacock feathers — he and his wife collected on five continents.

The items, which will be sold Aug. 12 and 13, are scattered through Saxbe's rambling, two-story house and several outbuildings. Among them are a Russian brass samovar bought in North Africa, a Gurka hat from Nepal, a World War I German helmet, a newly upholstered love seat and an old typewriter case crammed with fishing gear.

"We're selling this Bijar rug from Persia," said Saxbe, giving a running commentary on everything he touched. "I was going to ask a couple of hundred for it until an antique dealer offered us $1,500. There's a Sarook rug from Persia that's going, as well as rugs from Afghanistan, Pakistan and India."

So are a number of oil paintings, mostly flower arrangements and still lifes, done by his wife, Dolly.

She caressed a set of handcarved teak screens inlaid with bone and brass. "They've got to go," she said with reluctance.

"We've been buying this stuff for years and decided we just had to do something with it," she said. "It takes up so much space."

"You can't enjoy it because it's in dead storage," Saxbe added.

Saxbe, 61, now practices law in this rural community 30 miles west of Columbus. He became attorney general in 1973 and in 1975 was named ambassador to India by President Ford. He returned to the United States last January with the change of administrations in Washington.

Now, he and his wife walk among the shoes and tools, chests and tables that marked a period of their past, fingering some items, blowing dust from others, debating whether to part with a memory.

He held up a brass spittoon: "I must have 8 or 10 of these. We've brought back stuff from all over the world."

"There must be a hundred hats here," he said, pointing to a wall of the garage where they hung on nails. "But I'm not selling them, maybe 50, but not all."

"It's a traumatic experience," Mrs. Saxbe said of deciding what would go and what would stay. "Bill, here's that old maple youth bed."

"Let's keep it," Saxbe responded. "Here's that Mamma's bench. My great-great-granddaddy made that, about 1825."

"It's not for sale."

Suicide verdict changed

MASON, Tex. (AP) — Most residents of this Central Texas community agreed two years ago when Dr. James Bodenhamer's body was found that he was not the type who would take his own life.

At the time the official report said the 62-year-old physician died of a "self-inflicted" gunshot wound.

Today, however, Mason County authorities have begun searching for a killer who they say fired two shots into Bodenhamer's body in a wooded area south of town.

Five days before the body was discovered on Sept. 2, Bodenhamer had kissed his wife and said he was going to see a critically ill patient. His wife never heard from him again.

Police found Bodenhamer lying on top of his own pistol. An autopsy report said he had been shot once in the chest.

The report said: Cause of death "undetermined." But returned Justice of the Peace Marvin Lange said his records show the 62-year-old physician died of a "self-inflicted" gunshot wound.

But suspicions about the death remained. Last week, Mason County Dist. Atty. Louis Crump ordered the body exhumed and a second autopsy performed.

Two entry wounds were found this time. One in the chest. One in the back. The suicide verdict was changed to homicide.

"We've got an unsolved murder on our hands," announced Mason County's current sheriff, Don Grote. "The ultimate goal is an arrest or arrests."

Bodenhamer didn't fit the stereotype of the country doctor. His neighbors said he was a flashy dresser. One resident said the doctor was a man "who made a lot of money and bought a lot of things."

Police Chief J.T. Gibbs was one of the townspeople who said they weren't convinced Bodenhamer's death was suicide, especially since he seemed a likely target for revengeful gamblers because of his known fondness for poker and racetrack betting.

"He'd know a quicker way of dying than two haphazard shots in the chest," said Dr. Douglas Mims, a friend of the victim. "The average doctor has nar-

Workers sterile

LATHROP, Calif. (AP) — The men noticed it first, swapping stories over lunch at the chemical plant where they worked in this tiny central California town. None had fathered children lately.

That was a few years ago. Today, part of the Occidental Chemical Co. plant is closed and doctors are scrambling to figure out what has made several young workers sterile.

Twenty-six men work in the section of the plant which makes farm chemicals. According to a company spokesman, 23 of the men agreed to tests a month ago after initial studies raised questions about their sexual fertility. Eight of them had already had vasectomies.

But James Lindley, Occidental vice president and Western Division manager, said that of the remaining 15 men tested, 10 were totally sterile or had almost non-existent sperm counts.

"At this point, we just don't know what the cause is," Lindley said Wednesday. Most of the men are in their 20s and 30s and had fathered children before they started to work at the plant, he said.

According to William Steffan, head of the Occupational Health Branch of the California Department of Health, the prime suspect in the baffling sterility is a soil fumigant called DBCP (dibromo and chloro-propane).

Steffan declined to pin definite blame on the chemical but said that current medical evidence "focuses strong suspicion that ... DBCP is implicated in the induced sterility."

He said there is no federal or state standard which sets safe amounts for DBCP handling. "It was never thought to be particularly toxic," Steffan said. "I started looking around and there weren't any children being born," he said. The union, the Oil Chemical and Atomic Workers International, began efforts to persuade the men to get tested for sperm counts about a year ago, but Hodges said it was a "delicate matter."

Finally, last month, the men submitted to the tests. Results disclosed last week confirmed the sterility. Farm chemical production at the plant was halted last Thursday. On Tuesday, limited production resumed but stopped a short time later at the request of the state.

Steffan said the farm chemical section will remain closed until the state investigates further. Watching for results with special interest, of course, will be the workers.

Said employe and father of one Mike Trout, 24: "My wife and I have been trying to have another child. It got me a little depressed."

Tanzanian to be in DC

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, turning his attention to the problems of southern Africa, is receiving a long-time opponent of white supremacist rule in that region, Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere.

Nyerere, widely known as the "conscience of Africa," is arriving in Washington today for two days of talks on his first official trip to the United States in 14 years.

The Tanzanian president is the first African leader invited here on a state visit by Carter. Discussions between the two are expected to focus on the intensifying black-white confrontation in Rhodesia, South Africa and Namibia and on ways of promoting black rule in all three areas.

Following a meeting with Carter at the White House, Nyerere was scheduled to attend a State Department luncheon hosted by Vice President Walter Mondale in the absence of Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, who is on a tour of the Middle East.

Officials said Carter would seek advice from Nyerere on what course to follow in Rhodesia, where Prime Minister Ian Smith has rejected a series of proposals by Britain and the United States. Smith has turned down one recommendation from Washington and London to move quickly to establish a one-man, one-vote system in the breakaway colony he leads.

Intense and scholarly, the 55-year-old Nyerere has played an increasingly active role in black African attempts to end white minority rule in southern Africa. He has served as chairman of a five-nation African group which has been working jointly toward that objective.

Also on Nyerere's schedule today were World Bank President Robert S. McNamara, Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Dick Clark, D-Iowa, professor John Kenneth Galbraith and U.N. commissioner for Namibia, Martti Ahtisaari.

Carter will host a working dinner for Nyerere tonight at the White House.

Names in the news

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Singer Elvis Presley, the City of Tampa and one of its police captains have been named in a lawsuit by a woman who claims she was assaulted by the officer at a Presley concert in 1976.

Orchid Ward, of Tampa, claims she was grabbed around the neck and thrown into another person by Capt. H. B. Mazy as she approached the stage of Curtis Hixon Hall to catch scarves thrown by Presley.

The suit, filed Tuesday in Hillsborough Circuit Court, says Presley was at fault when he invited fans to approach the stage.

The suit says Mrs. Ward suffered a physical handicap as a result, but did not describe any specific injury.

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Country-western singer Ferlin Husky was "doing very satisfactorily" early today after undergoing open heart surgery to correct heart blockage, a Miller Hospital spokesman said.

Husky will remain in the intensive care unit at the hospital for a few days, which the spokesman said was normal following such surgery.

Husky, 51, Hendersonville, Tenn., and his wife Marvis had been vacationing in Minnesota this summer.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — After 20 years as one of Bourbon Street's prime attractions, clarinetist Pete Fountain is moving his club out of the French Quarter because of a dispute with his landlord.

Fountain's attorney, Steve Plotkin, said Wednesday that Fountain and his band would open a new club inside a hotel on Sept. 1.

The owner of Fountain's French Quarter Inn is suing to evict the musician because he says he hasn't paid the $3,250-a-month rent since last November.

Plotkin says Fountain has withheld the payments because the landlord hasn't made necessary repairs on the roof and it leaks.

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — Marty Haggard, son of country-western singer Merle Haggard, was in satisfactory condition at a hospital here after being shot in the side by a hitchhiker.

Haggard, 19, was shot once and robbed of a small amount of cash by a man he picked up Tuesday night, sheriff's deputies said.

The assailant fled, but a passing motorist spotted Haggard and rushed him to Kern Medical Center for emergency surgery.

Haggard had improved Wednesday from serious condition.

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Marie Louise Weicker has been granted a divorce from her husband of 24 years, Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr.

Terms of the dissolution, granted by Superior Court Judge William J. Tierney Jr. on Wednesday, were not disclosed. A clerk said Tierney sealed the files at the request of both parties.

In the writ filed last December, Mrs. Weicker said the marriage "has broken down irretrievably" and that the senator's estate was worth more than $100,000.

She asked for an undisclosed alimony payment, child support and custody of at least one of the couple's three children aged 10 to 19.

Weicker, a Republican, gained national attention as a member of the Senate Water-gate committee.

Congress speeds through energy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's energy program, incubating quietly in Congress since April, is emerging swiftly this week much as the President conceived it.

The spur is Congress' summer recess, due to begin Saturday. Congressional leaders set aside the full week for action on the President's program. Among developments:

—Carter scheduled a Rose Garden ceremony today to sign the bill passed Wednesday creating the new Energy Department, the first new Cabinet office in 11 years. With his signature, a bureaucracy of 20,000 employees — now in other energy-related agencies — will come into being.

—The Senate Energy Committee planned a vote today on Carter's nomination of James R. Schlesinger Jr. as secretary of energy. Committee approval was expected to be routine, and the nomination could go to the full Senate on Friday.

—The House faced a vote today on a proposed five-cent per gallon increase in the federal gasoline tax. But the congressman handling the bill on the floor said it could fall as many as 100 votes short of passage because of public opposition. The current federal tax is four cents a gallon.

—The House voted against deregulating the price of natural gas on Wednesday, a key victory for the President, adopting instead a formula allowing slightly higher prices for newly discovered natural gas.

The energy package has survived relatively intact since Carter first submitted it in April. His biggest defeat has come in the area of gasoline taxes.

The five-cent tax before the House was only a remnant of the 50-cent standby tax authority for which Carter originally asked. The 50-cent tax was killed by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Carter has pushed for some tax authority, however, arguing higher prices are needed to discourage consumption.

But in other areas, Carter has succeeded.

His Energy Department proposal involves one of the biggest government reorganizations in years. The new department swallows three agencies — the Federal Power Commission, the Energy Research and Development Administration and the Federal Energy Administration. It also takes most energy matters from the Interior Department.

The new department will have jurisdiction over energy conservation, research, transportation, pricing, development, delivery, rationing and, for nuclear fuels, safety and waste disposal.

The administration says with the new department, it can for the first time establish a cohesive national energy policy and enforce it.

No more drugs says CIA

WASHINGTON (AP) — CIA Director Adm. Stansfield Turner says it's extremely unlikely the spy agency will resume testing mind-altering drugs on unsuspecting humans, partly because there's a chance of someone "blowing the whistle."

Turner told two congressional committees on Wednesday the CIA is watched more closely than it was in the past. "I can envision even a CIA employe writing to the Intelligence Oversight Board and blowing the whistle" if secret drug test were resumed, he said.

Also, Turner said, there is a greater awareness of "human rights" issues today than there was in the 1960s, when the agency was conducting secret drug experiments.

"This kind of activity could not happen today without it coming to the attention of authorities to stop it," he said.

Appearing before Senate panels on intelligence and health, Turner declared, "I assure you that the CIA is in no way engaged in either witting or unwitting testing of drugs today."

Discussing a past experiment, the CIA director said Project MK-ULTRA was launched 25 years ago out of "concern for our being taken advantage of by other powers

Two guerrillas were killed, one was critically wounded and two were captured but there were no Israeli casualties, the Israeli military command said.

Israeli troops discovered a break in the border security fence and footprints, Israeli radio said. The soldiers tracked the guerrillas and cornered them in an olive grove near Kibbutz Ashdot Yasov.

Firemen answer trash fire

Pampa firefighters were called to 2121 N. Hobart Wednesday by a report of a trash dumpster on fire.

Otis Cochran, driver with the Pampa Fire Department, said damage was restricted to the dumpster's contents. Cause of the blaze is not known.

Mexican pipeline slated

HOUSTON (AP) — Six United States companies have signed a "memorandum of intention" with the national utility of Mexico for construction of an 850-mile natural gas pipeline from southern Mexico to the international border at McAllen, Tex.

A spokesman for Texas Eastern Transmission Corp. of Houston said the other participating companies include Florida Gas Co., Southern Natural Resources Co. of Birmingham, Ala., El Paso Co., Tenneco, Inc. and Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp., all of Houston.

The pipeline, according to the spokesman, is to be built by the Mexican utility, Petroleos Mexicanos (PEMEX).

"It is important to remember that no contracts have been signed," the spokesman said. "I think what the companies are doing is saying they will go ahead with this. We don't know what the price of the gas will be. That figure is tied to the price of Number 2 fuel oil in New York harbor."

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My best friend's mother died recently, and I attended her wake. There were many people there. Most of them were telling jokes, drinking and laughing as if they were at a wedding or some kind of celebration. I thought it was disgusting, and it made me both angry and sad. When I asked my mother why people behaved that way at a wake instead of being solemn and serious out of respect for the dead, she said, "That's just the way it is. The only time some people see each other is at weddings or funerals."

I'm only 14, but I think people should save the jokes and laughter for weddings, not funerals.

What do you think, Abby? If you print this letter, maybe people would change the shameful way they act at wakes.

JOHN

DEAR JOHN: It's more than mere coincidence that the two words most frequently interchanged by accident (?) are "wedding" and "funeral."

It's not the lack of respect for the deceased, it's the human tendency to make the most of the opportunity to catch up on old friendships and family ties that accounts for the partylike atmosphere at most wakes. Add to that the fact that alcohol tends to break down inhibitions.

Don't be angry or sad, John. Were the deceased able to express his opinion of the apparent merrymaking at his own wake, I'll wager he'd be all for it. (I would.)

DEAR ABBY: I would like to voice a complaint against teenagers in general: A teenager had a transistor radio on a public bus yesterday, and he just about blasted the whole busload of passengers off the bus with rock and roll music. Why don't those teenagers show a little respect for the rights of others?

IRRITATED

DEAR IRRITATED: Why condemn ALL teenagers? Only one was guilty. The bus driver (an adult) was responsible for the comfort of his passengers. Didn't HE shirk HIS duty?

DEAR ABBY: I am so mad, I have to unload on someone, so here goes.

My husband is self-employed. A year ago he did a job for a customer who lives in a home much more beautiful than anything we could ever afford. After a year, we received a check for this job. The check was misplaced (I thought it was stolen), so I called the lady and asked her to please stop payment on it.

I found the check today and called the lady back to tell her I had found the check and to apologize for any inconvenience I had caused her. She asked me to SEND HER ONE DOLLAR, as this is what it cost to stop payment on that check!

After waiting a year for our money, how could anyone be so miserably cheap?

CLEVELAND

DEAR CLEVELAND: For people who are miserably cheap, it comes naturally.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Our son is 6 years old and is starting school this year. I don't want to be a worried mother but he has asthma and I'm afraid that he will be too active and cause an attack.

His father wants him to be active and hopes he will be a good athlete and is always trying to encourage him to get interested in sports. That would be fine if he didn't have asthma but the fact is he does and he can't be an athlete and have that kind of problem. We have had several arguments about this. He claims David will outgrow it and I claim that if and when he does will be the right time for sports and not until then.

What do you suggest in this situation? Can he play with the other children? Will he be able to run and exercise? I want him to grow up as a normal boy but I don't want to do anything that will hurt him either.

DEAR READER — This question often comes up when an asthmatic child starts to school. It is true that exercise can help set off an asthmatic attack. It is also true that some of the outstanding personalities in sports have been asthmatics. In the 1972 Olympics, five medal winners were asthmatics.

You may remember that Rick DeMont won a gold medal for swimming but was disqualified because he had taken medicine to prevent an asthmatic attack before the race. Many asthmatics participate in sports.

There are two approaches in preventing an asthma attack, the use of medicines that prevent it or limiting the physical activity to short bursts of exertion. It usually takes more than two or three minutes of vigorous exercise to induce the attack. This means that baseball is an ideal sport.

Polly's pointers

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — We use a chamois to wash the car but between uses it dries, cracks, breaks or falls apart. Please tell us how to preserve a chamois so it can be used again. — N.T.

DEAR N.T. — You could care for this chamois just as one treats a pair of chamois gloves. Wash in lukewarm water and make a suds with a mild soap. Squeeze the water through the chamois instead of rubbing and if stubborn spots remain gently use a soft brush on them. Rinse several times in lukewarm water and at the end I prefer a rinse of lukewarm suds to help retain the softness but there are varying opinions on that last rinse. See which you like best: plain lukewarm water or lukewarm suds. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — I bought a large heavy plastic trash can and lid to use for storing my son's outdoor toys at night and when not in use. The yard stays looking neater and space is saved in our storage shed. An added bonus is that my son finds as many uses for the trash can as a child does with large empty boxes and a little imagination. — MRS. W.P.

Watermelon puts punch into summer

By Aileen Claire NEA Food Editor

Looking for a different punch bowl for your next warm weather party? Try a watermelon. It makes a lovely centerpiece for a summer party table and adds its own flavoring to the punch it holds.

When preparing a watermelon boat for punch, save the melon fruit to serve as dessert garnished with berries, cherries or fresh mint sprigs. Or sprinkle it with lemon or lime juice, cream sherry or ground ginger when serving it later. You may freeze the fruit using a light sugar syrup. You can have your watermelon and eat it, too.

A watermelon boat punch is a mingle of citrus juices and for those who want, you may spike the punch with rum-sprinkled watermelon cubes. Another use of a watermelon boat is to hold a fruit frost of orange sherbet, for example.

Those with late summer or early fall weddings will find a watermelon punch bowl a decorative and different way from which to serve a large group.

WATERMELON BOAT PUNCH
Watermelon Boat (about 16-pound melon)

- 1 bottle (84 ounces) fruit juicy-red Hawaiian Punch, chilled
- 1 can (8 ounces) frozen tangerine juice concentrate, partially thawed
- 1 can (8 ounces) frozen lime 'n' lemonade concentrate, partially thawed
- 1/2 cup watermelon juice
- 3 cups ginger ale
- Ice cubes
- Citrus slices for garnish
- Rum Melon Cubes* (optional)

To make the boat, you'll need a large watermelon. If it does not rest evenly, cut a thin slice from the bottom. Then cut off a two-inch-thick horizontal slice from the top. Cut and scoop out fruit leaving a clean shell and juice. Scallop edge of melon to make an attractive boat. (Use toothpicks to mark off points.) Chill in refrigerator until serving time.

Combine punch, tangerine juice and lime 'n' lemonade concentrates, and watermelon juice in boat. Gradually stir in ginger ale. Add ice and citrus slices. Ladle into punch cups. Makes three and one-fourth quarts or enough for 26 four-ounce servings.

*Rum Melon Cubes: When you scoop out Watermelon Boat, reserve about two dozen cubes of watermelon. Sprinkle these lightly with rum and refrigerate. At serving time, place one in each punch cup.)

TARRAGON BEANS

If your snap beans aren't really young, they'll need long cooking time.

- 1 pound tender young snap beans, tipped
- 1/4 cup tarragon vinegar
- 1 tablespoon coarse salt
- 1/4 teaspoon dried tarragon

In a saucepan cover the beans with boiling water; bring to a boil and boil 3 minutes. Drain. Bring 1/4 cups water, the vinegar, salt and dried tarragon to a boil; pour over beans. Cover and refrigerate overnight before serving. This is a tangy relish.

LOTS OF BROWNIES

We've given one of our favorite recipes a new flavor twist.

- 2 cups granulated sugar
- 1 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
- 1-3rd cup light corn syrup
- 1-3rd cup molasses, preferably light
- 1 cup butter, at room temperature
- 6 large eggs
- 6 squares (6 ounces) unsweetened chocolate, melted
- 2 cups flour, stir to aerate before measuring
- 2 cups coarsely chopped walnuts

Stir together the sugars, corn syrup, molasses and butter; stir in eggs, one at a time, until blended. Stir in chocolate, then flour to combine. Stir in 1/4 cups of the nuts. Turn into an ungreased 15 1/2 by 10 1/2 by 1-inch jellyroll pan. Sprinkle with remaining nuts. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — about 40 minutes; surface should be very dark but not scorched. Cool completely on wire rack. Cut into squares and remove.

ELLEN MAY'S YOGURT ZUCCHINI

- From Armenian cuisine.
- 2 pounds zucchini
- Olive oil
- 8 ounces plain yogurt, at room temperature
- 2 medium cloves garlic, crushed
- Dash of salt
- Tip unpared zucchini and slice crosswise about 1/4-inch thick. In a large skillet heat a few tablespoons of the oil; add enough zucchini to fill skillet in a single layer. Cook slowly, turning as necessary, until tender and browned. Remove to brown paper to drain. Repeat with remaining zucchini, adding oil as needed. Stir together the yogurt, garlic and salt; spoon over the zucchini. Serve at room temperature, but any leftover may be offered chilled. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

JUDY THOMPSON'S LAST-MINUTE SUPPER DISH

Two 1-pound cans chick peas

- 1-pound can white kidney beans
- 1-pound can small white beans
- Two 6 1/2-ounce cans chunk-style tuna, drained
- 4-ounce jar diced pimientos, drained
- Medium-large red onion, sliced thin and separated into rings
- 1 large green pepper, seeded and chopped
- Lots of fresh parsley, minced
- Olive oil and red vinegar to taste

Drain the chick peas and beans; rinse with cold water and drain well again. Toss with remaining ingredients. Garnish with lettuce if you like. Serve at once. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Quick way to grease muffin pans: put a dot of butter or margarine in each cup and place the pan in the oven for a few seconds — just long enough to melt the butter — while the oven is preheating. Then swish the butter around each cup with a pastry brush.

NUTRITION

Gaynor Maddox

Go easy on fiber

Watch out for advertisements warning you are not getting enough fiber for your health. The amount of bran required in the diet is still to be determined by nutritionists and medical researchers. So go easy on adding it to your diet. Remember, no scientists are absolutely sure just what the long-term effect may be.

"So don't believe everything the advertisement tells you. But in respect to the structural failures such as diverticulosis, the evidence is much stronger. Doctors customarily put their patients on diets with increased fiber," says Dr. Roy Morse, professor of food science at Cook College, Rutgers University.

In an article in the pamphlet "Food Facts From Rutgers," he says further, "Diverticulosis literally means intestinal 'blowouts.' It generally happens to persons 50 years or older."

Current medical opinion holds that the cumulative effects of many years of low-bulk diet and frequent constipation may lead to these intestinal "blowouts." The blowouts frequently become infected. Symptoms include a vague, continuous abdominal aching, erratic bowel movements, and occasional seizure of severe stomach pain." Dr. David Morris, of the Rutgers Medical School, states in the same publication.

"If the patient will stick with it, a high-fiber diet for diverticulosis is generally helpful therapy. As to some of the other claims that high-fiber diets might reduce cardiovascular disease, cancer, or obesity, there is simply no evidence," adds Dr. Morris. "But I think it naive to look on this diet as anything more than a measure to improve bowel function."

"Until people utilize high-fiber foods as a replacement for, rather than merely an addition to, some of the fatty meats, desserts, candies, etc. in the diet, it wouldn't be rational to hope for any evidence to support some of the other claims," he adds.

To the question, "How much fiber is enough?" Dr. Morris answers: "It is estimated that the average daily intake of crude fiber in industrial countries is about 4 grams. But primitive people consume about 25 to 30 grams, which is unwise for most people."

Some scientists recommend only 2 grams increase in the diet. Others favor 10 to 12 grams, others as high as 15 grams.

Choco-chip bars

To prepare preheat oven to 375 degrees. Grease the bottom only of a 13x9 inch pan. Pour one package banana, date or nut quick bread mix into pan, and add one cup water, one egg and 1/2 cup semi-sweet chocolate pieces. Stir with fork just until blended, about two minutes, scraping corners occasionally. Sprinkle remaining chocolate pieces and nuts evenly over batter. Bake at 375 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes. Cool and cut. Makes two to three dozen bars.

Rediscover variety in salads

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Fresh salads using such available year-round items as avocado, iceberg lettuce, red onions, spinach, cucumbers and tomatoes please the eye and the tummy. What is more nutritionists would like to see more Americans, especially younger ones, add more fresh vegetables and fruits to their daily meals.

A fresh salad becomes, as many discover, a very special part of a lunch or dinner menu which a person can soon come to crave as much as they do extra coffee or cola... and salads are far more healthful. As a special treat make your own salad dressings of oil and vinegar and herbs.

LAYERED FRESH SALAD
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon dried leaf basil
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 clove fresh garlic, minced
3 tablespoons cider vinegar
6 tablespoons salad oil
1/2 cup chopped fresh parsley

4 tomatoes, peeled and sliced
2 small cucumbers, pared and sliced
1 red onion, sliced

In medium bowl combine salt, basil, pepper and garlic. Stir in vinegar, oil and parsley. Place layers of sliced tomatoes in clear container, then red onion and cucumber. Pour dressing over all. Cover and refrigerate several hours. Take to picnic in container. Makes 6 servings.

MIXED GREEN SALAD WITH LEMON DRESSING
2 1/2 cups iceberg lettuce, torn into bite-size pieces
2 1/2 cups fresh spinach, torn into bite-size pieces
1 cup escarole, torn into bite-size pieces

In a large bowl combine salad greens. Add about one-third cup Lemon Dressing*, toss lightly. Makes 6 servings.

*Lemon Dressing
2/3 cup salad oil
1/3 cup fresh lemon juice
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
1 clove garlic, peeled and split
1 teaspoon sugar
3/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
1/8 teaspoon paprika

In a small bowl or jar with tight-fitting lid combine all ingredients. Beat or shake until well mixed. Let stand one hour and remove garlic. Store in refrigerator. Makes 1 cup dressing.

AVOCADO SALAD
2 avocados, peeled and sliced
2 cups spinach leaves
2 cups torn lettuce
1/2 red onion, sliced
3 tablespoons soy sauce
3 cup fresh lemon juice
1/4 tablespoon salad oil
1/8 teaspoon dried leaf oregano
1/8 teaspoon dried leaf

1 tarragon
1 tablespoon toasted sesame seeds

In a large bowl mix together avocado, spinach, lettuce and red onion. In smaller bowl mix together remaining ingredients, pour over avocado and toss well. Serve immediately. Makes 4 servings.

Chilled lemon soup for the exotic

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Chilled lemon soup and avocado dip may sound like exotics from another world to many people but they are very much a part of our changing eating habits.

Those who have traveled to Greece are familiar with lemon soup and here is a variation that makes for a refreshing chilled soup during hot days. It also is good when served hot.

There are many ways to season an avocado dip and here is one that includes chopped tomato and sour cream plus some coriander, chili powder and pepper sauce.

CHILLED LEMON SOUP
3 1/2 cups chicken broth
2 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
2 eggs
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1 tablespoon grated fresh lemon rind
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/16 teaspoon cayenne
1 cup heavy cream

Heat chicken broth to boiling point in medium saucepan. Stir in tapioca. Cover and simmer 10 minutes. In small bowl, beat eggs with lemon juice, rind, salt and cayenne.

stir in cream. Stir a little hot mixture into egg mixture. Stir warmed egg mixture into saucepan. Cook over very low heat, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and coats a spoon. Remove from heat. Cool. Chill thoroughly. Garnish with thin lemon slices, sprinkle with paprika. Makes about four and one-half cups.

AVOCADO DIP
1 1/2 cups mashed ripe avocados (about 2 medium avocados)
2 lemons, grated fresh onion
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
1/2 cup chopped peeled

tomato
1/4 cup sour cream
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1 1/2 teaspoon chili powder
1/8 teaspoon ground coriander
1/8 teaspoon Tabasco pepper sauce

Cut avocados in half lengthwise, remove pit and peel. Mash by putting avocado through a food mill or mash in a small bowl with a fork. Sprinkle with lemon juice. Stir in remaining ingredients. Cover with plastic wrap placed directly on surface to prevent darkening and chill at least 2 or 3 hours. Serve with corn chips. Makes about 2 cups.

New Rotary president

Raymond W. Morrison, 1835 Grape, was recently installed as president of Pampa Rotary Club for 1977-78. Also installed as members of the board of directors were Jerry Carlson, W.J. Chambliss, Melvin Kunkel, Don H. Nelson, Jack Reeve, Gary Stevens and Gene Steel. (Pampa News photo)

The Lighter Side

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — When the lights flickered out along busy Wolfe Road in the suburb of Colonie, the local residents began to get nervous. But after glancing outside they were reassured — a Niagara Mohawk Power Corp. work crew was on the scene. Some reassurance. "We dug up our own cable," a utility company spokesman said sheepishly after the incident Tuesday afternoon. "It's embarrassing." Power was restored after about 45 minutes to the 240 customers in the area.

JOLIET, Ill. (AP) — Pete Friesen claims that for $120,000 he can move an entire china store across town without breaking anything. Although the move is attracting onlookers from throughout the area, Friesen says moving the store, Liebermann's Jewelry and China, is just another delicate, 710-ton job. The glassware and jewelry displays in Liebermann's windows haven't moved as the elephantine building rolled outward, crumpling the street and sidewalks and drawing an audience of hundreds. "Nothing inside the store will break," Friesen assured reporters as he inched the building 7 1/2 feet aloft on 70 tons of steel support beams, propped it on hydraulic jacks, mounted it on dollies and pushed it out into Ottawa Street. Next week, Friesen, who owns Advance Moving Contractors of West Chicago, will swing it around and begin to fit it into its new niche across the street and out of the path of a new city parking deck. At 46-by-90 feet, Liebermann's is not even the biggest building he's moved, although it is the heaviest. "I can move any size building, as long as there's enough money," said Friesen.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — First came horse diapers to keep the streets clean. Now, a New Orleans city councilman wants the beasts of burden who cart tourists around the French Quarter to wear license tags around their neck. The tags would show that the horses who pull the tourist carriages are in good physical shape, says Councilman Mike Early. Early is drawing up a bill to make owners have the horses inspected twice a year by the state SPCA. He said the periodic inspection would prevent abuse of the animals. Carriage horses in the French Quarter already wear diaper-like devices on their hind quarters.

Grayhound profits down

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The Greyhound Corp. has reported net income for the second quarter of $15.9 million and 37 cents per common share, a decrease from results of one year ago. Gerald H. Trautman, board chairman, said Tuesday that income for the period ending June 30 compared with $17.7 million, or 40 cents per share, for the same period last year. Revenues for the quarter totaled $933 million, compared with $950 million a year ago, he said. For the first six months of the year, net income was $24.9 million, or 57 cents per common share, compared with $31.5 million, or 72 cents per share last year, Trautman said. Revenues for the six months reached $1.8 billion, unchanged from the same amount last year. According to the board chairman, the decrease was a result of substantial losses suffered by the Armour Food Group of the corporation. He said Armour results, like the rest of the meat industry, were hurt by inadequate profit margins caused by the inability to advance prices to cover escalating costs. All other group operations showed profits during the quarter, Trautman said, although Transportation Group earnings continued to be hampered by reduced profits in Greyhound's intercity passenger operations. Trautman noted that a fare increase of 5 per cent granted by the ICC in May and an increase in the number of passengers helped improve Greyhound Lines' performance. "But these gains were more than offset by rising costs for fuel, labor, employee benefits and all other expenses," he added. Concerning other operations of the company, Trautman said Armour-Dial's consumer products had a record profit for the second quarter, with good results in Dial and Tone soaps, Armour Star canned meats and Malina yarn product lines. Food Service Group, which operates fast food, cafeteria and restaurant facilities in industrial, military, commercial and other installations, as well as in Greyhound terminals, reported a 14 per cent increase in earnings in the second quarter. He noted that the group began a three-year contract in May with Lackland Air Force Base, near San Antonio, Tex., under which more than 13 million meals will be served every year. Trautman said the Leasing and Financial Group, whose primary activities include leasing of capital equipment and computers, reported a 56 per cent earnings increase during the second quarter. Services Group, including car rental, aircraft servicing, customs brokering, personnel recruitment and other services, also were profitable during the period, but were down slightly from results in 1976, Trautman said.

I-35 nearly complete

EMPORIA, Kan. (AP) — The main north-south interstate highway between the Mississippi River and the Rocky Mountains is now open from Minneapolis, Minn., to San Antonio, except for a nine-mile gap in Missouri.

Gov. Robert Bennett of Kansas opened the last segment of Interstate 35 in Kansas Tuesday. Closing the 10-mile gap made Kansas the third state to complete its portion of the road.

Gas mix-up unknown to authorities

NORRISTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Authorities may not know until Friday how many patients died as a result of mislabeled oxygen and nitrous oxide lines in the emergency room at nearby Suburban General Hospital. Allegheny County Coroner Cyril Wecht, a pathologist hired by the hospital to study emergency room deaths, said Tuesday night that his preliminary findings indicate some deaths apparently were linked to the mixup, but he declined to give a number. "It is not a great number, but I would not want to express a number," he said. "Quite candidly, I have not in my own mind arrived at such a final judgment." Wecht said he hoped to deliver a final report by Friday. "In some instances, there are further records to study such as autopsies. I have looked through the 35 death cases.

There are some that I have to spend more time on," Wecht said.

By examining individual records of a patient's treatment and response, Wecht said he hoped to determine whether "the administration of nitrous oxide or deprivation of oxygen was related to that patient's death."

Richard Anderson, the hospital's administrator, said a plumbing contractor had mislabeled pipes while extending existing gas lines into the hospital's emergency room, which opened Dec. 15.

As a result, 11 outlets labeled oxygen actually were carrying nitrous oxide, or "laughing gas," and four lines labeled nitrous oxide were carrying oxygen, hospital officials said.

The error went undetected for almost seven months, until the hospital's chief anesthesiologist, Dr. Leonard Becker, tried to revive a man with oxygen on July 6 and noticed him turning blue, Anderson said. Hospital officials said 300 of the 9,000 persons processed in the emergency room may have been treated with the wrong gas.

seven-month period, but hospital officials noted that not all were treated with gas and some were dead on arrival.

William Walkup, president of the hospital's board, said Tuesday that "a preliminary review by the professional staff at the hospital indicates there will be a maximum of five cases — five deaths" linked to the mix-up.

A total of 35 persons died in the emergency room during the Court axes death films

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A Texas judge who ruled that a television cameraman could film executions of condemned prisoners was reversed today by a federal appeals court.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said First Amendment protection of a free press does not cover "matters not accessible to the public generally, such as filming of executions in Texas state prison."

In appealing, Texas said allowing television cameras at executions would amount to having public executions, and the state stopped those in 1920. Texas has not used its electric chair since 1964 but may resume executions soon, under a new capital punishment law. State policy is that there may be eyewitnesses, but no tape recorders or cameras.

Tony Garrett, a television cameraman in Dallas, filed suit in U.S. District Court contending the policy deprived him of rights as a newsmen, guaranteed by the federal Constitution.

U.S. Dist. Judge William J. Taylor Jr. agreed, and ordered Texas to permit Garrett to attend and film executions, if and when they are held.

In reversing, the 5th said the U.S. Supreme Court has held: "The First and Fourteenth Amendments bar government from interfering in any way with a free press. The Constitution does not, however, require government to accord the press special access to information not shared by members of the public generally."

Garrett also argued that barring cameras from executions denied him equal protection of law. The 5th said that doesn't hold water because the print reporter is also denied the use of a camera, and the radio reporter the use of a tape recorder.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A management consulting firm says the House of Representatives wastes its own time and taxpayers' money through poor organization and excessive red tape.

The conclusion is contained in a report for the House Commission on Administrative Review, which is considering recommendations to streamline the internal organization of the House.

Prepared by the Westinghouse National Issues Center, the unpublished report offers a rare look at the financial operations of the House through the eyes of efficiency experts from private industry. A copy of the study was obtained by The Associated Press.

The report says: "Lack of a centralized leasing arrangement for office equipment costs taxpayers $218,000 per year because the House doesn't take advantage of discounts offered by suppliers of electric typewriters."

"The House keeps inventories of virtually all its property except venetian blinds, rugs and drapes, although there is 'near zero' risk of theft because Capitol police guard every exit and en-trace 24 hours a day. Most businesses inventory only high-value items."

"The Finance Office once fell 50 days behind in paying claims for official expenses because nobody made plans to handle a crush of new paperwork caused by a change in House rules."

"Nearly one-fourth of all expense claims submitted by congressmen's offices must be resubmitted because they are prepared incorrectly. The consultants blamed the difficulty on a needlessly complicated financial system, a 'bewildering number of forms, and little guidance offered (to) the people who must initiate the paperwork."

"Ten different voucher forms are in use, and should be reduced to one or two. As many as 15 per cent of all vouchers submitted are for amounts less than $10, causing 'unnecessary paperwork' that could be reduced through use of petty cash funds."

"A consistent thread that the study team has observed is the burden which poor system performance can place on members' offices," the Westinghouse report said. "A primary objective of the system should be to meet member needs with the input on their parts of as little time as possible. The job of members' offices should be legislation and not administration."

Among the recommendations being considered by the House commission, headed by Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., are creation of a new, professional administrator to take over management chores now handled by political patronage employees and congressmen.

The remote ancestor of the letter N was a wavy letter used to represent water.

Exhaustion, drugs cause baboon's death

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A baboon who was sure to die as a result of experimentation at a San Antonio, Tex., research facility, met his fate early when he died after escaping from his box at Newark International Airport and eluded authorities for eight hours.

The baboon, who was shot with a tranquilizer dart, died Tuesday from a combination of the drug and exhaustion, said Newark Humane Society Executive Director Lee Bernstein.

The animal, which was to be shipped to the Southwest Research and Education Foundation in San Antonio, gnawed its way through its wooden box and escaped Tuesday as it awaited loading onto an airplane outside the Braniff Airlines cargo terminal.

It was captured eight hours later in a storeroom after playing hide-and-seek with Port Authority policemen and Humane Society officials in the Braniff and Flying Tiger terminals. Newark firemen, who were the first to arrive at the scene, withdrew from the chase earlier.

The 3-foot 6-inch, 26-pound baboon hid in crawl spaces and fell on several occasions through the plasterboard ceilings of the Flying Tiger facilities. Bernstein said he sprayed a crawl space with a mild insecticide in an effort to bring the animal into the open.

It was spotted in a restroom shortly afterwards and finally captured in the Flying Tiger storeroom after being shot with the tranquilizer dart.

Bernstein said the baboon never regained consciousness. The escaped primate, although "more vicious than a gorilla," was a timid animal and more prone to flee than attack humans, he noted.

The baboon, believed to be 3 to 4 years old, was one of six supplied by Prime Labs in Farmingdale for experimentation on atherosclerosis, an artery-impairing heart disease. Authorities said the experimentation eventually would be fatal to the animals.

Crewman hurt in cargo ship blast

HOUSTON (AP) — A cargo ship exploded and burned in the Houston Ship Channel Tuesday night injuring at least one crewman.

Authorities said all crewmen on the Philippine Corridor were accounted for shortly after the blaze was discovered.

An arson inspector said he suspected arson. The 10,000-ton vessel arrived at Dock 12 Saturday and fueled up Monday.

It carried a small cotton export and general cargo, including machinery, said Irby Banquer, a spokesman for Ayers Steamship Co., the local shipping agent.

The ship had a crew of 42 but many of the crew members had passed to go ashore earlier. They all were eventually accounted for and were based to a hotel.

One man was taken to a Houston hospital with second degree burns about his chest. He was reported in poor condition.

"I heard yelling and saw crewmen running," said Felix E. Robiso, first mate on the ship which was to have departed today for Panama. "There was smoke, then I saw fire and got a fire extinguisher. When the fires became bigger, the floors began to crumble."

Arson inspector James Witt said he found "fire on two outside decks where there was nothing to burn." He said it appeared a flammable liquid was used to start the fire.

One crewman said he believed the fire started about midship.

"I don't know what to do," he said. "My clothing, my watch, everything is still on ship."

Alexander P. Gaines Jr. guys his mission in New York City, posing with a grin and an apple in front of a photomural of Atlanta in his Manhattan office. Gaines, a real estate man from Atlanta, has been sent by its Chamber of Commerce to the Big Apple to lure some of its commerce their way.

"You can buy a case of beer in Atlanta for that. I just blasted that bartender, just blasted him."

"This is one of the major problems of New York. Corporations have a hard time getting somebody like me to come into New York. If you have a kid, you're talking about $650 a month for an apartment. It's tough to raise a child. Connecticut's been able to breed off New York because of it."

Gaines feeds his clients facts and figures on income and real estate taxes in Atlanta, availability of land, transportation routes, climate, potential markets in the Southeast, and wage costs.

"I don't talk down New York," he said. "I'll never do that. I'm not here to convince a corporation to move from New York, but I'll talk to them if they want to. We're not here to pick on New York. Its survival is important to every other city."

"New York is a beautiful city. It's got the worst and the best of everything. If you hate New York, you hate the world, because it's got everything in the world."

For another thing, his mission is not so much to steal the headquarters of a corporation as to steer to Atlanta a company already planning a southern branch. His hunting ground extends beyond New York, from Baltimore to Boston.

Part of the job is ensuring that companies already in Atlanta stay there. Gaines says that 450 of the 500 largest industrial firms have some kind of operation in Atlanta.

Decisions by big, well-known corporations to move their headquarters from New York draw much publicity, but they are not the city's biggest problem, according to Frank Corbin of the city's Economic Development Administration.

Their exodus in recent years has accounted for only about 10 per cent of the city's loss of 650,000 jobs since 1969, Corbin says. Bankruptcies and layoffs among small companies are the real problem. Of the 190,000 businesses in the city, 98 per cent have fewer than 100 employees and 90 per cent have fewer than 20.

City officials have never counted the states or regions that stalk business prey on their streets, most through share representatives or public relations firms or annual junkets to New York. None has drawn the attention Gaines has, however.

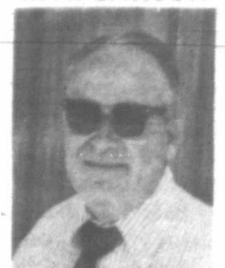

The earth is slightly flattened at the poles, making it an oblate spheroid.

EDITOR'S NOTE — Many states and regions long have had an eye on New York City's corporate wealth and have sought to lure it through part-time emissaries or annual junkets by state officials. But none has attracted the attention, or suspicion, as has a young fellow from Atlanta who set up permanent camp smack in midtown Manhattan. He personifies the growing struggle between the emerging sunbelt and the waning snowbelt.

ing in. Many of their biggest and richest neighbors had fled to the hills of Connecticut, and they didn't look kindly on this newcomer and tales of still greener pastures. The stranger was Alexander P. Gaines Jr., a real estate salesman from Atlanta, sent by its Chamber of Commerce to lure some of New York's commerce their way. That was five months ago.

Alex Gaines hasn't stolen any corporations yet, and he may never. But he has learned first hand why some companies decide to leave New York — the city has lost more than a half-million jobs in the past eight years — and how people who grow restless and look for a challenge, as he did in Atlanta, find it in New York. His apartment is on a fashionable street near the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Central Park jogging path which he tours in the wee hours each morning. But it's only half as large, and costs $125 a month more, than his last apartment in Atlanta. And at night, when he explores the cafes of Greenwich Village, he has to watch it. Soon after his arrival, he bought a beer for a friend and one for himself (an indulgence permitted by the daily jogging, he says) and the tab was $5.76.

Senate confused over possible SS tax hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate committees are sending conflicting signals on whether there will be a new increase in Social Security taxes this year.

The Senate Budget Committee approved a new federal budget Tuesday that assumes Social Security taxes will not go up during the 12 months that begin on Oct. 1, 1977. The panel's chairman, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, said he could find no support in Congress for raising the taxes.

The Finance Committee, which handles all tax legislation in the Senate, voted last week against transferring income tax revenues to Social Security. That action, a blow to the Carter administration, indicated there is a good chance higher payroll taxes that pay for the pension system will be voted this year.

Economists for the budget committee said there is no reason to rush into a tax hike for Social Security because such action could damage the economy. They noted that Congress will have until mid-1979 to prevent Social Security's slide into bankruptcy.

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, said that since an increase in Social Security taxes is inevitable, "I'd like to see us face it now." But the committee rejected his argument without a vote.

Social Security, welfare and other "income-security" programs account for $146.6 billion of the $459.25 billion in federal spending envisioned by the budget committee's budget for 1978. The panel earmarked $110.2 billion for defense.

The Senate budget would mean a deficit of $84.35 billion for the next fiscal year. Figures prepared by the House Budget Committee would allow $489.5 billion in spending and a deficit of $88.6 billion. The latest figures from the Carter administration anticipate spending of $482.9 billion and a deficit of $81.5 billion.

The Senate panel spent two days drawing the budget, which differs only slightly from the preliminary figures approved last May.

The House and Senate must agree by Sept. 15 on a spending ceiling and a minimum amount of revenues expected by the federal government during the 12-month period. Once those figures are approved, no additional spending will be allowed unless the ceiling is specifically increased.

Canada may delay pipeline

OTTAWA, Canada (AP) — In a move that may threaten the future of the project, a special government-commissioned study has recommended a two-year delay in building a Canadian pipeline to bring Alaskan natural gas to the lower 48 states.

Such a delay might favor a rival U.S. plan to liquefy Alaskan gas and ship it by sea to American markets. But U.S. officials reportedly will consider accepting the delay in return for an increase in Canadian natural gas exports to the United States.

The study, conducted by Dean Kenneth Lysyk of the University of British Columbia law school, said start of construction of the $10 billion pipeline should be put off from 1979 to 1981, primarily to allow time to settle the land claims of Indians and other natives of the area.

The Canadian Parliament is to debate the issue in a special session Thursday and Friday, and the government is to make a decision by Sept. 1.

Foothills Pipe Lines Ltd., the company seeking to build the pipeline, declined immediate comment, saying it wanted time to consider the report.

But its U.S. partner, Northwest Pipeline Corp., said the group still hopes to have natural gas moving through the pipeline by November 1982.

In Washington, congressional and government officials said the recommendation puts the Foothills-Northwest proposal in question and may improve the chances of its rival, El Paso Pipeline Co. of El Paso, Tex.

El Paso wants to build a pipeline across Alaska to carry the gas to the port of Valdez, where it would be cooled into a liquid and transported by tanker ship to the U.S. West Coast.

The overland route through Canada would cost less, but a delay in the land line could reduce the cost difference.

The Canadian Press news agency quoted sources close to key members of Congress as saying, however, that the delay might be acceptable if the Canadian government increases natural gas exports from Alberta to help cover shortages in the United States.

The earth's polar diameter is 7,900 miles.

Jaycees to bring Fowler

Wally Fowler, billed as "Mr. Gospel Music," will be on stage in the M.K. Brown Auditorium at 8 p.m. Aug. 25 when the Pampa Jaycees bring the Nashville, Tenn., based International Gospel Music Festival to Pampa.

Ron Spears, Jaycee member, said tickets to the four-hour program are available in several participating Pampa businesses and from Jaycee members. Proceeds from the show will go to the Genesis Houses for Girls and Boys here in Pampa.

Fowler was the first song publisher in Nashville, arriving there after World War II. In 1948 he switched to gospel music.

He was one of the original members of the Oak Ridge Quartet and appeared regularly in the Grand Old Opry with Eddy Arnold, Red Foley and Minnie Pearl.

Fowler established the first recording company in Nashville and he wrote Eddy Arnold's first hit record. He is credited with starting Arnold on his career and giving Chet Atkins his first job. He introduced the late Hank Williams to the Grand Old Opry.

Joining Fowler in the International Gospel Music Festival will be Jeannette Lamsford, the "Kate Smith of gospel music," and the Fowler Family and Band.

"The Stars of Tomorrow," a local talent competition, will precede the Nashville show. Spears said he will judge the local talent entries with help from two anonymous judges. Cash prizes of $50 for first place, $25 for second and $15 for third will be awarded.

Persons interested in entering the talent show must purchase reserved seat tickets by Aug. 23. Spears said tentative plans call for the local talent to go on stage at 7 p.m., but added that time may be moved up if several performers enter.

Advance tickets are $5 for reserved seats, and $4 for adult general admission. Children and high school students may purchase advance general admission tickets for $2. Spears said tickets will be available at the door on the night of the concert, but he added they will cost $1 more.

Little Rock, Ark., was originally named "La Petite Roche" by French explorer Bernard de la Harpe, who established his trading post on an outcropping of rock on the Arkansas River.

Kenster calls 'em

by Tom Kensler, sports editor

Football shorts and player promos

I suspect the argument over which state produces the best high school football players will never be resolved. But it's interesting that the latest Prep Sports Magazine has an article titled "Texas: Still King of Football" and then lists Cincinnati, Ohio, Moeller and Los Angeles, Calif., Loyola on the next page as the top two teams in the country.

Three Lone Star teams are listed in the mythical Top 20: Sherman (3rd), Langview (8th), and Austin Reagan (19th).

Prep Sports also gives a final Top 20 for high school basketball teams and, as usual, there are no Texas schools listed.

Humble's Mike Mosley, who's bound for Texas A&M on a football scholarship, was named as the nation's track & field athlete of the year. He has personal bests of 24-2 in the long jump, 9.5 in the 100 dash, 13.5 in the 120 high hurdles, and 6-4 in the high jump.

Although David Walker had a solid year as the Aggie quarterback in 1976, I feel Mosley will be in the A&M lineup by mid-season.

Well the NFL pre-season games have started, and if the Saturday Bears-Jets game is an indication of the quality of play, I think I'll continue my habit of ignoring the exhibition games.

The TV networks try to make the games sound exciting, but the veteran players simply do not have the enthusiasm, and there are few good rookies. The coaches substitute players so often it seems like a hockey game, and the ball changes hands with the frequency of a soccer contest.

I haven't been able to get excited about pre-season games since 1973 when the New York Giants won all of their exhibitions and promptly lost their first seven regular-season clashes.

Perryton running back Brad Beck is receiving unusual pre-season buildup. He is picked for first-team all-state by Texas Football Magazine, and is listed as one of the top backs in America by Prep Sports. Hope Coach Weibach has been working on a defense to rope the Ranger flash when Perryton invades Harvester Stadium on Sept. 16.

Until Friday, I had never seen a player "promo" from a university sports information office, although I had heard about these campaign circulars. But the brochure from Bradley concerning Roger Phegley is more blatant than I had ever dreamed.

The front page of the four-page advertisement contains an action shot of the basketball star with the headline — "Considering that Roger Phegley of Bradley University ... On the inside, four more photos are framed by his scoring records and awards. And on the back page, the caption under a full-page picture reads — "Don't you think he should be an ... All American?"

Player promos are an attempt to solicit publicity and votes for all-star teams which, in my view, cheapens the all-American polls. I question the justification for SIDs spending money from the athletic budget to advertise one of their players.

Although I shouldn't let the Bradley brochure influence my selections, Phegley's chances of making my all-American team are now two — slim and none.

Quote of the week: Sports Illustrated author Robert Cantwell speaking about the 50-year-old wild burros of New Mexico's Bandelier National Monument — "Old burros never die, they merely turn into Methodist Ministers."

Hoyt remembers 1927 Yankees

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

The New York Yankees were sitting quietly on the bench. They were not at each others' throats. There were no signs of turmoil.

"Our bench was like a second grade schoolroom," says a member of the team "If you talked, you only talked baseball. The manager maintained discipline like we were in the second grade and had our hands clasped behind our backs."

Obviously this description does not fit the 1977 New York Yankees' "Murderer's Row." Rather it is pitcher Waite Hoyt's recollection of the 1927 Yankees' "Murderer's Row," the team that featured such stars as Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig, won the American League pennant by 19 games and the World Series over Pittsburgh in four straight.

"I won't compare eras. It's just not valid," said Hoyt, the ace right-hander for the Yankee team of 50 years ago. "But we had one of those teams that always found a way to beat you. When we had to do something, we did it."

No team in baseball history is more renowned for its offensive clout than the 1927 Yankees. They led the AL in every major offensive category except doubles and steals. Overlooked in the parade of runs was the Yankee pitching staff's collective earned run average of 3.20, the best in the league.

Hoyt was 22-7, Urban Shocker 18-6, Wilcy Moore 19-7, Herb Penneck 19-8, Dutch Ruether 13-6 and George Pipgras 10-3 for a combined 101-37.

"People say it was easy pitching for that club," said the 77-year-old Hoyt by telephone from his home in Cincinnati. "But it wasn't. We didn't score 10 runs in the first inning of many games."

The fans, however, didn't pour into ballparks across America to see pitching duels. They wanted to see the powerful pinstripes, particularly Ruth and Gehrig who were engaging in their personal home run derby. Ruth ended up with a record-breaking 60 homers. Gehrig finished with 47. Tony Lazzeri, the No. 3 man in the league, had 18.

"There was a kind of rivalry between the two, but they didn't talk about it at all," said Hoyt. "I can't recall them making a big deal about the 60 home runs. Ruth had hit 50 homers before, so it wasn't really that big a deal. It never was like (Roger) Maris."

"One day, Babe did say, 'Anyone want to bet me I don't hit one out?' Lazzeri bet him $5 or $10, and he did hit one out. People don't realize that it wasn't easy hitting homers in right field at Yankee Stadium then. The right field porch wasn't there, and right field sloped uphill."

"Ruth cleared the bases ahead of Gehrig 60 times, but Gehrig still managed to lead the league in runs batted in." Gehrig knocked in 175 runs, batting .373.

But Ruth, of course, was the real crowd pleaser. A giant of a man on and off the field, Ruth was major league baseball for that era, the Roaring Twenties.

"He was the leader on the field," Hoyt said. "None of us was jealous of Ruth. We looked up to him. We knew he had a great deal to do with our success."

"Ruth was profane and immoral, but he had soul. And in the area of humanities, the guy did more for his fellow human beings than any other player."

Rangers outslug Chicago again

CHICAGO (AP) — Hitting has dominated the race in the American League West so far, but Mike Hargrove of Texas Rangers says superior pitching—which he believes his team has—will prevail in the end.

Superior pitching, or just good pitching, wasn't evident

Wednesday night. The Rangers and Chicago White Sox hooked up in a marathon battle which lasted 12 innings before the Rangers claimed a 12-10 victory.

Each team collected 19 hits in the contest which lasted four hours, 30 minutes.

"Minnesota, Kansas City and Chicago all have good hitting, but we've got better pitching and maybe—just maybe—that will give us an edge in the division race," said Hargrove, who blasted a three-run homer during a six-run Texas 12th inning.

The six-run rally gave the Rangers a 12-6 lead. They needed every bit of it.

Chicago came back to score four runs in the bottom of the 12th as Eric Soderholm, Ralph Garr, Jorge Orta and Richie Zisk, each collected runs batted in. The outburst sent reliever Adrian Devine, 8-5, to the showers in favor of Darold Knowles.

"What can you say after a loss like that," said Chicago Manager Bob Lemon, who saw his team lose its fourth straight game. "Nothing went right."

The setback reduced the Sox' lead in the AL West to 2½ games over Minnesota and 4½ over Kansas City and the Rangers, who have now won five games in a row and 11 of 12.

"We came in here with winning all four games in mind," said Bump Willis, whose single drove in the go-ahead run in the 12th. "We wanted to move into contention and we've done that."

The White Sox entered the Texas series after winning three of four from Kansas City in an emotion-filled series last weekend. Lemon said he doubts that his team experienced a let-down against the Rangers.

"I really can't tell you if the Kansas City series took that much out of us," said Lemon. "Our pitching has let us down in this (Texas) series."

The lead see-sawed through the first three innings before the Rangers took a 6-4 lead with a pair of runs in the fourth and another in the fifth on Toby Harrah's 10th homer.

Chicago cut the edge to 6-5 on Jim Spencer's RBI single in the bottom of the fifth and tied it in the eighth on Garr's eighth homer. Chet Lemon also had a solo homer, his 15th, for Chicago.

Don Kirkwood, the fifth Chicago pitcher, came on in the 11th to put down a Texas scoring threat, but fell victim to the Rangers' assault in the 12th.

In addition to Hargrove's three-run homer, his fourth, and Willis' RBI single, Jim Sundberg singled in a run and Willie Horton drove in another with a sacrifice fly.

Willis gets knife

NACOGDOCHES, Tex. (AP) — Houston Oilers fullback Fred Willis says he will return to Houston and undergo surgery on his left shoulder.

Willis, the Oilers' second leading ground gainer in 1976 with 542 yards, said Wednesday he made the decision because the Oilers have declined to guarantee his contract. Willis is in the option year of his contract.

"They leave me no choice," Willis said. "Five doctors have told me I need surgery, so I guess I'll have surgery. I want to go to practice and earn my salary as long as I could, but they wouldn't meet me half way."

"Without a guaranteed contract, I could be put on waivers at any time. I've waited for five years here so I know I'm good enough to make the team.

but they might use all this as an excuse to get rid of me. I've got a big contract. No one would pick me up off waivers. I can't risk that."

Adrian Burk, the team's general counsel, said the Oilers have no quarrel with Willis, but it is against club policy to guarantee contracts.

Suit filed to question UIL

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union has filed suit on behalf of a high school basketball player to test the constitutionality of the University Interscholastic League's transfer rule.

The suit in district court says John Stewart, who transferred from Vermont to Austin Anderson in March when his father was moved here by his employer, should be allowed to play next season — his junior year.

UIL rules say any transfer other than a senior must sit out a year before playing football or basketball.

"The right to freedom of interstate travel is a firmly established principle of law," said John Buckley, staff counsel for the Texas branch of the ACLU. "This (transfer rule) is a clear infringement of that right. I don't think the rule is constitutional."

Bailey Marshall, the UIL's new director, said the UIL has won the only two court tests in which athletes and their parents have questioned the transfer rule.

"The rule is designed to stop recruiting or kids just hopping from one school to the other," said Marshall. "We simply can't have a hearing on every case. It's not a right of someone to play sports. The schools have a right to establish rules."

Stewart, 16, is a 6-foot guard who attended Rice Memorial High in South Burlington, Vt., last year.

"He's a good basketball player. He shoots real well," said Anderson Coach Johnny Brown, who will have a senior transfer on his team next season in 6-6 Brad Friess from Jacksonville, Fla.

The first American League player to have his uniform retired was Lou Gehrig of the Yankees. His No. 4 was honored in 1939.

Hoop star seeks baton championship

DENVER (AP) — Veteran Houston Rockets basketball standout Calvin Murphy is shooting to be the best male baton twirler in the country.

Yup, baton twirler. The 6-foot-10, 185-pound guard is competing in the National Baton Twirling Championship which began Wednesday in Denver. Murphy won the Texas men's championship this year after staying out of twirling competition since he was a teen-ager.

"Baton twirling is the much harder sport," the eight-year National Basketball Association veteran says. "Concentration is the key word in twirling and you have to be a more complete athlete."

The Denver tournament will be the last hurrah in Murphy's baton twirling career, the 29-year-old athlete said. And he'd like to win the national championship before he retires.

Murphy said he got into twirling as a Connecticut five-year-old who didn't have much choice.

"I was bullied into it," he said with a grin. "If I had to think about starting it today, I wouldn't do it. Or if I had been 10 years old I would have ignored it. All six of my mother's sisters were twirlers and they thought it was the thing for me to do."

He competed in three state age-group championships, twirled the baton for the band in junior and senior high schools and once performed at halftime for the Buffalo Bills in the National Football League.

But isn't baton twirling just for sissies? "There was some teasing when I was in junior high, but I wasn't bothered much because they knew I would punch them out. I had a reputation of handling myself pretty well."

"In high school he let his basketball prowess silence any harassment."

"One time a new guy in town was asking who the sissy was out there in the white uniform," Murphy recalled. "He played basketball for another school and the next time I saw him I scored 45 points against him."

Murphy, who has averaged more than 15 points a game in each of his eight NBA seasons, says he occasionally gets razzed by his Rocket teammates.

"The other guys do things like marching by my locker with brooms for batons ... things like that," he said.

"I have fought that image for 24 years of my life," he said. Although he plans to quit baton competition after this year, Murphy said he will continue operating his twirling school in Houston. And he's got his eye on even another pastime.

"I want to get into roller skating," he said. "I'm a skating fool, but I haven't taken any lessons."

Foster wacks "ungodly" HR

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Sparky Anderson has been in baseball 25 years and he's seen his share of home runs, but George Foster still makes him wonder.

"I've never seen a ball hit like that, never," said Anderson, a touch of awe in his voice, the sight of Foster's eighth-inning blast fresh in his mind following the Cincinnati Reds' 5-3, 10-inning victory over the Chicago Cubs Wednesday night.

"That's my all-time all-time," added Anderson, who estimated at 550 feet the shot hit off Cubs reliever Willie Hernandez.

The ball jumped off Foster's bat like a shot and headed down the left-field line on a steady rise. It was still rising when it landed to the right of the foul line, in the third row of the third tier at Riverfront Stadium — the red seats, which have been reached only five times in the eight years the stadium has been in use.

"It was a pretty sight," said teammate Pete Rose.

In other National League games, the Philadelphia Phillies beat the San Diego Padres 8-1, the Houston Astros blanked the Pittsburgh Pirates 3-0, the New York Mets edged the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3 in 14 innings, the Montreal Expos beat the San Francisco Giants 4-2 and the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Atlanta Braves 5-1.

Foster's home run was his 36th of the season and gave him 105 runs batted in — tops in the majors in both categories. It tied the score at 3-3, then Dan Driessen cracked a two-run homer in the 10th to win it.

Afterwards, despite his game-winning homer, Driessen could only talk of Foster's blast.

"He's got ungodly power," said Driessen. "I'm trying to find out what he eats for breakfast so I can try some. He makes the rest of us look bad. I'll take mine, but mine was just nothing compared to the one he hit."

Foster provided some extra incentive for himself during batting practice before Wednesday's game when he stroked a practice pitch all the way to the red seats.

"You do it in batting practice," Foster said, "and you think to yourself, 'I want to do it in a game so everybody can see it.'"

The game started out as a pitching duel between the Cubs' Rick Reuschel, going for his 10th victory, and Reds rookie Paul Moskauer. The only run of the first six innings was Swisher's homer in the fifth.

Niekro nabs third straight

HOUSTON (AP) — After toiling as a reliever for most of his 12-year career, Houston's Joe Niekro is quickly becoming a standout in the Astros' starting rotation.

Niekro, 7-3, scattered nine hits and collected his second straight shutout and his third consecutive complete game Wednesday night as the Astros blanked the Pittsburgh Pirates, 3-0.

The veteran knuckleballer who has started only three contests this year walked only two and struck out three while lowering his ERA to 2.57.

"I'm happy that Bill (Astros Manager Virdon) gave me the opportunity to start and I'm even happier about the way I've been pitching," Niekro said. "Over the past 10 days, I've probably pitched the best that I have in my entire career."

LBJ papers deny fraud State Rehab Commission wins discrimination suit

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Former President Lyndon B. Johnson's private papers repeatedly claim that vote counting irregularities in the 1948 U.S. Senate election could have benefited his opponent as much as they did Johnson.

Sixteen news reporters thumbed through the voluminous papers in eight bright red manuscript boxes Wednesday at the invitation of the LBJ Library.

The inspection followed an exclusive interview obtained by the Associated Press with Luis Salas, a Jim Wells County election official, in the controversial 1948 voting that lifted Johnson from the U.S. House to the Senate by a margin of 87 votes.

"I am without knowledge concerning the ballots in either Duval, Jim Wells or Zapata Counties, or any of the other counties in Texas, except what I have seen in the press," said an unidentified, undated memo that apparently was authored by Johnson. "I have not been to any those counties and have not conferred with the officials in those counties."

In the Sunday story Salas said he certified 200 false votes for Johnson after the Democratic party's runoff primary, Aug. 28, 1948. Salas told the AP that the deal for the extra 200 votes was made at a late night meeting in San Diego, Tex., near Alice, between Johnson, South Texas political boss George Parr, Salas and other Jim Wells County Democratic officials.

Efforts by former Gov. Coke Stevenson, Johnson's opponent, to stop Johnson's certification were blocked by an order from U.S. Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black.

"Johnson did not win the election, it was stolen for him," Salas told the AP.

One document in the LBJ campaign files was a memo, obviously prepared by Johnson's supporters, which listed 23 "possible election irregularities which benefited Coke Stevenson."

The text of Johnson's "victory" speech made Sept. 6 said: "There were substantial revisions and corrections — 100 away from Johnson in a north-east county; 225 more for my opponents in a west central county; 113 added in a Gulf Coast county and 100 in another Gulf Coast county; 400 transferred to his column in a deep east Texas county and 23 in a neighboring county; 30 in a West Texas county. The Dallas County returns were corrected after their certification to take 2,000 votes from my total."

In the speech Johnson also revealed the source of a nickname that he carried the rest of his life. He said the brightest spot of "the last hectic week was when some wit at my headquarters dubbed me as 'Landslide Lyndon.'"

Another document in the file is a letter written on Oct. 19, 1948, to former Gov. James V. Allred asking his help in answering charges of election irregularities made by Stevenson. The letter was written by A. J. Wirtz, one of Johnson's top attorneys in the numerous court fights following the election.

Wirtz told Allred that "when Stevenson saw that these alterations and changes were not sufficient to overcome Johnson's lead, he tried to get the results changed in Jim Wells County by going out with a pistol-packing ex-Texas Ranger and resorting to intimidations and threats; by having a new county chairman and member of another political faction call an owl meeting at night, with out notice to the members of the executive committee; that even then the committee would not change the result, but Stevenson proposed to have the new county chairman follow the example of Stevenson's cousin, the county chairman at Dallas County, and change the certificate without authority."

Harry Middleton, director of the LBJ Library, said the eight boxes of documents "is all we have in the library (on the 1948 election). It is all open."

Reporters were told to watch for two letters that had been "sanitized." Derogatory references to a third person by letter writers had been blocked out. It was obvious from the remainder of the letter that the omissions did not concern the election.

State Rehab Commission wins discrimination suit

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A turbulent period in the life of the Texas Rehabilitation Commission in 1975-76 produced a grand jury probe and four race discrimination suits in federal court.

The commission has won its first case in federal court, and its top executives say the matter should have died in the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

Nothing ever came of the 1976 grand jury investigation. U.S. District Court Judge Woodrow Seals of Houston ruled on July 22 that racial discrimination was not involved in the forced resignation of Billie W. Singer, a former TRC counselor.

Singer, a white man, sought $500,000 in damages, plus reinstatement and back pay. He accused the commission of retaliating against him for his friendship with James Copeland, a black who had filed an EEOC complaint.

Copeland complained of discrimination in January 1975 after his job was eliminated in an austerity program. Even though the EEOC found no discrimination had occurred, Copeland is suing the TRC in federal court.

Commissioner Jess Irwin said

Singer was given the choice of resigning or being fired after inspection teams said he had falsified his record of rehabilitating TRC clients.

A client is considered vocationally rehabilitated if he gets a job and keeps it for 60 days. "We either could not find the employer, could not verify a client had been employed or could not find he had worked the required 60 days," said TRC general counsel Edward Austin.

Two other discrimination cases against the TRC are pending in Houston federal court.

Allan Provost, a black whose job was eliminated in the 1975-76 austerity program. EEOC said there was discrimination. Irwin says Provost was an unfortunate victim of inadequate state and federal funding.

Bill Nunnellee, a white man whom Irwin says he fired as a supervisor in Houston because he refused to accept 180 days' probation. EEOC held that Nunnellee was fired for refusing to falsify personnel records sought by the EEOC in Provost's case.

Irwin said Nunnellee had failed to obey orders to closely supervise a counselor, who later resigned when he was learned she had paid an eye doctor for general medical treatment of TRC clients and had cleared illegal financial aid payments to four members of a Vietnamese refugee family.

Three of the four also were involved in a Harris County grand jury probe of the TRC Houston office last year.

Copeland complained to the Houston district attorney's office last year about TRC operations. Nunnellee and Provost were called as witnesses during a Harris County grand jury probe of the local TRC office.

Department of Public Safety officers worked with district attorney's investigators in the TRC probe, and Irwin said the DPS entered the case at his request.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Sam Adamo of Pampa. For your insurance needs, call 669-6991. East on Highway 60.

Therefore our office is closing the investigation," said Adamo, who no longer works for Dist. Atty. Carol Vance. The four discrimination cases reached federal court after EEOC finished its investigations. EEOC has no automatic remedies against a state agency. The U. S. Justice Department can follow up an EEOC finding by suing the agency. Or it can back off and merely tell a complaining party he or she has the right to sue privately. This it did in the Singer, Nunnellee and Provost cases.

Witnesses describe bank fraud

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — A description of how officers of Citizens State Bank tried to cover their own dealings with the now-defunct institution has been given in a federal trial here.

Jim Bob Nance, a former executive vice president of the bank, testified as a government witness for the second straight day about bank operations. On trial are Enrique Salinas, who was the principal owner of the bank when it was closed by state authorities in June 1976, his wife and three former bank officials.

The five are charged with conspiring to misappropriate $1.9 million in Citizens State funds. Nance told how bank officers tried to "break the trail" of their financial dealings with the bank.

"HAIR" FILM
NEW YORK (AP) — United Artists has announced the upcoming filming of "Hair," one of the most popular musicals of the 1960s, under the direction of Academy Award-winning director Milos Forman.

Filming of the musical by Jerome Ragni, James Rado and Galt MacDermot will be on various Midwestern and New York locations. The screenplay for the film was written by Michael Weller.

"Hair" opened on April 29, 1968, at the Biltmore Theater and continued its smash Broadway run through July 1972.

Suspect, hostage shot dead

HOUSTON (AP) — The police department's internal affairs division investigated today an incident in which authorities said a robbery suspect and his hostage were shot to death by officers.

Police said the officers had no idea one of the men shot to death was a hostage.

Killed were Ermit Wayne Hines, 22, identified by police as the robbery suspect, and Roland Vincent Johnson, 19, a restaurant employe.

Police said the shooting followed a robbery of the office of the Forward Times, a weekly newspaper serving the black community.

They said Johnson was taking out the garbage at the restaurant when he was forced at gunpoint to go into the restaurant and get his car keys. Authorities said the two men were shot in the car by the officers as the left the restaurant. Police said Hines aimed a gun at the officers.

The fatal shooting followed a robbery of the newspaper office in which a reported $15,000 was taken.

Police officers H. W. Rogers and P. G. Walls, who said they fired into the car, were among several units answering the robbery call.

Homicide detective J. C. Mosier said each of the two officers flanking the car fired his weapon twice. Both occupants of the car were shot in the chest.

Police said a .32 caliber revolver was found in the car. Both Johnson and Hines were dead at the scene.

Police Chief Harry Caldwell, who went to the scene of the shooting, called it a tragedy.

"It's always a tragedy when human life is taken and I think we should view it in exactly that manner," he said.

Charles Simon, 25, a reporter-photographer with the Forward Times, said he was forced at gunpoint by a man to take the man to the money box.

"He put the gun in my ribs and pulled the trigger," Simon said. "But it wouldn't fire. I just went blank. I just fell to the ground. I thought I was shot and I didn't want him to shoot me again."

Police nab hitchhiker

WAURIKA, Okla. (AP) — A Vernon, Tex., woman was held hostage at gunpoint by a hitchhiker and forced to drive through parts of southwest Oklahoma and northern Texas before escaping Wednesday, authorities said.

A suspect, identified as Jimmy Howard, 20, of Elmer, Okla., was arrested after a high speed chase involving six police cars and was being held in the Jefferson County Jail here, authorities said.

Federal charges against the man were expected to be filed Thursday, said deputy sheriff Owen Freeman.

Norma J. Hurt, 19, told authorities she picked up a hitchhiker in Altus, Okla. at around noon Wednesday and drove him to Vernon in northern Texas.

Once in Vernon, the hitchhiker pulled out a .22-caliber pistol at about 1 p.m. and ordered Miss Hurt to drive him to Ar-

Banker failed to appear

HOUSTON (AP) — A State Bar of Texas prosecutor says he will seek a contempt citation against former Victoria banker Bill Kemp, who failed to appear for a deposition hearing in connection with former Texas Supreme Court Justice Donald B. Yarbrough's disbarment trial.

Frank Bean, chief legal counsel for the bar, said Wednesday, "I will do whatever I must to get Mr. Kemp's deposition. I will take it with him behind bars if necessary."

Fred J. Kolodey, an attorney for Kemp, showed State District Court Judge Bert H. Tunks a telegram from Kemp saying he was employed outside the state and would be unavailable to give the deposition.

Tunks, a retired appellate judge, specially appointed to hear the case, said Kemp's deposition would be taken one way or another before the scheduled Sept. 6 trial date.

Kemp was president of the Commercial Bank in Victoria at the time Yarbrough was the bank's primary stockholder in 1974-75. Last June Harris County Dist. Atty. Carol Vance said he had tape recordings of conversations in which Yarbrough plotted to have Kemp killed. However, Vance said he did not have enough evidence to obtain conspiracy to commit capital murder charges against Yarbrough.

Vance said William Rothkopf, a former business associate of Yarbrough, had a special body microphone taped to him and made the recordings during conversations with Yarbrough between May 12 and June 10.

Waggoner Carr, Austin lawyer and former Texas attorney general, accompanied Yarbrough to the hearings.

As two newspaper photographers shot pictures, Yarbrough raised his right hand and advanced toward one.

"You do that again boy and I'm going to lay you right on the floor," Yarbrough was quoted as saying. No blows were struck and Carr laughed during the incident.
