Farmers say 100 per cent parity or else

Ag chief Bergland gets ultimatum

Pueblo City Auditorium overflows with protesting farmers from across the country.

PUEBLO, Colo. — They behaved in a respectable manner, for the most part, with a minimum of jeers and shouts and catcalls from the audience. But they controlled the meeting. They told the government man how the cow eats the cabbage.

Farmers from across the nation converged on this city Thursday to deliver an ultimatum to the United States secretary of agriculture. Either they get 100 per cent parity for the commodities they produce or they will cease production — strike — beginning Dec. 14.

Bob Bergland, ag secretary, was in Pueblo following a recent "invitation" from a loose-knit, recently formed, rapidly growing organization called American Agriculture.

"Let's don't go to Washington, let's make them come to us," one of the group's founders had commented before asking Bergland to attend the gathering that was held in the filled-to-overflowing city auditorium.

An estimated 3,000 farmers and other agri-businessmen arrived by airplane, automobile, pickups and larger trucks, and several came in tractor convoys to draw attention to the growing protest movement.

A farmer from Walsh, Colo., said, "We shut our schools down so the kids could come along. The school board just decided damn the torpedoes, full speed ahead."

Several farmers from the Pampa area flew in two planes to Pueblo, landing a few hours before Bergland's 4 p.m. arrival.

Later, at the meeting downtown, Bergland, the 2,000 farmers inside the building, and several more listening to loud speakers outside, would hear another Springfield farmer say, "We will neither advocate nor condone violence."

However, Fred Vanderburg said he talked with a couple of Colorado farmers at the airport who did not seem opposed to a show of force if it becomes necessary to make the strike effective.

"The only way to make this thing work," one of the Lamar farmers told Vanderburg, "is if a fellow sells a dozen eggs, shoot him; if a fellow plants wheat to sell, shoot him. You'd only have to shoot about four and the rest would get in line."

One of a group of Delaware farmers who learned of the meeting on a Today Show program, said in the airport lobby that "200 farmers sent us out here to see if this is the kind of movement we want to join."

We are in full support of this party program. Secretary Bergland has got to listen to us. For once, Washington has given us one thing in common — low prices. I hope we are able to unite and get the farmer back on the economic level he should be on."

Protesters gathered at the airport before being escorted to the meeting hall downtown by Colorado State Police and Pueblo City officers. There were many hand-lettered signs on the variety of vehicles in the parade.

"We love America. We love our soil. But without a profit, it's useless to toil," read one.

There was a long wait for the farmers who filled the auditorium. Occasionally applause and cheering would break out when someone would hold up a protest sign or would walk to the front of the auditorium wearing the name of his state taped to his back — an estimated two dozen states were represented.

At one point someone broke out a harmonica and entertained the folks in his part of the auditorium with a few strains of "Wildwood Flower."

Bergland was introduced by Colorado Congressman Frank Evans who managed to refer to the secretary as "my friend" three times in the brief intro.

"Thank you very much, my good friend, Frank Evans," Bergland began. His comments included, "I can tell you, I do care." And, "I know from my experiences as a farmer that there are many things wrong. And, I'm not able to perform miracles."

He blamed the current crisis on surplus and blamed the surplus on things that happened before he took office — "the result of fence-to-fence planting."

When he took the speaker's stand, he left his jacket hanging on the back of his chair. The auditorium was warm and some of the comments from farmers (See Farmers p. 4)

Gas shut off for Texas city

By RICK SCOTT
Associated Press Writer
CRYSTAL CITY, Tex. (AP) — Crystal City, the Texas town that could not pay its natural gas bill had its supply cut off this morning.

Officials of Lo-Vaca Gathering Co. turned off a valve in Corpus Christi, about 200 miles east of the small South Texas city of 8,000, and the supply of natural gas to 1,200 customers gradually hissed to a halt.

The city owes Lo-Vaca about $800,000. It was the end of more than two years of legal battles between Lo-Vaca and Crystal City centered on whether a utility company can pass through to consumers the additional costs of fuel. The Texas Railroad Commission had approved the cost increases eventually, so did the courts and Crystal City lost the war.

Other small cities in the state had found themselves in a similar position, but had passed the price hikes to customers and held the cash in escrow.

Councilman Ruddy Espinoza Jr. told newsmen that Lo-Vaca had turned off the gas to the city by remote control from Corpus Christi. A Lo-Vaca spokesman said the gas was cut at 9:26 a.m.

A reduction in the gas pressure caused valves at the edge of town to shut off automatically.

Crystal City utility workers under the supervision of Texas Railroad Commission, immediately began to purge the Crystal City gas system of any remaining gas in the pipeline.

Espinoza said, "the people of Crystal City are going to be left without natural gas. Butane is the main possibility as an alternative, but again it is a financial problem."

Espinoza said 63 per cent of the Crystal City population lives below the poverty level.

The town has refused to pay Lo-Vaca more than the 36 cents per thousand cubic feet (mcf) of gas agreed to in a long-term supply contract. Because of soaring natural gas prices in the unregulated Texas market, the Texas Railroad Commission ruled that Lo-Vaca could charge about $2 per mcf.

City officials have maintained Crystal City's 8,000 residents, most of whom are Mexican-American, simply cannot pay the bill, which has built up since January 1975.

Courts have upheld the commission's authorization of higher prices despite the long-term contracts.

Crystal City, however, had still refused to pay and had prevented earlier cutoffs through legal maneuvers.

But on Wednesday, an appeals court in El Paso barred further legal proceedings in the case and Lo-Vaca notified Crystal City officials that the gas would be turned off.

The Texas Supreme Court honored that ruling late Thursday when it refused to consider the appeal of a damage suit against Lo-Vaca by a Crystal City resident.

Deregulation deal pushed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd disclosed today a new effort is being made to reach a compromise on natural gas pricing.

Failure to reach an accord could jeopardize passage of President Carter's energy program, Byrd told reporters.

Carter's proposal to continue price controls on natural gas was dealt a major blow Thursday night when the plan was defeated in a trial vote.

Instead, the Senate decided to continue debating a rival industry-supported plan to deregulate new gas.

Meanwhile, the House passed, 317 to 47, a bill to authorize spending $6.7 billion on civilian research and development by the Energy Research and Development Administration.

The authorization includes $150 million in funds for a nuclear breeder reactor project at Clinch River, Tenn., which is opposed by President Carter.

Since the Senate agreed on $75 million for that project, differences will have to be settled in conference. The President was described by House sources as considering vetoing the bill if considerable funding for Clinch River were included.

Senate aides said the proposed natural gas pricing compromise would apparently involve a gradual deregulation of new gas prices, possibly over a five-year period.

Although industry forces viewed Thursday's vote as a key victory, there was some doubt that they could master the needed votes to get a deregulation bill out of the Senate.

For one thing, some administration allies are planning a filibuster and had proposed scores of amendments to the legislation.

Byrd said that deregulation opponents might be willing to compromise because "they have indicated they want to have a bill passed."

The Senate leader said the ultimate compromise would have to be made in a House-Senate conference committee.

As a deeply divided Senate continued debating the energy bill, Byrd scheduled an unusual Saturday session. But many Senate leaders predicted the debate would continue through next week and possibly longer.

With continued debate scheduled today, two Democratic foes of deregulation, Sens. Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio and James Abourezk of South Dakota, said they were ready to offer more than 100 amendments in an attempt to block a final vote.

Metzenbaum said he was prepared for a "full discussion on the issue," a Senate euphemism for filibuster.

There was no sign that White House advisers were supporting a filibuster, and the President, who lobbied personally Thursday in a losing cause, was described as still hopeful deregulation would be rejected.

The President's energy plan, already approved by the House, calls for a 30-cent increase in the price of natural gas, now set at $1.45 per thousand cubic feet. Controls also would be extended to currently unregulated gas sold within producing states, mainly Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration today proposed rules that would bring supersonic Concorde flights to as many as 12 U.S. cities on a permanent basis.

The plane currently is flying only into Dallas International Airport outside Washington. Those flights would be allowed to continue pending the adoption of noise and other rules which are necessary before the plane could fly into the other cities.

Transportation Secretary Brock Adams said the proposed rules are "designed to protect the health and safety of the American people, set a fair and reasonable noise standard for SST operations and strike a balance between legitimate domestic and international interests of the United States."

The rules will be opened for public comment and it may be several months before they are adopted.

Until that time, Adams said the British-French Concorde can continue to serve Dallas International Airport near Washington under present restrictions.

A 16-month trial period ends Saturday at Dallas for the Concorde.

The secretary said the administration "continues to support a trial period of up to four Concorde flights a day" into New York City's Kennedy International Airport.

The Concorde had been authorized to conduct a 16-month trial at Kennedy, but this has been blocked by court action.

Adams said that once new rules are established for the supersonic plane, the British and French could fly the plane into a dozen cities on which the Department of Transportation has conducted SST environmental impact investigations.

They are, in addition to New York and Washington, Anchorage, Boston, Dallas, Honolulu, Los Angeles, Miami, Houston, Chicago, Seattle and San Francisco.

Each city retains a degree of local option on allowing the flights.

The decision will be welcomed in Britain and France, which have been fighting for months for additional U.S. landing rights as a means of pulling the Concorde out of a deep financial hole.

The two countries have invested $3 billion in building 16 of the world's first faster-than-sound commercial airliners.

Under the rules proposed by Adams:

—The 16 Concorde completed or under construction will be permitted to operate in the United States, provided their noise levels are not increased above present levels and they do not operate over the United States at supersonic speeds.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Ammonia from coal plan

The W.R. Grace & Co. is planning on making a study on the feasibility of using high-sulphur coal to produce ammonia. This type of coal presents many problems in its use for fuel since burning it will not meet Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA's) standards without expensive scrubbing equipment.

Ammonia is used mainly in fertilizers but it also has many uses in industry. Normally it is made from natural gas. So here is just another way that coal can make more gas available without bringing down the long hard fist of the EPA.

First a synthetic gas plant is projected to be built at a cost of about $300 million. Then a plant to turn the gas into ammonia will be needed to transform the gas into the final product.

It has been estimated that the plant could be in operation by 1982 if plans can go through as projected. At present the company is seeking part of its financing from the Energy Research and Development Administration. Money advanced to be paid back at a later date so that the facility will remain in private industry.

We would suggest that the company might be better off to seek all private capital instead of letting the government into the act. But this is not the main thrust of our observations here.

Hardly a day goes by without some news of alternative forms of energy being studied or actual attempts made to utilize new methods of private individuals or firms.

In Salt Lake City, Utah, a company has announced plans to put 100 hydrogen-powdered cars on the market next year. The firm has a $100 million facility near Irontown, Utah, and has patents on hydrogen conversion systems. The company believes that coal gasification plants will be producing hydrogen as a byproduct in the near future.

The heat pump which can materially cut down the use of fuel in home heating is no longer just a dream. Last year 200,000 were sold. The marketing manager of Borg-Warner Corp. has said, "There are millions of homes that can save fuel and money with an add-on heat pump. The largest producer, Carrier Corp., says that sales this year will climb to 400,000."

Although in the first stages of development there is growing interest in fuel derived from garbage and there have been some savings in the use of petroleum fuel from this effort already.

There are several new light bulbs now in production which can save a tremendous amount of fuel when placed in general use.

This list could go on and on but the crux of the matter is that the governments concentration on political means to force only the saving of supplies of gas and oil is the epitome of a short-sighted approach to solving our dangerous dependence on foreign imports to support our energy needs.

The list also is a strong indication that our industrial capacity to improve and improvise is matched only by individual talent in the inventive ingenuity of the American worker.

Is it not time for us to place our confidence in the positive approach to utilize a greater amount of our abundant energy sources? Or should we follow the dead hand of government control and regimentation?

Let's tell the political regulators to bug off and let the real producers go about their work of building a better America.

"All I said was I'd like to speak to you about a 'park' proposal."

And the oil waits

Just as it seemed that at long last there would be some exploratory drilling on the outer continental shelf off the coasts of New York and New Jersey, a judge declared null and void federal leases to oil companies.

The decision of the judge caused untold monetary losses to the oil companies. Only time will tell how much oil and gas was delayed from reaching our markets.

The government netted $1.1 billion for the leases, yet just this one man was able to forestall the start of exploration and production. His arbitrary decision in February has just been reversed by the U.S. Court of Appeals in New York. The three-judge court of appeals unanimously decided to reinstate the sale of leases.

Exploration plans will now be submitted to coastal states to allow them time to prepare for offshore oil and gas development. It is probable that the effort could get in more difficulty as the so-called environmentalists in the coastal states try for more stalling tactics.

Through their tactics coupled with the political agencies, the Eastern Seaboard has become noted for wanting and getting a lion's share of the nation's gas and oil but gas resisted all efforts to cooperate in the production and distribution. They seem to want all of the energy fuel they can get as long as the industry confines itself to the backyards of others.

Many geologists believe that the mid-Atlantic region, which oilmen have been trying to develop for decades, may also be rich in gas reserves. It has been estimated that gas reserves in the area may exceed nine trillion cubic feet.

Perhaps the fuel crunch of last winter may slow down all the groups that have opposed the development of future petroleum reserves in the East.

Refineries, tank farms for imported oil, drilling, and even docking facilities have been proposed only to have militant groups quickly form to oppose construction.

We have not heard of anyone opposing building underground pipelines to bring in the gas and oil from western states. This is probably due to the fact that it would be a bit difficult to bring them the fuel in buckets.

Maybe we are being a bit harsh with our eastern neighbors for in a smaller degree we have that same problem within our own states and communities. Our people, too, want the benefit of the use of natural resources but will oppose development within their sight. We just can't have it both ways: out of our neighbors backyard to use in our own.

The scary part of all this is that one man, a single judge can hamper so great a development for so long a time. This is way more power than any one man should be able to wield.

In Washington

Convention inflation

By Martha Angle and Robert Walters

DETROIT (NEA) — "We're going to need Yankee Stadium for the (1980 Democratic National) Convention," moaned exasperated political writer Ken Bode.

"I know," replied a bemused Morley A. Winograd, chairman of Michigan's Democratic party. "This is the Astrodomes proposal."

That exchange occurred earlier this month, when the Democratic party's Commission on Presidential Nomination and Party Structure, headed by Winograd, met here to consider reforms and refinements in party rules.

Despite the implication of the Bode-Winograd colloquy, the commission promptly moved to tentatively adopt the mindless proposal being discussed — a rules change that will grant honorary, ex officio delegate status at the 1980 convention to virtually every real and imagined Democratic leader in the country.

Specifically, the commission proposed to award everything except voting rights to Democratic members of the House and Senate, governors, mayors, state and local officials, community leaders, party officials and even contributors.

That's not all the politicians got from the commission. Another proposal, also tentatively approved, calls for a 10 per cent expansion of the total number of voting delegates (slightly more than 3,000 last year) with all of the newly created convention votes specifically earmarked for distribution to "party leaders and elected officials."

The first, although not necessarily most significant, problem with that approach involves the massive size of the quadrennial presidential nominating conventions, among the largest meetings now held in this country.

In addition to the 3,000 delegates and their families at the 1976 Democratic convention, there were an equal number of alternates and their families, an oversized press corps of about 7,500, politicians' staff members, contributors, guests, observers, lobbyists and all manner of hangers-on, for a total of about 20,000 people.

The political conventions have grown so large that the number of cities with both sufficient hotel rooms and a cavernous meeting hall large enough to accommodate either the Democrats or Republicans can be counted on the fingers of one hand.

New York's Yankee Stadium and Houston's Astrodomes are indeed large enough, but there's little likelihood of the Democratic convention being held in either city. The early favorite for host city, for obvious reasons, is Atlanta. Its biggest hall is the Omni, a large convention facility but certainly not big enough to hold the crowd the Winograd commission has authorized.

The more serious difficulties posed by the commission's planned changes are philosophical ones. For the past decade, party reformers have worked hard to cut down the number of big shots and fat cats who traditionally dominated conventions in the past.

As recently as 1964, only 1 per cent of the country's population earned $25,000 or more annually, but wealthy men and women in that category comprised 30 per cent of that year's Democratic convention delegates.

At the 1972 and 1976 conventions, grass-roots supporters of the various candidates and rank-and-file party workers finally claimed some of the delegate seats that rightfully were theirs, as did members of traditionally underrepresented groups such as blacks, women and young people.

Jimmy Carter, the self-proclaimed "people's president," ought to be concerned about future conventions being overrun by politicians — but he has delegated authority to deal with party rules changes to Mark A. Siegel, a zealous opponent of reform efforts of recent years.

A brilliant political strategist and deputy assistant to the President on the White House staff, Siegel sits on the commission and controls a pro-Carter majority on that panel. But he has wisely chosen to abuse that power by cutting a deal with the same old-school politicians who only a year ago were Carter's favorite subject of derision.

The TV world view

Television frequently can be a magic carpet of sorts, sweeping young viewers swiftly to distant lands. But their view of the world can be surprisingly imprecise until TV's visual images are reinforced by classroom study.

This is the upshot of a survey sponsored and recently issued by the U.S. Office of Education. Some 1,800 public school students of various ages in 27 states were quizzed. The performance of the older ones was typical.

Nearly half the high school seniors thought Israel was an Arab nation. More than a quarter thought Golda Meir, the former Israeli prime minister, was president of Egypt. Asked which of four countries — China, India, Poland or Russia — is located in both Europe and Asia, only 54 per cent correctly answered Russia.

If it Fitz

By JIM FITZGERALD

In his TV interview with Barbara Walters, G. Gordon Liddy said the novel he is writing "is not a roman a clef."

"What does that mean?" my wife asked.
"It means Liddy is not writing about an Italian with a speech impediment," I said. I will say anything for a laugh.

Pat didn't laugh. She wanted a serious explanation of a roman a clef, so I gave it to her. This was a big mistake.

"Roman a clef" is a French phrase used to describe a novel that disguises fact as fiction. The names are changed to protect the writer from being sued.

All novels are roman a clefts. When Margaret Mitchell wrote "Gone With the Wind," she named the hero Rhett Butler but she was really writing about Clark Gable. She didn't use his real name for fear Gable would sue her for revealing that he lost his wife to a big sissy like Leslie Howard.

Everyone knows a mystery story is a whodunit. A roman a cleft is a whoisit.

French intellectuals call roman a clefts "who is it," inserting the un-American spaces between the words to make room for their accents. French intellectuals use the American phrase for the same reason American intellectuals use the French phrase — it helps them all to identify each other as intellectuals.

After I explained all this to Pat, I suggested she watch "Washington: Behind Closed Doors" on ABC-TV last week. I'd read John Ehrlichman's book, upon which the TV show was based, so I knew the six-night movie would be a fine example of a roman a cleft.

It was, it was, it was. Pat drove me buggy asking whoisit? whoisit? I always gave the correct answers, but sometimes she didn't understand me.

In the TV show there was a dying president named Esker who chased women and talked like he was philosophy editor for Farmer's Almanac.

"What's his real name?" Pat asked.
"Andy Griffith," I said.

"How could a man like that be elected president?" she asked.

"He ran on his record. He was a very good sheriff of Mayberry," I said. "Also he got a lot of the youth vote because his son is a good friend of the Fonz."

Another Closed Doors character had a name no one could pronounce. He kept giving thousands of dollars to President Monckton who was really Jason Robards who used to run the Washington newspaper where Robert Redford and Dustin Hoffman work.

"I know the guy with the funny name for sure," I said. "That is Robert Aerosol who got rich by inventing the Abplanalp can. The spray from those cans would have destroyed the ozone layer which protects us all from getting sunburned to death. Our lives were saved by that chubby guy who lives inside medicine cabinets and swipes Right Guard from Mona's husband."

The whoisit hardest for me to identify was the menacing schemer who did break-ins for Jason Rgbards. My wife thought it was Howard Hunt but that name didn't sound right to me. It took me five nights to come up with the right name.

"That's Skip Homeier," I finally exclaimed, "and I'm not surprised at the way he turned out. He used to be a young Nazi."

Pat remembered, "I wonder what he has been doing since the downfall of Hitler?" she asked.

"I know that too," I said triumphantly. "He has been polluting the environment by making love to older women just so they will drink Geritol out of non-returnable bottles. Once my memory gets into gear, there is no whoisit too tough for me to solve."

By the sixth episode, after five nights of watching how I did it, Pat felt ready to solve her own roman a cleft.

"I know who Jason Robards' adviser for foreign affairs really is," she said. "The phony accent doesn't fool me. He is really Rhoda Morgenstern's father."

I was afraid to tell her she was wrong. The accent wasn't phony. The adviser for foreign affairs was really an Italian with a speech impediment.

Onward and upward.

Rulers of Russia

The first known ruler of the Russians was Rurik, of Scandinavian origin, who consolidated Slavic tribes under his leadership at Novgorod in 862. His successors moved the capital in 972 to Kiev, where they ruled as dukes. The first ruler to take the title "czar" was Ivan III of Muscovy, 1462-1505, who married the niece of the late Byzantine emperor.

Inmates claim cruelty, sue Starr County jail

By MILLER BONNER
Associated Press Writer
BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Claiming they were subjected to "cruel and unusual punishment," two inmates in the Starr County jail have filed a class action suit in federal court seeking $30,000 in damages.

One of the suit's plaintiffs, 24-year-old Ricardo Saldana, said he was placed in solitary confinement for "allegedly making excess noise by banging on the walls." Saldana said the isolation cell was so small he was forced to sleep in a sitting position and was denied food and water for a 24-hour period.

"Plaintiff Saldana had to use a drain in the floor as a toilet and he was provided no toilet paper," the suit claims.

Saldana, a Starr County resident, is an inmate of the jail in Rio Grande City awaiting trial on attempted burglary charges, according to the suit.

John A. Biegajski, 32, the suit's other plaintiff, served nine months of a one-year sentence for negligent homicide in the jail.

Biegajski, also a Starr County resident, alleges jail personnel waited four days before informing his wife that he needed a prescription filled causing "serious withdrawal symptoms including muscular spasms and mental disorder."

The suit said at the time of Biegajski's incarceration he was under psychiatric care and taking "various prescription medicines for psychotic disorders." Biegajski was also not allowed to keep an appointment with his psychiatrist, the suit claims.

Saldana and Biegajski are each seeking $15,000 in damages.

Defendants in the suit are Starr County Sheriff Reymundo Alvarez, county judge Mario Ramirez and the five county commissioners.

Sheriff Alvarez said Thursday night he had been advised to make no comment concerning the suit or conditions at the jail he oversees.

The suit also alleges 20 violations of rules set by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards ranging from insufficient "light for reading and shaving, and other normal activities" in inmate living areas to jail personnel depriving prisoners of "any intellectual stimulation or activities for personal development."

The suit stated that at the time the Commission on Jail Standards was formulating rules, Starr County was in the process of building a new jail.

"On November 8, 1976, the proposed rules were brought to the attention of the Starr County Commissioners' Court at its regular meeting by attorneys for Texas Rural Legal Aid, Inc. who urged that the new jail be constructed so as to conform with the new jail standards," alleges the suit.

"No action was taken by the Starr County Commissioners' Court to make the new jail facility comply with the rules of the Texas Commission on Jail Standards."

Steel industry faces crisis

By DAVE TABOLT
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The nation's steel industry, faced with sluggish demand, increased foreign competition and declining profits, is laying off thousands of workers and cutting production.

Whatever happens in the industry is likely to be felt by all consumers because steel is used in everything from paper clips to railroad tracks.

The largest single impact is on the auto industry. Some Detroit analysts are predicting the sticker price of 1978 models will go up by as much as $300, at least in part because of increasing steel costs.

"We may well be past the point of salvation for some steel producers," C. William Verity, chairman of Arco Steel Corp., told a House trade subcommittee this week.

First half steel profits, at $285 million, were 60 per cent below those reported a year earlier despite a 7 per cent sales gain. At that rate, the industry will end 1977 with its worst results since 1971.

The crisis has already led to one bankruptcy and a flurry of layoffs, including those in steel towns like Youngstown, Ohio, where Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. plans to dismiss 5,000 persons within three months.

Neither steel industry sources nor the United Steelworkers could say Thursday just how many workers are out of work, but estimates range up to 100,000.

The pace of cutbacks has picked up since mid-year. About 3,000 steelworkers were laid off when the Alan Wood Steel Co. in suburban Philadelphia went bankrupt after losing $34.4 million over the last three years.

Bethlehem Steel, the nation's second-largest producer, said it would lay off 7,300 workers in flood-ravaged Johnstown, Pa., and Lackawanna, N.Y., after losing $75.4 million through June 30.

U.S. Steel, the nation's largest producer, has announced some layoffs, including 200 in the Youngstown area. It has also asked 10,000 management employees to forego a cost-of-living increase.

Other producers have either announced reductions or are considering them. More cuts are likely.

Some analysts argue the current crisis may be healthy, however, because it may eliminate marginal firms and leave a stronger, more profitable steel industry.

The industry is struggling with a number of problems, some historic, some political. Imports are its principle target, however.

The American Iron and Steel Institute, a trade association representing 95 per cent of the nation's producers, estimates that imports will account for 19 per cent of the domestic market in 1977.

These imports have absorbed 74 per cent of the market's growth, forcing American producers to look for profits in the narrow gap between rising costs and low prices.

Porn threatens Playboy

CHICAGO (AP) — Playboy, the magazine that raised eyebrows with what was considered sexually explicit photographs in the 1950s, says it is now threatened by the "gutter filth" of the 70s.

The magazine has hired and fired executives, cut back on its worldwide hotel and club enterprises and even put its famous bunny label for sale to fight the competition.

"All the changes show they've been reduced to desperate methods in a fight they're losing," says Bob Guccione, publisher of Penthouse, Playboy's chief rival.

Playboy Enterprises, faced with a decline in profits from $11 million in the peak year of 1973 to $1 million in 1975, has closed a hotel in Jamaica and a club in Detroit, and begun removing the famous bunny label from records, a limousine service and a modeling agency.

Founder Hugh Hefner put his 54-room Chicago mansion on sale for $2.5 million.

And as Playboy's circulation continued to decline, Hefner hired Derick Daniels last fall from the Knight-Ridder newspaper group to be his chief operating officer. Daniels is said to have been lured by an annual salary of $250,000, plus a $225,000 bonus. Daniels set to work firing five vice presidents and 95 other employees. He says it's "like changing pants in the middle of a 100-yard dash."

Although Playboy has become more explicit in its photographs, Daniels insists the magazine will not "join our competitors who are yapping along in the gutter. We won't become a journal devoted to gynecology."

Playboy Vice President Mike Murphy says the "gutter filth" published in Playboy's 37 or so competitors makes it easier to attract advertising. "We have a publication that people don't have to be ashamed to see their ads in. We're finding that major companies don't want to see their names in Penthouse or Hustler."

Murphy says Playboy is "the only men's magazine that if you take away the girls you still have a magazine."

"Let 'em try it, I'd love it," says Guccione. "We've stolen their thunder. They're no longer the No. 1 men's magazine — we are."

The latest Audit Bureau Circulation figures, however, still show Playboy with a circulation of just over 4.9 million, compared to Penthouse's 4.6 million. But while Penthouse's circulation has risen by nearly 600,000 in the last year, Playboy's has fallen almost 500,000.

Daniels has cut advertising rates by reducing the circulation guarantee from 5.5 million to 4.5 million, and raised advertising by 30 per cent. He says the magazine lost mostly only its younger and older readers, who didn't attract advertisers anyway.

Daniels says corporate profits are beginning to rise again.

"I feel no ill will," said Guccione of Penthouse. "Playboy had their time. Now it's over."

The membership of the Boy Scouts of America currently is 4.5 million.

Defense attorneys to seek recess

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Attorneys for two former Houston policemen on trial in the death of a prisoner say they'll use a three-day weekend recess to decide whether to present defense testimony next week.

"If we decide to go forward it will take about five days to present our testimony," said Bob Bennett, attorney for Terry Denson, 27, who is on trial with Stephen Orlando, 21, for the drowning death last May of Joe Campos Torres, 23.

The trial, moved to Huntsville on a change of venue, resumes Monday. Denson and Orlando are accused of participating in a beating of the handcuffed Torres and pushing him into Houston's Buffalo Bayou.

Torres' body was recovered May 8 from the bayou three days after he had been arrested at a bar disturbance. He was not handcuffed when he entered the murky water.

The state rested its case Thursday after presenting its 17th witness in the three weeks of testimony. State District Judge James Warren denied two defense motions for directed verdicts before recessing the trial until Monday.

The defense has contended the officers did not intend serious injury and could not foresee that Torres would die.

Harris County Medical Examiner Dr. Joseph Jachimczyk testified Thursday there was a reasonable certainty that a person struck in the water in the apparent condition of Torres would drown.

Jachimczyk said Torres had bruises on his abdomen, right hand and wrist, both shins and right temple. He said the bruise to the temple could have been caused by a severe blow or by Torres striking a submerged object in the water.

Margaret Torres of Houston, the victim's mother, was in the courtroom when Jachimczyk presented color slides showing the condition of Torres' body. Mrs. Torres buried her face in a companion's shoulder, unable to watch.

Jachimczyk also testified that Torres blood alcohol level was twice as high as needed for a drunken driving conviction and he was wearing heavy clothes and boots when he entered the water. Denson and Orlando were among five officers fired from the force after Torres' death.

Two of the former officers, Glenn L. Brinkmeyer, 25, and Louis G. Kinney, 27, testified for the state under immunity from prosecution. A third, Joseph Janish, 22, has been charged with misdemeanor assault and is scheduled to be tried next month.

A sixth officer, rookie Carless Elliott, 20, was not fired. He reported the incident to his superiors and served as a key witness for the prosecution.

Briscoe blasts plan

HOUSTON (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe says the federal administration's energy program practically ignores the free market place.

He said the federal government should rely on free enterprise and the free market instead of expanding price controls.

"The consumer is better protected in the free market place," he said Thursday. "There is no one in or out of government smart enough to make price controls work for the long range benefit of the consumers of this nation."

Speaking at the annual convention of the International Association of Drilling Contractors, Briscoe said the federal government is the nation's largest withholder of energy supplies.

"To make any national energy plan work we must begin immediately a full production effort directed at all of our domestic energy resources," he said.

Briscoe said the "administration will have to zero in on a very hard and disturbing fact that the federal government owns about 50 per cent of our known fuel resources but last year contributed less than 10 per cent of our production and most of that production was off the coast of Louisiana and Texas."

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer
AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — Prosecutors in the Cullen Davis murder trial offered into evidence today bullets recovered last year from Davis' blood-spattered Fort Worth mansion. This began a long process of introducing physical evidence designed to link the Fort Worth millionaire to a shooting spree that left two dead and two wounded.

The prosecution said it has some 150 such items of evidence.

G. L. Nichols, a member of the Fort Worth Police Department's Crime Scene and Search Unit was the lead off witness for this phase of the state's case against Davis.

He is on trial for the slaying of his young stepdaughter.

For a murder trial, Thursday was perhaps the most unusual day, with touches of festivity, frivolity and poignancy and a 44th birthday party for defendant Davis.

The courtroom's sound system picked up a CB radio transmission and a reporter's paging device interrupted testimony Thursday.

Lawyers swapped an unusual number of side, but light-hearted, remarks, and the continuing good humor of State District Judge George Dowlen surfaced repeatedly.

A juror provided a bubble or two with a wad of bubblegum. And the spectator ranks included Davis' former wife Sandra and the defendant's two young sons, Cullen Jr., 13, and Bryan, 11, who came for their father's birthday.

The youngsters took front-row seats as testimony in Davis' capital murder trial approached the end of its fifth week.

Actually, Thursday's session provided few new revelations and was confined mostly to routine defense cross-examination of a prosecution witness.

Special Crime Scene officers were summoned today as prosecutors prepared to produce the physical evidence of its case against Davis for the 1976 slaying of his stepdaughter Andrea Wilborn, 12.

The girl was the first to die in the midnight shooting spree in Davis' lavish mansion.

The defendant's estranged wife, Priscilla, 36, was wounded and her boyfriend, Stan Farr was killed in the carnage that left Gus Gavrel Jr., 22, partially paralyzed with a bullet lodged in his spine.

In a moving reunion Thursday, Davis emerged from the courtroom at the noon recess and was embraced by his sons, one crying and the other on the verge of tears.

"I wanted to be with you alone," the elder son told his father before they joined a private birthday luncheon inside the courthouse.

"I can't say this is the happiest birthday of my life, but I can still smile," said Davis, who wore a "smile" button on his tie and shared his birthday cake with newsmen.

Fort Worth officer J.A. Perez fielded questions from defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, who uncharacteristically permitted the witness to escape with several frivolous responses.

Haynes did grow testy toward the end of the session, particularly when the bemused witness appeared to be paying no attention to his questions.

Prosecutor Tolly Wilson arose to defend Perez, pointing out that he was newly married and that his attractive bride was in the courtroom.

Dowlen also intervened, suggesting that the witness was rocking back and forth in his chair and was distracted when "the court reporter gave him a dirty look."

When prosecutor Joe Shannon complained that he could not understand a defense objection to an objection, Haynes smiled slyly and said, "I can understand that you can't understand. That doesn't surprise me."

Sensing a possible flareup, Dowlen interceded, saying with a grin, "You think you too could agree that this is an appropriate time to take a lunch break?" They did.

Carter travels to Africa

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter announced today he will embark in late November on an 11-day, four-continent trip that will include the first visit of an American president to black Africa.

Carter's journey to South America, Africa, Asia and Europe will, in geographical terms, be the most ambitious ever undertaken by a U.S. President. He will be conferring with close allies, new-found friends and sometime adversaries.

The eight-nation tour, which will begin on Nov. 22, the 14th anniversary of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, was announced on Carter's behalf by his national security affairs adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski.

Absent from Carter's itinerary are any contacts with Soviet or Middle Eastern officials directly involved in the two major foreign policy questions that currently confront the President — arms curbs and the search for a Middle East settlement.

The journey, described by Brzezinski as underlining Carter's commitment to "constructive change" in the world, will take the President to Venezuela, Brazil, Nigeria, India, Iran, France, Poland and Belgium.

He will return to the White House Dec. 2.

Responding to questions, Brzezinski said no consideration had been given during the months of long planning of the trip for a possible meeting with Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev. However, Brzezinski did not totally exclude the possibility.

Asked why Carter was not including the troubled Middle East in the schedule, Brzezinski said, "There are just so many things you can include in an itinerary."

Brzezinski said that much-publicized differences between the United States and Brazil and to a lesser extent Iran over human rights issues were no bar to visiting those countries. He said human rights issues were "not a precondition" for serious dealings with other nations.

Mrs. Carter will accompany her husband on the trip. When Carter made his only other overseas trip, to London and Geneva last May, she remained in Washington.

The President had indicated almost a year ago he expected to do little traveling overseas, at least during his first year in office.

"His preference is to stay at home," Brzezinski said, and argued that Carter indeed has done little traveling outside the country.

Here is the Carter itinerary: Nov. 22 — flies to Caracas, Venezuela for an overnight stay.

Nov. 23 — on to the Brazilian capital of Brasilia, where Carter will spend the night.

Nov. 24 — flies across the South Atlantic to Lagos, Nigeria, remaining there a full day.

Nov. 26 — leaves Lagos for the Indian capital of New Delhi, arriving Nov. 27.

Nov. 29 — stops in Teheran, Iran, for a brunch with the Shah of Iran, and continues on to Paris the same day.

Dec. 1 — flies from Paris to Warsaw, spending a night in the Polish capital.

Dec. 2 — flies to Brussels for meetings with Belgian officials, European Common Market leaders and officials of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization before returning to Washington the same day.

Lance probe continues

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department is pledging "full steam ahead" in the criminal investigation of Bert Lance's financial affairs, despite President Carter's assertion that Lance committed no crimes.

"This is an independent investigation and it's going to continue," Deputy Atty. Gen. Peter Flaherty said in an interview Thursday.

He said Carter's assertions of Lance's innocence would have no effect on the department investigation and the ultimate decision about prosecution.

But Carter's statements aroused at least mild concern among some veteran prosecutors who called it improper for the President to make such a public declaration while the investigation is pending.

As one former department official put it: "Yes, any prosecutor would be somewhat chagrined by prejudgment on the part of a chief executive. But it doesn't really do anything to the substance of the investigation."

At the Wednesday news conference announcing Lance's resignation as director of the Office of Management and Budget, the President said: "There has always been a possibility that in the last week's Senate hearings that Bert could not answer the allegations adequately, that he would prove to have violated a law. That was not the case."

At another point, Carter referred to allegations of impropriety and illegality in Lance's business dealings and said all of them "have been proven false and without foundation."

Department officials involved in the case were reluctant to discuss their reaction to Carter's statements.

Flaherty, asked whether he was concerned by Carter's assertion of Lance's innocence, paused for long moments before pleading: "Don't ask me that question."

Then he said he believed Carter based his remarks on the investigative reports he had read and "these people here in the department will see much more."

Flaherty asserted that Carter's statements would have no effect on the investigation and that, "I think he would want it that way."

Flaherty said he spoke Thursday with two of the three department lawyers handling the case and assured them that the investigation would continue "as expeditiously as possible."

Another source said, "The investigations are full steam ahead."

As for Lance's culpability on criminal charges, Flaherty said "no conclusion has been reached on that here."

Earlier this week, Flaherty appointed three department prosecutors to review all of the allegations against Lance and determine what, if any, future investigations or charges are warranted.

Sources in the Senate and another source close to the investigation said late Thursday that the department has requested and received full transcripts and exhibits from the Senate committee hearings on the allegations against Lance.

Senators vote to deregulate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both of Texas' senators voted Thursday against scrapping an industry-supported plan to deregulate new natural gas prices. The Senate voted, however, 52-46, to put aside the plan.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., joined with 16 other Democrats to vote no, while Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., was one of 35 Republicans voting to keep the plan.

The Prohibition party was organized in Chicago Sept. 12, 1869, because neither major political party had included prohibition in its platform.

Names in the news

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Gerald R. Ford is not prone to take his achievements too seriously, the University of Nebraska's Cornhusker football team has learned.

Coach Tom Osborne said that when Ford visited with the team Thursday, his players seemed more interested in the fact that Ford was a former Michigan football center than in the fact that he was once president of the United States.

"Well, I'm a has-been in both areas," Ford quipped.

The former president said he was more at ease with the football players than he had been earlier in the day when he lectured to several classes at the university.

"I've said many times I feel more at home on the gridiron than I do in the academic atmosphere," he said.

PRESTON, England (AP) — Bing Crosby is crooning his way through England, opening his latest concert tour in an area where his last audience was made up of American servicemen during World War II.

Thursday night, Britons got their turn, and more than 2,000 mostly middle-aged people crammed into Preston's Guild Hall as the 73-year-old Crosby went gingerly through his act.

Although he still suffers from back trouble that began earlier this year when he fell from a stage, the voice that has seen Crosby through 50 years of stardom was still strong. He opened with, "I've Got a Dog Named Rover," a song he first performed at the age of 13.

Crosby, whose show moves to Manchester tonight and then to London, last performed in northwestern England during the war, when he sang for servicemen at Burtonwood Air Base in Warrington.

SOUTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — Deborah Sale, the vice presidential aide arrested last month for sunbathing topless on a Long Island beach, has pleaded guilty to the charge.

An attorney for Miss Sale entered the plea in Southampton Justice Court on Thursday. She is due to appear there again next Thursday for sentencing.

Miss Sale was arrested on Gibson Beach Aug. 20 for not wearing the top of her bathing suit. She was one of more than a dozen people arrested this year and charged with breaking the town's ordinance against nude sunbathing.

Miss Sale said she was lying face down on the beach with the top of her bathing suit unfastened for an even tan when she was approached by police and cited.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actor Walter Pidgeon, the debonair star of more than 100 movies, is reported recovering from internal blood clots that have kept him hospitalized since Aug. 4.

"He's gaining strength and improving a little every day," Peggy Frank, a spokeswoman for St. John's Hospital, said Thursday.

She said it was not known when Pidgeon's doctors would allow him to return to his Bel Air home.

Pidgeon, 78, entered the hospital Aug. 4 for surgery to remove a blood clot from his brain. He stayed hospitalized when a blood clot developed on his lung.

Farmers strike

were downright scorching. As the meeting wore on, Bergland rolled his shirt sleeves up a couple of turns.

A farmer from Walsh, Colo., told the secretary that "Farmers all over this country are joining in this effort... We've learned a lot and we've learned it in the last few days... This is a spontaneous movement... We wish you'd take word back to Washington that it will continue... This movement is the people — the little farmer, the middle farmer, everybody."

Farmers stood and cheered. Bergland removed his necktie and tossed it back to the Colorado Congressman who put it with the secretary's jacket.

Rep. Evans had been greeted with considerable applause when he first stood before the crowd, a possible indication that Colorado farmers approve of him. But that attitude changed a bit.

As the meeting wore on and the line of folks awaiting a turn at the microphones placed in each aisle at the front of the auditorium showed no signs of diminishing, Evans returned to the speaker's stand to ask people to keep their comments short.

He returned again when a young official of the Farmers Union (FU) attempted to ask just one more question after he'd apparently completed his comments. Wright refused him that question and the FU fellow took his seat.

And Evans returned to the on-stage microphone one more time to attempt to end an Oklahoma farmer's Bergland-aimed comments.

But here he met his match and more. "Let him talk," somebody yelled from the audience. "Bergland works for us," shouted another.

The Oklahoma man left the question up to his fellow farmers. "Everybody who wants me to continue, stand up," he said. As one, the members of the audience stood up.

The Oklahoma man continued. Evans sat down.

Before the Evans interruption, the Oklahoma man had compared the farmers' situation to "this building. We're over here and there's a gap there (orchestra pit) and you are over there."

He offered to let Bergland and the government run his farm in the traditional tenant-landlord arrangement.

"And you can use all the doctorate degrees you want to, but I'll keep the records," he said.

He told Bergland, "I'm 57. I'm too old to play games."

But he outplayed the politicians at their own game. Bergland had been jeered from the audience when he was outlining a proposed insurance plan to replace the current disaster aid program.

The Oklahoma farmer, when he first stood at the microphone, apologized to Bergland and said, "We want to talk, but we are going to let you talk, too." And he asked for applause from the audience to support his statement. It won him support and attention.

A Colorado implement dealer said he is "for these farmers. I'll grow me a garden and let the rest of 'em starve in these cities."

Applause: cheers from the audience.

"We read in the paper of the billions and billions we loan to other countries and I can't even get a loan locally," one farmer told the ag secretary.

He identified himself as the son of German immigrants. "They had a place to go," he said. "Where do we go from here... maybe the moon, but I don't know how they do their farming up there."

Gerald McCathern of Hereford was another speaker who was interrupted several times by applause and cheering.

"If we do not have the dollars down in rural America to purchase the industrial output of this nation, then you're going to see one of the greatest unemployment rises in history," Cheers.

"If unemployment gets too high, we are going to go into a depression. It always starts with agriculture... I'm not important, but three million farmers in this country are important." Cheers.

His voice shook with emotion when he said that his son farms with him but "after this year he will no longer farm. After this year, I may no longer farm."

Advice

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You've often heard the line, "I never thought I'd be writing to Dear Abby," but this time, you were so off base, I had to write.

You told MINNESOTAN if she requested that the news of her divorce be withheld from publication, the editor would probably respect her wishes.

Baloney! I don't know about Minnesota, but in Iowa divorces are published by law.

We sometimes publish divorces as news—not on our front page, but usually listed with other court house records—whether or not we're requested to keep it confidential.

Some newspapers in this area publish entire court proceedings on the front page—"blow by blow," so to speak.

Please don't go telling your readers they may edit their local newspapers. With your background, you should know better.

RUSSELL S. OECHSLIN, EDITOR-PUBLISHER, INDEPENDENCE, IA.

DEAR ED.-PUB.: I should have, but I didn't. An editor who shall remain nameless, lest he become jobless, gave me a bum steer. Thanks for setting the record straight. I needed that.

DEAR ABBY: I play softball, and not to brag, but I'm considered a pretty good player.

There's this girl I sort of hang around with. I'm not really all that involved with her, but she's been coming around to watch me play quite a lot lately, and that's my problem.

Last season I didn't mind her watching me play, and I played okay, but this season, for some dumb reason, every time I see her I get nervous and I play lousy. Maybe I'd play lousy, anyway, but when I see her there, I play extra lousy.

How can I get her not to come around when I'm playing without getting her mad at me? She's a neat kid and I don't want to hurt her feelings.

SOFTBALL SOFTY

DEAR SOFTY: Level with her. Tell her you want to find out for sure if you're playing lousy because she's there. She might be flattered to learn that you think her presence is affecting your game.

DEAR ABBY: I am 25 and female. Last year I bought a watch, which I treasured. It cost $145—a lot of money for me. I had to save a long time to buy it.

I wore it one day with a fellow I was sort of going with. He makes good money and has a government job. We went for a drive and decided to wade out into a stream so I took my watch off and he locked it in the glove compartment of his car.

After he took me home and drove off (he lives 200 miles away) I realized my watch was in his car. I called him that very night and asked him to please put my watch in a safe place until we met again.

Well, every time we met after that he said he "forgot" my watch. It's been a year now and he says he doesn't know what happened to it, and he's given up the search, so I had better get another one. It wasn't insured and he never offered to replace it. My feelings toward him are ambivalent. I don't especially want to see him, but this watch business has upset me. If you were in my place, what would you do?

"E"

DEAR "E": I'd buy myself another watch, but I wouldn't give the fellow who "lost" it the time of day.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — What causes gallstones? Could injury, a severe blow or damage to the liver cause gallstones? Is there any way other than surgery to eliminate the stones?

DEAR READER — No, injury does not cause gallstones. There are two main types of gallstones, those formed from cholesterol and those formed from bile pigment.

The cholesterol is the same wax-like substance that is deposited with fatty material in arteries to form atherosclerosis which leads to heart attacks, strokes and other circulatory problems. The cholesterol manufactured by the liver, or that in your food, is all drained out of the liver in the bile. If there are enough bile salts and lecithin present in the bile they keep it soluble and help to prevent cholesterol stones. These stones may be dissolved by newer medicines and that is part of a national study.

The bile pigment stones come from the pigments in your red blood cells that are broken down. The pigment is processed by the liver. This is why a person with an increased destruction of red blood cells may be susceptible to these gallstones.

Inflammation of the gall bladder may also be a factor in some cases. To give you more information I am sending you the Health Letter number 4-9, Gallstones and Gall Bladder Disease. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I want to get a female sterilization through the navel. My husband doesn't approve of it. He says it makes a woman cold afterward. We are using the withdrawal method right now and his sex life is vanishing. I

Interior designer says 'less is more'

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

In decorating "you can do things on a shoestring by taking a less-is-more attitude," advises Vladimir Kagan of New York, a designer and manufacturer of furniture.

If you don't do anything else in decorating, get your furniture away from walls. It requires less space when furniture is placed in the interior rather than on the perimeter of the room, he points out.

Then, too, conventional furniture arrangements may pin you to old ideas in furnishings. Modern furniture has so changed that "we should landscape our floor space," he believes.

A well known designer of custom furnishings, Kagan discusses the current furniture market.

"We are in a romantic, nostalgic mood. We are not looking for revolutionary design or heavy experimentation like corrugated paper furniture," he says.

"A few years ago we thought 18th-century furnishings were the only kinds of antiques. Now we have discovered the 19th century, such as the avant-garde furnishings of Brighton (England), which break away from what we know as polite 18th-century."

"In the early 20th century, Art Nouveau was far removed from contemporary concepts of being polite and acceptable. In our nostalgic mood for prewar romance, we are taking a closer look at the deco of the '30s and finding beauty in it as home fashion designers become less imitative and more interpretive.

"They are not making reproductions of the 1930s, they are making 1977 versions of it," he adds. "In the same sense, you could not wear your mother's old clothing and look fashionable in it, but fashion designers are picking what is alluring of that period and are turning the fashions into beautiful, natural, feminine styles. The same thing is happening with home furnishings. It is more natural, less garish and at a better taste level as sifted to a common denominator."

Although there is a bit of furniture that the trade calls "bo-rax" still around there is a lot of liveable furniture at moderate prices. Kagan likes the new rattan lines of certain manufacturers in chairs using metal and wood and fabrics that are unrestrained.

Kagan's seven-year-old multilevel furniture designs have been widely copied, although he still doesn't think of it as mass market design, he said.

"I create islands of multilevels where you can sit, sleep, lounge and play. People don't want to sit at one level," he said in describing his furniture, which is used in many ways.

One bed, "an island within a room," has "liberated the bedroom." Cabinets and all sorts of things are part of the bed, which is built to be used anywhere in a room. A foam rubber perimeter can serve as a chair and chaise. He designs for people with unique ideas, he commented.

In 1943 Kagan began working with his father, a manufacturer and cabinet maker, who had been apprenticed in Russia at the turn of the century. He had emigrated to the United States in 1938 with his old tools and opened a little cabinet shop in New York.

As a result of his work with his father, Kagan studied architecture and began his own innovative career.

Religious roundup

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod says plans are underway in several districts of the denomination for workshops on Jewish evangelism.

The workshops, along with reappointment of a committee on witnessing to Jews, were announced in response to a resolution by the church's 1977 convention urging evangelism among the Jews.

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A Jesuit priest, the Rev. John N. McNeill of Boston, author of "The Church and the Homosexual," has been ordered silenced by church authorities in Rome, the National Catholic Reporter says.

It says the order came from Cardinal Franjo Seper, head of the church's congregation on doctrine, directing Father McNeill not to speak publicly on homosexuality or sexual ethics, calling his position contrary to tradition.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Union of American Hebrew Congregations, representing Reform Judaism, has urged President Carter and U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young to take the "moral initiative" to reverse the United Nations anti-Zionist resolution.

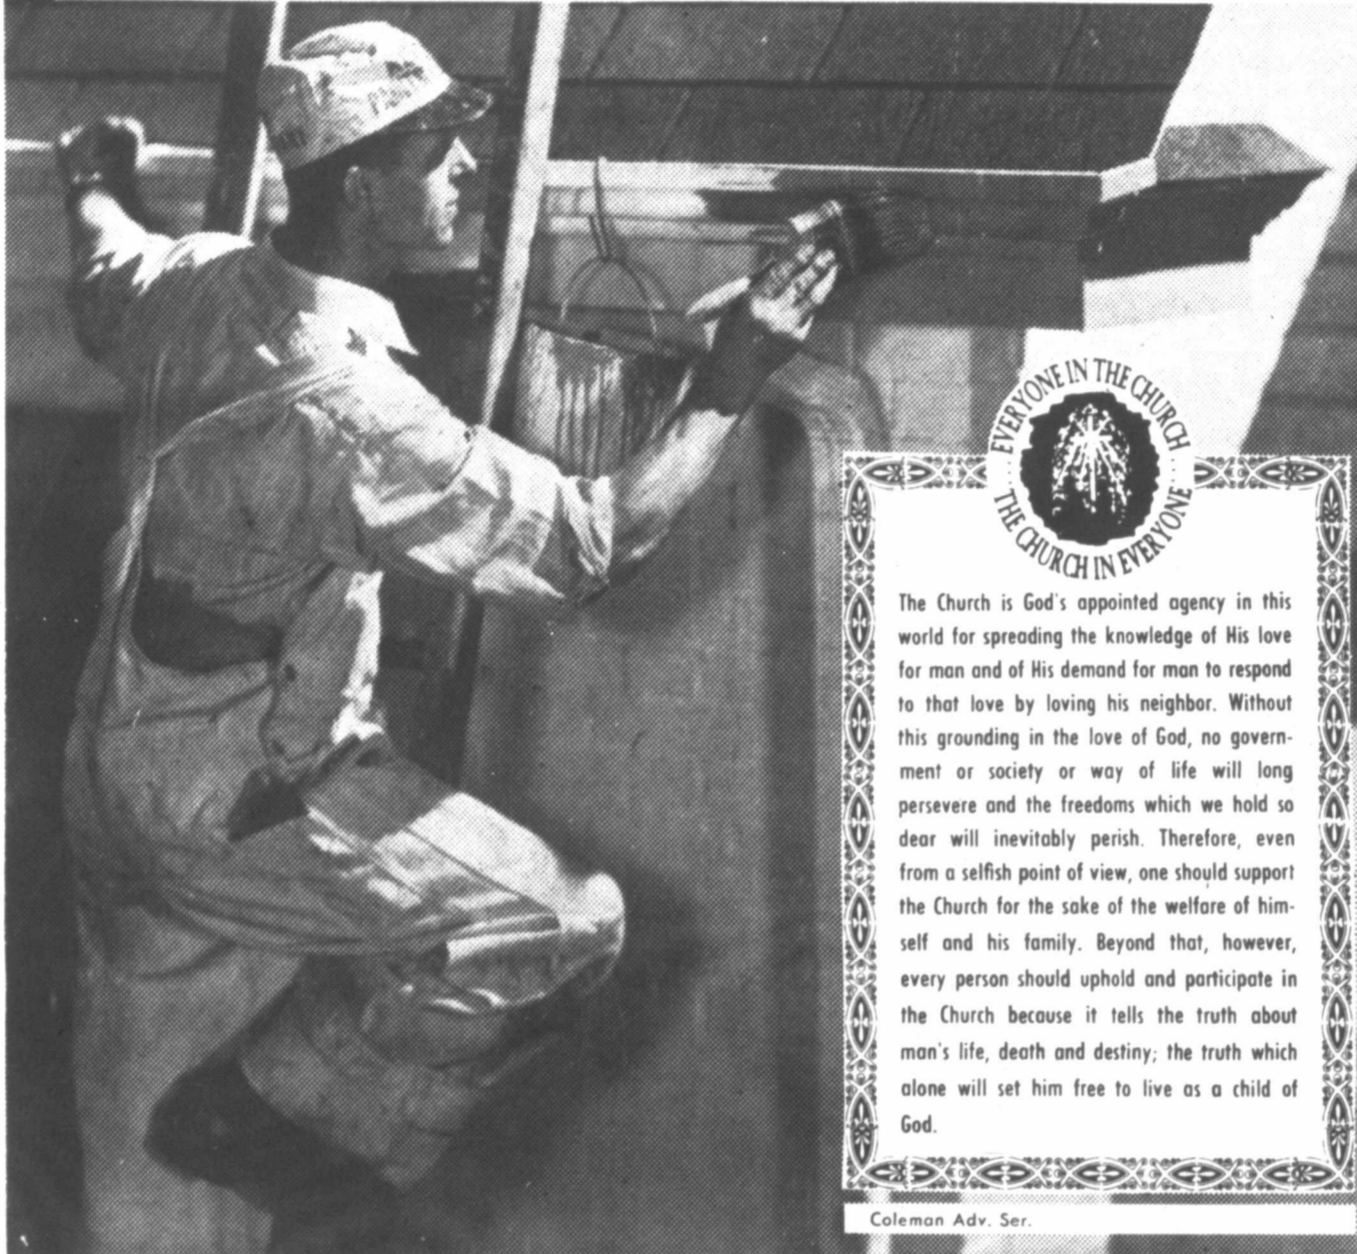

In its official publication, Reform Judaism, the UAHC said the time is ripe for such a move, adding: "Next to achieving peace in the Middle East, there is no nobler challenge than an all-out battle to restore the moral authority of the United Nations by cleansing it of the stench of anti-Semitism."

ATTEND CHURCH

PAINT . . . Protects wood and metal
GOD'S WORD . . . Protects the soul

As paint protects wood and metal from decay, rust, and corrosion, so the promises found in God's word protect the soul from the evils of sin, anxiety and despair. Hear God's wonderful promises proclaimed from the pulpit in the church of your choice this Sunday. These promises so heard will accomplish wonderful things in your soul and heart, for God says of His Word, "It shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it." Isaiah 55:11.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

New Jerusalem to play in Pampa

The New Jerusalem Players is a mobile evangelistic team sent out by Jews for Jesus to bring a Jewish message about Jesus to cities and towns across the country.

The group will present a program at the First Baptist Church in Pampa at 7 p.m. Sunday.

Jh'an Moskowitz, the senior member of the group at 28, and leader of the team, believes "The message that there are Jews for Jesus and that Jesus is for the Jews has largely been ignored throughout history, so we needed a more dramatic way to catch the attention of the public. We're letting people know that salvation in Christ is for everyone, everywhere."

Moskowitz is a graduate of Long Island University and received his training for the Christian ministry at Simpson Bible College in San Francisco, near the home-base of Jews for Jesus. He is a member of the Jews for Jesus Council, which governs the strategy and policies of the organization. He found Christ as his personal Messiah in 1971.

Jh'an's wife, Melissa, 26, is the newest member of the players. "After coming to believe in Jesus, my Jewish identity and heritage took on new and more significant meaning. I can now appreciate what it means to be one of God's chosen people, because I know what He has chosen me to do — namely, to tell other Jews and Gentiles about the one true God and His Son, Jesus," she said.

Two other members of the team are Mr. and Mrs. Alan Bond. They met while they were both studying at Oklahoma Baptist University and were married in a Jewish-Christian ceremony in 1974. (Lyn Bond is the elder daughter of Jews For Jesus founder, Moishe Rosen.)

Jews for Jesus is the fastest growing missionary organization devoted expressly to Jewish evangelism. While only incorporated as an organization under Hineni Ministries in September of 1973, Jews for Jesus is now the largest Jewish evangelism agency in the world with over 60 full-time staff members and evangelists.

The New Jerusalem Players have developed a Jewish-Christian street theater presentation in which they wear colorful costumes and use face make-up to draw attention to issues people are facing today — drugs, alienation, etc. They then offer the option of Jesus the Messiah.

"We have found that Jesus came to give Jews and Gentiles a new life and a new hope and a way of coping with the pressures of the world. Many people are searching for answers and it is those people we want to speak to," Mrs. Bond said.

For more information, phone First Baptist Church at 669-3348.

Jews preach for Jesus

Central Baptist will host a presentation of "Christ in the Passover" to enhance the Christian understanding of the New Testament by showing a Jewish background for the Communion celebration. Ancient and modern Jewish customs are discussed and described with an emphasis on the aspect of redemption that Christ accomplished at Calvary. This presentation will be at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Central Baptist Church on Starkweather and E. Browning.

'Second Enoch', Jesus compared

NEW YORK (AP) — An old book called "Second Enoch," once disregarded as a late fabrication but now considered current in Judaism in the days of Jesus, says, "in the great time to come are many rooms prepared."

The words resemble Jesus' comment in John 14:2: "In my Father's house are many rooms... I go to prepare a place for you."

This and other similarities to Jesus' teaching in numerous old manuscripts indicate the cross-pollinating ideas at work in his time, now that new evidence has caused the formerly ignored writings to be redated in the period of his ministry.

"They're opening a whole new perspective on first-century Judaism in the days of Jesus," says the Rev. Dr. James H. Charlesworth, director of Duke University's International Center for the Study of Christian Origins.

"They bring out the influences around him as much richer and more varied than was known before and also his great genius in dealing with the intellectual ferment and tendencies of the times."

The treasure-trove of newly authenticated material, swelled by recently turned-up finds and including previously discounted books of the so-called "pseudepigrapha," is being translated into English by an international team of scholars for their first full publication.

Through the documents, "we now know that in the time of Christian origins, we can't clearly determine just what literature is distinctly Jewish and what also is Christian," says Dr. Charlesworth, editor for the project being carried out by Duke's Pseudepigrapha Institute.

"They're all Jewish documents," he adds, "yet many also include specifically Christian concepts. It shows us just how very, very Jewish Christianity was in its beginnings."

Thus far, the project has accumulated 47 books classified as originally composed in the interval between 167 B.C. and 135 A.D. They're to be published by Doubleday & Co. about 1980. An earlier collection published in 1913 included only 17 books, but the list has nearly tripled through additional manuscripts turned up in archives in Europe and Asia and linked to the period 2,000 years ago.

Manuscripts of the pseudepigrapha previously were regarded of late or medieval origin, but fragments of some of them found in the Dead Sea Scrolls, the library of a first-century Jewish group, among other clues, has brought the re-dating.

"The documents cumulatively bridge the chasm of over 200 years that separate the two sacred testaments," Dr. Charlesworth says. "They come from Jesus' time, providing an invaluable link with his milieu."

Most of the books are named in honor of Old Testament characters, such as Enoch or

Dale: from welfare to music

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Kenny Dale has gotten off welfare to become one of the brightest new country music singers in years.

Some two years ago, Dale couldn't find work and his wife collected food stamps.

"It was really a bad scene," said Dale, 25, of Houston, Tex. Then he recorded "Bluest Heartache of the Year" for a small record company in Texas. It became so popular that a major label bought the master and released it nationally.

It became one of the year's big country hits and turned Dale's life around. His second national release, "Shame, Shame On Me (I Had Planned to Be Your Man)" is now high on the charts also. And he's released his first album, "Bluest Heartache."

"Just when you think things are hopeless, something great happens," Dale said in an interview in the office of his booking agent during a stop here between engagements.

"It was like I was in a well and someone pulled me out of it."

In late 1975 and early 1976, he simply couldn't find a job, either in music or otherwise.

"I couldn't get a job anywhere for six months. The bills were piling up and I was on the verge of starving and in a deep state of depression. My wife collected food stamps."

He finally was able to get some engagements to tide him over until "Bluest Heartache of the Year" and was recorded and drew raves from critics as one of the prettiest songs in years.

"I did every benefit I could," said Dale, a former house painter. "The most important thing is keeping your name in front of people."

"I used to dream and I still do. I've had dreams all my life, and now that they've come true I don't believe it. I'm very proud and excited. I'm in a numb state of mind."

He tends to attribute his success to luck as much as talent. "I've been very lucky. I'm in the C section — very average. I'm just a country boy who's never had anything. When you're poor, you appreciate it more when you get something. I don't care for a lot of money, it would probably ruin me. I'm very thankful to the fans. I feel like they've taken somebody new and helped him out.

"People tell me not to change. I am rather happy-go-lucky and I work hard. I don't want anything to do with a 'big-head' attitude. I just want to be recognized as an artist and a nice guy."

There are 50,000 yearly deaths worldwide due to snakebites.

Evel Knievel arrested on assault

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Motorcycle stuntman Evel Knievel, who apparently was en route to surrender to police, was arrested for investigation of assault with a deadly weapon in an alleged attack on a 20th Century Fox executive, authorities said.

Knievel was released late Wednesday night after posting $1,000 bond. He was scheduled to be arraigned next Wednesday in West Los Angeles Municipal Court.

Police said Knievel knew he was being sought and it appeared he had planned to turn himself in when he was arrested by a patrol officer who spotted him on a freeway in North Hollywood.

Sheldon Saltman, 46, was treated for compound fractures of the left arm and a broken right wrist after the incident earlier Wednesday, authorities said.

The vice president of the telecommunications division of Fox Studios told police that Knievel and an unidentified man confronted him outside the studio commissary. He said Knievel hit him with a baseball bat, according to police.

Mark Erickson, an aide to Saltman, said Saltman used to be Knievel's publicity agent and wrote the book "Evel Knie-

Blyleven hurls no-hitter

ANAHEIM (AP) — Bert Blyleven may ask the Texas Rangers to allow him to pitch every 18th day next season if he can guarantee the same result that he produced in his latest effort, they might agree to such a plan.

Blyleven, sidelined since Sept. 6 with a pulled muscle in his groin, returned with a flourish, firing the first no-hitter of his career and the third of the major league season Thursday night as the Rangers blanked the California Angels 6-0.

Blyleven, 26, seemed destined for such a feat. He has four one-hitters to his credit and is currently just 20 strikeouts away from 200, a plateau he has reached in each of the last six seasons.

"It was like the world stopped when Thad Bosley swung at that last pitch," said Blyleven, who fanned the Angels' rookie to complete his gem. "I hope I can do it again some day."

Blyleven, 14-12, faced only 28 batters, one over the minimum. Ron Jackson reached first base safely leading off the third inning on an error by Texas shortstop Bert Campaneris, but Andy Etchebarren grounded into an inning-ending double play.

After Jackson got aboard, Blyleven retired the next 19 batters before pinch-hitter Carlos May drew a walk on a 3-2 pitch with two outs in the bottom of the ninth. Bosley then struck out for the third time to end the game.

By winning, the Rangers avoided elimination for at least one more day in the American League West. Kansas City, which clinched a tie for the division championship Wednesday night, could win it outright tonight if the Royals beat the Angels at Anaheim Stadium or if Texas loses at Oakland this evening.

Ironically, the Rangers and Angels were involved in the other two no-hitters this season. Kansas City's Jim Colborn pitched a no-hitter against Texas on May 14 and Cleveland's Dennis Eckersley tossed his no-hitter against California on May 30.

Blyleven said he began thinking in terms of a no-hitter early in the game.

"I first realized it in the second inning when I looked at the scoreboard and saw that (Angel pitcher Paul) Hartzell and I both had one going and I thought it sure would be nice."

"In the third and fourth innings I really started to concentrate on a no-hitter and the next thing I knew it was the eighth inning."

Blyleven received a temporary setback with two outs in the eighth. On a 3-1 pitch to Mario Guerrero he said he pulled the groin again. Blyleven said he never saw Guerrero foul the pitch off "but I thought by the sound of it that he had gotten a hit."

The game was delayed momentarily to determine if Blyleven could continue, but as he said later, "I wasn't going to leave, even if I had to throw underhanded."

Guerrero popped out to end the eighth and the ninth was easy.

Blyleven said he used his curve ball, a pitch he is known for, exclusively in the ninth.

"I threw about 60 percent curve balls in the game," he said. "My leg doesn't bother me that much when I throw curves."

He struck out seven, including the side in the seventh inning.

Pampa, Borger seek braggin' rights

By TOM KENSLER

Pampa News Sports Editor
Pampa coach John Welborn is going to bring his Harvesters out on Bulldog Field with a simplified game plan for tonight's 7:30 contest.

"We're going to have to keep the ball as long as we can," Welborn said. "If our offense has it on long sustained drives, Borger can't score."

Last week the Harvesters moved the ball on Perryton, but turnovers stopped drives. Against Borger, Welborn plans on playing more conservatively.

"We are going to stick with the safer passes like out patterns, curls and passes to our backs."

In the Perryton game, quarterback Steve Young threw strictly to the wide receivers. Ricky Bunton, playing his best game, caught five passes for 68 yards, while Gary Dumas nabbed three for 53 yards. But three deep throws were picked off by the Rangers.

Running backs Rudy Roland and Doug Smith are considered quick as Roland off the start. Smith is thought by the coaches to be the fastest Harvester for 100 yards.

They will be challenging a Borger defense that has allowed only 11.3 points per game, and 2.6 yards per rushing attempt.

"They are aggressive and fairly big, but not near as quick as Perryton or Dumas," Welborn said. "I feel like we'll be able to move the ball on them if we don't hurt ourselves with mistakes."

Unlike Perryon, the Bulldogs run what Welborn calls a "simple offense," concentrating on the dive, reverse and outside veer.

Richard Horn, an import from Tokyo, Japan, leads Borger rushers with 399 yards on 63 totes for six touchdowns. Quarterback Greg Fleming has completed nine of 14 passes for 175 yards with only one interception.

"What worries me is that they are so consistent," Welborn said. "They get three or four yards at a time and don't make many mistakes."

Lately, Pampa has had the upper hand in the rivalry which dates back to the oil boom days of the early 1920s. Welborn is 3-0 against the Bulldogs, winning by scores of 25-0, 33-0 and 28-8. The 33-0 victory was at Bulldog Field in Jim Breckenridge's first year as Borger mentor.

"I don't know if you can call it a rivalry anymore," Welborn said. "But I guess everybody would like to win this one for the bragging rights of the oil community."

(My call: Borger by 10).

Raiders face "hungry" Steelers

By BRUCE LOWITT

AP Sports Writer
Raiders 20, Steelers 17

On a head-to-head matchup, we like Ken Stabler's ability and play selection over Terry Bradshaw's. We also wonder just how much of Pittsburgh's success last Monday night was due to San Francisco's ineptitude.

Patriots 24, Browns 13

We're not ready to believe in the Browns just yet.

Vikings 35, Bucs 6

We may not believe in Tampa Bay until the next decade—or century. Certainly not this Saturday night. Minnesota's troops may be getting old, but you're never too old when it comes to beating the Buccaneers.

Redskins 20, Falcons 10

Washington shouldn't have lost and Atlanta shouldn't have won last weekend. They'll both return to normal this time. By the way, with a bit of luck (bad for the Redskins and good for the Falcons), they each might end up close to 7-7 for the year.

Rams 23, Eagles 10

Los Angeles will go ga-ga over Joe Namath — if his line gives him some protection and his runners give him some yards. Ron Jaworski of the Eagles will get a welcome home that makes him feel like he's napping on a freeway.

Bengals 38, Seahawks 17

Cincinnati has had its bad game for the season. Oh, the Bengals may lose a few more, but they won't be embarrassed the way they were by the Browns. Pity Seattle.

Bears 21, Cardinals 17

The Upset Special. It could be that the Cardiac Cards are going into coronary arrest. If Chicago thinks it's a contender, this is one of the games to show why.

Colts 37, Jets 9

The Jets play this one in Giants Stadium. Good thing, too. Otherwise they'd be lowering their own real estate values instead of someone else's.

Cowboys 34, Giants 14

This one could be over by halftime. New York quarterback Jerry Golsteyn will find out this week what a pass rush is.

Chiefs 23, Chargers 17

Watch lightning strike ... and sputter and fizzle. San Diego is about as electrifying as a dead battery.

Packers 20, Oilers 14

A mini-upset. Green Bay's Lynn Dickey would like to do well against his former team. He'll do just well enough.

Lions 20, Saints 10

It took New Orleans just 30 minutes to show that this season, like all their other ones, is a wasted one.

Dolphins 20, Oilers 13

Even San Francisco's fog won't keep bespectacled Bob Griese from seeing the holes in the 49ers' defense.

Broncos 23, Bills 14

Once again Buffalo proves that one star and 21 mannequins don't make a team.

Sneak nips Shockers

LIBERAL, Kan. — Redskin quarterback Conrad Herdert scored a one-yard touchdown run with 1:54 left in the game to give the Liberal junior varsity a 9-8 win over the Shockers here Thursday night.

Herdert's plunge culminated a drive which began when a Joe Jeffers pass was intercepted on the Shockers 36 with 4 1/2 minutes remaining.

The Shockers had taken an 8-3 lead in the third quarter when Bobby Ward caught a 16-yard scoring pass from Jeffers. The touchdown climaxed a 9-play, 47-yard drive by Pampa.

The hard-hitting contest was a scoreless stand-off until the Redskins' Wayne Williams booted a 20-yard field goal with four seconds remaining in the half.

Pampa was outgained in total yardage, 267 to 187. Jeffers completed 10 of 27 passes for 141 yards and had three interceptions.

Bell to start

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Despite a bone chip in his ankle, top draft pick Ricky Bell is scheduled to start at running back Saturday when the Tampa Bay Buccaneers take on Fran Tarkenton and his National Football Conference champion Minnesota Vikings.

The heavily-favored Vikings are looking for their first victory of the new National Football League season.

The Bucs, also 0-1, are looking for their first regular-season victory ever.

Last year, the Bucs went 0-14 while the Vikings made their fourth losing trip to the Super Bowl.

Although Coach John McKay isn't expected to announce the starting lineup until this afternoon, Bucs officials say Bell has been working out in pads and is ready.

The 22-year-old University of Southern California standout has had trouble with his right ankle for about three weeks. He complained that he had lost speed in last week's 13-3 loss to Philadelphia and asked to be taken out of the game.

Shocker TD grabber

Bobby Ward caught a 16-yard touchdown pass from Joe Jeffers for the Shockers' lone score in a 9-8 loss to the Liberal, Kan. JV team Thursday night at Redskin Field. The Shockers now sport a 2-2 record on the year. (Pampa News photo)

Ninth B loses, Eighth splits

The ninth grade "B" team was trounced 28-8 by Highland Park Thursday in Pampa.

The eighth grade Reds defeated Perryton 16-8 at Perryton Thursday. Mark Kotara and Andy Cortez scored the Pampa touchdowns.

The eighth grade Blues dropped a 36-8 decision to Borger in a game played at the Pampa junior high Thursday.

The ninth grade "A" team had an open date.

Back in 1894, Jacob Stenzel of the Pittsburgh Pirates hit two home runs in one inning.

Cubs delay Philly flag

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "In my mind the Phillies have it clinched," said Bruce Sutter.

Sutter may believe the Phillies have the National League East division clinched with a 6 1/2-game lead over second place Pittsburgh with 10 games to play. But he isn't about to help them clinch it.

Sutter came on in the eighth and gave up just one hit in chalking up his 30th save of the season in Chicago's 5-3 victory over the Phillies Thursday night. The victory went to reliever Paul Reuschel, who worked one inning in support of starter Dennis Lamp.

The Phillies appeared to agree with Sutter. They weren't concerned with losing two straight at home to the Cubs and walking a treadmill with that magic number of four — any combination of four Phillies' wins or Pirates' losses.

Game wardens nab limit violators

By J.D. PEER
Texas Parks & Wildlife
COLORADO CITY — A tip from the Mitchell County sheriff's department lead two Texas Parks and Wildlife Department game wardens to a dove-hunting hotspot where ten men from the Houston area were found to be in violation of Texas fish and game regulations.

Texas game wardens Rue Gambol, Snyder and Ronnie Aston, Colorado City, observed the Houston men for two hours and when the hunt was completed and the hunters went back to camp south of Colorado City, the wardens moved in for a license and bag limit check.

By the time the total tally of dove were counted, 191 birds were found in the camp. Since the daily bag limit during the current dove season is 10 birds per day, the Houston hunters had bagged 91 birds over their limit.

The South Texas hunters were taken before a Mitchell County Justice of the Peace and guilty pleas were received from all the hunters. Fines totaling $1970 were set by the judge and paid by the hunters.

Panhandle and South Plains game wardens have been busy since the opening of dove season Sept. 1 with over 212 citations being issued for various game violations including over limit, shooting from the public road, no hunting license, shooting migratory birds from vehicles, and taking game and non-game birds during closed season.

The all-day shooting hours for dove this fall have put additional pressure on the P&W wardens as hunters begin hunting 30 minutes before sunrise to sunset daily. The dove season will continue through Oct. 30, 1977.

LUBBOCK — Reports from the Panhandle and the Permian Basin indicate good production and range conditions for deer including the white-tailed and mule deer herds and archery hunters will have a chance to score during the season which begins state-wide Oct. 1.

Buck deer will have good antlers in most sections of the state due to the good spring range conditions even though the bow hunters will have to contend with heavy foliage still on the trees and brush prior to frost.

All persons who hunt wild deer, bear, turkey, and javelina during any open archery season in which long bows and arrows may be used are required to purchase a $3.25 Texas archery stamp in addition to a valid Texas hunting license.

The archery stamp must be signed by the person using the stamp. Part of the money from the archery stamp is designated for wildlife management and research as bow hunters help pay for their sport.

The archery deer season will continue through Oct. 16 in the Panhandle and through Oct. 31 in the remainder of the state.

Bow-hunting equipment also must meet certain requirements during this open season. The bow must be capable of shooting a hunting arrow equipped with a broadhead hunting point for a distance of 130 yards while taking game animals and game birds.

The broadhead hunting point must be at least seven-eighths inches (7/8") in width and not more than one and one-half inches in width. Arrows must be marked with the name and address of the user in some non-water-soluble medium. The arrows cannot be poisoned, drugged, or explosive.

Crossbows are not legal for taking game animals and game birds at any time in regulatory counties or during archery-only seasons in other counties. Bow hunters may use shotguns with No. 6 shot or smaller in regulatory counties and shotguns with No. 4 shot or smaller in non-regulatory counties for bird hunting.

Bag and possession limits for antelope, aoudad, bear, deer, javelina and turkey are season limits, and where "archery" seasons are provided, the bag limit is for both the "regular"

and "archery" seasons combined.

Legal shooting hours for all game animals and game birds, except migratory birds, are one-half hour before sunrise to one-half hour after sunset daily.

A reasonable effort must be made to retrieve all wounded game animals and birds and these animals or birds shall become a part of the legal bag limit.

All animals or birds taken into possession must be kept in an edible condition. Hunters should become familiar with proper techniques for dressing and keeping wild meat edible for the table.

Texas hunters are asked to obey all safety rules, get permission from the landowner before hunting and share the bountiful wildlife resources for an enjoyable hunt.

Tech's Allison expects "real war"

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Texas Tech quarterback Rodney Allison was so scared he almost got sick the last time he played the Texas Aggies.

When the sixth-ranked Aggies and seventh-rated Texas Tech Red Raiders tangle Saturday night, the All-Southwest Conference quarterback believes he'll have a little more poise. He hopes it will be enough.

Tech blitzed the Aggies 27-16 last year and went on to share the SWC title with the Houston Cougars. Allison came off the bench for starting quarterback Tommy Duniven, who suffered a shoulder separation.

"I almost threw the ball out of bounds on the first pass," said Allison. "I didn't stay nervous long."

Allison, the little magician who makes Tech's explosive offense so difficult to decipher, said "I think at the end of last year A&M was the best team in the country. We were lucky to catch them when we did."

He added, "This is going to be a real war. We still haven't played as well as I think we are capable of, but we are improving. It should be a heckuva game. I'm just glad it's here."

Texas Tech Coach Steve Sloan said besides George Woodard and Curtis Dickey, two tough running backs, the Aggies have one of the best kicking game in the country.

"I mean Tony Franklin can kick it (a field goal) from anywhere and that fullback (Woodard) causes something of a dilemma because nobody can tackle him. All I know is they beat us 38-9 the last time we played here, but I'm still glad we're playing here."

The rivalry between Texas Tech and Texas A&M has produced some great moments in college football and I'm not about to tell you that this one will be an exception. If you have a ticket, you have a treat in store."

Aggie Coach Emory Bellard said, "It'll be a horse against a horse. Both sides will have to play well and make big plays."

A&M quarterback David Walker said Aggie students are mad because they could only get 2,500 tickets and hundreds plan to drive to Lubbock hoping to find one. A crowd near 60,000 was expected.

"This is a big game even if it is September," said Walker. The oddsmakers rate the showdown even.

Intersectional clashes find Baylor a 10-point underdog at Nebraska; SMU a one-point pick over Tulane. Houston a 19-point selection over Utah, Tulsa a 20-point underdog at Arkansas; Rice a 27-point underdog at LSU; and TCU a five-touchdown underdog at Southern Cal.

Ralph Kiner, wearing the uniform of the Pittsburgh Pirates, won seven straight National League home run titles, from 1946 through 1952.

Quarry gives boxing yet another go-round

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

As Jerry Quarry goes through the rigid discipline of a boxing comeback in California's secluded, mile-high Lake Arrowhead, he lets his mind drift off into wild fantasies.

He sees big Earnie Shavers catching a jaded Muhammad Ali with a thunderclap right hand in their title fight at Madison Square Garden Sept. 29 and the heavyweight division suddenly opening up like a mad Pandora's box.

"Earnie can't ever forget I took him out in the first round back in 1973," the journeyman pugilist said on a visit to New York to choreograph his return to the resin bars. "He's got to give me a shot."

"So I am right back in the picture — up there where the money is."

"Boxing's White Hope," said Promoter Don King, who persuaded the Californian to come out of two years' retirement. "Thunder in either fist. Tenacity. A fighter to be reckoned with from the womb to the tomb."

Quarry added a footnote. "I got enough chin to take anything anybody can throw at it and I can take out anybody I can reach."

Quarry, now 32, is a walking billboard of his reckless willingness to give and take. He has bounced his iron chin off some of the most famous gloves in the business — Muhammad Ali in two fights, Joe Frazier, Ken Norton, Ron Lyle.

His nose is flat. A four-inch gash frames his left eye and there is a smaller piece of stitching that runs like a small river through his bushy eyebrow.

"Smokin' Joe gave me this one — took 11 stitches," he says, almost proudly, as if showing off trophies in his living room. "And this one came from Ali in our first fight."

Quarry, a rugged, bore-in plunger, was chosen to serve as the fattest calf when Ali, out of action 2 1/2 years in a protest against military service, made his celebrated return in Atlanta in October, 1970.

Ali won on a technical knock-out in three. In a second fight, in 1972 in Las Vegas, the referee stopped it in the seventh. Both Frazier and Norton stopped Quarry in five in 1975.

"Nobody ever knocked me out. Always the fight was stopped because I got cut. I cut easy, bled a lot. But I got a jaw like cement."

Quarry has a record of 51 victories, 30 by knockout, eight losses and four draws. Quarry said disillusionment in his chosen profession began setting in after he watched his brother Mike get demolished by light heavyweight champion Bob Foster in June, 1972.

"It did something to my head," he explained. "It wasn't I got scared. The only fear I have is of dying of suffocation. I never had a fear of pain. I never had a fear of being beaten. For some reason, my confidence suddenly disappeared."

Jerry now is undergoing hypnotherapy which he insists has screwed his head back on his body.

"It's different now," he says. "My mind is together. I got confidence. I'm not going to spend my life changing tires on Greyhound buses. There's big money in boxing. I'm going after it."

"Even Ali said I was the only fighter who fights with soul," the battered journeyman heavyweight said. "Nobody's got more hands than me. Nobody got more feet. I'm going to be boxing's Cinderella Story, like Jim Braddock."

Houston armwrestling family directed by 130-pound mother

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Bobbie Womack's favorite sport has caused her various problems. People are often reluctant to shake hands and she sometimes doesn't recognize the people she's competed against.

Mrs. Womack, all 130 well-proportioned pounds of her, is an arm wrestler.

She is the Texas and Southwestern Region lightweight champion and will be competing Saturday along with 300 other armwrestlers in the World Professional Armwrestling Association national championships at Astroworld.

Mrs. Womack is the matriarch of an armwrestling family that includes 20-year old heavyweight Lonnie, 6-2, 240-lb. 18-year-old middleweight Joe Bob, 6-2, 189 and 14-year old Jayson.

Don't worry about a division small enough for Jayson. He's 6-2 and weighs 204.

As a personable goodwill ambassador for her sport, Mrs. Womack often is asked to make appearances. "People expect to see some masculine-looking woman, but when they see me they still won't shake hands," Mrs. Womack laughed.

How does a working mother who also plays tennis three times per week get involved in a sport that is trying to shake the image of bar room entertainment?

"The boys have always competed and when we were at a tournament in San Antonio last year and there were only seven women entered in the open division," she said. "They wanted eight entries so no one would have a bye."

"The boys said, 'Oh, that's no problem, here's $10 for my mother's entry fee,' and I was in it. My first opponent was a 204-pound fork lift operator. The only reason I won was because I was so scared."

She hasn't lost a tournament since and will be going for her 13th straight victory in Saturday's tournament.

Mrs. Womack attributed her success to the "psyching-out" techniques she learned from Joe Bob.

"When I am competing, my power of concentration is so intent that I can't tell what my opponent looks like," Mrs. Womack said. "When I leave the stage, I couldn't pick her out in a crowd."

Joe Bob is even farther from his surroundings.

"When I come off the stage I'm really shaking," said Joe Bob. "I don't ever hear anything that's going on during a match. Sometimes I don't even know if I've won. Sometimes they have to help me off the stage."

Mrs. Womack, who is called "Mom" by the 12 to 15 youngsters she escorts to various tournaments, says 40 per cent of armwrestling is psyching yourself into believing you can win.

"I have a technique I use for psyching myself out to where they're going to have to almost break my arm before they put me down," she said. "And as psyched out as I get, Joe Bob is twice as psyched out as I am."

Having a Mom that is one of the boys is no problem for the Womack clan, their mother said. In fact, they're her inspiration.

"If you want to know the truth, they are the reason I win," she said. "It's so much fun to see what kind of reaction the boys have. It really tickles them to introduce their mother as one of the competitors."

The sport is so contagious that Joe Bob's girl friend, 115-pound Shari Galit, took up armwrestling. Since there are only two women's divisions, over 145 pounds and under 145 pounds, Shari is often outweighed. She met Mrs. Womack in the finals of one tournament.

The boys couldn't figure out whom to cheer for. Finally Joe Bob had the solution. "Come on girls, come on girls," he shouted.

Braves bounce Astros

HOUSTON (AP) — Brian Asseltine made the most of a rare opportunity.

Asseltine, batting only 196 in 92 at bats this season, drove in three runs with a double and a single to lead the Atlanta Braves past the Houston Astros, 8-4, Thursday night.

"I haven't played much this year," Asseltine said. "I'm used mostly as a pinch hitter and a substitute outfielder."

Asseltine's run-scoring double, Willie Montanez' single and Biff Pocaroba's RBI double scored three runs for Atlanta in the fourth inning off losing pitcher J. R. Richard, 16-12.

Barry Bonnell's sacrifice fly and Asseltine's two-run single highlighted a three-run Atlanta sixth inning as Houston lost its first series at home since June 15.

Pat Rockett's two-run eighth inning single accounted for the other Braves' runs.

Houston's first run came on Bob Watson's fourth inning RBI single off winning pitcher Eddie Solomon, 6-6. The Astros added three fifth inning runs on Terry Puhl's single, Cesar Cedeno's sacrifice fly and Asseltine's throwing error.

Cedeno had his 22-game hitting streak broken, tying Dave Parker of Pittsburgh for the longest streak in the National League this season.

"Brian (Asseltine) has really worked hard on his hitting," said Atlanta manager Dave Bristol. "He's going to play winter ball in Santo Domingo. He's got ability."

Zip codes and loans

Sylvia Porter

If you have been turned down for credit by a major credit card firm or retailer, could one reason be your zip code?

Growing numbers of would-be borrowers in cities across the land are discovering that — due to a provision in the Equal Credit Opportunity Act — they have been refused credit in part because of where they live. Under that historic law, creditors must explain why they have refused an applicant credit.

A Detroit couple, for instance, who live in a fashionable downtown apartment across from the city's Art Institute, have a combined income of $50,000 a year, own a boat and an expensive recreation vehicle. When they recently sought a gasoline credit card, the company refused their request, citing as an explanation "our credit experience in your general geographic location." A young Raleigh, N.C., woman who works at a local bank learned that a branch of a nationwide department store chain had refused her a charge account in part because of her zip code. Similar complaints have reached local, state and federal government officials.

There is nothing in the ECOA or its implementing "Regulation B" which forbids creditors from using geographic area in assessing the credit worthiness of applicants. Actually, this has been a factor in evaluations of creditseekers for the past 20 years at least, but until now, the practice of "redlining" — the denial of credit on the basis of neighborhood — has been primarily associated with granting of insurance and mortgages. It was the enactment of the ECOA which forced the disclosure that location was a factor in denial of credit by retailers and non-bank credit card companies, too.

The news has startled and outraged lawmakers, reports my Washington associate, Brooke Shearer, aroused demands that the Equal Credit Opportunity Act be amended, both to eliminate geographic location as a basis for denial of credit and to restore the principle that credit worthiness must be determined on the basis of individual merits.

"The damage such a practice does to the cities is incalculable," says Detroit city councilman Carl Levin. "If an individual is stigmatized because he or she lives within a city or particular neighborhood, then people will just have another reason to move out."

The staff of the Federal Trade Commission also is conducting a preliminary inquiry into the use of location in credit decisions to see if it has the effect of discriminating against applicants on the basis of race or ethnic background.

Bills already have been introduced into Congress — by Rep. William M. Brodhead (D-Mich.), among others — to expand the ECOA to forbid discrimination in credit granting on the basis of geographic location, occupation or job title, as well as the existing factors of race, age, religion, sex, marital status, color, or receipt of public assistance.

Yet this redlining is defended by many creditors and developers of so-called "credit-storing systems" which are used by lenders to pinpoint what borrowers are most likely to default.

"We take the information that a user (creditor) has from a set of accounts," explains Edward Lewis, vice president of Fair, Isaac & Co., leading developer of credit-storing systems in the U.S. "You include everything which is legal — home ownership, length of employment, credit history, etc. One piece of information is where someone lives. Out of 60 items you may come up with between eight and 12 factors which have the power to predict probable credit behavior. No single item will ever put someone in or out."

"If a geographic item shows up, it's because it's a component in a group of items. What matters is the total score."

Most of the 300 creditors now using credit-scoring systems are large firms which write off at least $100,000 annually in bad loans. With a ban on the use of geographic location, Lewis insists "creditors will either disappear or cut the number of acceptances."

The ECOA's prohibition against using sex as a calculating factor in credit-scoring has resulted in more credit turn-downs, Lewis and other credit industry members contend. Some firms' records showed single women were better risks than single men — but since they are not permitted to use the fact that an applicant is a woman, or her marital status, they have set tougher standards to avoid excessive losses, resulting in fewer people getting credit.

The prohibition on race did not have the same impact. "Race," says Lewis, "was not a good predictor."

Redlining has many colors, takes many forms

Mrs. Lance professes pride in her husband

WASHINGTON (AP) — La-Belle Lance was wrong. She and her husband won't be around to see their azaleas bloom next spring.

They're going back to Georgia.

Just a week ago, the wife of the former budget director pointed to the azaleas she and her husband had planted in the back yard of their Georgetown house as a sign of their determination to ride out the controversy about Lance's financial affairs.

They would be in Washington to see the azaleas bloom, she said.

But Lance resigned Wednesday and said he would go home to Georgia.

"I still feel he could take a job anywhere," Mrs. Lance said shortly after President Carter announced the resignation on national television. "He's honest and good, and I'm proud of him."

Within minutes after President Carter's press conference, Mrs. Lance stepped out on the front steps of their fashionable Georgetown house to make what she called a "statement of faith."

Her husband, who had watched the televised press conference at home with his wife, would have no further comment, she said. But clearly, Mrs. Lance would.

"I did not have anything to do with the resignation," Mrs. Lance said in a voice that was tentative at first, then grew strong, and finally broke several times with emotion. "As far as I'm concerned, my husband didn't have to resign."

In fact, she counseled him not to, she said. "I told him I would not resign, but again, that was not my decision."

Mrs. Lance, who earlier in the day looked tired and distraught, had changed from slacks to an expensive pale blue ultrasuede dress. She appeared, as one observer said, "at peace with the decision."

Neighbors and children on skateboards gathered with reporters to hear Mrs. Lance proclaim faith in her husband, her country and her religion. "We're still proud to be Americans," she said.

Mrs. Lance, a devout Methodist who writes religious poetry, said faith helped her through the past few weeks. "As long as I can walk in the light of Christ, I have faith that he puts me where he wants me," she said. "And my husband shares that same faith."

Star gazing -- 100th time

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Matthew Miller has sat through "Star Wars" 100 times. "I like the movie," he says.

Besides, the 19-year-old said Wednesday that he may set a world record if the Guinness Book of World Records is interested.

The film is 125 minutes long, which means Miller has total star-gazing time of 208 hours, 30 minutes.

Kenny Crockett, manager of Mail Cinema which Miller patronizes, said the theater is keeping track of his attendance and is letting Miller in free.

Miller, who is unemployed, said he paid for his first 30 performances at $3 a ticket.

"I came the first day and came to all seven shows. After awhile I cut that back to five and now I'm down to only a couple at a time," said Miller, who has two Star Wars T-shirts, a couple of posters, the book and the movie soundtrack.

"I'm not aiming at a specific number now. At first I wanted to try for 30 to break my old record (He saw the original "Airport" 27 times.) but when I got there I thought, 'What the hell. Why not 100?'"

Oil reaches East

The port of Valdez is the end of the line for oil flowing through the Trans-Alaska pipeline. Here, the oil is loaded on tankers which carry it to Pacific Coast and Eastern ports. The first tanker loaded with crude oil from Alaska's north slope reached the East coast Thursday, ending a 7,800 mile odyssey through the Panama Canal and through the Atlantic Ocean to Marcus Hook, Pa.

Arizona cracks down on gun sales

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Federal agents say the arrests of six firearms dealers or salesmen charged with illegally selling guns to out-of-state residents or a convicted felon is the largest crackdown of its kind in the state.

Lyman Shafer, agent in charge of the Tucson office of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, said Wednesday the arrests were the most made in one raid since the passage of the 1968 Gun Control Act.

About 40 federal agents and officers from Tucson and four other law enforcement offices participated in the raids, which followed an eight-month investigation. "Our agents in southwestern border states were hearing repeatedly that licensed dealers were behind a growing number of illegal gun sales," Shaffer said.

Man can't read, sues high school

SEATTLE (AP) — A 21-year-old man and his parents are suing Seattle's school district on grounds he was graduated from high school without learning to read.

Frank Fisher said his son, Richard, "can't read an application to get a job." The Fishers claim Richard should be given remedial education at the school district's expense. The suit filed earlier this month in King County Superior Court seeks unspecified damages.

The mother, Mary, said Wednesday she did not know how it was possible for the school district to award her son a diploma "because we used to help him with his homework and we knew how he struggled."

The Fishers charge that their son, who was graduated in 1974 from Lincoln High School, is "completely unable to read with sufficient comprehension to obtain employment or to adequately cope with the demands of our society."

Fisher said his son also has been turned down by the Army, Navy and Air Force because he couldn't read.

Fisher said his son was placed in special-education classes early because teachers said he was a poor learner.

Gary M. Little, general counsel for the school district, said recently that in similar cases in New York, San Francisco and Pennsylvania, courts have held the duty to educate is a collective one and have ruled in favor of the school districts.

"We were finding that illegal sales by licensed dealers in California, Arizona and Texas represented a substantial source of the guns being smuggled across the Mexican border," he said. Shaffer added that the dealers were necessarily not part of the smuggling operations.

Arrested on various firearms charges were:

—Irving Goldstein, 37, owner of the Legal Pawn Shop in South Tucson and American Consolidated Trading Co. in Tucson.

—James Henry, 47, manager of the American Consolidated shop.

—James Sharrah, 35, owner of the Frontier Gun Shop.

—Donald Vingino, 42, a partner in Arizona Traders Inc., in South Tucson.

—Larry Schaff, 23, a salesman at John's Gun Shop and Supply.

—Darrell Coates, 33, an Air Force sergeant licensed to sell guns independently.

Two other men, one in Tucson and one in Nogales, were arrested last week, officials said.

Transsexual ends Navy career

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — "God loves me just as much as He did before," says a transsexual who underwent a sex change operation at Baptist Medical Hospital.

"God gave man the knowledge to relieve human suffering. Being a transsexual is human suffering," Joanna Clark, formerly Chief Petty Officer Michael Clark, said Wednesday.

Officials of the church-supported hospital banned sex change operations this summer after church members objected.

"It's tragic, what's going on at Baptist. Their troubles with the operation are based on ignorance," said Ms. Clark, a Baptist.

Ms. Clark, who prefers that designation, said as a boy of 5, she began to realize she "was not the same as other boys."

She said that before the operation, she had been through two marriages that ended in divorce and a 12-year Navy career. Eventually, she entered a program for transsexuals at Stanford University.

Since the operation, she said she has been disqualified from the U.S. Army Reserve, where she served for almost 19 months as a sergeant first class.

She is appealing the disqualification and her case currently is under investigation by the Army inspector general's office, she said.

'Indians used as guinea pigs'

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — American Indian children are being used by the U.S. government as "guinea pigs for medical research" without their parents' permission, a leader of American Indian Movement charged today.

Pat Bellanger, chairman of the movement's board of directors, said many of the children, most of them teenagers, were being used in experiments for research on eye and kidney diseases and new forms of birth control. She said the kidney experiments often caused permanent injuries that caused young Indian women to give birth to still-born babies.

She also charged that hospitalized Indians were often given "blank, ineffective pills" to test the duration of their illness.

Mrs. Bellanger is here for the first international "conference on discrimination against indigenous populations of the Americas," which ends Friday. She said in an interview that she had "government proof" that the experiments had taken place.

She referred to a letter written in November 1976 by a federal comptroller to Sen. James G. Abourezk, D-S.D., in which the official admitted "research" involving Indian children "in three boarding schools" had been carried out with "no informed parental consent."

The Indian movement official also accused the United States, Canada and Mexico of "random child snatching." She charged that white families were being paid by U.S. authorities to act as foster parents to Indian children.

Mrs. Bellanger, 34, claimed that her 15-year-old daughter had been the victim of an adoption attempt by white authorities in St. Paul, Minn.

"When I refused to hand her over, I was forced to sign a paper saying I would never ask the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs for any assistance for my child. In other words, she lost all tribal rights, including education and welfare help," Mrs. Bellanger said.
