Vance pushes pact as 'peaceful partnership'

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, hoping to prove to a doubtful Senate the wisdom of the Panama Canal treaty, said today the pact creates "a partnership under which our two countries can join in the peaceful and efficient operation of the canal."

Testifying before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Vance said the treaty proves "once and for all the falsity of the tired charges that we are an imperialistic exploiter bent only on extracting Latin American raw materials and using the continent for our own economic interest."

Since President Carter signed the treaty Sept. 7, there have been repeated forecasts that the administration would be unable to obtain the two-thirds vote needed for Senate ratification.

In hearings this week before Senate and House committees the administration hopes to reverse the momentum of treaty opponents.

While Vance and treaty negotiators Sol Linowitz and Ellsworth Bunker were testifying before the Senate panel, Secretary of Defense Harold Brown and Gen. George Brown, head of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, were called before the House International Relations Committee.

The defense secretary testified that the treaty best assures continued U.S. access by promoting cooperation rather than risking a U.S. "garrison amid hostile surroundings." He said that "use of the canal is more important than ownership."

He said the treaty will give the United States "unimpeded use" of effective operation and physical security of the canal.

Expanding on the reference to risk of a

U.S. garrison, Brown said, "If Panama and other Latin American countries, or major elements of the Panamanian population, became hostile to the United States, then protecting the canal against internal threats, terrorism and guerrilla actions would become much more difficult."

"Such occurrences are far less likely under the new treaty than they would be if the long unsettled status quo were to continue," he said.

Gen. Brown said that "Our capability to defend the Panama Canal will be enhanced through cooperation with the government of Panama."

And he added "The Joint Chiefs of Staff will continue to plan for rapid reinforcement of the U.S. Southern Command in the event of emergency need."

Other top Carter administration officials are to testify before the Senate committee during the week.

Critics of the treaty have said that by agreeing to turn over the waterway to Panama by the year 2000, the United States acted out of fear that Panama would seize the canal anyway.

"It is our interest, not foreign pressures, that led us to these treaties," Vance said.

Conservative treaty opponents say the treaty does not guarantee the United States the right to intervene militarily if Panama should somehow deny access to the United States or some other nation.

But, said Vance, "a Panama which is cooperating with us in canal management and will eventually exercise full management responsibility has no reason to seize or obstruct the canal."

Moreover, the secretary said, the Joint Chiefs "are satisfied that the treaties enable us to keep the canal open indefinitely."

He continued, "I believe the ratification and implementation of these treaties will be the single most positive act on to be taken in recent years in our relations with Latin America."

In separate testimony, negotiator Linowitz said that if the pact is not approved by the Senate "the time may come when we may find ourselves having to defend the canal by force against a hostile population and in the face of widespread condemnation by the countries of Latin America and even the rest of the world."

Bunker, noting that the treaty negotiations first began in 1964, said under the treaty the United States will have full control of canal operations until the year 2000. He said treaty opponents have overlooked a history of three-quarters of a century of cooperation between the two nations.

Gen. Brown and the other joint chiefs say they firmly support the treaty, declaring that the canal, once considered vital to U.S. security in the Western Hemisphere, is rapidly losing its military importance.

Treaty critics, including some House members and senators, have questioned whether the joint chiefs really feel that way. Former members of the JCS have said the United States needs continued control of the waterway to ensure free passage of the U.S. Navy between the Pacific and Atlantic oceans.

Actually, there are two separate treaties under consideration, although they are considered indivisible. One treaty would turn full control of the canal over to Panama by the year 2000. The other gives the United States the right to ensure perpetual neutrality for the canal.

The pact calls for 9,000 U.S. troops now based in the Canal Zone to be withdrawn.

Concorde in D-FW airport: causing woes, glee

Dallas-Fort Worth Airport officials were pleased with the recent announcements that the supersonic Concorde may land there, but Texas environmentalists are disturbed. They predicted residents of suburbs near the airport would bitterly oppose the landings. City officials in Dallas and Fort Worth have voiced strong support for SST service but Grand Prairie, Grapevine and Irving, near the airport, have passed resolutions urging the federal government to prevent Concorde landings until studies are complete. Braniff is trying to arrange a plan whereby Braniff pilots would fly the giant aircraft to Dallas-Fort Worth after it arrives at an airport on the Eastern Seaboard.

Trade deficit second largest

WASHINGTON (AP) — American businesses sold fewer products abroad during August than at any time in the last 16 months as the nation's trade deficit grew to $2.7 billion, the Commerce Department said today.

The trade deficit the 15th in a row and the second largest in history, surpassed only by the $2.8-billion deficit in June.

American exports totaled $9.6 billion, a sharp decline from the $10.1 billion a month before, and was the smallest amount since a $9.4 billion in exports in April 1976. Imports for the month declined from $12.5 billion to $12.2 billion.

A trade deficit means more dollars are leaving the country to pay for foreign goods than the United States is earning from sales of its goods abroad. It means a loss of purchasing power to Americans and can result in reduced employment and production at home.

The Carter administration has said the continuing trade deficit has been caused mostly by increases in imported oil from the Arab countries. Some officials have said nearly all non-Arab countries have built up trade deficits and it could take 10 years to return to normal.

They say other countries have been unable to buy our products because the U.S. economy has been growing more rapidly than theirs.

The latest trade report shows that petroleum imports declined for the second month in a row, dropping from $3.6 billion in July to $3.3 billion last month.

So far this year, the U.S. trade deficit is $17.6 billion, and administration officials say it could exceed $25 billion for the year.

The trade deficit for all of 1976 was $2.3 billion.

The deficit fluctuated in the last four months, rising from $1.2 billion in May to $2.8 billion in June, then declining to $2.3 billion in July before today's figure of $2.7 billion.

Exports of commodities showing big decreases of July through August were soybeans, cotton, logs, iron and steel scrap, coal, synthetic resin and plastics, textile yarns and fabrics, chemicals, motor vehicles and parts and other machinery.

Explicit photos introduced

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — Overriding strenuous defense objections, prosecutors introduced explicit photographs today of two persons slain last year at Cullen Davis' Fort Worth mansion.

The trial judge listened to nearly half an hour of private debate at his bench before allowing the potentially inflammatory pictures into evidence.

Jurors in Davis' capital murder trial silently passed the black and white photos around the jury box, viewing at close range the bullet wounds that killed Stan Farr and Andrea Wilborn.

The trial entered its sixth week today with prosecutors slowly but surely chipping away at a defense conspiracy theory.

Pampan charged after hit, run

Ramon Vargas Perez, Pampa, charged with failure to stop and render aid — a felony offense following an accident last weekend at Alcock and Faulkner, was remanded to the Gray County jail this morning in lieu of a $3,000 bond.

The bond was set by Justice of Peace Venora Cole.

Lavern Stilwell of Pampa was injured in the accident, treated and released.

About two hours later Perez came to the Pampa Police Department and told officers he was driving the car involved in a hit and run accident.

Pope talks about end of life

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI celebrated his 80th birthday today, and said the end of his life is approaching. But one of his close associates said he doubted the pontiff would abide by the retirement-at-80 rule he has set for his cardinals.

Pope Paul told a crowd of 50,000 in St. Peter's Square Sunday that his birthday "pre-announces that our end in the order of temporal life is approaching."

"This obliges us to great humility," the pontiff said. "We feel the fragility of being human to which we are subject as Christ was at the crucifix."

The fact that the pope has made retirement at 80 mandatory for cardinals and his increasingly frequent references to his advanced age have given rise to speculation that he might abdicate.

But Giovanni Cardinal Benelli, a close associate who is considered by many to be the pope's choice for his successor said in a weekend interview.

"Knowing his way of thinking, I believe that such an hypothesis should be ruled out. Paul VI has a very high, exceptional sense of duty. He knows that he was called to this mission and that no one can exempt him."

'U.S., Germany Japan have international responsibility'

Industrial nations slow economic growth

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON AP — Anti-inflation policies of industrial nations have slowed economic growth and kept unemployment at recession levels, and now must be "decisively corrected," the head of the International Monetary Fund said today.

Major reductions in unemployment are possible only if industrial nations pursue "markedly higher rates of economic expansion," Managing Director H. Johannes Witteveen said in remarks prepared for the opening of a week-long annual meeting of the IMF and World Bank.

He said the United States, Germany and Japan have an "international responsibility" to maintain adequate growth of their economies because what they do affects the rest of the world.

President Carter planned to address delegates from the IMF's 131 member nations later in the day. The disappointing growth of the world economy clearly is the topic most on the minds of the central bankers and finance ministers attending the meetings.

In his remarks, Witteveen said "The pace of economic recovery in the industrial countries as a group has become so slow that it is adversely affecting employment and foreign trade... and encouraging protectionism. This is a matter for serious concern."

It was the most serious expression yet by a major international figure over the recent worldwide economic slowdown. Statements by IMF officials usually are taken seriously since they often reflect collective judgment of key IMF members, including the United States.

Witteveen said he welcomed recent steps by Germany and Japan to stimulate their economies, but said they should "be prepared to take further measures of stimulus in the event that the performance of their domestic economies does not improve substantially."

Witteveen indicated satisfaction with economic growth in the United States so far this year, but said it is important to the rest of the world that U.S. growth be maintained "at a satisfactory rate."

In a separate speech, World Bank President Robert S. McNamara called on industrial nations to help accelerate growth in poor and developing nations with special efforts to channel the benefits to the very poor to "meet their basic human needs."

"Without these two complementary actions, the outlook for the poorest nations — nations that contain well over a billion human beings — is grim indeed," he said in prepared remarks.

He urged industrial nations to open their markets to goods manufactured in developing countries to make it possible for these countries to help themselves.

McNamara said loans and other aid to poor and developing nations by the World Bank and its affiliates will total just under $4 billion this year and should rise to $7.6 billion by 1983.

But he also said aid to the poorest nations of the world by major industrial powers has hardly increased in real terms — after discounting for inflation — during the past decade while real income of industrial nations rose by over 40 per cent in the same period.

Even before the official opening of the meeting, IMF officials and delegates from key nations, including the United States, called for a shift in economic policies by some nations to counter the recent worldwide slowdown in economic activity.

The IMF's policy-making Interim Committee issued a communique over the weekend expressing concern over the "faltering economic activity during recent months in a number of industrial countries."

It likewise confessed worry that the "persistence of high unemployment for the industrial countries as a group remained close to the recession peak in the latter part of 1975."

The chairman of the committee, British Finance Minister Denis Healey, said many delegates felt there was a "serious risk" that growth of the world economy might stop altogether, which could bring on a new recession.

To counter this threat, the committee urged that countries with strong economies "should make every effort to ensure adequate growth of domestic demand compatible with containing inflation."

In other words, nations such as the United States, Germany and Japan should make sure their economies are growing at a pace that will promote imports of goods from nations with weaker economies.

Healey said the United States, which is running a huge trade deficit this year, received high marks from other delegates for its efforts, but that Japan and Germany, which are both enjoying trade surpluses, are falling short in their efforts.

Showing an obvious awareness of domestic pressures on the Carter administration to erect barriers to imports of such foreign goods as steel and autos, the panel urged governments to resist such efforts.

The policy statements by the IMF and its key committees are taken seriously by most nations since it is playing an increasingly important role in helping member nations cope with problems caused by the five-fold increase in world oil prices. The IMF lends billions of dollars each year to countries that are in need of funds to pay their foreign debts.

Three out of four American workers do not belong to a labor union. One out of four does. Financially the union long ago dropped its "poor boy" status. By the mid-1960s, the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission reported that private pension funds, predominantly controlled by unions, had a market value of $63 billion.

Today the union is not merely a representative at the bargaining table. It is a potent force in elections. It is a big investor. It is, in fact, a big employer.

Labor Day, historically, is a day that belongs to the union. It was pioneered by Knights of Labor parades in New York City in 1882, 1883, and 1884. At the urging of the American Federation of Labor, Congress declared it a national holiday in 1894.

The American labor union, as we know it today, had its beginning in the cigar factories of New York City. These were the sanctuaries of the European socialists. Here the young Samuel Gompers, with only four years schooling in Jewish classes, undertook the study of the revolutionary writers Marx, Engels, Lassalle. He read to the others as they worked.

Gompers had the type of a mind that put every theory to the test of experience. He saw the union cooperatives fail. He came to the settled conclusion that the union never could displace the capitalist in the management of business. He discerned the essence of political parties, he understood that they are not — as so many still naively suppose — organizations of citizens based on principles of public welfare, but rather institutions of professionals competing for control through government.

Although not totally consistent, Gompers in general, advised unionists simply to bargain for immunity from interference by legislators.

courts and political executives so that they could win their objectives by moral and economic power.

Some of the advice that Gompers gave has stood the test of time. With rare discernment, he foresaw the natural alignment between the socialists who wish to control everything through the state and the total capitalists who wish to own everything through the state.

"Socialism holds nothing but unhappiness for the human race," he declared. "It destroys personal initiative, wipes out national pride, and even plays into the hands of the autocrats."

At another time, he said: "Socialism is the end of fanatics, the sophistry of the so-called intelligentsia, and it has no place in the hearts of those who would fight for freedom and preserve democracy."

In yet another statement, he asserted: "There is no more demoralizing theory than that which imputes all human evils to capitalism or any other single agency."

Gompers probably said a thousand other things with which we would not agree. Under his leadership, for instance, the American Federation of Labor advocated such coercive measures as immigration restriction, unduly restrictive child labor laws, and compulsory schooling. The first has been the cause of war, the second the cause of much crime, and the last provided the hotbed for the violent revolution that Gompers struggled so hard to avert.

The best suggestion we can make to the diehard unionist of today would be merely to repeat the Gompers formula. Submit every theory to the test of experience. Look at what the multiple ownership of capital has produced, contrasted with the limited output of socialist monopoly. Study the record.

Danger: real and hardly

For sheer zaniness, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) booklet advising farmers and ranchers to "talk softly to cows" and that "wet manure is slippery" was probably the ultimate. However, like Ralph Nader, who strains for ways to keep his name in the news, the federal agency is still trying.

OSHA's latest innovation for pooping off the taxpayers' money, according to the Wall Street Journal, is an 18-minute film, in color, yet, which essays to tutor farm workers on the various hand signals they can use in the fields to alert each other to danger.

Hopefully farm workers forgetting the film's instructions will remember to yell, "Hey, a cow just passed over there, and it's raining!"

Just what the film advises in the way of a hand signal to alert field hands that an OSHA snooper is in the vicinity, the Journal item didn't say.

Meanwhile, as Jimmy Carter, et al. go about giving the Panama Canal to dictator Torrijos so it can be better defended, a California biochemist is warning that the catalytic converters, foisted off on the automobile industry and the driving public by Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) pressure tactics and an amendment to the Clean Air Act in the name of environmental safety, pose a lethal danger.

A major component of the converters, warns Dr. Rajendra S. Bhatnager of the University of California at San Francisco, becomes an extremely powerful poison after a short period of time.

The component involved, he points out, is the metal palladium used in the converters to change carbon monoxide emissions into carbon dioxide and water.

By itself, palladium is harmless, the biochemist explains, but the action of the converter changes it into palladium nitrate and palladium sulfate, both of which are extremely poisonous. The result "is one of the most toxic substances we have ever seen," Bhatnager told a Chicago Tribune reporter early this week, and "concentrations as low as one part per million (can) cause serious damage."

The findings came as a surprise, the biochemist said, because palladium, a chemically inert metal, was considered to be completely safe. But now, in view of the new findings, there is a real danger that the lethal poison will get into the atmosphere from worn converters that might leak and the careless disposal of old converters.

Car owners who have removed catalytic converters from their vehicles to improve gas mileage should not leave them where the toxic compounds could get into water supplies, Bhatnager emphasized.

So far, he said, there are no known victims of converter poisoning because "the existence of the poisons has just been discovered. We feel it is necessary to issue a warning that these poisons are a potential source of danger. It would be a very serious problem if they got into the atmosphere."

A weekly report on new developments in the marketplace that are expected to affect your life

MEDICINE: What doctor (or patient) hasn't wished for a magic machine that could promptly diagnose an ailment correctly? Well, such a dream machine is under development at Argonne National Laboratory in Illinois. And in five to 10 years, it may be capable of diagnosing literally hundreds of disorders, ranging from genetic diseases to cancer. The device, basically a computer, is designed to identify the thousands of different proteins that make up our body's cells. The key to all this is the fact that when a cell shows abnormal changes or suffers damage, it tends to "leak" specific proteins, and these show up in the blood or urine. This enables doctors to determine which organ is damaged and the type of damage.

TRAVEL: Electric cars sound great but they do not appear to be an idea whose time has come. A survey of users showed that they liked their economy—the amount of electricity used to charge the batteries was negligible when added to the utility bill. But the current models were not especially comfortable, and they averaged only 30-35 miles before getting a recharge. The result was that they were driven only about 75 miles a week. The average gas-driven car is used for about 220 miles a week. Nearly 80 percent of those surveyed said they'd be likely to buy another electric car if it was made by one of the Big Four automakers, the implication being that it would have better mileage and be more comfortable.

PHONES: It seems inevitable that one of these days you'll be getting your phones from the corner phone store or possibly the phone counter at a department store. Ma Bell already has three prototype Phone Centers in shopping malls and will have 1,400 phone sale outlets at its offices around the country by the end of the year. All because the Federal Communications Commission said we could buy phones from firms other than Bell, which is not about to give up the business.

FOOD: Del Monte, which led the way on nutritional labeling for canned goods, is going to set the pace on solid-content labeling (the weight of the fruit or vegetable before the addition of liquids needed for processing). Others have proposed what's called drained weight labeling (the weight of the fruits and vegetables after they have been processed, stored for a minimum of 30 days, and then drained of all liquid). Del Monte contends that some fruits and vegetables tend to absorb moisture during and after processing at varying rates and over a varying length of time. In any case, you'll have more information to consider when you shop.

EDUCATION: Too often, the work of a great teacher is lost. So consider this scenario: He (or she) writes on a pressure-sensitive device called an electronic blackboard which can convert the chalk lines into electronic signals. The entire lecture—voice and graphics—can be packaged in a cassette, shipped elsewhere, and reproduced. Just such a system has been designed at the Bell Labs.

SWEETS: With saccharin in trouble, what's next for people who must use a sugar substitute? One definite possibility is a substance found in citrus fruit peels called naringin. Israeli scientists have reworked its chemistry and come up with what they call Neo-DHC, which is six times sweeter than saccharin and 2,000 times sweeter than sugar. Tests have shown that it is non-toxic and the Israelis are so confident of its future that they've built a plant to produce it.

FARMING: There was a bit of a consumer hassle recently when it was discovered that wood cellulose was turning up in one baking company's bread. It turns out that if humans aren't exactly enthralled by this possibility, cattle are: wood waste (sawdust, to be specific) is being mixed with appropriate additives, pelletized, and used as feed. At least five universities and a number of feed companies are studying the possibilities of using cellulose waste to develop new lower-priced feeds.

There is bad news, unless you are a duck. Waterfowl hunters have been ordered to get the lead out, and substitute steel shot. But steel shot is expensive and hard to find. As a result, when the shooting season opens in October, there is the terrifying possibility that many ducks will not be shot and will escape the marshes and invade the cities to attack a defenseless population.

If such a disaster occurs, it will be the fault of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service which has ruled it is OK to shoot the heads off ducks and geese, but it is not nice to poison them.

In the past, hunters have killed ducks by shooting clusters of lead pellets at them. Shotguns are remarkably efficient weapons, requiring minimal skill to operate successfully. This is because the shooter's aim need not be straight to be deadly. The shot explodes in a wide pattern, thus guaranteeing a hunter a hit if he shoots at the sky at the same time there is a bird flying in the same state.

The trouble is, millions of the lead pellets don't hit birds but simply fall to the ground, not harmlessly. Wildfowl eat the pellets and die of lead poisoning.

When a duck dies of a gizzard ache, on the ground, a hunter is deprived of the pleasure of shooting it out of the sky. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service doesn't like ducks dying in bed, so it has ordered hunters to switch to steel shot. This made the National Rifle Association angry. The NRA claims steel shot is less effective than lead. This means a lot of ducks that would be killed by lead pellets are merely wounded by steel. The nicked birds fly shakily out of sight, in search of medical treatment, and could recover to again threaten us from the sky. Even if the wound should ultimately prove fatal, the hunter is left with no proof of his kill, and his Labrador retriever has nothing to retrieve, after coming all the way from Labrador.

If it Fitz

Beware of ducks in steel shot era

The NRA filed a lawsuit attempting to block the steel-shot requirement, but the case was thrown out of federal court. The lead ban is now being enforced gradually across the nation, and this fall it reaches the most heavily hunted waterfowl areas. Steel shot must be used in all 12-gauge guns.

Except many hunters are complaining they can't find any steel shot, or when they do find it, the price is outrageous.

Dealers report ordering steel shot from wholesalers but it never arrives. The ammunition manufacturers insist they are making lots of steel shot and they can't understand why none of it seems to be reaching sporting goods stores.

There is a rumor that flocks of wild geese, led by Frankie Laine, have been hijacking steel-shot shipments and flying them to Labrador, just to be ironic. But investigators for the Fish and Wildlife Service have been unable to prove it.

The investigation was delayed for several days when 12 of the youngest investigators were trampled by a mule train. This happened several hours after the investigators admitted they'd never heard of Frankie Laine.

Those few hunters who have been able to locate some steel shot can't afford to buy it. The price of a box of 2 1/2 inch shells has been reported as high as $9.60. Three-inch shells cost over $12.

"It would cost me nearly 50 cents every time I pulled the trigger," one hunter complained to me. "It cost only 20 cents with lead shot. I can't afford to go hunting this year. I won't be able to take my little boy into the great outdoors and show him how to kill."

"Why don't you go hunting but shoot only half as much as usual," I suggested. "Let some of the ducks get away. A spared duck might be so grateful it would stop attacking women and children."

"I knew you were a commie pinko appeaser," the hunter replied. "You'd probably like to see a duck in the White House."

He was a bit hysterical, but you can hardly blame him. What with forbidden lead shot and hijacked or high-priced steel shot, this will be a dangerous autumn. At least, when your neighborhood is overrun by marauding ducks and pillaging geese, you'll know who to blame. Blame the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and Frankie Laine.

Top contributors top lobby spenders

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Top contributors to Texas political campaigns are often top spenders for lobbying during legislative sessions, according to a study made by the Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau.

"Special interest groups and individuals wined and dined legislators to the tune of $400,000 during the legislature," the Harte-Hanks Bureau study said after an extensive study of lobby expense accounts.

"Reported campaign contributions from special interests, totaling more than $1 million in 1976, and reported expenditures proved what many have long suspected — lining up a sympathetic legislative audience is a very expensive business," said the two-part series.

The study showed that 743 registered lobbyists reported spending $508,173 for "influencing legislation."

"The top 15 spenders, representing mostly industrial or trade organizations with statewide membership, put up more than one-third of all money reported spent," the series said.

The top contributor to successful 1976 political campaign and the No. 2 lobby spender was the Texas Trial Lawyers Association. The Texas Association of Realtors and the political arms of the Texas Dentists Association and the Texas AFL-CIO also were substantial political contributors and lobby spenders.

"Most of the top 15 spenders got at least half of the bills they supported through the legislature and signed by the governor," the stories said.

No one has been convicted for breaking the state lobby law because no one has ever been prosecuted.

The secretary of state's office, which administers the Texas Lobby Control Act, relies chiefly on voluntary compliance.

When the 1967 lobby law was rewritten in 1973 the secretary of state was not given any police or investigatory powers over lobbyists.

Under the 1973 law, which was amended in 1975, lobbyists are required to register and file monthly expenditure reports during legislative sessions. Otherwise reports are made every three months.

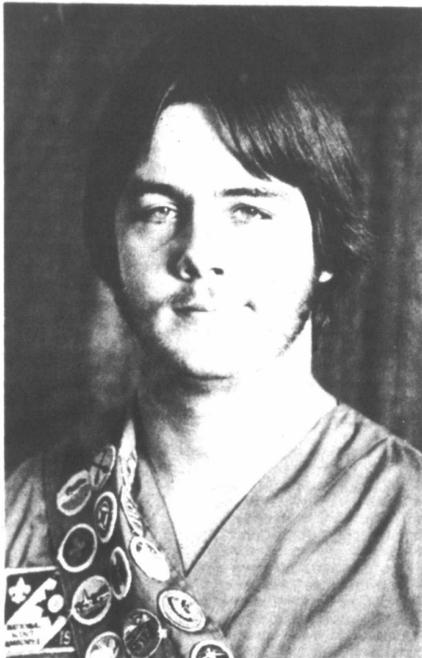

Anyone who "communicates directly" with legislators or members of the executive branch to influence legislation is considered a lobbyist and must register. Failure to register or file reports is a misdemeanor with a possible $2,000 fine, a year in jail or both.

The top 15 spenders in the 1977 legislative session, along with their 1976 campaign contributions, according to the Harte-Hanks study included:

Texas Savings and Loan League, $19,482 lobbying expenses and $16,850 campaign contributions; Texas Trial Lawyers Association $17,554 and $186,250; Lower Rio Grande Valley Chamber of Commerce $13,808 and no reported campaign contributions; Texas Motor Transportation Association $12,641 and $18,285; Texas AFL-CIO $11,344 and $26,500; Texas

Dentists Association $10,655 and $39,700; Communications Workers of America $9,858 and $19,470; Texas Association of Realtors $9,423 and $104,210; Texas Chemical Council $9,318 and $9,150; Lone Star Steel Co. $7,996 and $3,200; Tyler Area Chamber of Commerce $7,812 and no reported campaign contribution; Texas Hospital Association $7,675 and $5,300; Licensed Beverage Distributors $7,590 and $9,800; Texas Nursing Home Association, $7,424 and $34,450; Texas Automobile Dealers Association $6,114 and $19,000.

Budget NY-London fare start tonight

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

This week's introduction of a bargain-basement, $236 round-trip air fare between New York and London gives consumers almost a dozen basic fares to choose from and makes the job of figuring out which one is best even more difficult.

The first Laker Airways Skytrain flight is scheduled to depart tonight from New York's Kennedy Airport with a maximum of 345 passengers. Similar flights will leave daily from now on.

The difference between the bottom — $236, no meals, movies or beverages included — and the top — $1,312, for first-class luxury — is $1,076. The most expensive New York-London round-trip fare is more than 5 1/2 times or 456 per cent higher than the cheapest.

The Laker fare is a standby arrangement. You go to a special travel center, take a number and wait for the tickets to go on sale six hours before departure time. When you're coming back, you do the same thing in London.

Six other airlines recently instituted similar standby fares, on regular flights with a few more frills for $256. After that there are $280 budget fares, $350 APEX or advance purchase excursion fares, two excursion fares ($467 and $541), two group inclusive tour fares ($382 and $424) and $626 regular economy fares. And, if you're between 12 and 22, there are $473 youth fares.

In addition to the basic fare plans, there are several types of charters, both for individuals and members of a group. Prices generally start at about $300.

Note: Some fares increase during the summer and include a surcharge, usually $15 each way, if you travel on weekends. Picking a specific fare is partly a matter of deciding how much inconvenience you're willing to put up with. What happens if you don't get a flight and have to spend a night in New York? How can you make hotel reservations? Do you have to be home on a particular day?

Consumer watch

It also is a matter of where you live. The standby and budget fares apply only between New York and London. There are through-fare arrangements across the Atlantic available from many American cities, however. Such a fare is often cheaper than flying to New York for one of the standby or budget fares.

Suppose you live in Chicago, for example. An off-season, APEX round-trip ticket to London, costs $413. If you wanted to take the Skytrain, you would have to fly to New York — round-trip economy fare $164. Total cost: $400, or a saving of only $13.

Despite the strings attached, the discount fares are attracting more and more travelers. A spokesman for the American Society of Travel Agents said only 22 to 25 per cent of transatlantic passengers today pay regular fares, compared to 60 per cent several years ago. In the United States, in contrast, the number of passengers using discount fares has decreased because the plans are so specialized.

A visit to a travel agent may be your best starting place in selecting a fare. Meanwhile, here's a guide to some of the basics:

(Prices given are off-season, round-trip, New York-London.) Standby: Laker Airways will offer 2,415 seats a week; the other six airlines with standbys will provide a maximum of 2,900, depending on how many unsold seats they have. Your best bet of success, particularly now, in the busy season, is Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday. Cost: $236 for Laker, $256 for the others which will offer meals, liquor service, etc.

Budget: Offered by six airlines. At least three weeks before you want to leave, tell the airline what week you want to fly. At least seven days before departure, the airline will tell you the day and the flight you are booked on. To return, you must go through the same procedure once in England. Cost: $280, paid in advance.

APEX: Ticket must be purchased 45 days in advance of departure date. You must spend from 14 to 45 days at your destination. Weekend surcharge and cancellation penalties. Cost: $350.

Excursion: Available for 14 to 21 or 22 to 45 days. The time limit is the only condition. There is no advance payment requirement and no cancellation penalty, although there is a weekend surcharge. Cost: $541 for 14-21 day excursion, $467 for 22-45 day excursion.

Group inclusive tour: Available in lengths of seven to 10 days and 14 to 21 days. You must purchase a fixed sum in ground arrangements such as hotel room or rental car. Must be paid for 15 days in advance. Cost: $382 to $424 depending on length of stay.

Economy: No restrictions regarding length of stay, advance payment, cancellation, etc. Ticket good for up to one-year. Cost: $626.

First class: Again, no restrictions. Free beverages, movies, etc., extra legroom. Good for up to one year. Cost: $1,312.

The two most common charters for individuals not affiliated with a particular organization are the ABCs and the OTCs. Both must be purchased from travel agents or tour operators, not airlines.

The ABC or advance booking charter, covers air fare only. The minimum stay is seven days and prices vary. You must buy your ticket 45 days in advance and there is a cancellation penalty if the tour operator cannot find a substitute passenger.

OTCs or one-stop tour charters include air fare, ground accommodations and some services such as a guided tour. Payment is required 30 days in advance and there is a minimum stay of seven days, six nights, with no refund if you cancel.

Accused abductor mum

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — An Albuquerque man, who says he lived on crackers during a week-long ordeal in which he was held by four persons, was back in Albuquerque today but refusing to comment on the incident.

Joe Lambert Aragon, 29, told newsmen Sunday night he wouldn't have anything to say about his being abducted and taken to El Paso, Tex., until he talked with the FBI.

El Paso police said Sunday Aragon called the police station late Saturday night from a pay telephone near the El Paso-Juarez, Mexico, border and told officers the ordeal that began last Sunday in Albuquerque had ended.

Officers said Aragon told them he gained his freedom when the four persons he said had abducted him, blindfolded him and left him in a car near the border.

Aragon told officers he was abducted from a parking lot in Albuquerque's southwest valley last Sunday. He said during the time he was held the only food he was given was crackers.

The abduction occurred, Aragon said, when he was checking a mechanical problem in his mother's car. Two men, one of them carrying a sawed-off shotgun, approached him and told him they were taking him and his car, he said.

Officers said Aragon told them he was ordered to drive the two men to Bernalillo, a small community north of Albuquerque, where two females apparently were waiting for them.

He then was blindfolded and one of the four took the wheel and drove around for a couple of hours, Aragon said. He said the car stopped several times and he heard boxes being loaded into the back of the car, which he said smelled like they contained marijuana.

During the next week Aragon said part of the time they had him blindfolded and part of the time they made him drive. He said they never stopped anywhere other than to get gas and at convenience stores to get food.

The two men and two women left him blindfolded and in the car Saturday night, telling him they were going to get gas, Aragon told police. He said he waited and waited but when no one returned he took off the blindfold.

He said he didn't have any money and had to bum some from a passerby to call the police.

El Paso officers said an investigation is continuing.

Los Angeles may host summer olympic games

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — After more than four decades of dogged effort, the city of Los Angeles may once again be host to the Summer Olympic Games.

In what was considered a close 55-39 vote Sunday, the U.S. Olympic Committee selected Los Angeles over New York to be the American representative before the International Olympic Committee, which will choose the city to stage the 1984 Summer Olympic Games.

Los Angeles is virtually assured the Games because no other city has made a bid. The deadline for receiving bids is Oct. 31. The IOC will make its selection next May in Athens.

Los Angeles, which held the Games the last time they were in the United States in 1932, stressed "Spartan approach" throughout the competition and in its final presentation before the USOC executive board.

The city emphasized that almost all of the needed facilities such as the Memorial Coliseum, used in 1932, and the Rose Bowl were already in place and only a $33.5 million capital outlay would be necessary for the others.

"By using the existing facilities for the most part, Los Angeles will be able to keep new construction to a minimum," Mayor Tom Bradley told the delegates. "And it is for this reason that we can confidently say that the Olympic Games in Los Angeles will be staged on a financially break-even basis."

Los Angeles proposed a operating budget of $150 million, which along with the $33.5 million capital outlay would result in total expenditures of $183.5 million, with projected revenues of $194.25 million.

New York, calling its bid more realistic, proposed a budget with a built-in deficit of $250 million.

It was understood, however, that a major factor working against the New York bid was the lack of concrete guarantee that Shea Stadium would be available for the Games.

The New York officials said M. Donald Grant, president of the baseball Mets, had given verbal assurances that he would be willing to move to Yankee Stadium during 1984 while Shea was refurbished and expanded so that it could be used as the main arena. But apparently many of the delegates wanted a more solid agreement.

TV shown Quinlan fight

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The case of comatose Karen Ann Quinlan and her family's court battle to disconnect a respirator and let her die "with dignity" is the subject of a made-for-television film.

"In the matter of Karen Ann Quinlan," to be shown on NBC-TV this evening, is based on the book "Karen Ann" by her parents, Joseph and Julia Quinlan with Phyllis Battelle.

"It's a strange feeling, watching yourself like that. We just can't judge it," said Mrs. Quinlan after watching a preview recently. She is portrayed in the film by Oscar-winning actress Piper Laurie.

"You can't relieve things, but when you sit there and see the huge respirator again and here the constant beep, it did bring it back," she said in an interview.

Miss Quinlan, 23, lapsed into a coma April 15, 1975, after taking alcohol and tranquilizers. She was in a coma for five months when her parents sued for the right to remove life support systems and let her die.

She was removed from the respirator in May 1976 after a fight in the state courts.

Although doctors had testified that she would die without the life support systems, Miss Quinlan continues to breathe without assistance in a Morris County-run nursing home for Medicaid patients.

Money from the book and movie will be used to establish a trust fund for a health care facility in the Catholic Diocese of Paterson, Mrs. Quinlan said. The Quinlans, devout Catholics, have turned over $20,000 in magazine royalties to the diocese.

Cop defense begins

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — After watching the state parade 17 witnesses to the stand in three weeks of testimony, the defense will have its chance to present evidence today in the trial of two former Houston policemen charged with drowning a prisoner.

Terry Denson, 27, and Stephen Orlando, 21, are charged in the drowning death of Joe Campos Torres, 23, whose body was recovered from Houston's Buffalo Bayou three days after he was arrested in a bar disturbance.

Denson and Orlando are accused of beating Torres and pushing him into the bayou.

The state rested its case last Thursday and after State District Court Judge James Warren denied defense motions for an instructed verdict of innocent, defense attorneys Bob Bennett and Mike Ramsey said they would decide over the weekend whether to present testimony.

Lebanon cease-fire holding

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A cease-fire was taking hold in the southern Lebanese war today as Israel began pulling its armored forces back across the border.

Beirut radio said the cease-fire agreement, involving the Israeli and Lebanese governments and Palestinian guerrilla leader Yasir Arafat, was tentative, and a small radical guerrilla group rejected it. But Israeli spokesmen said the cease-fire had been fully approved and taken effect.

The Israeli Defense Ministry in Tel Aviv said the truce agreement called for withdrawal of the Palestinian guerrillas from positions north of the border from which they could shell towns and settlements in northern Israel.

A spokesman for Arafat's high command said contacts were "under way work out final details of a cease-fire that will preserve Lebanon's territorial integrity."

Reporters in northern Israel, meanwhile, watched as Israeli armored forces pulled back across the border. During the fighting Israel had repeatedly denied its troops entered Lebanon.

A commander of the Israeli-supported Christian rightist forces that fought the Palestinians and Moslem leftists in the south said the Christians would be able to "answer" the guerrillas if they violate the cease-fire. "I am sure our Israeli army friends will back us," he said.

Sources close to the Lebanese government and Arafat spoke of a "partial" pullback by the guerrillas from advance positions along Israel's northern panhandle.

But a spokesman for Dr. George Habash's Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine said: "We shall abandon none of our positions in South Lebanon. We also shall allow no one to prevent us from striking at the Israeli enemy or existing in areas where we can strike from."

The Popular Front and its Iraqi-supported allies of the so-called Rejection Front have an estimated 300 guerrillas in the South while Arafat's Al Fatah and other units of the Palestine Liberation Organization have an estimated 5,000.

Informed sources said a force of 1,470 officers and soldiers of the reorganized Lebanese army has been formed to move into southern Lebanon to act as a buffer between the guerrillas and the right-wing Christian militiamen who have been battling them there.

Meanwhile, Israeli armored forces began withdrawing from south Lebanon. Reporters and photographers on the Israeli side were invited to watch the withdrawal although the Israeli government previously denied that it had any ground forces in Lebanon.

Israeli tanks, armored personnel carriers, a half-track and several jeeps roared through a gate in the border fence near the Israeli town of Metulla early today. Some 40 reporters and photographers were on hand, "to cover the return of a force whose entry was heavily denied," one reporter commented.

A few minutes after the withdrawal started, a barrage of the Palestinians' Katyusha rockets hit two Israeli towns, Qiryat Shmonah, five miles south of the border, and Safad, 17 miles farther south. The Israeli military command said eight persons were wounded.

Sources at the Israeli Defense Ministry said the Syrian government joined in the negotiations and would try to persuade the Palestinians to observe the agreement.

Although the Syrian army brought the civil war elsewhere in Lebanon to an end last November, fighting has continued in the south because Israel announced it would not tolerate the presence of Syrian forces close to the border.

The Palestinians have been trying to regain the positions in southeast Lebanon from which they raided Israel before the civil war. The Christian militiamen, supplied by Israel and backed by Israeli artillery, have been fighting to drive them back north.

African death toll rises

KING WILLIAM'S TOWN, South Africa (AP) — The death toll rose to three today in racial incidents in South Africa. Bloodshed followed an emotional funeral here for black leader Steve Biko, whose death aroused new black antigovernment protest in this country.

Authorities said a black man was shot dead and two policemen were wounded when police went to investigate alleged terrorist activities at a house in the black township of Soweto, outside Johannesburg, 450 miles north of this coastal town.

The dead man, who police said fired first, was not immediately identified.

Almost 20,000 persons packed an open-air sports stadium for the Biko funeral Sunday and heard five hours of speeches condemning South Africa's white government.

There was only one brief scuffle during the service. But afterward, police reported, a crowd of mourners on their way home stoned two black policemen to death and went on a rampage in a black township outside East London, 30 miles east of King William's Town.

Police Brig. B.J. Smal said the two policemen were killed outside a bus terminal in the Mdantsane township when a crowd returned from the funeral. He said the mob looted a shopping complex, set fire to two cars and overturned three others before riot police opened fire and dispersed the crowd.

Smal said the police fire wounded two blacks.

The black owner of a garage, H. Jekwa, said the mob appeared to be led by students in school uniforms.

"They just came in and helped themselves," said the black owner of a liquor store.

The top U.S. diplomats in South Africa and lesser ranking representatives of 12 other non-African countries attended the funeral of the 30-year-old black leader whose death in prison has an acute embarrassment to South Africa's white government.

Andrew Young, the American ambassador to the United Nations, sent a three-foot wreath inscribed: "No nation can afford to lose its most dedicated and creative leadership." Another wreath from black American tennis star Arthur Ashe read: "A tribute to a dedicated leader."

The United States was represented at the funeral by its ambassador to South Africa, William Bowdler, and its deputy U.N. ambassador, Don McHenry, who is in South Africa for negotiations on the future of South-West Africa.

They laid wreaths on the open coffin at Biko's small two-bedroom home in the black township of Ginsberg before the funeral procession to the stadium a mile and a half away.

Biko died in a prison hospital Sept. 12 after a hunger strike of a week, the government said. The results of the autopsy on his body have not been made public, but news reports quoting knowledgeable sources said the autopsy showed severe brain damage.

'TV insanity' to be defense

MIAMI (AP) — A defense attorney in a murder case hopes to put television violence on trial in defense of a 15-year-old boy he says is addicted to TV crime shows.

Attorney Ellis Rubin says his defense of Ronald Zamora in the trial beginning today will be an "absolutely unprecedented" portrayal of "television intoxication."

Despite a judge's warning that Rubin will not be allowed to make a general indictment of television, the attorney has contended that TV is pertinent to the case and has even subpoenaed Telly Savalas, star of the "Kojak" series.

In addition, television and still cameras will be in the courtroom as part of a one-year experiment ordered by the Florida Supreme Court two months ago.

Zamora and Darrell Agrella, 14, are accused of first-degree murder in the shooting death of Elinor Haggart, 83, on June 4 during a robbery at her Miami Beach home. Zamora has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity. Agrella, who will be tried separately, has pleaded innocent.

"An adolescent predisposed to emotional instability is very susceptible to the influence of television," Rubin has said. "Why do children love television? Why do sponsors spend millions of dollars a month advertising their products on television? And finally, why does television violence beget actual violence?"

Rubin is known for taking cases that attract attention. He helped Watergate burglar E. Howard Hunt gain parole and once filed a suit of his own to challenge Miami's homosexual rights ordinance.

The prosecution tried to restrict Zamora's defense by arguing that the only issue was whether he could distinguish right from wrong.

Rubin said Zamora was addicted to violent crime shows such as "Kojak," "Police Woman" and a film about mass murderer Charles Manson.

"His explanation of the crime was exactly what I had seen on a 'Kojak' episode a year earlier," Rubin said.

Savalas, who was served with a defense subpoena while on a visit here, said he is opposed to violence on television, and he contended there was never any such Kojak episode.

It was unclear whether the defense would offer a tape of the show in question.

Judge H. Paul Baker has said Savalas must appear Oct. 5 to determine whether his testimony would be relevant.

Texas weather

A weak stationary front lies across portions of North Texas this morning, but don't expect it to cool off the unseasonably warm temperatures.

At 4 a.m., the front was from near Sherman to north of Abilene to south of Midland. Generally dry air covered the western third of the state and the region north of the front.

Thunderstorms developed Sunday night in portions of North Central Texas and gusty winds inflicted minor sign damage in the town of Terrell due east of Dallas.

Early this morning, the storms were located to the east of the Dallas-Fort Worth area and to the west of the Tyler-Longview area. They were moving eastward at about 10 miles per hour.

Pre-dawn temperatures ranged from the 60s at most locations in the western third of the state to the 70s and lower 80s in the central and eastern sections. The exception was in El Paso where it was in the middle 70s.

The National Weather Service was calling for the warm afternoon readings to continue unabated along with some spotty thundershowers in the northeast.

Catholic couples use birth control

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 90 per cent of the Roman Catholic couples in the United States who use birth control are using contraceptive practices forbidden by their church, a nationwide survey shows.

The survey, by Charles F. Westoff and Elise F. Jones of the Office of Population Research at Princeton University, was released Sunday.

It also shows that the birth control practices of Catholics are virtually the same as those of non-Catholics and that any differences will probably disappear completely in a few years.

The only method of contraception approved by the church is the rhythm method, abstinence during a woman's fertile period of the month.

The report, based on interviews with a national sample of 3,300 married white women in 1975, is part of a continuing series of national fertility studies sponsored by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development.

The survey in the current issue of Family Planning Perspectives, the professional journal of the Alan Guttmacher Institute, shows that the same proportion of Catholics and non-Catholics — about one third — were using the pill in 1975.

The Alan Guttmacher Institute is the research and policy analysis division of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America.

A decade ago, while 31 per cent of non-Catholics were using oral contraceptives, that method was used by just 22 per cent of Catholics.

In 1975, 76 per cent of Catholic couples currently use some method of contraception, compared to 80 per cent of non-Catholics, and most of that 76 per cent use methods banned by the church. A decade earlier, just 58.5 per cent of Catholics were using birth control, compared to 70 per cent of non-Catholics.

Tickets can be purchased at Heard and Jones Drug 114 N. Cuyler.

Previous reports indicated sales ended today.

Bible battle re-emerges

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A seven-year court fight over whether a Florida school board can allow the reading and distribution of the Bible and the teaching of Christian virtues in public schools is again before a federal appeals court.

All 14 judges of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals were to begin hearing testimony today on an appeal from the Orange County School Board, which takes in schools in Orlando.

The hearing comes six months after a three-judge panel of the same court ruled against the Florida law which required the teaching of "the practice of every Christian virtue."

The court ruled that Bible readings during a morning inspirational period in the Orange County schools were unconstitutional and threw out a policy allowing Bible distribution in schools.

Eight families with various religious affiliations have been fighting the school board since 1970.

They contend the reading and distribution of the King James' Bible and other school board policies could offend Jewish, Catholic and some Protestant students. The families say the policies violate constitutional guarantees of separation of church and state and due process of law.

A lower court judge had said such a prohibition against the Bible would permit "governmental hostility to religion."

"Our contention is that a student should be at liberty to choose whatever he wants to read and that neither the Bible nor any other religious book should be on a taboo list," said school board attorney William Rowland.

Rowland said the board also wanted the right to make religious material available to students who wanted it at a centrally located place in schools.

The current board policy requires schools to open with "the opportunity for individual prayer and Bible reading or an inspirational or meditation presented by groups or organizations or an individual."

Filibuster threatens bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate leaders are trying to halt a filibuster on a bill regulating the price of natural gas in an effort to pave the way for a vote on a proposed compromise.

The natural gas issue is expected to tie up Senate floor action all week, despite the Senate efforts today to kill the filibuster by invoking debate-limiting closure.

President Carter, who spent part of the weekend campaigning in Virginia for Democratic gubernatorial candidate Henry Howell, said at a rally in Norfolk, Va., that he might veto the natural gas bill if senators use it to remove controls from the price of natural gas.

"I hate to veto a bill that a Democratic Congress passes, but you can depend on it: I'll protect your interests when the bill comes to my desk," Carter said.

Meanwhile, hearings get under way today in both houses on the new Panama Canal treaty, giving the Carter administration its first major opportunity to try to persuade Congress to go along with the recently negotiated agreement.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd has formally asked the Senate to permit television and radio coverage of the Senate ratification debate when it gets under way next January.

It would be the first time for such coverage in the Senate chamber, although Senate committee hearings frequently have been broadcast.

Byrd told reporters over the weekend that if a vote were ready this year, it would be defeated. It might have a better chance by early next year, he said.

And the Senate Banking Committee is beginning hearings on whether federal regulation of banks should be overhauled, an outgrowth of the controversy over resigned budget director Bert Lance's personal banking transactions.

The vote of 60 senators is required to limit debate on the natural gas pricing bill, which is a major element of President Carter's energy program. If closure is approved that would end the immediate threat of a filibuster and further debate on the bill would be limited to 100 hours.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, is expected to push for Senate approval for a compromise between President Carter's proposal, which would keep federal controls on natural gas, and a competing industry plan, which would lift them.

Either measure would raise heating prices for companies and individuals using natural gas.

Byrd, who filed the cloture measure along with Jackson, Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker and 17 other senators, also said he sees a good chance of a compromise.

He said there is still a good chance Carter will get much of his energy program enacted, despite some recent setbacks in the Senate.

Police report

An attempt to set fire to a vehicle in the Highland General Hospital parking lot, criminal mischief and theft of a Citizens Band Radio were included among the reports on the Pampa Police Department blotter this morning.

A woman called Sunday to report someone had attempted to set fire to her car by burning magazines in the front seat.

A Citizens Band radio was taken from a vehicle parked near the Coronado Inn. Entry was gained by use of a coat hanger.

A caller reported that windows were broken at 943 S. Dwight by throwing flower pots through the glass.

A vehicle was broken into at 1220 Sumner.

Missing items included an eight-track player, two boxes of tapes and speakers in a wooden grain cabinet.

Speakers were reportedly taken from a car at 325 Jean.

A local resident reported that he confronted suspects at 945 Terry Road in an alley loading lumber. They reportedly told him no one had given them permission, and as he started to call police they drove away.

Two persons involved in an accident at 1700 Duncan. Both were treated at Highland General Hospital and released. The injured were Karen and Sandra J. Anderson of 1916 Lynn.

In other reports were one arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated.

Patrolman David Hodges recovered a stolen motorcycle at Wynne and Browning after a chase and the suspects left on foot. He was unable to locate them in the dark.

One person was arrested for driving while intoxicated after an officer observed a car weaving in the 700 block of Brown with a flat.

While an officer was investigating an incident where a vehicle was being driven by an unknown person, the owner called in and the driver was charge with driving while intoxicated.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Lillian Carter has become the first woman ever awarded the Synagogue Council of America's "Covenant of Peace" prize.

The President's mother received the award Sunday for "distinguished contributions to the furtherance of international understanding, justice and peace."

In addition to a bronze statue, there is an $18,000 cash award. "Miss Lillian," as she is known in her home town of Plains, Ga., said she would donate the money to several charities.

The council cited Mrs. Carter for the rearing of four children, a career as a registered nurse and two years in India with the Peace Corps.

"Throughout her life she has taught me and the other members of our family by example and precept, the importance of living in a manner which carries out the teachings of our Bible and the Judaic Christian tradition," Carter said in a telegram to the council.

DENVER (AP) — Nominating a woman for the U.S. presidency "would be the most exciting thing the GOP could do," says Mary Crisp, a Republican National Committee co-chairman.

She suggested that Ann Armstrong, the former ambassador to England, would be a good candidate.

"I think we're ready," Mrs. Crisp said. "We have to be bold and take risks and change the perception of the GOP."

Mrs. Crisp, of Phoenix, Ariz.,

was in Denver this weekend to speak to women's groups at Colorado College.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Malaysia's top priority is not military power but cordial relations with its Southeast Asian neighbors, says Prime Minister Datu Hussein Onn.

"No country, even a small one such as ours, can survive alone," he said Sunday at a gathering of Malaysian students.

Onn named Thailand, Cambodia, Indonesia, Vietnam and Japan as the nations Malaysia hopes to cultivate as friends.

Onn is scheduled to meet Tuesday with President Carter, and address the United Nations General Assembly on Friday.

Onn is the first Malaysian head of state to visit the United States since 1964.

ATLANTA (AP) — Former Georgia Gov. Lester Maddox was reported in critical condition after suffering a heart attack while working in his front yard.

Maddox, 61, was admitted Sunday to the intensive care unit of a Marietta, Ga., hospital north of Atlanta. "He's alert and oriented, talking to people," said a hospital spokesman.

An ambulance was called after Maddox complained the pain was so severe "he couldn't stand it any more," said his wife, Virginia.

Maddox was governor from 1966-70 and lieutenant governor from 1971-74.

Bookkeeping class to begin Tuesday

Basic Bookkeeping and Accounting, Part I, will be offered in Pampa as part of the Adult Continuing Education Program in co-operation with Amarillo College.

The class will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays from Sept. 27 to Nov. 17. Bob Hutton, a CPA and a Cabot employee, will teach the course.

Tuition for the 45-hour course, which includes a building use fee, is $20. Textbook and practice set is $21.85 including tax.

Interested persons should contact the Area Vocational School at 665-3756 or stop by the office at 1440 Charles during school hours.

Jailer hurt in escape

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — An inmate was seriously injured and a jailer hurt during an unsuccessful escape attempt at the Weber County Jail Sunday evening, jail officials said.

Sheriff's Lt. Sam VanderHeide said Corrections Officer Carroll Adams was checking cells on the 12th floor of the Ogden Municipal Building when an inmate outside the cells struck him on the head with a sock filled with hard bars of soap.

VanderHeide said Adams was able to go to the ninth-floor jail offices and report the attack, which happened at about 8:20 p.m.

Jail officials said that in the meantime, an inmate identified as Rogelio C. Ortiz, 23, of Ogden either jumped or fell from a 12th story window to a fifth-floor ledge.

VanderHeide said the inmate received serious leg and back injuries and was removed from the ledge through a courtroom window by ambulance attendants. Ortiz was taken to Ogden's St. Benedict's Hospital, officials said.

Corrections officer Jeff Cotnam said Ortiz was being held at the jail for investigation of an Ogden burglary and on a fugitive warrant from Lamesa, Tex.

VanderHeide said Adams was taken to St. Benedict's Hospital for treatment of a head cut and injuries to his leg and wrist.

Officials said no other inmates were involved in the incident and the jail was secure Sunday night.

Board must wrestle with complex issues

I was surprised and somewhat appalled when I first learned that the Texas ruling body for high school activities, the University Interscholastic League (UIL) does not sanction wrestling as a prep sport.

After all, I had lived in six other states which draw crowds up to 10,000 for the state wrestling finals. And one of the national hotbeds for this Olympic sport is next door in Oklahoma.

So when Manny Holden presented a plan to the Sept. 19 meeting of the school board whereby wrestling could be added to the high school athletic program "at no cost," I was all in favor.

But after investigating the issues, I am now convinced of only one thing. I'm grateful that responsibility for the decision will be the school board's and not mine.

Holden supervises the Optimist Club wrestling program and is willing to donate the mat and uniforms to the high school if the board approves wrestling as an athletic activity. Holden would also donate his services as coach under the plan.

"I've been working toward the goal of adding wrestling to the high school since I started the Optimist program two years ago. That's the reason we got a green and gold mat and Harvester colored uniforms.

"I'm positive that the UIL will add wrestling in a couple of years or sooner, and I'd like to see Pampa get a head start," Holden said.

"The Panhandle has the potential to be the hotbed for Texas wrestling."

Indeed, if there is such thing as an area with a tradition for wrestling in Texas, it is the Panhandle. The four Amarillo high schools and Boys Ranch have been competing on an "extramural" level for over 20 years.

Amarillo schools had dominated the unofficial state tournament, sponsored by the Texas Amateur Wrestling Association, until recently. Last year El Paso Burges won the meet, with MacArthur of Irving the runnerup.

Since wrestling is not a UIL sport, matches are set up between physical education departments, clubs and some athletic teams. With Verne Cave winning one point, the Pampa Optimist Club finished 37th in the 1977 state meet held in Amarillo.

Pampa athletic Director Ed Lehnick is opposed to taking wrestling under his wing because it is not a UIL activity.

"Pampa has traditionally offered only UIL activities, and I'm afraid that we would be starting a precedent which would be open to other sports which we couldn't afford," Lehnick said.

"I also don't think it's wise to have a sport in school over which we don't have total control. I respect Mr. Holden and don't foresee any problems, but he would not be an employee of this school, and he wouldn't be under my control or have full control over the kids."

Lehnick said that a sponsor would be required for supervision, and the resulting compensation would no longer make the activity free to the athletic department.

He added that there is also a problem with student scheduling. Many potential grapplers will not have six period open for athletics, and the schedules are set until Nov. 17.

Because so few West Texas schools wrestle, the scheduling of matches looms as an inevitable problem. The Optimist Club sponsors trips to as far away as Dallas for its team, but local matches are needed for the sport to survive financially.

Steve Gergeni, director of health and physical education for Amarillo schools, does not foresee the feasibility of Amarillo schools competing against a Pampa high school team under present non-UIL status.

"Wrestling is funded under the physical education department here, and there's no way we could afford to set up matches with Pampa," Gergeni said.

"It's all we can do to set up the two matches between the four Amarillo schools and Boys Ranch. We'd even drop Boys Ranch if it wasn't such a tradition."

"We just couldn't afford the transportation to Pampa or find the gyms for the extra matches here," he said.

But Holden said the Amarillo coaches and players would be willing to come to Pampa on their own for the extra competition.

"The Amarillo schools are losing ground to El Paso and the Eastern Texas schools which have more competition," Holden said.

"I'm sure if Pampa takes the initiative and starts a wrestling program, schools like Borger, Perryton and Dumas will start a team. Besides, when wrestling goes UIL, they (Amarillo schools) will have to compete against us."

The timetable for UIL consideration is unclear. Bill Farney, UIL director of athletics, said it is league policy to require one-third of all Texas public high schools (presently 1134) to guarantee participation in a proposed sport before it is considered by the UIL board. He would not estimate the number of schools presently in favor of wrestling or how long it would take to get the 378 signatures.

Farney did say that wrestling (along with gymnastics and soccer) would likely warrant consideration because it was an Olympic sport and could be participated in by students unable to play football or basketball because of physical limitations.

With a tournament scheduled for Nov. 19 in Dallas, Holden is anxious for the school board to make its decision within the next two weeks. I don't envy the board's task.

Pampa cowgirls win Tri-State team title

Paced by the All-Around Cowboy, Rod Cleveland, Dumas won the boys team competition of the Tri-State High School Rodeo which ended Sunday afternoon at the Top O' Texas Rodeo Arena.

Pampa took the girls team competition with 27 points. Although no Pampan won an event, several members of the Pampa High School Rodeo Club placed in the meet.

In barrel racing, Regina Benyshek (18.458) and Lisa Burrell (18.471) finished two-three behind winner Mary Bradley of Childress who had 18.427.

LaJona Taylor of Pampa finished third in pole bending behind Janet Rutherford of Claude and runnerup Jo Penny of Leedy, Okla.

Lisa Stewart took third in the breakout roping event won by Bradley.

The All-Around cowgirl was Rutherford with 13 points.

Pampa's Mike Craig took third place in ribbon roping with 13.906. Cleveland won the event with 7.726.

Cleveland also won the calf roping title enroute to the all-around cowboy championship. Lisa Stewart teamed with Luke Stevenson of Guymon to take second in the team roping competition. The team of Jim Bob Walden of Hereford and Donnie McEntire of Dumas won the event.

Twenty-six members of the Pampa High School Rodeo Club entered the three-day event. Stock was furnished by W.R. and Bill Hext of Canadian.

Defensive efforts rule NFL weekend

By HAL BOCK

AP Sports Writer

In the case of National Football League defense vs. offense, we have a clear example of a hung jury after Sunday's games.

Among the exhibits for the defense are Los Angeles' 20-0 shutout over Philadelphia, and Denver's defensive unit, still unscathed upon this season after the Broncos jolted Buffalo 26-6.

For the offense, there is Dallas' 41-21 demolition of the New York Giants and Cincinnati's 42-20 rout of Seattle.

In Sunday's other games, Baltimore downed the New York Jets 20-12. Washington topped Atlanta 10-6. St. Louis edged Chicago 16-13. Houston defeated Green Bay 16-10. Detroit held off New Orleans 23-19. San Diego ripped Kansas City 23-7. Miami whipped San Francisco 19-15 and Oakland defeated Pittsburgh 16-7.

In Saturday night's game, Minnesota edged Tampa Bay 9-3.

New England plays at Cleveland tonight, completing the second week of the NFL season.

Chargers 23, Chiefs 7. The first witness for the defense will be Leroy Jones, who plays tackle for the San Diego Chargers. Since he stands 6 feet 8 and weighs 274 pounds, it is suggested that you pay attention.

Jones was minding his business in Kansas City Sunday when Mike Livingston faded back to pass. Livingston was hit, the ball squirted loose and the pass settled in Jones' arms at the Chiefs' 17-yard line. The event was so unsettling that when Jones started running, he took off in the wrong direction.

With his teammates waving and yelling, Jones realized the error after about 10 yards. He reversed his field and churned back into the Chiefs' end zone for a touchdown, breaking a couple of tackles as he hit pay-dirt.

Broncos 26, Bills 6
The next witness for the defense will be Buffalo running back O.J. Simpson, who carried 15 times for a mere 54 yards against Denver.

Asked if a sprained ankle had affected his play, Simpson said, "What affected my play was their linebackers."

Quarterback Craig Morton passed for one TD and ran for another against the Bills.

Oilers 16, Packers 10

Next, the defense calls Houston cornerback Willie Alexander, who intercepted a pass and went 95 yards with the winning touchdown in Houston's victory over Green Bay.

"I just turned to where the ball was," said Alexander, who scored with less than five minutes to play, breaking a 10-10 tie. "I never figured touchdown. I wanted to secure the ball, catch it first and then run."

Raiders 16, Steelers 7
Finally the defense calls the Oakland Raiders, who chewed up Pittsburgh with interceptions by Jack Tatum, Willie Brown and Charles Phillips short-circuiting the Steeler attack.

The Raiders also sacked Terry Bradshaw five times for 51 yards, overshadowing field goals of 21, 40 and 41 yards by Errol Mann and Mark Van Eeghen's eight-yard TD run.

Cardinals 16, Bears 13
Next, the offense calls Jim Hart, who completed 16 of 24 passes for 215 yards and had a streak of 12 straight completions, including a 10-yard TD pitch to J.V. Cain.

Jim Bakken supplied St. Louis' decisive points with field goals of 49, 36 and 41 yards as the Cards' attack rolled for 348 yards.

Bengals 42, Seahawks 20
Cincinnati's offense had to win its game twice. The Bengals scored the first three times they had the football and rolled to a 28-0 lead. Then penalties helped Seattle rally and the Seahawks chopped all but eight points off the Bengal lead.

But Ken Anderson, who completed 17 of 29 for 219 yards, threw for one TD and ran for another as Cincinnati nailed down the elusive victory.

Dolphins 19, Oilers 15
Fleet Nat Moore was a one-man offense for Miami, catching scoring passes of 32 and 73 yards and going 19 yards on an end-around for the Dolphins' other touchdown.

"We feel we have an explosive offense, both in the air and on the ground," said Moore.

Rams 20, Eagles 0
Joe Namath, calling his own plays, pitched for a pair of touchdowns and Los Angeles shut out Philadelphia, limiting the Eagles to six first downs and 112 yards on offense.

A week ago, working with plays sent in from the sidelines the Rams dropped their opener in Atlanta.

Calling his own, Namath completed 12 of 23 for 136 yards and TDs of one yard to Terry Nelson and 13 to Lawrence McCutcheon.

Redskins 10, Falcons 6
Billy Kilmer's two-yard touchdown pass to Mike Thomas accounted for the game's lone touchdown as Washington defeated Atlanta.

"It was the first time we have been faced with a must-win situation this early in the season," said Redskins Coach George Allen, whose club was upset by the New York Giants last Sunday.

Lions 23, Saints 19
Tight end Charlie Sanders set a Detroit club record on a 20-yard TD pass from Greg Landry as the Lions defeated New Orleans. The catch was the 326th of Sanders' career, one more than the old club record held by Gail Cogdill.

Colts 20, Jets 12
Don McCauley scored a pair of close-in touchdowns as Baltimore downed the New York Jets.

Both of McCauley's scores followed jet mistakes — an off-side penalty on an attempted field goal that supplied the Colts with a key first down and a fumble on an attempted punt that left Baltimore on the one-yard line.

Richards wins
PENSACOLA, Fla. — Dr. Renee Richards won the Women's Tennis Association Professional Championships, coming back from a 5-2 first-set deficit to defeat 16-year-old Caroline Stoll, 7-5, 6-1.

Dorsett pays dividends with 2 TDs

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys are pleased they reaped the first dividends from Tony Dorsett — their off-season venture into the big-play marketplace. But Dorsett was unimpressed with Sunday's two-touchdown performance.

"I'm not really happy about the way I played. It was not an exceptional performance," said the heralded rookie, who scampered 11 and 24 yards for his first two touchdowns in a 41-21 thrashing of the New York Giants.

"I missed an audible and I didn't think my blocking was up to par," added Dorsett, college football's all-time rushing leader. "But those things come with playing time."

The Cowboys didn't have a running back break for more than 28 yards last season and had that fact in mind when they obtained the Heisman Trophy winner.

In the fourth period, Dorsett raced 34 yards through a New York defense wilted by near 100-degree heat for the touchdown that enabled Dallas to pull away from the rallying Giants.

He had earlier sliced through the heart of the New York defense for an 11-yard touchdown in the second period to give Dallas a 28-0 bulge.

"There was a big hole there," Dorsett said of his first National Football League touchdown. "I could've driven my car through it. Anyone could have scored that touchdown."

"Those touchdowns are all fine and well," he added. "But I have a long way to go." Dorsett compiled 62 yards on seven carries and caught three passes for 36 yards in a backup role behind Preston Pearson.

"I thought Tony ran well and caught the ball well," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "He'll get better with each game he plays."

"It's my first time to play in this heat. I was fatigued," added Dorsett.

Slump ends, Mike Hill wins

MASON, Ohio (AP) — After a five-year dry spell on the pro golf tour, Mike Hill is sipping champagne and smiling again following Sunday's record-setting, 11-under-par performance in the $150,000 Ohio Kings Island Open.

"It's really a moral victory to win after five years. If you're on the downside and you can turn it around, it means something. It showed I still had some heart."

Hill, 38, broke out of his long slump with a front-nine birdie spree that allowed him to hang on for a one-stroke victory over fast-finishing Tom Kite, whose 62 tied Jack Nicklaus' course record. Hill's 64 gave him a 269 total, which lopped two strokes off his tournament record.

His four-putt on No. 18 snuffed out a bold bid by Kite, who had just birdied the hole. He narrowly missed an eagle when his 25-foot pitch from thick rough hit the pin and rolled five feet away.

The victory was worth $30,000 for the Jackson, Mich., native, $10,000 more than he had earned all year. Earlier in the week, Hill, who is the younger brother of four veteran Dave Hill, said he would quit the tour if he failed to earn less than $25,000 a year two years in a row.

"I promised my wife I'd find something else. I was spinning my tires," said the father of three who ranked 97th in tour earnings going into the tournament.

Hill's front nine score of 30 tied the course low set four years ago during Nicklaus' record round of 30-32-62. Kite went 31-31, firing eight birdies to go over the $100,000 in earnings for the second straight year.

Crenshaw never recovered from Hill's fast start. He shot a final round of 70 to finish in a tie for third with Jim Dent, whose closing 66 produced his best showing of the year.

Nuns and the life they chose

Story by Patti Hoag

At 4 p.m. on Jan. 6, 1976, a lasting change took place in a young girl in Mexico.

She could no longer go out on dates, buy the new fashions, or do what all of her friends were doing. She gave up the regular trapping of a teenage girl to become a nun.

Sister Isabel of the St. Vincent de Paul convent was 15 when she decided to become a nun. Her reason was simple: she liked hard work.

"I saw the nuns work so hard and they never seemed to get tired, so I thought I would see for myself," Sister Isabel remarked. That was about 5 years ago; her myth about nuns "never getting tired" has been withdrawn.

The convent that Sister Isabel shares in Pampa with Sisters Rosaril and Elsa, also from Mexico, is immaculately clean with shiny floors and an abundance of plants. Sister Isabel teaches at the Pampa Catholic school; Sisters Rosaril and Elsa are social workers.

Sister Elsa took her vows at 17 in Mexico. "I wanted to become a missionary," Sister Elsa said. Instead she and Sister Rosaril visit families, the sick, and those that need special attention.

At 19, Sister Rosaril became a nun to "help people."

The sisters are the only three in the Pampa area. The bi-lingual trio enjoy living in Pampa since it is small enough "to get acquainted with the people."

Being a minority though — both as nuns and natives of Mexico — has its problems. The sisters are not quite used to being stared at when they run errands around town, but Sister Rosaril says "we understand that people see us differently."

Background for becoming a nun is complicated. When one decides, she must talk with a priest. The priest will send a letter of recommendation to a convent.

The first year at the convent is called the Postulate. It is a learning period and regular clothes are worn instead of the habit.

After the Postulate, one to two years are spent at the Novitiate House of Formation.

What were the reactions of the sister's families when they decided to become nuns? "They were very happy," agreed the sisters.

To understand the life of a nun, one would almost have to become one. But here is a small glimpse of what life is like for them:

Their daily routine begins a little earlier than most people's.

At 5:30 a.m. they are up to pray and meditate. Then they go to morning mass and back to the convent to fix breakfast.

The sisters take turns with the cooking, laundry and housecleaning. Sister Isabel likes to whip up pancakes while Sister Elsa enjoys her scrambled eggs and bacon.

After breakfast, Sister Isabel teaches religion classes and Sisters Elsa and Rosaril visit.

At 3:30 they have community studies together. To finish up the day, they pray in the evening and usually go to bed around 11.

The way a nun dresses is the most obvious clue that she is a nun. "The habits we wear are very comfortable and cool in the summer," Sister Isabel remarked. "We have two white habits for the summer and three brown habits for the winter."

The sisters all attended Catholic schools, and Sister Rosaril, who went to both Catholic and public school believes that a Catholic school is a better learning experience for a child, although "you are more restricted in a Catholic school." There is more discipline in the Catholic school.

Sister Rosaril feels that a Catholic school is a "beautiful environment for a child."

The sisters have come to Pampa from other convents in parts of Texas and Peru. Ill. Sister Elsa has been in Pampa for two years. Sister Isabel for one month, and Sister Rosaril has just returned to Pampa from Wichita Falls.

Each year the sisters renew their vows and after seven years, they take the perpetual vow. They can decide at any time to withdraw from being a nun, but the decision has to go to Rome to be approved.

It takes a special, different kind of person to decide to become a nun... to give her life to God and to give up her former life.

These sisters have made their decision, and they are now living with it... and loving it.

Sister Rosaril, Sister Isabel and Sister Elsa teach and reach in Pampa.

Hypertension attacks 'liberated' women

(Editor's note: The Pampa News today begins a series of articles on Women and Health by nine leading health professionals. Subjects are high blood pressure, cancer, stress, accidents, working mothers, medicines, pregnancy and childbirth, child abuse and reaching maturity.)

By Harriet P. Dustan, M.D.

CLEVELAND — (NEA) — Until recently high blood pressure — hypertension — was popularly thought to be a serious problem primarily for men. In the past few years it has become more widely understood that this disease does not discriminate according to sex.

Untreated, it can kill or disable both men and women. Of the 23 million Americans suffering from high blood pressure, nearly half are women.

There has been speculation that women are now suffering from hypertension in greater numbers because of a new, more stressful, "liberated" lifestyle: more women in the work force, in managerial positions, smoking, having cocktail lunches. Do these factors account for hypertension in women?

Actually, in only a few cases do we know what causes high blood pressure, and there is no evidence to indicate an upsurge in the rate of hypertension in women. The change is that women have become more aware of the problem, and more of them are finding that they suffer from hypertension.

The effects of abnormally high blood pressure may be devastating. Untreated, it can lead to heart failure, stroke, kidney damage and more. Yet only a small fraction — about one-fifth — of all Americans with the disease are being adequately treated. Only about 70 per cent are even aware they have it!

What is blood pressure? It is the force within the arteries as the blood flows. There are two figures to remember. Systole is the pressure inside the arteries when the heart pumps blood. Diastole is the pressure when the heart relaxes. These measurements are indicated by the familiar two-number notation, with systole first and on top. A reading of around 120 over 80 is normal for most people.

Blood pressure rises at certain times — when you are excited or during strenuous physical activity — and this, of course, is normal. But it is not normal for blood pressure to remain at elevated levels. This is why a physician often takes several readings before making a judgment about high blood pressure.

The problem is further complicated by the fact that hypertension often has no symptoms in the early stages. For this reason women should pay special attention to the following situations which may be related to the occurrence of high blood pressure.

—The Pill. The rate of high blood pressure is two and one-half times greater in women taking oral contraceptives. The risk is even greater in women who are, in addition, overweight, have a family history of high blood pressure, have mild kidney disease or have been hypertensive during pregnancy. Women should have a blood pressure check before having contraceptives prescribed, and every six months thereafter.

—Being black. No one knows why, but black women, even very young black women, have a higher rate of high blood pressure than white women. In fact, one in every four black persons older than 18 is estimated to have high blood pressure. Half are women. It is the single biggest killer among blacks in the United States.

—Family History. High blood pressure tends to run in families. Chances are greater that an individual will have it if parents or other relatives do. Regular blood pressure checks are appropriate for all members of hypertensive families.

—Pregnancy. If a woman is already hypertensive, she may become more so during pregnancy. Other women who have never had high blood pressure before may develop it when pregnant. In some cases it disappears after pregnancy; sometimes it does not. Under any circumstances, a pregnant woman should have her blood pressure checked frequently.

—Menopause. In industrial nations, like ours, blood pressure seems to rise with age. Thus, as women grow older, they become more susceptible to high blood pressure, and may become even more susceptible than men. The chances of developing it are particularly great after menopause, although this does not mean that menopause itself causes hypertension.

—Overweight. Many other factors may contribute to high blood pressure in certain individuals. Chief among these is obesity, which puts an added strain on the entire circulatory system. Although there is no cure for high blood pressure, it can be successfully treated. The first step is discovering it. Then it may require medication over a lifetime, or perhaps modification in dietary or exercise patterns. But proper treatment is well worth the effort, to insure a longer, healthier life.

(NEXT: Cancer)

Only a small fraction with high blood pressure are being adequately treated.

Advice

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 24-year-old California woman who fell in love with a terrific eligible bachelor while vacationing in New York.

We're planning a November wedding, but every time I think of living in New York I break down in tears. I hate New York! I was born and raised in California, and all my friends and family live here.

We have to live in New York because my fiance is a physician, and his father (also a physician) is retiring and leaving him a wonderful established practice.

I've asked my fiance to consider taking the California Medical Boards so he can practice there, but he says it's foolish to start all over again in California when he has a successful ready-made practice in New York. I know he's right. But as much as I love him, I know I'll be miserable in New York.

Please answer soon as time is running out.

TORN

DEAR TORN: If you "know" you'll be miserable in New York, you will be. And he'll be miserable, knowing that you're miserable, which will make for a miserable marriage.

Unless you go to New York determined to build a new and happy life, for your sake and his, call the wedding off and stay in California.

DEAR ABBY: I am involved with an older married man with whom I have a unique relationship. He never questions me about other men, and I never question him about his wife—although I admit, I'm curious.

He pursued me, I didn't pursue him, and from the very beginning he told me he was a "happily married man."

My question: Why would a "happily married man" want to have an affair? Or is the affair a sign that something is wrong with his marriage?

CURIOS

DEAR CURIOS: It's possible for a man who is sufficiently satisfied with his marriage to seek supplementary excitement just for the fun of it.

I would translate his statement into the following: "I enjoy fooling around with you, but don't get any crazy ideas about marriage, because I'm perfectly happy with things the way they are."

DEAR ABBY: For years I have been driving four neighbor children and my daughter to school every day. I decided not to join a car pool because I figure that as long as I am driving anyway, I may as well take a car-full. Incidentally, we have a nice new car with six seat belts, and I am as dependable as a clock.

We've lived in this neighborhood for many years and I know all the parents, but I don't see them socially. Of course all the mothers know that I chauffeur their children every morning because I pick them up at their doors.

Now I don't expect a medal, but when I meet one of the mothers in the market or at PTA, not ONE mother has ever said "thank you" to me.

If parents are so thoughtless about showing their appreciation, is it any wonder their kids think the world owes them a living?

This has been on my mind for a long time. Please print this to wake up a few mothers. But don't use my name or location.

IRRITATED

DEAR IRRITATED: Names and locations are unnecessary. The guilty ones will know who they are.

Ask Dr. Lamb
By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I would be thankful if you could write something about the 5-Fluorouracil I was told by a dermatologist that I have actinic keratosis and she prescribed this salve to heal it. I heard that this is a very powerful drug and am uneasy and worried about using it. I would have to put it all over my face. Could you give me your opinion?

DEAR READER — It is a well recognized and effective treatment for actinic keratosis, those little gray or brownish scaly spots that develop on the skin. These changes in the skin are the result of damage from solar radiation. Some people are more susceptible to the sun's damaging rays than others.

It is important to treat these spots as some of them can become skin cancer and require more drastic treatment. I might add that skin cancer, other than malignant melanoma, can usually be completely cured. If you don't treat it early though the treatment may increase any disfigurement that might be caused by removing the malignant area.

The salve you mention is a prescription item so readers needn't expect to go to the drug store and buy it for home use. It is a powerful salve and one must be instructed in its use. It is important to not get it in the eyes.

It will cause areas of the skin that have already undergone changes that you can't see with the naked eye to turn red, and eventually scale off. Completely normal skin tissue will not be affected by the salve. In this way it literally identifies areas that have been damaged or undergone changes compared to healthy skin.

Because the face is exposed so much more to the sun than the body it is frequently the main location for solar keratosis. The backs of the hands are also often involved.

You can help prevent these changes in the skin by protecting the skin properly from the sun. I am sending you the Health Letter number 7-10, Your Skin Sun, Aging, Spots and Cancer, to give you information on taking care of your skin and how to prevent solar damage of the type you now have. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y., 10019. People who do not care for their skin properly are more apt to have an "old skin" earlier in life. The sunburn ritual is a frequent factor as is cigarette smoking.

The effects of skin damage may not show up for years afterward. Young people want a nice tan but when age 40 rolls around they want to look 20. The two are not compatible.

It is important to realize that the sun affects the skin all year round. People with exceptionally fair skin should use protection all year, in winter as well as summer. You can use one of the chemical screening agents mentioned in The Health Letter as a simple lotion each morning before being exposed to the sun.

(Because of the volume of mail Dr. Lamb cannot answer your letters personally, but he will answer representative letters of general interest in his column.)

Polly's pointers
By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — Can rubber backed draperies be dyed successfully? I have a cream colored pair that I cannot use unless they are dyed another color.

My husband carries a lunch pail to work and with the recent high temperatures he was concerned about the effect of foods like mayonnaise, lunch meats, etc. I buy bread and snack cakes in large quantities direct from the bakery and keep them in the freezer. Now I put a frozen pie or cake in his lunch pail just before he leaves for work each morning and it keeps the pail cool as it thaws. So far this has worked beautifully. — PHYLLIS.

DEAR PHYLLIS — I have been advised that such draperies will not take kindly to dyeing. Perhaps you could add a band or bands of color to make them fit into the room where you want to use these cream colored draperies. — POLLY.

Polly will send you one of her signed thank-you newspaper coupon clippers if she uses your favorite Pointer, Peeve or Problem in her column. Write POLLY'S POINTERS in care of this newspaper.

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK (NEA) — "I'm from Day-twa, which is north of Canada," Kenneth Jay Lane says in a pleasantly husky voice.

How do you spell that? "D-e-i-r-o-i . . ." And you look up to find the trim, dark-eyed jewelry designer grinning devilishly.

Which is, of course, why Kicky and Poo-Poo and all the ritzy ladies invite him to dinner parties that get written up by the people who write about those things.

"I really don't go to many dinner parties. Food isn't what it used to be, you know." The grin, again. "I do like to eat little vegetables because they're rare and grown in greenhouses. You know, Truman (Capote, not Harry) said you can tell the very rich by the size of the vegetables they eat," he laughs.

Still, if he's not on the petit pois circuit, he says, "I am a terrible snob because if one really wants the best in life one has to protect oneself from what is second rate always."

He does that by living in a Manhattan townhouse and collecting so many Renaissance bronzes and Indian miniatures that he's planning a two and a half day sale at Parke-Bernet Galleries to get rid of the excess.

And he reads and rereads 19th century biographies, "Passage to India," Balzac and Gide because they're good books, but, "No," he says, "I'm not interested in Dickens. He's too political and not cerebral enough for me."

Those are nice credentials for a patrician, all right, but Kicky and Poo-Poo look for more than that in a pal, even one who loves to be wicked: "I have no principles because if one does, one has to go against them and I hate breaking rules."

He backs up the facade with a solid, special Coty Award and the distinction of being, he says, the first to lift costume jewelry up from schlock and onto the ears and necks of the chi-chi, which amused them.

"I started in '63 and in 'them' days, costume jewelry wasn't fashionable. It was pretty low end. There were an awful lot of Austrian rhinestones in autumn colors around, that old ladies would buy to wear to church."

"The average person wore a string of cultured pearls, a gold pin, an engagement ring, maybe a finger ring and a gold watch, period. So I hit it at the right time."

What actually got him into jewelry, this graduate of the University of Michigan and the Rhode Island School of Design, were rubber cement and feet.

"After school, I had wanted to be an art director and I got a job on the art staff of Vogue. I left because rubber cement was my mortal enemy."

Some friends led him to shoes, which he found he enjoyed designing, especially since being an associate designer of Dior shoes in America got him to Paris a lot. And then the man who manufactured the rhinestones he and other shoe people were pasting on shoes with great success began having business troubles.

"I started pasting flat-backed rhinestones onto earrings and things to help him," he says. "I thought it would be amusing for jewelry."

Bunny and Binky and the other ladies at Vogue, Harper's, The New York Times, all said his stuff was absolutely the perfect accoutrement for the well-dressed woman. "Girls were getting dressed up like Marie Antoinette for a dinner of 12, then," he says.

And Kenneth Jay Lane, who knew nothing about jewelry, was launched. "It's good to come out of another area because then you don't realize there are any limitations."

An aesthete, after all, looks everywhere for beauty and inspiration — museums, what's walking around on the street, what Van Cleef and Arpels are doing; but, then, Lane is active in the good stuff, too.

But in his showroom on Fifth Avenue, there's mostly just lots of rhinestone baubles, a handsome line of watches, and in honor of the rifled knick-knacks from King Tut's tomb which are now tooting around the country, a special collection of Egyptian-like pendants, amulets and chokers, etc.

And of course there's his Royal Worcester porcelain jewelry which he got into a year ago because everyone was getting into porcelain.

He says he had a grand time in the factories in Worcester, England, where he designed the cuff bracelets, chokers, hearts, etc., that bear motifs from patterns dating back, in some cases, to the 18th century.

"I used one called Blind Earl (of Coventry) which is a leaf-like pattern that's raised so he could feel it because he was blind."

Kenneth Jay Lane and Royal Worcester. Like peanut butter and jelly, or pate and pumpernickel.

Still, this soignée, engaging man, 45, in the mauve suit and paler mauve shirt may just be a regular guy after all.

For one thing, his receptionist closes her eyes, shakes

Hand-painted collars with matching braided cords by Kenneth Jay Lane for Royal Worcester. Butterfly pattern with black ground ($200); "Blind Earl" pattern with white ground and green leaves ($200); "Fruit & Flower", with half green, half yellow ground, and fruits and flowers on it ($140).

her head slowly from side to side and solemnly confides, "He's a lovely man. A lovely man."

The chief difference between Edam and Gouda cheese is in the butterfat content. Usually Edam cheese is made from partly skimmed milk. Gouda from whole milk. Calorie-watchers like to choose the Edam variety.

And we'll swear on a stack of Harper's Bazaars that the cream cheese and date nut bread sandwich he munched when we saw him came from Chock Full O' Nuts. You know, the people's answer to "21."

Supersuede--Uttrasuede look with lower price

NEW YORK (NEA) — They probably don't lurk behind lampposts with their collars up, or go without lunch.

It just sounds that way when Al Silverstein, president of the junior house, Patty O'Neill says, "There are four people in our company constantly on the lookout for new fabrics."

About three years ago, one or all of them staggered in with SuperSuede and, for the first time, he claims, juniors were given the chance to wear it.

"Layering was starting then, so we made a dress that could be layered, and then we did two more dresses and got very explosive and added a third style."

Tunics and pants, jump-suits, jacket dresses — Silverstein put the hand of suede to them all.

Well, as for SuperSuede looking like Uttrasuede before you look, consider this. SuperSuede sells for about $68 a yard, and Uttrasuede resides up the block where yards cost around $30 or more.

"In terms of the hand and the feel, you'd find Uttrasuede a more truly suede-like fiber," says Jean Arras of Celanese who produces SuperSuede.

You might think of Uttrasuede as the caviar of imitations, and SuperSuede the tunafish.

In the final analysis, neither of them is the real thing.

Year of expansion plus gloom-doom

Sylvia Porter

(First of five columns)

As we move into the final 100 days of 1977, it is indisputable that this has been another year of economic expansion to the highest peaks ever. When the bells ring out 1977, they will ring out more than 2 1/2 years of recovery - expansion, a respectable middle age as economic upturns are measured, but still not aged against the three-year average for all post-World War II expansions (not including the prolonged 50-month boom of the 1960s).

And the bells also will ring out to the world that ours remains among the most resilient and powerful of all industrialized lands anywhere.

But it is equally indisputable that psychologically this upturn has been characterized by gloom-doom all the way. Not in memory has a cycle of solid business expansion been so marred by worries that its death is imminent, so undercut by fears that we are heading for a repeat of the 1973-1975 nightmare of galloping inflation side by side with economic slump, so blotched by anxiety.

Statistically, the case for 1977's upturn to an economy turning out goods and services valued at an annual rate of more than $2 trillion - a size never before even approached by any other nation - can be quickly and convincingly demonstrated. To document:

- "Real" growth in our economy will end '77 at a yearly rate around 5-plus per cent, although this hides the fact that in '77 (as in '76), the pace has been erratic, starting at a sizzling 7 1/2 per cent in the first quarter, slowing to 6.4 per cent in the second quarter and continuing to decelerate in this last half of the year.

- "Real" growth measures the rise in dollar totals with the impact of price increases eliminated from those totals. This, however, was the growth scenario laid out months ago by leading economists, and business merely played the scenario as forecast.

- The fundamental housing industry finally pulled out of its prolonged slump and housing starts have soared to a boom annual rate approximating 2 million, a new record, well above the prediction of administration experts, and a prime force behind the general expansion.

- The rate of unemployment has stuck in a discouragingly high range of more than 7 per cent, with the rate among blacks at an appalling 14 1/2 per cent and among black teenagers at an explosively dangerous 40.4 per cent. But the number of employed has been increasing to a new peak of nearly 91 million in late summer. In the first half of 1977 alone, a huge 2 1/2 million were added to our working ranks, an achievement underlined by the fact that in only five full years during the past three decades has employment risen more than 2 million.

- Corporation profits have continued to climb impressively, and so have dividends paid on corporation stocks. Personal incomes have been zooming, were above $1.5 trillion at latest reporting date, a full $150 billion over the same period of 1976. Meanwhile, "real" spendable earnings - average real weekly pay of all workers reduced by Social Security and federal income tax rates applying to a married worker with three dependents earning an average income - have risen 3.5 per cent over the year. This has reflected a moderate hike in real gross average weekly earnings (adjusted for price increases) and the cut in federal income taxes that went into effect in mid-1977.

- While still far below a level adequate to maintain our productive capacity at maximum efficiency and to prevent inflationary bottlenecks, business spending on new plants and equipment in '77 is slated to increase 13 per cent over 1976 and the totals have been steadily upgraded as the year has progressed. This is another key force for sustaining the upturn.

- Interest rates have risen modestly, particularly short-term rates, but not enough to force cuts in borrowing, and the Federal Reserve System has kept the money supply flowing in totals more than sufficient to fuel expansion.

- And even the rate of inflation - which zoomed in the first few months back into a double-digit 10 per cent range - slowed as the year went on, so the year-to-year rate fell back into the underlying 5 1/2 to 6 1/2 per cent range.

Why, then, the gloom-doom? With the above just a sampling of 1977's healthy developments, why did 1977 "feel" so unhealthy? Tomorrow's column will touch on factors that will help explain our psychological "downs" in an "up" year.

Migration impact studied

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - A two-day symposium on the impact of migration to southern and southwestern states began today at the University of Texas.

Preceded by two days of study by academic and technical experts, the symposium is entitled "Alternatives to Confrontation: A National Policy Toward Regional Change." Govs. Dolph Briscoe of Texas, Hugh Carey of New York, James Thompson of Illinois and David Boren of Oklahoma are scheduled to attend.

Secretary of Labor Ray Marshall and Deputy Secretary of Agriculture John White, who left Texas to become part of the Carter administration, also will attend, together with numerous lieutenant governors and other state officials.

US opens outpost embassies

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R. (AP) - American officials rate the U.S. Consulate in Leningrad as a qualified success after three years of operation and expect similar benefits from another consulate opening in Kiev in the Ukraine.

The two outposts of the American embassy in Moscow were approved by the Soviets in 1972 at the height of détente. In return, the Russians received the right to establish consulates in New York and San Francisco in addition to their Washington embassy.

Relations between the countries have since become no less useful.

Though it can do little diplomatic work because all Soviet decision-making is centralized in Moscow, the consulate has paid off in helping American tourists and businessmen in trouble in Russia's second city and in promoting U.S. cultural events here.

"The consulate-general has also given us a second window on Soviet society and this has been a very worthwhile purpose," Joseph Neubert, the outgoing chief of the 26-member Leningrad mission, said in an interview.

The consulate lets American officials keep a closer eye on Leningrad, whose population is 4.3 million, and outlying areas including the Baltic states of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia. Consulate officials travel regularly to the three states' capitals.

The mission, in a refurbished turn-of-the-century building near Leningrad's main shopping district, has built up several hundred contacts with members of Leningrad's political, scientific and cultural elite. Some of these people receive American publications through the consulate.

American visitors aided by Jamaica was discovered by Christopher Columbus in 1494 and was occupied by the Spaniards from 1500 to 1655, when it was captured by the English.

the consulate include some 200 students every year in the Leningrad University's Russian-language programs, ordinary tourists to the city and crewmen from U.S. grain ships that unload at Leningrad area ports. Before the consulate opened, the Moscow embassy sent officials to Leningrad to help Americans only in extreme emergencies.

The consulate has problems, however, including limited access to high-ranking Soviet officials and the logistical difficulties of a small group of Americans living far from Western conveniences.

The American consulate in Kiev is already in partial operation with a four-person advance party headquartered in the city's Moskva Hotel. The formal opening of the consulate's three buildings was initially set for the summer of 1978 but will probably be held up until mid-1979 because of building delays.

Each of the two consulates has cost more than $1 million dollars to set up, according to American officials.

In the next few years, the United States will beef up its diplomatic presence in the Soviet Union with the construction of a $100 million new embassy in Moscow - work starts next spring - and possibly with another consulate.

Zap, no more cool air

NEW YORK (AP) - On hot summer evenings in coming years Americans may find that when the air conditioner shuts down it isn't on the blink.

As early as next summer utilities in Michigan and Arkansas expect to be able to shut off home air conditioners when they feel they need the power elsewhere to avoid serious shortages.

Under such systems, companies will be able to turn off thousands of air conditioners simultaneously from the utility's headquarters to reduce load and avoid a general blackout such as the one that hit New York City this summer.

"Eventually, all utilities will be going to some sort of automation like this," predicted Jeff Serfass of the U.S. Energy Research and Development Agency.

With serious questions arising about the reliability of electricity during the next 10 years, many utilities are searching for new methods of "load management." Building new generators is expensive and time consuming, so finding ways to reduce or restructure power usage is attractive to electric companies.

Several major utilities already are installing remote-control systems, and dozens of others are considering them. Basically, the utility installs a cut-off device on the air conditioner or water heater and then activates it via radio or other transmissions.

Customers are given a credit on their bills for participating in the program.

"We're able to clip the peak off our peak load," said Pete Rice, a spokesman for Arkansas Power and Light in Little Rock. "It also saves money in future generating capacity and we don't have to run more expensive equipment now."

John Hamann, president of Detroit Edison Co., agreed.

"We have found that not only does this (remote control) help reduce investment in generating plants by shaving peaks, but also by shifting load to off-peak hours, we can reduce fuel costs as well," he said.

The federal government and the Electric Power Research Institute are funding a $7 million experimental program in San Diego, Detroit, Omaha, Neb., and Raleigh, N.C., in which two-way devices are used.

Detroit Edison is one of the leading users of remote-control devices. Back in 1934, the firm began installing timers on water heaters for customers who agreed to have their power interrupted at certain hours in return for special rates.

The company switched to radio controls in 1968 and now 200,000 customers - nearly all those with electric water heaters - have volunteered for the program.

Under the plan, the utility can deactivate water heaters for up to four hours a day. The average customer gets a credit of about $60 per year. The company says there have been few complaints about the system.

Now, Detroit Edison is experimenting with cutting off central air conditioning systems for up to 15 minutes an hour, five times a day.

Ducks die of botulism

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - More than 3,000 ducks have died of botulism, a bacterial food poisoning, on playa lakes in Parmer and Castro Counties, a state wildlife official says.

"At least seven of our men are picking up carcasses ... We've got a dump truck hauling them off to be burned," said Harold Irby, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's program director for migratory game birds.

He said the botulism bacteria can survive dormant for years in the mud and soil of the playas, which fill with water when it rains. Low water levels and warm temperatures end the bacteria's dormancy and enable them to enter the food chain and infect waterfowl.

There is no danger to humans from the bacteria, Irby said. He said that while the botulism is cause of concern, the deaths resulting from it barely scratched the Northwest Texas duck population of about a million birds.

Introducing the so

Candidates for Senate to speak out

The Top O' Texas Democratic Club will sponsor a forum Oct. 3 for the three Democratic candidates seeking to fill the 31st District Senatorial seat recently vacated by Max Sherman of Amarillo. The three seeking the seat are: State Representative Bob Simpson, Burk Whittenburg, and Mel Phillips, all of Amarillo.

The program will consist of an opening statement by each candidate, questions presented to all of the candidates from a panel of four (representing labor, education, farming, and the news media), and a question and answer period open to the floor.

The program will be at 7:30 p.m. at the Pampa Senior Citizens Center, 500 W. Francis, Pampa. The meeting is open to the public.

House proposes double hike in SS taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Persons earning $30,000 a year could pay by 1982 twice as much Social Security taxes as they do now under a proposal before the House Ways and Means Committee.

The draft bill, advanced Thursday by the Social Security subcommittee, is aimed at increasing money going into the financially troubled Social Security system to assure the system will remain solvent.

The full committee begins considering the measure probably next Wednesday and hopes to move the bill to the House floor by early October in time for Congress to act on it before adjournment.

"Time is of the essence. We have to assure the elderly that their checks will be forthcoming," said Committee Chairman James A. Burke, D-Mass.

The exact amount of the tax increase for employes over the next five years remains to be worked out, but the major boosts are aimed at higher income brackets.

Tentative proposals within the bill could mean a payroll tax as high as $1,980 in five years for persons earning $30,000 or more. Currently the tax is levied only on earnings up to $16,500.

The increases are necessary to keep the Social Security reserves equal to at least one-fourth of a year's payments under the system.

The draft bill differs substantially from President Carter's recommendation, particularly in omitting the President's proposal to shift $14.1 billion of general revenue funds into the Social Security trust fund.

The draft bill, however, contains provisions to borrow money from the general fund if the Social Security reserve falls below 25 per cent of payments.

Grooms didn't show; they were in jail

MARION, Ill. (AP) — When LaQuita Shrader married in a Texas courtroom, the man standing beside her wasn't her bridegroom.

And when LaQuita's two women friends went through the same ceremony in the same Austin courtroom, their spouses were not at their sides, either.

It was Patrick Dennis Murphy in every case.

"He was a doll!" said LaQuita of Murphy, who was a stand-in of her intended, Ezequiel Navarro.

Navarro's marriage-by-proxy to LaQuita and the marriages of Brenda Formby and Deborah Scott to their husbands has touched off a controversy and a suit because the bridegrooms are inmates of the U.S. Penitentiary at Marion.

The prison refuses to recognize the unions, say the women, and that violates their civil rights, according to their court petition.

The suit seeks to extend to the women the same visiting privileges afforded other wives and asks that the men not be transferred to other institutions because of the marriages.

"I try to understand their side of it," said Brenda of the prison officials. "But who are they to say when people will fall in love?"

A spokesman for the penitentiary said he was told by Fred Frey, associate warden of programs, that the Bureau of Prisons has an established policy in regard to such activities by inmates.

Spokesman Ronald Deai said he understood the three men did not follow the policy when they were married. But he said he was not acquainted with all provisions of the policy.

He said, however, that he understood that prisoners intending to marry must be nearing completion of their sentences and must have been acquainted with the intended spouse before being confined.

Records show that Navarro, 32, is serving 10 years for importing heroin and is eligible for parole next year. Frank William Scott, who is serving 24 years for bank robbery, could be paroled in 1981, and Allen Formby, serving a sentence for murder, is eligible for parole consideration in 1981.

LaQuita said she had known Ezequiel for 15 years.

The women claim in their suit that appointments they made with a prison chaplain—required for marriage—had been broken three times.

Mrs. Navarro said she wanted to marry now instead of waiting until Navarro is free "so I can start setting up a home for this man to come to."

She said she knows the wives will be separated for many months from their husbands.

"But there's a lot more to marriage than living together, than the physical," she said.

ART CONFERENCE
TORONTO (AP) — The International Sculpture Conference will be held outside the United States for the first time when the 10th meeting of that group of sculptors and people from related fields convenes here in June 1978.

Held every two years, the conference was initiated in 1958 by the National Sculpture Center of the University of Kansas in Lawrence. Between 1,200 and 1,500 delegates are expected to attend.

Delegates' fees and private and government donations provide the $360,000 budget for the conference and related events.

20-state tax commission cracking down

Multistate firms avoid taxes

By JONATHAN WOLMAN AP Urban Affairs Writer BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — The Multi-State Tax Commission, the product of a little-known tax agreement among 20 states, is stepping up its aggressive auditing campaign against corporate tax avoidance.

simple: the tax commission is costing some of these companies a lot of money. In 1975-76, the commission, acting on the basis of its audits, recommended that member states assess an additional $2.5 million in taxes. One year later, following audits on some larger companies along with an increase in the number of audits, recommended additional assessments rose to $10 million.

tax officials seeking uniform tax laws after they found that corporations were playing states off against each other in what Corrigan calls "a massive game called tax avoidance."

adopted in California and Oregon. Under the unitary approach, states will tax companies according to the state's percentage of their worldwide business. Currently, most states tax companies according to the percentage of U.S. operations.

Meat prices edge up

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail meat prices have continued to edge up since last spring and as a group probably will remain at least steady through this fall, says the Agriculture Department.

Bergland is scheduled to talk about "the critical importance of agriculture in U.S. trade" on Sept. 29, followed by discussions involving farm organization leaders Allan Grant, American Farm Bureau Federation; John W. Scott, the National Grange; Oren Lee Stanley, National Farmers Organization, and Tony T. Dechant, National Farmers Union.

Farm report

nearly 2.3 pounds of steer on the hoof to make one pound of supermarket beef. However, it is the cattle producer's share of what consumers pay for beef.

Others scheduled for the conference include Robert S. Strauss, U.S. special trade representative; Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., and Rep. Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., chairmen respectively of the Senate and House agriculture committees, and top trade officials from the Agriculture Department and State Department.

60,000 Indochinese expected in United States

WASHINGTON (AP) — Food shortages and economic malaise may bring 60,000 or more Indochinese refugees to the United States during the next three or four years, according to testimony before a Senate committee.

Food shortages in the area are growing, witnesses said, with rice already in short supply in the central marketplace of the Laotian capital of Vientiane.

The Laotian food shortages are the result of drought there, witnesses said, plus a "lack of incentive" among farmers under the socialist economic system.

The testimony came during Senate hearings on legislation to extend refugee resettlement programs in the United States. The two-year emergency aid program for Indochinese refugees expires next Friday.

Representatives of a coalition of volunteer agencies who just returned from Southeast Asia said signs of food shortages in Laos already are showing as the result of recent drought. State Department officials indicated food aid to that country was under consideration.

Wells Klein, an official of the Coalition for Effective Resettlement of Indochinese Refugees, told of visiting Vientiane's central market and finding it virtually empty of rice, the region's staple food.

"We saw one two-quart basket of rice, and when we inquired about the price, the woman invited us to 'come in back' to discuss it," Klein said.

He said Laotians are not facing famine now, but may in a few years if the situation doesn't improve.

Philip C. Habib, the assistant secretary of state who heads the department's refugee task force, told the committee the estimate of 60,000 refugees is based on experiences thus far with the "second wave" of refugees, those who have fled their countries since the communists seized control of the region in 1975.

Habib said most came here for economic rather than political reasons. The administration has proposed to extend the refugee aid program at sharply reduced levels. But some senators have proposed to maintain current funding for another year, then scale it down gradually over the next two years.

Habib said the number of refugees would not in itself cause serious problems. The United States now accepts about 385,000 legal immigrants a year.

But witnesses and senators questioned what the "third wave" will mean to state and local governments now relying on the federal aid program to finance resettlement of the refugees.

The administration has proposed to extend the refugee aid program at sharply reduced levels. But some senators have proposed to maintain current funding for another year, then scale it down gradually over the next two years.

Cheryl Ladd

Charlie's newest would rather forget past

"I'm going to play myself so that people can easily relate to me," says Cheryl Ladd, Charlie's newest angel. "I'm kind of kooky and I hope my sense of humor shows. As for my clothes, I'll wear what I usually wear — black satin pants, baseball caps and visors. Then, when I dress up in gowns, it'll be an interesting change."

Cheryl, who is married to actor Alan Ladd's son David, is a veteran of TV walk-ons. "I had seven years of TV things you'd forget as soon as you saw them," she says in US magazine. "Then something happened that crushed me completely; it was slit-your-wrist time. I wanted desperately to play the daughter in the 'Family' series. After seven days of readings in the producer's office, it came down to just me and Meredith Baxter-Birney. God! Then she got it. I wish her well, but I can tell you, I was heartbroken."

"So you can imagine how I felt when the same producer, Aaron Spelling, told me I'd got the part in 'Charlie's Angels' out of scores of other girls. I went crazy."

Minors now allowed into nude bars

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tessie the Torso and friends could soon join the Washington Monument and Lincoln Memorial as a tourist attraction for young Americans visiting the nation's capital.

It seems a new ruling by the District of Columbia's Alcoholic Beverage Control Board will force Washington restaurants that feature side orders of "adult entertainment," including topless and bottomless dancers, to admit minors.

The board said prohibiting minors from entering such establishments would be a violation of the D.C. human rights law.

The law bars discrimination based on "race, color, religion, natural origin, sex, age, marital status, personal appearance, sexual orientation, family responsibilities, physical handicap, matriculation, political affiliation, source of income, or place of residence or business."

The local ordinance also requires a licensed "hotel, tavern, restaurant, ordinary, simple room, tipping house, saloon or eating house" to admit "any quiet and orderly person or persons."

The ABC board was asked this week to approve the alcohol license of the Godfather Supper Club in Northwest Washington.

The board refused to grant the license on three grounds, neighborhood opposition, the character of the entertainment and the management's policy of excluding minors.

A D.C. official said the board's decision dramatized the need to overhaul the city's restaurant licensing practices.

"Any 12-year-old can walk into a topless joint that has a restaurant license, order a coke and watch the girls until his eyes give out," the official said.
