Cookies for 25 cents, painting for $4,000

By JANE P. MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff

Items ranged from tooth pillows to expertly-crafted handmade silver rings.

Prices ranged to 25 cents for a fistful of chocolate chip cookies to $4,462.50 for an oil painting of two cowboys riding through a canyon.

Patrons ranged from browsers to those armed with long Christmas lists.

Shoppers were smiling, artists and craftsmen were selling, the scene was a refrain of last year's Top of Texas Arts and Crafts Festival at M.K. Brown Auditorium only yet each stanza seems to be bigger and better.

Eighty-six artists and craftsmen from five states packed the building with paintings and pottery, woodcrafts and Christmas tree ornaments.

Jo Dunham from Guyton has been making her living as a painter for six years. And when she's not painting she's on the road attending shows.

Farm scenes and windmills are most popular with her customers. Her art is delicate, human and watercolor.

Jeanie Lewis tries to pour her own joy of life into her prismatic florals and landscapes. Her scenes, which she does mostly in oil, are light and impressionistic.

Mrs. Lewis, from Conroe, lost her left arm and a portion of her right lung to bone cancer in 1970.

From the bird man.

Irak Irnoid, Tucumcari, N.M., starts with a piece of wood — an exotic type such as jelutong or a native wood like mesquite. From it he saws a block, then begins the tedious project of turning the block into a bird.

"All of my life I've been a bird man," he tells those who ask about the character he puts into his wood friends. "From the first time I can remember I've loved birds."

He polishes wood quail, roadrunners, ducks, herrons and others with 600 grit sandpaper.

Jim Dennis is on his way to Florida from headquarters in California. He spends most of the time on the road selling necklaces he and his partner make of pewter, gold and porcelain.

Only the colors, techniques and patterns of the center of each necklace is different. "I like to stick to one specific thing and be good at it," he said.

Dennis' supply table and backdrop which he designed and made, fold up into a box which shelters his motorcycle on the mobile home in which he travels.

A former businessman who "realized one day that man was meant to be happy and that no man should ever do anything that's boring," Dennis enjoys visiting with customers and is working on a book "exploding the myths that all of us grow up with."

Bob Carder offers shelves and shelves of art from his potter's wheel, items like coffee pots, serving bowls, vases and platters.

Carder teaches pottery at Liberal High School and Seward County Community College and just finished his master's degree work at Kansas State Teachers College in Emporia.

Donna Dobberfuhr has developed a bas-relief sculpture. She glazes clay panels to portray houses, scenes, animals and an occasional person on wall hangings.

She believes that "the sculptural form evokes strong sensual feelings about the subject portrayed, and strives to interpret the clay mass, giving the physical form an identity that will communicate with the viewer."

Miss Dobberfuhr is from Oklahoma City. Also part of the annual festival is the gourmet booth which sells homemade candy, bread, cakes and other goodies.

The Festival of Floral Arts and standard flower show is being sponsored by the Pampa Garden Club.

Hours today are noon to 5 p.m.

New strategy--tax land on productivity

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton and farm groups are trying to devise a strategy to guarantee that taxation of rural land on its productivity alone will begin Jan. 1 as planned.

Clayton denied anybody was playing politics with the possibly unconstitutional law that tells local tax assessor-collectors how to appraise open space land, now taxed on its value as real estate.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe said Friday he did not know if the law is constitutional but expected that question to be settled by the first of the year.

And Comptroller Bob Bullock criticized two House members who had jumped him, Clayton and Briscoe concerning the measure.

Bullock is preparing appraisal manuals for taxing authorities to use in evaluating rural land.

Clayton stirred things up early in the week with a mail-out newspaper column that said tax assessor-collectors should implement the bill even though some question its constitutionality.

The bill was introduced in the legislative session as contingent on approval of a constitutional amendment allowing the legislature to write rules for taxation based on agricultural use values.

The amendment failed by two votes, but the bill passed and was signed by Briscoe.

Clayton said he or someone else might request an opinion from Attorney General John Hill on the law's constitutionality.

"We are talking to people that are affected by the thing to see what they think is the best way to handle it," Clayton said. One group he consulted was the Texas Farm Bureau.

It would take a court case to resolve the constitutionality issue. But a favorable opinion from Hill would clear the way for tax assessor-collectors to implement the law Jan. 1. Cases sometimes take years to reach the Texas Supreme Court.

An opinion request would put Hill on the spot. He is running for governor and probably would lose ground in rural areas if he held the law unconstitutional.

But Clayton said nobody was playing politics with the question since it is "a pretty serious concern of agricultural landowners."

Bullock issued a statement Friday blasting Reps. John Bryant, D-Dallas, and Luther Jones, D-El Paso, for criticizing those who want to implement the bill even though they voted for it.

"It is flat hypocritical for a member of the legislature to help write and vote for a bill all the way through and then cry 'unconstitutional' when it finally becomes law," Bullock said.

Jones said everybody in the legislature believed the bill was unconstitutional without the amendment — which he opposed because it lacked a prohibition against giving the tax break to corporations.

"As a result, unless Clayton and Bullock usurp the power of the voters and find some way to amend the constitution by fiat, H. B. 22 isn't worth the paper it is written on and Bullock knows it," he said.

Rep. Bill Sullivant, D-Gainesville, who was author of the approved bill, joined the critics Saturday.

"Most constitutional lawyers and scholars are of the opinion that though House Bill 22 passed it cannot take effect because it violates the Texas Constitution," he said. "An attorney general's opinion to the legislature during the recent special session indicated he agrees with this position."

Sullivant blamed both Clayton and Briscoe for failure of the constitutional amendment to pass. He said he prepared a slightly changed version of the amendment after it failed to pass by two votes and a poll of House members showed two-thirds of them would support it. However, he said, Clayton refused to let him bring it up again.

He said he asked Briscoe to include the amendment in the special session but the governor turned it down.

"If Governor Briscoe and Speaker Clayton were for this tax relief they both passed up golden opportunities to grant it," Sullivant said.

To preserve story-telling

'Got this hen under my arms'

By MATT YANCEY
Associated Press Writer

JONESBORO, Tenn. (AP) — "Doc" McConnell leans forward and, with an "I had this friend named Woody," he's off on another of his yarns at a festival dedicated to preserving the art of story-telling.

The National Storytelling Festival was begun five years ago in Tennessee's oldest city by Jimmy Neil Smith, a former teacher who worried that story-telling was becoming extinct.

With the help of grants from the National Endowment for the Arts, the festival spawned the National Association for the Preservation and Perpetuation of Storytelling.

A resource center has just been established to tape-record and catalogue the tales of traditional storytellers—not just Appalachian but Cajun, Western, black and urban practitioners of the art as well—before they die.

McConnell, known in the East Tennessee mountains as the barker of Doc McConnell's Old Time Medicine Show, is one of 20 featured story-tellers at the festival. But many of the more than 500 persons attending are encouraged to exchange stories at a "swappin' place" outside a log cabin where Andrew Jackson lived.

More than a dozen workshops were conducted Saturday. The most popular covered Jack tales, derivations of the Jack-in-the-Beanstalk story in which a country-bumpkin character outwits a more sophisticated or powerful antagonist.

Saturday night, everyone was to gather around a campfire in the old cemetery for two hours of ghost tales.

Festival director Brett Harrell said the biggest boost to storytelling in recent years has been Alex Haley's book, "Roots," and the television drama adapted from it.

"More and more people are trying to trace their genealogy, and stories handed down from one generation to another is one of the only few things available to do it with," he said.

A four-block area of Jonesboro restored to resemble the way it looked in the early 1800s is the backdrop for both the festival and for McConnell's story about Woody and his girl. "Woody had decided he wanted to walk her home after tradin' and swappin' stuff up at the general store. He had a walkin' stick, and had just bought him a No. 2 tub a hang-in on his shoulder. Some fellow up at the poultry house had given him an old hen, and he'd been up at the stockyard and traded his old bound in for a calf."

He started walking down the railroad track with her, then started for the woods, and she said, "I'm not going through those woods with you, Woody. You get me back in them woods, someplace on a dark path and you'll take advantage of me—because I'm a virtuous woman."

"He said, 'Now how in the world could I take advantage of you back in there, somewheres?' Here I got this No. 2 tub a hangin' over my shoulder, got this walkin' cane and got this old hen under my arms and leadin' this calf."

"She said, 'Well you could stick that walkin' cane in the ground tie that calf to it and put that tub over that old hen'."

Malpractice ceiling?

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of prominent labor and business leaders has suggested limiting medical malpractice claims and expanding community health planning as means of cutting climbing health costs.

The Labor-Management Group, composed of some of the nation's top labor and business officials, said in a position paper released Saturday that soaring health care costs are a matter of national concern. "They are an increasing financial burden on all segments of the economy and an important factor in the inflationary spiral," said AFL-CIO President George Meany.

Meany is one of eight labor and nine business executives in a group that has been meeting informally for more than four years to study and make recommendations on numerous issues.

The health cost position paper, based on nine months of work, included suggestions on 12 points designed to slow increasing costs over the long term.

Homosexual public school teachers face a difficult task in keeping their jobs in Texas, according to a random survey of local school districts across the state.

While most of the district administrators said they had no official written policy, the majority of those contacted said a teacher would be dismissed following proof of homosexual activity.

"Anybody that is a known homosexual and is so identified would be asked to resign by me," Dallas Independent School District Superintendent Nolan Estes said. "It's an unwritten part of our district policy."

Last Monday the U.S. Supreme Court upheld a Washington state court decision approving the firing of a homosexual teacher. The lower court had ruled that homosexuality is immoral.

Of the districts contacted, only the Houston ISD indicated that known homosexuals might be allowed to continue teaching.

The Houston spokesman, however, said the Houston school board is expected to be briefed on the Supreme Court decision at the board's next meeting later this month.

While the district does not have a policy currently on homosexuals, the spokesman added, "if a person is a homosexual in private life and is a good teacher, his private life would have no bearing on his status with the school district."

In Dallas, Steve Wilkins, president of the Dallas Gay Political Caucus, said the remarks in Dallas were "disappointing." "You can't teach children to be homosexuals," Wilkins said. He said he was afraid opinions such as that expressed in Dallas could lead to a "witch-hunt."

Victor Rodriguez, assistant superintendent in San Antonio, said that while a section of the Texas Education Code would allow a school district to fire a known homosexual, his district does not plan to search out such individuals.

Some district officials, such as Dr. Lee Williamson of the Wichita Falls ISD, were blunt in their feelings.

"It is not appropriate to have homosexual people working with children," said Williamson, who added he would fire a teacher after receiving proof of homosexual activity "rather than have the community think

I condoned it."

Superintendent Mark Culwell in Corsicana said it was the policy in his district that any teacher identified as a homosexual would be asked to resign immediately.

"We are not interested in rumors, but if a teacher is actually identified as being homosexual, we would ask for the resignation," he said.

Several school districts said they depend on background investigations to screen out possible problems that may arise because of homosexual teachers.

Marlin Superintendent Sam Gray said his district tries to screen all applicants "extremely well."

All districts that said a teacher would be fired because of homosexual activity emphasized that proof of such activity would be necessary.

Fort Worth School Superintendent Gerald Ward said a teacher facing dismissal because of alleged homosexual conduct would receive a hearing before the school board and would be entitled to due process.

Local farmer on tv

Fred Vanderburg Jr., a Pampa area farmer who has been active in organizing the proposed American Agriculture farm strike set to begin on Dec. 14, will appear on the Good Morning America television show on Thursday.

Appearing with Vanderburg will be Eugene Schroeder and Jerry Wright, both members of American Agriculture from Colorado.

While in New York City for the television program, the three farmers also will participate in a panel discussion at a luncheon sponsored by the National Press

Club. The topic will be "Food for Defense."

Vanderburg will return to the Panhandle for a Friday rally of farmers in Amarillo.

As many as 15,000 agri-businessmen are expected to be in Amarillo for a meeting at the fair park coliseum and possibly a parade through Downtown Amarillo.

High-ranking federal and state government officials are among persons who have been invited by American Agriculture to attend the meeting.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Gompers and the unions

Three out of four American workers do not belong to a labor union. One out of four does. Financially the union long ago dropped its "poor boy" status. By the mid 1960s, the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission reported that private pension funds predominantly controlled by unions had a market value of $63 billion.

Today the union is not merely a representative at the bargaining table. It is a potent force in elections. It is a big investor. It is, in fact, a big employer, but not producer.

The American labor union, as we know it today, had its beginning in the cigar factories of New York City. These were the sanctuaries of the European socialists. Here the young Samuel Gompers, with only four years schooling in Jewish classes, undertook the study of the revolutionary writers, Marx, Engels, Lassalle. He read to the others as they worked.

Gompers had the type of a mind that put every theory to the test of experience.

He saw the union cooperatives fail. He came to the settled conclusion that the union never could displace the capitalist in the management of business.

He discerned the essence of political parties. He understood that they are not — as so many still naively suppose — organizations of citizens based on principles of public welfare, but rather institutions of professionals competing for control through government.

Although not totally consistent, Gompers in general, advised unionists simply to bargain for immunity from interference by legislatures, courts and political executives so that they could win their objectives by moral and economic power.

Some of the advice that Gompers gave has stood the test of time. With rare discernment, he foresaw the natural alignment between the socialists who wish to control everything through the state and the pseudo capitalists who wish to own everything through the state.

"Socialism holds nothing but unhappiness for the human race," he declared. "It destroys personal initiative, wipes out national pride and even plays into the hands of the autocrats."

At another time, he said, "Socialism is the end of fanatics, the sophistry of the so-called intelligentsia, and it has no place in the hearts of those who would fight for freedom and preserve democracy."

In yet another statement, he asserted, "There is no more demoralizing theory than that which imputes all human evils to capitalism or any other single agency."

Gompers probably also said a thousand things with which we would not agree. Under his leadership, for instance, the American Federation of Labor advocated such coercive measures as immigration restriction, unduly restrictive child labor laws, and compulsory schooling.

The first has been the cause of war, the second the cause of much crime, and the last provided the hotbed for the violent revolution that Gompers struggled so hard to avert.

The best suggestion we can make to the diehard unionist of today would be merely to repeat the Gompers formula. Submit every theory to the test of experience. Look at what the multiple ownership of capital has produced, contrasted with the limited output of socialist monopoly. Study the record.

How it doesn't work

The New Wisdom, as reflected in these words from economist Herbert Stein, writing in The Wall Street Journal:

I am impressed with the thought that the same sentiments which gave rise to the programs may have also frustrated the achievement of their goals. The heightened sense of national obligation to provide an education — or, at least, a diploma — had as its corollary a lowered sense of private responsibility to learn. That may be one reason for the observed decline in educational attainment despite the great increase in expenditures and years of schooling.

The heightened sense of national obligation to provide jobs — or, at least, a paycheck — had as its corollary a lowered sense of private responsibility to work. These sentiments are not confined to blacks, but they have been especially harmful to blacks, who were most in need of education, training and work experience to catch up with national average income and employment status.

You may call that an academic perception of the Law of Bureaucracy, which states that government programs will sometime inevitably achieve the opposite of their declared goals.

Union strikers take hostages

There is simply no justification at all for those who hold hostages, at peril of their lives, in order to gain some desired objective. To this, almost everyone will agree. The trauma, the threat of death or injury and the loss of freedom and normal comforts in such a situation is almost unbearable.

But what of masses of people held captive, not by brute force but by managed coercion, during a strike of transportation workers? Is there a basic analogy here?

Are the victims of such a strike not being used as pawns, against their will, to further the strikers' plan to gain for themselves what they cannot gain without the use of such victims?

The recent strike of air traffic controllers in Great Britain and the subsequent slow-down tactics caused thousands of travelers to become hostages for various periods of time.

From newspaper and television accounts of the plight forced on these people many suffered discomforts and disruptions. In a very real sense, they were being held captive as hostages to further the gains of the strikers.

The union representing the air traffic control operators issued a statement during the slow-down that they would "undertake all necessary action" to get satisfaction for their demands of more pay, less work and the dismissal of military air controllers from civilian airports.

On principle, the union and its strikers are using the same tactics as has been used by hijackers of airliners and trains. They are not using guns and bombs to subdue their victims, but the people who become their hostages are being held for ransom.

Watch on Washington

Tell the truth and lose all

By CLARK R. MOLLENHOFF
WASHINGTON, D.C. — It is unfortunate that Robert Bloom's craven efforts to curry favor with the Carter administration are too typical of the bowing and scraping of subordinate officials to the power of the presidency.

And, while Bloom did not win the hoped-for promotion from Deputy Comptroller of the Currency to Comptroller, he probably was better off than if he had not hidden the derogatory reports on Bert Lance from the Senate Government Affairs Committee at the time of the original confirmation hearings.

While not defending Bloom's indefensible actions in the cover-up for Lance, his actions must be viewed in the context of the normal system of rewards and punishments in Washington.

On that basis, few rewards and every type of conceivable punishment were likely if Bloom had rejected suggestions that he withhold details of an overdraft problem from the Federal Bureau of Investigation and from the Senate Government Affairs Committee that was conducting an investigation of Lance in connection with his nomination as director of the Office of Management and Budget.

By contrast, Bloom now admits he hoped that his cooperation in the cover-up of the seriousness of the overdraft problems at the First National Bank of Calhoun would be beneficial to his career. The deceptions almost worked.

If it had not been for Lance's mounting financial problems because of a drop in the value of his stock in the National Bank of Georgia and the necessity to ask for an extension of the Dec. 31, 1977, deadline for disposition of that stock, the cover-up might have succeeded.

Further investigations by the Senate Government Affairs Committee, the Senate Banking Committee, and a House banking subcommittee forced an embarrassed Bob Bloom to make the humiliating admissions that he had withheld relevant information from the Government Affairs Committee and had written a letter, as acting comptroller of the currency, endorsing the nomination of Lance.

He's just another dictator

A story regarding the background of Omar Efrain Torrijos, Panamanian dictator, stirred a persistent haunting memory. As laced with empathy. As paragraph unfolded, we were returned to another time and another dictator who had many apologists among the liberals of this nation.

Here are some of the story excerpts which caught our attention: "He may not have class but he's got political savvy, personal empathy with his people and that's what counts."

"He is the most popular figure in his country's history; he's the big chief, the classic Latin leader and to a certain extent he's above the government itself. He does things his own way but he is not a Hitler or Stalin."

"He grew up in the interior in surroundings similar to most of the population and developed close psychological and political ties with the people."

"He was trained in jungle warfare and rose to top rank in the National Guard. In Oct. 11, 1968, he, with a group of officers, overthrew the civilian government in a bloodless coup. He promised elections, then increased control over the new media, banned all political parties and disbanded the National Assembly."

There was more in the story to stir memories but we saw nothing about killing and cooking chickens in a New York hotel suite.

Torrijos says that he admires Fidel Castro.

This is the man, dictator Torrijos, with whom we are dealing in the establishment of a new treaty regarding our Panama Canal. We are not dealing with a nation or an elected representative of the people of Panama. The life expectancy of a Latin American dictator is somewhat short and another coup is always a probability.

If it is true that Panamanians back this man and even though he might hold sway until the treaty takes effect, how far can we, the people of this nation, trust him with our best interests?

It is almost certain that interests of ours, now spelled out in the treaty, will only stay intact as long as the whole treaty is seen to be in the interest of this or some other dictator.

Many of our misguided citizens helped Castro come to power in Cuba. Too large a segment of our population tolerated the aid given. It does not seem that we have learned much in the intervening years.

Why should we now embrace another Castro?

Combining science, the Bible

EDITOR'S NOTE — In a secluded single-story workshop, rabbis work side by side with engineers to help Jews live modern lives without disobeying God's commandments. The scientific approach to centuries-old Biblical edicts allows man alone, but not machines, to rest on the Sabbath.

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — Dov Zioni works in a dingy shop at a machine made mostly of pipes and wires. His job is to manufacture kosher steam.

Zioni is an engineer, but many of his colleagues are rabbis. Immersed in volumes of Talmud and textbooks on science, they are trying to reconcile the demands of the modern world and its technology with the laws set down thousands of years ago in the Bible.

"We are trying to keep Judaism abreast of technology without changing Judaism or impeding science," says Rabbi Levy-Yitzhak Halperin, who heads the project. "Many answers to modern-day dilemmas of science and religion are in the Torah and Halacha."

About 20 per cent of Israel's residents are Orthodox Jews. They follow rules enumerated in the Torah — the five books of Moses — and the Halacha, a large body of commentary by Jewish sages in the 5th century, which is designed to explain and buttress the Torah.

But if the state were to follow the Bible to the letter, it would have to close all businesses, stop all traffic and end all financial transactions each Saturday, the Jewish Sabbath. And that would anger the 80 per cent secular population, many already dismayed by what they think is the disproportionate role played in government by the religious political parties.

Enter Rabbi Halperin's Institute for Science and Halacha, where Dov Zioni works to try to reconcile the difference. One example is kosher steam.

Under Orthodox law, milk and meat cannot be mixed. So at hotels, restaurants and hospitals, wherever steamtables are used to keep food warm, kosher laws are violated if steam from meat dishes touches something with milk in it.

Halacha rules led Zioni to the solution. One rule says kosher food cannot be contaminated by something which is not food. Another maxim says it isn't food if dogs won't eat it.

So Zioni rigged his machine to put pine oil into the water which will become steam. The pine oil steam doesn't affect the taste of the food, but Zioni found that when he condensed the steam, dogs wouldn't touch it.

Presto, kosher steam.

Many of the institute's functions are less esoteric. Its basic role is to avoid violation of two cardinal rules in the Book of Exodus:

— "You shall kindle no fire in all your habitations on the Sabbath day."

— "Whoever does any work on it shall be put to death."

The ban on fire, in its modern interpretation, includes electric lights. Thus a devout Orthodox Jew won't turn on the light on the Sabbath, use a telephone which might kindle a switchboard light, ride an elevator with a mechanism might produce a spark, or drive a vehicle that runs on combustion.

Nor may he ask others to do such things for him, since indirect violations are considered equally sinful.

So institute researchers have come up with a doctor's stethoscope — a lamp-like device for examining ears — that works by turning off electricity instead of turning it on. They have devised a clock that checks-in Sabbath workers without using electricity. And they have made a lamp encased in metal slats, which can be turned on before the Sabbath begins at dusk Friday and regulated for the next 24 hours by opening or closing the slats.

The institute has assumed even greater prestige since the May 17 election, because the religious parties are a key part of the government coalition forged by new Prime Minister Menahem Begin.

One of its early acts was to appoint a committee to re-examine the permits handed out liberally by the previous leadership to allow factories to operate on the Sabbath.

Anti-smut law called toughest

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The city council has passed an anti-smut law that supporters say is the toughest in the nation, culminating a seven-month campaign that at one point saw councilmen raiding adult bookstores with a sledgehammer.

Backers of the measure say it will withstand any court challenge, but civil liberties lawyers contend it is unconstitutional.

The council passed the measure 15-2 Thursday, and Mayor Frank Rizzo said he would sign it into law today. As pornography foes celebrated in Philadelphia, the Michigan Supreme Court on Thursday threw out all local laws against obscenity. That left a weak state measure the high court already has said cannot be enforced.

The Philadelphia ordinance bans movies, shows, books and magazines that show actual or simulated sex acts, genitalia or bare female breasts unless the material has "serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value."

It also bans operation of massage parlors or model studios run "for the purpose of lewdness, assignation or prostitution." Also outlawed is the sale of "girlie magazines" at newsstands, drug stores and other places to which minors have access.

Senate sucks life from energy bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic leaders plan to give President Carter's ailing energy program some intensive care after a week in which a rebellious Senate nearly finished the job of killing it.

Administration allies on Capitol Hill, frantically searching for new ways to keep the plan alive, are pinning their hopes this week on what is sometimes called the third house of Congress—a House-Senate conference committee—to pull at least part of the plan through.

But few expect the final result to be anything like what President Carter envisioned when he asked Congress last April 20 to join him in a battle against an energy crisis he termed "the moral equivalent of war."

Conference committees are named whenever bills on the same subject pass the House and Senate in different forms. The committees, made up of an equal number of members from each House, reconcile the differences and produce a compromise bill.

Senate Democratic leaders have devised these two strategies, both involving conference committees, to try to salvage some of the natural gas pricing and tax portions of the President's plan.

Police report

In September the Pampa Police Department responded to 1,278 calls and drove 18,450 miles patrolling the city.

There were 443 tickets written for moving violations, 31 warning tickets, 26 parking tickets (not counting overtime violations), 139 jail arrests, and 36 accidents investigated.

Because of illnesses, vacations and training leaves, the department worked the month with the equivalent of three men short on the force.

An accident at 9:30 a.m. Saturday in the 2400 block of Rosewood involved a moving car and a parked car. No injuries were reported.

A set of side mirrors were reported missing Saturday from a pickup parked on the new car lot of Culberson-Stowers Motor Co. The time and date of the theft is not known. Estimated value is $35.

A non-injury accident that occurred at 3:15 p.m. Friday in the 600 block of North Christy involved two moving vehicles and a parked car.

A caller reported that a piece of concrete had been thrown through the windshield of a vehicle parked in the 300 block of West Decatur on Friday night.

Jerry Edward King, 34, of 339 Miami Street was treated and released at Highland General Hospital after sustaining injuries in an accident that occurred at 7:50 p.m. Friday at the intersection of Hobart and Harvester Streets.

A 1977 Ford driven by King was in collision with a 1974 Pontiac operated by Curtis Harold Johnston, 34, of 1113 Sirroco.

King was taken by private conveyance to the hospital.

Four 17-year-olds from Lubbock were taken into custody at 7:51 p.m. Friday. The driver of the car the four were riding in was charged with possession of marijuana under four ounces and two traffic violations.

Two of the passengers were charged with public intoxication, possession of marijuana under four ounces, and the other youth was charged with possession of marijuana under four ounces and public intoxication.

An employee at Allsup's Convenience Store, Starkweather and Foster, reported that on Sept. 15, a white male reportedly cashed a $510.63 payroll check issued by an Arlington, Tex., company.

Payment on the check was stopped after it allegedly was reported to the company as missing and another check was issued. Officers are investigating.

An accident that occurred at 10:05 a.m. Friday at West Brown and Hobart resulted in no injuries.

Fed sits on fuel overcharges

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Federal energy files show dozens of cases where $12 million in fuel overcharges were identified during a probe after the 1973 Arab oil embargo. But officials acknowledge they have yet to mount a single prosecution against suspect firms.

In a copyright story Sunday, the St. Petersburg Times traces a 2½ year federal probe into the fuel oil dealings of a Houston, Tex. firm, Saber Petroleum Co., and its agent, oil broker Lawrence C. McBride.

More than 18 months ago energy officials prepared but never issued a violation notice accusing the firm of illegally inflating fuel prices by $5.6 million to customers, including electric utilities in Pittsburgh and Chicago, the newspaper says. The utilities automatically pass the charges along to their customers. Other dealings listed were with companies in New York and Washington, D.C.

The Federal Energy Administration inquiry began in 1975. The bulk of it was completed by early 1976. But energy officials won't say why the violation notice wasn't issued. An FEA spokesman in Dallas only told the Times that the case is still under investigation.

The Times says part of the reason for the delay in recovering alleged overcharges appears to be a parallel and complex investigation of McBride, a wealthy oil broker who shared hefty profits with Saber. McBride is under audit by the Internal Revenue Service and has a criminal record including a still-pending murder charge.

The following is the Times account:

Saber was named in a January 1976 "notice of probable violation" issued by the FEA regional office in Dallas. Investigators concluded there was "reason to believe that Sabrecharges by Safuel oil and jet turbine fuel) resulted in overcharges by Saber of at least $5,609,097 over the period Nov. 1, 1973, through Jan. 31, 1975, in violation of FEA's price regulations."

Saber officials deny any wrongdoing and say their transactions were above board. Saber's attorneys have challenged the findings in letter exchanges with the agency.

The so-called "daisy-chain" investigations focused on oil brokers who side-stepped FEA regulations by transferring ownership on paper through a series of companies to illegally inflate prices.

Emergency petroleum pricing regulations froze fuel prices and profit margins at pre-embargo levels and allowed fuel dealers and oil companies to pass along to customers only dollar-for-dollar increases in product costs.

Among the alleged victims of Saber's overpricing are:

- Duquesne Light Co., which serves one-half million customers in the Pittsburgh area, calculated a refundable overcharge of $3,187,509.
- Commonwealth Edison, which purchased a total of 17-million gallons of jet turbine fuel from Saber, a $919,063 overcharge.
- West Penn Power Co., which purchased almost 500,000 gallons of fuel from Saber in 1974, a $117,185 overcharge.
- Wellon Oil Co. of New York, which bought more than 1-million gallons of fuel from Saber in late 1973, a $203,354 overcharge.
- Potomac Electric Power Co., which serves the Washington, D.C. area, an $8,937 overcharge.

Florida Power Corp. of St. Petersburg also was identified as a likely victim of alleged daisy-chain schemes. In late 1975, the FEA drafted, but never issued, a violation notice accusing the company's Texas-based suppliers of overcharging the utility and other customers by $8.5 million.

McBride, 52, operates McBride Oil Co. and the rest of his businesses out of homes he maintains in Houston and on Long Island, N.Y.

He labels grossly inaccurate an FEA memo that reads: "McBride's personal income during 1974 is reported at $7 million." McBride said he made less than $1 million in any of the past four years.

FEA officials have been cautious in their probe of McBride, whose criminal record includes a dismissed rape charge, petty theft conviction in Dallas, various worthless check convictions and a pending murder charge from For Bend County in the shooting death four years ago of an oil field worker.

In fall 1976, the FEA focused on fuel sales by Saber and McBride to Commonwealth Edison. One federal document said it had "potential criminal violations and should be investigated accordingly."

Soon afterwards, however, the FEA concluded that the company may have been overcharged but said the investigation produced no evidence of criminal intent and recommended dropping the matter.

Congressional investigators were highly critical.

Staff investigators for a House Commerce Subcommittee issued a memorandum saying neither McBride nor any other principal had been interviewed by FEA officials who "literally expressed fear" of McBride because of his criminal record.

Although the FEA decided that Saber sales to Commonwealth did not constitute "willful" and therefore criminal violations of pricing regulations, the agency has not officially proceeded with its noncriminal case which centers on the recovery of the $5.6 million.

In the sale of jet fuel to Chicago's Commonwealth Edison, the giant utility paid $6.8 million on a single-purchase contract for fuel that initially sold for $3.1 million. A refinery sold title of the fuel for 18 cents a gallon and in December 1973 Commonwealth contracted to buy it at 40 cents a gallon from Saber after it had passed through middlemen.

In the Duquesne Light Co. sale, the per gallon price of fuel jumped 22 cents from refinery to utility after passing through at least two middle men.

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — In a week of high and low drama, theatrics and emotion, jurors heard the final eyewitness account of a night of terror on a summer evening in 1976.

For a young, blonde, co-ed, a state witness, it was a week of tears and trauma and revelation of a personal tragedy.

To some extent, the seventh week of testimony was the most surprising and sensational in the capital murder trial of Fort Worth millionaire Cullen Davis, 44.

And it ended Saturday after a prosecutor read a hearsay statement by a security guard who concluded a report to his office by saying: "Cullen Davis was the man who did the shootings."

Two died and two fell gravely wounded during the shooting spree at the hilltop mansion Davis built as the "dream home" for his free-spirited wife, Priscilla, 36.

Prosecutors contend the jetset blonde Mrs. Davis and her live-in lover, Stan Farr, 30, were the only intended targets for death of the "man in black."

But the defendant's 12-year-old stepdaughter, Andrea, alone in the mansion the night of Aug. 2, 1976, was the first victim.

Then, according to testimony, the gunman ambushed Priscilla and Stan when they returned

"I do it all out of love," Mrs. Eleanor McNamara, Pampa, responded as she received Catholic Woman of the Year last week from Monsignor Francis Smyer, pastor of St. Mary's Church in Amarillo.

She learned the love from her mother, she said.

Mrs. McNamara received the honor at a convention in Burger and "I was more than surprised and a little speechless, too."

She said she feels "rather humble" about her award.

The Woman of the Year is chosen from nominees representing the 50 affiliates in the Diocese of Amarillo, which extends from the Top of Texas as far south as Lubbock. The selection is made on the basis of an individual's contributions in the areas of church, family, community and international affairs.

Mrs. McNamara was presented with a white orchid corsage and will receive an engraved plaque.

She has served as the sacristan of St. Vincent's church, helping with the altar and taking care of the linens. She started 50 years ago with her mother, and after her mother passed away, she took over the job.

Mrs. McNamara also has time for volunteer work with the Red Cross, which she has been doing for 20 years. In past years she has worked with community drives such as cancer and polio.

Her newest project is in keeping with St. Vincent's 50th anniversary celebration. Her workroom is filled with finished projects and ones she is just starting.

Eleanor McNamara believes in keeping busy. "If you're busy, time goes by and you're more content."

Keeping busy is a hobby to Mrs. McNamara. "You name it, I do it," she said.

She enjoys cooking, crocheting and making quilts, afghans and pillows which decorate the house at 1012 N. Somerville.

Mrs. McNamara, a cheerful woman, has been a resident of Pampa for 50 years. When her father, A.B. Zahn, came to Pampa in 1926 to open his own business, the family followed from Oklahoma.

The Woman of the Year met her late husband at a church service. Her parents lived in one side of an apartment and her husband - to - be, Andrew D. McNamara, had a brother living on the other side of the apartment. They both drove up to their respective apartments, and formally met there. After a 6 month courtship, Eleanor and Andrew were married.

The McNamaras have five children and Mrs. McNamara is the proud grandmother of 17 grandchildren.

Confesses to stealing art

By ROBERT REID
Associated Press Writer

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — A 40-year-old widower, who told investigators, "I must destroy what other men cherish," has confessed to vandalizing nearly a dozen art treasures in West German galleries, police said Saturday.

Hans-Joachim Bohlmann, described by police as emotionally disturbed, was arrested Friday night at his apartment in Hamburg, where the first attacks took place seven months ago.

The arrest came eight hours after acid was sprayed on four paintings, two of them by the Dutch master Rembrandt, in a gallery in Kassel, 150 miles south of Hamburg.

Police said Bohlmann, who is unemployed, suffered from "pent-up destroying art treasures, the Kassel attack, visitors to the gallery in the Wilhelmshohe Palace told police they had seen a suspicious man near the paintings just before the damage was discovered.

The description fit that of a man seen near a portrait by the Flemish master, Peter Paul Rubens, that was heavily damaged Aug. 24 by an acid-spraying assailant at the Dueseldorf Museum of Fine Art.

According to authorities, Kassel police screened hotel records and found that Bohlmann had booked a room for a week but checked out prematurely soon after the attack.

The description of Bohlmann given by hotel employees matched that provided by the gallery visitors, police said.

Officers had theorized that the assailant used a syringe concealed in the palm of his hand to spray sulfuric acid on the paintings.

According to police, Bohlmann said he began his vandalizing spree in March soon after his wife was fatally injured in a traffic accident.

His first targets were "The Golden Fish," by Swiss-born impressionist Paul Klee and two other paintings on display at Hamburg's Kunsthalle Museum. Museum officials said the Klee painting was valued at $200,000.

The attacks prompted several West German galleries to close until they could secure their valuable works behind glass shields. Other museums initiated tight security, including searches of camera cases and handbags.

The Lewis and Clark expedition returned to St. Louis, Mo., in 1806.

Paige pupils return to Giddings

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Pupils from the tiny Paige Independent School District can continue going to Giddings schools as Paige pupils have done for 27 years, the State Board of Education said Saturday.

The board refused to overturn Commissioner M.L. Brockette's approval of a one-year contract for the 32 Paige pupils to remain in Giddings schools.

Last year, the Bastrop school board attempted to annex the Paige district which lies wholly in Bastrop County, although the pupils have been going to Giddings. An appeal of the action is pending before the Texas Supreme Court.

"This smacks of blackmail," board member W. W. Carter, Amarillo, told the Bastrop board attorney, J.C. Hinsley. "You are not going to educate these children unless they withdraw their legal suit (against the annexation).

"Those people at Paige have been informed not to spend any money or they will be held individually liable," Hinsley said.

Hinsley said the Bastrop school board had every right under law to annex the Paige pupils. Furthermore, he said, state law does not allow whole districts to be placed under contract.

Al Snyder, Giddings attorney, said their argument was that the Bastrop board action was illegal. "They merely posted notice of a meeting one day and held it the next when they tried the annexation," he said. "We contend this does not comply with the Texas Open Meetings Act and therefore they had no jurisdiction."

Don Hensley, attorney for the Texas Education Agency, said the state agency was not taking sides in the Central Texas controversy. "Our position is that the case is still pending before the court," he said. "The children have been educated for 27 years in Giddings district, we felt they should stay there as they are until the courts make a decision."

The board voted unanimously to grant probationary accreditation to the Valley View Common School District of Hidalgo County with the provision that the school's status be reviewed at the end of the school year. The school's accreditation was lifted in June 1975 after inspectors reported numerous discrepancies of state education standards, including inadequate financial support.

Texas couple indicted

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A couple from Texas has been indicted in the August shooting death of Chicago steel executive Nigel Harlan, whose body was found in a pasture south of Birmingham nearly one month after he disappeared after leaving a nightclub with a woman.

A Jefferson County grand jury acted within an hour after the completion of a preliminary hearing Friday for Debra Ann Andrus, 21, and Tony Randolph Nolen, 25, both of Kountze, Texas.

Mrs. Andrus, who testified for the state and blamed the shooting on Nolen, was indicted on a first-degree murder charge. Nolen was charged with capital robbery-murder, which could lead to the death penalty.

Mrs. Andrus said from the stand earlier that she turned state's witness so she could receive a lighter sentence.

Both were held without bond. A trial date was not set.

Harlan was in Birmingham for a series of business meetings and went to a downtown nightclub with two associates. He left the lounge with a woman early on the morning of Aug. 18. The associates reported him missing the next day.

His decomposed body, identified through dental records, was found Sept. 10.

Accreditation also was granted the Marietta Independent School District, Cass County, one a one-year probationary basis. The district, which consists of eight elementary grades, became unaccredited at its own request in 1974. The new accreditation covers only the first six grades with the top two grades being transferred to a neighboring district.

Fed nutrition hints 'no good'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government spends $70 million a year to give Americans hints on nutrition. The product, say two new studies, is unimpressive and amateurish and misses its target.

The government's nutrition publications are described as too simplistic in some cases and too complicated in others.

Two booklets are atrocious, so bad they could be replaced by a "good-looking yet informative poster," say Madison Avenue advertising experts.

The studies, by Virginia Polytechnic Institute and the Library of Congress, say 11 federal agencies operate about 30 nutrition education programs. Publications, which account for a significant part of the $70 million cost, are among thousands of materials issued every year by the United States — one of the world's busiest printers.

One Library of Congress-VPI study found that pamphlets on infant feeding fail to address current concerns about breast feeding and new products.

In addition, federal agencies trying to spread the word about better nutrition rely on the printed word to reach consumers who do little reading, study officials say.

They also say the government distributes upper-high school and college-level pamphlets to the poorly educated.

The reports, along with comments by the advertising executives, were released Thursday by Rep. Frederick Richmond, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Agriculture Committee's consumer subcommittee.

At a hearing on the government's role in nutrition education, Assistant Agriculture Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman joined in Richmond's criticism of the federal agencies — some of which she heads.

She said that for the first time ever, the Agriculture Department plans to spend $1 million in 1978 to find the best ways to convey effective nutritional messages.

She also criticized food companies' advertising, which often is aimed at children.

"Conspicuously absent from this media barrage are clear, helpful messages that can assist the consumer in the marketplace and that help shape positive attitudes in children toward basic, nutritious foods," she said.

Ledbetter begins drive for state treasurer office

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — State treasurer candidate Harry Ledbetter says he will raise $40,000 by the end of the year for his campaign, and $250,000 before the May primary.

Ledbetter changed his news conference from 10 a.m. today to 3:30 p.m. Thursday after he learned Warren G. Harding would be sworn in as state treasurer at 9:30 a.m. today.

Harding was appointed Wednesday by Gov. Dolph Briscoe to succeed Jesse James, who died last week.

Ledbetter said he will base his campaign on trust, leadership and competency. He stressed his nine years in state government as an aide of Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Comptroller Bob Bullock and with the Legislative Budget Board.

In answer to a question, he said Harding's 28 years as Dallas County treasurer does not necessarily qualify him to be state treasurer. The duties are different, he said.

Ledbetter said James left too much of the state's $2 billion in demand deposits — between $300 million and $400 million. That money could be earning interest for the state, and every dollar earned is a dollar the taxpayers don't have to pay, he said.

On the other hand, he said there is a need for liquidity. He said he did not yet know how much money should be left in demand accounts.

Benedict Arnold escaped to the British in 1780 after his attempt to betray West Point.

Warn of Soviet ships

ATLANTA (AP) — Soviet warships along the U.S. Atlantic coast are close enough to destroy cities in a nuclear war, say high U.S. Navy officers.

Vice Adm. William Read, commander of Atlantic Fleet Naval Surface Forces, said increasing numbers of Soviet submarines, destroyers and cruisers in the Gulf of Mexico and off the East Coast is an indication of the growing size, power and aggressiveness of the Soviet navy.

In July, Read said, the Soviet navy showed up in the Gulf with a task force of various types of ships armed with missiles and other weapons.

"It used to be a rare sight to see Russian warships on the high seas," he said. "Now we see them in every part of the globe — well armed and in large numbers."

Read and other naval officers spoke at the Southeast Seapower Symposium here Thursday.

The United States has 470 warships and 577 merchant ships, said retired Rear Adm. George H. Miller. The Soviets, he said, have 1,919 warships and 2,420 merchant vessels.

The United States would be at a grave disadvantage in a long war with the Soviet Union, he said, because the Soviet Union "is the side with the ships, the side with the ability to keep those ships afloat and moving, the side with the persistence to carry on, that usually wins the protracted struggle."

The U.S. merchant fleet can carry only 6 per cent of U.S. seaborne commerce, Miller said, and some U.S. cargo is carried by Soviet ships.

Gigantic sail may move offshore rigs

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — An oilman-sailor vows to continue with his efforts to install sails the size of a football field on a portable offshore oil drilling rig.

The first effort last month was unsuccessful, but Robert Palmer, board chairman of Rowan Companies Inc. of Houston, said Thursday he was not dismayed.

"It's back to the old drawing board," Palmer said briskly. "We'll get it right in a couple of months."

Palmer, a sailing buff, started offshore oilmen around the world with his plan to put sails as big as a football field on a jackup-type drilling rig to give it a bit more speed.

Though the idea of it seemed weird, the cold mathematics were compelling.

With a 20-mile wind from the rear, the sails would add eight-tenths of one mile an hour to a jackup's 115-day voyage from here to the Arabian Gulf. It may not sound like much, but it could save $120,000 in tugboat time.

It takes a 17,000-horsepower seagoing tug that looks as big as a navy destroyer to pull the awkward rigs. They hire out at about $500 an hour.

Palmer put $300,000 on the project and chose the $22 million Rowan Juneau to make sail history.

The Juneau, which carries a crew of 84, has a flatbottomed hull shaped like a triangle with a 410-foot-long leg at each corner.

In coastal waters, it can put its feet down on the bottom, then jack itself up on its legs to stand 45 or 50 feet above the waves while it drills for oil.

On trips the legs are raised straight up.

Colin E. Ratsey, president of a New York City sailmaking company, brought a team here to install the unique sail system.

It included seven-section steel masts, 197 feet from pin to pin, to go on each side of the front leg. Hydraulic cylinders would keep the mast taut with 50 tons of stretch tension.

Gout is an arthritic disease that most often affects the joints of the feet, especially the big toe.

At wit's end

By ERMA BOMBECK
As a rule my horoscope isn't enough to get choked up about. Oh, I've had a few mad moments. Once I was told a tall stranger would walk into my life bringing me untold joy, and sure enough, my washer repairman made it on Tuesday like he said he would.

But usually, I can count on my stars petering out early, my work hampered, financial affairs unstable, and my bird will die around the 18th of the month.

You can imagine my amazement when I picked up my horoscope the other day to discover that "a strong physical desire surprises you. Daily routine can be neglected for an exciting pursuit."

For me an exciting pursuit is catching up with the Good Humor man in front of my house. "I can't remember when I last had a strong physical desire," I said aloud.

"It was when you threw up at the fair," said my husband.

"Not THAT kind of a physical desire."

"What kind of physical desire are YOU talking about?"

"The kind that occurs when you go to a Tupperware party and the only ones who show up are you and Robert Redford."

My husband left for work and I reread the prediction again. No sense neglecting my daily routine for my exciting pursuit. I'd get everything out of the way and be ready for it. My neighbor, Helen, came over. "What's the house so cleaned up for at 10 in the morning?"

"I'm clearing the deck for a strong physical desire that is going to surprise me."

"It'll surprise ALL of us. Got any milk for the coffee?"

"No, and I'm not going to the store after it and take a chance on missing whatever is going to happen."

All day I sat in my color-coordinated separates in my lemon-scented house waiting for my exciting pursuit.

I know I had only dozed for a few minutes when Helen knocked on the door. "Did you see him?"

"See who?"

Plainsmen manhandle Pampa

By TOM KENSLE
Pampa News Sports Editor

Lubbock Monterey's Ron Reeves diminished any doubts of his being the best quarterback in the region with a versatile performance which left the Pampa audience spellbound.

The 6-1, 205-pound senior did everything but sing the National Anthem in the Plainsmen 41-14 non-district victory over Pampa in Harvester Field Friday night.

Reeves ran for 146 yards, threw for 30 more, scored three touchdowns, kicked two field goals, and converted on all five extra points.

He also punted twice for a 36-yard average.

It didn't take long for Reeves to make his presence known to the less-than-capacity Pampa crowd. On the third Plainsmen offensive play, he bolted off right tackle and ran untouched for a 49-yard score. Two Harvester defenders appeared to have the angle on Reeves, but an extra burst of speed enabled him to reach paydirt.

Monterey's next possession ended when Gary Free recovered a Jeff Harp fumble, but the Plainsmen held and Pampa's David Green was forced to punt.

Green got a clean snap, but Neal Thomas broke through and blocked the kick, giving Monterey first down on the Harvester 22.

Three plays later, Reeves connected on his first field goal, a 36 yarder, for a 10-0 first-period lead.

Doug Smith's 10-yard run gave the Harvesters their initial first down on the ensuing possession, but a motion penalty three plays later stalled the drive.

After a 40-yard punt by Green, Reeves led the Plainsmen on a march from midfield which Mike Wooten completed with a three-yard score. Reeves tossed 15-yard passes to Trai

Forrester and Chuck Perry in the drive for his only airway yardage of the evening.

Rick Dougherty took over for Steve Young at quarterback and promptly gained 15 yards on an option play. Then the junior signal caller lobbed a screen pass to tight end Green who rambled 53 yards to the Plainsmen 12. Five plays later, Dougherty dived in from the one.

But Pampa was held to only three first downs the rest of the way, and Monterey scored on three occasions around a Reeves 37-yard field goal.

Pampa finally got back on the board when Dougherty found split end Gary Dumas behind Monterey defenders for a 21-yard strike with 1:02 remaining.

Green ran in the conversion on an end-around for the final 41-14 verdict.

With first-half injuries sidelining Rudy Roland (twisted ankle) and Todd Chumbley (shoulder), Dougherty was forced to carry the brunt of the Harvester running attack.

He responded with 50 yards on 18 carries, despite being sacked five times. Smith, only a sophomore, added 36 tough yards in a supporting role.

Aside from the screen pass to Green, Dougherty completed three passes to Dumas for 40 yards, and one to Ricky Buntun for eight. He had two aeriels intercepted.

Pampa Coach John Welborn was satisfied with the experiments of Steve Young at defensive back and Bobby Taylor as a third linebacker, and said he plans to use both in their new positions against Caprock Friday night in the district opener at Bivens Stadium.

Breaking for daylight

Quarterback Rick Dougherty lunges forward to gain some of the 50 yards rushing he accumulated against Monterey Friday night. Dougherty also passed for 101 yards in the Harvesters' 41-14 loss to the Plainsmen.

Lyle bails out Yanks; series decided today

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Rubber-armed Sparky Lyle, the last dependable pitcher in New York's bullpen, bailed the Yankees out with 5 1/3 innings of shutout relief and saved Saturday's 6-4 victory over Kansas City that tied the seessaw American League pennant playoff at two games each.

The fifth and deciding game will be played Sunday night, with the winner advancing to the 1977 World Series against the National League champion beginning Tuesday night.

Lyle permitted just two hits and shut off a Royal comeback that nearly wiped out an early 4-0 Yankee lead. It was a great clutch performance by Lyle, who led the American League by pitching in 72 games and had a piece of 39 of New York's 100 regular-season victories with 13 wins and 26 saves.

Using his slider and some tight New York defense, the left-handed reliever kept the Yankees' championship hopes alive in this do-or-die game. He came on with runners at first and third in the fourth inning and retired George Brett on a rally-ending line drive that left Kansas City's comeback one run short.

Then he kept the Royals away for the rest of this windy, chilly afternoon.

The margin of victory in this tense, tight game was an unearned run the Yankees scored in the fourth when Kansas City committed two errors.

Willie Randolph, whose second-inning single touched off a two-out, two-run Yankee rally, led off with a grounder to shortstop Freddie Patek, who nearly drove the Yankees to distraction with a single, double and triple, threw wide to first and Randolph was safe.

Bucky Dent sacrificed and then Mickey Rivers popped to first, but John Mayberry dropped the ball for an error. Given another swing, Rivers advanced Randolph with a grounder to short and Graig Nettles singled the runner home.

That unearned run was all that was left of the Yankee lead when Lyle arrived, with the Yanks ahead 5-4.

He protected the lead tenaciously, weaving his way through a lineup that was trying to nail down Kansas City's first pennant ever.

The Yankees, seeking to avoid elimination, came out fast against Royals starter Larry Gura, who had four hits, opened the game with a first-pitch double to right-center field. He moved to third on an infield hit by Nettles and scored on Thurman Munson's forceout grounder.

New York added two more runs in the second on Randolph's single, an RBI double by Dent and Rivers' single through the middle.

When Gura surrendered a leadoff double to Munson in the fourth and then walked Reggie Jackson, Marty Pattin relieved for the Royals. Lou Piniella laced a perfect hit-and-run single to right field, making it 4-0, and it looked like the Yankees were on their way to a slaughter.

It did not, however, turn out that way.

Frazier to Cavs

NEW YORK (AP) — Walt Frazier, whose lifestyle and flair fit the city he played in for the past 10 years, will be leaving the Big Apple for mid-America and the Cleveland Cavaliers.

The New York Knicks announced Saturday that they had reached a verbal agreement with the Cavaliers, who get Frazier as the compensation for losing free-agent guard Jim Clemons to the Knicks.

The National Basketball Association club said they also had reached a verbal agreement with Larry Fleisher, Clemons' agent, on a multi-year contract, reportedly for three years at $250,000 a year. Clemons is expected to report to the team on Monday, when the final contract arrangements will be completed, the Knicks said.

In Cleveland, the Cavaliers announced they had traded the negotiation rights for the 28-year-old Clemons to the Knicks for the negotiation rights for Frazier, a 6-foot-5 guard. The Knicks reportedly would share some of the burden of Frazier's $450,000 annual salary.

In on the negotiations here were Nick Mileti, owner of the Cavaliers, and Bill Fitch, coach and general manager of the team. The Knicks were represented by President Mike Burke and General Manager

Aussie wins golf world title

VIRGINIA WATER, England (AP) — Ray Floyd scooped at the suggestion an anonymous threat against his safety could have affected his play in a 5 and 3 loss to Australian Graham Marsh in Saturday's 36-hole final of the World Match Play Golf Championship.

"I really didn't bother me," the bulky Floyd said after a half-dozen uniformed police had followed him through driving rain for two wearying trips over the 6,900-yard, par 73 "Burma Road" course at the Wentworth Golf Club.

"Naturally enough, it upset my wife quite badly," said Floyd, who missed a chance at his first non-American title. "But I think a situation like this is not worthy of exposure."

"It was just someone looking for publicity. It had nothing to do with the way I played."

The threat, of an unspecified nature, came by an anonymous telephone call while Floyd was beating Severiano Ballesteros of Spain 2 and 1 in Friday's semifinals of Europe's golf richest event.

Saturday, with the uniforms in evidence and an unknown number of off-duty police serving as marshals, Floyd never led against the unrelenting Marsh, spectacular but rock-steady.

"He was very persistent," said Floyd, a former winner of both the Masters and PGA and holder of two current U.S. titles. "He was down the middle and on the green. When he needed a putt, he made it."

"I knew right away I was going to win no holes with pars.

And I just couldn't muster a putt."

Marsh, 33, a rookie on the American tour but the holder of more than two dozen international titles, claimed $52,500 from the total purse of $225,000. Floyd won $31,500.

Ballesteros collected $21,000 after defeating an uninspired Hale Irwin 3 and 2 in the 36-hole match for third place. Irwin won $15,750 after watching in amazement as Ballesteros one-putted 13 times in 34 holes, including a 90-footer for birdie on the third hole of the afternoon round.

Marsh, who won the Heritage Classic and more than $100,000 this year in his first year on the American tour. "This was one of my great ambitions. Outside of the (British) Open, this is the most important tournament in this country."

Miami convinces McLean, 28-7 David Hill calls tour "boring, Back-breaking"

McLEAN — Miami scored a touchdown in every quarter to beat McLean, 28-7, in an important district 1-B game here Friday night.

With the win, the Warriors move into a tie with Groom for second place with a 4-1 record.

Rugged fullback Randy Stone tallied Miami's first two scores on short plunges. The 215-pound sophomore totaled 36 yards on 12 carries in the contest.

McLean came out of intermission fired up and quarterback Tommy Eck completed a long drive with a one-yard sneak.

But the Warrior defense led by tackles J.D. Ferrell (19 tackles) and Jim Bob Burgoon (18 tackles) and linebackers Phillip McCullough and Curtis Cowan stymied the Tigers the rest of the way.

Curtis Cowan sprinted 35 yards and Wayne Washburn grabbed a 35-yard pass from David Haws for the second-half Warrior scores.

Barton Bean led all rushers with 72 yards on 17 carries, while Lonnie Gilliland and Cowan added 70 and 63 yards respectively. Gilliland's yardage included a 43 yard quarterback sprint-out.

Sammy Haynes picked up 60 yards on 10 totes for the Tigers. McLean's record falls to 3-3, including 2-2 in district play.

Mothers, don't be bamboozled by all the glamour, glitter and gold that seems to surround the pro golf tour. Be smart. Send your kid to college for a degree to be a doctor or a lawyer.

That is the advice of Dave Hill, the game's outspoken rugged individualist who is wondering what became of that first million dollars of tournament prize money.

"I have two sons, David, 17, and Robert, 15, and I think I'd break their legs if they got serious about following the profession of the old man," says the wiry, dark-haired firebrand.

"Except for four or five guys — Jack Nicklaus, Tom Watson, Gary Player and a couple of others — it's a terrible way of making a living.

"It's boring. It's back-breaking work. It destroys family life. I have been on the tour 10 years. I have what most people would call moderate success. I have grossed more than $1 million in earnings and generally make better than $100,000 a year.

"But I find myself struggling to make expenses. If I follow the tour on a regular scale, play 30 tournaments, say, it costs me $40,000.

"That's the reason I've decided to cut my schedule to 15 or 20 events. I am not socking away that much dough. I am becoming a slave of the tour ... grind, grind, grind."

Winner of 13 tour tournaments, member of two Ryder Cup teams and 1969 Vardon Trophy winner for the lowest scoring average, Hill sat out the $300,000 Westchester Classic this weekend.

He used the break to promote his controversial book, "Teed Off," which not only is enjoying good sales and rave reviews but is touching some tender nerves in the golf establishment.

Among other things, he contends the $9 million pro tour is run "like a kid's lemonade stand." Superstars such as Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer are "given preferential treatment; efforts are made to stereotype competitors by bleeding them of any individuality; the sport is tainted by occasional, unadmitted cheating, and rigid rules have promoted wholesale deception and lying.

Wheeler rolls over Texline

TEXLINE — No. 1 ranked Wheeler scored all 28 points in the first half to stifle Texline 28-0 here Friday night.

Marvin Grimes ran for 175 yards on 22 carries and scored two touchdowns to pace the Mustangs.

While Wheeler scored on all four first-half possessions, the Mustang defense held Texline to only two first downs in the two quarters.

Dell Ford and Bobby Guthrie tallied the other Wheeler scores on one-yard plunges.

Playing mostly with second-teamers, the Mustangs lost two scoring opportunities in the second half when Texline recovered fumbles inside the five-yard line.

Wheeler coach Preston Smith felt the Mustangs were mentally drained after last week's spirited 27-7 over Groom.

"This game was a lackadaisical effort like I expected. We didn't try to get the kids up for this game after last week," Smith said.

Duane Childress aided the Wheeler effort with 72 yards on eight carries, while Dell Ford and Benny Baker gained 56 and 42 yards respectively.

Myron Jolly led Mustang pass receivers with three catches for 47 yards.

Wheeler will host Higgins in the homecoming game this Friday.

Groom bounces Booker

GROOM — Kent Reed ran for three scores and Jigger Britten caught two touchdown passes as Groom blasted Booker, 40-7, here Friday night.

Britten got clear on the third offensive play of the game and nabbed the 26-yard scoring pass from Neil Wieberg on a halfback option play. Kris Black hit Britten with a 60-yard bomb in the second quarter.

Reed ran in from the four for the second Tiger touchdown, and scampered home on runs of 39 and 34 yards for the two Groom second-half scores. The senior fullback gained 209 yards on 21 carries for the evening.

Halfback John Krizan added 172 yards on 23 totes including a five-yard touchdown in the second stanza.

"Krizan got most of his yardage in the first half when Booker keyed on stopping Reed inside," said Groom coach Russell Roberts. "But in the second half they concentrated on the outside, and Krizan's blocking was superb for Reed."

The game averaged last year's 29-20 upset win of Booker over the Tigers.

"This was a chance to prove ourselves again," Roberts said. "After the Wheeler game a lot of people expected us to fold our tent, but we're going to stand tall."

Groom, which stands at 5-1 and 4-1 in district 1-B play, has an open date this Friday.

Tigers win

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Running back Charles Alexander scored three touchdowns, two in the fourth quarter, to power Louisiana State's 28-15 comeback victory Saturday over Vanderbilt in Southeastern Conference football.

The victory was 10th-ranked LSU's third straight, giving it a 3-1 record this season and a 2-0 mark in the conference. Vanderbilt is 1-4 and 0-2.

LSU trailed 15-7 after three quarters but tied the game when split end Mike Quintela scored on a three-yard run around right end.

Bucks drop sixth straight

WHITE DEER — Stratford blitzed White Deer for four second-quarter touchdowns enroute to a 47-0 district 1-A victory over the winless Bucks here Friday night.

Stratford scored the four touchdowns eight minutes beginning with a 24-yard run by Craig Bell Taylor Johnson scored on a 10-yard keeper, and tossed touchdown passes of 48 and 28 yards to Donovan Ferguson to give the Elks a 28-0 halftime lead.

Runs by Jim McClellan and Ferguson and a 27-yard pass from Johnson to Max Plunk completed Stratford scoring.

A rugged Elk defensive unit held the Bucks to only four first downs and 72 yards total offense.

Charlie Milton accumulated 25 of the 72 White Deer yards on two passes from Shane Grange.

Adding to the White Deer woes were four lost fumbles and an average of only 28 yards on 11 punts which gave the Elks good field position throughout the contest.

White Deer is now 0-6 on the year, and 0-2 in league play. The Bucks will travel to Gruver for a district 1-A battle Friday night.

LEFORS — In what Lefors coach Bob Rapp called "an anti-climatic homecoming," the Pirates battled Higgins to a scoreless tie here Friday night.

The Pirates penetrated to the Higgins 6-yard line in the second quarter, but lost possession on one of four fumbles Higgins held on downs in other Pirate drives to the 14 and 10.

"Turnovers and penalties killed us," said Rapp whose team was forced to punt only once. "Our mind just wasn't on the game. The line wasn't blocking and the kids weren't running their patterns," he said.

The Pirates outgained Higgins 234-96, but completed only one of 16 passes in the contest.

Each team had over 100 yards in penalties.

Lefors Floyd Cotham gained 126 yards on 21 carries to lead all rushers, while Randy Cady added 50 yards on eight totes. Audie Waite paced Higgins ballcarriers with 64 yards on 14 tries.

Both Lefors and Higgins stand at 0-5-1 on the season and 0-4-1 in district 1-B play.

The Pirates have an open date this Friday, and will play at Follett Oct. 21.

While population is increasing, the amount of farmland in the United States is shrinking. This means the acreage available to produce food and fiber for each consumer is declining. Land in farms now totals slightly less than 1,085 billion acres. Population has risen to 215 million. Farmland available per person amounts to 5 acres. Half a century ago, there was an average of more than 10 acres of land in farms for each man, woman and child in the U.S. Thirty years ago it had declined to 8 acres and 15 years ago, 6 1/2 acres. The amount of farmland has shrunk by 106.7 million acres in 20 years. The U.S. Department of Agriculture says, "Only 5 acres stand between the consumer and starvation." Everyone has a vital stake in seeing that agricultural efficiency is maintained and increased.

"THE ELECTRIC SAVINGS MACHINE"

BUYING, BUILDING, REMODELING?

It's time to consider the heat pump. Southwestern Public Service Company can suggest the system that will give you the most for your energy dollar, and come up with some accurate information on installation and operating costs.

The heat pump is the electric savings machine. And usually a machine of such sensitive operation calls for a lot of space and some pretty technical installation procedures. NOT SO WITH THE HEAT PUMP! "Split systems" — most adaptable to homes — consist of an outdoor and indoor section, easily tucked away in a closet, garage, basement or attic. The single package unit looks very similar to a central air-conditioning unit that's placed outdoors. Both systems can be installed in most every home or office that has central air ducts. If you're buying, building or remodeling, it's time you said...

Longhorns prevail, 13-6

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) — Texas' third string quarterback Randy McEachern, a redshirt junior who has never lettered, bounced off the bench to pass second-ranked Oklahoma dizzy Saturday and Earl Campbell supplied the running muscle as the fifth-ranked Longhorns prevailed 13-6 in a bruising joust of the unbeaten.

A tremendous goal line stand in the final four minutes sealed Texas' first victory over the Sooners since 1970.

Tackle Brad Shearer and defensive back Johnnie Johnson tackled Oklahoma quarterback Thomas Lot for no gain on fourth and one at the Texas 5.

Russell Erleben kicked field goals of 64 and 58 yards with his seige gun place-kicking leg.

Texas was stunned in the first period when both first string quarterback Mark McBeth and second string signal caller Jon Aune suffered injuries.

The underdog Longhorns, trailing 3-0 after Oklahoma's Uwe-Von Schamann kicked a 47-yard field goal, appeared doomed with the unheralded McEachern taking the field before the sellout crowd of 72,000 in the Cotton Bowl.

McEachern who had played in only one game, drove Texas into position for Erleben's 64-yard field goal to tie the game 3-3.

Then he whipped the Longhorns on an 80-yard drive sprinkled with bullseye passes and Campbell's thundering runs.

Campbell scored from 24 yards out behind Steve Hall's rushing block as Texas led 10-3 at halftime.

Von Schamann kicked a 33-yard field goal to make it 10-6 in the third period, but Erleben matched it with a 58-yarder in the fourth quarter.

It was Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer's first loss to a Texas team and the first time Texas had defeated the Sooners since 1970.

The game marked the debut of new Texas Coach Freddy Akers in the series. Akers took over for Darrell Royal who retired after 20 years as Longhorn field boss.

Tide over SC

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Alabama halfback Tony Nathan ran for two fourth quarter touchdowns and the Crimson Tide withstood a furious Southern California rally in the final seven minutes to upset the top-ranked Trojans 21-20 in an inter-sectional college football contest Saturday.

Landry doesn't count Cards out

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Now that the St. Louis Cardinals have done their best to bolster the Over-the-Hill Gang of the Washington Redskins, what can they do for the Dallas Cowboys?

If Dallas Coach Tom Landry knows, he's keeping it to himself — at least until his undefeated Cowboys have had a chance to clear another hurdle in their National Football League path Sunday.

Landry, the only head coach in Dallas' 17 NFL seasons, insists the Cardinals are still in the running for a championship in the National Conference East.

And despite St. Louis' 1-2 record, he points to recent history in maintaining that even another loss would not destroy the Cardinals' postseason hopes.

"Pittsburgh proved you're never out of it last year. What'd they lose, the first four out of five?" said Landry, referring to the Steelers' late surge into the 1976 playoff picture.

"A good team, once it gets going, can go a long, long time without losing," he added. "And the Cardinals are a good team."

Whether St. Louis, the NFC East's divisional ruler in 1974 and '75, rates the label described by Landry has been the object of soul-searching within Cardinal ranks.

"We've just got to put the pressure on people earlier," said quarterback Jim Hart, the victim of two costly pass interceptions during last week's 24-14 loss to Washington.

"We can't be playing politics anymore," suggested running back Terry Metcalf. "If we want to do the job against Dallas, we're going to have to go after them from the first quarter."

While St. Louis has struggled to manufacture a total of only three touchdowns, the offense of the Cowboys has blossomed rapidly to produce a league-leading 80 points.

"Imagine the Cardinals losing (Conrad) Dobler and (Dan) Dierdorf," said Landry of Dallas' overhauled offensive line.

"That's about what we were going through. Rayfield Wright got hurt, then Blaine Nye retired."

The Cowboys seem to have overcome their problems, but facets of Sunday's game still make Landry cautious. One is Dallas' 0-3 record in St. Louis since 1973. Another is the Cardinals' plan to return Metcalf, who is playing out his option, to full service.

Metcalf, the NFL's most dangerous runner two years ago, last week rushed for 52 yards on 10 carries, caught two passes for 40 yards and returned four kickoffs against Washington 94 yards.

MODEL AN

These nozzles atomize chemical at the point of injection. They are designed specifically to extend the usefulness of Western chemical pumps. Models DFF, MA, and MT pumps have metering actions which rapidly inject a measured quantity of methanol, then pause before injecting another. It is this rapid injection that allows the atomizing nozzles to function. Atomization is not effective when a small quantity of chemical is dribbled in continuously. For maximum effectiveness of atomizing nozzles, always use Western chemical pumps.

Model ANX is designed to lubricate through a 1" full opening valve.

Model AN is designed for a fixed installation.

On the light side

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Officials at the Memphis Zoological Gardens aren't taking any more monkey business from Big George and his trouble-some gang.

George, a male rhesus monkey, and eight female accomplices are being replaced on Monkey Island by 10 monkeys with calmer personalities.

More over, zoo director Charles Wilson says they'll be deported to a Canadian breeding colony.

The monkeys have escaped numerous times over the years, causing headaches for zoo employees, visitors and nearby human residents.

They have threatened several zoo visitors while on their foraging expeditions off their island. Wilson said "We have to remove the animals that are serious threats to public safety."

DENVER (AP) — Denver-area gardeners have a chance to pick up some free exotic fertilizer courtesy of 200 circus animals.

The show's 30 elephants are the unchallenged production champs, of course, a spokesman for the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus said Thursday. "But the leopards, panthers, pumas, llamas, camels, horses, chimpanzees and others all make substantial contributions."

The spokesman said circus animals produce better fertilizer than farm animals, which subsist primarily on grass or hay.

But with circus animals there's the added input of meat, apples, carrots, and other goodies which yield extra nitrogen, phosphorus, calcium and other minerals," the spokesman said.

A local radio station is providing the bags, and residents are invited to show up Saturday morning and haul away as much manure as they wish.

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — Pennsylvania is in for another cold winter if you can believe the woolly bear caterpillar.

Herb Krone, an 83-year-old retired reporter, has been looking to the woolly bears for 68 years to tell him what kind of winter is coming up.

As any woolly bear aficionado knows, the darker their coats the more severe the winter that follows.

"So what's it like this year? "Every one that I have found is either very dark brown or an inky black from nose to tail tip," said Krone.

"Based on this observation, my best advice would be don't throw away your snow shovels or retire your snow plows."

Although there will be some "miserable periods" of weather and cold, they won't be as bad as the record-breaking weather last winter, said Krone.

Krone's woolly bear forecast was not quite accurate last year — "The little devils fooled me" — but Krone is convinced that was a fluke.

The uniformity of the caterpillars' coats "tells me they've gotten it all together again," said Krone.

Gov. Mandel gets 4 years

BALTIMORE (AP) — Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel was sentenced to four years in prison Friday for his part in a mail fraud-racketeering scheme that broke his once-powerful grip on state politics.

Federal Court Judge Robert L. Taylor told the governor: "I have a great sympathy for you. You have many, many good qualities I think you made some serious mistakes."

"You don't understand how much it troubles me," said the judge.

Mandel, 57, could have received a maximum penalty of 106 years in prison and a $42,000 fine.

Sentencing was still under way for five codefendants — W. Dale Hess, Irv Kovens, Ernest M. Corey Jr., and brothers William A. and Harry W. Rodgers III.

Under state law, Mandel was suspended from carrying out any functions as governor immediately upon sentencing, but he still retains the title.

Before sentence was imposed, Mandel told the judge that he had spent over half his life in public service but "now my whole life is in disarray."

"I'm insolvent from the point of view of visible assets," Mandel said. "But I'm not insolvent because I have my family."

Blair Lee, who had been named acting governor earlier this year when Mandel became ill, will continue in that position. Mandel would regain the job only if his conviction were overturned before the end of his term of office in January 1979.

Mandel was the first sitting governor convicted of a federal crime in more than 40 years. The jurors found that Mandel received an estimated $350,000 worth of gifts and business interests in exchange for his influence on 1972 legislation benefiting Marlboro Race Track, which his friends secretly purchased in December 1971.

Before passing sentence, Taylor dismissed a pair of mail fraud convictions against all the defendants and also threw out a racketeering conviction against Hess and the Rodgers brothers.

Taylor said the mailings of Mandel news conference transcripts involved in the mail fraud counts were incidental to

Associated Press Writer CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A landslide leveled three small villages high in the mountains of Yugoslavia, and eight people look notes in a basement near Harvard Square.

The next day, they darted after details about an earthquake shaking eastern Romania, 682 rare red-necked grebes winging along the Massachusetts coast, and a volcano spouting eight streams of lava in the Aleutian Islands. Pestilence, catastrophe and assorted acts of God are the daily concerns of this curious group. It is the Center for Short-Lived Phenomena, perhaps the world's strangest news service.

For a yearly fee, they inform scientists, corporations, libraries and amateur naturalists around the world about oddities of man and nature.

Unlike the sooner-or-later approach of scholarly journals, this group thrives on immediacy. And depending on how much its subscribers are willing to pay, it will send daily telegrams or weekly packets of reports.

"We try to report everything around the world," says Richard Golob, the center's director. Everything boils down to about 300 "event notification reports" a year.

Typically, half of the reports concern natural events: earthquakes, tidal waves, fireballs, red tide, dolphin strandings, meteorites, mudslides, forest fires, epidemics and rat infestations.

The rest tell about pollution accidents. They range over chemical leaks in Chicago, oil spills in the Strait of Malacca and the escape of dangerous gas from a refinery in Houston.

The center was set up nine years ago as part of the Smithsonian Institution. It was intended to let the institution's scientists know about volcanoes and other natural outbursts so they could dash off to study them.

Two years ago, however, it split from the government and now is struggling to meet its $150,000 annual expenses as a private, non-profit organization.

It is trying to build a reputation of impartiality that will make it as trusted by conservation groups as by oil companies.

"We report all earthquakes 6.5 on the Richter scale and above. We report them whether they are on a remote island or kill 60 million people in China."

The reports are pieced together in a small suite of offices in the basement of a building on the fringe of Harvard University. Golob, 26, directs a staff that deals by mail and phone with a scattered global corps of correspondents.

The number of these contributors, 2,000, rivals the list of subscribers, 2,200.

Most contributors are government scientists and college researchers. But they also include common folk who happen to see the unusual. A cab driver in Chicago, for instance, calls with reports on pollution spills, and a radarman in Alaska watches vapor clouds over volcanoes.

"I always had a great conflict between doing work in a laboratory and being in the outdoors," Golob says. He has a biochemistry degree from Harvard, but the environment is as much a concern as molecular formulas. "So this organization is a very exciting marriage between my interests."

Dealing with nature on its most terrifying scale has given him a feeling about how man fits in.

"The constant exposure to volcanic eruptions, earthquakes and infestations does provide a very real sense of man's niche in the ecosystem," he says. "Man is one of many species occupying the planet, and the forces of the planet are so powerful that man cannot deal with them."

Most of the people who subscribe to the service receive the reports in weekly packets of postcards. The costs range from $35 a year for reports on natural science to $600 for telegrams on all of the center's reports.

mediately upon sentencing, but he still retains the title.

Before sentence was imposed, Mandel told the judge that he had spent over half his life in public service but "now my whole life is in disarray."

"I'm insolvent from the point of view of visible assets," Mandel said. "But I'm not insolvent because I have my family."

Blair Lee, who had been named acting governor earlier this year when Mandel became ill, will continue in that position. Mandel would regain the job only if his conviction were overturned before the end of his term of office in January 1979.

Mandel was the first sitting governor convicted of a federal crime in more than 40 years. The jurors found that Mandel received an estimated $350,000 worth of gifts and business interests in exchange for his influence on 1972 legislation benefiting Marlboro Race Track, which his friends secretly purchased in December 1971.

Before passing sentence, Taylor dismissed a pair of mail fraud convictions against all the defendants and also threw out a racketeering conviction against Hess and the Rodgers brothers.

Taylor said the mailings of Mandel news conference transcripts involved in the mail fraud counts were incidental to the political corruption scheme since the information had already been disseminated by the media. Those counts also involved Hess, the Rodgers brothers, Kovens and Cory.

The judge said the racketeering law was unclear as it applied to the corruption case.

Defense attorneys had asked for dismissal of all charges or retrials, claiming evidence at the 1½-month-long trial had been inadequate to support the convictions.

With no apparent source of income, Mandel had resisted either resigning or applying for a state pension. Lee recently said Mandel did not have "two nickels to rub together."

But on Thursday, Mandel moved his family out of the governor's mansion into a minestate north of Annapolis, which had a listed rent of $675 a month. It was unclear how he planned to pay the rent.

It was Mandel's second move from the executive mansion in four years.

Many observers of Maryland politics believe Mandel's fall from power began the first time he moved, on July 4, 1973.

That day Mandel ended years of speculation by announcing he was leaving his wife, Barbara, after more than 30 years of marriage.

"The more you make, the more you have to protect. Is your life insurance growing with your career?"

Let's talk growth. Professionally.

Jobless Frenchmen get paid

PARIS (AP) — Unemployment for a fired Frenchman can mean a one-year sabbatical on 90 per cent pay, and then a year retraining in a new profession — at 100 per cent pay.

The system introduced at the height of the 1974 recession has become an entrenched part of the French unemployment scheme. A tentative suggestion by the government recently that it should be dropped because the economy was turning up — a far from unanimous view — was met by such howls of protest that it was rapidly forgotten.

In the United States, jobless benefits vary from state to state and, extended under federal programs, can run for a year or more. Special retraining and manpower programs come on top of state benefits and often involve substantial additional payments.

Francois B is a "90 per cent" as are one in 10 of the 1 million-plus unemployed in France. New technology in the printing industry made his old job redundant. By law, he got one month's salary for each of the 25 years he had held his old post, and his union won an extra five months "golden handshake" out of his company.

The unemployment office agreed he was a victim of economic retrenchment and put him on the 90 per cent roll. Francois went fishing.

He explained in an interview how the system worked for him.

"I could have started retraining during the first year, when my 90 per cent would have gone up to 110 per cent of my old pay. But what's the point? I know that at 55 I'm going to have a tough time getting a new job anyway, so I might as well make the most of the system."

Every three months, Francois went over his file with officials to see if he was still eligible. They checked forms he had submitted during his "job hunting."

"The idea is that when you apply for a job and get turned down, the firm stamps the form. 'No job at the moment.' You also show the Employment Agency what letters you have written and replies you have had."

"That's the theory, at least. One of my friends ignored this whole process — and still got his 90 per cent pay every month."

Sneezin' season

A terrific fall for allergy, hay fever

By THOM MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff

Each year may be divided into four portions by tradition and for convenience, but many allergy sufferers note only two — the freezin' season and the sneezin' season.

From now until the hell they're going through freezes over, a large segment of hay fever sufferers who react to pollen in the air will have the watery eyes, runny noses, and explosive ah ... ah ... ah ... CHOO's so miserably common to their mutual malady.

Several allergy-plagued area people have opined that this year has been the worst they've suffered through in some time. Dr. Malouf Abraham, an allergy specialist in Canadian, bears them out.

"It's been a terrific fall for allergy," he said. "The August rains caused the weeds to get about twice as high as normal. We used to say there were weeds in the fence, now we're saying we think there's a fence somewhere in the weeds."

So with the bigger and more prolific weeds, and the dry, windy days that occur so frequently in this area to fan the problem, Dr. Abraham said, "Yes," hay fever is worse this year.

"Some patients can't get rest at night because of their difficulty in breathing," he said.

And because of resultant nasal drainage and blockage, "Some can't swallow their food properly."

Dr. Abraham said that while ever advancing medical knowledge has resulted in many ways of relieving allergy patients, "There's still a lot of room for improvement."

An old home remedy purported to bring relief to allergy sufferers is honey produced by bees in the same region as the sufferer.

"I've had people tell me that they've known other people who said they were helped by taking honey but it seems to be more of a psychological effect."

Dr. Abraham said, "Scientific studies indicate that there really is nothing to this theory. But I usually tell people that if they think they feel better, go ahead and eat the honey."

He said that some victims find help readily available in over-the-counter medication.

And, "Sometimes, long-acting cortisone shots will be given as a temporary, short-term, first-aid measure, but it can't be counted on for long-term treatment," the allergy specialist said.

"Ones who really suffer a lot need desensitization. That involves a skin testing process to determine which substances are the irritants."

"Usually about 120 will cover most people's allergies," Dr. Abraham said.

A sample of each of the substances is scratched under the skin on the back or arm of the patient and any allergic reaction can be observed in 30 minutes to an hour.

The patient then is injected with vaccines containing the things he is allergic to, which act as antigens and stimulate the body to build blocking antibodies, the doctor explained.

"It's like the immunization for smallpox," he said.

From the start of the immunization treatment until the positive results can be felt by the patient is about six weeks to two months, in most cases.

There is an advantage in shots over pills because "any sort of anti-histamine can result in drowsiness, dizziness, or a dry mouth," Dr. Abraham said. "Shots don't have side effects."

He said that while the spring and fall are the biggest times for hay fever symptoms, allergies are a year-round battle for some folks.

"And outgrowing them is a kind of myth."

Some allergies may be left behind as the seasons pass, "but I've also seen older people grow into allergies," the doctor said.

And while patients may be able to move away from some allergy problems, such as the wind-borne pollens which differ from area to area, there are other irritants that exist everywhere.

"Cat hair is cat hair whether it's here or in Paris, France," Dr. Abraham said.

One aspect of the present way of life in America that has caused problems for allergy sufferers is wall-to-wall carpeting.

"We often carpet every room in the house, including the kitchen and bathroom," the doctor said. "And that often adds to the allergy patient's problem, especially shag carpeting."

He said the pollen and other wind-carried irritants can be held by the fibers and released into the air time and again as people walk across the carpet.

Bill Owen, respiration therapist at Highland General Hospital, said that if hay fever symptoms are left untreated, "all types of upper respiratory infections may occur — possibly even pneumonia."

"Hay fever causes a nasal-sinus drip that can cause bronchitis, an infection of the upper respiratory tract," he said.

Owen said that traffic through his department at the hospital reflects the fall and spring allergy seasons but "the winter months are our heaviest season."

As fall gives way to winter, most hay fever patients are replaced by asthma sufferers and the complications that accompany that disorder.

Young readers smarter than ever

By CHARLIE BERMANT
Pampa News Staff

Children in the 8 to 12 age group used to be, enjoy reading about situations they can relate to, and are always eager to read more advanced things.

So said Winifred Crinklaw, assistant librarian and children's librarian at Lovett Memorial Library. Mrs. Crinklaw who has worked at the library for more than 20 years, has seen some things change and others remain the same about children and what they read.

Children consistently have enjoyed biographies, sports stories and mysteries, although the focus of these subjects has recently changed, she said. Mysteries have taken on a more scientific character, and biographies have a wider scope.

For instance, one series offers biographies of current sports figures such as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Billie Jean King, and musicians John Denver and Bob Dylan. These books feature background and quotes from the subjects and are highlighted by colorful graphics.

She pointed out an example of popular mysteries — the Danny Dunn series, which has added a volume annually since the first in 1961 — "Danny Dunn and the Homework Machine."

Kids have no trouble relating to Danny, for he has the characteristics of a normal, clean-cut boy. However, Danny solves his mysteries on the basis of scientific theories, and has adventures with such farfetched things as antigravity paint and smallifying machines.

There are characteristics of Danny that kids can identify with, and this makes it easier for them to use their imaginations and relate to him on a fantasy level.

Danny's scientific deduction is also explained, so by reading these books kids are introduced to some basic physics and chemistry along the way. The Danny Dunn books can make learning fun.

Mrs. Crinklaw said television affects what children read.

Laura Ingalls Wilder's "Little House on the Prairie" books were always popular, but became more so after they were turned into a TV series.

TV has also created an increased demand for the Nancy Drew - Hardy Boys sets, but after the library copies of these books wore out years ago they were not replaced.

"And we don't plan to replace them," said Mrs. Crinklaw. "There are so many books that are much better written. If someone wants those books, they can buy them at the dime store."

A change in children's habits that Mrs. Crinklaw finds disconcerting is the increasing involvement in other media. Television, audio-visual, and cassettes take up much of children's learning time, and as a result they seem to be reading less.

"If you don't read, you're sunk," Mrs. Crinklaw said.

There are several books that have endured over the years, "Little Women" and "Lassie" being the most notable.

Among the books Mrs. Crinklaw cites as being very popular are "A Wrinkle in Time" by L'Engle, "Are You There God? It's me, Margaret" by Hall, "Island of the Blue Dolphins" by O'Neil, "Rabbit Hill" by Lawson, the Winnie the Pooh series by Milne, science fiction by Isaac Asimov, and the Raggedy Ann series.

"Boys wouldn't be caught dead reading a girls book — but girls will read anything," Mrs. Crinklaw said. "They want to find out what it's all about. You can tell when they're growing up, because they start reading the romances."

Combatting loneliness with poetry

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

Mrs. Elma Bailey, who will be 90 years of age Jan. 1, considers herself "just an ordinary person."

But friends say she is far from that. "I have no cut and dry method for living as long as I have. I don't drink or smoke and, living alone, I know I don't eat right."

Mrs. Bailey does her own housework, including laundry. She enjoys baking bread, but most of her leisure hours are spent writing poetry.

"I didn't start (writing poetry) until I was 70," she said.

"I guess I was lonely." Her husband, Frank, died 25 years ago.

Mrs. Bailey can recall the black dust storms, the blizzards, the tornadoes and the Depression all right here in Gray County.

"And we survived them all," she said.

Her husband was from Pennsylvania and she is from Illinois — the state for which she named one of her poems.

The Baileys met in Illinois where she was working in a store and he dropped in to purchase a cigar. "Those were horse and buggy days," she said.

He told her late that he returned to the buggy and asked who she was, and if she were married.

He vowed that if she wasn't she "would sure get a chance."

Mrs. Bailey said it was a year or two later before they married. They moved to Tulsa in 1917 and came to Gray County in 1928.

She says she has enjoyed poetry since her father read nursery rhymes to her when she was a child.

The first verse of her poem "Illinois," reads:

"Illinois — where the rivers gently flowing;
"Illinois — where the green corn's tall a growing;
"Illinois — 'Tis the land where Lincoln trod

"Where he's buried neath the sod.

"And my own beloved homeland — Illinois."

Among her other poems are "Autumn," "The Good Old Days," "Christmas 1969," and many more.

"I enjoy writing," she said. "I don't think it is very good like I'd like — not like Longfellow and Browning, but it gives me something to do."

Mrs. Bailey has 13 grandchildren and 15 great-grandchildren.

"I love all of them," she said, but added she feels the younger generation is spoiled.

"I think children indulge too much. They can't seem to stand on their own two feet as they did years ago. Parents have handed out too much money."

Mrs. Bailey also says she is "not much for politics. I read the newspapers every day. I'm a Republican."

She has four children, Mrs. Beth Bowman of Pampa, Lowell Bailey of Oklahama City, Jack W. Bailey of Allentown, Penn., and Robert Bailey of Brownfield.

Advice

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm 15 and I'm going with a dude who just turned 18. He says he loves me and wants to marry me some day, but we fight almost every time we're together because he keeps trying to talk me into going all the way with him.

I told him I was saving myself for marriage and I wasn't going to change my mind, but he keeps trying to break down my resistance.

Abby, I really love this guy, but if he keeps hassling me to go all the way, I don't know what I'll do. How can I hold him off without losing him for good?

HANGING IN THERE

DEAR HANGING: Let's get one thing straight. A fellow who loves a girl doesn't hassle her to do something that's against her principles. If you lose him because you can't hold him off, you'll be lucky. Hold out for orange blossoms. He's offering you poison ivy.

DEAR ABBY: Most men think nothing of wearing a suit for four or five years—or even longer. So will you please tell me why a woman won't wear last year's dress?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Some don't want to. And others can't.

DEAR ABBY: I have a darling 5-year-old granddaughter I'll call Lisa. My son is Lisa's father, but he and Lisa's mother were never married and do not live together. Lisa's mother has lived with one man after another. Right now, the one she's living with belongs to a motorcycle gang.

You wouldn't believe the terrible filth this child lives in. She's dirty and hungry much of the time, and sleeps on a filthy mattress (which she wets) amid roaches and mice. She also has a chronic kidney condition. We live 85 miles away, and Lisa's mother sends her to visit us occasionally. When it's time to take her home, she cries and begs to stay with us.

Our doctor has prescribed medicine for the child's kidney ailment, but her mother "forgets" to give it to her. We appealed to the Child's Protective Service in the community where Lisa lives, but were told that since our son was never married to the child's mother we are not the child's grandparents, so it is none of our business! What can we do?

FRANTIC IN ARIZONA

DEAR FRANTIC: This is clearly a case of child abuse. Had you disclosed your name and address, I would have reported it promptly. I urge you to phone PARENTS ANONYMOUS at this toll-free number: 1-800-421-0353, and tell them Abby told you to call. And write again to let me know what is done. I care.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (24¢) envelope.

Ask Dr. Lamb
By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am writing this on the most depressing day of my life. This is the first day of an extended sick leave leading to disability retirement. I am a 60-year-old male. A year ago a bone scan showed prostate cancer in several bones. My urologist started me on female hormone when he felt the enlarged prostate. A prostate operation and castration followed. Three months ago I started having nighttime pain in my bones and joints from my hips down. The urologist has limited my hormones because of possible side effects such as blood clots.

Would aspirin act as a blood thinner and help prevent the complications of female hormones in forming blood clots? Would it be a good choice for my aches and pains in view of this?

My castration and retirement have made it difficult to maintain even the slightest semblance of weight control. What kind of exercise would you suggest?

I'd like also to give some advice to men over 40. Don't depend upon symptoms you have heard about or your doctor to tell you when you should get your prostate gland checked. The classic symptoms may never occur or come on so gradually that they are not recognized.

Men over 40 should use age alone as a guide as to how often the prostate should be examined. Perhaps an annual check is adequate for men in their early 40s. By 45 or 50 a semi-annual check or every three months would be a good thing. At the rate my urologist charges for office calls the weekly cost for a checkup every three months would be only $1.25. To learn you have prostate cancer after it is too late for surgery to cure it is a much higher price.

DEAR READER — Yours is an all too familiar story. I agree that every man over 40 should have an annual examination of his prostate gland and think it would be wise to have such an examination at least twice a year after age 50.

You are absolutely right it is important to find the cancer while it can still be completely cured. Prostate cancer is the third most common cause of cancer deaths in American men largely because this simple examination is not done. It is just as important to find a lump in a man's prostate as it is to find a lump in a woman's breast.

Unfortunately the public has not been made aware of the importance of early detection of prostate cancer. Some cancer literature even suggests that symptoms of prostatic obstruction or bone pain should be cause to seek professional help. How shocking! The public needs to be told the time to find and cure prostate cancer is before there are any symptoms. I am sending you the Health Letter number 1-6, Prostate Gland, which will tell you more about the gland and its common disorders. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y., 10019.

You might be able to get some benefit from aspirin but talk to your doctor about it. You don't want to start bleeding from an area where the tissue is eroded.

For exercise I would suggest walking as long as that is feasible. If you like swimming that would be good exercise too.

Look into the possibilities of chemotherapy with a cancer specialty unit. Some modern chemotherapy can make life a lot more comfortable.

Dr. Lamb answers representative letters of general interest in his column. Write to him in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Polly's pointers
By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — I have seen little girls' purses made from small margarine tubs. The ones I have seen were crocheted from the opening to form a bag and there was a drawstring to open and close them. Do you or any of the readers know how to make such a bag or do you have any other ideas for small things that could be crocheted for a church bazaar? I would appreciate any information. —B.W.

DEAR B.W. — I have never seen such a bag but I am sure some reader will be good enough to tell us how this is done. It seems it would be rather simple for anyone who knows how to crochet to improvise a pattern. I would punch holes close together around the top of the tub. An ice pick or heavy yarn needle should do it, and heating the instrument used should help. Next, single crochet in these holes and then continue in any desired stitch until the bag is the desired size leaving holes near the top for the drawstring to run through. This "string" could be made of a chain of single crochet or a twisted rope of the crochet thread. Good luck. —POLLY.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — What heights chutzpah? Rachel Borden, creator of the Chutzpah Phone Service, says the pie's the limit.

The Philadelphia housewife who last year began making phone calls for people for $5 now hand-delivers chutzpah pies to the face of your choice for $25 and up.

"I've thrown several at ex-boyfriends, you know, like when girls want them thrown at their ex-boyfriends. I do the throwing. I do everything. I love it," said the 30-year-old mother of two.

"People can pick their flavor, but everybody so far has picked chocolate cream pie. I've thrown about eight. The worst thing that happened to me was when a guy threw one back at me," she said.

Chutzpah is a Yiddish word for gall, and Mrs. Borden showed she had it when she began the phone service last February. For $5, she'll chastize your mother-in-law, prod your boss for a raise or play cupid.

About 2½ months ago, Mrs. Borden added chutzpah-grams to her repertoire, written messages, also hand-delivered for $25 and up, depending on delivery technicalities.

"About four weeks ago I delivered one at Veterans Stadium. I hopped over the fence in the middle of the seventh inning. The message was for Mike Schmidt, but he wasn't playing, so I gave it to Richie Hebner instead.

"It was a get-well message from a fan who paid me $100 to deliver it. Richie Hebner was really sweet about it. He was such a pussycat," she said of the 6-foot-1, 200-pound Philadelphia Phillies first baseman.

The phone service began at the urging of Mrs. Borden's husband, Gene, who suggested that since she liked talking on the phone so much she might as well make money doing it.

Mrs. Borden said she has made about $8,000 to date, including $2,000 for selling rights to use the name Chutzpah Phone Service to a Dallas housewife and a New York City attorney.

When a recipe calls for green or red pepper, use the sweet variety of the vegetable.

By ELAINE HOUSTON
County Extension Agent
Christmas in October

Christmas in October is the title of a special program the Gray County Home Demonstration Council Cultural Arts Committee is planning for Oct. 25 in the Heritage Room of M.K. Brown Auditorium. The program will feature Christmas gift ideas to show, tell, and sell. All home demonstration clubs will exhibit homemade gift items as will many local merchants. The program will be from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and will feature several on-going programs by Bernina and Stretch and Sew. Watch the paper for more details. There will be a $1 charge to cover the room expense. The public is invited to mark your calendar.

The Snack Habit

The home demonstration clubs are having programs on low-calorie foods during October. More than 40 per cent of all people in the U.S. are overweight. We need to learn about the foods we eat and plan for better more nutritious meals.

Many of us lose the weight battle when it comes to snacks. Can't keep your hands to yourself when you pass a refrigerator, candy aisle or the candy line in the movie theatre? If your eyes are bigger than your stomach, imagine the size your stomach will be if you continue nursing the snack habit. When snacking becomes a way of life, so does fat. Here are some hints to help break the habit or at least make it less fattening.

Study calorie charts and learn which foods have few or lots of calories. Remember this — the least calorie packed foods are thin, watery or dilute; bulky, creamy foods have lots of fiber or coarseness; or crisp coming from water not fat. High calorie foods are oily or greasy, crisp, thick or smooth, sweet or gooey.

All foods are fattening since they have energy value. In many cases the quantity of food is what makes it fattening. Don't diet by skipping meals — especially breakfast. The results of skipping meals could be binge eating, work sag or hi-cal nibbling all day.

Don't pair eating with activities. If you read and eat, watch TV and eat, talk on the phone and eat — stop. Even if snacks aren't calorie packed, you are unconsciously learning to associate hunger with a specific activity. Before you know it every phone call will mean two cookies, opening a bag will mean a bag of chips, and turning on the TV will make you hungry.

Keep cheese cubes in the refrigerator for snacks. Carry fresh fruit or sunflower seeds — with shells — these are high calorie but hard to get at seeds. Eat a snack like a meal. Sit at the table and eat slowly — realize that you are eating. Learn to taste. Experiment with salad greens and herbs.

Acorn Squash

Winter squash, especially acorn squash, can add variety to fall family meals. Acorn squash is a good source of vitamin A needed for healthy skin and normal vision. It is a fair source of vitamin C and riboflavin.

Select clean, well-shaped acorn squash with an evenly developed dark green color. Acorn squash is delicious broiled with butter and seasonings added or baked with honey and pineapple.

A hearty meal for fall evenings is "Crowned Acorn Squash," a concoction of steamed squash, pork sausage and tangy white sauce. Served with a tossed salad, crunchy bread and light dessert for a quick and easy family pleaser.

Crowned Acorn Squash

1 small onion, chopped
3 acorn squash
1 1/2 cups milk
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons chopped pimento
Salt
1 pound hot pork sausage
Split squash lengthwise and remove membrane and seeds. Sprinkle each half with a small amount of salt. Place in a shallow pan in about an inch of water.

Bake for 30 minutes at 400 degrees F.

Fry sausage, drain well, and break into bite-size pieces. Sauté onion in butter, add flour.

Slowly add milk and stir until the mixture makes a smooth cream sauce. Add pimento and sausage to the sauce and combine.

Fill center of well drained squash with sauce and serve hot. Makes 6 servings.

Miss O'Neal is employed by the Citizens Bank & Trust Co., and her husband works for H.R. Thompson Parts & Supply.

Both are employed by the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission.

Remembering Annie Oakley

Obsessed with the needy

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Annie Oakley's heart was as big as her shooting eye, was sharp. That's the recollection of Bessie Wacholz, a great niece to the greatest woman sharpshooter of them all.

And although Mrs. Wacholz, now 75, met her great aunt only once, they corresponded often.

While Annie Oakley — born Ann Phoebe Moses in Patterson Township, Ohio, in 1860 — started shooting at 9 and won worldwide fame with Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, her private side was concerned with the less fortunate. Mrs. Wacholz remembers:

"Charity was an obsession with Aunt Annie," she says.

DISASTER BOOK

CORNING, N.Y. (AP) — Techniques for repairing broken glass objects and restoring books, slides, photographs, prints, tapes and films are discussed in "The Corning Flood Museum Under Water," a recently published book.

In June, 1972, the Corning Museum of Glass was flooded. Museum officials, terming the damage "catastrophic," began four years of restoration work, the results of which have been compiled in the new volume. The publication was supported by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts in Washington.

"The Corning Flood" is essentially an account of the museum's own experience, with about 120 black-and-white photographs, but is intended to be useful to all similar institutions. It also contains tips on how to prevent massive destruction before natural disasters strike.

"Once in Vienna she appeared at a benefit for the orphans of that city, sponsored by the Baroness Rothschild.

"In appreciation, the baroness sent Aunt Annie a bag of gold, which Aunt Annie immediately turned over to the fund for the orphans. When the baroness heard about it, she sent Aunt Annie a diamond brooch."

Annie Oakley worked with the Wild West Show for 17 years, often appearing before the rich and powerful in America and Europe.

"But in her letters to us she always mentioned the hungry little children of Europe, never the royalty who were showering gifts on her," recalls Mrs. Wacholz.

Most remember Annie Oakley as the woman who won $350 from Grand Duke Michael of Russia in a shooting match, who shot a cigarette from the mouth of Prince William of Germany — later Kaiser Wilhelm II — and who broke all but 228 glass balls of 5,000 tossed in the air.

Fame came to Annie Oakley at 16 when she won a shooting match with vaudeville star Frank Butler — later her husband and manager — in Cincinnati.

"I saw her only once," Mrs. Wacholz says, "and that was just a few months before she died. But she was a great letter writer and had sent me messages from her travels on tour. Her letters made me feel very close to her."

Because she felt so close to her aunt and because Annie Oakley had done so much for her relatives, Mrs. Wacholz says she set out for Dayton, Ohio, to meet her aunt when a letter arrived saying she had had a premonition of death.

Mrs. Wacholz says she was so nervous about meeting Annie Oakley that she spent her first night in Dayton in a hotel.

"She was nearing 70 when I met her (she died in 1926 at the age of 66) but she stood very erect even though she was wearing a brace for a back injury she had received in an automobile accident.

"I remember her saying she was grateful for her gift of marksmanship because it gave her the opportunity to make money to give to others in need."

"She said her most interesting accomplishment was teaching Sitting Bull to read and write," Mrs. Wacholz remembers. "She showed me the pipe belonging to Sitting Bull and the coat and beaded moccasins she had inherited after his death."

"She called them her greatest treasures" even though she also could display jewels from the crowned heads of Europe.

"I still have a letter from

New center-home atmosphere in hospital

'Home birthing' movement gains strength

By MARY GANZ
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Judy Bell had her first baby by natural childbirth five years ago, when husbands still were unwelcome in most hospital delivery rooms and many women hoped to sleep through the whole thing.

Mrs. Bell was wide awake when Lamar was born, and her husband, Tami, was by her side. "It went beautifully," Mrs. Bell remembered. But four years later when they planned to repeat the experience, the Bells shopped around for something different.

"It's really not set up for husbands to feel comfortable," Mrs. Bell said of the traditional hospital delivery room. "There are masks and gowns and don't touch this, it's sterile, and sit over there."

"The second time, we wanted something more relaxed, but not as relaxed as a home delivery."

The "home birthing" movement is gaining strength among women who feel they would be more comfortable giving birth at home, perhaps with a midwife instead of an obstetrician in attendance. But many doctors remain firmly opposed to deliveries out of reach of emergency facilities.

The Bells found a happy compromise around the corner from the intensive care nursery at Mt. Zion Hospital, where Mrs. Bell worked as a nurse. About the time her second child was due, Mt. Zion opened its "alternative birth center," a warm, homey room with a quilt-covered double bed that stands in contrast to the stark, stirrped table available down the hall for emergencies.

Sarah was the first baby born in the new center. Mrs. Bell labored and delivered in the same bed. A nurse was with her through her entire labor, and an obstetrician appeared for the delivery.

A half hour after the birth, Lamar, then 4, visited his new sister, and the family went home together the next morning.

Many doctors say the Bells are typical of a new brand of consumer, the pregnant woman who now has a range of choices besides traditional hospital obstetrical care.

"It's the age of consumerism," said Dr. Fred Berman, medical director of Mt. Zion's birth center. "In the 1960s doctors were still aloof gods whose authority was not to be questioned. But from hearing patients' requests, hearing what people wanted, hearing them talk about home deliveries, it was obvious that something was needed."

Some women, arguing that birthing is a natural process best accomplished in the family of the home, have opted out of hospital care entirely.

The idea for Mt. Zion's center, one of the first in the nation, grew from the birth experience of Dr. Caroline Ballard, Mt. Zion's chief of pediatrics. She objected to many hospital procedures — mainly the mad rush from labor to delivery room — but found there were institutional limits on the amount of control even she, a doctor, was allowed.

In the year since Mt. Zion's center opened, other hospitals have followed suit one by one, some enthusiastically, some grudgingly.

"If it will eliminate home deliveries, I'm all in favor of it," said Dr. Gilbert Webb, chairman of the department of obstetrics and gynecology at Children's Hospital.

Most obstetricians agree that alternative birth centers are almost as safe for mother and baby as the traditional hospital. But Webb and others are scared that an increasing number of women are rejecting traditional hospital births for home deliveries.

"We recognize that babies will be lost at home that could have been saved in the hospital," said Dr. Russell Hulme, a Santa Clara obstetrician and assistant professor at Stanford University. "I think we can provide the same... social environment in the hospital and still have... safeguards for the wellbeing of the mother and baby."

The California Department of Health lists 3,516 out-of-hospital births in the state in 1975, the last year for which statistics are available. That figure, about 1.1 per cent of the state's total births, has been increasing by about a tenth of a per cent each year.

Advocates of home birth say tension extends labor and hospitals produce tension. They say drugs often are routinely given, even if the patient wants an unmedicated birth. They argue that fetal monitors — machines strapped to the mother's abdomen to measure the baby's heartbeat — restrict the movement of the laboring woman.

Many hospitals that don't have birth centers are bending traditions to meet some of these objections.

Webb said Children's has allowed daytime "rooming-in" — keeping the baby with the mother instead of in a nursery — since 1955, and 24-hour rooming-in is available if the mother wants it.

Husbands routinely are allowed in many delivery rooms, and many hospitals offer classes for women who want to try to deliver with a minimum of anesthetic.

Campbell 'still country'

By GARY PEDERSEN
Associated Press Writer
STATELINE, Nev. (AP) — Glen Campbell says he's as much a country boy now as he was when he was growing up in Delight, Ark.

"Hell, all I am is country, that's what I want people to see. I'm just doing what I want to do, singing what I want to sing — what I feel," he said.

Campbell, 41, in his second year of marriage to the former Sara Davis, ex-wife of singer Mac Davis, said his life is headed in a new direction.

"Sara turned my head around. She convinced me I could sing what I want. I decided I was abusing my talent, maybe trying to sing things I couldn't. Now I'm going to concentrate on the art in this business," Campbell said during a recent appearance at Harrah's.

Campbell lives in the posh Holmby Hills of Los Angeles. It is a far cry from Arkansas, but Campbell says he still likes to go home. He said he doesn't need to stay in show business for the money, he doesn't need it. He just wants to stay.

"They still think of me as Wes and Carrie's kid when I go home. Sometimes it's like I never left."

He still sings his hits: "Gentle on My Mind," "By the Time I Get to Phoenix," "Wichita Linemen" and more. But he said he plans to start diversifying his repertoire for shows here and in Las Vegas. He manages himself, and said he plans to keep it that way.

For Glen Campbell, the road to the top began in Arkansas. He was the seventh of eight sons in a sharecropper family of 12. Somehow he got a guitar in his hands at a very early age and began picking.

"What I remember about my childhood was that it was cold. Man it was cold! I would sit in the schoolhouse during recess and play my guitar because I didn't have a jacket," he said.

He eventually made his way to Southern California and landed a studio job playing his guitar in recording sessions behind the likes of Nat Cole and Frank Sinatra.

"I would have been happy to stay in the studio work. I really had fun. I never dreamed about any of this and never planned any of it. Why do people end up like this? It's a matter of luck and talent," he said.

Campbell still has the boyish looks which won him a following among television fans, but he has his own ideas about television.

TV blows everything out of proportion. It gives people images, in fact, that's what it's all about. Also, television is restricting. You don't really have enough time. I don't agree with some entertainers that you can get overexposed on TV. If you've got something good, exposure is only going to help. But I like appearing live in front of people. This is where it is.

"Playing at Harrah's, in front of a crowd like this, is one thing, but playing a county fair somewhere is another. Here you got to go out and show them, take their minds off the tables. At the fair, they came to see you. They are with you, it's special to them and they love it."

In a world of show business where stars are on top one moment and down the next, Campbell says he has no worries.

"It's not tough to stay on top when you know your business. It's kinda scary to be out front. When I was playing behind all those people, I wasn't responsible. Now I am," he said.

TV Star Scene

How big must a mini-series get before it's full grown? A regular series only runs 23 weeks (if it isn't cancelled first), and now NBC has plans to present a "mini-series" of "Shogun," over at least 15 hours. Based on James Clavell's best selling epic of East meets West in 17th century Japan, the production will be prepared over the course of two years, as befits an 1,100 page book. Fabian Forte, the teenage singing heartthrob from Philly, will be back at home in the late '50s when he guests this year on an episode of Laverne & Shirley. Although 20 years older now, he will play himself. As a washed-up doo-wopper?

A sign that things just ain't what they used to be is NBC's refusal to let go of its past glories. The network has now come up with another trivia binge starring its old shows, "NBC: The First Fifty Years—A Closer Look." George Burns, Burt Reynolds, Don Rickles, Dan Haggerty and Chevy Chase will host the various segments. . . Suzi Quatro, the underground rock singer who went hell-bent-for-leather years ago, has been signed to play Pinky Tuscadero's little sister, Leather Tuscadero. Only unlike his love for Pinkie, The Fonz has no use for Leather. She once committed the unpardonable sin of stealing his comb.

If you've been wondering what ever happened to Paul Sand, the hang-dog looking actor who made his mark in "Story Theatre," and disappeared in the smoke of his own unsuccessful series, wonder no more. Sand and Dean Jones will play Jacob and Wilhelm Grimm in "Once Upon a Brothers Grimm," an original musical adventure set for CBS on Thanksgiving Eve, Nov. 23. . . More news on the mini-series front: Ernest Tidyman, the man who penned the screenplay for "The French Connection," will do the adaptation of "To Kill A Cop" for a four-hour NBC movie. The novel follows the exploits of a maverick chief of detectives battling a politically ambitious police commissioner, as well as criminals. It was written by Robert Daley, former deputy police commissioner under New York City Mayor John Lindsay. David Ackroyd, Joanna Miles and Rosanna Arquette are set to join Bette Davis in "Harvest Home." Elizabeth Montgomery, Hal Holbrook, Steven Keats and Jane Seymour are set to star in the six-hour film "The Awakening Land," based on the Pulitzer Prize-winning book by Conrad Richter.

SUNSHINE on your TV set will mark the return of Cliff DeYoung as the widower musician father of Elizabeth Cheshire in a new movie of the cancelled NBC TV series.

Remember Sunshine? It started out as a movie about a musician with a baby and dying wife, and ended up an NBC series about a widowed musician with a little girl. Well, the original cast is back, Cliff DeYoung, Meg Foster, Bill Mumy, Corey Fischer, and Elizabeth Cheshire, and starring in another movie, "Sunshine: Goin' Home." NBC has set it for Dec. 18.

Television has finally lured the talents of stage and film producer David Merrick. CBS has contracted the hugely successful impresario for a mini-series of up to 10 hours based on Thomas Thompson's best-selling non-fiction book about the rich and ruthless of Texas, "Blood and Money." Quark is all set to replace some of NBC's refuse with its own garbage gathering. Production is under way on the sci-fi comedy starring Richard Benjamin as the commander of a spaceship with an unusual assignment, cleaning up the litter in space.

TV Dialogue

KEEN KEANES - I really enjoyed the Keane Brothers Show, and thought it was fantastic. Besides having so much talent, Tom and John are so gorgeous. Is there a good chance of their series continuing? What can I do to keep it on? Jane Morita, Long Beach, Miss.

While the critics generally agreed that the Keane kids had talent to spare, their show was the lowest rated summer series, right behind The Starland Vocal Band. At this stage there's no talk at CBS of giving the two a regular series, and all I can tell you to do is write a letter to the network with your raves. But I doubt it will affect any decision.

BABY BAND - Some weeks ago there was a band on The Midnight Special, or Rock Concert (I always confuse those two), that was called The Babys. I really thought they were terrific sounding and looking. But I haven't been able to find their album. Could you help? Also where could I write to them, so they'd get the letter? Muriel Goodseid, Tampa, Fla.

Actually The Babys did both shows, although it's understandable that at one a.m. or so you might confuse the two. But that point is moot, since I've seen the band in person and already know who you're talking about. If you had been able to find their second album, you'd know they have a fan club. Write: The Babys Official Fan Club, P.O. Box 1409, Beverly Hills, Ca. 90213. I can't get the albums for you, but I can tell you they're on

Commuters have comforts, too

NORWALK, Conn. (AP) — Don't scorn the commuter who travels by train to and from work each day. That may be the way of the future in an energy conscious America — and the commuter today may be enjoying comforts the automobile driver would never think of.

Federal officials have been trying to devise ways to divorce the automobile from the American vision of independence, extolling the virtues of a car-pooling, group transportation in vans, and the like. But for years thousands of Americans have been traveling to and from work by railroad in cities like Boston, Chicago, San Francisco, Washington and New York.

Those who drive to and from work or live in a city where it's a bus ride, subway trip or walk to work may think they have all the advantages over the commuter.

It's not so. Commuting trips run from under an hour to up to 2 hours, plenty of time for drinking a cup of coffee and reading a newspaper or a paperback on the way. On New York commuter trains on the way home, the bar cars are open or the rider can pick up a couple of beers before the trip.

While the driver is pushing his car through rush hour traffic and the city dweller is hanging from the straps of a bus or subway car, the rail commuter is lounging in an airconditioned train.

Then it's a short drive to green grass, trees and home. And on fair days the commuter often can walk or ride a bicycle to the station and home.

There are discomforts the veteran commuter soon learns to endure, the tales of which often can be used to entertain or bore friends.

They range from the 8-hour breakdown to falling asleep and ending up at the end of the line 50 miles from home. One breakdown ended with this commuter arriving for work about 20 minutes before he was scheduled to head for home.

Commuters rapidly become creatures of ritual oriented totally to the train.

"He's been commuting for six years. You'd think he would know where the train doors are," commented a woman as a stray commuter was caught standing on the platform between the doors of the car when the train arrived. Standard practice is to group in clumps precisely where the doors of the train will open.

Likewise, many commuters sit in the same section of the same car every day. And a commuter normally ignores fellow riders unless he or she is a card player — they always sit in the facing seats at the front and back of the cars.

A commuter has a set of basic signals to show he or she is not to be disturbed. They range from feigning sleep to total immersion in a newspaper, even if it means reading every line and classified ad.

OLD TREES

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Widely known as the tallest living things on earth, the Coast Redwoods are also among the oldest.

The species dates back at least 30 million years, and once covered much of North America, reports Rand McNally's "Traveler's Almanac." Today these giants are found only on the moist, temperate coast of central California to southern Oregon, with some individual trees more than 2,000 years old.

Roll calls in the House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is how Texas legislators voted on key roll calls before Congress last week:

The House voted 301-111 to kill an amendment to the Labor Reform Act which would have allowed companies which violate the law to continue to perform work for the federal government.

Voting for the amendment were Reps. Burleson, de la Garza, Hall, Mahon, Milford, Poage, Roberts, White, Archer and Collins. Voting against it were Reps. Brooks, Eckhardt, Gammage, Gonzalez, Hightower, Jordan, Kazen, Krueger, Mattox, Pickle, Wilson, Wright and Young. Not voting: Rep.

Teague.

The House voted 57-163 to pass the Labor Reform Act, a measure advocated by organized labor to increase the penalties for companies which violate labor laws.

Voting for the bill were Reps. Brooks, Eckhardt, Gammage, Gonzalez, Jordan, Krueger, Mattox, Wilson, Wright and Young. Voting against it were Reps. Burleson, de la Garza, Hall, Hightower, Kazen, Mahon, Milford, Pickle, Poage, Roberts, Teague, White, Archer and Collins.

The Senate voted 50-46 to adopt the modified Bentsen-Pearson amendment to deregulate the price of new natural gas. Voting for the amendment were Sens. Bentsen and Tower.

The Senate voted 56-36 in favor of a "lifeline rate" amendment that would require utilities to offer their lowest per kilowatt rate to people over 62 for the power they consume that is considered the minimum a household needs to provide basic necessities. Voting for the lifeline rate was Sen. Tower. Voting against was Sen. Bentsen.

The Senate voted 62-30 to reject an amendment by Sen. Tower to set the minimum wage for the next three years at $2.65, 2.85 and 3.05, instead of the $2.65, 2.90 and 3.15 eventually approved. Tower voted for his amendment. Bentsen voted against it.

White House blames steel industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — The steel industry, which has raised steel prices 79 per cent in the last five years, is a "source of serious inflationary pressures," the White House price-monitoring agency said Friday.

The agency said in a report that the 79 per cent increase was 24 per cent more than other domestic industrial prices during the period.

The report said steel prices increased by 9.4 per cent alone in the 12 months ending in August of this year, compared with 7.1 per cent for all other industrial prices. In addition, further hikes in steel prices took effect in September.

The study, which was ordered by President Carter on Aug. 5 after the industry raised prices, said much of the increase in prices results from higher costs, especially for labor, but also for the cost of materials, such as coal, iron and steel scrap.

Hourly employment costs have increased 66 per cent since 1973, and the gap between the higher pay of steel and coal workers and workers in other industries, "has widened sharply in recent years," said the study, which was prepared by the Council on Wage and Price Stability.

It said the industry was using only 80 per cent of its potential productive capacity currently compared to a peak of 97 per cent in 1973. Other industries also are operating at less than capacity now, however.

Even with the price hikes, profits in the steel industry are less than half of what they were in 1974. They were equal to 3.6 per cent of sales last year, compared to 6.4 per cent in 1974 and were "substantially below" the average of all manufacturing, the report said.

There have been substantial job layoffs in the industry in recent weeks.

The government report came as the industry reported today that steel imports in August hit a 32-month high, with foreign producers accounting for one in every five tons of the U.S. supply during the month.

In addition, Carter plans to meet with steel industry and union representatives next Thursday to discuss their problems.

Oil men need drill rigs

By MAX B. SKELTON
AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP)—Some oil operators are having difficulty these days locating enough drilling rigs to complete 1977 projects.

"An informal poll of contractors reveals that no more than 10 per cent of all U. S. rigs will be available for a new contract between now and December 31," said Ed McGhee, executive vice president of the International Association of Drilling Contractors.

"Aside from the disruption of work schedules, lack of a quickly available drilling unit can mean costly lease renewals or inability to attract venture capital."

Drilling normally is heavy toward the end of the year and McGhee said almost 40 per cent of the U. S. rigs would be in a position to accept work that will start in the first quarter of 1978.

He said the current situation persists, however, despite a sharp increase this year in the number of available rigs.

The latest count, he said, of rigs for sale to contractors who maintain the law of supply and demand still exists.

"Triggering this enthusiasm is the latest jump in the annual Reed Tool count of available rigs," McGhee said.

The count of units capable of drilling below 3,000 feet in the United States totaled 2,482.

"This is an increase of 278 rigs in 12 months, probably the largest single year addition in history," McGhee said.

"When shallower than 3,000 feet units are added, the overall total of available U. S. rigs reaches nearly 2,700."

Reed attributes the increase in the count to four sources: new manufacture, repatriations from other nations, assembly from existing components with, perhaps, some added new components, and resurrection from the "weed patch."

McGhee said the newly manufactured and repatriated rigs show up most in the totals for deeper drilling units. The "weed patch" rigs appear in the shallow hole category, he said, while most repatriated rigs are offshore units, both mobile and fixed platform equipment.

"And the end is not yet in sight," McGhee said.

"Some U. S. rig manufacturing plants are working three shifts per day for the first time in a long time."

McGhee said some manufacturers are reporting backlogs which extend through the middle of 1978.

"Total bookings for rigs delivered in 1978 are reported to be around 450, fully 100 more than will have been delivered in 1977. While these figures do include those for export, there appears to be no marked increase in rig exportation."

McGhee said the figures on available rigs cannot be compared directly with the weekly Hughes Tool count of active rigs, a count that has approached the 2,100 mark in recent weeks.

The survey of active rigs includes only those actually making hole and does not include rigs which, although under contract, are rigging up or down, moving, completing a well or running casing.

The most recent weekly averages for active rotary rigs have been 2,081, 2,098, and 2,089, the highest level for the industry since December 1959.

Through August, the 1977 weekly counts had averaged 1,947 active rigs, the highest average since the 2,074 recorded in 1959. By comparison, the 1976 average was 1,658, one below the 1975 level.

The record average of 2,687 active rigs was set in 1955, when the industry completed 56,682 wells.

Although the rig average dropped to 2,619, a record 58,160 wells were completed in 1956.

In agriculture

County Extension Agent
Stocker Cattle Program

A program for stockmen and more specifically — Stocker Cattle Operators — will be from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Thursday in Amarillo at the New Research and Extension Center, 6500 Amarillo Blvd., West. The program will include a tour of the Texas Veterinary Diagnostic Lab, which is located close by, and topics on stocker cattle health management practices. Timely information on cattle health practices and how to get the best use from the diagnostic lab will be presented by Extension Specialists and Laboratory personnel.

This is an activity that our Gray County Livestock program building committee planned last spring. We should have several interested producers — call my office 669-7429, to coordinate travel to Amarillo.

Pesticide Certification Workshop

A commercial-noncommercial pesticide applicator certification workshop is scheduled for Oct. 17-21 at the Texas Tech Regional Health Center, 1400 Wallace Blvd., Amarillo. Training will be presented during the week in the following categories: Agricultural Pest Control (field crop pest control, fruit and vegetable pest control, weed and brush control, predatory animal control, farm storage pest control, and fumigation); Ornamental and Turf Pest Control (plant pest control, greenhouse pest control and weed control); Seed Treatment; Right-of-Way Pest Control; Animal Pest Control (tick, louse, and mite control, and fly control); Aquatic Pest Control (aquatic plant control and aquatic animal control); Regulatory Pest Control; Demonstration and Research Pest Control.

Examinations will be administered by the Texas Department of Agriculture, Texas Animal Health Commission, and Texas Water Quality Board at the same location. Persons planning to attend must pre-register by contacting Dr. Carl D. Patrick.

Texas Agricultural Extension Service, 6500 Amarillo Blvd., West, Amarillo, 79106 (806-359-5401). Persons pre-registering will receive appropriate category study manuals and a program schedule.

Fire Prevention

The range grass fire last week on Billy Davis between Lefors and McLean should serve as a vivid reminder of the prairie fire potential the area faces over the next 7 months. Generally speaking everybody has grown the most grass in a long time on our rangeland. This served to help many over-grazed ranges to recover somewhat from several dry years and should result in better range condition next year.

However, farmers and ranchers need to take some precautions against range fires. Fire guards probably need to be cleaned off along roads and railroad rights-of-way. Also, sprayers should be kept in good repair and you may want to keep your sprayer loaded with water, ready to use.

Lightning can start fires, which cannot be prevented. However, man-caused fires can be prevented. Smokers should be doubly sure their cigars and cigarettes are snuffed out and preferably placed in an ash tray rather than thrown out on the ground.

Spray Peach Trees

Peach tree owners who experienced a heavy loss of leaves last May and June to Bacterial Spot need to spray their trees in late October with a copper-based spray. Control is reported to be very good with a single application of copper hydroxide sprayed thoroughly over the entire tree. Copper hydroxide is sold as Kocide and will probably be difficult if not impossible to find in small quantities for a few trees. However, you should be able to find some type of fruit tree spray containing copper, such as copper oleate. This should also give fairly good control on next year's foliage if properly done.

HEALTHY WHALES

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — How do you keep a whale healthy? Let us count the ways, says Dr. Jesse White, Miami Seaquarium staff veterinarian.

There are eight:

1. All food must be fresh and clean.
2. Food must be prepared in a sanitary area.
3. People who work with whales must be healthy.
4. No foreign bodies are to be left in the water with whales.
5. Whales must get daily vitamins to approximate their natural diet.
6. A whale should get 4-6 per cent of its body in food each day.
7. It should get a minimum of two erysipelas vaccinations a year.
8. Trainers should keep daily logs on behavioral patterns, food intake, aggression levels and animal response.

At 84, Dr. Karl has enough projects for 100 years

A curmudgeon who likes things done right

The dream his father, Dr. Charles Menninger, envisaged came true with Dr. Karl Menninger as its guiding genius: an institution of training, curing, researching, a place where the best minds could come and work together. (AP Newsfeatures photo)

EDITOR'S NOTE — When he's not reading, writing, lecturing or otherwise imparting wisdom of his 84 years, you might find him playing bridge with his old friend Alf Landon. He's known at Menninger Foundation as Dr. Karl, the cantankerous one.

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer
TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — He's reading a new translation of The Iliad, writing a new book called "The Jail Must Go," giving as many as three lectures in a week and actively pursuing his interests in the American Indian, poetry, homes for abandoned children and whatever else he finds fascinating.

Dr. Karl Menninger, once the guiding genius of the Menninger Foundation, is 84 years old and he has projects mapped out that would keep any man busy for the next 100 years.

He recently underwent surgery for removal of a brain tumor and fought back with the help of biofeedback training, — pioneered in part at the institution he, his father and his brother built. He says he's slowed down a bit — "I don't get as much done in an hour," but it's hard to notice.

His friends say he's brilliant, chaffing, warm-hearted, a feeder of human beings. But easy? No. They like to tell the story of how Dr. Karl once kept an audience waiting for half an hour to hear him speak because someone was in the parking space assigned to him.

Dr. Menninger's celebrated temper seems just one form of his explosive energies.

"Karl has always had a sixth sense for society's next sore point," says his wife of 35 years, Jeanetta Lyle Menninger.

Through his many books and lectures, he helped convince a skeptical America of the value of psychiatry. He taught that the mentally ill could be cured, he preached preventive psychiatry.

He seems genuinely surprised when he is told that some people find him frightening. "Why would anyone be afraid of me?" he roars. Then he thinks for a moment and answers softly. "That hurts me. I do speak a little loudly and I am emphatic." Next he says, "I guess I have always been a bit of a curmudgeon, but I like things done right."

Yet, this reputed ruffian keeps a listed telephone number and, without encouraging them, will take late night calls from troubled people who are contemplating suicide, comfort them, suggest where they can get help.

Dr. Karl still is as dogmatic as ever. Just mention one of his pet projects — like reform of the penal system — and he's off, emphatically and loudly.

"The jails have to go — the dungeons did, the madhouses did, the pesthouses did, the asylums did."

At an age where most men have slowed down to a walk, Dr. Karl, white-haired and tall, is in his office by 8 each morning and keeps a staff of four busy. The first thing he does is ship off a ream of articles to staff members and friends, material he's read the night before that he thinks they'll benefit from.

He's a man who can edit a paper with his green felt-tip pen while carrying on an intense conversation. Dr. Karl doesn't waste much time.

He'll eat lunch at his desk, take a half-hour nap, "and then I'm good till four in the afternoon."

He enjoys a drink before dinner, watches the news, then often walks with his poodle in his garden, filled with flowers and trees both exotic and common. He then reads or works for another two hours until bedtime around 10.

Mrs. Verne Horne, his close friend and archivist, says, "He shepherds his time now. He considers it now a very special gift. He feels it's been given to him for a purpose."

Dr. Menninger's friends, though used to his resiliency, were amazed at his speedy recovery from brain surgery. It left the right side of his face sagging and his speech slurred. Through biofeedback and sheer willpower, he has almost completely restored his face and his speech is back to normal.

The Menninger Clinic was established in 1919 by Dr. Karl's father, Dr. Charles Menninger. It was a general medical facility in the earliest days, but by 1925 the emphasis was on treatment of mental illness.

Mental institutions met with public uneasiness in those days, especially in the nation's heartland, and so Dr. Karl, a dynamic speaker, was chosen to address groups around town and beyond to make friends.

One of his first speeches was before a women's group back in 1922. The subject: Syphilis.

The ladies cringed. But he had seen the devastating effects day after day and he felt it needed to be brought into the open.

His recreation has been intellectual for the most part. He likes to play the piano, chess (three or four games simultaneously) and a lot of bridge with long-time friend Alf Landon, the Republican presidential nominee in 1936. Landon, who lives in Topeka, turned 90 on Sept. 9.

"We never agreed on how the game was dealt, how it was bid, or how it was played," says Landon. "And we never agreed on politics except on the Right to Work Amendment. We both stumped the state against it."

Landon remains impressed by one side of Dr. Menninger's that the public seldom sees.

They were visiting an institution for troubled children, "and he just stood and visited with them," Landon says. "He wasn't lecturing them, he was listening."

Dr. Paul Pryor, co-author with Dr. Menninger of "The Vital Balance" and a friend of 21 years, describes Dr. Menninger as a giver and a feeder.

"If he has an apple, he'll peel it and practically put it in your mouth," says Dr. Pryor. Dr. Karl even shares a collection of polished rocks on his desk, inviting a visitor to choose one. Then he looks the other way. "I used to watch and found that whichever stone he chose, that was the one I liked best. Now I just don't look."

Twenty years ago he decided to quit smoking and stopped buying cigarettes. "But then people would offer me one and I'd take it," he says. He started to return a pack of cigarettes for every one he borrowed. That didn't work, either. So he began paying back a carton for each cigarette, and that's how he finally overcame the habit.

Bureaucracy and administration bore him, which is doubtless why he hasn't been running the Menninger Foundation since 1965, when he and Dr. Will Menninger, his brother, came into conflict. Dr. Will died in 1966 and the foundation's board named Dr. Roy Menninger, Dr. Will's son, as president.

"We were together until 1965," says Dr. Karl with a note of regret. "The trustees said people retire at 65 and you're past that. They said they would let me do whatever I wanted." He returned to his writing.

Looking back on his long, busy life, Dr. Menninger says:

"People think I invented psychiatry and made millions. I didn't invent psychiatry but yes, I made millions. But I don't have it. I don't have an estate. I put it all back into the Foundation."

He adds: "I feel I have maybe 10, maybe 15 years left thanks to the constitution I inherited from my parents. There are so many wonderful things in life. I shall hate to depart it."

To appeal artifacts case

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Four persons convicted of conspiring to possess stolen pre-Columbian artifacts from Mexico say they'll appeal federal prison terms assessed them here Thursday.

Three of the defendants received jail terms ranging from six months to two months, while another was given a suspended sentence.

William C. Simpson of San Antonio, who received a six-month jail term, called the jury's verdict "unjustified." His wife, Ada Eveligh Simpson, received a suspended sentence.

They were convicted here last month of violating a federal law prohibiting Americans from possessing such items because the Mexican government has declared ownership of all pre-Columbian artifacts.

But Simpson said the group did everything it could, including contacting the FBI, to stay within the law.

The group was arrested after an undercover agent bought some artifacts for $115,000.

J.G. Gaulle discovered the planet Neptune in 1846.

Mike Bradshaw of Toledo, Ohio, was given a three-month jail term, while Patty McClain of Houston was sentenced to two months in prison.
