Indira Gandhi arrested

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Indira Gandhi, prime minister of India for 11 years until her election defeat last March, was arrested today on charges of misusing her position.

Eyewitnesses said a large squad of agents from India's central bureau of investigation took Mrs. Gandhi, 59, into custody at her New Delhi home.

Mrs. Gandhi was charged with acquiring 104 vehicles through misuse of her official position. India's national news agency reported.

A large crowd assembled outside Mrs. Gandhi's home as soon as supporters learned of the raid and while she was still inside. They chanted "Long live Indira Gandhi."

Shortly after the plain-clothesmen arrived, supporters of Mrs. Gandhi issued a statement in her name charging that the "arrest is a political one. It is to prevent me from going to the people. It is an attempt to discredit me in their eyes and the eyes of the world."

Sources close to her household said Mrs. Gandhi demanded that the bureau agents take her away in handcuffs but they explained this was not customary in such cases.

In her statement Mrs. Gandhi said even though she lost her individual liberty for a time her supporters must be prepared to fight "the very real threat to the country's self reliance."

She was taken into custody under Section 5 of India's Prevention of Corruption Act. First reports said the specific charge was misusing her position as the prime minister to acquire 104 jeeps from two firms for electioneering.

The arrest came as Mrs. Gandhi appeared to be making what political sources said was the first tentative move toward a comeback after her election defeat in parliamentary voting last March.

In recent weeks Mrs. Gandhi has paid a well-publicized visit to one of India's aged spiritual leaders, stepped up her travels to rural areas and made a few statements critical of the new Janata party government.

But while she was on the move, investigators were following the time-tested sleuthing technique of "follow the money" to unravel what they claimed was an intricate pattern of alleged embezzlement, fraud, extortion and abuse of authority by the inner circle of the former Gandhi government.

In August, authorities arrested two of Mrs. Gandhi's former cabinet ministers on charges of official corruption.

The political and financial dealings of her son, Sanjay, 30, are under microscopic investigation by a special government commission. He has already been implicated in at least a half dozen legal cases, but government sources said the cases involved to date are relatively minor.

Mrs. Gandhi, Sanjay and her Congress party all allege that the investigations are part of a "political vendetta" by Prime Minister Morarji Desai's new government. They have claimed the charges are baseless.

Mrs. Gandhi capped her 11-year reign with 21 months of emergency rule under which civil liberties were suspended, thousands of political dissidents jailed and press censorship imposed.

It was that period of emergency rule that led to her downfall. Many members of the Janata party that defeated Mrs. Gandhi at the polls had been detained during the "national emergency" that began in June 1975.

In a recent speech, Mrs. Gandhi defended the emergency decrees.

Even if many people were hurt, she said, the emergency effectively stopped smuggling, brought economic stability and held prices down.

She charged Desai and the new government were making her and the Congress party scapegoats for their own troubles in easing India's economic and social problems.

Peddling for cancer funds

Forty-one riders, ages 8 to 67, participated in the Gray-Roberts Unit of the American Cancer Society Bike-a-thon Sunday. Jack Skelly, above, was the oldest biker. Winners will be announced Nov. 1; deadline for money to be turned in is Oct. 30. Kirk Duncan and Bruce Belcher challenged each other to complete the 17-mile course in less than 85 minutes. Belcher rode it in 59 minutes; Duncan in 72 minutes and he contributed an additional $26 to the drive.

Hijacked jet lands in Algeria

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — A Japanese jetliner under the command of five hijackers and carrying $6 million ransom, 19 hostages and six other terrorists landed in Algiers today after an overnight two-stop journey from Bangladesh government officials said.

An official communique said landing permission had been given "at the express demand of the Japanese government and for humanitarian reasons."

But there was no immediate indication how the Algerians would handle the situation.

The Japan Air Lines plane touched down at 2:20 p.m. local time (10:20 a.m. EDT), airline officials said.

One American was among the captives still aboard the plane.

The hijackers, believed looking for asylum in a sympathetic country, had commandeered the DC8 over India last Wednesday, forced it to land in Dacca in neighboring Bangladesh, where they released most of their hostages. After a 4½-day siege, they took off from Dacca Sunday, stopping in Kuwait and Damascus, Syria, refueling and freeing more hostages on the way.

There was speculation that if Algeria refused to give the terrorists refuge, they would turn to Libya or South Yemen, two Arab countries with radical governments which have accepted hijackers and other terrorists in the past. The hijackers are members of the ultra-leftist Japanese Red Army, which works closely with the radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

The take off from the Syrian capital had been delayed while Japanese and Syrian officials tried to get more hostages released, but the hijackers refused and ordered the pilot to take off.

There had been 156 persons aboard when the terrorists seized control of the Paris-to-Tokyo plane early Wednesday after it took off from Bombay.

The hijackers freed 115 of their hostages in Dacca, seven more in Kuwait and 10 in Damascus. This left 12 captive passengers and the crew of seven aboard along with the five hijackers and six terrorists freed from Japanese prisons in response to the hijackers' demands. The Japanese government also paid a ransom of $6 million.

Twelve Americans were aboard the plane when it was hijacked, the airline said. Nine were freed in Dacca and two in Damascus, leaving one still aboard today. The airline identified him as Thomas Phelan, 29, of San Francisco, a State Department employee.

Two other Californians, William D. McLean, 46, of Alamo, and Eric Weiss, 30, of San Francisco, were freed along with eight Japanese passengers in Damascus. McLean is executive vice president of a tugboat and barge company.

The airline sent a plane from Tokyo to Dacca today to fly the freed hostages to Bangkok en route to Tokyo.

The hijackers were believed to have boarded the plane in Bombay.

Judge restricts Davis' walks

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — Cullen Davis, accused of killing his stepdaughter, has been barred from walking around a state courthouse because he reportedly talked with the mother of a juror in his trial.

Davis, 44, charged with the August 1976 slaying, has been permitted outside the courtroom during the last two months of his trial, which was moved here from Fort Worth on a change of venue.

State Dist. Court Judge George Dowlen issued the curtailment directive after meeting with attorneys Saturday. Prosecutors said they feared jury contamination since relatives have in the past been allowed to visit the sequestered jury on occasion.

"It's a legitimate concern," Dowlen told newsmen after the meeting. "I don't think this situation will come up again."

The judge explained that cramped courthouse conditions were largely responsible for Davis' earlier freedom of movement.

Flamboyant defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes said he believes the restrictions will work in Davis' favor. He said his client would be more apt to accidentally make an off-hand remark that would hurt his case than one that would be self-serving.

Officer Benny Thompson was due to return to the stand today. Thompson was a crime scene search officer who participated in the investigation after two were slain and two wounded at Davis' Fort Worth mansion.

Besides Davis' stepdaughter Andrea Wilborn, 12, his estranged wife's lover, Stan Farr, 30, died in the shooting spree. Farr was the live-in house guest of Priscilla Davis, 33, who has been separated from the defendant for about three years. Mrs. Davis was wounded along with Gus Gavrel Jr., 22, a chance mansion visitor the night of the shootings.

Law okays hair code in Texas high schools

By THOM MARSHALL, Pampa News Staff

While the dispute over the dress code in White Deer Public Schools continues "to get hairier and hairier," in the words of one parent, recent information from the Texas Civil Liberties Union (CLU) indicates that the school officials are backed by the law.

In a letter to the mother of a White Deer student who has been suspended because of his hair length, John B. Duncan, executive director of the Texas CLU, wrote: "We couldn't agree more with you about your complaint about the White Deer School's hair code. Yet, there is little by way of law to protect students in Texas from such arbitrary rules."

Several boy students from White Deer High School and from the elementary school in Skellytown (part of the White Deer Independent School District) reportedly were told Friday to get haircuts.

The high school boys were given sealed envelopes containing suspension notices to deliver to their parents.

The home and family automobile of one youth who is contesting the hair code rules reportedly were pelted with eggs late Friday night.

Duncan explained that in about half of the states, school rules governing the length of students' hair have been declared unconstitutional. But in the other half, including Texas, courts have ruled that schools may regulate hair length.

"Presently we are advising parents to file complaints alleging school dress codes are invalid under Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972," the CLU official said. "The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare has promulgated rules which indicate such."

Jim Littlejohn, an HEW official in Dallas told The News on Friday that "Right now, we're just not doing anything," concerning schools with hair codes.

He said that the matter has been under investigation "for several months" and that it is expected to be "cleared up very shortly — in a matter of a few weeks."

Littlejohn explained that if the forthcoming decision rules against hair codes, "We would ask schools not to suspend any more students for that reason and to take off their records any previous suspension statements."

If HEW policy makers rule against hair codes, schools which fail to comply and which continue to enforce hair codes could have federal assistance programs cutoff, Duncan said.

The CLU official said that letters concerning the hair length issue should be mailed to Ms. Dorothy Stuek, Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, 1114 Commerce Street, Dallas 75202.

Bell must pay

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — State District Court Judge Peter Michael Curry officially ordered Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. today to pay $3 million in damages for slandering two former company executives.

Curry entered the judgement after denying a motion by Bell that he set aside the jury's recommendations in a five-week trial that ended Sept. 12.

Lawyers for the telephone company said they would, within 10 days, file a motion for a new trial, the next step in what is expected to be a lengthy appeal process.

The jury recommended Bell pay the damages for slandering fired Bell executive James Ashley and the late T. O. Gravitt who was the top telephone company official in Texas when he committed suicide Oct. 17, 1974.

The jury recommended that Ashley receive $1.5 million in damages and that Gravitt's widow receive $1.5 million.

The jury also found that slandering, which resulted from an internal company investigation, was a proximate cause of insanity that caused Gravitt to kill himself.

Krueger supports beef export

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

Rep. Bob Krueger told Pampans Sunday if he is elected to the U.S. Senate he'll put honesty back in American government.

Krueger of New Braunfels, a Democrat, will oppose John Tower who now holds the seat.

He spoke to an estimated 50 persons at the Pampa Senior Citizens Center, 500 W. Francis, and explained that he announced 14 months early because "Texas is a big state" and he plans to visit every area.

He stressed the importance of the rural areas and small towns which are sometimes overlooked by politicians.

This candidate said the only effective answer for keeping prosperity for farmers lies in increasing our exports. We produce three times as much wheat as we need, 2 1/2 times as much corn.

"We've got to get overseas markets for our products. We need to work toward getting other countries to remove export barriers to our country," he said.

He said the average American eats 130 pounds of beef per year while the average Japanese eats 6 1/2 pounds.

"Yet Japanese pays $15 a pound for beef because the import duties are so high," he added.

Krueger said he offered legislation to deregulate natural gas.

"I got it to the floor for the first time in 20 years - first in February 1976 and again in July of this year," he explained.

Under the bill energy will be priced nearer to the replacement costs.

"The thing that concerns me for Texas users of gas is that under the administration bill (which I opposed) the federal government would have power to ration and allocate gas supplies."

With federal price controls comes federal allocation authority, he said.

"That is why deregulation which does not give the federal government authority to allocate supplies, and means keeping jobs in Texas," Krueger said.

He stressed that agriculture and energy are crucial for the well being of the state, but equally important is the creation of an atmosphere that will allow every individual to develop to his or her maximum potential.

He added that he favors good education for all, personal development and job opportunities.

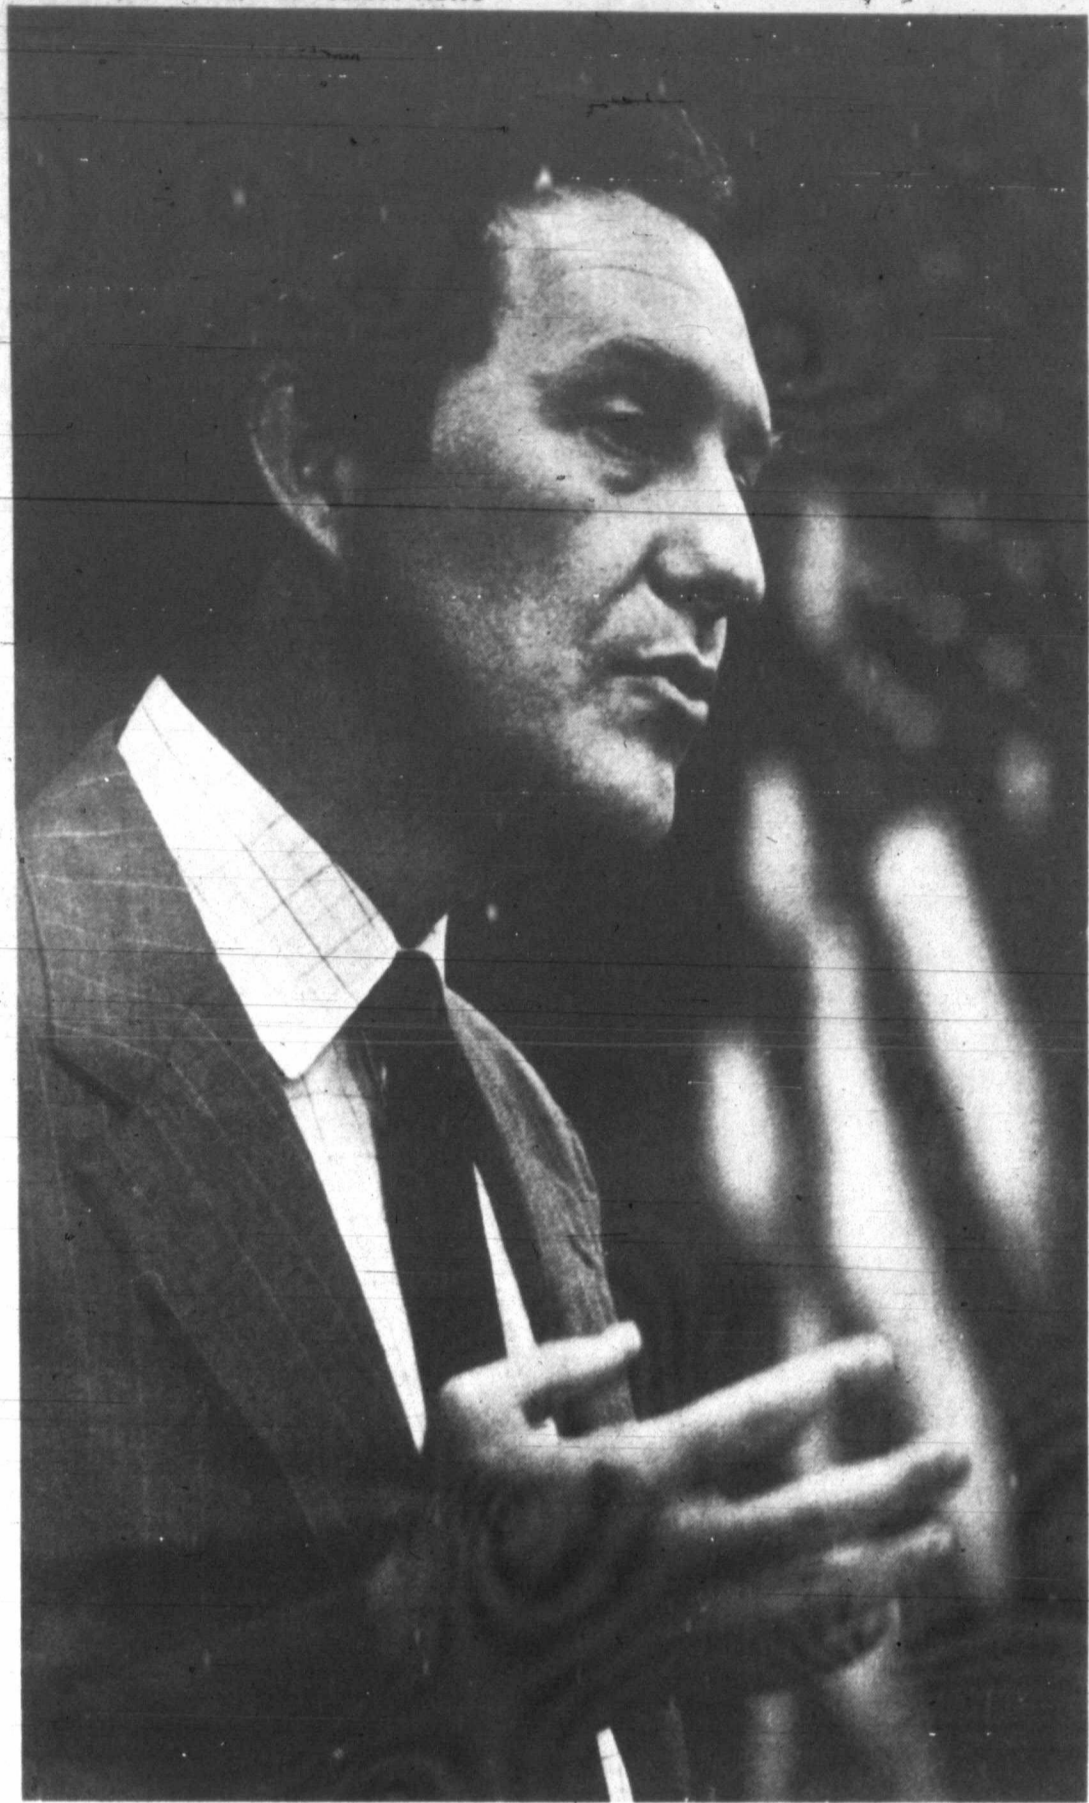

"I think for a country to recapture faith in itself we need government officials who will carry out the ideals of the American people."

Speaking briefly on the proposed $2.65 minimum wage law, Krueger said he thought those under 18 should be allowed to be paid at a lower pay scale.

"I can remember working for 25 cents an hour," he said.

In conclusion he added: "I have no intention of letting up the pace. Everywhere I go I find people who agree with me that personal contact has been missing between government and the people government is meant to serve."

Israeli leaders blast U.S. - Soviet peace plan

By The Associated Press
Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said the U.S.-Soviet declaration of principles for an Arab-Israeli peace agreement was another American attempt to push the Palestine Liberation Organization into the Geneva peace talks "through the front door."

Israeli leaders, Sen Henry Jackson and George Meany sharply criticized the joint declaration while the PLO and other Arabs called it a positive step toward peace.

The declaration, issued Saturday as part of the effort to get Arab-Israeli peace negotiations in Geneva started before the end of the year, urged Israel to recognize the "legitimate rights of the Palestinian people" and give them a role in the Geneva conference.

Dayan in the United States to negotiate with the Americans and indirectly with the Arabs, told the newspaper Yediot Aharonot a meeting he is having with President Carter Wednesday would be "decisive."

After that we shall know with virtual certainty whether there is any chance for a Geneva conference."

"There is an American tendency to introduce the PLO through the front door into the Geneva peace conference," Dayan said. "In American propositions for the makeup of the conference there is a clear tendency toward this."

He added that the Soviet-American statement proved "the erosion of the American position on this issue."

The statement also called for Israel to withdraw from territories occupied during the 1967 war, the creation of demilitarized zones manned by United Nations troops or observers to protect Israel's security and possible participation of the United States and the Soviet Union in international guarantees of Israel's border.

Israeli leaders asserted that the declaration would stiffen Arab policy and hamper efforts to reconvene the peace conference, which met briefly in December 1973. The Israelis contended the call for Palestinian participation would open the door to the PLO and to creation of an independent Palestinian state, both of which Israel rejects.

The Israelis have said they will accept Palestinian representatives in a Jordanian delegation, but they must not be leaders of the PLO.

Finance Minister Simha Ehrlich, presiding over the weekly cabinet meeting in place of ailing Prime Minister Menahem Begin, said the declaration was "the first signs that the superpowers want to impose a solution."

"The statement is not acceptable to Israel. We cannot accept an imposed solution," said Ehrlich.

Meany, the president of the AFL-CIO, said the declaration undercut Israel's bargaining position, and Jackson, the Washington Democrat, said the Soviets should not have been involved.

Although the Soviet Union and the United States are co-chairmen of the Geneva conference, Jackson said he saw no need to bring the Soviets into the picture, particularly since Egypt has expelled Soviet advisers.

"It seems to me we have elevated the Soviets to a position they would not have dreamed of," Jackson said.

The Egyptian government radio welcomed the declaration as a "positive step toward a breakthrough in the stalemated Arab-Israeli conflict." But it criticized the failure of the statement to recognize the PLO as "the representative of the Palestinian people."

Red tape clogs cancer bans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government says red tape is delaying decisions on whether hundreds of chemicals suspected of causing cancer should be banned from the American workplace.

In a plan expected to have a far-reaching impact on business and industry, the Labor Department today proposed eliminating the slow, item-by-item review of suspected carcinogens it says has stymied its work.

Although 1,500 to 2,000 substances have been identified as potentially causing cancer, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration has completed regulatory action on only 17 in its five-year history.

The proposal by the Labor Department agency would set standards for identifying and regulating all potential cancer-causing agents, often without the need for lengthy hearings as now required.

Trying to control carcinogenic substances on a case-by-case basis is like trying to put out a fire with an eye drop, per Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said in announcing the plan, designed to pick out those substances that need emergency action.

"This new policy will allow OSHA to respond to threats to workers' health with much greater speed and efficiency," Marshall said.

After public hearings sometime in the next several months, the Labor Department can make the standards permanent.

The new approach is likely to be welcomed by labor and environmental groups, while being opposed by industry.

Enforcement of many standards issued previously by the agency have been delayed through court challenges from business and industry groups.

The Manufacturing Chemists Association opposed an earlier draft of the plan and is expected to object to the final proposal.

The proposal would allow the agency to classify potential cancer-causing chemicals found in the workplace as either confirmed carcinogens, suspected cancer-causing agents or safe.

Such classifications would in turn automatically trigger various degrees of regulatory action.

Police decision expected today

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Whether testimony about alleged brutality by a former Houston policeman can be heard by a jury in the murder trial of the former officer was to be ruled on today by a state judge.

State District Court Judge James Warren, who was to rule in the case, allowed such testimony Friday with the jury out of the room.

Terry Denson, 27, and Stephen Orlando, 21, are on trial on murder charges in the last May drowning death of Joe Campos Torres, 23. They are accused of beating Torres and pushing him into Houston's Buffalo Bayou while Torres was in police custody.

Howell okay after crash

Larry Dean Howell, 25, of Pampa is in satisfactory condition this morning in High Plains Baptist Hospital in Amarillo where he is being treated for a compound fracture of the right leg.

The accident occurred when Howell, who was driving a motorcycle, struck a parked car in the 500 block of North Hobart. He was thrown across the road as a result of the impact, according to his mother, Mrs. Dulsa Howell.

Freed hostage condemns Japan

DACCA, Bangladesh (AP) — An American missionary among the hostages freed from the hijacked Japanese airliner condemned the Japanese government's capitulation to the demands of the five terrorists.

Jenabe Caldwell, 51, of Anchorage, Alaska, said the 4 1/2-day ordeal aboard the plane was "pretty horrendous, terribly, terribly brutal, but I wouldn't have let those guys go."

"The minute we give in to criminals we're finished, and that's just what we're doing," Caldwell said in a telephone interview from the Holy Family Hospital.

"While I was on the plane, I thought: 'This is war, and even if we're casualties, we shouldn't give into it.'"

"Somewhere we've got to have enough guts to stand up for what we believe in."

Caldwell, a missionary for the Bahai sect, said the five hijackers were "mostly boys, but anyone who thinks these Commies were playing games, they should have been on that plane."

"These guys called it war and I agree," he continued. But "they didn't want to die; they wouldn't have blown up the plane with themselves on it. They were too cocky for that."

Caldwell said the ordeal aboard the plane was "pretty horrendous. You were living in your own hell, the lack of air, the stench, the complete unjustified brutality."

"I thought I had lived under pretty tough conditions, but this was the toughest living I've ever had. And for others it was much worse."

"I saw a Saudi man pistol-whipped twice. Other passengers were clubbed on the head. It was unjustified. We were all cooperating. There was no rhyme or reason to it."

Caldwell said he was hospitalized for acute constipation and a painful back ailment. He said he was leaving the hospital today and planned to fly to Bangkok.

Bahaiism is a modern religion developed in Iran that stresses principles of universal brotherhood and social equality.

Raza Unida urges open border policy

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The United States should have an open border policy with Mexico, adopt a minimum wage for all workers and provide for collective bargaining among Mexican immigrant laborers, says Jose Angel Gutierrez, a founder of the Texas Raza Unida Party.

Gutierrez, a judge in Zavala County, Texas, spoke Saturday to a conference in Salt Lake City on undocumented workers. He said his suggestions, along with an attempt by the United States to bolster Mexico's economy, could end what the Carter administration sees as an immigration problem.

Gutierrez acknowledged his plan could lead to a "tremendous influx of Mexican immigrants to the U.S. immediately." But he said most of the immigrants eventually would return to Mexico as living conditions in that country improve and use of cheap labor in the United States is eliminated.

She and Layton Barton, Extension agent, work with one of the newest projects in Gray County. Livestock remains a popular activity in 4-H, especially club members in Gray County, like Randy Skaggs, left, and Stormy Fulton, who learn about pigs.

From guns to goats, from raising sheep to knitting the wool off their backs, from A to Z, 4-H offers activities and projects for young folks, ages 9 to 19.

This week is National 4-H Week, observed by the almost 6 million members in America, including Gray County's 420 4-H'ers.

Local Extension agents Marilyn Tate and Layton Barton work with the county's nine clubs and the 134 adult leaders in a long list of activities and projects.

Some of the things local members are pursuing include leathercraft, rifle marksmanship, trap shooting, the production of beef and swine, horses, vet science, food and nutrition, food preservation, clothing, knitting and crocheting, public speaking, leadership, sheep, goats, rabbits, chickens, dogs, catfish farming, raising minnows and waterdogs for fishing bait, and — well, where there is an interest, there is probably a 4-H program to match it.

Some outstanding 4-H'ers have come out of the nine county clubs. In 1975, Chris Skaggs and Hank Jordan won state honors with their swine demonstration. Skaggs and Elaine Webb won state record book competition that same year.

And this year Sue Smith was a winner at the state horse show.

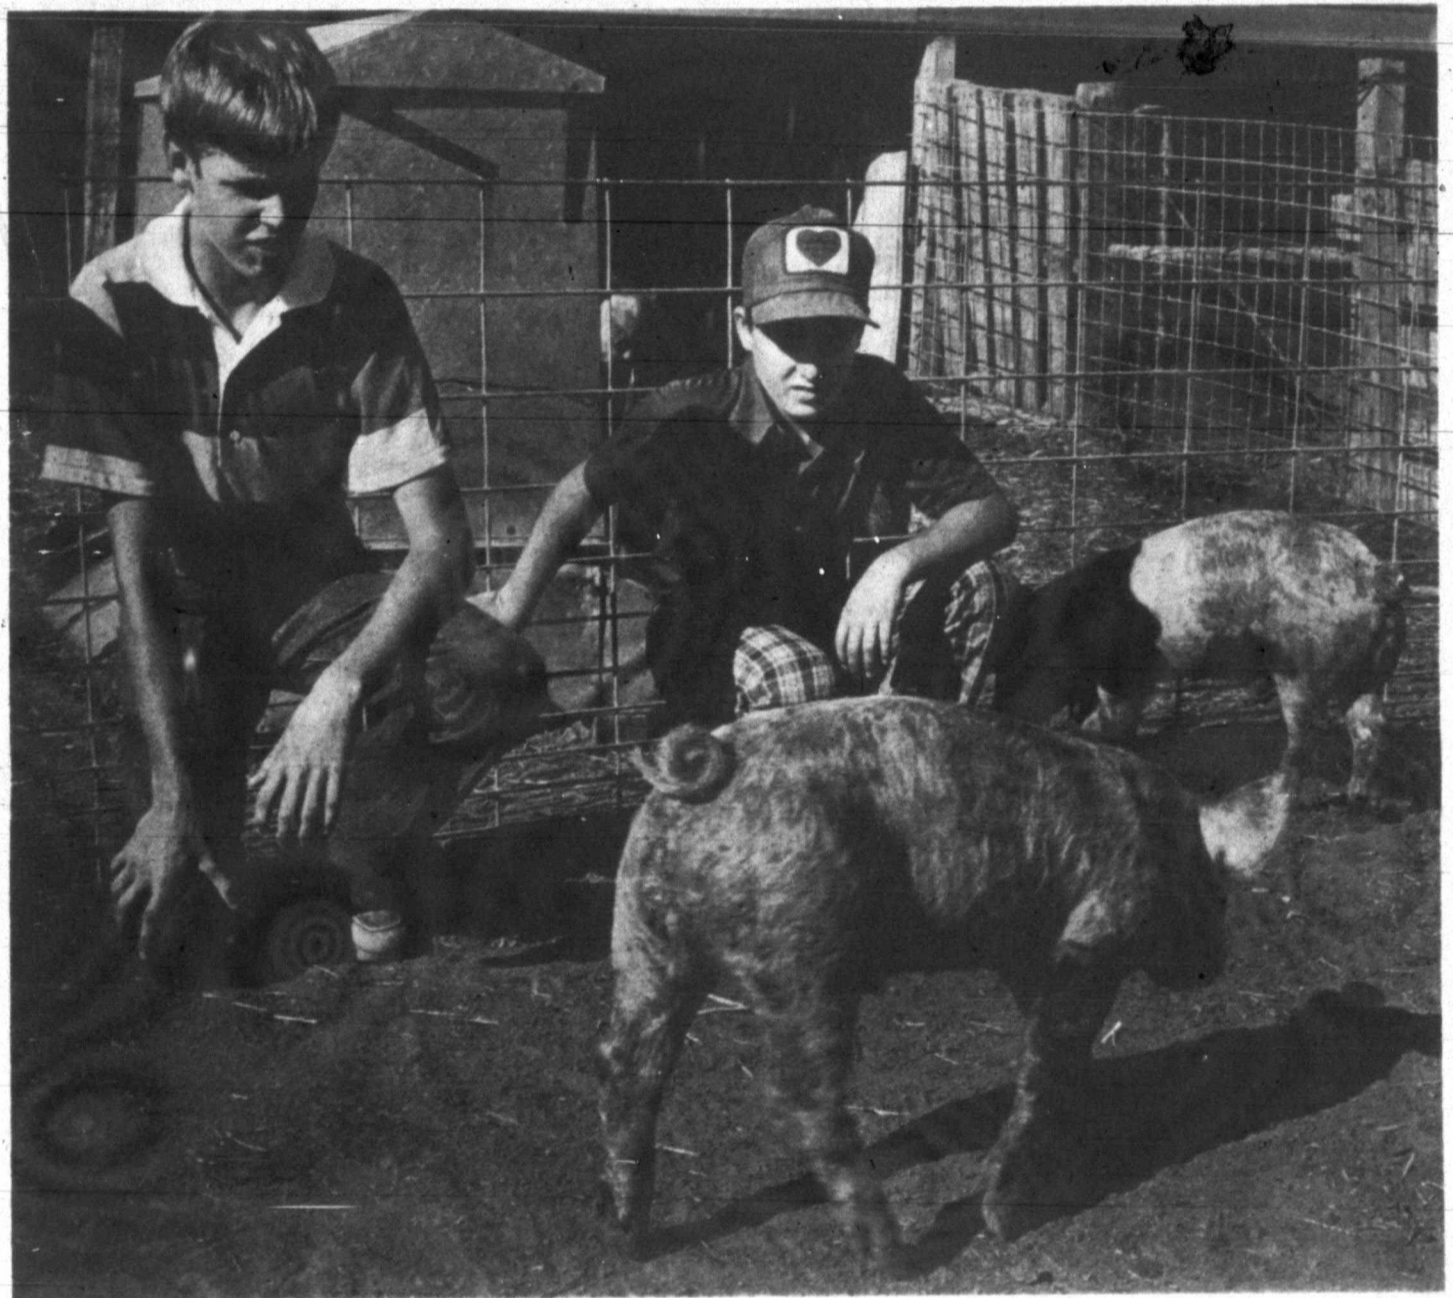

One local 4-H'er is Linda Stovall. She has five years in the organization and she was asked why she is a member.

"I've met a whole bunch of people in 4-H," she said. "And we do lots of activities. We hear from people from all over Texas and there's a bunch of competition."

The competition can result in trips for the local and area winners. And other opportunities to travel are presented by the 4-H summer camp.

The theme of National 4-H Week this year is "4-H freedom to be."

Youngsters who would like to be a part of 4-H and adults who are interested in being sponsors may contact the local Extension office at 669-7429.

The fellas are in home ec class learning to cook and plan meals

By CHARLIE BERMONT
Pampa News Staff

"When we get married we can teach our wives how to cook," said one student in the home management for boys class now being taught at Pampa High School.

Subtitled bachelor living, the course offers nutrition, menu planning, budgeting and cooking skills. It recently was abbreviated from one semester to 12 weeks, and this caused the elimination of extensive laundry skills training. Now, part of the laundry training is making a duffel bag or a simple garment, such as a T-shirt.

"You should see them," said Kim Lester, who has taught the course since its inception three years ago. "they strut around like roosters with their shirts. Every day I see a shirt on someone that was made in class."

The class is a combination of lecture and lab. For the vegetables unit, the class is asked to list 15 vegetables, their Vitamin C and A content, and rank them according to their nutritional value.

Using the library of cookbooks, the boys are instructed to select and prepare a vegetable dish they have never eaten. This involves planning within the class structure, for the dish must be prepared, eaten and cleaned up within the hour.

When all the dishes are completed they are set out on the table buffet style and everyone has a chance to sample each other's masterpieces.

Mrs. Lester said she can't tell the difference between the food made in the boys' and the girls' classes. The advantage in having the all-boys class, she said, is that in a coed situation boys often become inhibited and let the girls do all the work.

"It needs to start with the younger boys," she said, "a lot of the boys do have more homemaking experience. They are louder and bigger, though when you get 15 boys in one of these little kitchens it's really hard to be heard."

The class seems to find its subject matter relevant. Now, with the course less than half over, dietary habits already have changed and the boys have become more conscious of the money they spend on food.

The course was initiated as an icebreaker to get boys interested in the home arts, but has succeeded beyond Mrs. Lester's expectations. Most of the students are taking the course to develop their personal skills for the time when they will "wing it on their own," but one student hopes what he learns here will aid him when he opens his own restaurant.

"I like the semester format a little better than the quarter system," Mrs. Lester said. "I'd really like the chance to get to know them a little better. Now they fly by. I feel like I'm sort of in a factory."

"But we've got some great chefs here."

CHOICES

Blame game

By Karen Blaker, Ph.D.

DEAR DR. BLAKER — My wife just found out about an affair I've been having for a couple of years, and she is furious. She is ready for a divorce, and she just can't forgive me.

She can't understand that she had so much to do with it. The problems we had were largely her fault. But she refuses to be responsible for my affair. How can I get her to see that it was largely her fault?

DEAR READER — You must take responsibility for your own actions. If you had an affair to escape from even the most horrendous marital relationship, you must realize that you chose that option from others available at that time.

Some of the other options that you might have chosen, like marital counseling, would have probably addressed the problems within your marriage more directly and therefore, might have had a more positive outcome. No, your wife is not to blame for your affair.

In fact, your urgency to blame your wife for all the problems in your marriage indicates that you might have a strong need to always feel you are in the right. If you found fulfillment in your affair as your marriage continued to deteriorate, why didn't you negotiate a trial separation from your wife?

Instead, it sounds like you might have let the secret slip "accidentally," thus provoking a blow-up and her request for a divorce. By blaming the affair on her you could end the marriage but make it look like she was the one who wanted out.

Many people are over-invested in making their marriage work. Even if it is an unsatisfying relationship for both partners they may feel as though staying in the marriage is proof of a successful like, whereas divorce equals failure. If you want to end your marriage, take responsibility for your feelings and end it. If you are unsure about such a drastic action, seek some professional help.

It could be that a neurotic element of your marriage has been your need to inflate your self-esteem by blaming all the problems on your wife. This doesn't mean that the problems are all your "fault" either. She of course participated in this interaction by allowing the blaming to occur. That might be evidence of her low self-esteem.

One can obtain the illusion of growing taller by chopping down those around him; or he can feel the gratification of true growth by accomplishing goals that make him proud to be the person he is. The approach is up to you.

If this is an accurate reading of your situation, you can see that your marriage is badly in need of help. It may even be too late to salvage the warmer, more tender feelings of the distant past. Stop playing the blame game and suggest something positive if you want to save your marriage.

Write to Dr. Blaker in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies, but questions of general interest will be discussed in future columns.

Oswald's wife fell asleep during movie

CHANDLER, Tex. (AP) — ABC Television had better hope that their movie "The Trial of Lee Harvey Oswald" doesn't affect most viewers the way it did Marina Oswald Porter.

In an interview with The Dallas Times Herald, Mrs. Porter said she fell asleep during the made-for-television movie's first segment aired Friday night.

Mrs. Porter is the widow of the man identified by the Warren Commission as the person who acted alone in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy at Dallas Nov. 22, 1963.

The movie, filmed on location at Dallas and nearby McKinney, Tex., is a fictionalized version of what the film writers thought might have happened had Oswald lived to stand trial on the charge of murdering President Kennedy.

Johannesburg, South Africa, became a city in 1928.

Principal to cash in on federal rules

LUDLOW, Vt. (AP) — A Vermont school principal says he is going to start a construction company just to take advantage of federal regulations aimed at helping minority businessmen.

Communities that receive Economic Development Administration grants must spend 10 per cent of the funds for purchases from minority-owned businesses.

And John Wu, principal of the Ascutney Middle School in Weathersfield, says he plans to cash in on the requirement by starting his own construction company.

Wu, former executive director of the Vermont Republican party, is an Oriental and qualifies under the EDA guidelines. Under federal standards, a minority business is one which is more than 50 per cent controlled by minority group members.

Local officials were told by the federal government that although Vermont has a minority population of less than 1 per cent, EDA expects grant recipients to "make every effort possible" to meet the requirements. EDA said waivers would be granted only "in very special cases."

Several town officials complained that because there are few minority businesses in Vermont they would be forced to go outside the state for contracting services, which would boost construction costs.

"I think my company can offer an alternative to going out of state," said Wu.

He said he plans to subcontract the bulk of his work to Vermont companies.

"I'm a lifelong Vermonter," he said, "and I'm going to keep all the money here in Vermont that I earn."

Wu said he filed incorporation papers with the Vermont secretary of state's office earlier last month.

Since making it known that his company is available to satisfy the EDA requirement, Wu said he has been contacted by several architects and town officials who are interested in his services.

"I'm sending a letter to all towns telling them that I'm here," he said. "And it's not just the 10 per cent we're going to go for, but the whole thing."

Wu, who held the GOP post from July 1974 until last January, said he became interested in construction while working as a project director for a Claremont, N.H. firm last summer.

Income hike in Texas high

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Personal income has increased in Texas an average of 11.4 per cent over the past seven years, compared with a national average of 9.3 per cent, reports Texas Business Review.

Among the top five income-producing states, only Texas exceeds the national average. California's growth rate ties the national average, and New York, Illinois and Pennsylvania fall below it.

Employment in Texas was up in June by four tenths of one per cent from May and up 2.7 per cent from June a year ago.

The June total was 5,439,900, the highest number of persons with jobs ever recorded in Texas.

What's up in soap operas

The Linc Tylers of "All My Children"

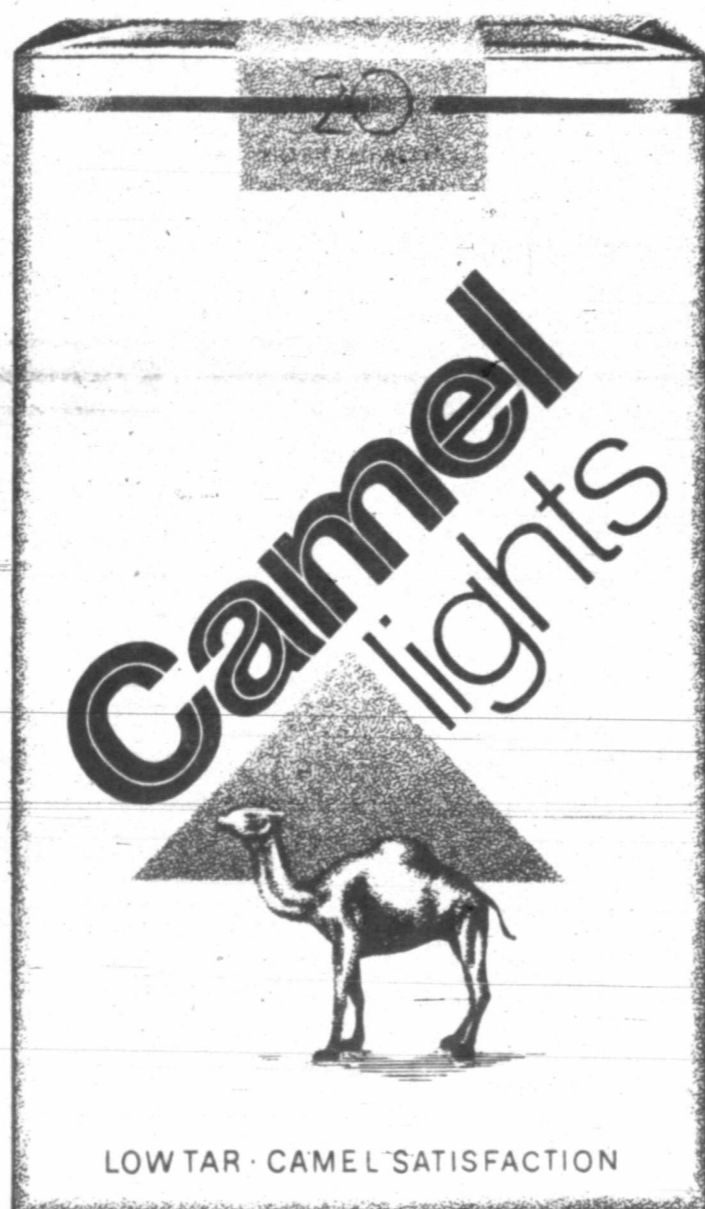

Your favorite soap opera is surely on this list, but it may not be the highest-rated (by household) according to the people at Nielsen. Edge of Night may be in trouble.

1. As the World Turns
2. Guiding Light
3. All My Children
4. Search for Tomorrow
5. Another World
6. The Young and the Restless
7. Ryan's Hope
8. General Hospital
9. Days of Our Lives
10. Love of Life
11. Edge of Night

Question: Why do you suppose the soap people put such optimistic names on their products (with the exception of The Young and the Restless and General Hospital)?

Quiet efforts made to keep nutrition

By BRIAN B. KING
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — With Congress near the end of the current session, attempts are being made quietly to have the Senate reverse its decision early in the year to do away with a separate committee on nutrition.

Farm report

The decision was made as part of an internal reorganization plan that was worked out with little tension and bitterness among senators whose provinces were being juggled. Few have indicated a desire to reopen that Pandora's box.

If the decision is not reversed, the Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs will be out of business New Year's Eve, its research functions transferred to a subcommittee of the agriculture committee.

The panel, with a budget of about $430,000, has no legislative functions as such. It can only conduct the hearings and research that form the basis for measures worked on by the committees from which its membership is drawn: agriculture and human resources.

About 10 days ago, as debate on energy legislation began to eclipse other Senate work, three Republicans and three Democrats introduced a resolution that would continue the committee for two years with a smaller budget and staff.

The resolution was referred to the rules committee, scene of the earlier reorganization fight where a two-year extension was defeated and the extension to Dec. 31 agreed upon as an alternative to killing it right away.

This time, Sens. George McGovern, D-S.D., the chairman, and Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., the ranking minority member, are publicly standing aside, although their turf and the jobs of staff members they and Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., have hired are at stake.

Democrats Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina and Dick Clark of Iowa are carrying the battle instead, backed by Republicans Mark

O. Hatfield of Oregon, Richard Schweiker of Pennsylvania and Henry Bellmon of Oklahoma.

Some of them voted against the committee before. But, in a letter to all other senators, they say that their resolution "is meant to convey our current strong feeling that the work of the committee has been of extraordinary usefulness during the last several months and should continue."

The committee staff is planning 1977 schedule of projects and hearings after it lost the January battle, focusing on a publication called "Dietary Goals for the United States."

That report is to be supplemented with additional comments in a booklet now at the printers, with five other large publications also being drafted that probably will receive widespread publicity.

The dietary goals project has been embraced by nutritionists and some doctors, criticized by the American Medical Association as too general and blasted by cattle ranchers and others who felt their products were unfairly maligned.

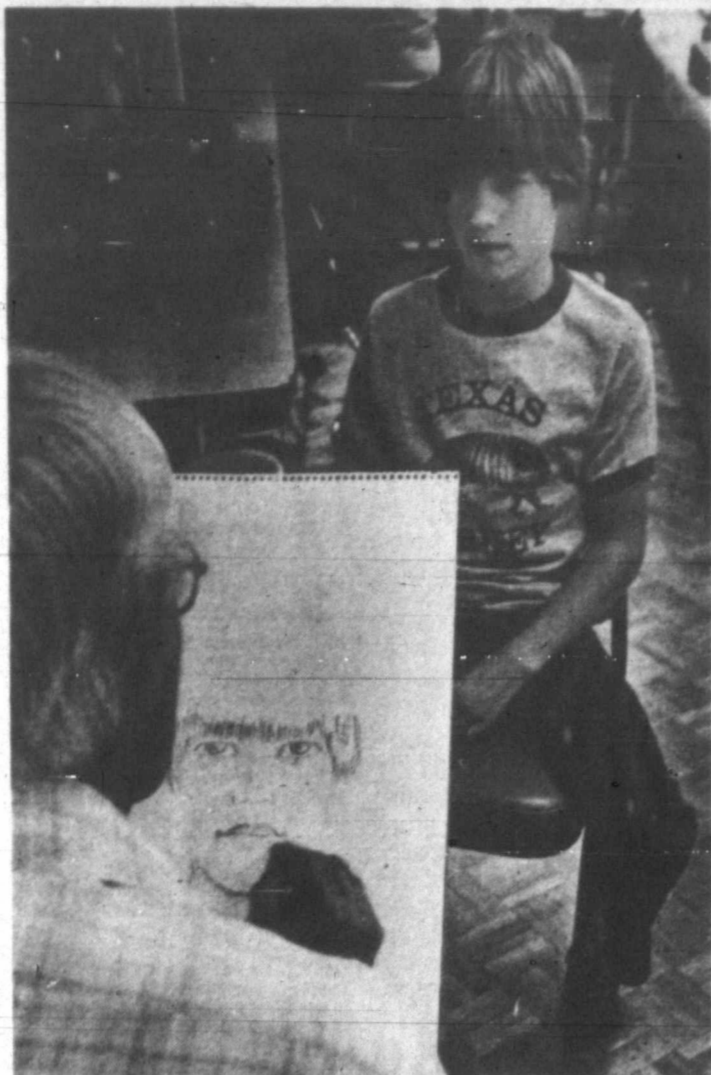

But supporters of the committee, which is the key point of government access for the food-aid advocates known as the "hunger lobby," say privately they think they can get the extension passed if enough letters come in to back it.

Their biggest asset one staff member said, is the deficit in the government now: there is no one central focus for human nutrition policy in either the executive or legislative branches except the panel.

Congressional audits have found that only 14 of the 30 scattered nutrition-education programs, for example, can pinpoint how much they spend on nutrition education. Legislation just signed into law does, however, coordinate nutrition programs and increase research funds.

The senators pointed out that six of the 10 leading causes of death are diet-related. That is the kingpin of the supporters' case as advocacy groups go with their newsletters to the public again: someone has to care about too much of the wrong kinds of food being eaten.

Hill damage suit trial enters sixth week today

HOUSTON (AP) — The trial of an $7.6 million wrongful death damage suit resulting from the 1972 shooting death of a prominent plastic surgeon enters its sixth week today.

The surviving family of Dr. John Hill are suing oil millionaire Ash Robinson, Hill's one time father-in-law.

In the legal action, Robert Hill, Connie Hill and Myra Hill, the son, widow and mother of the slain plastic surgeon, allege Robinson, 79, masterminded the Hill slaying.

They claim Robinson took the action to avenge the death of the oilman's daughter, Joan Robinson Hill.

At the time he was shot to death by a masked gunman at his River Oaks home, Hill was awaiting trial on charges of killing Joan Hill, his first wife, through medical neglect in 1969.

Tip predicts energy bill

By ROB WOOD
Associated Press Writer
THE WOODLANDS, Tex. (AP) — Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., speaker of the U.S. House, said Sunday night that the complete energy bill will be passed by Congress and placed on the desk of President Carter before the end of this session.

O'Neill said any solutions to the nation's energy problems must be interwoven "with solutions to recession, inflation, environment and international economic cooperation."

O'Neill, speaking at a scientific conference in Houston's outskirts, said when the energy crisis hit the United States "we in Congress had to solve this with a committee structure that was established in the 1940s and which did not have the flexibility to deal with problems of this magnitude."

Carter eyes oil tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is considering a $5-a-barrel levy on imported oil if Congress scraps his plan to raise domestic crude oil taxes, according to his top energy adviser.

The import fee would raise gasoline prices five to seven cents a gallon, the same increase envisioned by the President's original proposal. Energy Secretary James II. Schlesinger said Sunday.

"We are in this ludicrous position in which we are subsidizing every barrel of oil that comes into the country," Schlesinger said.

"That is the reason the (domestic) equalization tax was proposed. If Congress fails to enact that tax, the President must consider other alternatives."

Schlesinger said the President could raise taxes on imported oil under the Trade Adjustment Act without having to get congressional approval.

Schlesinger said the $5-a-barrel import tax would, by raising gasoline prices, have the same energy-saving effect as a $2.50-a-barrel tax on domestic crude.

Schlesinger said the United States "cannot afford" to continue importing $45 billion worth of oil, the projected total for this year.

He said that while gasoline prices would rise under the import tax, consumers could be offered some form of tax relief. Carter has promised to rebate the $12 billion to $15 billion the domestic crude tax would generate to consumers.

Although the crude oil tax was killed by the Senate Finance Committee, an attempt to revive it is expected.

But Schlesinger said that the alternative uses the committee had considered for revenues raised by the tax would "give far too much to the industry."

Schlesinger spoke on ABC-TV's Issues and Answers.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., asked about Schlesinger's comments, said the question is not so much over the tax itself but what to do with the revenue it would produce.

"The fight will be over how do we spend the money and anytime you get $12 billion or $15 billion in a pot before the Senate you will get 12 or 15 different suggestions as to how it should be spent," Jackson said.

Jackson was interviewed on Meet the Press on NBC-TV.

The conference, called "Alternates to Growth '77," is aimed at solving the problems of population growth, food, energy and other major issues that will face the world in the years ahead.

O'Neill said Americans have done little to set long-range goals and "although we speak in glowing terms of the future, we tend to remain a captive of the present, as if there were no tomorrow."

He said, "the national energy problem is only an example of an antiquated structure for handling modern, complex problems."

The House Speaker said the House of Representatives "has responded to the energy crisis by adopting an ad hoc approach, and this example of modern adaptivity by the House resulted in the enactment of a truly comprehensive national energy policy."

The U.S. Senate is still debating the issue with deregulation of natural gas prices, the main issue stalling enactment of energy legislation.

O'Neill pointed to the energy problem, "as only a highlight to the need on the part of decision-makers at every level of government to accept the possibility that the decision-making machinery of the past may not be adequate for today and for the years ahead."

He said, "it is especially important that the anti-planning attitude that has dominated our national thinking for the past century be laid permanently to rest."

The speaker said the executive branch of the government, "with its vast resources develop complex programs which Congress has no capability to properly evaluate. So, when the time comes to vote on the issues... it was extremely difficult for Congress to marshal the facts and arguments effectively."

"In this era of accelerated change, we simply cannot afford to reel along from one crisis to another as we are doing now."

In the years ahead, O'Neill said, resource shortages are going to compel some "coordinated national effort to pull together information and foresight. We must serve both the public and the needs of the private sector."
