Did father prompt Gavrel?

Associated Press Writer
AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — A hospital roommate of Gus Bubba Gavrel testified today he overheard the young shooting victim tell his father he did not know who shot him and he quoted the father as replying "It was Cullen that did it. A girl out there said it was, so if anybody asks you, you say it was."

Thakrar jury hears arguments

Both the prosecution and defense agreed in their final arguments this morning that the fate of Kishan V. Thakrar hinged on whether the jury believed Thakrar or Vincent Simon and Jim Crouch Thakrar is accused of soliciting a kickback from Pampa Office Supply while chief accountant at Highland General Hospital. The case is being tried before District 31 Judge Grainger McIlhenny in the Gray County Courthouse.

Supply, and Crouch, an employee of the store in December of 1974 when the solicitation was alleged to have occurred, were in strong agreement about what had been said to them by Thakrar. Both Simon and Crouch had testified earlier in the week that Thakrar told them a cash register at the office supply store fitted the hospital's needs, and to "bring it on out."

Thakrar also testified Wednesday that since mid-1973, all hospital purchases were made through Purchasing Agent J.J. Roach, and that the only time he had been in contact with Simon and Crouch was on a day when he, Roach, and then hospital administrator Robert Monogue went to Pampa Office Supply to examine a cash register the firm had in stock.

Thakrar said the register at the office supply store did not fit the specifications of the hospital, but that in any case Monogue had done "all the

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Parceling competition

After decades of complaining about parcel post causing the U.S. postal system great losses and operating at the expense of first class mail, officials now seek to regain more of this business. Now that the United Parcel Service has shown what private enterprise can do, the postal bureaucracy is singing a different tune.

A story in the Wall Street Journal tells of a Postal Service test program designed to get back some of the parcel post business it lost to this private concern.

Postal Service officials express hope that they "can improve their competitive posture."

It will start with the usual "study." They then will pin their hopes on a couple of ideas: fixed fees per package under 20 pounds, and minimum volume contract agreements with large retail stores. They also hope to provide "day certain delivery" so that customers can be told delivery date.

All this is not likely to stampede the United Parcel Service nor give them much cause for alarm. They have been giving fine service to their customers and are gaining more patrons all the time.

The major success factor is that they must project an image of serving their clients to keep moving ahead and they must be efficient or go down the drain.

The Postal Service too often projects a quite different image. Attitudes oftentimes suggest that the clientele should serve the Postal Service and all staff concerned is aware that there is no imperative need to be efficient since losses will always be covered by taxing the entire citizenry.

Testing is set for a year for this Postal Service plan and by the time "proper" study is concluded some new idea will surface. But as long as the delivery of mail and or parcels is a function of government, it will remain a service more in name than in performance.

The only way taxpayers and mail service customers will ever get a real break will be when the government dissolves its first class mail monopoly by letting private enterprise provide services in a competitive market place activity.

...and him without an airbag."

Nation's press

Are we at threshold of less

By JOHN C. SPARKS
(The Freeman)

During the mid-1800's the people of this nation were in an energy crisis. But lacking today's means of instant communication, most people then were totally unaware of the seriousness of the impending calamity. No president made any speeches about it. No energy czar sought to cope with it. Yet, there was a crisis.

Whale oil which was used primarily for the lighting of lamps, and sperm oil as a lubricant, were dwindling in supply and prices were about to blow through the roof. Sources of energy for heating were not then of grave concern, for nearly everyone lived near coal fields or forests from which fuel could be readily obtained.

Had the federal government been as officious then as now, it could have taken steps in the face of the looming disaster, to subsidize an increase in the whale population and the production of whale and sperm oil. But the government took no such action. Indeed, most people at the time held the strange notion that any shortage was their responsibility and curable only as they did something about it. That they were on the threshold of less whale and sperm oil was to them, not some kind of doom, but a supply with something better.

And replace they did, with something far better. Shortly after 1850, petroleum was discovered in Pennsylvania. At first it was used in small quantities for medicinal purposes. But free people, acting in a market unencumbered by government regulations, have a knack of performing miracles. Before another century could pass, petroleum and natural gas, and their conversion to electricity, had become a major source of energy. Beyond possible belief in 1850, such energy would propel millions of vehicles over thousands of miles of paved highways, along waterways, through the air and outer space, linking peoples and communities throughout the world. Homes and farms and other businesses would be heated, lighted and powered by these same sources.

Despite increasing taxation and government regulation and control, the capacity of comparatively free people to perform miracles has enabled them to outmaneuver and come around such blockages.

Today, however, government officials are taking great pains to advise and inform the people that we stand "at the threshold of less." The planet earth and its people have passed the zenith. We cannot expect our levels of living to improve in the future as they did in the past. On the contrary, they say, now we are moving rapidly downhill. The best we can do is to ration irrevocably diminishing stores of resources. We must save what we have. There will be no more. They way is no longer for the adventurous ones, who try the impossible, and make it. Instead, it is for a new breed of American—the timid soul.

What nonsense! Have the peddlers of doom not heard of the wisdom of the past: necessity is the mother of invention... when the going gets tough, the tough get going... they said it couldn't be done, but he did it... those who give up liberty to gain temporary safety deserves neither liberty nor safety... God is with those who persevere... One could go on and on with these proverbs drawn from the way of life of free men.

This is not to ridicule the wisdom of conservation or the abhorrence of waste, but it is to submit all the facts and conditions and desires and abilities of individuals into the market place and let the market work. Into it will be drawn an infinity of ideas from individual men and women and from it will emerge tomorrow's ingenious solutions to today's unsolvable problems. The only prerequisite for such miracles is that peaceful persons be free from government interference.

Herman Kahn, William Brown, and Leon Martel, with the assistance of the staff of the Hudson Institute, have published a thorough and thought-provoking book, The Next 200 Years. Its basic message is this: "Except for temporary fluctuations caused by bad luck or poor management, the world need not worry about energy shortages... in the future. And energy abundance is probably the world's best insurance that the entire human population (even 15-20 billion) can be well cared for, at least physically, during many centuries to come." The authors base these conclusions on the probability that per capita consumption in the world two centuries hence will be some twenty times higher than today. Many of the energy sources are fully renewable. They cannot be depleted.

Let the private innovators be free to innovate. Let the private inventors be free to invent. Let the private enterprisers be free to support those new ideas that will make them rich—or poor, if certain ideas turn out, as some do, to be less bright than was expected. We, all the rest of us, will ride the coattails of the successful ideas into higher levels of living than ever before dreamed, and hardly be smudged by the poor ideas that fail to survive.

We stand at a threshold—not of less—but a threshold of danger that we let this fear psychology prevail to the point where government places free people in shackles and prevents the development of mankind that otherwise has barely begun. We cannot afford to cross this threshold of more government interference in our lives.

In Washington Security with sense

By Martha Angle and Robert Walters

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—Only once does the word "secrecy" appear in the Constitution, a reference to the right of each house of Congress to withhold portions of its "Journal of Proceedings". But by 1780, the government already was in the business of "classifying" information.

President George Washington that year asked the Senate to approve a "secret" article in a proposed treaty with the Creek Indians. Two years later, a controversy erupted over "secret" reports from military officers campaigning against Indians in the Northwest.

The federal government's basic "housekeeping statute," passed by Congress in 1789, authorized federal departments and agencies to provide for the "custody, use and preservation of records." Bureaucrats have claimed ever since that the references to "custody" and "preservation" allow them to deny public access to records.

The review, classification, protection and destruction of government secrets today is a thriving, multimillion-dollar industry in Washington. Four of the seven men who have served as president since World War II have issued executive orders designed to overhaul the system, and President Carter is about to join the crowd.

For those concerned about the mindless expansion of a security classification system which often serves as a little more than a mechanism for hiding from public view the incompetence and ineptness of government employees, the draft now being circulated by the White House goes a long way, but not quite far enough, toward bringing about needed reform.

Under the current system, a document classified "top secret" retains that status for 10 years, "secret" materials are withheld for eight years and "confidential" materials cannot be made public for six years.

Not satisfied with that leisurely declassification process, bureaucrats have abused a loophole in the existing regulations by routinely stamping "exempt from automatic downgrading" in papers they hope the public will never see.

The Carter proposal would limit to six years the time material could remain classified, regardless of its security category. There is, however, a loophole which authorizes limited use of a 20-year extension.

One major improvement in the pending proposal is its listing, for the first time, of 13 specific criteria which must be met if a document is to receive any security classification.

Only national security and foreign policy considerations are covered by those criteria—an important change that could finally end the senseless classification of information relating exclusively to domestic affairs.

The new order retains existing language which specifically prohibits classification of material "in order to conceal violations of law, inefficiency or administrative error (or) to prevent embarrassment." It perpetuates, however, a set of relatively weak administrative sanctions available for use against violators.

Perhaps the most questionable feature of the Carter proposal would allow all federal departments and agencies to "require the signing of a secrecy agreement as a precondition of access to classified information."

Under that provision, a federal employee who wanted to call the attention of Congress, the press or the public to malfeasance or misfeasance within the government would face legal sanctions if the information came from classified materials.

There already are available to federal prosecutors a range of tough anti-espionage laws to deal with spies or malcontents who attempt to covertly transmit classified material to other nations. The Justice Department this year already has prosecuted two well-publicized cases, in Baltimore and Los Angeles.

The proposed secrecy agreements would do little more than frustrate potential "whistle-blowers" who discover colleagues trying to hide their mistakes behind "top secret" stamps.

Unexpected honor

There are so many public buildings that having one named after you is no very great honor. And so many politicians have been indicted lately that one of them standing trial isn't so unusual.

But the story of former Rep. Edward A. Garmatz, D-Md., is something else. He's been indicted on charges of conspiring to take $15,000 from shipping concerns in return for sponsoring legislation favorable to them.

If all goes according to schedule, he'll be tried in Baltimore—in the Edward A. Garmatz Federal Courthouse. Now there is a singular honor indeed.

Nation's press

A little knowledge

(Wall Street Journal)

Back in March, the Food and Drug Administration announced that saccharin was a carcinogen and would be banned from production and distribution.

In May, the agency modified its proposal to allow sales of saccharin in bulk form, though not in prepared foods and beverages.

And now it looks as if Congress is going to pass legislation to delay even the modified ban for 18 months, to give the National Academy of Sciences time for another analysis.

The backtracking reflects, of course, extraordinarily sustained pressure from industry interests and from panicky saccharin users, but it also illuminates the limits of our knowledge in public health enterprises like this one.

One big reason that the pressure has had its effect is that from the beginning it was truly doubtful that saccharin was being banned under reasonable standards. First there was the problem with the Delaney clause, which requires the banning of carcinogens without regard to any ambiguities or mitigating factors. Then there was the question of whether the rat feeding tests applied to saccharin were appropriate measures of what the substance would do to humans.

After the original ban, a group of researchers in Canada claimed that they had indeed found an association between saccharin and human cancer. But the prestigious British medical journal "The Lancet" has not commented editorially on the study, and said of it that "most readers will find the case against saccharin unimpressive." With this new evidence, the case against the ban emerges even stronger.

But it would be a pity if the rescue of saccharin were allowed to pass for some kind of fluke. There is something more fundamentally wrong with a public policy approach that leads so inexorably to offensively unreasonable outcomes.

The trend in this country's environment and public health policies rests on the assertion that we know enough about the mechanisms of illness to mark out exactly where and at what level true hazards lie, and enough about society to be able to say how much we should pay to avoid these hazards.

Neither is true. And unless policymakers are made to recognize the limits of their knowledge, they'll continue to produce the results that the saccharin case exemplifies.

More dangerous than football

Skateboard injuries soar

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — More people will be injured riding skateboards this year than playing scholastic, collegiate and backyard football, a new federal study discloses.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission estimates 375,000 people will be injured in skateboard accidents in 1977, compared to some 370,000 in all the non-professional football games in the country.

An unreleased report based on the study predicts that the number of skateboard injuries will be more than double last year's 188,000.

A commission official said no other product under its jurisdiction has shown such a dramatic growth in the number of injuries associated with it.

William Kitzes, the agency's program manager for sports and recreation, said only bicycles will account for more injuries this year. There are about 80 million bicycle riders, compared to 20 million skateboarders.

Kitzes said in a telephone interview Tuesday night that more than 25 per cent of all skateboard accidents occur the first day of use.

He said the skateboard report, which won't be finished until next month, shows that only 2 per cent of the injuries result from defects in the skateboards.

Most injuries come from skaters' inexperience or problems such as potholes.

About 40 per cent of those hurt go to hospital emergency rooms, he said.

Of those treated, 30 per cent break an arm or leg and 24 per cent have cuts and bruises, while strains and sprains account for 18 per cent.

The commission previously reported there were 13 skateboard deaths between 1973 and last April.

The number of skateboards has grown from about 14 million in 1975 to 20 million in 1976, the commission said.

Skateboards have been around in some form since the 1950s, Kitzes said. But the early models allowed only a straight ride — not the turning, weaving and speeds of up to 90 miles an hour that riders can now experience.

The safety commission's options range from banning the product to safety campaigns. Kitzes said a ban is unlikely.

"The trend is toward safer skateboarding," he said. "That's what we're interested in."

Kitzes suggests that riders wear safety equipment, such as helmets and pads.

Nursing home law criticized

HOUSTON (AP) — Several witnesses have told a Texas Department of Health public hearing that the state's new nursing home law may work better on paper than in practice.

Two Houston-area nursing home officials said tougher licensing rules, which could translate into more work for physicians with Medicaid-paid nursing home patients, may backfire.

The tightening up of rules about physician visits to nursing home patients could drive doctors out of geriatric practice.

The federal budget for the current fiscal year, which began Oct. 1, had assumed a slower rise in hospital costs for the government's Medicare and Medicaid programs than has been the case.

The Carter proposal is to limit the cost increases for hospitals to the general inflation rate, plus a 3 per cent allowance for technological improvement. This formula would allow annual cost increases of about 9 per cent, instead of the 15 per cent of recent years.

The administration also proposed a national limit on capital expenditures for hospitals of about half the current $5 billion per year, saying that new buildings have boosted hospital costs.

The Congressional Budget Office has estimated the nation would save more than $40 billion in the next five years under the administration plan. But the American Medical Association and other medical groups have opposed the bill, saying it would reduce the quality of health care. The administration says unnecessary costs can be trimmed while keeping quality care.

CARGO STUDY

WASHINGTON (AP) — The electronics industry has become the biggest single user of air freight, according to a survey by the Air Transport Association on air cargo statistics of U.S.-scheduled airlines.

The ATA said the electronics industry was followed closely by producers of printed matter, machinery parts, cut flowers and wearing apparel.

Congress delays hospital vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is delaying until next year votes on President Carter's plan to hold down increases in hospital bills amid charges from one critic that Carter has not pushed the issue strongly enough.

The administration unveiled its proposal last April and had hoped to get it through Congress by Oct. 1. But since then the bill has made its way through only one of four congressional committees that must consider it.

Congressional sources say there now is no chance for a vote in either the House or Senate before adjournment for the year.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., the proposal's leading supporter on Capitol Hill, is critical of Carter for what he calls Carter's failure to sell the plan to Congress.

Carter has left the lobbying effort chiefly to Joseph A. Califano Jr., the secretary of Health, Education and Welfare. But Kennedy contends the President should have taken a more visible stand on the issue, as he has done on his energy package.

"For such a complex issue, with vocal vested interests opposing the bill, a strong educational effort throughout the country and with the Congress is essential," Kennedy said in a recent speech.

Meanwhile, according to administration estimates, consumers were expected to pay an extra $750 million in hospital bills in the last three months of the year and face even higher payments next year.

US breaks sales record abroad

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. balance-of-trade picture improved in September when the United States sold more goods abroad than in any month in history, the Commerce Department said today.

However, the U.S. trade balance still showed a deficit for the month. But the deficit of $1.7 billion was a sharp drop from the $2.7 billion deficit for August and the smallest since a $1.2 billion deficit in May.

For the year, the United States has bought $19.2 billion more in foreign goods than it has sold abroad. The deficit could reach a record $30 billion for the year, administration officials have said.

The record exports for September totalled $10.9 billion, surpassing the $10.4 billion recorded in December 1976, the previous high. Most of the increase was in machinery and transport equipment, such as autos, manufactured goods, chemicals and food and live animals.

While exports rose 14.2 per cent, imports increased by about 3.3 per cent, mainly because of more imports of petroleum products.

The Carter administration has said almost all of the trade imbalance this year is caused by U.S. imports of oil from the Middle East. On his current Middle East trip, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal has been trying to persuade oil exporters to keep prices down, saying it is in their best interests.

Out of $12.6 billion in imports, petroleum accounted for $3.7 billion, an increase from $3.3 billion in August.

A growing trade deficit can often take away jobs from American workers and have a slackening effect on the economy. But U.S. officials say other countries have been unable to afford American products as the U.S. economy has improved more rapidly than the economy of purchasing countries.

Among exports, all categories increased in September, except aircraft, soybeans, grain sorghum and a few miscellaneous commodities.

In other economic news, Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur F. Burns, criticizing the Carter administration's economic policies, has said the country needs less spending and more investment.

While Burns was noting the business sector's uncertainty that the economy will continue to recover, Bethlehem Steel reported a record $477 million loss for its third quarter Wednesday.

Bethlehem and the four other top steel producers have reported aggregate earnings for the first nine months of the year 69 per cent below the same period last year.

In the auto industry, Chrysler said its profits dropped from $61.2 million in the third quarter of last year to $30.4 million this year. General Motors Corp. reported, however, that its profits were at a record $402 million for the third quarter.

Burns and the administration are at odds over the Federal Reserve's increase in the discount rate from 5 1/2 per cent to 6 per cent this week. The discount rate is what the central bank charges banks to borrow money.

The White House says the increase will stifle economic recovery.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
Dense fog reduced visibility to near zero over a vast area of Southeast Texas early today, interfering with automobile, airplane and ship traffic along the upper Texas coast.

The National Weather Service said the fog is causing problems with aviation and marine traffic, noting hazardous conditions in the Houston Ship Channel.

The fog was expected to burn away by mid-morning, but forecasters warned motorists that hazardous driving conditions would prevail in the area until

National weather

By The Associated Press
A cold front that brought drenching rains to the Southeast in the first half of the week began moving out to sea today, promising clearing skies and milder temperatures.

Some rain continued in the mid-Atlantic states and there were a few showers and thundershowers over the western Carolinas.

Meanwhile, Texans continued to bask in Indian summer as temperatures were expected to climb into the 80s for the second straight day, with the possibility of some more 90-degree readings. Temperatures stayed in the 70s much of Wednesday night, before dipping into the 50s.

Marijuana laws eased

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Two senators who say marijuana possession should continue to be a federal crime hope they can reverse a Senate committee's vote cutting the penalty to a $100 fine.

"We are sending out a message that really should not be sent out," Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, said after Wednesday's judiciary committee vote to substitute the civil fine of $100 for criminal sanctions.

Sen. Pul Laxalt, R-Nev., supported Hatch, saying it would be "a terribly bad thing for us to indicate to the people of this country that we are legalizing marijuana."

Hatch said he may propose, as an alternative, that the possession of up to 10 grams still be classified as a criminal offense, although subject only to a fine of $100.

Under present federal law, marijuana possession is punishable by a fine of up to $5,000 and imprisonment of up to one year.

Under the bill the committee approved, the penalty would be $100 for possession of less than an ounce. Possession of more than an ounce could draw a maximum penalty of up to 30 days in jail and a $500 fine.

Ten grams is enough for about seven cigarettes. An ounce will make about 20.

The committee meets again Monday.

Repealing the federal criminal sanctions would have little practical effect, as virtually all arrests for marijuana are made under state laws.

But backers of the move have said they expect it to be a model for the states in modernizing their own criminal laws.

The proposal to make possession of small amounts punishable only by a fine, such as minor traffic violations are now handled, was made by Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind.

His action came as an amendment to a massive criminal code revision that originally called for no penalties at all for less than 10 grams.

President Carter, who said this summer that 45 million Americans have tried the drug, has urged an end to federal criminal penalties for possessing less than an ounce of the substance.

On another issue, the committee adopted an amendment saying a newsman could not be jailed for violating a "gag order," restricting news coverage of legal proceedings, if a court declares the order unconstitutional.

Factory oil, gas use tax urged

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, which has yet to take a formal stand on President Carter's proposed energy taxes, is being urged to revive his plan for taxing factories using large amounts of oil and natural gas.

As the Senate moved toward a vote today on the industrial tax, opponents of the $40 billion, eight-year package of energy tax breaks recommended by the Senate Finance Committee sought to deny new government aid to the oil and gas industry.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, said the committee's bill is a blank check for the oil companies, "drawn on the account of the American consumer."

But Sen. Russell B. Long, finance committee chairman, said that if Jackson and his backers are able to prohibit aid for increased energy production, no energy bill could win congressional approval this year.

Jackson and Long squared off as the Senate plodded through a second day of debate on the finance committee bill, which rejects Carter's tax approach to solving the energy problem in favor of conservation and production tax incentives for business and industry.

Meanwhile, House members who support Carter's plan emerged from a White House meeting saying the President opposes diverting tax revenues to the oil industry.

They also said they feel Carter gave his commitment to veto any bill raising natural gas prices above $1.75 per 1,000 cubic feet.

"The $1.75 figure is as far as we should go," Rep. Andrew Maguire, D-N.J., quoted Carter as saying.

The Senate has voted to remove price controls from most gas, which would allow the current average price of about $1.45 to climb to whatever level the market would bear. The $1.75 price lid was voted by the House; a Senate-House conference committee will work out a compromise figure.

The six congressmen who met with Carter delivered a letter from 67 representatives who said they will switch their votes and oppose the final bill if it is too generous to the oil and gas industry. Only 34 would have to switch their votes to defeat a compromise bill from the House-Senate conference committee.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, set the stage for the first Senate test on the energy tax bill by offering the amendment reviving a scaled-down version of Carter's proposed tax on the industrial use of oil and gas.

Metzenbaum said his plan would save 80 per cent of the estimated 1.5 million barrels of oil per day that Carter's own industrial tax would save by 1985. Current U.S. usage is about 18 million barrels a day.

But, the Ohio Democrat said, his plan would be more equitable because his tax would hit only plants built in the future and those existing facilities that can convert to coal.

Long, whose committee had rejected Carter's industrial tax on a 14-4 vote, opposes the Metzenbaum plan as well.

Dupy pleads, gets four years

Keith Zade Dupy has been sentenced to four years in the Texas Department of Corrections at Huntsville Wednesday after he pleaded guilty to charges of burglary — entering with intent to commit theft on May 24, 1976.

District Judge Don Cain accepted the plea and pronounced the sentence.

Madalyn O'Hair disrupts bingo in church

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Atheist leader Madalyn Murray O'Hair broke up a church bingo game Wednesday and later accused police of not doing their duty by following up with arrests.

"She came charging in like a Brahma bull," said Ray Martinez, 20.

Ms. O'Hair said she was trying to make citizens arrests, because she had complained earlier to police about the illegal bingo games and they had done nothing.

"The Roman Catholic Church has enough punch that they have been able to defy this law with impunity," she told reporters on the darkened parking lot at San Jose Catholic Church.

Bingo games for money are illegal under state law.

Ms. O'Hair said officials have responded to her calls for action against the fund-raising bingo games by saying no one would sign a complaint against the bingo players.

"I decided tonight I would be the complainant," Ms. O'Hair said.

Bingo players thought the entire incident was a "publicity stunt."

"She doesn't have the right to scare people," said Emrine Smith, one of the players.

Red Adair called to snuff blazing California well

TAFT, Calif. (AP) — Red Adair, who has battled raging oil fires around the world, will try to snuff a burning geyser of oil and gas today by using explosives to stop the flow of oxygen into the well.

Adair was called in Tuesday after an explosion at Elk Hills Naval Oil Reserve near here sent oil and flames spewing more than 100 feet into the air and killed three workers dangling helplessly in a basket above the wellhead.

Adair, who brought only one assistant with him from his Houston headquarters, planned to set off plastic explosives in an attempt to cut off oxygen to the fire long enough to stop the burning and blow away a mass of mangled metal.

"No two jobs are alike. There are a million little tricks to it, and I guess some of it is instinct," said Adair, who has extinguished more than 1,000 well blowouts and fires since 1938.

"He's going to have to work his way into the wellhead with the fire still burning and set charges to sever the wellhead to give him access to the equipment which is stuck," said Navy Cmdr. Roger Martin, chief of operations at Elk Hills.

US, allies disbuts embargo

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The United States and its chief allies on the U.N. Security Council are disputing whether to back a resolution calling for an immediate arms embargo against South Africa or one threatening a ban if the white South African government doesn't soften its racial policies by a certain date.

U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young is reported urging joint Western support of the demand by black African nations for an immediate embargo. But Britain and France, which with the United States, the Soviet Union and China have a veto in the council, are reported holding out for a warning resolution.

Urges Connally surgery

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — An associate professor of pathology at the University of Kansas Medical Center says an operation on John Connally could show that a discrepancy exists in the official report on the assassination of President John Kennedy.

Dr. John Nichols, in an article published in the Maryland State Medical Journal, says a small object buried in Connally's left leg is not a piece of a bullet as the Warren Commission report states.

The commission report said the object was a portion of a bullet that passed through the president's neck, hit Connally in the right upperback, emerged below the right nipple, fractured his wrist and became entangled in the governor's clothing.

Using computer enhancement techniques, Nichols says he has found that the object is not a metallic object buried in Connally's thigh bone, but a non-metallic object just below the skin.

Nichols says the object could be easily removed surgically, but Connally apparently is not interested in pursuing the matter, Nichols said.

The doctor said that finding that the object was non-metallic would not prove his theory, that there was more than one assassin. But he said it would cast doubt on the Warren Commission's findings.

Names in the news

FREDONIA, N.Y. (AP) — John Dean III, whose testimony helped break the Watergate scandal, was nicked by a banana cream pie while giving a lecture at Fredonia State college, campus police said.

Moments after Dean began his speech Wednesday, a young man in the audience donned a mask, laughed loudly and yelled, "There is the con man, there is the con man." As the masked man ran from the lecture hall, the pie-thrower struck, police said.

"It just brushed me," said Dean.

John Paul Yuskiv, 23, of Fredonia, was charged with disorderly conduct and issued an appearance ticket, said police.

Half a dozen students gathered outside before the speech and displayed signs reading, "Crime Does Pay."

Dean reportedly received a $2,500 fee for the lecture.

Dean was ex-President Richard M. Nixon's White House counsel. He served four months in prison for his role in the cover-up of the Watergate burglary.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedienne Totie Fields, who underwent a mastectomy three days ago, is "doing great," says a spokeswoman for Los Angeles New Hospital.

Her manager, Howard Hinderstein, says plans are already being made for her to perform Jan. 5 at the Sahara in Las Vegas.

Monday's operation for removal of a tumor was the third operation for Miss Fields, 46, in 1 1/2 years. Her left leg was amputated in April 1976 because of a circulatory problem. In May this year, she underwent eye surgery.

"Usually we say a patient is satisfactory or in good condition," spokeswoman Susan Weight said Wednesday. "But with this lady I have to say she's vibrant. She's doing great. She's a fantastic person."

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Anita Bryant, the singer whose campaign against rights for homosexuals has enmeshed her in controversy, may be on the way out as the Florida orange juice industry's leading representative.

Edward Taylor, executive director of the Florida Department of Citrus, said Wednesday that "a change will have to be made in the foreseeable future."

Miss Bryant's crusade against a Dade County, Fla., ordinance forbidding discrimination against homosexuals in housing and employment changed her image to the point that "when consumers see her they don't think about orange juice, they think about the gay rights issue," Taylor said.

Market research studies show that the singer is not reaching the younger people, the industry's future customers, he said.

But Dan Richardson, chairman of the Florida Citrus Commission, said he disagrees with Taylor. Richardson said Miss Bryant's image has not been harmed by her politics and the commission has no plans to curtail her appearances in orange juice commercials.

ROAD TOWN, TORTOLA, British Virgin Islands (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II received a red-carpet welcome from thousands of cheering spectators and flag-waving children during her visit to the British Virgin Islands, one of the tiniest of British possessions.

The smiling monarch, accompanied by her husband, Prince Philip, was greeted by Governor Walter Wallace, chief minister Willard Wheatley and dignitaries of other British Caribbean islands Wednesday.

The visit to the territory, discovered by Christopher Columbus, is part of her silver jubilee visits to British Commonwealth members and possessions.

Genesis House—

thanks to you it's working

By JANE P. MARSHALL
Pampa News Staff

Jennifer has spent a lot of her time being lonely. Being lonely and being hurt. She and her "sisters" at Genesis House in Pampa have known jail, abuse, violence, drugs, hate. Some just couldn't handle pressures put on them by their parents.

But gradually they are learning that Pampa cares about them, that individuals in Pampa generously give of their time and their money to help them.

But it is hard. After rejection, it's hard to let go and be loved.

From each person she touches in her life at the half-way home, Jennifer grows.

"I used to live in a fairy tale world; I got away from reality. Now I cope with things a lot better. I can admit I'm wrong. I can say I'm sorry," Jennifer said.

"I can see me when I was 14, the biggest mistake I made in my life and I know I was wrong."

"Now I can look before something happens and think of how to handle it," Jennifer boasts.

The lesson was an accomplishment. It took her a long time to learn.

"When I first came in here, I was terrible. I changed because I had to. You have to grow up."

Through house parents, through volunteer workers, through counseling sessions, through long talks with Administrator Lois Still, the young women learn about themselves and about living in society.

"It takes special people to work with us. You have to care before you can help us. If you don't care, we know it."

About one of her new friends, Jennifer said: "She's older and she could understand the hurt. She sees our point and makes us look at the other side and see if we are wrong. She makes me see reality."

Of a community volunteer: "She likes to do things we like to do. She gets us out of the house to keep us from going stir-crazy."

Life in Genesis House is a dramatic change for many of the girls. Rules are strict: limited dating, no drugs, chores to do.

Of a Genesis House board member, Jennifer smiled and said: "That lady is beautiful. When Betty (one of the girls in the house) didn't have anyone to give her things at Christmas, she got money from the churches and Betty had a real nice Christmas."

Of another volunteer: "He's a sweetheart. He talks to us as individuals and he's always happy. He is someone we can look up to and he looks up to us, too. He sees the good in every one of us, not the bad."

"All the people who visit us and help us, they learn we're just as human as everybody else. We just got caught at our mistakes," she added.

Jennifer stops talking and ponders her situation. She thinks about all the new friends she has made in Genesis House.

"We learn to care about each other," she said about the other girls with whom she shares the home.

"We learn to depend on each other and to be dependable. We learned about love."

"When I get discouraged, I think how far I came ... I wanted to be alone when I first came to Genesis House. I didn't care about anybody; I was a loner. Now I like to be out."

"Sure, I've matured. But there is so much more to learn about myself, about things I can't change and have to learn to cope with."

"And I think I like myself. All I would do is see the wrong in me and not the right.

"Instead of saying 'Oh, that's a nice dress you're making,' my folks would say, 'Look what a mess you're making.'"

"There are so many ways to approach it and they approached it the wrong way."

"I'm learning to accept me for myself. I like myself."

Jennifer is one of seven girls who find a temporary home at Pampa's Genesis House. The Genesis House for Boys can house seven young men.

Both must have support — financial and moral — from the community to exist. And to help young people like Jennifer learn that they are worthy and that someone cares.

California town wants help like Crystal City

By MILLER BONNER
Associated Press Writer
SANTA ROSA, Texas (AP) — A Santa Rosa official says, "our mayor will end up in Jimmy Carter's peanut patch," if this impoverished Rio Grande Valley town fails to obtain federal funding for a new water and sewage plant.

Following the example set by Crystal City, Santa Rosa Mayor James Cameron wrote a letter to Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., requesting help in obtaining federal funds.

In the letter, Cameron called the senator's attention to the $310,000 federal grant given Crystal City after that South Texas town had its gas cut off for refusing to pay its bill, and to the $630,000 granted to nearby Harlingen for a new city auditorium.

"Certainly you will agree that our water problems deserve as much attention," read the Sept. 29 letter.

Santa Rosa officials said the town's predominantly Mexican-American population is forced to pay $3.50 for bottled drinking water or drink the "salty, stink-tasting" water from the town's well.

"Our water well is in a sand formation and the previous well caved in," noted Carl Arnold, an administrative assistant to the mayor. "We're afraid this one will do the same."

Arnold added that in one month the town has been cited for 12 violations by the Texas State Department of Health Resources.

"The state will not approve another water well and the present well doesn't satisfy the state standards," continued Arnold. "It's not like we're not trying to help ourselves but we just don't have the tax base to fund a new water plant. And water without sewage is like talking about an arm of a man — they go together."

Santa Rosa officials said they need "about $350,000" to rejuvenate their water system.

"Santa Rosa is largely a migratory town," said Arnold. "People come here to put their kids in school and the families leave during the summer. The latest census figures show Santa Rosa with a population of 1,456 with a per capita income of $1,268. Our actual population is probably 2,500 but we are close to the border and a lot of people didn't want to be counted. The town is 99 per cent Hispanic and that's a conservative figure."

Arnold also said the city needs funds to purchase a new garbage truck. "We have an old one that we bought second-hand and it won't last much longer. The town received $6,202 in federal revenue sharing funds last year to compliment "about $10,000" in collected city taxes.

"Most of that money goes to street maintenance," explained Arnold. "You could call Santa Rosa a bedroom community because most of the people here have to travel to Harlingen or McAllen to work. We rely on them to make money so they can pay the taxes and it's expensive for them to get to and from work, particularly on our lousy roads."

Arnold said letters have also been written to U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, U.S. Rep. Kika de la Garza, and State Sens. Raul Longoria and Melchor Chavez. "We don't expect much help from Sen. Kennedy," Arnold said. "But maybe our local, national and state representatives can help us."

Fund dispute hits jobs

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A dispute over racial quotas threatens to delay $4 billion in federally-funded jobs and could have an important impact on black businessmen trying to break into the construction industry.

The dispute, now moving through the courts, also affects millions of dollars of public works projects in several states and cities which have rules to assure that a share of the work goes to businesses owned by blacks and other racial minorities.

"This is hard to explain but it's of interest to every working man," said a Justice Department official familiar with the issues.

The argument involves a $4 billion public works program approved by Congress last spring.

Congress earmarked 10 per cent of the federal money for businesses owned by racial minorities. This was designed to compensate for the past discrimination which kept blacks and other minorities out of the construction industry.

The Justice Department, which now is defending the constitutionality of the program, calls the 10 per cent requirement a proper goal. Department officials note that the 10 per cent rule can be waived if no qualified minority firms are interested in a particular project.

But the requirement angered the Associated General Contractors, a national trade association which represents about 8,000 general contractors across the country.

The association's 400-member board last month voted unanimously to challenge the restriction as an unconstitutional quota.

Association chapters in California, Pennsylvania, Indiana and Montana have brought suits in federal courts in those states. John Ellis, assistant executive director of the organization, says suits are planned in at least five other states.

Both sides agree that the case is likely to wind up in the Supreme Court. And that would mean it could take several months before a final judgment on the program's constitutionality.

Meanwhile, the government is likely to be blocked from awarding the construction money, at least in some parts of the country.

Congress had intended the program as a swift medicine for the economically-depressed construction industry. The Commerce Department, which is in charge of passing out the money, was supposed to make sure all of the contracts were awarded and construction had started by the end of December.

"Our contention is that this is an illegal requirement," Ellis said. "It's much more than affirmative action. This is essentially a racial quota, and it means that the nonminority segment of the construction industry is precluded from competing for 10 per cent of the work."

On the other side, Justice Department lawyers note that blacks and other racial minorities make up 17 per cent of the U.S. population, yet minority-owned construction firms account for barely more than 1 per cent of gross receipts in the industry.

Hatcher claims wife killed in accident

HOUSTON (AP)—Stephen A. Hatcher, charged with murder in the death of his wife, testified Wednesday, "I loved Ann. I never intended to kill her. It was an accident."

Hatcher, crying on occasions under direct testimony, but composed and almost flippant under cross-examination, said his wife, "was a good woman and the greatest friend I ever had."

He said after she was shot to death from the blast of a shotgun. "I was afraid nobody would believe it was an accident. She really came out of nowhere in a dark room and ran into one of the shotguns I was carrying and the shot gun went off. It was a freak accident. I swear Ann Hatcher left this world while she was going to greet her husband."

Hatcher was arrested April 3 at a camp site on Lake Sam Rayburn. He led police to his wife's shotgun riddled body, submerged in five feet of water in a large oil drum about 25 feet from the the shoreline.

The defendant admitted he put his wife's body into a car and drove to the lake, because "that is where we had spent our summers together. I uncovered Ann and she was more horrible looking than the first time I had seen her after the shooting. She was so disfigured. She was so cold. I put her in the garbage can and pushed it into the water. I wanted to get her out of sight of me."

Later, Hatcher said he burned the car, "because the car stilled smelled of her blood."

Attorney Ralph Behrens, who called Hatcher to the stand in his own behalf, was expected to complete his case by Thursday morning.

The prosecution rested Tuesday.

Lufkin pathologist Dr. Jack Pruitt testified earlier that Mrs. Hatcher died from a shotgun blast at a range of about one quarter of an inch. He said her jaw had been broken prior to her death.

Bull semen smuggled into US

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Fearing the possible spread of hoof-and-mouth disease, a federal grand jury will resume its probe Nov. 1 into the smuggling of bull semen from South America and Mexico into the United States, a federal prosecutor has announced.

Authorities say smugglers have been transporting the valuable Red Brahma semen because federal laws prohibit its importation as a safeguard against hoof-and-mouth disease.

"There are only a few Brahma bloodlines in the U.S.," said Assistant U.S. Atty. Larry Wells. "Since any breeder of show cattle wants to expand his stock, the semen is extremely valuable."

"The grand jury... is looking into the allegations of illegal importation of bull semen from the south about March 1977," he added.

Dr. Frank Hamilton of the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Austin says USDA tests show hoof-and-mouth disease can be transmitted through semen.

Meanwhile, U.S. Customs agents seized a twin-engine plane, thought to be connected with the smuggling, at an airport in Tyler last Friday. Authorities said it was not carrying any semen at the time.

But customs officials, who would say only that the seizure of the plane relates to a civil charge, flew the plane to Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio.

"We have not received any file reports on that seizure," said Wells.

Tungsten miners at the Pine Creek Mine in the mountains overlooking Owens Valley, Calif., go up to work, not down. Most deposits lie above the 8,100 foot entrance level, says National Geographic.

Green denies homosexual act

PALESTINE, Texas (AP) — Third Judicial District Attorney Bill Green, fighting to retain his law license, has denied at his disbarment trial that he engaged in a homosexual act in a peep show booth at an Austin adult bookstore.

Testimony continues today in the suit brought by the State Bar of Texas. The Bar alleges three counts of misconduct by Green, convicted last spring on a charge of public lewdness in connection with the bookstore incident.

Green, arrested in the booth with another man, testified Wednesday that he went to Mr. Peep's Bookstore to learn what sex-related items Austin authorities would allow to be sold.

The trip, he said, was prompted by conversations with Palestine Police Chief Kenneth Berry regarding enforcement of pornography laws here.

But he admitted community standards in Palestine and those in Austin would vastly differ.

Green has appealed his conviction on the public lewdness charge.

He was also charged with escape from custody after he allegedly fled from arresting officers.

He has not been tried on that charge.

The disbarment suit is based on the public lewdness and escape charges as well as aggravated perjury the Bar alleges he committed during his trial on the public lewdness charge.

During questioning Wednesday, Green said he fled police officers when they told him he was under arrest because "they didn't look like police officers."

He said he considered calling police from a room in the Stephen F. Austin Hotel where he escaped from what he said he believed were "hippies" who meant him harm. "I couldn't imagine how such a conversation might sound and thought the police might think I was drunk," he added.

Before resting its case Wednesday morning, the plaintiffs called Frank Miller, an Austin police sergeant who said he saw Green engaged in a homosexual act in the booth, and Ed Kohler, an Austin uniformed policeman who was present when Green was arrested.

In opening arguments, Carr told jurors he will show that Green's arrest was planned by political enemies.

They'll guard against Klan...after the game

DALLAS (AP) — If Ku Klux Klan members begin patrolling the Texas border Friday as they have promised, members of a group pledged to protect Spanish-speaking residents from harassment may be out watching high school football.

A spokesman for the group said on Friday nights high school football reigns in Crystal City but his group will "be out there Saturday if the KKK is coming down."

Former mayor Arturo Gonzalez said, however, he does not believe Klan members would dare come into the area.

"If they go around bothering people in this area, they will get more than they can handle," he said.

Klan spokesmen have announced plans to send more than 100 men to the Texas border Friday. A recorded telephone message in Houston referred to illegal aliens as the "single most important racial problem faced by white America." The message said the Klan "once again was called upon to perform a governmental function."

The Southern regional director of Immigration and Naturalization warned Wednesday that actions by the Klan in patrolling the border are "ridiculous if not provocative" and "could create a serious incident."

Armand Saturelli said his men would have nothing to do with the KKK patrols. KKK spokesmen have said they would report all illegal aliens to Immigration officials.

"They have no authority to make any apprehension," Saturelli said. "If they do, people might have legal recourse on."

At the same time, Bonilla said he opposed the vigilante actions of Mexican-American groups against the Klan.

"We feel this is a matter that should be handled by the proper law enforcement agencies."

Bonilla said he had lodged a protest with Immigration and Naturalization.

Lefors raises $27,000 for new fire truck

LEFORS — The Lefors Volunteer Fire Department expects a 600-gallon booster truck "primarily for county fires" possibly in March, according to Denny Sneed, secretary-treasurer.

"But there's one thing lacking," he added. "That's money. We have about $11,000 and it costs $27,000."

The booster truck will replace one which is inoperable, and will bring the total number of units to three here, Sneed said.

Sneed added the $11,000 has been accumulated over the years, and firemen are planning some fund raising projects to pay for the truck possibly in January.

Contributions are now being accepted and may be mailed to Box 306, Lefors, Tex. 79054.

McDonalds sues El Paso official

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — McDonald's Corporation has filed suit against El Paso city-county health director Dr. Bernard Rosenblum alleging he slandered the hamburger chain when he said Riverside High School students were served contaminated food at one of its restaurants.

The suit, filed Tuesday, also names the city and county as defendants, seeks actual damages to McDonald's name and reputation and reimbursement for loss of profits in excess of $10,000. The suit also seeks unspecified punitive damages and court costs.

Rosenblum held a news conference Oct. 3 and said test results indicated that a Sept. 16 illness that struck 132 students could be traced to Bacillus cereus bacteria.

The students had eaten at a McDonald's restaurant in Alamogordo, N.M., and Rosenblum said "these hamburgers were contaminated with Bacillus cereus."

McDonald's alleges, however, that no identification of the bacteria was made in the laboratory tests and that even after being notified that no identification of bacteria was made, he "continued to republish his statement when he knew such statements were erroneous."

Next stop: outer space

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Aerospace's odd couple, the space shuttle Enterprise and its companion Boeing 747, have made their last test appearance together. Next stop: outer space.

The Enterprise, launched from the back of its jumbo carrier for the fifth and final time Wednesday, made a quick, steep swoop to a bumpy but safe landing.

Britain's Prince Charles, a former Royal Navy flier who had piloted a simulated shuttle earlier this week, was among those at the landing site who sighed with relief when the craft finally settled on the runway.

Fred Haise and Gordon Fullerton were in the cockpit for the one minute, 55-second flight, the shortest and steepest of the shuttle's five test runs. The flight was a test of how well the shuttle's landing and braking system would handle a concrete runway, the same type that will be used when the craft first returns from space in early 1979.

While the other landings took place on a broad, dry lake bed, Wednesday's landing was to have been a pinpoint touchdown on the 15,000-foot landing strip. But the shuttle hit the concrete runway and bounced back into the air, its stubby wings wobbling from side to side.

After another little hop, the 83-ton craft touched down smoothly and rolled quickly to a stop with 2,000 feet of runway remaining.

Prince Charles, who had met Haise and Fullerton during his visit to Houston, "was a little tense" when the craft bounced on landing, said NASA official Stan Miller, who watched the landing with the prince. "But he's a pilot, and I think he understands those things."

Haise, who piloted two of the other test flights, said Wednesday's bumpy landing made the test "somewhat of a personal disappointment, because you always want to do the right thing, and in this case, the right thing was to put it down right on the line."

"Overall, however," Haise added, "I'm very happy because we got the vehicle on the ground safely."

Fullerton, Haise and testing project manager Donald Slayton termed the test a success.

Slayton said further tests are unlikely.

So the next time a shuttle flies on its own — in 1979 — it will be boosted like a rocket into space bearing two astronauts who will orbit the Earth, then pilot the craft back down to an airplane-like landing here.

House workshops set

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Housing workshops to encourage economic development in South Texas are scheduled for Corpus Christi, Harlingen and San Antonio next month.

The workshops are "especially for builders, developers and investors," said a statement from Gov. Dolph Briscoe's office.

Speakers will concentrate on what federal housing programs are available, the statement said.

Plainview mentor favors Harvesters

By TOM KENSLE

Pampa News Sports Editor
Despite the fact his Bulldogs have a 4-3 record and the home field advantage, Plainview coach George Kirk feels the odds will be against him when his pack hosts Pampa at 7:30 Friday night.

harus your performance. The kids will be able to sleep late and might not be as alert. It's a little like jet lag.
But despite the mentor's pessimism, Plainview should be a decided favorite against the Harvesters.

For the second straight week, Pampa will be facing a small but quick defensive line. Tackle Ralph Hayes, the front four heavyweight, checks in at 194 pounds.

wouldn't have been so bad.
"Pampa moved the ball on Monterey a lot better than we did," Kirk added.
The Plainview mentor said he expected his offense to be erratic this season because of inexperience. Only guard Tim Burge (6-1, 212) returns from last year's starting 11.

Jay Miller, has snared 12 aerials for 203 yards and two touchdowns.
"I think it will be a fairly even game," said the Bulldog mentor. "It will be a good opportunity for both John (Welborn) and I to see how our young kids play against people their own age and experience."

Tourney pros eye PGA exemptions

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Considerably more than a $25,000 first prize is at stake this week in the Pensacola Open Golf Tournament.
Ed Snead, 61st on the list, is recovering from surgery and isn't playing. Kermit Zarley, with $50,391, and Mike Hill, with $50,323, are next. As a tournament winner, Hill is exempt for most of 1978, but the veteran Zarley needs to win $1,072 more than Matlbie to get into the top 60 and get the exemption.

15 or 20 players come to the last tournament with a legitimate shot at the man in the No. 60 position.

Blazers drop from unbeaten ranks

NBA official wants three refs

NEW YORK (AP) — Norm Drucker, the National Basketball Association's new supervisor of officials, says he favors using three-man crews to referee NBA games.

It really behooves the league to take a hard look at it this year," Drucker said of the switch from two referees a game to three, something a few college conferences will be experimenting with this season but which has never been tried by the NBA.

NBA headquarters here. "It's easier to cover the complete floor. There would be other problems — personalities and things of that nature — but I think over-all, for getting the best job done, three referees would help."

The game has speeded itself up, but the referees haven't kept pace. Football went from two or three officials to six. Baseball started with two, then went to three, now has four and in the World Series has six.

Kensler calls 'em

by Tom Kensler, sports editor

Prep and college pigskin soothsaying

Miami Coach Bill Gilliland and his crew have a chance to turn the District 1-B race into a topsy-turvy mess this week if they can pull the upset of the season.

The Warriors could force a three-way tie by ambushing Wheeler on the Mustangs' home field Friday night. The Warriors, with a 4-1 loop mark, trail Wheeler (6-0) and Groom (5-1).

University Interscholastic Rules specify that if three teams tie for the district championship, a coin flip will determine the playoff representative.

If two teams tie, the winner of the game between the two will advance. Since Wheeler defeated Groom, 27-7, on Sept. 30, the Mustangs will clinch a playoff spot by whipping Miami.

Wheeler coach Preston Smith said he feels almost as much pressure this week as he did before the showdown with Groom.

"Miami is capable of beating us, and if they do they can win the coin flip as easily as we can."

"Our kids understand the situation, and they expect Miami to come out and try to play the best game of their lives against us Friday night," Smith said.

The Warriors were idle last week, giving injured running backs Barton Bean and Curtis Cowan needed rest, and allowing coach Gilliland to personally scout the Wheeler-McLean game.

"My kids seem like they're ready to play, and know that they have everything to gain," the Miami mentor said.

"Wheeler has some real tough kids and it may seem like everything is against us, but we're not scared of them."

"I've always taught my teams to respect everybody, but fear no one."

Last year, the Mustangs welcomed Miami into 11-man football with a 38-16 lashing. And ironically, the Warrior who scored both touchdowns, Duane Childress, is now the starting wingback on Wheeler after transferring between seasons.

Miami may have everything to win, but Wheeler has everything to lose, so I expect both teams to be "up."

Since the Mustangs have more to be "up" with, I say, Wheeler by 24.

Canadian at River Road

Ordinarily I go with the home team in games between teams fighting to get out of the district cellar. But River Road's "sieve" defense allows 36 points per game which should be plenty for the Wildcats.

Canadian by 12.

Booker at McLean

The Tigers were humbled by Groom (40-0) last week, but can still make the District 1-B first division against the scrappy Kiowas. I'll go with the Tigers' home field advantage and veteran offensive backfield. McLean by 9.

Follett at Groom

It's a shame only one team can go to the state playoffs from District 1-B.

Oklahoma 41, Kansas State 20 - Switzer need only worry about Colorado and Nebraska.

Nebraska 32, Oklahoma State 16 - The Cornhuskers have been up and down all season. Look for them to be sky high in this one.

Arkansas 39, Rice 12 - Rice surprised everybody by holding A&M to 28. Hope they savored that "moral" victory.

North Texas State 24, Florida State 18 - The Green Machine may sneak in for a bowl bid if they upset the Seminoles.

Texas A&M 32, SMU 24 - Being able to score is not the Mustangs' problem. Holding the other team is.

Groom galloper

Halfback John Krizan, a 170-pound senior, is averaging close to 150 yards per game in leading the Tigers to a 6-1 mark and eighth ranking in the state Class B poll. Krizan should find ample running room against Follett Friday night.

"Ham" Jones recognizes role

AUSTIN, TEXAS (AP) - Johnny "Ham" Jones is too busy blocking to see teammate Earl Campbell run much but Jones, part of a growing chorus, recognizes that "the big man's really rolling."

Campbell rolled 32 times for 213 yards, including a 58-yard touchdown sprint, in Texas' 30-14 victory over Southern Methodist last Saturday.

That was enough to make Campbell the Associated Press' offensive player-of-the-week in the Southwest Conference for the second straight week - but there was more.

"Earl Campbell had probably the best offensive performance in the nation," says Texas Coach Fred Akers. "He ran just like a Heisman Trophy candidate should run."

"He had some great, strong runs, recovered a fumble to save a field goal and had a tackle on an interception. He just had an all-around great game."

SMU Coach Ron Meyer said of Campbell's thunder and lightning touchdown run - in which he faked past a linebacker and shook off two defensive backs - "that's the Tony Dorsett in him."

Dorsett won the Heisman at Pittsburgh last year before signing a lucrative contract with the Dallas Cowboys.

"I don't think anybody is ever going to stop Earl Campbell," said Meyer. "He's just the best running back in the nation."

SMU linebacker Champ Dickerson said of Campbell, "He has to be the most intense player I've ever seen. It looked like he was going to bite right through his mouthpiece a couple of times."

Akers insists that Campbell, a 220-pound senior, is the leading contender for the 1977 Heisman, saying, "Earl Campbell is the best running back to come out of this state."

SA aerial pair shares AP award

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

San Antonio Kennedy quarterback Jerry Deller and split end Raymond Cortinas performed near-magic feats with their record breaking pass-catch act last week but Del Rio, their opponent, pulled a late Houdini maneuver and escaped with a victory.

Deller completed 15 of 29 passes for 370 yards and three touchdowns to Cortinas, who finished with nine catches for 303 yards. Despite their combined efforts, Del Rio came from behind in the closing minutes to score a 29-28 victory.

Both individual yardage totals established San Antonio city schoolboy records and Cortinas' 303 yards ranks third on the state all-time list and earned the pair mention this week in The Associated Press Schoolboy Honor Roll.

"They gave us the type of coverage they had been playing all year and we had plays planned for that one," Kennedy

Coach Gary Malesky said. "We went a little more to Cortinas than normal and their coverage just opened it up."

The Deller-Cortinas pass-run combination worked for touchdown passes of 85, 75 and nine yards.

Malesky said Deller had a very strong arm but also could throw with a good touch.

"Another thing that helps Jerry is he can read situations and dump the ball off when he has to," Malesky said. "He was putting the ball in the right spot and Cortinas does a great job of running his patterns."

Chris Carter of Class 3A state-ranked Huntsville and Dennis Moore of Irving-Nimitz also turned in gaudy statistical performances last week to help their teams to victory and earn mention on the Honor Roll.

Moore, a 5-11, 195-pound senior, rushed only 12 times but gained 257 yards and scored first half touchdowns of 75, 96 and 69 yards in a 41-14 victory over rival Irving High.

Allison doubtful

By The Associated Press

Texas Tech Coach Steve Sloan says injured star quarterback Rodney Allison is still doubtful for Saturday's crucial Southwest Conference clash with No. 1-ranked Texas, but is improving.

"He was certainly better today than he was Monday," Sloan said after Allison worked with the team Tuesday in a two-hour drill. "He still has quite a bit to go before he could play, though."

Allison suffered a broken leg on Sept. 16 during Tech's 33-17 loss to Texas A&M. Meanwhile, both of Texas' starting defensive ends, Henry Williams and Dwight Jefferson, missed practice Tuesday with injuries suffered in last week's 30-14 thrashing of Southern Methodist.

Williams has an ankle sprain and Jefferson is bothered with rib injuries. Texas Coach Fred Akers said Jefferson might not be ready to play against the Red Raiders.

Tim Campbell and Ron Bones replaced Akers and Jefferson in Tuesday's practice.

Akers said Jim Yarbrough will start Saturday at offensive right guard, replacing Craig Rider, who missed most of the SMU game with injuries.

Georgian proven less predictable

Bell's task—restore Justice Dept.

(AP Newsfeatures illustration)

EDITOR'S NOTE — His heart may still be in Atlanta, but his energies are concentrated on the Department of Justice. Since taking over as attorney general, Griffin Bell has shaken things up, put forward a heavy agenda, and has proved less than predictable for critics and supporters alike.

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Each morning at eight, a black government Mercury pulls up in front of the Watergate apartments and Griffin Bell of Georgia, the nation's top law enforcer, climbs in to start another working day.

After a 10-minute ride to the Justice Department, he joins six or eight ranking staff members in a private dining room for breakfast.

By nine, Bell has turned to the day's tasks — telephone discussions with half a dozen members of Congress, Hamilton Jordan and other top advisers of President Carter, and meetings with representatives of various organizations and staff members.

The Justice Department under Bell is seething with projects, assignments and deadlines, many holding prospects of big changes.

"I've got major things I want to accomplish, and I'm moving along," he says. In one way or another, he's shaken up most parts of the Justice Department and left many of his employees bemused.

One of Bell's tasks was to restore morale and recover momentum in the agency rocked during the Watergate scandal.

His appointment by President

Carter was met with skepticism, notably by opponents who labeled him a segregationist. Yet he chose a black civil rights veteran to enforce integration laws, and surprised some civil rights groups with decisions mostly favorable to their cause.

Bell came into office pledging to take politics out of the department. But now he is being accused of playing blatant political games by firing some U.S. attorneys who were Republican appointees.

Close Bell associates say he prefers to delegate authority to ranking advisers. Bell agrees, but emphasizes, "they'll have to follow my policies."

So far, he is getting generally high marks for the quality of men and women he has brought into the department.

Drew Saunders Days, a black lawyer, is an example. Days fought school desegregation cases for the Legal Defense Fund of the NAACP until Bell chose him to head the department's civil rights division.

Days' appointment and that of Wade McCree, a black federal judge, as solicitor general, helped assuage the worries of the NAACP, which had led the opposition at Bell's Senate confirmation hearings.

NAACP witnesses and Joseph Rauh, a veteran civil rights activist, had expected setbacks to the civil right movement when Bell took office. Their prediction was based on Bell's work as a legal adviser to a segregationist governor of Georgia from 1959 through 1961 and his record on school integration cases as a federal judge in the South from 1961 to 1976.

Then, too, there was the matter of Bell's membership in private all-white Atlanta clubs. Worse from the critics' point of view was Bell's reluctance to give up those club memberships when he became attorney general.

While Rauh and some NAACP leaders are skeptical of Bell, they say he has taken a series of actions benefiting the civil rights cause.

—Just two weeks after taking office, he authorized a federal grand jury investigation of the death of a Mexican-American construction worker who was shot by a Texas town marshal. The grand jury indicted the marshal, his wife and his sister-in-law on civil rights charges.

—He promises there will soon be a black federal judge in the South for the first time in history.

—Bell offered legal support for Department of Health, Education and Welfare efforts to cut federal funds for school districts failing to use limited busing when necessary to integrate schools.

Bell makes it clear he is determined "to carry out the President's policies," but insists his decision will not be influenced by partisan politics. He said 94 U.S. attorneys across the country would be chosen on the basis of merit, not politics, and that some well-qualified Republican appointees would be retained.

Some Democratic senators have fought for the chance to replace a Republican U.S. attorney with a Democrat. The situation came to a head when Carter fired Philip Van Dam as the U.S. attorney in Detroit.

Van Dam, a Republican appointee, accused Carter of laying "politics as usual."

Bell, hinting at a possible political motive in Van Dam's firing, said: "The main reason is that we had an election last November, and the Democrats won. You can use your imagination after that."

Bell now says the administration policy is that GOP appointees will be replaced only with Democrats who are "as good or better."

While early civil rights criticism was harsh, Bell weathered the most biting criticism of all when he decided to prosecute former FBI supervisor John Kearney for wiretapping and opening mail of New Yorkers allegedly linked to Weather Underground fugitives.

He authorized a grand jury indictment in April, and called for a department probe to see if high-ranking government officials knew about and approved mail-opening, wiretapping and burglaries to gather intelligence about left-wing militants.

"When the matter was turned over to me, the investigation... was very incomplete," he said.

Bell has started projects that could mean far-reaching changes in the country's criminal justice system.

He's trying to reform the federal courts so citizens could settle lawsuits more quickly and with less paperwork. He's considering legislation that would virtually wipe out the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration and shift to a revenue-sharing method for giving federal crime-fighting money to states and cities.

Does he like this job? "Yeah, I like it fine," he says. Does he like living in Washington? "It's a nice place."

When Atlanta is mentioned, though, he says warmly, "It's home."

He recently half-jokingly told a dinner audience: "I was taught to say I'm a Southerner first and an American second. Then I learned to say I'm an American first and a Southerner second."

Making diet food labels simple

Sylvia Porter

How can you truly compare foods labeled "diet," "low-cal," "reduced calorie," "sugarless," "dietetic"?

If you are among the millions of American food shoppers trying to lose weight, finding foods which are genuinely low in calories can be tough. The diverse and many terms used to describe the foods to help you reduce often are befuddling, even misleading.

To guide you to choosing foods which represent real savings in calories, the Federal Drug Administration has proposed new rules stipulating which foods can be called low in calories and how these should be labeled. Major provisions of the proposed regulations:

—A food could be labeled "low calorie" only if a serving supplied no more than 40 calories and no more than 4 calories per gram as consumed.

—A food could be labeled "reduced calorie" only if it contained at least one-third fewer calories than another food of the same type and at least 25 fewer calories per serving.

—All foods claiming to be reduced in calories would have to carry a statement comparing them to the same food as normally eaten. For instance, "reduced calorie" peaches would have to carry a label stating, "Peaches packed in water contain 38 calories per one half cup serving, 62 per cent less than 'Brand X' peaches in heavy syrup." The comparison could be made with a specific food by its brand name or common name, but the amount of calories in at least one of the foods would be required.

—Foods naturally low in calories (soups, juices, fruits, vegetables) could not carry the term "low calorie" immediately before the name of the food.

As an illustration, cucumbers could not be labeled "low calorie cucumber" because this would suggest that the particular cucumber was lower in calories than other cucumbers. It could, however, be labeled "cucumber, a low calorie food."

—Foods claiming to be either low or reduced in calories would have to carry a complete nutrition label, providing such facts as fat, protein, carbohydrates per gram and calories per serving.

—Labels on such foods would also be required to carry the statement, "Weight control by diet requires limiting total intake of calories." The purpose would be to emphasize to the consumer the significance of total diet in weight control or reduction. Use of a single low or reduced calorie food is not enough in itself to reduce or control weight.

It was back in 1962 that the FDA began preparing and issuing regulations governing foods used for special dietary reasons. Earlier regulations covered the labeling of baby foods, hypoallergenic foods, and vitamins and minerals as food supplements.

This latest set of proposed directives, probably to become effective by July 1, 1979, completes FDA's work in this area.

Industry's reaction to the new rules is mixed. The executive director of the Atlanta-based Calorie Control Council, Robert Gelardi, for example, says, "We're behind the thrust of the regs, but as proposed we think they're more confusing than helpful."

In drawing up the rules, Gelardi explains, FDA seems to have overlooked such types of low-calorie products as dressings, sauces, jellies and jams.

To document, although a so-called diet jelly or jam contains 3 calories per tablespoon compared to about 17 calories per tablespoon for a regular preserve, under the proposed rules it could neither be labeled "reduced calorie" nor "low calorie," because the item would not meet all the requirements of either category.

When confronted with the above problem, an FDA official replied, "The aim of the proposed regulation is to enable foods which are really useful in reducing calories in the diet to be labeled as such, but we will grant exemptions if someone can make his case."

FDA has allowed a month for comments and petitions for exceptions to be filed before the regulations become final. But the agency declares it will consider a request for an extension of this comment period if there is a persuasive demand for it.

'Privacy laws could hinder news'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — New privacy laws passed in the name of individual rights may make it difficult to cover crime news, the president of the Associated Press Managing Editors reports.

John E. Leard, APME president and executive editor of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, told about 800 delegates to the four-day convention Tuesday that it is a serious problem.

"Perhaps this is a reaction to the Watergate syndrome — to what are sometimes called journalistic excesses..."

"In any case, it appears to me that we face now some of the most troublesome threats ever to our ability to report fully activities in our police and judicial system on a day-to-day basis," he said.

Leard, addressing the opening session of the 43rd annual APME meeting, also urged the editors to pay "renewed attention to fairness."

"Perhaps — occasionally, at least — we have tended to appear to be too much on the negative side..." he said.

"Were we fair with displays given a pre-election report that tax investigators were checking the records that candidate Ford — a development that appeared later to amount to little or nothing?"

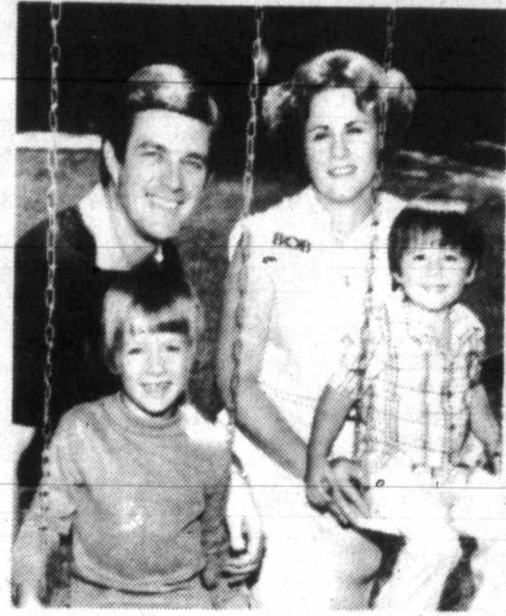

"Were we completely fair with the handling of the long-running Bert Lance stories?"

Leard said he wondered whether newspapers were not "sometimes forgetting basic news principles and being 'taken' too often by strategic leaks..."

Other speakers included Keith Fuller, president and general manager of The Associated Press, and Louis D. Boccardi, vice president and executive editor of the AP.

Bewitch the trick or treaters in your home with Cookie Caper

When your little (or big) trick or treaters bounce into your kitchen this weekend, surprise them with cookies.

Make them healthy — with carrots. Make them fun — with cookie cutters in Halloween shapes. Make them easy — with coconut and sweetened condensed milk.

Carrot kisses are reminiscent of old-fashioned homestyle baking. These melt-in-your-mouth cookies are filled with goodness... natural, nutritious ingredients that make them a super snack with milk. Carrot kisses boast flavorful carrot nuggets frozen in butter sauce, chewy raisins or crunchy chopped walnuts. There's a kiss of lemon in the creamy frosting.

Carrot Kisses
One 10-oz. package carrots
nuggets frozen in butter sauce
 $\frac{3}{4}$ cup butter or margarine, softened
 $\frac{2}{3}$ cup granulated sugar
1 egg
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
 $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon almond extract
2 cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
 $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon salt
 $\frac{3}{4}$ cup raisins or $\frac{1}{2}$ cup chopped walnuts

Creamy Frosting
2 cups powdered sugar
2 tablespoons butter or margarine, softened
3 tablespoons lemon juice or orange juice

Cook carrot nuggets according to package directions only until thawed. Place carrots and butter sauce in blender and grate coarsely, do not puree. Cream butter and sugar together in mixing bowl. Add egg and mix well. Stir in extracts and carrots. Add dry ingredients in gradual amounts, stirring well after each addition. Drop by teaspoonful onto a greased cookie sheet. Bake in a preheated 375 degree oven for about 15 minutes. Cool. Top with creamy frosting.

Makes about 4 dozen cookies.
Creamy frosting: Beat all ingredients together until smooth.

Sugar cookies with frosting
Cream one stick ($\frac{1}{2}$ cup) margarine and one cup sugar. Add one egg, one tablespoon milk, $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon vanilla and blend well.

Sift two cups flour and one teaspoon baking powder together. Add to margarine-sugar mixture and blend well. Chill dough one hour. Roll to $\frac{1}{8}$ inch thickness on a lightly floured board or pastry cloth.

Cut with floured cookie cutter. Bake on a cookie sheet in a 375 degree oven for eight minutes. Cool.

Frost with peanut butter frosting. Store in tightly covered container before or after freezing.

For peanut butter frosting combine $\frac{3}{4}$ cups sifted powdered sugar, add $\frac{1}{2}$ cup milk and $1\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoons vanilla and beat well. Blend in two-thirds cup peanut butter. Add more milk if necessary for spreading consistency.

Note: To make orange colored frosting, blend red and yellow food coloring and add to finished frosting.

This new butterball recipe calls for chocolate and coconut — a well-liked team. One suggestion: because the coconut in these butterballs is at its crunchiest best the day, or the day after, the cookies are baked, it's as well to make them shortly before a party.

CHOCOLATE COCONUT BUTTERBALL COOKIES
1 cup butter
 $\frac{1}{4}$ cup confectioners' sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup all-purpose flour
4-ounce package sweet cooking chocolate, coarsely chopped
1 and 1-3rd cups (about) flaked coconut
Extra confectioners' sugar

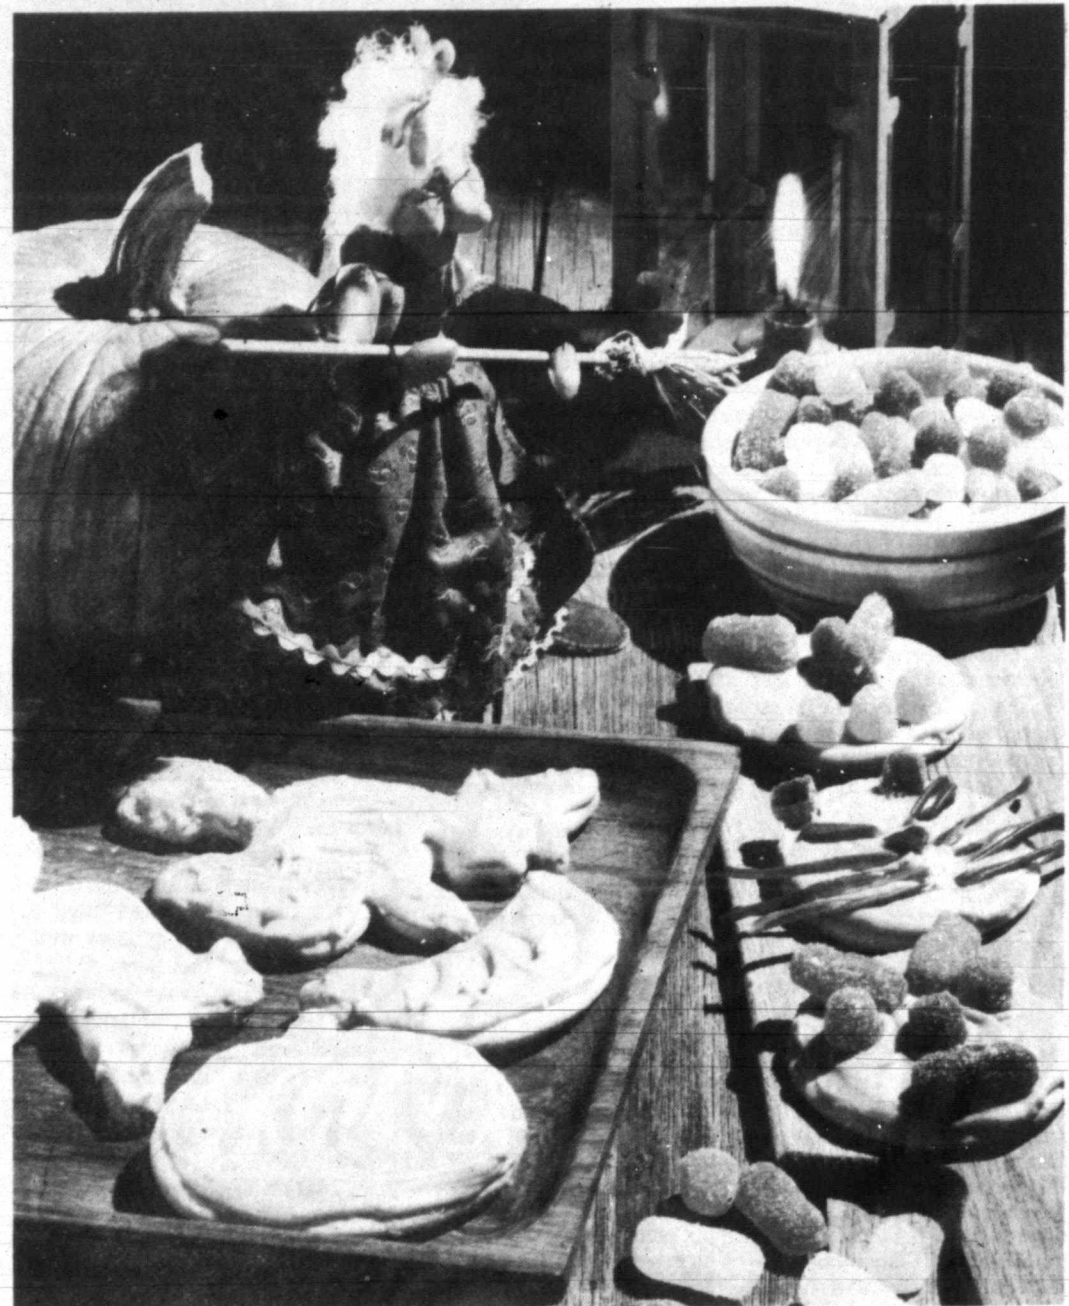

Cream the butter, $\frac{1}{4}$ cup sugar and the vanilla. Gradually blend in the flour. Stir in the chocolate and coconut. Using $\frac{1}{2}$ tablespoon for each, shape into balls — they will be very small. Place well apart on ungreased cookie sheets. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until lightly browned — about 15 minutes. With a wide spatula, remove to wax paper spread with extra confectioners' sugar; roll the cookies in the sugar. Makes about 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ dozen.

Note: If you have a fractional measuring spoon set that has a $\frac{1}{2}$ -tablespoon measure, you'll find it handy to use in shaping this cookie dough.

COCONUT MACAROONS
We've been asked to give the recipe for this old-timer:

1 and 1-3rd cups (about) flaked coconut
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup sweetened condensed milk
Pinch of salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
 $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon almond extract
Stir together well all the ingredients. Drop from a teaspoon 1 inch apart onto well-greased cookie sheets; press down the ends of the coconut flakes with the back of the spoon. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until golden brown — 10 to 12 minutes. At once, with a wide spatula, remove to wire racks to cool. Makes about 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ dozen.

Stir together the flour, soda and spice. Cream the butter and sugar; beat in the molasses. Gradually stir in the flour mixture until blended. Chill until firm enough to handle. Using 1 level measuring teaspoon for each, roll into small balls; roll balls in the nuts and flatten slightly. Place, a few inches apart, on greased cookie sheets. Harvest fresh cranberries create a fabulous Great Cranberry Pumpkin Cake, delectable, and a super centerpiece too! Berry Popcorn Squares are easy to make, crunchy tasty treats. Serve along a bewitchingly tasteful drink, Cranberry Goblin Punch.

Great Cranberry Pumpkin Cake
(Serves 20 to 25)

4 packages (17 ounces each) pound cake mix
8 eggs
3 cups milk
1 cup chopped fresh or frozen fresh cranberries
Grated rind of 1 orange
1 cup finely chopped nuts
4 cans (17 ounces each) vanilla frosting
Red and yellow food coloring
Green leaves
In a large bowl combine pound cake mix, 4 of the eggs and 2 cups of the milk. Beat with an electric mixer until very smooth. Beat in remaining eggs and milk until very smooth. Fold in cranberries, orange rind and nuts. Pour batter into 2 greased and floured 12 cup bundt cake pans. Bake in a preheated slow oven (325 degrees) for 1 hour to 1 hour and 15 minutes or until cakes test done. Unmold and cool on racks.

In a bowl mix frosting with red and yellow food coloring until a bright orange color. If cakes have an uneven top surface they may have to be trimmed to make them fit together properly.

Place 1 bundt cake flat side up onto a serving platter. Spread with some of the frosting. Top with second bundt cake flat side down. Spread the top and sides of the cake with remaining frosting. With a spatula ridge the frosting to make it resemble a pumpkin. Roll up some of the leaves into a stem shape and place in center of cake along with green leaves. If you only have one bundt cake pan, make up batter ahead of time and refrigerate half of mixture. Then bake first cake. When ready, bake second cake.

Cranapple Goblin Punch
(Makes 10 cups)

4 cups cranberry-apple drink
4 cups gingerale, chilled
2 cups pineapple juice, chilled
 $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon ground cinnamon
Orange faces

In a large pitcher mix cranberry apple drink with gingerale and pineapple juice. Stir in cinnamon. Pour mixture into glasses and add ice cubes. Garnish with orange faces.

To make orange faces, cut round pieces of orange skin from top, bottom and sides of orange. With the tip of a sharp knife cut eyes, nose and mouth into orange skin cutting not quite all the way through. Remove the orange skin leaving the white undermembrane to show through. Float faces in drinks.

Popcorn Berry Squares
(Makes 1 Pan—13x2 inch)
2 packages (3 ounces each) popped corn

1 can (12 ounces) salted peanuts
2 cups fresh or frozen fresh cranberries
2 cups sugar
1 cup cranberry juice cocktail

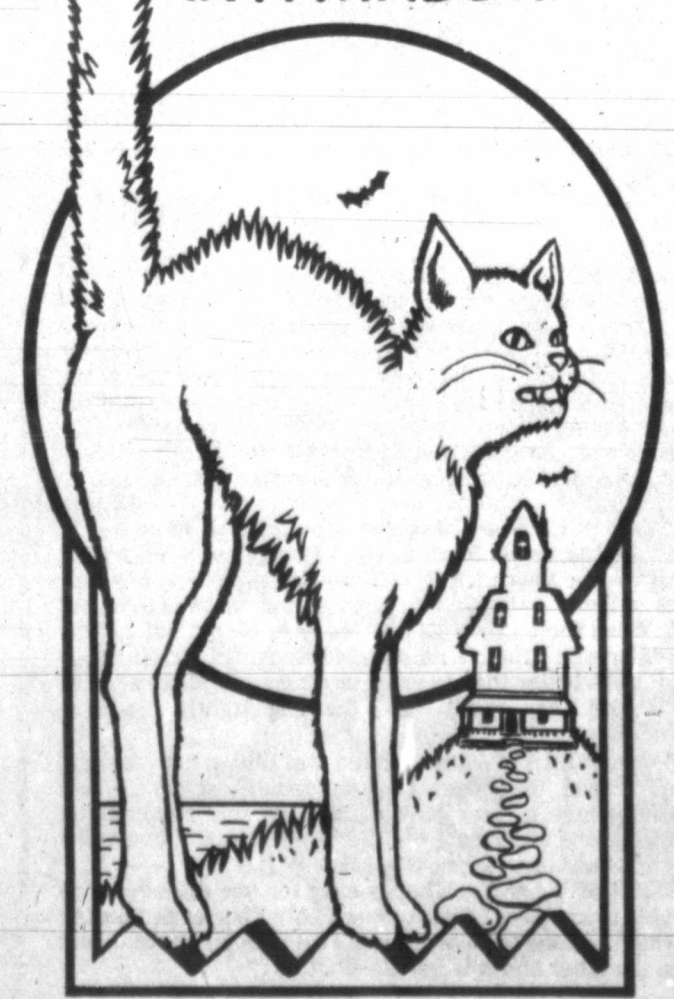

In a large greased bowl, mix popcorn, peanuts and cranberries. In a 1-quart saucepan mix sugar and cranberry juice. Bring to a boil and boil hard until a small amount of syrup when dropped into cold water forms a rocklike ball. If using a candy thermometer, temperature should read 270 degrees F. Slowly pour hot syrup onto popcorn mixture and stir with a large greased spoon until all particles are coated.

Grease 13x9x2 inch pan lined with foil allowing $\frac{1}{4}$ inch overhang on two sides. Quickly spoon mixture into foil lined pan. Press popcorn down firmly into pan. Cool until hard.

Remove popcorn block from pan using foil and then remove foil. With a serrated knife cut popcorn into 2-inch squares.

Advice

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I can't sign my name because I don't want to humiliate my husband, but I need some suggestions. We've been married for 20 years and have a lovely family. We've had our ups and downs, but the biggest problem now is my husband's refusal to brush his teeth. It's repulsive.

He's a heavy smoker, which doesn't help his breath any, and he's always having problems with sore gums. He hasn't been to a dentist in years, and his teeth are rotting away.

His breath has gotten so bad lately that I told him I had a sore throat and he could kiss me only on the cheek. Now he's complaining that I've had the longest "sore throat" in history, and he's stopped kissing me altogether.

I love my husband and would like to kiss him, but that terrible breath turns me off.

FEELING GUILTY

DEAR FEELING: If you could drag him to a dentist, I'd be all for it. But a grown man who refuses to clean up his act doesn't deserve to be kissed on the lips, so don't feel guilty.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend stood me up last night. He didn't call me before work this morning to explain, and when I called him later, he got mad at me for being mad at him for standing me up. He said I should have "understood."

Tell me, what are the ethics in such a situation?

STOOD UP

DEAR STOOD UP: Your boyfriend has learned that the best defense is a strong offense. It's bad enough that he stood you up, but if you could reach him by phone later, he could have reached you by phone to explain.

Lose him, unless you are prepared to "understand" a lot of other things you can't understand.

DEAR ABBY: A lady with whom I was well acquainted passed away last week after a lingering illness. Her family was well aware of the hopelessness of her condition. The day after her death, her two teenage daughters were back in school going about their business as usual, without showing signs of their loss or sorrow in any way.

Their friends and teachers were shocked at this apparent lack of feeling. Am I wrong to feel that, out of respect to their mother's memory, they should have stayed at home for the one day between her death and her funeral?

OLD-FASHIONED

DEAR OLD-FASHIONED: How other people handle their grief and react to their losses is a very personal matter. Judge not, lest ye be judged.

Ask Dr. Lamb

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB—I would like to know if it is possible to lose a "secretary's spread"? I have thought about quitting my job because of the sitting down all day, every day. I have gained four inches on my rear quarters and thighs in four years since I have had this job.

I would like to know if my hips and legs can be brought back to their original size or close to it? If so, how do I go about it and if exercise is the answer, what kind is best? I have cut down on my eating.

DEAR READER—The act of sitting does not cause inches to be added to your seat or pounds of fat to accumulate over your buttocks or thighs. The problem is the same as for the person who develops a large waist. It is that old problem of consuming more calories than your body uses. The end result is FAT which is simply stored energy and it has to be stored somewhere.

"Somewhere" for you is your buttocks and thighs. In the next person it may be the waist. There are individual differences in where the fat deposits will locate. You were probably born with a tendency to deposit fat in those locations.

In one ethnic group in Africa the people have a characteristic of having very large buttocks—a large fat pad. It is a racial characteristic for that group as opposed to other ethnic groups in Africa. It is not that these people are necessarily fatter than another race but their inherited characteristic is to store their fat over the buttocks.

Because your job requires you to sit a lot you probably use less calories than you used in the past. It is the total inactivity combined with your calorie intake that leads to fat deposits.

You can't "spot reduce" the area. The way to get rid of it is to reverse the "calories in, calories used" ratio by changing your diet and increasing your activity. I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet, which you can use as a guide. Others who want this diet can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Exercise will help and as I mentioned in The Health Letter I am sending you that is a good way to help protect your muscles while getting rid of fat. I think everyone on a reducing diet should have some type of exercise program as well.

Exercising your hips and buttocks will not cause fat to melt away over these areas. It will simply be part of your total exercise program to use calories.

You can tighten the muscles in that area and firm them just as you can tighten and firm any muscle. That means contracting and relaxing the muscle groups. For the seat you can do bumps and grinds. You can also get some benefit from standing up and voluntarily tightening your seat muscles and then relaxing them. Hold the muscles in the tensed position for a few seconds each time. Repeat the exercise about 10 times and have at least two sessions a day of this. By working these muscles they will become firmer but the fat will still be there unless you regulate your calorie balance.

One of the first things you must appreciate about the Monday dieter is his or her optimism. Here is a person for which Tuesday never comes. Now Wednesday Nor Thursday. Nor Friday, etc. He just knows that some time between Monday morning and Monday evening the rest of the week will be cancelled due to the lack of attendance, and he will be off the hook diet-wise.

Secondly, Monday dieters are lousy with virtue, but are basically weak, which is a polite way of saying they have absolutely no scruples whatsoever. They will tell you outrageous lies like, "Pasta will never pass my lips," and as they are telling you this have a pound of linguini hidden under a stack of Weight Watchers magazines in the hall closet.

They cannot help themselves. They will lie about their weight on their driver's license, subtract 15 pounds when they weigh with their clothes on, tilt the bathroom scale against the Naturally you make a hole for your face and if you wear glasses wear a hat underneath with a visor.—B.L.

DEAR POLLY—I often get runs in my hose, as do we all, but hated to throw them away. I finally came up with a good use for them. I live with my daughter who has four sons so there is always a lot of trash and garbage to be put out. When the trash bags are ready to be put out for the collector we tie them with such old stockings and find they hold much better than twisties or whatever. Make several knots and they really hold the bag tightly closed.—HELEN.

Marriage mills lure impulsive

By Tom Tiede

OUTPOST JUNCTION, Calif. — (NEA) — It was George Bernard Shaw who observed that the world is full of "snares, traps, gins and pitfalls" for preserving the institution of marriage. He might have been thinking of Outpost Junction. There is not much here save an "instant wedding" chapel to ambush traveling couples.

The chapel sits in a snaggle of dry trees, on the edge of the Mojave Desert, hard by Interstate Highway 15. On a good day, a dozen couples will stop. In the last year, 1,000 people have taken the plunge. "I don't know why we did it," says a recent victim named Dan Mayo. "We just saw the sign, and, bingo, we were hitched."

Outpost Junction used to be a Pony Express stop on the way West to Los Angeles. In those days men and women had to plan their unions: get papers, pass tests, and wait the proper interims. Now, like Big Macs, California marriages can be drive-in activities. "Always Open," the sign reads. "No Appointments Necessary."

There are other places in the Americas where people can be wed in double time. Yet even in Nevada and Mexico there is some legal work to be done, and in most cases a visit to both a courthouse and chapel is necessary. Not here.

Outpost Junction requires no footwork, no license, not even enthusiasm; just $25 for various fees.

Well, actually, there may be other costs as well. Rings can be purchased at the chapel for $19.95. If the bride wants a garter, that's another $5 plus tax. Also there are plastic flowers, boutonnieres and wedding photographs for sale.

Finally, for one more fin, the nuptials will be recorded on a handy spool of cassette tape.

Whatever the costs, the "California Quickie" is clearly the nation's easiest way to wedlock. It may also be the least known. Although state law has authorized hurry-up marriages for 100 years, new residents or non residents take advantage. Much of the Junction's business, in fact, is from people on their way to a Nevada marriage mill.

The California law is contained in paragraph 4213 of the state civil code. It allows unlicensed marriage in circumstances where couples say they have been living together for a period of time. As a bonus, paragraph 13 also allows the unions to take place in all but total secrecy; records of the events are not open to the public.

The law is an obvious holdover from an era of past morality. There was a time when cohabiting people were ostracized. Such women who had babies were further shamed. And since churches often refused to legitimize these ghastly goings on, paragraph 4213 came to the rescue. Tempus fugit, of course, but the law still exists.

Donna and Julian Grela are happy the law does continue. They run the chapel and perform the marriages here at Outpost Junction. As a sidelight they also run a church of their own creation: The Friends Fellowship of America. The Grelas are mail order ministers. The credentials give them authority to operate their marriage shop.

All things considered, the Grelas' shop is rather nice. They have a church building for larger marriages ("$10 extra will be charged for more than 10 guests"), and a smaller chapel-office in their home. Yard flowers are kept up. There is a rooster about for local color. If needed, a plastic water fountain can be activated.

The small chapel is the most often used. It has a February 14 contemporary decor. Paper valentines are on the walls. The altar is a wooden arch with a Pisa tendency. There is also a bulletin board full of wedding snapshots; one shot features a couple "with her kids, his kids, their kids," and a smiling relative holding a mock shotgun.

Donna Grela and her husband, Julian, perform instant marriages at their Outpost Junction. Over the door of their tastefully decorated chapel hangs a printed sign: "The Management Is Not Responsible For What Happens Next!"

The weddings need not be in the chapel or church. The Grelas are nothing if not accommodating. For an extra charge they have performed ceremonies on top of nearby Mount Baldy, and on an Indian blanket in the Mojave. "We do it their way," says Donna Grela, and if this includes a hillbilly band playing Bluegrass, so be it.

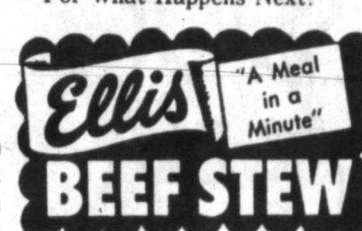

Few questions are asked, of course. Though couples are required to be of age, the some people fight, some people get sexy; we never interfere, it's none of our affair."

Without doubt, these conditions are ripe for abuse. Kids on larks "get married," but not really. Other cheaters, using false identification, wed again and again merely for the sex and good times of it. Still, the Grelas do not pass judgment. The Junction offers courtesy and understanding to virgins and old mammas alike.

The weddings take 10 minutes or less. Some couples cheer when it's over. When Dan Mayo's ceremony was completed recently, his first words were: "Where's the head?" Ah, matrimony. Ah, the quickie trap! Occasionally even the Grelas wonder about the things they've wrought, in which case they point to a small printed poster over the chapel door: "The Management," it reads, "Is Not Responsible For What Happens Next!"

He's a typical Vegas gambler

BY BRENDAN RILEY

Associated Press Writer
LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The typical Las Vegas gambler is from the West, over 40, drives a car to the desert city, is married and not quite as well educated as the nongambling visitor, a new survey shows.

The survey by two University of Nevada-Las Vegas professors is based on random interviews with 2,000 tourists entering this glittering gaming mecca.

Marketing Professors Lawrence Dandurand and Henry Scullio developed the survey to provide casino operators with what they call "a refined understanding of different target groups in a casino gambling market."

The research project shows two-thirds of those surveyed are gamblers while the others claim they are not. More of the gamblers than nongamblers are repeat customers, too, the study shows.

The report doesn't say what gamblers spend while playing cards, rolling dice or pumping coins into slot machines. But it indicates visitors to Las Vegas — gamblers and nongamblers alike — spend an average $71 a day for nongaming goods and services.

The survey says gamblers tend to be more motivated than nongamblers by entertainment, vacations, "get-away" time, climate, change of pace and the 24-hour excitement of Las Vegas.

On the other hand, nongamblers are more likely to be in Las Vegas out of curiosity, to visit friends or relatives, for sightseeing or for business and conventions, the survey says.

The survey says a greater proportion of women than men tend to include themselves among the gamblers, even though 58 per cent of all visitors surveyed were men. Sixty-eight per cent of the women visitors describe themselves as gamblers, compared with 64 per cent of the men.

The survey also shows the gamblers' category has higher proportions of self-employed persons, housewives, retirees and factory workers, while nongamblers tend more to be professionals, managers, teachers, students and military personnel.

At wit's end

By ERMA BOMBECK

It seems like every other book I pick up these days, an author is dissecting relationships and behavior patterns. One of the largest groups in this country and ironically the least understood has yet to be explained. It's your basic Monday dieter.

At last count, there were 18 million of these disciples who, every Monday morning, make their annual pilgrimage to the shrine of cottage cheese. Who, every Monday morning, look at themselves in the mirror and declare to the image, "This is the first day of the rest of my thin life."

One of the first things you must appreciate about the Monday dieter is his or her optimism. Here is a person for which Tuesday never comes. Now Wednesday Nor Thursday. Nor Friday, etc. He just knows that some time between Monday morning and Monday evening the rest of the week will be cancelled due to the lack of attendance, and he will be off the hook diet-wise.

Secondly, Monday dieters are lousy with virtue, but are basically weak, which is a polite way of saying they have absolutely no scruples whatsoever. They will tell you outrageous lies like, "Pasta will never pass my lips," and as they are telling you this have a pound of linguini hidden under a stack of Weight Watchers magazines in the hall closet.

They cannot help themselves. They will lie about their weight on their driver's license, subtract 15 pounds when they weigh with their clothes on, tilt the bathroom scale against the toilet to make it weigh lighter, and on insurance charts will declare themselves "large boned."

Monday dieters are predictably neat people. They cannot stand to leave an uneven row of fudge in a pan or a dab of ice cream at the bottom of a half-gallon carton. They are kind to their mothers (I'll eat the rest of that pizza, Mother, if your teeth are bothering you) and are good with numbers. ("Let's see, I had the beef stroganoff, baked potatoes with sour cream, asparagus with the Hollandaise and the banana cream pie, so pass me the artificial sweetener for my coffee.")

In case you're wondering why I'm such an authority on the Monday dieter, it's because I have dieted for the last consecutive 1,456 Mondays. Why Mondays? Who knows. Frankly, I think it's stupid to pick a day with 36 hours in it when every other day of the week only has 24.

Trick or Treat for UNICEF

Mayor R.D. Wilkerson has proclaimed Oct. 30 as the United National Children's Fund — UNICEF Day, which will celebrate years of service to children of the world. It will be observed from 2 to 5 p.m. Oct. 30 as "trick or treat" in homes throughout the community. The local sponsor for UNICEF is the Pampa Ministerial Alliance. This is the first year for participation. Adults will accompany children on all "Trick or Treat" for UNICEF events. More than you cadaver count but nobody's offer is taken

Every day medical schools and doctors' offices get calls from people who want to sell their bodies after they die. Sometimes people just want to sell a body part like the liver or an eye for extra cash while they are alive. All these plans fall through because it is illegal to sell corpses or body parts in Texas according to the Texas Medical Association (TMA). It is legal and a service to mankind to donate your body for medical research or transplants, a TMA spokesman said. But selling bodies could lead to grave-robbing and all sorts of problems. It always has been illegal to sell corpses but people keep calling. Some people just show up wanting to make a deal on the spot, cash in advance. "If we bought bodies, people would be lined up for miles," says Walther Hild, M.D., chairman of The University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston anatomy department. Enough people donate bodies so that medical schools never even have to consider the possibility. Dr. Hild stressed there is not an over-supply but that there certainly is not a shortage. More than ever, people seem to be aware of the need and are willing their bodies to medical schools.

A form on the back of many Texas drivers' licenses permits a person to designate body parts or the whole body for donation after death and this also has increased the supplies although kidneys and many other organs still are needed badly.

People interested in donating bodies should contact the anatomy department of the medical schools in Dallas, Galveston, Lubbock, San Antonio, Bryan or the two schools in Houston. People interested in donating organs can fill out the driver's license form or contact The Living Bank (which handles bodies and all organs), P.O. Box 6725, Houston 77066. The Shawnee Indian Chief, Tecumseh, was killed fighting the British in the War of 1812 in 1813.

Stroke club reorganized

Judy Harris, speech therapist at Highland General Hospital, stressed reviving the Pampa Stroke Club during a recent meeting of the American Heart Association at the hospital. Several names of interested persons were mentioned and Harris was chosen president. She scheduled the meetings at the Senior Citizens Center at 12:30 p.m. the first Thursday of each month. A film, "What Goes Up," was shown portraying high blood pressure. An estimated 25 members attended the meeting with Betty Musick of Amarillo, regional director, as a special guest. Nurses took blood pressures of the members who attended.

Contractor may become Indian to get work

OGDENSBURG, N.Y. (AP) — Ed Skelly has always considered himself a white man, but he says he is thinking of using the bit of Indian blood in his background to get work. Because of a 1977 amendment to the Public Works Employment Act, 10 per cent of the work for local projects funded by a federal grant must be given to companies controlled by "Negroes, Hispanics, Orientals, Indians, Eskimos and Aleuts." Skelly, a mechanical contractor, and other contractors in this rural area say there are not enough minority businessmen around. "I might just say I am an Indian, and they can't prove otherwise. I could just sit back and rip them all off," said Skelly. The federal requirement is needlessly pushing up costs on projects funded by a $4 billion local public works program, which is administered by the U.S. Department of Commerce, says one local contractor. The contractor said that in order to qualify for bidding on the contracts, he went to a minority broker who had just opened his business and knew nothing of the contractor's needs, but charged the contractor 12 per cent of the profit to provide the needed supplies.

U.S. Rep. Robert McEwen, R-N.Y., whose district covers much of the thinly populated upstate region across the St. Lawrence River from Canada, had tried to get the Ogdensburg area exempted from the 10 per cent minority rule. "There are just damn few Oriental contractors in the North Country — or Aleuts or Eskimos or blacks," said Cary Brick, McEwen's executive assistant. "The specific problem ... is there are not any minority contractors up there. There are no minorities up there." There are Indians in the area, Mohawks from the nearby St. Regis Indian Reservation. Many labor in the construction industry, but as workers building skyscrapers in New York City. Henry Smith, a black pipe fitter, said he went into business as a supplier because of the demand for minority suppliers created by the legislation. "We heard about the program and were told there was a vacuum in this area," Smith said Tuesday from the Rochester office of Smith-Perry Associates, incorporated in July. "As far as we know, the only other minority supplier is in New York City. In Vermont, a black high school principal said he was going to start a supply business to keep federal funds in the state. In Pennsylvania, the program has been the subject of litigation.

British say IRA losing support

What's up in Misses America

Miss America Margaret Gorman, 30-25-32.

Millions of television viewers saw Susan Perkins crowned Miss America 1978 on September 10. Besides being the newest Miss America, the 105-pound Perkins is the lightest in pageant history.

At 5 foot 1, first Miss America Margaret Gorman (1921) was the shortest woman ever to win the crown. Gorman was also one of the youngest. Like Mary Campbell (1922-23) and Marion Bergeron (1933), she was 16 years old when she was voted Miss America.

The heaviest Miss America was Colleen Kay Hutchins (1952), who weighed in at 143 pounds. Hutchins, 25 years of age at the time she was crowned, was also the oldest Miss America.

The tallest woman to emerge victorious at Atlantic City was 5 foot 10 and one-half inches Tawney Elaine Godin (1976).

Four cities share honors for producing the greatest numbers of Misses America: Philadelphia (1924, 1936, 1940), Los Angeles (1941, 1943, 1946), Denver (1946, 1958, 1974) and Columbus, Ohio (1922-23, 1972, 1978).

What about Bert Parks? The toothy emcee has hosted the pageant since 1955. That was before the 1976 and 1977 Misses America were born.

An AP News Special By ED BLANCHE Associated Press Writer BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — British security authorities believe the Irish Republican Army is losing support among Roman Catholics weary of more than eight years of bloody guerrilla war in Northern Ireland in which nearly 1.

800 persons have died. Security chiefs cite as evidence sharp increases in the number of persons who have been "kneecapped" — shot in the knees by the guerrillas of the IRA's Provisional wing as punishment for disobeying them.

Police report more than 200 kneecappings this year, more than double the number reported last year. They say most of the victims were Catholics, members of the minority community on which the IRA is dependent for members, hideouts and information.

Some of the victims were young Provos, as the IRA Provisionals are generally known. Security chiefs believe this confirms reports of a split within the organization over how the campaign to end British rule of Northern Ireland should be waged.

Five years ago the Provisionals could mobilize up to 700 armed men in Belfast alone. British intelligence now estimates guerrilla strength in all Northern Ireland at 200.

AP news special

There are more than 1,200 Provisionals in prison. More than 900 suspected terrorists have been arrested this year. Reliable sources say many of the arrests resulted from tips from Catholics.

The Provos are reported to be short of explosives because of tightened security, especially along the 260-mile border with the Irish Republic. They have been noticeably sparing in their use of explosives in recent months.

Stronger security has also curbed the guerrillas' mobility outside their stronghold Catholic districts. There have been no big car bombs in Belfast for nearly a year although devastating fire-bomb attacks continue.

The IRA failed last year to ignite Catholics over the British government's abolition of political prisoner status for IRA men in prison. A few years ago the emotional issue would have produced rioting in Catholic districts.

Leaders of the British and Irish governments claim that a joint anti-IRA campaign in the United States has reduced the flow of Irish-American money to the Provisionals from $500,000 a year to a third of that.

"We've taken some knocks," an IRA commander conceded in an interview. But he insisted the guerrillas can and will continue their campaign "until the Brits recognize the historical inevitability of their situation and pull out, just like they've done around the world in the last 25 years.

"OK, we lose some of our boys. But every time we kill a soldier we push the Brits that much closer to exhaustion, to the point where they'll decide that it's not worth the bother to go on losing men in a war they admit they can't win and which is not popular at home."

Fitz Gallery art exhibition sets weekend

Fifteen artists from New York to Los Angeles, Calif., will have an exhibit in Amarillo at the Dord Fitz Gallery, 1709 S. Polk, Saturday and Sunday.

Hours will be from 8 to 10 p.m. on Saturday and from 2 to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

Tom Andriola, director of the Taos Art Association, Taos, N.M., and owner of the Tables Gallery in Taos, will discuss the show.

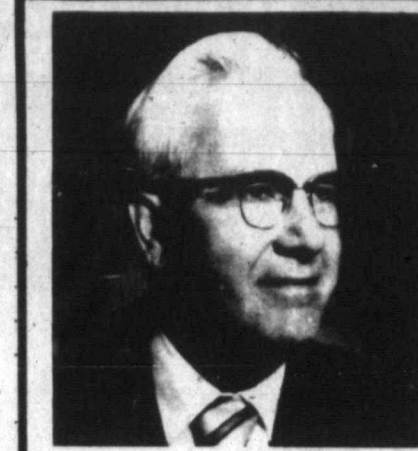

The public is invited.

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Sugar, a rooster who can ride bicycles and skateboards, won't have to go away after all.

The city council partially lifted a ban on chickens in residential neighborhoods so 17-year-old Janet Harris can keep her 9 1/2-pound Plymouth Rock.

Some neighborhood boys gave him to her about 15 months ago.

Fruit grower hires illegal aliens

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
BOYCE, Va. (AP) — Don't tell apple grower Jim Clevenger that he should hire unemployed men from the nearby ghettos of Washington to pick his apples. Clevenger is happy with the workers he has, who come from the British West Indies.

Clevenger is one of thousands of American farmers, led by Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., who want the government to make it easier than it now is to import foreign laborers.

The Carter administration, mindful of persistently high unemployment rates, has resisted those efforts thus far, except for one well-publicized incident where Carter personally decided to let Texas onion growers bring in Mexican workers to pick their crops.

But Eastland may be in a position to push some of his proposals as his price for allowing Carter's illegal alien legislation to pass the Senate.

To Clevenger, a 36-year-old farmer-businessman from the countryside west of Washington, the issue is whether the government will allow people like him to survive. "The only solution is continued use of foreign workers," he said in a recent interview.

There are no machines that have replaced human labor in picking apples. The best way is still to send a person up a ladder with a bag draped over his shoulder to pick them by hand.

A generation ago, the farmers who owned the orchards around Boyce used to recruit workers from the hills of West Virginia. But since World War II, a lot of those people have left. Most of those who remain have steady, indoor work in the factories that have come to small cities like nearby Winchester.

So now the farmers rely on foreigners. Early each spring, farmers like Clevenger begin a six-month bureaucratic process that involves the federal and state labor departments.

The federal government, before it will allow foreigners to come in, must satisfy itself that there are no Americans capable and willing to do the work.

Last year, the government found some Puerto Rican laborers for the apple growers. Disaster ensued. Of the 250 laborers brought up to work in Frederick County, Va., only 13 were around when the six-week harvest ended, according to both the farmers and the Department of Labor.

This year, the growers sued and won a court order that allowed them to send an agent down to the Caribbean to find labor. Each farmer paid about $200 in transportation costs per laborer and a share of the cost of maintaining a central labor camp to house the workers.

The farmer pays a minimum of $2.60 per hour to each worker, and a good worker can earn more than that — up to about $50 per day, figured on a 30 cents per bushel basis.

Clevenger reckons his pickers earn an average of $3.75 an hour.

Secretary of Labor Ray Marshall maintains that the growers like foreign workers because they are so "docile." A foreign worker, accustomed to a subsistence living and far from home, is less likely than an American laborer to demand pay raises and complain about conditions, he says.

Clevenger agrees. American workers, he said, are more trouble than they're worth. "They don't have to work, since they get welfare and food stamps. They're not interested in $3.75 an hour, since they know they have to work hard to get it."

The irony is that while foreign workers are coming in to pick Clevenger's apples, thousands of unemployed Americans are on public assistance 60 miles away in Washington.

But both the farmers and the government agree that putting the unemployed urban poor to work in the countryside is not the answer. "You can't take a city boy and put him in the country. He'd be lost," says Clevenger.

"It won't work. There are problems of transport. And this is the type of work city kids won't do unless they are unusually highly motivated," says Aaron Bodin, who heads the Labor Department's certification program.

Thus far, the Labor Department has refused to allow more than about 20,000 foreign agricultural workers to enter the country each year. Some pick apples; others cut cane in Louisiana and timber in Maine; some herd sheep in Wyoming.

But there is also an uncounted number of foreign workers who enter the country illegally each year and find employment. Based on the fact that it is catching about one million illegals at the border each year, the government estimates that two million may be slipping through.

Hiring illegal aliens isn't now against the law, and many farmers find it convenient not to ask whether a willing laborer is a citizen. One facet of President Carter's proposal to deal with illegal aliens would change that by subjecting employers who knowingly hire the aliens to fines up to $500 per worker.

If that happens, thousands of farmers, particularly in Texas and California, are likely to press for the right to hire temporary foreign workers, Bodin said.

Eastland, who owns a 5,000-acre cotton plantation in Mississippi, wants to make it easier for them. "We (farmers) don't have an unemployment problem. We have a labor scarcity," he said.

He plans to introduce legislation to cut from 60 to 20 days the amount of time the Labor Department has to search for American workers to fill a farmer's work force. And it would require that the Labor Department find any such workers in the area; that would prevent the department from forcing Clevenger to hire Puerto Rican laborers, for example.

Bodin says that those provisions are unacceptable to the administration.

But Eastland may be in a position to pressure the administration to compromise.

As chairman of both the Senate Judiciary Committee and its immigration subcommittee, he is in a position to control whether Carter's other proposals ever receive Senate consideration.

He said last week that he plans to combine his bill with the Carter package when he opens hearings on them in January.

Congress approves bill to free U S prisoners

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill that could enable several hundred Americans imprisoned in Mexico to return to this country by Christmas has been given overwhelmingly final congressional approval.

The House of Representatives approved the measure 400-15.

The bill sets down the rules and procedures to implement treaties authorizing transfers of prisoners between the United States and Mexico and the United States and Canada.

The prime beneficiaries are expected to be the estimated 600 Americans held in Mexico, most of whom were convicted of drug-related charges, the State Department says.

When the Mexican treaty takes effect, 30 days after President Carter signs the enabling legislation, most of those prisoners will be eligible to apply for repatriation.

The Justice Department says an initial survey of those jailed in Mexico indicated that about 300 would be eligible and willing to return.

To be eligible, a prisoner must have at least six months remaining on his sentence and have no active appeals under way in Mexican courts.

The prisoner must voluntarily waive his right to seek freedom from a U.S. court by challenging the procedures used to convict him.

Although the bill stipulates that a prisoner cannot waive his appeal rights without the advice of counsel, administration sources say they expect the constitutionality of the treaty will be tested in court by a returning American unable to win quick release from prison.

The benefits to Americans who return from Mexico include immediate eligibility for parole, which Mexico does not grant to drug offenders.
